AVG. DE VERA RELIG. CAP. 6.

Eccleſia Catholica vtitur gentibus ad materiam operationis ſuæ, hæreticis ad probationem doctrinæ ſuæ, ſchiſmaticis ad documentum ſtabilitatis ſuæ: alios inuitat, alios excludit, alios relinquit, omnibus tamen gratiæ Dei participandæ dat poteſtatem: ſiue illi informandi adhuc, ſiue reformandi, ſiue recolligendi ſint.

The true Catholike Church doth vſe the Gentiles as matter to worke vpon: heretikes for the triall of their doctrine, ſchiſmatikes to proue their conſtancie: the firſt ſhe inuiteth, the ſecond ſhe excludeth, the third ſhe leaueth, yet to them all ſhee offereth the grace of God: in instructing the Gentiles, reforming of heretikes, and bringing home againe ſchiſmatikes.

AD OMNIPOTENTEM DOMINVM, DEVM OPTIMVM MAXIMVM, MVNIFICENTISSIMVM, ET Benignissimum Seruatorem nostrum, Dominum Iesum Christum: Eucharisticon.

Clementissime Domine) Noachus bonus ille seruus tuus, cum ex Arca ex grauissimis vndarum & fluctuum periculis elapsus, saluus in terram euasisset, sacrificium grati animi testimonium obtulit: Moses fidelis tuus Minister, superato maris profundo, & dissipatis Pharaonis insidijs, in litus egressus Canticum laudis tibi cecinit: Ego itidem ad istorum exemplum licet seruus tuus indignissimus, post varia discrimina, post multos exantlatos labores, tanquam naufraga puppis scopulos minaces prætervecta, ad operis istius exitum veluti ad portum appellens, tuæ Maiestati humiles gratias teneor persoluere: Equidem huic operi sustinendo vires meas longe impares, quod & tu nosti (Domine) & ego lubens agnosco, vt succumbendum mihi hic necessario fuerit, nisi tu subleuasses: huic operi pertexendo nullo modo ingeniolum meum suffecisset, nisi tu acumen indidisses: [illegible] iam in huius operis successu, & oneris illius leuamine expertus sum, quod gratiose in Euangelio tuo promisisti: Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis, & onerati estis, & ego reficiam vos. Quod olim strenuus ille tuus athleta Sampson de socijs suis dixerat, idem ego verius de meipso proferre possum: si non arassem vitula tua, non inuenissem ænigma hoc: Nec ego, nisi tuo auxilio suffultus aliquid in hoc negotio præstitissem: Tu Domine, habes clauem Dauidis, qui aperis, & nemo claudit: Tu mihi aperuisti fores, & reserasti ianuam, qua mihi ad secreta fidei mysteria, tanquam in domus abdita penetralia aditus patefactus est: Tuæ igitur bonitati, gratias, quas potest mea tenuitas, habeo maximas, cuius solius auspicijs ad hoc opus ingressus sum, cuius auxilio adiutus ad hunc qualemcunque exitum idem perduxi: Dico igitur cum Propheta: Lauda anima mea Dominum, laudabo Dominum in vita mea, psallam Deo meo, quamdiu futurus sum.

Si quid in istius operis penso absoluendo peccauerim, si alicubi vel incuria, vel ignorantia titubauerim (sicut me vtrobique errasse ingenue fateor) pro infinita tua misericordia mihi condona Domine: Tibi animus meus innotescit, tibi intimi cordis recessus patent, tu scrutaris renes meos: tu nosti Domine, me veritatis maximè indagandæ & propagandæ studio inductum hoc opus suscepisse: Tuo lumine præeunte me veram inuenisse viam spero, & in recto tramite vestigia fixisse: si alicubi à trita semita deuiatum sit, tu lux mundi splendidissima, & dux tutissimus me in viam reuocabis: & illud Apostoli tui me consolatur: Qui perfecti sunt hoc sentiunt, si quid aliter sentitis, hoc quoque vobis Deus reuelabit.

Nunc post hanc qualemcunq; gratiarum actionem, & errorum humilem deprecationem, pergo bona tua cum venia, vota & postulata mea in tuæ clementiæ veluti gremium & sinum effundere & expromere. Primo Maiestatem tuam suppliciter rogo, vt Euangelicæ veritati, cuius me defensorem & vindicem in hoc opere, tuo nutu & iussu euocatus profiteor, prosperum successum, & amplos progressus digneris dare: vt veritas passim præualeat & dominetur, & Papistica superstitio indies decrescat, & diminuatur. Ecclesiæ tuæ fines dilata, funes extende, hostes subiuga, Satanæ impetus reprime, Papistarum nefarios conatus cohibe. Agimus tibi pro rege nostro Iacobo gratias maximas, quod illum ex tot pontificiorum coniurationum periculis incolumem seruaueris: & diutissime precamur illum Ecclesiæ tuæ Anglicanæ saluum velis: vt tanquam alter Zorobabel Ecclesiæ ædificium, cuius ab alijs principibus fundamenta iacta sunt, omnibus suis numeris absolutum reddat. Iudicium illius confirma, mentis oculos illumina; zelo & feruore pietatis animum illius magis magisq; accende: vt sub Iosuæ istius nostri ductu & imperio, fidelibus tuis Ministris verbi præpotentis buccinis clangentibus muri Romanæ illius Ierichuntis & Babylonis penitus corruant.

Pro meipſo tam homuncione obſcuro & infimo preces vehementes fundo, vt cum, poſtquam in arenam hanc deſcenderim, me multorum telorum ictibus obiecerim, & paſſim tanquam in faciem meam maledictorum ſagittæ immanes volitent: ſic imbecillem pugilem tuum gratia tua corrobores, ſpiritu fortitudinis induas, vires adaugeas, vt tam ſpe mercedis humanæ neglecta, cui tam multi aſperſi ſuccidere ſolent, & ſpretis minis, quibus tam facile terremur, inuicto animo in veritatis tuæ profeſſione ad ipſum extremum ſpiritum perſiſtam: fac Domine Ieſu, vt me diuinæ tuæ maieſtati, totum me, penitus in ſeruitutem dedam, nec hominibus placere ſtudeam. Mihi ſeruorum tuorum minimo concede, quod olim obtinuit propheta: Vt adamantem & ſilicem dedi faciem tuam, ne timeas illos, nec metuas à facie eorum. Fac, illud ſemper mediter & cogitem, & illius recordatione omni tempore erigam meipſum, & refocillem; quod populo tuo propheta edixerat: Vos ergo confirmamini, neque ſint remiſſæ manus veſtræ, merces erit operi veſtro. Ad hanc mercedem anhelantes & ſuſpirantes facile mundana omnia à tergo relicta veluti ſub pedibus conculcant. Cuius mercedis glorioſis tuis meritis nobis comparatæ & acquiſitæ nos in regno tuo, pro immenſa tua bonitate participes facere digneris Clementiſſime Domine Ieſu, Cui cum Patre & ſpiritu ſancto ſit omnis honor & gloria in ſecula ſeculorum: Amen.

2.Chron.15.7.

TO THE MOST CHRISTIAN, RIGHT NOBLE, MOST EXCELLENT AND MIGHTIE PRINCE IAMES, BY THE GRACE OF God King of great Brittaine, France and Ireland, defender of the true Chriſtian faith, &c.

I Now preſent vnto your Maieſty (moſt gracious Soueraigne) this [a] third time this Treatiſe, in the which are handled all the Controuerſies of religion, wherein Proteſtants diſſent from Papiſts: thrice formerly I exhibited the ſame likewiſe, in the three former editions to our late renowned Soueraigne of bleſſed memory Queene Elizabeth: and now it of right belongeth to your Maieſty, the true heire both of her Crowne and vertues: Her Highneſſe while ſhee liued, brought vs peace, and true religion with it: your Maieſty hath procured continuance of both. Concerning the firſt, I may ſay (but more truly) as Tertull. in his time of the Roman Empire: Re vera orbis cultiſſimum huius Imperij rus eſt, eradicato omni aconito hoſtilitatis, et rubo ſubdola familiaritatis, conſitum & amœnũ ſuper Alcinoi pometum & Midæ roſetum: Indeed Brittain is as the tilth field of your Empire, poyſonfull hoſtility being rooted out, and crafty familiarity, well planted and pleaſant beyond Alcinous orchard, or Midas garden, &c. Publike hoſtility (God be thanked) wee feare not, if ſubtile inſinuating, and fawning familiarity might as well be ſhunned: And of the other, the eſtabliſhment of true religion; I may alſo ſay with Auguſtine, Modo nemo inſultat Chriſtianis aut ſi inſultat non publice inſultat; ſic loquitur mala, vt plus timeat audiri, quàm velit credi: Now no man inſulteth againſt Chriſtians, or if he inſult, he inſulteth not publikely, ſo that he is more afraid to be heard, then willing to be beleeued, &c. By your Chriſtian care this land is lightened with the knowledge of the Goſpell, as the Sunne with his bright beames doth illuſtrate the creature. Oppoſitions there are againſt the truth, but with like ſucceſſe, as they which kicke againſt the prick; and as children runne one at another with reeds in ſtead of ſpeares: Papiſts obiect againſt the truth, ſubtilly, but not ſoundly, ſometimes wittily, but not pithily, they fight with vaine ſophiſtry, not true Theologie: as Auguſtine hath an elegant ſpeech: Videte acumen, ſed vitreum, quaſi lucet vanitate, ſed frangitur veritate: See his wit, but brittle as glaſſe, it ſhineth with vanitie, but is broken with the verity.

De verb. Apoſt. ſerm. 11.

Tertullian complained thus of the iniquity of his times: Omne animi bonum, aut naſcitur, aut eruditur, aut cogitur —— bona iam nec naſci licet, ita corrupta ſunt ſemina, nec erudiri, ita deſerta ſunt ſtudia, nec cogi, ita eneruata ſunt iura: Euery good gift of the mind either groweth, is learned, or compelled — but now good things, are neither ſuffered to grow the ſeed is ſo corrupted, nor yet can be learned, good ſtudies are ſo neglected, nor vrged, the lawes are ſo weakened, &c. The two firſt are moſt true of the Romane ſectaries and Popes diſciples: their ſeed and doctrine is corrupt, that grace cannot grow, the ſtudie of Scriptures neglected, that they cannot learne: yet the third wee truſt they ſhall not find, but that authority ſhall conſtraine them, whereunto their owne diſpoſition will not encline them. Now for the reſt of your Maieſties ſubiects, who loue the truth, but fully vnderſtand it not. I haue framed this treatiſe, that they may be acquainted with the queſtions of religion controuerted betweene vs and the Papiſts, that hauing weighed the reaſons alleaged on both ſides, they may follow the Apoſtles rule: trie all things, and keepe that which is good. And thus ſhall it come to paſſe, that if they be φιλομαθεῖς, deſirous to know and learn,

But as your Maieſties Chriſtian deſire and endeauour hath been firſt to maintaine the veritie of doctrine, ſo I truſt it is your ſecond care alſo to prouide for purity of manners and diſcipline: for both theſe doe ſtand and fall together: as that ancient writer ſaid of one: Primo regulam adulterans fidei & ita ordinem adulterans diſciplinæ: Firſt he adulterateth the rule of faith, and ſo alſo corrupteth the order of diſcipline, &c. And heere I truſt your excellent Maieſtie will giue a faithfull ſubiect leaue, out of his loue and dutie freely to diſcharge his conſcience: I haue [a] diuers times heretofore preſented my ſelfe in this manner to your Highneſſe, neither ſtaying heere did I take my ſelfe fully to haue ſatisfied my duty, vntill I had offered my ſeruice in this kind to all your royall yſſue and [b] neareſt allies. This hauing by Gods gracious aſſiſtance, and your princely acceptance in ſome ſort performed, I now reſolue to reſt, and no more by my writing to importune or trouble your Maieſty: And therfore as the laſt words of welwillers are moſt regarded, and beſt remembred; ſo I truſt this my laſt writing to your Maieſty ſhall find the like entertainement. Giue me leaue (my Soueraigne Lord and King) to ſay as Ambroſe did to that great Emperour Theodoſius: Neque imperiale eſt libertatem dicendi negare, neque ſacerdotale, quod ſentiat, non dicere: It is neither princelike not to giue liberty to ſpeake, nor prieſtlike not to vtter what he thinketh: And that other ſaying of his I hope your Maieſty will not miſlike: Audire eum, quem pro te audiri velis: You will not refuſe to heare him, whom you would haue heard (in his prayer to God) for your ſelfe. There is then ſomewhat yet both in the Church & Commonwealth, which hath need of your princely cure, where the remedy is refuſed, the maladie ſtill remaineth, as one excellently ſaith: Remedia vacabunt, cum crimina indulgentur, & crimina manebunt, ſi remedia vacabunt: In the Commonwealth in many places there is heard the cry of oppreſſion, by encloſures, diſpeopling and deſolation of townes, taking away of commons, ouerthrowing of ancient tenures and copiholds, and ſuch like: They which enrich themſelues by ſuch meanes, conſider only what they gaine, they regard not what other loſe: Ambroſe ſaith well vnto ſuch, Fructus te putas poſſe capere gemitibus alienis, non compungeris Chriſtiane, cum vides in hoſpitio tuo lachrymas alienas: Doſt thou thinke to gaine by other mens groanes, art not thou pricked in thy heart O Chriſtian, when thou ſeeſt other mens teares in thy houſe: Your Maieſties prudent and pious care hath ceaſed hoſtility abroad, but there is rapacity at home: you haue moſt happily quieted the lawleſſe borderers and outriders without, and we doubt not but you will ſee alſo in good time vnto the pitileſſe diſorderers and intiders within: Ambroſe doth moſt grauely tax ſuch in this manner: Aiunt lupos leonum ſequi veſtigia, vt aliena rapina ſatientur, ſic iſti auaritiæ lupi prædonum veſtigia ſubſecuti ſunt, vt quod illorum rapacitati ſupereſſet, ipſorum cederet feritati: They ſay that the Wolues follow the Lions, to ſatiſfie themſelues with the rapine of others, ſo theſe couetous Wolues, ſucceed the robbers, that what remained after their rauening, may ſerue for their cruell raking, &c.: So it is a pitifull caſe, that what was free from the theeuiſh borderers, ſhould bee ſpoyled by peeuiſh oppreſſors: They are by Damaſcene well reſembled to the fire, which deuoureth and conſumeth all; and to a violent ſtreame, that carrieth all things along with it: your Highneſſe princely equitie onely as water can quench this fire, and as with the flood-gate and ſluce of iuſtice ſtay the current of theſe raging waters: and with Dauid giue ſentence againſt them, that hauing many ſheep, do take from the poore that one which they haue: your Maieſtie as another Iehoſaphat hath often charged your reuerend Iudges, to execute iuſtice without reſpect of perſon, or receiuing of reward; that your ſubiects may bee deliuered from wrong and oppreſſion: and ſo I truſt, (and God ſo grant,) that we ſhall haue no occaſion to complaine of corrupt Iudges, as Cyprian did in his time: Inter leges ipſas delinquitur, ſedet iudex, & ſententiam vendit: qui ſedet crimina vindicaturus, admittit, & vt reus innocens pereat, fit nocens iudex: conſenſere iura peccatis, & cœpit licitũ eſſe quod publicum eſt: In the middeſt of the lawes offences are committed; the Iudge ſitteth, and ſelleth his ſentence: hee that ſitteth to puniſh offenders, is himſelfe an offender, to make the innocent guilty, hee firſt becommeth a nocent Iudge, ſo the lawes ſeeme to conſent with ſinnes, and that is taken to be lawfull, which is publike.

Geneſ. 18. 27.

I will heere ſay with Abraham, behold now I haue begun to ſpeake vnto my lord, I will craue leaue to touch one other great enormity and that among great perſons, euen of the Nobility: with whom it is too common to decide their quarrels by the ſword, and by ſingular combates to end their ſtrife and life together: they thinke it a diſhonour not to entertaine a challenge ſent vnto them: but the Scripture ſaith otherwiſe, It is a mans glory to paſſe by an offence: they which are prouoked thinke by this meanes to right their wrong, and declare their innocency: but the Wiſe man giueth other aduiſe, goe not forth haſtily vnto ſtriſe, leſt thou know not what to doe in the end thereof: the euent is an vncertaine euidence: neither hath innocencie alwaies the maſtery: ſuch then ſinne of preſumption, and are found to be tempters of God, preſuming of his helpe, which hee hath not promiſed: as there is extant an wholeſome decree of this matter: Monomachiam non aſſumimus — nuſquam vt pro lege teneatur, diuina ſanxit authoritas, cum hoc & huiuſmodi ſectantes deum ſolummodo tentare videantur: Wee admit not of monomachies or ſingular combats, for although we reade of ſome that did vndertake them, as Dauid with Goliah, yet no where is it appointed as a law by diuine authority: but they which follow ſuch things ſeeme only to tempt God, &c. This was the reſcript of Nicolaus Biſhop of Rome to Carolus the French King, who ſuſpecting his wife Theoberga of adultery, deſired to haue it tried by the ſpecial combate of two champions, but his demand was reiected as vnchriſtian and vnreaſonable. The like practiſe was condemned in a generall Councell * when as certaine ſouldiers being hired, did vſe to combate together to ſhew their valor, & ſo many were ſlaine: Such an abuſe of the ſword players Cyprian long before reproued: wherin Homo occiditur in hominis voluptatē, vt quis poßit occidere, peritia eſt, ars eſt, ſcelus non tantū geritur, ſed docetur: Man was killed for mans pleaſure, and it was counted an act and skill to bee able to kill a man, and ſo (ſaith he) a wicked act is not only practiſed, but preſcribed and taught, &c: This exorbitant courſe can onely be reduced to order, by your Maieſtes ſtraite edicts and lawes to be made on that behalfe: as if the Cornelian law were reuiued, Quæ non minus eum qui occidendi hominis cauſa cum telo fuerit, quam eum qui occiderit, puniat: Which as wel puniſhed him, that was found to haue a weapon of purpoſe to kil a man, as him that killed him, &c. But this motion may ſeeme heere to be ſuperfluous, ſeeing your Maieſty hath already by your princely a proclamation taken ſome order herein; thus wiſely taxing the preſumptuous and prepoſterous attempts of ſome in this kind: No quarrell of any ſubiect can be lawfull except in defence of their Prince and country: the reuenging of all priuate wrongs only belonging to vs vnder God, into whoſe hands he hath put the ſword for this purpoſe.

Now may it pleaſe your Maieſty, that I may moue ſome things touching matters Eccleſiaſticall, as more properly belonging to mine owne element and profeſſion: As for thoſe reuerend perſons, which are preferred to the chieſe places of the Church, wee haue no occaſion to complaine; nay, wee haue cauſe to reioyce, and to giue God and you thankes, for ſo well prouiding for this Church, in furniſhing the ſame with ſuch learned Biſhops, diligent Preachers, and faithfull Paſtors, as this age hath not afforded better: that we may heere ſay with Ambroſe, Non mirum ſi is qui in pontificio primatus honorem obtinet, obtineat etiam in prædicando primatus eloquium: It is no maruell, if he, that hath the prioritie of honor in the pontificall dignity, haue alſo in preaching the primacie of ſpeaking, &c: Yet ſome other things there are, which require your princely helpe: Firſt the people in many places yet want inſtruction being deſtitute of ſufficient teachers, and teachers are wanting becauſe of ſcant maintenance: In diuers Churches that ancient complaint of Ambroſe may be taken vp: Eget in ſede presbyter, in altari leuita, in lectione lector — mendicat infelix Clericus in plateis — totum, quod leuitarum eſt, in vſus ſuos vendicant alij: The Presbyter wanteth in his ſeate, the Leuite ſtarueth at the altar, the reader faileth in his reading — the poore Clergie man beggeth in the ſtreet — all that, which is the Leuites (namely the tithes) others take to their owne vſe, &c. This inconuenience might eaſily be helped, if your Maieſties lawes yet in force, were executed: which make all appropriations of Churches to be void, where the vicar is not conuenably endowed, to informe the people, and keepe hoſpitalitie: But I leaue this to your Maieſties princely and prudent conſideration: who is an Angell of God (as the woman of Tecoah ſaid to Dauid) in hearing of good and bad. Now as ſome may complaine of want, ſo of others I would Hieromes complaint might not be renewed, De dignitate transfertur ad dignitatem, de cathedra ad cathedram, de ſuperbia ad ſuperbiam. Concerning the adminiſtration of the diſcipline of the Church a common common complaint there is, that many inferiour officers conuert the Eccleſiaſticall cenſures to their owne aduantage, and ſo make a gaine of the ſinnes of the people, and turne the keyes of the Church rather to the ᵃ vexation, then reformation of your Maieſties ſubiects: I would commend vnto ſuch Hieromes aduice, Ne lucrum ſeculi quaras in Chriſti militia: Seeke not the lucre of the world in Chriſts warfare: I doubt not, but that our reuerend gouernours of the Church will in their ſeuerall iuriſdictions haue a care of theſe things: But yet ſeeing the chiefe ſtroke in ſuch matters muſt proceed from your Maieſties royall authority, which we neither with Papiſts vtterly exclude, nor with ſchiſmatikes too narrowly confine, I am bold thus to write.

ᵃ Some may bee offended with this ſpeech, but I ſay with Auguſtine, liberaui animam meam.

And for as much, as the King is cuſtos vtriuſque tabulæ, as your Maieſty doth profeſſe your ſelfe to be: as I haue diſcouered ſome tranſgreſſions of the ſecond table, which haue need of your princely cure; ſo I beſeech your highneſſe to giue me leaue, to touch one or two principall breaches of the firſt table, which do abound in this land; namely, the vſual cuſtome of ſwearing, and taking in vaine the holy name of God, and the profanation of the Lords day. Concerning the firſt, God grant, that this land by repentance may eſcape the iudgement denounced by the Prophet Ieremie; The land is full of adulteries, and becauſe of ſwearing the land mourneth. Among the Romaniſts this fault was diuerſly cenſured: If he were a noble man, that was faultie herein, hee payed a pecuniarie mulct: if a Clergie man, he was degraded: if an ordinarie man, he was excommunicate, or faſted bread and water, or if he corrected not his fault, he was caſt into priſon, or ſent to the gallies: But our righteouſneſſe ſhould exceed the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſies. Some may in their haſt herein ſhew their infirmity: but to make a cuſtome of ſwearing, and to doe it, as in a brauerie, can haue no excuſe: ſuch remember not that wiſe counſell, accuſtome not thy mouth to ſwearing, neither take vp for a cuſtome the naming of the holy one, &c. Concerning the ſanctifying of the Lords day, the Prophet teacheth vs to conſecrate it as glorious to the Lord, not doing our owne waies therein, or ſeeking our owne will. But now many quite contrarie make it a day, wherein to ſerue their owne turne and pleaſure, ſpending it in riotous and exceſſiue drinking, and in vaine ſports and delights, many not forbearing to trauell with their beaſts and carts vpon that day, without any great neceſſity: Ambroſe well ſheweth how this day ſhould be beſtowed: All the day let vs be occupied in prayer or reading: he which is vnlearned, let him reſort to ſome holy man, to be inſtructed by his conference: let no worldly buſineſſe hinder diuine: let not table play call away the mind, nor the pleaſure of hunting withdraw the ſenſe. This ſeemeth to haue been the vſe of Chriſtians then in hallowing the Sabbath: herein it were to bee wiſhed that your Maieſties ſubiects both in Court and countrie would follow the preſident of theſe times: And as your Highneſſe is a conſpicuous example to all the land, in the intermiſſion of your princely recreation vpon that day; ſo of late the * ſecond city in this kingdome, (to the honor of God, and due commendation of thoſe Chriſtian citizens be it ſpoken) hath to the ioy of many taken order, that their ordinary cariers in their iourney ſhould haue allowance to reſt vpon that day.

Your Maieſties moſt loyall ſubiect,

ANDREVV WILLET.

TO THE RIGHT VERTVOVS, MOST EXCELLENT AND NOBLE PRINCESSE QVEENE ELIZABETH OVR DREAD SOVERAIGNE, by the grace of God, Queene of England, France and Ireland, defender of the Faith, &c.

CHriſt Ieſus, the Prince of Princes, by whom Kings and Queenes doe raigne, who hath put the royall Scepter into your princely hand, vnder him to gouerne his people righteouſly, grant your maieſty long to ſit, and many happy yeeres ſtill to raigne ouer vs in all godlineſſe and peace, to his glory, your endleſſe comfort, and the true ioy of all your ſubiects.

This Epiſtle onely of the former edition, I thought good ſhould ſtand, that the memorie of this Bleſſed Queen ſhould ſtill liue and remaine among vs.

Moſt gracious and dread Soueraigne, I haue preſumed now this third time, to preſent this generall Treatiſe to your ſacred Maieſty: wherein is contained the whole ſumme of that holy faith & religion, which your Highneſſe maintaineth, and the Church of England profeſſeth, which your royall Scepter vpholdeth, and this Chriſtian Realme beleeueth. Moſes built vnto the Lord a tabernacle of tents, Salomon reared a temple made with hands: God hath raiſed vp your Maieſty to build him a ſpirituall houſe, to reforme religion, and to reſtore the ruines thereof: as the Prophet Iſay ſaith, Vocaberis inſtaurator ruinæ, & reſtitutor ſemitarum: You ſhall be called a repairer of the breaches, and a reſtorer of the decayed pathes: As by Moſes rod, Eliſhas ſtaffe, Zorobabels ſtone of tinne; ſo by your Highnes Scepter hath the Lord wrought wonders in this nation.

Eſay 58.12.

The Prophet Dauid maketh theſe three the ſupporters of Princes thrones, Veritie, Clemencie, Equitie: as he thus ſweetly ſingeth: Proſper with thy glory, ride on, becauſe of the word of truth, of meekneſſe, of righteouſneſſe. Theſe whether as the braſen oxen, that held vp the ſacred Lauer in the Temple, or the yuorie Lions that ſupported Salomons Kingly ſeate, or as the fierie horſe that drew Eliahs chariot, are the maintainers and vpholders of the Princely ſtate: by theſe your royall Throne was firſt erected, and is ſtill maintained, and ſhall for euer be preſerued.

Pſalm.45.4.

One thus commendeth the chaſtitie of Teuta Queene of Illyricum, Teuta Illyricorum regina, vt longo tempore viris fortiſſimis imperaret miraculo meruit caſtitatis: Teuta by her miraculous chaſtitie obtained, that ſhe a long time a valiant people gouerned. The ſame thus writeth of Moſes clemencie: Omnium manſuetiſſimus prædicatur, & ideo per 40. annos principatum obtinuit: Moſes is reported to haue been a man of a moſt meeke ſpirit, and therefore his gouernment continued fortie yeeres. Another thus writeth of the ſingular temperance of the good Emperour Valentinian: Etiam ludo iuuentutis putauit abſtinendum: He in his ſporting youth vſed to abſtaine. And againe, Cœpit ita frequentare ieiunium, vt plerunque ipſe impranſus conuiuium ſolenne ſuis comitibus exhiberet: He vſed ſo often to abſtaine, that when he feaſted his Nobles, he himſelfe faſted. If theſe three vertues then, Chaſtitie, Clemencie, Abſtinencie, as ſhining Diamonds adorne the Princely dignitie, and as moſt ſtedfaſt props vphold their regall authoritie; we doe well ſee them all (I ſpeake not with flatterie, but that God may haue the glorie) with a long and proſperous raigne by the Lords mercie crowned in your princely Maieſtie.

Concerning the ſecond princely ornament of Pietie and true Religion, there can be nothing, whereby Imperiall States are more ſafely preſerued, and the princely throne more ſurely eſtabliſhed: as the Lord himſelfe ſaith, of that thrice vertuous King Ioſias: Did he not eate and drinke and proſper, when he executed iudgement? and was not this becauſe he knew me ſaith the Lord? That ſaying is excellent which is inſerted into the law: Nihil eſt quod lumine clarius præfulgeat quàm recta fides in principe; nihil eſt, quod ita nequeat caſui ſubiacere quàm vera religio: There is nothing that ſhineth more brightly in a Prince, then the right faith; nothing leſſe caſuall, then true religion. Among all other honours, which God hath vouchſafed to your Highnes, this is the greateſt, that he hath made you a nurſing Mother to his Church, a chiefe patroneſſe of the Goſpell, and a defender of the true faith: How may your Maieſtie reioyce in this, yea and all true Chriſtians through the world haue cauſe to ioy therein; that by the Goſpell (ſet forth by your authoritie) ſo many ſoules are conuerted to God, that ſhould otherwiſe haue periſhed in ignorance; ſo many liues ſaued, that ſhould haue bin loſt for the defence of the truth; ſo many hereſies diſcouered, wherewith the world hath bin deluded: So that in this behalfe we may well ſay of your Maieſtie as the wiſe man in the Prouerbs, Many daughters haue done vertuouſly, but you ſurmount them all: and as Ambroſe ſpake to Theodoſius: Etſi in alijs quoque laudabilis, tamen apex tuorum operum pietas ſemper fuit: Although in other things you are moſt commendable, yet your piety is the grace of all your workes. Prou.30.29. Epiſt.28.ad Theod.

God hath not forgotten your faithfull ſeruice to his Sonne Chriſt, but richly rewarded the ſame in earth, reſeruing further an euerlaſting crowne for the ſame in heauen: from hence commeth the peace and proſperity, the length and diuturnitie, the fame and magnificencie of your happie raigne: in you is fulfilled, that which was ſpoken of the Prophet David, Becauſe the King truſted in the Lord, and in the mercy of the moſt higheſt hee ſhall not ſlide: and as hee propheciéth of the raigne of Salomon: The Kings of Tarſhiſh, and of the Iles, ſhall bring preſents, the Kings of Seba and Sheba ſhall bring gifts. In like manner hath God honoured your Highnes, making your name famous in remote Kingdomes, ſo that both Sheba from the South, and Tarſhiſh from the Northerne ſeas, doe preſent themſelues before your Highneſſe: and therefore wee doubt not, but that you do moſt thankfully confeſſe with that Chriſtian Emperour Iuſtinian; Per Chriſtum iura imperij ſuſcepimus, &c. By Chriſt, we haue receiued our Empire: and againe, Faciat nos ſecundum voluntatem eius regere: God grant I may gouerne according to his will. Pſal 21.7. Pſal.72.10. Lib.1.Tit 3. lex.2. Ibid.leg.1.

But yet notwithſtanding this great honor abroad, there yet remain ſome diſloyall perſons at home, who miſlike the ſincerity of religion, and preferre the obſcurity of ſuperſtition; whoſe daſled eyes the owle-light of Rome doth better pleaſe, then the Sun-ſhine of the Goſpell. When the Iſraelites went out of Egypt, there was not a dogge to moue the tongue againſt them; in the building of Salomons temple, the noyſe of a hammer was not heard: but we ſince we haue left the Egyptian darkeneſſe, are continually barked againſt, and the building of the ſpirituall temple is hindred with the noyſe of contrary hammers. To ſtop therefore the clamour of theſe mouthes, and to ſtay the beating of theſe hammers: I haue brought the whole body of Papiſtry in this booke into euery mans view, confuting the ſame, by Scriptures, Councels, Decrees, our Martyrs, and their owne writers. This I thought to be my part, that as vnder your Highneſſe peaceable raigne, I haue growne vp to this ſmall light and knowledge of the truth, (hauing been a ſimple Preacher thereof now theſe eighteene yeeres) ſo, though not as a chiefe builder, yet as a ſeruer and vnder labourer, I might bring ſomewhat toward the building of the Lords houſe. Exod.11.7.

And now it is high time (may it pleaſe your Maieſty) that euery man ſhould arme himſelfe to fight for, and defend the truth: ſeeing, as ſerpents, when the ſunne beginneth to decline, creepe out of their holes; ſo, many falſe ſeed-men in this cold and declining age of the world, are diſperſed in corners to corrupt Religion, and to ſow falſe doctrine. They imagine that Religion was but the heat of your Maieſties youth, who ſhall well vnderſtand, that the Lord hath made you as the Cedars of Libanus, that are tall, and ſtoope not, greene and flouriſhing, and fade not; and one of thoſe of whom the Prophet ſpeaketh: Adhuc abundabunt in canitie, They ſhall bring forth more fruit in their age. Now then it behoueth your Maieſty to be bold in Chriſts cauſe, to proceed in your moſt Chriſtian courſe, to confirme what is decaying, to remoue what is letting, to ſupply what is wanting in Gods houſe: as Ambroſe well ſaith, Non in principijs perfecta quæruntur, ſed de principijs, ad ea quæ perfecta ſunt peruenitur: In the beginning we ſeeke not perfection, but from the beginning we proceed to perfection. And the ſame Father elſewhere asking the queſtion, why God in the creation, as ſoone as he had made the creatures, ornatus congruos non dedit, did not produce them with their ornaments, as the Heauen with Starres, the earth with flowers, giueth this anſwere: Imitatores nos ſui Deus eſſe voluit vt prius faciamus aliquid, poſtea venuſtemus: which eſpecially may be applied to Princes: that they herein ſhould be like vnto God; firſt to lay the foundation, then to adde perfection; firſt to produce the creature, then to giue it his feature: as in a beautifull picture, firſt the lineaments are deſcribed, then the ornaments added. If either your Maieſties earth, that is, the ciuill adminiſtration want flowers, or the Heauenly State Starres, and ſhining ornaments, your Highneſſe is to play Gods part in earth to ſupplie them: The lampes of the Temple wax dim, where oyle faileth, and the Word is precious yet in many places, where the maintenance of the Miniſter is ſhort: your Princely care next vnder Gods prouidence, is onely able to helpe this, and your Maieſties moſt Chriſtian deſire hath therein well appeared, that the mouth of the Oxe be no more muſled, that treadeth out the corne; nor the Leuite any longer conſtrained to ſerue in Micahs houſe for meate and drinke and a ſuite of apparell. So many Foxes then would not breake into the vineyard, if the vines wanted no keepers: neither would the enemie bee ſo bold if euery watchtower had his skilfull and carefull watchman. Pſal.92.15. Hexemer.lib.1.cap.7. Deut.25.10. Iudg.17.10. Cantic.2.15. Ezech.33.8.

But I preſume too farre, thus to trouble your Maieſties eares: I know not whether euer I may haue the like occaſion to ſpeake vnto your highneſſe, and therefore I haue been bold thus to write: from the Lord we doe hope yet for a bleſſing, and of your Maieſty we are perſwaded all good: and we nothing Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 42. doubt, but that you are reſolued both to doe and ſay with that Chriſtian Empirour Iuſtinian: Omnia, quæ ad Dei placitum fieri properamus, legibus conſtituere, & operibus adimplere deſideramus: Whatſoeuer is to Gods glory, we are ready by our lawes to will, and in our workes to fulfill.

THE PREFACE TO THE CHRISTIAN READER.

IT may ſeeme ſtrange (good Chriſtian Reader) that the Goſpell hauing been taught amongſt vs by Gods eſpeciall goodneſſe and mercy, now theſe foure and fiftie yeeres, with great euidence of truth, plaine demonſtration out of Scripture, and moſt apparant conuiction of the aduerſarie, that there yet ſhould bee found among vs, whoſe eares are open to heare, and their hearts more ready to beleeue lies, then to receiue the truth. What elſe ſhould bee the reaſon hereof, I cannot iudge, but that which the Apoſtle rendreth: Becauſe they receiued not the loue of the truth, that they might be ſaued, God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould beleeue lies, 2. Theſſal.2.11. And therefore we may ſay of them, as Hierome of ſome in his time: Vnum tibi confiteor, mores eorum optimè noui, facilius eos vinci poſſe, quàm perſuaderi: I will confeſſe one thing vnto you, I know their manners very well, they may be ſooner ouercome, then perſwaded: aduerſ. Luciferian. For if our Sauiour Chriſts rule doe hold, as it muſt needs ſtand: Ex fructibus eorum cognoſcetis, &c. Yee ſhall know them by their fruites, Matth. 7.16. how can that Religion bee iudged to bee good, that bringeth forth ſuch bad fruits as trecherie, conſpiracies, practiſes againſt Prince and countrie, which things are ſo notoriouſly knowne, and ſo freſh in euery mans memory, that for proofe heereof I need not deſcend to particulars. What aileth then theſe men, that they cannot conſent in religion with vs? we build our faith onely vpon the Scriptures, wee ſeeke onely the glory of Chriſt, abaſing our ſelues, and our corrupt nature, onely extolling grace: which of theſe can offend them: they enioy their liuings, whereas Proteſtants were denied their liues; they haue liberty, wee were kept in thraldome and miſerie; they grow rich and purchaſe, the Proteſtants could not hold their owne. I cannot ſee then, what it is, that ſhould diſcontent them: did not the Prophet Ezechiel well propheſie of ſuch: They doe eate the good paſture, and tread downe the reſt with their feet: they haue drunke of the deepe waters, and troubled the reſidue with their feet. They are not content themſelues to eate the fat, and drinke the ſweet of the land, but ſome of them (for I accuſe not all) haue laboured and practiſed to diſturbe our peace, and to trouble our quiet ſtate. But let not vs (good brethren) be offended at theſe things. Firſt, let vs not bee aſtoniſhed, as though ſome ſtrange thing had befallen vs: for Saint Paul hath ſaid, That hereſies muſt be among vs, that they which are approued may be knowne: in time of perſecution exercebant patientiam Eccleſia, they did proue the patience of the Church: but now as Auguſtine ſaith, exercent ſapientiam, they doe exerciſe the wiſedome of the Church. Let not the number and multitude offend vs of thoſe which doe band themſelues againſt the Church: for ſo it muſt be, Chriſts flocke is but a little flocke. Let vs not bee afraid of their wiſedome, power or ſtrength: the Scripture teacheth vs, that they in their generation are wiſer then the children of light: yet the Lord our God, that is with vs, and fighteth for vs, is wiſer and ſtronger then they. Let them not deceiue vs with a ſhew of holineſſe: for Satan can transforme himſelfe into an Angell of light: neither let it moue vs becauſe they endure ſome trouble and loſſe of their goods, and impriſonment of their bodies for their religion (which is falſly ſo called) for Saint Peter ſaith, That men may ſuffer as euill doers, and ſo doe theſe. And Saint Auguſtine ſaith, Si pœna martyres faceret, omnes carceres martyribus pleni eſſent, omnes catena martyres traherent: If the puniſhment onely, and not the cauſe made Martyrs, all priſons ſhould be full of Martyrs, and all that are bound with fetters and chaines ſhould bee Martyrs. But let vs (not ſtumbling at any of theſe ſtones) be conſtant in the faith, and goe forward in the profeſſion of the Goſpell, which is grounded vpon the Scripture, ſealed with the blood of Martyrs, waited and attended vpon theſe many yeeres, as the miſtriſſe with the handmaid, with peace, proſperity, and abundance of all bleſſings. With them there is no peace to be had: their owne Doctors teach, that no reconciliation can bee made betweene vs: and indeed ſo it is, for there is no fellowſhip betweene light and darkeneſſe. The Iſraelites were commanded, not to ſowe their ground with diuers ſeeds, nor to plough with an Oxe and an Aſſe. What is this elſe, but that the Church of God cannot conſiſt of beleeuers and Idolaters, of true Chriſtians and hypocrites, Catholikes and Heretikes, Proteſtants and Papiſts? Their ſeed and ours is diuers: they ſow the doctrine of men, and humane traditions: wee ſow the ſeed of Gods word, The Oxe is onely fit for the Lords plough, that chaweth the cud, and diuideth the hooſe; the Aſſe doth and they chaw the cud, that doe meditate of that, which they heare out of the word. But ſuch are not the common Catholikes among the Papiſts: for they doe not allow euery one, the miſtriſſe, the

Dan. 2. 33. their diſcerning iudgement. There is no agreement therefore to bee looked for at their hands: no more then iron or clay can be tempered together. Their old veſſels cannot receiue the new liquor of the Goſpell: but they muſt first become new themſelues: they muſt firſt put off their beggerly ragges of popiſh ceremonies and ſuperſtitions, or elſe they ſhal neuer put on Chriſt: And to be ſhort, Ier. 25. 19. Reuertantur illi ad te, ne tu reuertaris ad illos: Let them returne vnto vs, we wil not returne to them, as the Lord ſaith to Ieremie.

But leſt now wee ſhould be thought to ſpeake without booke, deepely charging our aduerſaries with hereſies, lies, falſe doctrine, and prouing nothing: wee will take ſome paines to ſet downe ſome principall opinions of the Papiſts, which haue in the purer ages of the Church been condemned for hereſies.

1 Marcellina the companion of Carpocrates the arch-heretike, worſhipped the Images of Ieſus and Paul, and offered incenſe vnto them, Auguſt. hæreſ. 7. So the Papiſts do worſhip the Images of Saints, and in the ſecond Nicene Councell it was decreed, that the image of God ſhould be worſhipped with the ſame honour that God himſelfe was.

2 The Heracleonites did annoint their ſicke which lay a dying, with oyle and balme, Hæreſ. 16. So the Papiſts haue found out extreame Vnction and made it a Sacrament.

3 The Caiani did hold, that the ſin of Iudas in betraying Chriſt, was a benefit to mankind, Hæreſ. 18.
The Papiſts come ſomewhat neere: one of them affirmeth, that the Iewes had ſinned mortally, if they had not crucified Chriſt. Ex Iuel. defenſ. apolog. p. 676.

4 The Pepuziani iudged heretikes, becauſe they permitted women to be Prieſts, Hæreſ. 27. So it was decreed in the Florentine Councell among the Papiſts, that in the caſe of neceſſity, not onely a lay man, but an heretike, pagan, and a woman too, may baptize.

5 The heretikes called Angelici were condemned, becauſe they worſhipped Angels, Hæreſ. 39. So the Rhemiſts teach, that Angels may be worſhipped, Annot. in Apoc. 3. ſect. 6.

6 There was a ſect of heretikes that walked with bare feet, becauſe God ſaid to Moſes, put off thy ſhooes, &c. Hæreſ. 68. And ſo are there of Friers that goe barefoot, as the Friers Flagellants, and Franciſcans

7 The Priſcilianiſts did make the Apocrypha, that is, bookes not Canonicall of equall authority with Scripture, Hæreſ. 70. So doe the Papiſts, the bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Machabees, and others, which are not found in the Canon of the Hebrew, they make them bookes of Canonicall Scripture, and part of the word of God: yea, they ſay, that whatſoeuer the Paſtors of the Church doe teach beſide Scripture in the vnity of the Church, is to be taken for the word of God, Rhem. Annot. 1.
Theſ. cap. 2. ſect. 12.

8 An arch-heretike called Marcus, did hold that Chriſt did not verily ſuffer and indeed, but in ſhew onely and appearance, Hereſ. 14. The Apollinariſts alſo affirmed, that Chriſt toke humane fleſh without a ſoule, Hæreſ. 55. I pray you, how farre are the Papiſts from theſe hereſies? for they affirme that Chriſt ſuffered not in ſoule: Nay the Rhemiſts hold, that it is a blaſphemous aſſertion ſo to ſay, Annot. Hebr. 5. v. 7. What is this elſe, but with Marcus to ſay, that Chriſt ſuffered but in ſhew, and that he felt nothing in ſoule, when hee cried out vpon the Croſſe, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? for if there were no ſuch matter indeed, Chriſt muſt haue vttered thoſe words only in outward ſhew and pretenſe. Againe, they cannot ſhift off handſomely from them the Apollinariſts hereſie: for why did Chriſt take vpon him our fleſh and ſoule, but to redeeme man, that was loſt both in body and ſoule? and therefore hee muſt needs haue ſuffered both in body and ſoule: for if there were no vſe of the humane ſoule in the worke of our redemption, you might as well ſay with Cont. Felician. cap. 13. the Apollinariſts that Chriſt had no ſoule at all. Thus Auguſtine reaſoneth: Si totus homo perijt, totus beneficio ſaluatoris indiguit; ſi totus beneficio ſaluatoris indigebat, totum Chriſtus veniendo ſaluauit:
If the whole man both in body and ſoule were loſt, hee wholly had need of a Sauiour: and if hee wholly needed a Sauiour; Chriſt by his comming did wholly ſaue him. Ergo, it followeth that Chriſt muſt wholly haue died and ſuffered in body and ſoule to redeeme man, that was wholly loſt in body and ſoule.

9 The Anthropomorphites did imagine, that God was in ſhape and proportion like a man, Hæreſ. 50.
Doe not our Rhemiſts ſauour ſtrongly of this hereſie, which allow the Image of God to bee pictured like an old man with gray haires in their Churches? Annot. Act. cap. 17. v. 29.

10 The heretikes Abeliani, thought it not lawfull for their ſect to liue without wiues, and yet they neuer vſed, nor kept company with their wiues, Hæreſ. 87. Doe not the Papiſts come neere them, which hold that their Prieſts which were married before orders, ought not afterward to haue acceſſe to their wiues, yet are they their wiues ſtill, neither is the marriage knot diſſolued betweene them? Rhemiſt.: Act.21.ſect.1.

11 The Pelagian hereſies did hold three pernicious opinions. Firſt, that a man may bee perfect in this life and keepe all the Commandements, *Hereſ.*88. So the Rhemiſts ſay, it is poſſible to keepe all the precepts of the Law, Annot. Iohan.14 ſect.1. Secondly, the Pelagians ſay, that grace is giuen vnto men only to this end, that they may more eaſily do thoſe things which they are commanded to do by their owne freewil, *Hereſ.*88. So the Rhemiſts ſay, that a man was neuer without freewill, but hauing the grace of Chriſt, it is truly made free. Annot. Iohan.8. ſect.2. What is this elſe, but that his free will is made more free, and that grace helpeth him not wholly to worke, but more eaſily only? Thirdly, the Pelagians hold, Gratiam Dei non ad ſingulos actus dari: That the grace of God is not needfull to be giuen at euery aſſay, but that their free will in moſt things is ſufficient, Auguſt. Epiſt. 106. So the Rhemiſts ſay, that though the Gentiles beleeued ſpecially by Gods grace, yet they beleeued alſo of their owne free-will, Act.13.ſect.2. What ſay they elſe but that a man may beleeue by his owne free will without grace?

12 The Manichees condemned the eating of fleſh, as being vncleane and impure, Hereſ.46. So the Papiſts alſo forbid at certaine times the eating of fleſh. And heerein they perhaps differ from the Manichees: They held that fleſh was vncleane by creation: The Papiſts by reaſon of the curſe: for God curſed the earth, and not the waters (ſay they) and therefore vpon faſting dayes fiſh is preferred before fleſh, Durand. lib.6. capit. de alijs ieiunijs. So they both agree in this, that fleſh is a thing impure and vncleane: for if they had not ſo thought, why did not that popiſh Biſhop of London Stokeſlye, rather ſuffer the pigge to be eaten, which was found in one Frebarnes houſe in Lent time, his wife being great with child longing for a peece thereof, then command it as an vncleane thing to be buried in Finsbury fields, and ſo the good creature of God to be ſpoyled and loſt?

Fox.p.1585.

There was alſo another moſt blaſphemous opinion of the Manichees: for they held that the parts and members of Chriſt were diſperſed euery where, and that in their meats & drinks, they did deliuer the members of Chriſt which were tyed and bound in the creatures. Tales (ſaith Auguſtine) ſunt electi eorum, vt non ſint ſaluandi à Deo, ſed ſaluatores Dei; liberant enim membra Chriſti, cum manducant: The elect amongſt them (for ſo they call their principals) doe make themſelues the Sauiours & redeemers of God, for they do ſet at liberty (as they imagine) the members of Chriſt, hee is not their Sauiour. Compare now the opinion of the Papiſts with theſe heretikes: ſee if they bee not coſin germanes: for as they made themſelues, ſaluatores Chriſti, ſauiours of Chriſt: ſo it is a ſaying among the Papiſts, that Sacerdos eſt creator creatoris ſui: The Prieſt at Maſſe, which by fiue words ſpeaking maketh the body of Chriſt, is a maker, ſay they, of his maker, a creator of his creator, Ex Iuell. lib. artic. pag.615. But herein the Papiſts goe beyond the Manichees, for they deliuered the body and members of Chriſt from the priſon of the creatures, and ſent them vp to heauen: the Papiſts bring them downe from heauen, and cloſe them in the creature, vnder the ſhape of bread and wine.

Pſalm.104.

Thus farre we thought good to ſhew, how neere the Papiſts come to the heretikes of olde time: that it might appeare to the world, that we do not vniuſtly charge them with hereſie, & that we haue good cauſe to ſhunne and abhorre their poyſoned doctrine. Many other hereſies I could haue produced; which are reuiued by our aduerſaries, and raked againe as it were out of their graues, where they did quietly reſt: But that I am not of purpoſe now to deale in this matter: which in a ſeuerall Treatiſe annexed I haue handled more at large.

In Tetraſtilon

I haue only by the way giuen a taſt of the bitter and ſowre doctrine of Popery: that our countrymen, which haue beene any thing that way infected, may take warning, that if they haue ſipped of the whore of Babylons cuppe of fornication, they ſhould leaue off, before they haue drunke more deepely, leaſt they in the end be conſtrained to draw out the very dregs thereof, and to bee drunken with their intoxicate cup. If they wil in time be warned, they may: a word to a wiſe man is ſufficient: and if they be wiſe, they will alſo take heede in time, I ſay vnto them, as Auguſtine did ſometime to the Donatiſts: Si ſapitis, bene & rectè, ſi autem non ſapitis, nos veſtri curam geſſiſſe non pœnitebit, quia etſi cor veſtrum ad pacem non conuertitur, pax noſtra tamen ad nos reuertitur: If you will bee learned, it is wel, and as we wiſh: but if you wil not, it repenteth vs not, that we haue had ſome care of you: for although your hart be not cōuerted to the peace of the Goſpell, yet our peace returneth to vs againe.

Contra Petilianum.3.59.

Heere by the way, I muſt remember my ſelfe of one thing, which I had almoſt ouerſlipped. Euery where both in this Preface and in this whole booke, ſpeaking of our aduerſaries, I call them Papiſts, as we are known by the name of Proteſtants: I ſuppoſe our Engliſh Romaniſts wil take no offence, or griefe hereby ſo to be called: although I haue heard that ſome of them hold great ſcorn to be named Papiſts, yet I ſee no reaſon, why they ſhould ſo do. The Rhemiſts like this name wel enough, becauſe it is not deriued from any one man, but from their Popes and chiefe Biſhops, to whom (ſay they) we are bound to cleaue in Religion, and obey in all things: So to be a Papiſt (ſay they) is to be a Chriſtian man, a child of the Church, and a ſubiect to Chriſts Vicar. Seeing then this name pleaſeth their ghoſtly Fathers of Rhemes ſo well, there is no reaſon why they ſhould miſlike it: and therefore wee will vſe it ſtill, as beſt expreſſing their profeſſion, who are pinned vpon the Popes ſleeue for their faith and religion. As likewiſe the name of Proteſtants we refuſe not, which name I thinke, though elſewhere

before in vſe, yet in England took beginning in K. Henry the eights daies, when there was a generall Fox.p.108.3. proteſtation made in the name of the King, the whole Councell and Clergie of England, againſt the Pope: In the which proteſtation, thus we find: England hath taken her leaue of popiſh crafts for euer, neuer to be deluded with them hereafter: Romane Biſhops haue nothing to do with Engliſh people: the one doth not traffique with the other: at the leaſt, though they will haue to deale with vs, we will none of their merchandiſe, none of their ſtuffe. Thus we ſee how a Papiſt and a Proteſtant are defined: a Papiſt is hee that cleaueth to the Pope in religion, and is obedient to him in all things: a Proteſtant is he, that profeſſeth the Goſpel of Ieſus Chriſt, & hath renounced the Iuriſdiction of the Sea of Rome, & the forced & vnnaturall obedience to the Pope. Theſe names therefore as beſt fitting both our profeſſions, ſeeing no cauſe to the contrary, I purpoſe euery where to vſe and retaine throughout this Treatiſe.

I would heere finiſh and make an end of this Preface, but that firſt I muſt make the reader acquainted with the order and method, which I haue followed in ſetting downe the controuerſies: The whole body therfore of the controuerſies betweene the Papiſts and vs, our worthie and learned countriman D. Whitakers hath digeſted and diſpoſed into a ſingular Method, the which I haue propounded to my ſelfe throughout this diſcourſe to obſerue.

The hereſies and errors therefore of Popery, do either impugne the offices of Chriſt, with his benefits and merits, or his perſon: the moſt of them are of the firſt kind, ſome errours they maintaine againſt his perſon but not many.

Firſt, the name of Chriſt ſheweth his offices: for it ſignifieth annointed: he was annointed to bee our Prophet, King and Prieſt: Ieſus betokeneth a Sauiour, & ſetteth forth the benefits of our redemption & ſaluation. Firſt then of his offices, and then of the benefits that do ariſe and ſpring thereof.

The firſt office of our Sauiour Chriſt, is to be our heauenly teacher and Prophet. His heauenly doctrine is contained no where elſe but in the Scriptures. The firſt generall controuerſie then muſt bee of the Scriptures: where there ariſe many queſtions: as of the Canonicall bookes of the Scripture: of the vulgar tranſlation of Scripture, of the perſpicuity, and plainnes, authority, interpretation and perfection of Scripture, with ſuch other.

The ſecond office of Chriſt is to be our King: and becauſe his kingdome is his Church: here we are to handle the controuerſies about the Church: which is either the Church Militant vpon earth, or the Church Triumphant in heauen.

The Church militant is to bee conſidered, either in generall, where theſe queſtions are mooued, what the Church is, whether it be viſible or not, by what marks it is knowne, whether it may erre, what authority it hath. Then the parts of the Church, which are either aſſembled and gathered together, as in generall Councels: where theſe doubts muſt be diſcuſſed, whether general Councels be neceſſary, by whom they ought to bee ſummoned, whether they can erre, whether the Pope bee aboue Councells or not, & ſuch like: Or elſe the parts of the Church are ſeuerally to be conſidered, and they are of three ſorts, either the cheefe parts, the middle and meane parts, the loweſt and baſeſt parts of the Church: The cheefe member they make to be the Pope: where there are many queſtions and of great waight, as whether the regiment of the Church be Monarchical, whether Peter were appointed head of the Church, whether the Pope be Peters ſucceſſor, whether hee may erre, whether the Pope be Antichriſt, with ſuch other. The middle parts, are their Clerkes, which are either ſecular, as they call them, which haue any eccleſiaſticall function, where wee muſt enquire of their election and degrees of their ſingle life, and ſuch like; the Regular Clerkes are their Monkes, and other of that profeſſion, where we muſt entreat of vowes, of their ſolitary life, their habite, their Canonical houres, with other matters. The loweſt members are the lay men: where the queſtions about the Ciuill Magiſtrate muſt be handled: as whether he may put heretikes to death, whether he haue any power and authority in Eccleſiaſticall matters, and hitherto of the Militant Church.

The Triumphant Church conſiſteth either of Angels, or other Saints departed: Concerning the Angels, we diſſent about the orders and degrees of them, about their miniſtery and office, and whether they are to be prayed vnto.

Concerning the Saints departed, there are many queſtions in controuerſie, as of Purgatory, Limbus patrum, whether they are to be prayed vnto, of their Reliques, Images, Temples, Holy daies, and ſuch like.

The third office of Chriſt is his Prieſthood, whereof there are two parts, his interceſſion, where we muſt enquire, whether Chriſt be the only Mediator of interceſſion, and his ſacrifice, where the maine and great controuerſie concerning the Sacraments doth offer it ſelfe: for by the Sacraments the power and efficacie of the death of Chriſt is deriued vnto vs.

Here firſt we muſt intreat of the Sacraments in generall, as of their number, their efficacie, the difference betweene the Sacraments of the old and new Teſtament: then in particular, as of Baptiſme, and the ſeuerall queſtions thereto belonging, of the Lords Supper, where alſo the great controuerſie about their Idolatrous ſacrifice of the maſſe, and other neceſſary queſtions muſt be handled. Then follow in order fiue other popiſh Sacraments to be conſidered of, Confirmation, Penance, Extreame vnction, Orders, Matrimony. And theſe are the controuerſies concerning the offices of Chriſt.

The controuerſies which concerne the benefits of our redemption, with other ſeuerall queſtions, are theſe. Firſt of the ſtate of man in paradiſe before his fall: where we are to diſcuſſe of the ſtate of Adams ſoule, and of his body, whether it were created immortall, of Paradiſe, whether it were a place knowne, and yet remaining. The ſecond Controuerſie is concerning Adams fall, where the queſtions are handled, of Adams tranſgreſſion, and of originall ſinne, with the ſeuerall parts thereof. The third Controuerſie conſiſteth of the reparation of mankind: where theſe principall queſtions are decided, of Predeſtination, of Grace, Free will, Faith, Iuſtification, Good works.

Laſtly, there remaine ſome queſtions about the perſon of Chriſt, as whether hee bee αὐτόθεος, that is, God of himſelfe, whether he encreaſed in wiſedome, whether he ſuffered in ſoule, whether he merited for himſelfe, with ſuch other.

Thus haue we the ſumme and body of Antichriſtian doctrine, which wee purpoſe by the grace of God to go through, beginning at the firſt, and ſo proſecuting euery particular queſtion, till wee are come to the laſt. My purpoſe is not to ſet downe all the hereſies, which impugne the Chriſtian faith, but onely thoſe which are maintained by the Church of Rome this day; who are the chiefe troublers and diſquieters of the peace of our Church: I ſay therefore with Auguſtine, Omnis Chriſtianus Catholicus iſta non debet credere, ſed non omnis, qui iſta non credit, conſequenter ſe debet Chriſtianum credere: Euery true Chriſtian is bound not to beleeue theſe things, but yet not ſtraightway euery man, that beleeueth them not; muſt hold himſelfe to be a good Chriſtian, for there are many errors and hereſies in the world beſide papiſtry: But this we haue only choſen to deale againſt in this treatiſe, as being moſt dangerous to our ſtate, more plauſible to carnall men, and moſt like to infect. I haue now this fourth time, for thy benefit, Chriſtian Reader, peruſed, corrected, and augmented this worke, and publiſhed it for thy vſe. The ſecond edition was in theſe foure points enlarged more then the former: firſt, I haue anſwered more obiections of the aduerſarie, and propounded more arguments for the truth: Secondly, I haue added the Canons of the ancient Councels throughout for the more liuely euidence of truth: Thirdly I haue adioyned to euery place of greateſt waight the ſeale and teſtimony of the holy Martyrs. Fourthly, this book containeth one hundred more of popiſh Errors then the firſt: where I haue breefly touched Bellarmines chiefe arguments in ſome maine controuerſies of our Faith, as he hath lately cauſed them to bee publiſhed in the third volume of his controuerſies: which came forth ſince the firſt edition of this booke. In this third edition I haue performed more then in the former, in theſe foure points: Firſt I haue anſwered all ſuch places of waight, which our aduerſaries alleage out of Scripture, and remoued many more obiections of the aduerſarie then before. Secondly, I haue inſerted more teſtimonies of the Fathers for the proofe of the truth, & anſwered their ſhew of the Fathers in ſome principall controuerſies: Thirdly, I haue conuinced them by the Lawes Imperiall, and their owne Pontificall decrees, and by their own writers. Fourthly, I haue adioyned a confutation of Bellarmines firſt booke of Indulgences and Iubilee pardons, and added one Centurie more: ſo that the whole is increaſed to fiue Centuries, that is, ſo many hundreds of popiſh errors and hereſies.

In this fourth edition I haue in theſe foure things enlarged this worke. 1. I haue inſerted certaine queſtions not handled before: as of popiſh equiuocating: Controu. 3. Centur. 1. Of our iuſtification as well by Chriſts actiue as paſſiue obedience: Centur. 4. and diuers other: 2. I haue thoroughout confuted the arguments of the Doway tranſlators, which they produce in defence of their errors in their late edition of a part of the old teſtament. 3. I haue in euery queſtion adioyned the conſent, of the Eaſt, and South Churches, and of the reformed Churches in the weſt, ſetting downe alſo the opinion of ſome chiefe writers of the Romane Church. 4. I haue made theſe additions: there is in the end of this worke a catalogue of the principall charitable workes, which haue bene done in the cities of London, Cambridge, and Oxford ſince the times of the Goſpel: beſide two tables, one of the places of Scripture, the other of the chiefe matters handled in this booke.

This, through Gods gratious aſſiſtance I haue performed in this worke, and throughout the ſame, as neere as I could, I haue followed Auguſtines rule, Ita ſtylo, ſi potuero moderabor, vt huic operi in Dei voluntate peragendo, nec ea, quæ ſuperſint dicam, nec ea quæ ſatis ſunt prætermittam: My care hath beene ſo to temper my ſtyle, that neither things ſuperfluous ſhould be inſerted, nor things neceſſary omitted. Theſe my labours, farre beyond my ſtrength, though not aboue my hope, by the Lords extraordinary aſſiſtance (I muſt needs confeſſe) I haue brought to an end. Recompence I looke for none, but thy good acceptation (Chriſtian Reader:) it is the good of Gods Church, which I ſeeke: other encouragement (the Lord helpe) in theſe daies we haue ſmall: I now commend my ſelfe to thy prayer, my labours to thy diligent reading (Chriſtian brother) and both you and them to Gods good bleſſing: who giue vs grace to diſcerne truth from error, and hauing diſcerned them, power to ſhun the one, and embrace the other: that as he well ſaith, Speremus, quæ Chriſtus promiſit, & ſequamur quò præceſſit:) that hoping and truſting here to that which Chriſt hath promiſed, wee may follow at length, whether hee is preceded and gone before vs: Amen. *Dat. Adams ſoule, and of his body, whether it were created immortall; of Paradiſe, whether it were a place knowne, and to be found at this day. ANDREAS WILLET.

THE FIRST BOOKE OR CENTVRIE CONTEINING THE CONTROVERSIES OF RELIGION, WHICH ARISE IN QVESTION BETWEENE THE CHVRCH OF God and the Papiſts, about the word of God conteined in the Scriptures, and the Church Militant here vpon earth, with the parts and members thereof.

THE FIRST GENERALL CONTROVERSIE of the holie Scriptures.

ACcording to the method which I haue propounded to my ſelfe (God aſſiſting me by his ſpirit) to obſerue throughout this whole Treatiſe of the Controuerſies, and as I haue ſet it downe in the end of the Preface, In the firſt place we are to entreate of ſuch matters as concerne the Propheticall office of Chriſt. He is our Prophet, our heauenly teacher, and Doctor, Matth. 23. verſ. 8. from him proceedeth all holy knowledge: we haue not ſeene God, nor the high things of God: But the onely begotten ſonne, which is in the boſome of the father, hee hath declared him. Iohn 1. 18. Wherefore all the true ſheepe of Chriſt will heare his voyce, Iohn 10. 3. His voyce is not elſe where heard but onely in the Scriptures: We muſt heare Moſes and the Prophets, Luke 16. 29. and as Saint Ambroſe well ſaith, Qui vult ad Chriſti peruenire myſterium, non ingreditur ad illud, niſi per euangelica ſcripturæ ſecretum: No man can attaine to the knowledge of Chriſt, but by the ſecret of euangelicall Scriptures. First of all therefore this great and moſt famous controuerſie betweene vs and our aduerſaries concerning the Scriptures muſt be handled: which is diſtributed into ſeuen ſeuerall queſtions. Serm. 57.

1 Concerning the Canonicall Scripture, what bookes are to bee receiued into the ſacred Canon, what bookes to be reiected and counted apocryphall.

2 Concerning the authenticall Edition of the holy Scriptures, whether the Hebrew, Greeke, or Latine tranſlation is chiefly to be followed.

3 Whether the Scriptures ought to be tranſlated into the vulgar and Engliſh tongue; and whether publike prayers and diuine ſeruice ought to be vſed in the ſame tongue.

4 Whether the Scriptures are authorized by the Church, and not rather ſo knowne to be of themſelues.

5 Concerning the perſpicuitie and plaineneſſe of the Scripture, whether it be ſo hard, that the common people may not ſafely be admitted to the reading thereof.

6 Concerning the interpretation of Scripture: which queſtion is diuided into three parts: firſt, whether the Scripture admit diuers ſenſes and expoſitions: ſecondly, who hath the chiefe authoritie to expound Scripture; thirdly, what meanes ought to be vſed in expounding of it.

7 Concerning the perfection of the Scripture, three parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether the Scriptures be neceſſarie: ſecondly, whether they be ſufficient to ſaluation; thirdly, whether there bee any traditions beſide neceſſarie to ſaluation.

THE FIRST QVESTION CONCERNING the Canonicall Scripture.

Of the ſtate of the firſt Queſtion.

WE haue not in this place profeſſedly to deale with thoſe heretikes, which denie either the whole Scripture, or any part thereof: but onely with our aduerſaries the Papiſts, that holding all thoſe bookes to be Scripture, which we doe acknowledge, doe adde vnto them other bookes which are not canonicall: ſo that they offend not as other heretikes, in denying any part of the Scripture, but which is as bad, in adding vnto it; for both theſe are accurſed, Reuel. 22. 18. And here I could haue wiſhed that they would haue followed S. Hieromes counſell, writing thus vnto Læta; as touching the canonicall bookes of the olde Teſtament, which after he had reckoned vp, as we now hold them, giueth this caueat concerning the Apocrypha: Caueat omnia Apocrypha, & ſi quando ea, non ad dogmatum veritatem, ſed ad ſignorum reuerentiam legere voluerit, ſciat non eorum eſſe, quorum titulis prænotantur, multaque his admixta vitioſa, & grandis eſſe prudentiæ aurum in luto quærere: Let her take heede of all the Apocrypha, which if ſhee will reade, not for the trueth of doctrine, but reuerence of the ſtorie, let her know, that they are not their writings, whoſe title they beare, and that many corrupt things are intermingled; and herein lieth great wiſedome, how to gather gold out of durt. Hieron. ad Latam.

Firſt of all briefly before we proceed, let vs ſee who they were that did offend in the firſt kind, namely, in denying and detracting from Scripture. Some heretikes generally reiected the whole Scripture, ſome certaine parts thereof. The Sadduces receiued no Scripture, beſides the fiue bookes of Moſes; the Maniches condemned the whole old Teſtament, and ſo did wicked Marcion.

The bookes of Moſes the Ptolemaits refuſed, the booke of the Pſalmes the Nicolaitaines, and the Anabaptiſts in our dayes: there wanted not which condemned the booke of the Preacher & the Canticles as wanton and laſciuious bookes: and the Anabaptiſts are not here behinde with their parts. The holy and excellent booke of Iob hath alſo found enemies, and ſome of the Rabbines, which doe thinke that the ſtorie is but fained: which hereſie is confuted, Ezech. 14. 14. for there Noah, Iob, Daniel, are named together: ſo that it is manifeſt, that ſuch a man there was. Wicked Porphyrie refuſeth Daniel as forged.

The new Teſtament the Maniches moſt impiouſly affirmed to be full of lies. Cerdon the heretike condemned all but Lukes Goſpell. Cerinthus receiued none but Markes. The Valentinians could away with none but Iohns Goſpell. The Alogians of all other hated Iohns writings. The Ebionites onely admitted Matthewes Goſpell. The Acts of the Apoſtles the Seuerian heretikes contemned. The Marcionites the Epiſtles to Timothie, to Titus, to the Hebrewes. The Ebionites could not away with any of S. Pauls works. But the Church of God hath euen from the Apoſtles time acknowledged and receiued all the bookes of the new Teſtament, as they now ſtand together, as by Origen a moſt auncient Writer of the Church is in theſe words confeſſed: Sacerdotali tuba primus in Euangelio ſuo Matthæus increpuit; Marcus quoque, Lucas & Ioannes ſuis ſingulis tubis ſacerdotalibus cecinerunt, &c. Firſt Matthew ſoundeth forth his euangelicall trumpet; then follow Marke, Luke and Iohn, ſinging with their Prieſtly trumpets; Peter alſo ſendeth forth the trumpet of his two Epiſtles; Iames alſo and Iude, and Iohn maketh melodie with his trumpet in his Epiſtles, and the Apocalypſe, and Luke in the Acts of the Apoſtles: Et Paulus in quatuordecim epiſtolarum ſuarum fulminat tubis: And Paul thundereth out in the trumpets of his fourteene Epiſtles. Vnto theſe former heretikes adde the Zuinckfeldians and Libertines that refuſe to be iudged by the Scripture, calling it a dead letter, and flie vnto the inward and ſecret reuelations of the ſpirit. And by your leaue, the Papiſts are not farre from this hereſie ſome of them: although the Ieſuite crie neuer ſo much with open mouth, that wee belie them, De verbo Dei lib. 1. cap. 1. Take but a little paines to peruſe that worthy learned mans and reuerent Fathers defence of the Apologie, p. 521. there you ſhall finde how that Lodouicus, a Canon Lateran in Rome, ſaid in the Councell of Trent, that the Scripture is but mortuum atramentum, dead inke. The Biſhop of Poitiers ſaid, that it was but res inanimis & muta, a dead and dumbe thing. Albertus Pighius, that the Scriptures were but muti Iudices, dumbe Iudges. Eckius calleth it Euangelium nigrum, & theologiam atramentariam, the blacke Goſpell and inkie diuinitie: and it is naſus cereus, a noſe of waxe, ſaith he. And now in commeth Hoſius with his part: that it is but loſt labour which is beſtowed in the Scripture: for the Scripture is a creature, and a certaine bare letter. But the Ieſuit ſaith, that wee abuſe the name of that man, for thoſe are not his owne words, but he reporteth them of Zuinckfeldius. Be it ſo for this time, though M. Iewell beſtow ſome paines to proue them to be according to his own meaning. Though theſe ſhould not be Hoſius owne words, yet theſe are not much better, yea farre worſe, who ſpeaking of Dauids writing of the Pſalmes, ſaith thus, Quid ni ſcriberet, ſcribimus indocti doctique poëmata paſſim, why might not he write (ſaith he) being a temporall Prince, as Horace ſaith, we write ballads euery bodie both learned and vnlearned? Hoſ. lib. 2. cont. Brentium.

Homil. 7. in Ioſu.

I pray you now how much doe theſe Papiſts differ from the Libertines and Zuinckfeldians, vnleſſe it be in this, that the Libertines cleaue to ſecret reuelations; the Papiſts are pinned vpon the Popes ſleeue, affirming that it is no Scripture nor Goſpell without the determination of the Church. Nay one of them ſaith, Determinatio Eccleſiæ appellatur Euangelium, the determination of the Church is called the Goſpell, Iohannes Maria. Will you yet heare of greater impietie? Anno Domini. 1240. or thereabout, there was a booke ſet forth by the Friers, called Euangelium æternum, full of their owne fables, and abominable errors: they taught that Chriſts Goſpell was not to be compared vnto it, and that the Goſpell of Chriſt ſhould be preached but fiftie yeeres. This booke with much adoe was condemned by the Pope, (but after long diſputation) and it was burnt ſecretly, leaſt the Friers ſhould haue beene diſcredited: and withall, the booke of Gulielmus de S. amore, which hee had written againſt the Friers, and therein diſputed againſt their Goſpell, was commanded to be burned with the other. Beſides theſe heresies, teries, their opinion also is to bee reiected, that thinke that the holy Writers might in ſome things be deceiued, as miſtaking one thing for another, or failing in their memorie. To this opinion Eraſmus enclined, whom Bellarmine taketh paine to confute, lib. 1. cap. 6. He might as well haue turned his argument vpon Melchior Canus their owne champion, who thinketh that Stephen, Acts 7. in telling ſo long a ſtorie, might forget himſelfe in ſome things, Can. lib. 2. cap. 18. But wee herein miſlike both Eraſmus conceit, and Canus his fancie, and who elſe haue ſo thought of the Scriptures; and ſay rather with Saint Auguſtine: Tantummodo ſcripturis canonicis hanc debeo ſeruitutem, &c. I doe onely to the canonicall Scriptures owe this ſeruice and obedience, which I doe ſo follow, that I thinke the Writers thereof erred not any whit at all. And againe, Omnem falſitatem abeſſe ab Euangeliſtis decet, non ſolum eam, quae mentiendo promitur, ſed etiam eam quae obliuiſcendo: All falſitie, it is fitting to be farre off from the Euangeliſts, not onely that which is drawne out in lying, but alſo in forgetting, lib. 2. de conſen. Euangeliſt. c. 12. And I ſay alſo with Hierome, who, whereas ſome accuſed S. Matthew of forgetfulneſſe, as though he ſhould haue named Ieremie for Zacharie, Matth. 27. 9. thus writeth: Abſit hoc de pediſſequo Christi dicere, &c. Farre be it from me ſo to ſay of the follower of Chriſt, who in alleaging the Prophets, hunted not for words or phraſes, but had a care to ſet downe the ſenſe and doctrine: for hee thinketh that place there cited to be taken, though not word for word, out of Ieremie. But now to the queſtion.

Fox. pag. 322. ex Mat. Pariſienſ.

Epiſt. 19.

Hieron. ad Pammach.

CERTAINE QVESTIONS ABOVT SOME of the Canonicall bookes of Scripture.

THe bookes of Scripture whereof we now intreate, are of three ſorts: ſome are both by vs and our aduerſaries iudged to be Canonicall, as all the bookes of the new Teſtament, wholly as they ſtand: and all thoſe bookes of the olde Teſtament, ſo many as are found in the Hebrew: Some are both of vs and our aduerſaries reiected, and thruſt out of the Canon: what bookes they are, ſhall bee declared in the next ſection.

A third ſort there is, which our aduerſaries would gladly bring into the number of the bookes of ſacred Scripture, but we herein doe by warrant of Gods word reſiſt and withſtand them: and of theſe alſo afterward.

Concerning the firſt kinde, namely ſuch bookes, as are both by them and vs acknowledged for Canonicall, there is no queſtion betweene vs for the authoritie of them: onely about the booke of the Preacher, there ariſeth ſome controuerſie betweene Bellarmine and vs, whom eſpecially I purpoſe to trace throughout this Treatiſe. We are agreed, of the booke it ſelfe, that it is Canonicall; of the Author, that he was Salomon: but theſe two points we varie about: firſt, Bellarmine thinketh that Salomon made that booke before his fall: wee thinke he ſet it forth after, as a token of his repentance: ſecondly, he thinketh that Salomon was a reprobate, and a caſt-away for euer: we hold the contrarie: let vs firſt examine his arguments, and then ſet downe our owne.

The Papiſts.

THat this booke of the Preacher was compoſed by Salomon, before he fell: thus the Ieſuite would proue it.

Argum. 1. The Preacher ſaith, that his wiſedome remained yet with him, chap. 2. ver. 9. But it is not like, that the heauenly gift of wiſedome continued with him, after his heart was turned from God to Idolatrie: Ergo, it is like this booke was made before his fall, while hee was in the ſtate of wiſedome, lib. 1. de verb. cap. 5.

Eccleſ. 2. 9.

Anſwer. 1 Salomons wiſedome was not onely in diuine, but in humane things, and in the knowledge of nature: for he ſpake of trees, of hearbs, of beaſts and fowles, and therefore he is ſaid to excell in wiſedome the children of the Eaſt, and the wiſe of Egypt, whoſe knowledge was in naturall things, 1. King. 4. verſ. 30. 33. And this wiſedome might remaine with Salomon, in the middeſt of pleaſure, as we ſee it was not denied to the vitious and idolatrous heathen Philoſophers: yea, and Salomon ſaith of himſelfe, that he thought to giue his heart to wine, and yet to leade his minde in wiſedome, chap. 2. verſ. 3. ſo that it ſeemeth, that the gift of wiſedome did not wholly faile him, no not in his fall.

1. King. 30. 33.

2 And what if it were granted, that the ſpirit of wiſedome departed from him all the time of his dotage? Why might it not returne to him againe afterwards, when hee began to repent him of his fall: as the ſpirit of ſtrength and fortitude being gone from Sampſon, for a while, came to him againe.

3 Or thus rather the place may be vnderſtood: I was great, and encreaſed aboue all (ſaith he) that were before me in Ieruſalem, alſo my wiſedome remained with me: that is, he maketh a large and ample confeſſion of his ſinne, that while hee was in honour and wealth, with wiſedome, euen then his heart was enticed from the true worſhip of God, euen in the middeſt of Gods bleſſings: ſuch was his vnthankfulneſſe to God, and forgetfulneſſe of his benefites. So then the time of the continuance of his wiſedome, is not to be referred to the inſtant of making this booke, but hath reſpect to his fall: for he ſaith, that his honour, riches, and wiſedome continued yet, (I was encreaſed:) but it is to be thought, that as he being drowned in pleaſure, decayed in wiſedome; ſo alſo his credit and ſubſtance was empaired, which were giuen him as handmaides to waite of his wiſedome.

Argum. 2. Salomon doted when he was an olde man, 1. King. 11. 4. to what time then will you aſſigne then his repentance? Againe, if this booke had beene made after his fall, it is like, that whereas he maketh a particular rehearsall of all his pleasures, hee would not haue omitted his pleasure and delight in such a multitude of wiues and concubines: And is it like, that he being besotted with the loue of so many women, could endite such excellent sayings? Bellarm. ibid.

Ans. 1. Salomon was olde when he gaue himselfe vnto women, yet it is like he was older, when hee weaned himselfe from his pleasure, and returned vnto God by heartie repentance: for there are diuers degrees of olde age. Secondly, it was not necessarie that Salomon should reckon vp all his pleasures: neither indeed doth hee: for hee spake of trees, and beasts, and fowles; in the knowledge whereof, no doubt it was a great delight vnto a wise man, to be occupied and exercised in: yet thereof hee maketh no mention in the 2. chap. Neither is hee altogether silent concerning his delight in women: for hee saith, I prouided me men singers, and women singers, the delites of the sonnes of men, vers. 8. And, I haue gotten me men seruants, and maides, and had children borne in my house: or as the Latine text readeth, I had a great houshold. He may in this place haue relation to the multitude of his wiues and concubines: why not? 3. To the third point, we answere: wee say not, that at the same time, while Salomon gaue his minde to pleasure, that he wrote this booke; but afterwards, when hee was come to himselfe, and awaked out of his long sleepe.

Argum. 3. Both 1. King. c. 4. 32. and Ecclesiastic. 47. where mention is made of Salomons acts; first, his bookes and writings are mentioned, and then his amorous passions. Bellarm. lib. 1. de verb. Dei. c. 5. sec. Sed nec illud, &c.

Answer. 1. The sequell or consequence of this reason is denied, for alwayes that which is first recorded in Scripture, was not first done. Infinite examples there are thereof: as Genes. 2. the creation of woman is set downe after the institution of the Sabbath, yet was shee created the day before, the same day of Adams creation. 2 Neither are all Salomons sayings and writings spoken of in the first place: it is said, he spake three thousand prouerbs, and his songs were a thousand and fiue: We graunt, he vttered manie prouerbs and parables, and made many songs before his fall; but it followeth not therefore, that he made none after. 3 Yea, there is expresse mention made of Salomons words, euen after his fall, 1. King. 11. 41. therefore some things he both spoke and writ after his fall.

The Protestants.

AT what time the booke of Ecclesiastes was written by Salomon, though it be no materiall point of our faith to know; yet because the truth euery where, so much as by diligent endeuour may be attained vnto, is to be sought out: It shall appeare by these reasons following, that both it is most like and probable, that it was indited after Salomons fall, and that it is most safe so to thinke, because there can no other time be assigned for Salomons repentance, as it shall euen now be shewed.

Argum. 1. First, it is made manifest by the inscription and title of the booke: the words of the Preacher; for whence is it, that Salomon being a King, to whom it pertaineth not to teach the people, but to the Leuites and Priests, doth giue himselfe so strange a stile? It is not because by his writing he preacheth: for then in his two other bookes of the Prouerbs and Canticles, by the same reason, hee might haue so named himselfe: but of a King he is now become a Preacher, preaching vnto the people by the example of his conuersion. The word קהלת choheleth properly signifieth Ecclesiasten, seu Ecclesiasticum, a Churchman, or a man of the congregation: And so Salomon calleth himselfe, either because hee was now restored, and made as it were a man of the Church againe: or because publikely hee had some speech, after his returning to God, as is the manner of these, which publikely shew repentance for their sinne, sic Iunius in hunc locum.

Argum. 2. The Preacher in this booke doth euery where vrge his owne experience: as I turned mee to behold, 2. 12. I haue seene vnder the sunne, 3. 16. I haue seene all things in the dayes of my vanitie, 7. 17. He also professeth as much, that he sought in his heart by his owne experience to finde out, wherein consisted the chiefe goodnesse of men vnder the sunne, 2. 3. And hauing runne thorough the course of all things in his owne knowledge and experience, hee at the length, as a man of much obseruation and great continuance concludeth Vanitie of vanities, (saith the Preacher) all is but vanitie, chap. 12. 8. Ergo, it is like that Salomon wrote this booke, being now thorough aged, and of long experience: wisedome indeede goeth not by yeeres, but experience is the daughter and ofspring of olde age.

Eccles. 2. 12. c. 7. 17.

Eccles. 12. 8.

Argum. 3. Further, the Preacher saith, he sought in his heart to giue himselfe to wine, and to apprehend folly, Eccles. 2. 3. But when else did he lay hold on folly, then, when hee fell into the snares of women, and was seduced to Idolatrie? Ergo, this booke was made after his fall. It will here I know be answered, that there is no such thing in the Text, as I haue alleaged: Indeed, in the vulgar Latine there is not, which translateth cleane contrarie to the Hebrew: for in stead of, Cogitaui pertrahere animum ad vinum, & prehendere stultitiam, I thought to draw my selfe to wine, and to apprehend folly: it is read, Cogitaui abstrahere me à vino, & deuitare stultitiam: I bethought to withdraw my selfe from wine, and to shunne folly; quite contrarie. But Bellarmine taketh vpon him to iustifie the vulgar translation, and saith, that the Hebrew letter ב beth, signifieth in construction as well from as to; and therefore we may as well reade from wine, as to wine: and this is more agreeable to the Text, saith he, because it followeth, and to leade my heart in wisedome, &c.

Lib. 2. de verb. cap. 9. resp. ad arg. 3.

Ans. 1. The Iesuite, that maketh himselfe so skilfull in the signification of the Hebrew, should haue quoted some place, where this letter ב, following in construction the word משך mashach that signifieth to draw, is translated from: but that can he not finde, but the contrarie: as Iudg. 4. 6. Deborah biddeth

Iudg. 4. 6.

Barack drew the people not from, but to the mount Tabor. 2. But hee ſaith nothing of the other word vn achaz, which neuer ſignifieth, deuitauit, hee ſhunned, but the contrarie, apprehendit, hee apprehended. 3. This reading agreeth better with the Text: for the Preacher ſaith, that euen while his wiſedome remained with him, hee gaue himſelfe to wine and pleaſure: as afterward in the tenth verſe.

*Argum.*4. Laſtly, we hold it a very firme and ſure thing, that Salomon recouered his fall, and was reſtored to fauour before he dyed: as in the next place it is to be ſeene: and that this booke was ſet forth as a ſeale and ſure ſigne of his repentance, which it could not be, if it were written before, and not after his fall. And of this iudgement is S. Hierome, that the booke of Eccleſiaſtes was written after Salomons fall, and to that purpoſe he expoundeth thoſe words, 2.Chron.9.29. The reſt of the workes of Salomon firſt and laſt, are written in the booke of Nathan the Prophet, &c. Priorum antequam præuaricatus, poſteriorum poſt quam præuaricatus: His firſt workes were thoſe before his fall, and his laſt after his fall. But what workes of account were more like to follow after his fall, then his repentance, and the writing of this booke? and therefore in the ſtorie of the Kings it is ſaid, The reſt of the words of Salomon, 1.King.11.41. Wherefore Salomon euen after his fall vttered many wiſe words, and his wiſedome returned vnto him: and it is like to haue beene ſome notable thing, that Salomon did in his latter time, ſeeing that three Prophets, as Nathan, Abiah, Ieedo in their bookes made mention thereof: as in 2.Chron.9.29.

2.Chron.9.29.

2.King.11,41.

The Papiſts.

THe ſecond point of the difference here betweene Bellarmine and vs, is, that he thinketh, Salomonem a Deo reprobatum fuiſſe, that Salomon was reprobate of God: though (he ſaith) he is not ignorant, that the Iewes and Hierome alſo are of a contrarie opinion, yet he rather followeth Auguſtines iudgement herein, who ſhould ſo write (as he ſaith) *in Pſal.*126. that Salomon was reiected of God. Other arguments beſide the credit of Auguſtines name, he vſeth none, *Bellarm. de verb. dei lib.*1.*cap.*5.

Anſ. I thinke the Ieſuite doth greatly miſtake and miſconſter Auguſtine in the place alleaged: he ſpeaketh there indeede of the fall of Salomon, not of his finall reprobation: Quid mirum (ſaith he) ſi in populo Dei cecidit Salomon? in paradiſo non cecidit Adam? What marueile is it if Salomon fell among the people, or in the Church of God? did not Adam fall in paradiſe? If Salomon were no more reprobate then Adam was, nor his fall more dangerous then his, Salomon was no caſt-away at all. Auguſtine addeth further: Iſte Salomon ædificauerat templum domini, in typo futuræ eccleſiæ, & corporis Chriſti: This Salomon built the temple of the Lord, to be a type of the Church, and bodie of Chriſt to come: ibid. in Pſal. 126. Hence then a reaſon may be framed thus: you cannot ſhew me in all the Scripture, that a reprobate was euer appointed of God to be a figure of Chriſt or his Church: But Salomon was a figure of Chriſt, as it is euident throughout the whole 45. Pſal. and the temple he built, as a figure of Chriſts bodie. Ioh. 2. Ergo.

*Argum.*2. Againe, ſaith Bellarmine, the Scripture maketh no mention of the repentance of Salomon, and therefore it is like he repented not.

*Anſ.*1. Though in matters of faith, and points of doctrine an argument may be taken negatiuely from the Scripture, yet not ſo in matters of fact: it is a good conſequent, this doctrine is not found in Scripture, and therefore ought not to be receiued: yet it followeth not, this or that thing is not mentioned to haue beene done in the ſtorie of Scripture, therefore it was not done: for Chriſt did many workes and miracles which are not remembred in the Goſpell: doth it follow therefore, that he did no more, becauſe no more are ſpoken of in the Goſpell? 2. I may then frame you the ſame anſwere, which your Maſter of Sentences maketh to that place of Ambroſe, who ſpeaking of S. Peters repentance, ſaith, Lachrymas eius lego, ſatisfactionem non lego: I reade of his teares, not of his ſatisfaction. Your Maſter thus anſwereth: Multa facta ſunt, quæ ſcripta non ſunt: Many things haue beene done, that are not written. Though the Maſters anſwer be not ſufficient there, becauſe ſatisfaction is with them an eſſentiall point of penance, and pertaineth to doctrine, and is not conſidered as a meere matter of fact: yet may it very well ſerue our turne in a matter of fact onely, as touching Salomons repentance. 3. And yet we doe affirme, that this act of Salomons conuerſion and repentance, is not altogether without euidence of Scripture, as now followeth to be ſhewed.

Mag.lib.4.d.17.

*Argum.*3. I will adioyne ſome other reaſons, which are vrged againſt Salomons finall recouerie: as Lyranus obiecteth that place. 2. King. 23. 13. where it is ſaid that Ioſias defiled the places, which Salomon had built for Aſhtoroth and Chemoſh: if he had truly repented, hee would haue deſtroyed idolatrie: Lyran. in 2. *Sam. c.*7. Thoring. the replier vpon Burgenſis, doth inſiſt vpon that place. 1. King. 11. 31. where the Lord ſaith he would rent the kingdome out of Salomons hands, becauſe they haue forſaken me: but this puniſhment was not inflicted while Salomon liued, it fell vpon his ſonne, which the Lord would not haue executed after Salomons repentance.

Anſ. Contra 1. Burgenſis anſwereth, that Salomon might repent prope mortem, ſo neere his death, as that he could not aboliſh idolatrie vtterly. And further: like as, though Manaſſes repented, yet he pulled not downe his idolatrous Altars, which remained vntill Ioſias time, 2.King.23.12. ſo Salomon, though he repented, could not aboliſh at once all the monuments of idolatrie: yea, they remained euen in Hezekiahs time, who was a moſt zealous King.

2. As though Dauid repented him, yet the temporall chaſticements threatned were not committed, as of the ſword, and the defiling of his wiues, 2.Sam.12.10.11. ſo notwithſtanding Salomons repentance, ſome outward iudgements were executed for the demonſtration of Gods iuſtice, and the good example of others.

The Proteſtants.

THat Salomon was not reiected or reprobate of God, but choſen rather and elected, thus by Scripture we make it plaine.

2.Sam.12.24. *Argum.*1. I vrge thoſe places of Scripture, 2.Sam.12.24. it is ſaid, that God loued Salomon, and thereupon the Prophet called him Iedidijah, beloued of God: but whom God loueth, hee loueth to the end. 2.Sam.7.14. Againe, 2.Sam.7.14. there the Prophet thus ſpeaketh in the name of the Lord concerning Salomon: I will be his father, and he ſhall be my ſonne: if he ſinne, I will chaſten him, &c. but my mercie ſhall not depart away from him, as I tooke it from Saul, whom I haue put away before me: the reaſon is gathered thus: Salomon was not caſt away as Saul was, Saul was caſt away for euer. Ergo, ſo was not Salomon.

2.Chro.11.17. *Argum.*2. Reade 2. Chron.11.verſ.17. Rehoboam (ſaith the text) for three yeeres walked in the way of Dauid and Salomon, that is, in the true worſhip of God: Dauids way and Salomons way, are here ioyned together, and taken for all one: but Dauid died the ſeruant of God: Ergo, alſo Salomon. Neither can any man here ſay, that Salomons way is here iudged by the beginning, not by the end: for God meaſureth the righteouſnes of men by the end, not by the beginning: he iudgeth them as he findeth them, he regardeth not what they haue beene, Ezech.18.24. Ezech.18.24.

*Argum.*3. Though theſe places of Scripture are euident enough to conuince the matter in hand, yet we will vnto theſe adioyne this reaſon: Can any man ſhew me, when, and where, God vſed a reprobate as his inſtrument, and pen-man to write Scripture, or as a type and figure of Chriſt? but Salomon was both a writer and regiſtrer of Scripture, and a moſt liuely type of Chriſt: Ergo, he was no reprobate. The propoſition of this argument is apparantly grounded vpon Scripture, as Rom. 8. 14. Rom.8.14. As many as are led by the ſpirit of God, are the ſonnes of God: but the Prophets which were the writers and pen-men of Scripture, ſpake as they were moued by the holy Ghoſt, 2.Pet.1.21. 2.Pet.1.21. and ſo were led by the ſpirit: Ergo, they were the ſonnes of God, and ſo not reprobates. Now wherein Salomon was a type of Chriſt, is thus declared by Origen in his prologue vpon the Canticles: In plurimis Salomonem Chriſti typum ferre, &c. That Salomon in many things did beare the type of Chriſt, is not to be doubted: firſt, in that he is called peaceable: ſecondly, in that the Queene of the South came vnto him from the ends of the earth: and Chriſt is the true Eccleſiaſtes, or Preacher, who tooke vpon him the forme of a ſeruant, that he might congregate and gather together his Church: A congregando enim eccleſiam eccleſiaſtes dicitur: For he is named of the Church, of gathering the Church together. And thus it appeareth how Salomon was a type of Chriſt.

Ioh.12.26. Againe, our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Where I am, there alſo ſhall my miniſters be. Ioh. 12. 26. but the writers of Scripture were in this eſpeciall ſeruice the principall miniſters of Chriſt: Ergo, they reſt with Chriſt and are not caſt-awaies.

ὕστερον ἐγὼ μετενόησα. Pro.24.32. We haue yet further euidence. 1. Cyrillus thus teſtifieth, Salomon alſo fell, but what ſaith he (afterward I repented) he thinketh that Salomon repented after his fall: alleaging that Scripture, Prouerb.24.32. Then I beheld and conſidered it well, I looked vpon it, and receiued inſtruction: but Cyrill, following the Septuagint, as it ſeemeth, readeth ſomewhat otherwiſe.

Diſput. cum Herban. Iud. f.30. Lutet. anno 1586. Χεῖρα αὐτῷ σωτηρίας δέδωκεν. Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiopũ. 2 Gregentius, Archbiſhop of Tephar, among the Homerites in Aethiopia, though he thinketh that Salomon ſhewed no repentance before he died; yet is of opinion, that Chriſt deſcending to hell (which was the errour of that time) did giue vnto him the hand of ſaluation, together with the reſt, which were thence deliuered: he thinketh that in the end he was ſaued. The Aethiopick Church at this day holdeth the ſame opinion, though the grounds thereof are ſomewhat fabulous: as Zagazaber, an Aethiopicke Biſhop, telleth how the Queene of Saba, called Maqueda, comming to heare the wiſedome of Salomon, conceiued by him, and had a ſonne, called firſt Melech, and afterward Dauid, whom after ſhe had brought vp twentie yeares, ſhe ſent backe to Salomon, who inſtructed him in the law of God, and ſo returned him to his mother: now Salomon had raigned twentie yeeres, 1.King.9.10. before the Queene of Saba came vnto him: and they affirme, that twentie yeeres after that the Queenes ſonne was inſtructed by Salomon in the true worſhip of God, which muſt be in the end of his raigne. Theſe fabulous fictions I thinke not worth the rehearſall: I onely touch them, to ſee what honourable opinion to this day, that great and mightie Chriſtian nation doth hold of Salomon.

Annotat.ibid. 3 Iunius, doth proue Salomons finall repentance and ſaluation, by the place before alleaged, 2.Chron. 11.17. and by the compoſing of the booke of Eccleſiaſtes, as a teſtimonie of his repentance.

Addit. in 2. Sam.c.7. Gloſſ. in 43. Ezech. 4 Paulus Burgenſis holdeth againſt Lyranus, following the common opinion of the Iewes, that Salomon repented before his death, and ſo doth the ordinarie gloſſe.

Now then, whereas diuers opinions haue beene rehearſed touching Salomons ſtate. 1. Bellarmine agreeing with Lyranus, thinketh he was a reprobate. 2. Gregentius, that he was deliuered with the reſt of the fathers. 3. Burgenſis, that he repented, yet ſo neere his death, that he could ſhew no fruites thereof. 4. But the ordinarie gloſſe, Iunius and others, hold him to haue repented, and as a monument of his repentance, to haue written the booke of Eccleſiaſtes. I hold this latter opinion to be moſt ſafe; which is grounded, as hath beene ſhewed, vpon theſe places of Scripture.

2.Sam.7.15. Burgenſis vrgeth that place, 2.Sam.7.15. My mercie ſhall not depart from him, as I tooke it from Saul: the ordinarie gloſſe preſſeth that text, Prou.24.32. reading thus, as Cyrillus did before, at the laſt I repented, pented, and receiued inſtruction. The Iewes doe inferre ſo much out of theſe words: I am more fooliſh then any man, and haue not the underſtanding of a man in mee: as Lyranus noteth vpon that place. Hierome collecteth as much out of theſe words, the reſt of Salomons workes firſt and laſt: by his laſt workes vnderſtanding ſuch things as hee did after his fall, as his repentance: the moſt euident places of all are theſe, which Iunius inſiſteth vpon before mentioned: but ſufficient of this by matter, now I will proceede. Prouerb. 30.2. 2.Chro.9.29.

OF THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKES of Scripture.

1.Errour.

THere are certaine bookes annexed to the olde Teſtament, which the Papiſts themſelues doe not acknowledge for canonicall, as the Prayer of Manaſſes, the two bookes of Eſdras, commonly called the third and fourth of Eſdras: alſo other which are not vſually in our Engliſh Bibles, as an appendix to the booke of Iob, the 151. Pſalme, a Preface to the lamentations of Ieremie, the third and fourth booke of the Machabees, a booke called the Paſtor. None of all theſe bookes are found in the Hebrue: one of them onely is tranſlated out of the Syriake, namely, the appendix to Iob: ſome of them are extant in Latine onely, as the Prayer of Manaſſes, the third and fourth of Eſdras, the reſt are in Greeke. Of all the other, the bookes of Eſdras are worthie of leaſt credit, being ſtuffed full of vaine fables, fitter to feed curious eares, then tending to edification: as cap. 4. 6. lib. 4. there is a tale put in of two great fiſhes, Henoch, and Leuiathan, which no waters could hold: chap. 4. 41, he ſaith, that the ſoules are kept in the wombe of the earth: in the 14. chapter, he reporteth how the bookes of Scripture being loſt in the captiuitie, were reſtored by Eſdras, and how after be had drunke off a cup of water, but as fire in colour, giuen him by the Angell, he ſpake fortie daies together and ceaſed not: in which ſpace fiue Scribes wrote from his mouth 204. bookes: theſe and ſuch like tales that booke is full of. All theſe afore-ſaid bookes are as well by our aduerſaries, as our ſelues reiected: ſo that they themſelues dare not allow all that is extant in their Latine vulgar tranſlation: yet our DoWay men tell vs, that the prayer of Manaſſes is neither receiued for canonicall of the Church nor refuſed: annot. in 2. Chron. 33.14. but if it be not receiued, how is it not refuſed? either it is canonicall, and ſo receiued, or not canonicall, as it is in deed; and ſo of the the true Church of God out of the canon receiued.

Other bookes alſo there were, ſome annexed to the old Teſtament, ſome to the new, which were deuiſed by Heretikes, but now are not extant, whereof there is no queſtion betweene vs: as another booke of Geneſis, called μικρογένεσις, Geneſis the leſſe, whereof Hierome maketh mention, tom. 4. de 42. manſionib. Likewiſe the booke of Henoch, which, as Auguſtine ſaith, ob nimiam antiquitatem reijcitur, is reiected becauſe it is too olde: lib. 18. de ciuitat. dei. cap. 38.

Gelaſius alſo in his Decretall, reciteth certaine Apocryphal bookes of the olde Teſtament: as one of the daughters of Adam, another of Ogias, a Giant, that ſhould fight with the Dragon after the flood: a booke alſo called the repentance of Iamnes and Mambres: Decret. p. 1. d. 15. c. 3.

Theſe bookes alſo were forged in the new Teſtament: as the goſpell of the twelue Apoſtles, the goſpell of Thomas, another goſpell of Matthias: mentioned by S. Ambroſe proem. in Luc. S. Hierome alſo, Catolog. ſcriptor. maketh mention of theſe bookes: the acts of Peter, the goſpell of Peter, the preaching of Peter, the reuelation of Peter: a goſpell to the Hebrewes: an Epiſtle of Barnabas: the peregrinations of Paul and Tecla.

Gelaſius in his Decretall, reckoneth vp a great number of ſuch like forgeries: as the iourneyes of Peter, the acts of Andrew, the acts of Philip, the acts of Peter, the acts of Thomas: alſo the goſpell of Thaddaus, the goſpell of Thomas, the goſpell of Barnabas, the goſpell of S. Andrew: likewiſe certaine forged reuelations, as of Paul, of Thomas, of Stephen: with many ſuch other, as may be ſeene in that place, as it is alleaged by Gratian, Decret. p. 1. d. 15, cap. 3. But of theſe and ſuch like there is no controuerſie betweene vs.

The queſtion betweene vs then is concerning theſe bookes: firſt, certaine peeces ioyned to canonicall bookes, as ſeuen chapters of Eſther; certaine ſtories annexed to Daniel, as of Bell and the Dragon, of Suſanna, the ſong of the three children: alſo the Epiſtle of Baruch ioyned to Ieremie. Then follow certaine whole bookes, as Tobie, Iudith, the Wiſedome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus, two bookes of the Machabees: theſe ſixe bookes, with the other three appendices or peeces of bookes the Papiſts hold to be canonicall, and of as firme authoritie as any part of the Scripture. Arguments they haue none, beſide certaine teſtimonies of ſome Fathers and Councels, which we purpoſe not to deale withall, leauing them to our learned countrie men, who haue taken in hand to diſcuſſe theſe controuerſies to the full, Bellarm. de verb. dei lib. 1. cap. 4.

The Proteſtants.

WE are agreed concerning the new Teſtament, that all the bookes thereof as they ſtand, are to be receiued of all for Scripture: for as for thoſe forged goſpels of Thomas, S. Andrew, of Nichodemus, and the like, though the Church were troubled with them in times paſt, yet their memorie being now worne out, there is no queſtion of them. Concerning the bookes on both ſides acknowledged, if ſome one man ſeeme to doubt of ſome one part, as Luther is thought to doe of the Epiſtle of Iames and Iude, it ought no more to preiudice vs, then Caietanus opinion doth hurt them, who called more bookes in queſtion then Luther did, as the Epiſtle of Iames, of Iude, the ſecond of Peter, the ſecond and third of Iohn, the laſt chapter of Marke.

2.Pet.3.15.

We differ not then in the new Teſtament, vnleſſe it be concerning the author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, which our aduerſaries ſtoutly affirme to be S.Pauls, which we denie not, neither certainly can affirme it, ſeeing in ſome Greeke copies it is left out, and in the Syriack tranſlation: ſome would proue S.Paul to be the author of this Epiſtle, by that place, 2.Pet.3.15. where the Apoſtle maketh mention of S.Pauls Epiſtles, which according to the wiſdome giuen vnto him he wrote to you: that is, the Hebrewes, for vnto them S.Peter writeth both the firſt, 1.Epi.1.1. and the ſecond Epiſtle, 2.Epi.3.ver.1. I finde alſo that many excellent godly learned men of ancient time, as Hierome, Auguſtine, Ambroſe, and before them Origen hom.8.in Geneſ. with others, haue taken S.Paul for the author of this Epiſtle. And among the late famous witneſſes of Gods truth, and holy Martyrs (to whoſe iudgement I attribute as much, if not more, as to any mans beſide) that bleſſed man Maſter Philpot, doth cite S.Paul to the Hebrewes, in a certaine Epiſtle of his written to the Chriſtian congregation, *Fox.*p.1832. and againe, in another Epiſtle to certaine godly brethren, pag.1385.col.2. But it mattereth not who was the author, ſeeing we receiue it as canonicall: for the title is no part of the booke, and ſo neither of Scripture: and we receiue many bookes in the olde Teſtament, the authors whereof are not perfectly knowne. And of this matter, thus further writeth S.Hierome: Catalog. ſcriptor. Epiſtola, quæ fertur ad Hebræos, &c. The Epiſtle to the Hebrewes is not thought to be Pauls, becauſe of the difference of the phraſe and ſtile: but either the Epiſtle of Barnabas according to Tertullian, or of Luke or Clement: or ſurely, becauſe Paul writ to the Hebrewes, he cut off the title of his name, becauſe it was enuied amongſt them: he writeth as an Hebrew to the Hebrewes, that is in his owne tongue moſt eloquently. Thus Hierome reporteth many opinions, ſetting downe nothing certainly himſelfe.

But here by the way, if I might be ſo bold, I would ſpurre a queſtion to our Romane Diuines, that whereas it was decreed (as they would beare vs in hand) by the Apoſtles, can. Apoſtol. 84. that the two Epiſtles of Clement, and his precepts or conſtitutions contained in eight bookes, ſhould be counted amongſt the canonicall bookes of the new Teſtament: for theſe are the words of the canon, Sint omnibus vobis Clericis & laicis, ſacri & venerandi libri, &c. Let theſe be accounted of all both Clerkes and lay men, as holy and reuerend bookes: and then are reckoned vp the bookes of the olde Teſtament, and afterward of the new, amongſt the which, the foreſaid workes of Clement are numbred. If thoſe bee the right canons of the Apoſtles, as we are made to beleeue they are, how dare our aduerſaries doe contrarie to this decree? we will giue them leaue to pauſe a while of this matter, and in the meane time proceede.

Contra Fauſt. lib.11.2.

So then all the queſtion betweene vs, is about the Apocrypha of the olde Teſtament: they are called Apocrypha, becauſe they are hid and obſcure, not becauſe their authors are vnknowne: for as I ſaid, we know not by whom certaine Canonicall bookes were written. Neither are they ſo called becauſe of ſome vntruthes contained in them contrarie to Scripture, as the moſt of them haue, as we heard before out of S.Hierome: Multa his admixta vitioſa: That there are many falſe things mixed in theſe bookes: for it followeth not, that euery booke which hath no vntrueth or lye, ſhould ſtraightwaies be taken for Scripture: but they are therefore iudged and called Apocrypha, becauſe they were not in former time receiued into publique and authenticke authoritie in the Church, neither to be alleaged as grounds of our faith, though they may be read for example of life, and may haue other profitable vſe, as S.Hierome well ſaith, Legat ad ædificationem plebis, non ad authoritatem Eccleſiaſticorum dogmatum confirmandam: The Church readeth them for the edifying of the people, not the confirmation of doctrine: Præfat. in Prouerb. And S.Auguſtine ſheweth why they are ſo called, Quia nulla teſtificationis luce declarati, de neſcio quo ſecreto, neſcio quorum præſumptione prolati ſunt: Becauſe they were publiſhed with no light of authoritie, but hatched in ſecret by ſome mens, I know not whoſe preſumption. But the Canonicall Scripture onely hath this priuiledge to giue rules of faith, and thereupon it hath the name, that wee may be bold to beleeue and ground our faith vpon the Canonicall and holy Scripture, which is the onely word of God. Wherefore out of this number of Canonicall Scripture we exclude all the bookes afore named, and therefore let not the reader be deceiued, that although they be ioyned in one volume with the Scripture, to thinke that they are for that, of the ſame authoritie and credite with the reſt: firſt, wee will ſhew our reaſons in generall, and afterward come to the particular bookes in order.

2.Pet.1.19.

1 All Canonicall Scripture in the olde Teſtament was written by Prophets: We haue a ſure word of the Prophets, ſaith S.Peter, 2.1.19. and S.Paul, Rom.16.26. calleth them the Scriptures of the Prophets: and S.Auguſtine ſaith, Quas itaque ſcripturas dicimus, niſi canonicas, legis & prophetarum? de vnitat. eccleſ. cap.16. We acknowledge no Canonicall Scriptures of the olde and new Teſtament, but the law and the Prophets: But none of thoſe bookes aforenamed, of Tobias, Iudith and the reſt, were written by the Prophets: for they were all written ſince Malachies time, who was the laſt Prophet, as the Church complaineth, Pſalm.74.9. There is not one Prophet, nor any that can tell vs how long: Ergo none of theſe bookes are Canonicall.

Rom.3.2.

2 All the Canonicall bookes of the olde Teſtament, were acknowledged of the Iewes and Hebrewes, for they were then onely the Church of God, and where ſhould Scripture be found but in the Church? To them, ſaith S.Paul, were committed the oracles of God, Rom.3.2. But the Iewes receiued none of theſe bookes into the Canon of the Scripture. For moſt of them were written in the Greeke, but none of them in the Hebrew tongue. And this ſome of the Papiſts cannot denie. Ergo they are not Canonicall. Here alſo S. Auguſtine thus writeth, Chaldæi literæ, quibus Chriſtus prophetatus eſt, apud Iudæos ſunt: All the bookes which propheſied of Chriſt, are kept amongſt the Iewes, in Pſalm. 56. and S. Hierome vpon theſe words of the Parable, All mine are thine, Luke 15. thus writeth to the ſame purpoſe, Omnia intelligimus, legem, prophetas, eloquia diuina: By all we vnderſtand, the law and Prophets, and the diuine ſayings: the Iewes then had all the Scriptures, but they had none of theſe Apocrypha, therefore they are no part of Scripture.

Tom. 4 de filio prodigo.

Canus a Papiſt anſwereth, Non reiectos fuiſſe hos libros à Iudæis, ſed non receptos: that theſe bookes were not reiected of the Iewes, but onely not receiued, lib. 1. Annot. Anſ. 1. This is but a quaint diſtinction, for that thing, which a man knoweth, and yet receiueth not, nor alloweth: what doth he elſe, but reiect it? As our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, He that is not with me, is againſt me: and he that gathereth not with me, ſcattereth abroad, Luke 11.23. The Iewes therefore in that they receiued not, nor acknowledged thoſe bookes, refuſed and reiected them. Secondly, how could they otherwiſe chuſe but reiect thoſe bookes, and ſunder them from the reſt of the Scripture, which were written in a ſtrange tongue, and not in Hebrew, wherein the reſt of holy Scripture was written? And what opinion the Iewes haue of theſe books, S. Hierome further witneſſeth thus: Arguunt nos Hebræorum ſtudioſi, & imputant nobis quod contra ſuum canonem latinis auribus iſta transferre: The ſtudious Hebrewes finde fault with vs, and blame vs for tranſlating into Latine, bookes contrarie to their canon: præfat. in Tobiam. The Iewes then did not onely not receiue theſe Apocryphall bookes, but reiected them alſo: and of this iudgement is Arias Montanus, one of their owne Church, that no bookes of the olde Teſtament not extant in the originall Hebrew, are Canonicall. Further, Bellarmine confeſſeth, Hi omnes libri ſimul reijciuntur ab Hebræis, &c. All theſe bookes are together reiected of the Hebrewes: lib. 1. de verb. dei. c. 10. And Coſterus a Ieſuite ſaith, In canone Hebræorum non habentur, &c. They are not in the canon of the Hebrew, Enchirid. c. 1. Of the ſame iudgement is Caietane and Tolet, two of their owne, and of great account among them, which were Cardinals in their time. The firſt ſaith, that the Iewes teſtifie, nullos alios apud patres fuiſſe canonice ſacros, &c. That no other bookes were receiued of the fathers for canonicall: beſide, thoſe which are by them acknowledged, comment. in Rom. c. 3. The other affirmeth, oracula diuina in ſacris ſcripturis contenta commiſſa, &c. That the diuine oracles conteined in the Scriptures, were committed vnto the Iewes: therefore it is an vnaduiſed ſpeech of the Doway tranſlaters, to ſay, the Churches canon is of more authoritie then the Iewes: For were not the Iewes then the Church of God, when the Hebrew Scriptures were firſt receiued into the canon: and had not the Church of the olde Teſtament the ſame intereſt in the Scriptures, which the Church of the new Teſtament hath: and was the authoritie of the Prophets leſſe, in declaring which were the canonicall bookes in thoſe times, then of the Church afterward? S. Paul putteth this matter out of doubt, teſtifying, that vnto the Iewes were committed the Oracles of God: how dare they then contradict the Apoſtle, in ſaying they were not committed?

Doway bible, p.489.

3 There is no Scripture of the olde Teſtament, but it hath approbation of the new: for as the Prophets beare witneſſe to Chriſt, ſo he againe doth witneſſe for the Prophets, and therefore it is a true propoſition of Caietane, though he be controuled & checked of Catharinus another Papiſt for it, that there is no Scripture, which was not either written or approued by the Apoſtles: but in the whole new Teſtament you ſhall not finde one teſtimonie cited either in the Goſpell or the Epiſtles out of any of the Apocrypha, as out of other bookes of Scripture: therefore hauing no approbation of the new Teſtament, we conclude, they are none of the olde.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtles haue declared thoſe bookes to be Canonicall, lib. 1. de verbo. cap. 10. Anſwer. 1. Catharinus herein is contrarie to Bellarmine. For he ſaith, that the Church hath receiued certaine bookes for Canonicall, Quos nec ſcriptos ab Apoſtolis, nec approbatos fuiſſe conſtat: Which it is certaine, were neither written, nor approoued by the Apoſtles, lib. 1. Annot. Secondly, they are neuer able to ſhew, when and where the Apoſtles declared theſe bookes to be Canonicall, for as much as they are not cited, neither in the Goſpels, nor Epiſtles, written by the Apoſtles, which onely are their authenticall writings. And therefore we againe conclude, that becauſe the new Teſtament doth not giue any witneſſe to any of theſe bookes, as it doth to the law and the Prophets, Quibus Chriſtus (as Auguſtine ſaith) perhibet teſtimonium, ut teſtibus ſuis: Vnto the which Chriſt giueth teſtimonie, as his witneſſes, lib. 2. contra. Gaud. cap. 23. Therefore they are no part of the olde Teſtament: As Hierome then ſaith of the interpretation of Scripture, Sit illa vera interpretatio quam Apoſtoli probauerunt: Let that be the true interpretation which the Apoſtles haue approued, ſo thoſe are the very authenticall Scriptures, which haue the teſtimonie and approbation of the Apoſtles.

Præfat. in Euangel.

4 It ſhall appeare in the ſeuerall diſcourſe of the particular bookes, that there is ſomewhat euen in the bookes themſelues to be found, that barreth them from being Canonicall.

OF THE BOOKE OF BARVCH.

The Papiſts.

THis is their beſt reaſon for the authoritie of this booke, becauſe Baruch was Ieremies Scribe: and therefore Baruch cannot be refuſed, vnleſſe alſo we doubt of Ieremie. Bellarm. lib. 1. de verbo Dei. cap. 8.

The Proteſtants.

THis booke was neither written by Ieremie nor Baruch: firſt, becauſe it is in Greeke: if either Ieremie or Baruch had written it, it is moſt like they would haue written in Hebrew. Secondly, the phraſe and manner of ſpeech ſheweth, that it was neuer written in Hebrew: for in this 6. Chapter in the Epiſtle of Ieremie, verſ. 2. it is ſaid, that the Iſraelites ſhould be in captiuitie ſeuen generations, that is 70. yeeres, but it cannot be found in any Hebrew booke, that a generation is taken for the ſpace of 10. yeeres.

I will adde vnto this a matter of experience concerning this booke: One Edward Freeſe a conſtant Martyr, reading this place in the 6. of Baruch, wherefore when you ſee the multitude of people worſhipping them behind and before, ſay in your hearts, it is thou, O Lord, that ought onely to be worſhipped. By this place, the ſaid Martyr ſaith, he was ſeduced to heare Maſſe, and therefore his conſcience gaue him, that it was no Scripture, Fox pag. 1980. col. 1. Concerning this booke alſo, S. Hierome writeth thus: Praefat. in Ieremiam: Librum Baruch Notarij eius, qui apud Hebraeos nec habetur, nec legitur, praetermiſimus: I haue pretermitted the booke of Baruch Ieremies Scribe, which the Hebrewes neither haue nor reade. But if it had beene one of the Canonicall bookes, Hierome would not haue paſſed it ouer. We want not alſo the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries: for Iohannes Driedo, a writer of their owne, refuſeth this booke to be Canonicall. lib. 1. de ſcripturis & dogmatib. Eccleſiaſtic. [illegible]

OF THE SEVEN APOCRYPHAL Chapters of Eſther.

The Papiſts.

ONe of their chiefe Arguments, beſides teſtimonies and authorities, which would make too great a Volume, is this (which is common alſo to the reſt of the Apocrypha) they are read in the Church, and haue beene of auncient time: Ergo they are Canonicall. I anſwere, that it is no good argument. Hierome ſaith plainely, Legit Eccleſia, ſed eos inter Scripturas Canonicas non recipit, Praefat. in libr. Salomon. The Church indeede (ſaith he) readeth them, yet for all that they are not Canonicall. And Auguſtine was wont to reade vnto the people the Epiſtles of the Donatiſts, and his anſweres vnto them, Epiſt. 203.

The Proteſtants.

THe moſt of our reaſons againſt the authoritie of the 7. Chapters added to Eſther, (for of the 10. firſt Chapters, which are found in the Hebrew, wee make no doubt at all) are drawne from the matter of the booke it ſelfe.

1 In the ſecond of the Canonicall Eſther, ver. 16. it is ſaid that the conſpiracie of the two Eunuches againſt the King, was in the ſeuenth yeare of Aſſuerus: but in the 11. Chap. ver. 2. of the Apocryphal Eſther, we reade that Mardocheus did dreame of this conſpiracie in the ſecond yeare. Bellarmine anſwereth, that both are true; for the dreame was in the ſecond yeare, and the conſpiracie in the ſeuenth; ſo belike, there was fiue yeares betweene. But in the Apocryphal ſtorie, chap. 12. 2. it is ſaid, that at the ſame time, the conſpiracie was enterpriſed by the two Eunuches, which muſt haue relation vnto the ſecond yeare before expreſſed, chap. 11. 3. Againe, at that time Mardoche was a great man, and an officer in the Kings houſe, when he had this dreame, chap. 11. 3. which could not be before the exaltation and aduancement of Eſther, which was in the 7. yeare, Eſther 2. 16.

2 The true hiſtorie of Eſther ſaith, that Mardocheus had no reward at that time of the King, chap. 6. 3. but the forged ſtorie ſaith, chap. 12. that at the ſame time the King gaue him great gifts, which cannot be meant of that great honour, as Bellarmine coniectureth, which afterward was beſtowed vpon Mardoche: for then Haman (being hanged the ſame day that Mardoche was aduanced to honour, Eſther 6. 7.) could worke him no deſpite, whereas the forged ſtorie ſaith, that after the King had rewarded him, then Haman began to ſtomacke him, becauſe of thoſe two Eunuches.

3 Againe, the ſtorie which is added, was written many yeares after Mardocheus and Eſthers death, vnder the raigne of Ptolomeus and Cleopatra, as it appeareth, chap. 11. 1. It is not like therefore to bee a true ſtorie. Bellarmines ridiculous coniecture is this, that there were two ſtories written in Hebrew of Eſther, the one compendious and ſhort, which we now haue: the other more large, which might bee tranſlated by Lyſimachus there ſpoken of, chap. 11. whoſe tranſlation we now onely haue, the originall being periſhed. And it might be, ſaith hee, that theſe 7. chapters were ſometimes written in Hebrew, ſed caſu aliquo excidiſſe, by ſome miſchance were loſt. Anſw. Firſt, the Text ſaith not that Lyſimachus tranſlated any ſuch Hebrew ſtorie, but onely the Epiſtle of Phurim. Secondly, this cannot bee that ample and large ſtorie imagined, being ſhorter, and not ſo full as the canonicall Eſther. Thirdly, it is not like that theſe chapters, of this other ſtorie, which he imagineth, was euer written in Hebrew: for they were more like to bee kept in the Hebrew tongue, then in the Greeke: for ſo much as there was neuer any people more carefull in keeping any thing, then the Iewes were of their Hebrew Scriptures. Theſe therefore are but bare, and light coniectures to make canonicall Scripture.

4 Beſides, the falſe ſtorie ſaith, that Haman was a Macedonian, chap. 16. verſ. 10. the true ſtorie ſaith, he was an Agagite or Amalekite, chap. 8. 3. how can theſe two agree? Nay, the forged booke ſaith, that Haman would haue deſtroyed the King, and ſo conueyed the kingdome of the Perſians to the Macedonians, which could in no wiſe be: for the kingdome of the Macedonians was not yet ſpoken of: and ſo it continued in ſmall or no reputation, till Philippus the father of Alexander, in the 20. yeare of whoſe raigne, and not before, the Perſians began to ſuſpect the Macedonians: Diodor. lib. 16. which was about the 23. yeare of the raigne of Ochus, one of the laſt Kings of Perſia, after whom Arſes raigned three yeares, and Darius fiue. Now if the Perſian Monarchie continued 220. yeares, as Bellarmine graunteth, Mardoche, which was one of them that went into captiuitie with Iechoniah, Eſther 2.6. muſt be almoſt 300. yeares olde, allowing but 130. yeares to the Perſian Monarchie, which was moſt like to bee the true period of that gouernment, as is ſhewed elſe-where; then was Mardoche welnigh 200. yeares olde, if he ſuruiued to ſee the riſing of the Macedonian kingdome.

Hexapl. in Daniel. c. 9 qu. 43.

Bellarmines beſt anſwere here is, that Mardoche, though not yet borne, might be ſaid to be caried into captiuitie, not in himſelfe, but in the loynes of his fathers, or other progenitours; as Zorobabel is ſaid to haue returned of the captiuitie, which Nabuchadnezzar had caried away, Ezra. 2.2. and yet hee was borne in the captiuitie, Matth. 1.12. alſo Iosephs two ſonnes are ſaid to haue gone downe into Egypt with Iacob, being numbred among the ſeuentie ſoules, and yet they were borne in Egypt, Geneſ. 46. Bellar. cap. 7. in fine.

Anſwere 1. Zorobabel is not ſaid to haue beene one of them, that were caried into captiuitie, but of the captiuitie, which Nabuchadnezzar caried away: for ſo he might be, becauſe he was the oſpring of that captiuitie: one of theſe captiues he was not, but of the captiuity he was, which continued 70. yeares. Neither is it ſaid, that the ſoules which came with Iacob into Egypt were ſeuentie, but ſixtie ſixe, Geneſ. 46.26. Then it followeth, Ver. 27. Euery ſoule of the family of Iacob, which came into Egypt, are ſeuentie, in the which number the two ſonnes of Ioſeph are comprehended, which belonged to the family of Iacob, which came into Egypt, where the relatiue (which) may as well be referred to Labeth, the houſe or family of Iacob, as to Nepheſh the ſoule: therefore neither of thoſe inſtances can ſerue his turne. 2. And bee it admitted, that Mardoche was borne in the captiuitie; In Bellarmines account, hee could not be vnder 200. yeares olde, if he liued to the end of the Perſian Monarchie, when the Macedonians began to bee feared of the Perſians. 3. And ſeeing Bellarmine is of opinion, that Mardoche liued in the time of Artaxerxes Longimanus, when he ſuppoſeth Mardoche to haue beene 165. yeeres olde, and from thence to the end of Ochus raigne, hee counteth aboue 100. yeeres, when, and not before, the Macedonians grew to be famous, and feared of the Perſians: how could this be in Mardoche or Hamans time. This exception to this Apocryphal booke, can no way be healed vp.

Gen. 46.26.27.

5 Other contradictions there are betweene thoſe two ſtories of Eſther: the falſe ſtorie ſaith, that when Eſther came in to the King, that he looked fiercely vpon her, in ſo much, that ſhee fell downe as dead, chap. 15.10. but the true ſtorie witneſſeth, that at the firſt the King held vp his Scepter to the Queene in token of fauour, and well accepted of her comming. The falſe ſtorie, that Haman went about to hurt Mardoche, becauſe of the two Eunuchs, whoſe conſpiracie he had reuealed, chap. 12.6. But the true ſtorie ſaith, that he began to ſtomacke Mardoche, becauſe he would not bow the knee to him, nor doe him reuerence, Eſther 3.2. Vide plura apud Whitak. quaeſt. 1. cap. 18. de Scriptur. Saint Hierome with the reſt of the Apocrypha, which are not extant in the Hebrew, excludeth theſe chapters of Eſther out of the canonicall Scripture, tom. 4. Paulino: and in his preface to the bookes of the Kings. Neither doe we here want the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries, for both Nicholaus Lyranus, and Dionyſius Carthuſianus in their commentaries vpon this booke, and Sixtus Senenſis, lib. 1. & 8. bibliothec. doe refuſe this appendix of Eſther, as not being canonicall.

OF CERTAINE CHAPTERS annexed to Daniel.

There are three parcels ioyned to Daniel, the Song of the three children, the ſtorie of Suſanna, of Bel and the Dragon, in the vulgar Latine, which are not any part of canonicall Scripture.

1 They are neither extant in Hebrew at this day, nor are like to haue been tranſlated out of Hebrew into Greeke: but compiled firſt in Greeke, and therefore not written by Daniel: for verſ. 54. 58. of the ſtorie of Suſanna, where one of the Elders ſaith, hee ſaw her vnder a Lentiske tree, the other vnder a Prune tree: he vſeth a certaine paronomaſie or alluſion vnto the Greeke words: which cannot ſtand in the Hebrew, as of the tree σχῖνον, he ſaith the Angell of the Lord σχίσει, ſhall cut you in two: and ſo of the tree πρῖνον, πρίσαι, ſhall deuide thee in two. As if a man ſhould thus allude in Engliſh: thou waſt vnder the Prune tree: the Lord ſhall prune thee. This alluſion is not in the Hebrew, as the learned haue very well obſerued, but onely in the Greeke. This exception was taken long agoe againſt this booke by Iulius Africanus, who liued vnder M. Aurelius Antoninus, and hereof did write an Epiſtle to Origene: from whom Bellarmine borroweth his anſwere which here followeth: Hierom. catalog. ſcriptor. Who alſo reporteth of a certaine learned Iew, that becauſe of this alluſion, doubted not to ſay, that this booke was compiled by ſome Greeke: for the alluſion (ſaith he) is in Greeke, as if a man ſhould ſay in Latine, De ilice arbore, ilicò pereas, & à lentiſco, non lente pereas: and as if in Engliſh a man ſhould thus ſay, thou waſt vnder a firre tree, the Lord ſhall fire thee, or vnder a Pare tree, he ſhall pare thee.

Præfat. in Daniel.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Daniel neither named the Lentiske tree, nor the Prime tree, but ſome other, that might haue an alluſion to cutting, as the names in Greeke haue: and that the Greeke tranſlator kept not the word, but the ſenſe. Bellarm. cap. 9. Anſw. Firſt, the Ieſuite, that is ſo full of his coniectures, ſhould likewiſe haue geſſed, what trees they were, and how they are called in Hebrew, that Daniel named: ſo ſhould his coniecture haue ſeemed more probable. Secondly, if his imagined Hebrew ſhould name one tree, the interpreter ſhould ſet downe another, to keepe the alluſion ſtill, one of them [illegible] proceedeth an vntruth, and so both of them could not bee Scripture, which faileth not in the least [illegible].

2 The particular time is not knowne when this storie should be done: yet it is certaine, it was in the captiuitie; for Susanna dwelt in Babylon: but Daniel could not then be so young a childe as the storie maketh, for he was caried away in the first captiuitie with Iehoiakim, as it is, Dan.1. And Ezekiel, that liued about that time, doth speake of the great prudence and sage wisedome of Daniel, Ezech. 28. 3. and ioyneth him with Noah and Iob, chap.14. All this proueth that Daniel could not be so very a babe in the beginning of the captiuitie, as the storie maketh him.

Bellarmine answereth, that Ezechiel maketh mention of Daniel, viuentis adhuc in aetate puerili, being but a childe: being euen then famous amongst the people for the deliuering of Susanna, and for his interpretations of dreames. Answer. But the contrarie is easily proued, that Daniel was no childe, when Ezechiel gaue this testimonie of him. 1. He is ioyned with Noah and Iob, and the text saith, They shall saue neither sonnes nor daughters: which could not bee true of Daniel, being himselfe but a childe. And though, as the Iesuite saith, it be but a supposition, that if these three were among them, &c. yet would not the Prophet suppose a thing impossible, as if a childe might haue both sonnes and daughters. 2. Againe, the word which the Prophet vseth, saying (if these three men, &c.) [illegible], is neuer giuen to any childe in Scripture, but is alwaies spoken of the elder sort: as 1.Sam.17.12. Isai senex veniens inter homines: Isai was counted olde among men. Likewise, Esay 32.9. Rise ye women or mothers, and heare ye daughters: the word is [illegible] nashim, which is the plurall number of [illegible] the first letter radicall taken away. Wherefore it appeareth by the vse and acceptation of this word, that Daniel, who is by the Prophet counted among the elder men, could at that time be no childe.

3 Further, this Historie of Susanna supposeth, that the Iewes being in captiuitie, had their tribunall seates of iudgement among themselues, and that it was in their power to inflict capitall punishment, which is not like, seeing that in their owne country afterward, being in subiection to the Romanes, they could put none to death, Iohn 18. 31. And beside, this narration yeeldeth another reason and occasion, vers.64. how Daniel came to be famous, and the people began to take notice of him, namely for deliuering of Susanna, then is alleaged by Daniel himselfe. Dan.1.

4 In the storie of Daniel, it is said, that he was sixe dayes in the Lions denne: but the true storie saith, he was there but one night, chap.6. The Iesuite answereth, he was twice in the Lions denne, or rather, he thinketh there were two Daniels, the one of the Tribe of Iuda, which was that great Prophet: the other of Leui, which was the principall in those two stories of Susanna, and of Bel and the Dragon. But this is a poore shift, to inuent another Daniel, whom the Scripture neuer knew: and if it were so, why are all their acts ioyned together, as if one Daniel had done and writ them all?

Other exceptions were taken in times past, as S. Hierome reporteth, by a certaine learned Iew spoken of before, against these forged pieces of Daniel: as against the Song of the three children: Tantum otij fuit trib. illis pueris, &c. Had the three children such leasure, in the middest of the furnace to make verses, and to stirre vp all creatures to the praise of God? And as for the storie of Bell, what great miracle was it to finde out the deceit of the Priests, or to kill the Dragon, with gobbets of pitch, which were done rather by a cunning wit, then a propheticall spirit? And concerning the taking vp of Habbacucke, saith he, where can the like example be shewed in all the olde Testament, that any of the Saints was caried in his body, and did flie in the ayre: whereas Ezechiel (saith hee) was transported in spirit; and Paul dare not affirme, that he was rapt vp in his body? Thus then that Iew opposed, as Hierome hath the storie, præfat. in Danielem.

Vpon these and such like reasons, S. Hierome doubteth not to call the storie of Bell and the Dragon fables: præfat. in Daniel. and so doth S. August. de mirabilib. lib.2. cap.32. Bellarmines answere is, that by fables, Hierome vnderstandeth, histories, cap.9. which is a very simple answere, and vntrue: for Hierome in the same place further thus writeth: Quas fabulas, &c. nos veru anteposito, easq; iugulante subiecimus: Which fables, because they are so well knowne, we haue added, that is translated, but marked them with a dash stroke or crosse line to cut the throat of them: for Hierome vsed this marke in his translation, thereby signifying what he would haue put out. If Hierome calling them fables, should meane stories, why did he thus write? And Augustine in the place alleaged giueth a reason, why hee will not collect any wonders, or miracles out of these bookes, because he counteth them fables: if he had vnderstood stories, he would not haue pretermitted them.

But what opinion S. Hierome had of these fabulous stories, it is cleare by Ruffinus inuectiue, who blameth him, for that he cut off from the Scriptures the storie of Susanna, an example of great chastitie, and the Song of the three children. And Ruffinus in the same place, rather being stirred in choler, than speaking of iudgement, thus argueth the case with Hierome: First, saith he, it is not to be doubted, but that Peter sitting 24. yeeres at Rome, did deliuer vnto the Church all the bookes of Scripture, and these among the rest: but it is not like he would commend vnto them false bookes. Secondly, the Apostle biddeth vs to take heede of Iewish fables, and must wee now bee sent to the Iewes to learne, which are the Scriptures? Thirdly, thus the holy martyrs are held to haue beene in error, which did vse to sing in the Church, the Song of the three children.

These & such like arguments Ruffinus vseth in his inuectiues against Hierome: to the which Hieromes answere may be thus gathered, though I find not in any one place these arguments by him confuted.

To the first: it is denied, that Peter, of whoſe ſitting at Rome ſo many yeeres it may bee doubted, did not commend any of the Apocryphall bookes to the Church, as parcell of the Scripture: for Hierome thus writeth, Apoſtolici viri ſcripturis vtuntur Hebraicis, &c. The Apoſtolike men vſe none but the Hebrew Scriptures. It is manifeſt, that thus did the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts: but the Apocrypha are not in the Hebrew.

Apolog. 2. in Ruffinum.

To the ſecond: the ſame Apoſtle, which biddeth vs take heede of Iewiſh fables, yet referreth vs vnto them for the diuine oracles: Rom. 3. 2. yea, and Origene, as Hierome ſaith, whom Ruffinus did ſo extoll, did conferre with the Iewes for the vnderſtanding of the Hebrew Scriptures, as he confeſſeth, that he learned of one Huillus a Iew what is vnderſtood by Ariel, in the 29. of Eſay, verſ. 1. apolog. 1 cont. Ruffin.

To the third: it followeth not, though they be read in the Church, that therefore they are Scripture; the Church readeth them for the edifying of the people, as Hierome ſaith, not for the confirmation of doctrine. And as touching the martyrs, they might haue their errors, as their ſinnes: neither ought we to embrace the errors of martyrs: Defendamus ergo peccata (ſaith Hierome) quia qui poſtea martyres, prius peccatores fuerunt: Wee might as well maintaine their ſinnes, becauſe they, which afterward became martyrs, firſt were ſinners. Thus we ſee how Ruffinus chalenged S. Hierome for leauing out of the Apocrypha, and how S. Hierome defendeth himſelfe: and yet it may ſeeme ſtrange, that Ruffinus ſhould blame Hierome for this, whereas, hee himſelfe in the Creede which goeth vnder his name, which is to be found both amongſt Cyprian, and Hieromes workes, doth exclude the bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Macchabees, Eccleſiaſticus, the Wiſedome of Salomon, out of the number of the ſacred Scriptures. But thus much of this controuerſie betweene theſe two ancient Writers.

Pammachio & Oceano.

Laſtly, we haue here the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries, for Ioannes Driedo, a Popiſh writer, refuſeth theſe pieces annexed to Daniel, as being no part of the Scripture: lib. 1 de ſcriptur. & dogmatib. eccleſiaſtic. cap. vltimo.

OF THE BOOKE OF TOBIE.

1 THis booke is not found in the Hebrew, in the which tongue all the oracles of God were kept. Ergo, it is worthily doubted of. Iunius maketh mention of two Hebrew editions of this booke, but tranſlated into the Hebrew by ſome for exerciſe ſake: and if the originall had beene Hebrew, one edition had beene ſufficient, there needed not two diuers copies. In Hieromes time it was alſo extant in the Chalde tongue, which is now wanting: præfat. in Apocryph.

2 Our aduerſaries themſelues confeſſe, that in Hieromes time it was not receiued for canonicall. The Ieſuite anſwereth; that it might be doubted of before it was determined in a generall Councell; to whom (ſaith he) it appertaineth to define of canonicall Scripture: As though this were not a greater doubt, whether a Councell hath any ſuch authoritie to determine, which bookes ought to bee receiued for canonicall, for Canus a Papiſt maketh a queſtion of it, lib. 2. cap. 8. And the Ieſuite himſelfe ſaith that the Church cannot, Facere canonicum de non canonico, Make a booke not canonicall to bee canonicall, but onely to declare thoſe to be canonicall, which are ſo indeede. Wherefore the Papiſts take too much vpon them, to make this booke within the Canon, being of it ſelfe not canonicall, and ſo adiudged by antiquitie.

3 There is ſome contradiction in the ſtorie, as it is tranſlated in the vulgar Latine, for chap. 3. ver. 7. the Text ſaith, that Sara dwelt in Rages, a Citie in Media: but chap. 7. 1. ſhee is ſaid to dwell in Ecbatane: and from thence Tobie ſendeth the Angell to Rages, to receiue the money of Gabael.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that there might be two Cities of the ſame name (Rages) one where Sara dwelt with Raguel, another where Gabael dwelt: or ſhe might be ſaid to dwell in Rages, becauſe ſhe dwelt neere vnto it, Bellarm. cap. 11.

Anſwer. Firſt, who ſeeth not what beggerly ſhifts theſe are: as before the Ieſuite found out two Daniels, ſo here he hath found vs out two cities: but none of theſe ſhifts can ſerue his turne: for whether he ſay, that Sara dwelt in his new found citie, or neere vnto Rages, both are falſe, if that be true in the 7. chapter, that ſhe dwelt in Ecbatane. Secondly, all this buſineſſe the Ieſuite is put to, becauſe hee will not confeſſe an errour in the Latin tranſlation, which in ſtead of Ecbatane, readeth Rages, chap. 3. 7. as by examining of the Greeke text may eaſily appeare: And thus Michael Medina diſſolueth this doubt, whoſe iudgement though Bellarmine miſlike, yet in the end he muſt bee faine to agree to him: or elſe thoſe places will neuer bee reconciled. Our countrimen of Doway doe finde another ſalue for this ſoare: they ſay that Sara is ſaid to dwell in Rages, becauſe ſhe dwelt in that Prouince, whereof Rages was the head city: for when they came where Raguel dwelt, Tobias ſtayed there, and the Angell went to the city of Rages, where Gabelus dwelt &c. as we may ſay ſuch an one dwelleth in Yorke or Lincolne, that dwelleth in one of thoſe ſhieres: Annot. in Tobi. 13. 7. p. 994.

Contra. 1. If one ſay, ſuch an one dwelleth in Lincolne a city of England, will not any take it, that he dwelleth in the city, not in the countrey or ſhiere of Lincolne? And ſo Sara is ſaide, chap. 3. 7. to dwell in Rages a city of the Medes; not in the Prouince but the city. 2. As Sara dwelleth in Rages a city of the Medes, ſo is it ſaid, chap. 8. 3. Go to Gabelus into Rages a City of the Medes: Why ſhould the city of Rages bee heere vnderſtood, as our Doway Gloſſemen note, and the Prouince of Rages before, in both places the City of Rages being expreſly mentioned. Thirdly if Raguel then the Father of Sara dwelt in Rages, and Gabelus dwelt there alſo, then needed not the Angell haue taken ſuch a long iourney to goe from Raguels houſe to Gabelus, as it is deſcribed, chap. 9. How Azarias (as the Angell called himſelfe,) was willed to take with him two Cammels and a ſeruant to accompany him. Fourthly the error then is in the vulgar Latine which chap. 3.7. as is before noted, for Ecbatane putting in Rages: and to mend the matter, the vulgar Latin, chap. 5.8. maketh this City of Rages to bee ſituate in mount Ecbatane, and ſo Ecbatane and Rages ſhould be one City: whereas in the originall copie they are two diſtinct cities: for Gabael, or Gabelus, as the latine readeth dwelt in Rages, chap. 9.3. and Raguel in Ecbatane. chap. 7.1. This obiection, though it maketh nothing againſt the credit of this ſtory, which we impugne by other arguments, yet it much ſhaketh the authority of their vulgar Latin.

4. He that readeth the booke it ſelfe ſhall finde that both the ſtile, and the matter is not ſuch as beſeemeth canonicall Scripture: as chapter. 3. 8 the euill ſpirit named Aſmodeus, a worde not found in the canonicall Scripture, ſee Iunius vpon that place. Chap. 5. 12. the Angell is made to ſay he was of Azarias ſtocke. 6. 1. in the vulgar Latin, but not in the Greeke, Tobie his dogge followed him, a matter not beſeeming the grauity of Scripture. Chap. 12. 15. Raphael one of the ſeuen Angels: ſee Iunius vpon that place, Chap. 8. 3, the diuell driuen away with the ſmell of a broyled liuer.

Præfat in Prouerb. 5. Hierome of the booke of Tobie, thus writeth, Legit quidem eccleſia, ſed inter Canonicas ſcripturas non recipit: The Church readeth them, but receiueth them not into the number of Canonicall Scriptures.

Our Gloſſemen of Doway doe their good will to remoue ſome of theſe doubts: Firſt concerning Tobies dogge, they tell vs, that it diſgraceth not the ſacred hiſtorie, that a ſmall matter being true, is alſo recorded with the reſt, as not one iot of the Law muſt be omitted: and it is by Beda and ſome others expounded myſtically, Annot. in Tobie. 11. v. 9. Secondly likewiſe the driuing away of the Diuell with the liuer of a fiſh: they ſay that Diuels that would haue made themſelues equal with God, are iuſtly made ſubiect to creatures: God concurred heere with natural cauſes, whoſe pleaſure is ſome time to vſe meanes naturally vnapt, as Chriſt gaue ſight to the blind by putting clay to his eies: ſo the Angell by Gods appointment vſed this meanes to expell the Deuill. Annot. in chap. 6. v. 6. And further, it myſtically ſignified Chriſts paſſion, whereby the Diuell was expelled out of mens hearts. Annot. cap. 5. v. 2.

Contra. firſt, 1. If this were any of the ſacred hiſtories, the mention of the ſmalleſt matter were not ſuperfluous: but that remaineth yet to bee proued, thus they begge ſtill the thing in queſtion. Secondly, and ſo it is true that not one iotte of the Law muſt be omitted: but I hope they will not make the wagging of Tobies dogs taile any part of the Law. Thirdly, neither can any myſticall matter be ſoundly picked, I would thinke out of the wagging of a dogs taile. Fourthly let them ſhew vs, where in any part of the canonicall Scripture any ſuch ridiculous or toyous thing is expreſſed, admitte ſuch a thing were true, yet the report of euery true thing beſeemeth not the grauity of Scripture.

Secondly, firſt God hath indeed ſubdued Diuels to faithfull men, Luke 10. 20. but that this is laide as a puniſhment vpon them for their pride to be ſubiect to a fiſhes liuer, we doe not finde. Secondly, if you can prooue that this was a meanes appoined of God, then no doubt he concurred with his owne ordinance, but ſtill they thus take for granted, the maine point in queſtion. Thirdly, that inſtance of laying clay to the blind mans eye is nothing like: for a corporall meanes though vnlike, was applied to a corporall infirmity, but heere a ſpirituall euill is cured, which cannot be helped but by ſpirituall meanes, as the Apoſtle ſaith, the weapons of our warfare are not carnall &c. Fourthly, neyther are they myſteries, that are collected out of thoſe Apocryphall bookes, but mens fancies. 2.Cor.10.4.

OF THE BOOKE OF IVDITH.

AN eſpeciall argument againſt this booke is, that the hiſtorie cannot be aſſigned to any time.

1 It is pretie ſport to ſee how the Papiſts doe moyle themſelues about this point: and cannot agree amongſt themſelues. Some hold that this ſtorie fell out after the captiuitie in Cambyſes time, as Lyranus, and Driedo: ſome in Darius Hiſtaſpis raigne, as Gerardus Mercator: ſome would haue it before the captiuitie in Sedechias time, as Genebrard: ſome in Ioſias time, as Iohan. Benedictus: but the Ieſuite confuteth them all, and bringeth the ſtorie to Manaſſes raigne: but hereunto exception alſo may be taken.

2 It appeareth that this ſtorie could not be after the captiuitie, for we reade not of any Nabuchadnezar afterwads, for the kingdome was tranſlated from the Aſſyrians to the Perſians and Medes. Againe, it could not be before, either in Ioſias time, Sedechias, or Manaſſes: firſt, becauſe in the 5. chapter, verſ. 18. it is ſaid, that the Temple had been deſtroyed and caſt downe, which could not be in any of thoſe Kings raignes. It is but a ſhift of Bellarmines, to ſay thoſe words were foyſted into the text: it is rather to be thought, that the Ieſuite is put to his trumps, not hauing elſe what to anſwere. Secondly, Iudith being at this time in the flower of her age, and liuing afterward many yeeres till ſhe was one hundred and fiue yeere old, all which time, and many yeeres after her death, the booke ſaith in the laſt chapter, the land had reſt: this cannot agree with Manaſſes time: for within fortie yeeres, or not much aboue, the land fell into great trouble, ſtraight after Ioſias death. Where then is this long time of reſt? And the Ieſuite that ſtill groundeth vpon impoſsibilities and vnlikelihoods, that Iudith was at this time fortie yeere old, which was (ſaith he) in the beginning of Manaſſes raigne, and ſo to die about ſeuen yeeres before Ioſias: yet for all his ſcanning is driuen to this ſhift, that the many yeeres peace after her death muſt be vnderſtood of poore ſeuen yeeres. Thirdly, if all this happened in Manaſſes time, whom the King of Aſſur tooke and carried away priſoner, and had much troubled and afflicted the countrie of Iudea: what need had Holofernes to enquire ſo curiouſly of Achior the Ammonite of the countrie, their citie, people, Kings, and ſuch like: ſeeing they had knowne the countrie too well before in ſpoyling and waſting of it, as the Iewes by wofull experience had felt? And this is Bellarmines owne reaſon againſt their opinion that hold Iudith to haue liued after the captiuitie: argum. 8. becauſe Holofernes needed not then to haue enquired of the people, and of the countrie, ſeeing the Perſians could be ignorant of none of theſe things, ſaith he, when as they had diſmiſſed the Iewes thither a little before. But this reaſon holdeth ſtronger againſt Bellarmine: for what need any ſuch inquiſition after this people, ſeeing the King of Aſſur had ſent his hoſt and Captaines thither before to fetch Manaſſes to Babylon?

Iudith cap.5.

S. Hierome ſaith, that this booke of Iudith, as the other of Tobie, were not receiued of the Church into the Canon of the Scriptures: præfat. in Prouerb. And Auguſtine againe thus affirmeth out of S. Hierome: Librum Iudith Iudæi in canonem ſcripturarum non recepiſſe dicuntur, & minus authoritatis habet ad ea roboranda, quæ in contentionem veniunt: The Iewes are ſaid, not to haue receiued the booke of Iudith into the canon of the Scriptures, and it is of ſmall authoritie to ſtrengthen any doctrine, that commeth in queſtion: De ciuitat. dei, 18.26. Yet although exception bee taken to this booke as not canonicall, the truth of the hiſtorie in generall, as likewiſe of the other of Tobie, is not by vs denied: ſome ſuch things might be done, and as Hierome ſaith of this booke, though it be not ſufficient to confirme any doctrine which is controuerted, inter hiſtorias computatur, it is notwithſtanding reckoned among the hiſtories: the ſubſtance of the ſtorie may be true, though the writer faile in the circumſtances, as of time, place and manner: and therefore it deſerueth not the credit and authoritie of canonicall Scripture, which is no way defectiue.

Our Doway commentors doe thus labour for the credit of this booke: 1. In the 8. chapter, verſ. 25. Iudith ſpeaking of ſuch things, as had formerly happened vnto her people, ſaith, they were deſtroyed of the deſtroyer: which words are cited by S. Paul, 1. Cor. 10. 10. and are not to be found neither Numb. 11. nor 14. nor in any place of the old Teſtament but only here, which argueth this booke to be canonicall.

1.Cor.10.10.

2 Concerning the time, it ſeemeth probable, that theſe things happened when Manaſſes was in priſon in Babylon, or newly reſtored, &c. from which time they had no warres till the raigne of Ioachas about 80. yeeres, conformable to the long peace mentioned, chap. 16. verſ. 30. in the argument of the booke, &c.

3 Whereas Holofernes demandeth of Achior, what manner of people the Iewes were, chap. 5. 3. he could not be altogether ignorant of ſo famous a people, as the Iewes; but in his rage marueiling at their attempt, demandeth more particularly of their abilitie to reſiſt him: as for the like reaſon, verſ. 28. they knowing Achior well enough, yet in their rage demaund who he was, that dare ſay ſuch things: annot. in cap. 5. 3. 28.

4 Whereas Iudith thus praieth, chap. 9. 13. let him be caught with the ſinne of his eyes in me, &c. they ſay, that Holofernes might bee moued with her beautie and ſweete ſpeech, and yet not ſinne: annotat. ibid.

5 Whereas chap. 10. 12. as they tranſlate out of the vulgar Latine: ſhe thus ſaith, I know it ſhould come to paſſe, that they ſhould be giuen you for a ſpoile: theſe things (ſay they) ſhe ſpeaketh conditionally, as it was like to come to paſſe, if God ſent not other meanes: annot. ibid.

6 Againe, whereas Iudith ſaith to Holofernes, chap. 11. 4. If thou wilt follow the words of thine handmaid, God will doe with thee a perfect thing: this was true in her meaning, though not in Holofernes vnderſtanding, &c. and was no leſſe lawfull, then that Ioſua did in deceiuing the citizens of Hay: annot. ibid.

Contra. 1. This word deſtroyer, though it bee not extant in theſe places giuen in inſtance, yet is it found Exod. 12. 23. I will not ſuffer the deſtroyer ὀλοθρεύοντα to come: from thence the Apoſtle might take the word: for it was ſome Angell good or bad, whoſe miniſterie God vſed in the execution of his iudgements. 2. Neither is this word or phraſe found in this place of the booke of Iudith, 8. 25. in the originall: but both it and three verſes together are foiſted in, and many additions, diminutions, & alterations are found in this place beſide, and throughout the booke which the Septuagint haue not.

2 This ſtorie could not fall out in Manaſſes time when he was in priſon, or reſtored, for the reaſons before alleaged: becauſe the Temple had been caſt downe to the ground, chap. 5. 18. (as it is in the originall text, though it be left out in the Latine) which was not done in Manaſſes raigne: neither were there 80. yeeres from Manaſſes impriſonment, or deliuerance to Ioachaz, or Iehoachas reigne the ſonne of Ioſias, for Amon the ſonne of Manaſſes and Ioſias raigned betweene them but 33. yeeres, Amon two yeeres, and Ioſias 31. yeeres: and Amon being the eldeſt ſonne of Manaſſes, borne before his fa-

2.Chron.33.6. 2.Chron.33.21 thers impriſonment (becauſe mention is made of his ſonnes before) was but 22.yeeres when he began to raigne; which being put to the former ſumme of 33.maketh but 55.yeeres: neither can it be Iudith 16.28. cap.10.18. true, in this account, that all the daies of Iudiths life (which was 105.yeeres in all, and 69.after this exploit) there was none that troubled Iſrael, nor many yeeres after her death: for after thoſe 55.yeeres expired, there fell out moſt troubleſome times after the death of Ioſias. And whereas Bellarmine would helpe out the matter, by referring this ſtorie to the 16.yeere of Manaſſes raigne, ſo that 39. yeeres ſhould remaine, this cannot be, for the reaſon aforeſaid taken from the age of Amon, moſt like to be Manaſſes eldeſt ſonne.

3 Among other queſtions, Holofernes asketh Achior, What king the Iewes had, chap.5.3. which had been a very idle queſtion, if Manaſſes were either then in priſon, or deliuered and reſtored to his kingdome: how could he be ignorant then, who was their King? That other queſtion touching Achior in the end of the chapter, is not found in the originall, though the Latine haue it.

4 This is new Doway doctrine, that Holofernes might be caught with the beautie of Iudith, and Rom.7.7. luſt after her yet without ſinne: whereas the Law ſaith, Thou ſhalt not luſt: for he deſired her but as his concubine, to entreat her as one of the daughters of the children of Aſſur, which remaine in the Court Iudith 12.19. of Nabuchadnezar. And if it be ſaid, ſhe meant, that he might deſire her as his wife, ſhe either intended to be his wife, which was contrary to the law for a daughter of Iſrael to marrie to the vncircumciſed; or ſhe intended it not, and ſo diſſembled in her prayer, and ſo ſhould haue offended either way.

5 For Iudith ſpeaketh not conditionally, but ſimply giueth this as a reaſon, why ſhe fled; becauſe her people ſhould be giuen into his hand: I know (ſaith ſhe) it would come to paſſe, that they ſhould be giuen, &c. but ſhe knew no ſuch thing, but hoped and firmely beleeued the contrary: ſhe ſpeaketh then againſt her knowledge, and cannot be excuſed from diſſembling.

6 If Iudith meane according to her ſpeech, it was not true in any vnderſtanding, for ſhe ſaith, verſ.6. My Lord ſhall not faile of his purpoſe: if ſhe meane otherwiſe then ſhe ſpeaketh, then ſhe told a lie, and yet proteſted before againſt it, verſ.5. I will declare no lie to my Lord this night: yea ſhe doth not equiuocate only with Holofernes, but ſhe alſo taketh Gods name in vaine, verſ.17. I will pray vnto God to reueale vnto me when they ſhall commit their ſinnes: and yet no ſuch matter. And that inſtance of Ioſua is much vnlike: if they can make no difference betweene lying ſpeech, and politike ſtratagems of warre, betweene diſſimulation in behauiour, and vntruth in words, they haue very dimme eyes to diſcerne.

OF THE BOOKE OF WISEDOME.

The Papiſts.

OVr aduerſaries reaſon thus: They ſay that S.Paul, Rom.11.34. vſing this ſpeech; Who hath knowne the Lords minde, or beene his counſellor? doth alleage it out of the fourth chapter of this booke, verſ.13. Ergo, it is canonicall. We anſwere: Firſt, the Apoſtle ſeemeth not in that place to cite any teſtimonie, though the words which he vſeth may elſewhere be found. Secondly, though the like words are read in the booke of Wiſedome, yet it is not neceſſarie the Apoſtle ſhould borrow them from thence, but rather they are alleaged out of the 40.of Eſay 13. where the Prophet ſaith, Who hath inſtructed the ſpirit of God, or was his counſellor? And this alſo is the opinion of the Rhemiſts, that Saint Paul in that place vſeth the Prophets words.

The Proteſtants.

OVr reaſons againſt the authoritie of this booke are theſe and ſuch like.

1 Becauſe this booke is not found in the Hebrew, but written only in Greeke: wherefore it is not canonicall, ſeeing the Iewes had all the oracles of God.

2 Philo a Iew is thought by the Papiſts themſelues to be the author of this booke, who liued after Chriſt in the time of Caligula; neither himſelfe was a Chriſtian or beleeued in Chriſt: therefore an vnlike man to bee a writer of canonicall Scripture. Bellarmine ſaith it was another Philo, who was more ancient. Indeed Ioſephus maketh mention of a Philo before this time, but hee was an Heathen and no Iew: But this booke was held to be, Philonis Iudei, Philo the Iewes, as S.Hierome witneſſeth, praef.in Prou. and S.*Auguſt.lib.*17.*de ciuit.cap.*20.

Wiſd.8.20. 3 In the 8.chap.verſ.20. Salomon is brought in thus ſpeaking: yea rather being good, I came to an vndefiled bodie: doth not this ſauour both of that Platonicall conceit of the being of ſoules before they come into the bodie? and beſide, how can the ſoule come into an vndefiled body, which is in the firſt conception defiled with ſinne? as Dauid ſaith, Pſal.51.5.

4 If this booke were written by Salomon, why is it not extant in Hebrew? For Salomon wrote in Hebrew and not in Greeke. Many of the Papiſts alſo doe prooue, that it was not written by Salomon: for though Salomon in the ſecond chapter bee brought in praying vnto God; that is no good argument to prooue Salomon the author, for the author might ſpeake in the perſon of Salomon. S.Hierome doubteth not to call this booke, Pſeudepigraphum, falſely intituled: and againſt Vigilantius: De Salomone ſumis teſtimonium quod Salomonis non fuit: You bring a ſaying out of Salomon, which was none of Salomons. And S.Auguſtine: Propter nonnullam eloquij ſimilitudinem, vt Salomonis dicatur, obtinuit conſuetudo: Cuſtome hath ſo preuailed, that it is called Salomons, for the likenes of ſtile and ſpeech: *de ciuitat.lib.*17.*cap.*20. If this booke then were none of Salomons, and yet beareth his name, it cannot be canonicall Scripture wherein there is any vntruth.

OF THE BOOKE CALLED Eccleſiaſticus.

The Papiſts.

THey haue none but common and generall arguments for the authoritie of this booke, as that it was of old read in the Church, and diuers of the Fathers alleaged teſtimonies out of it. All this prooueth not, as wee haue ſhewed before, that it was canonicall, but that it was well eſteemed and thought of, becauſe of many wholeſome and good precepts which are contained in it. And for further anſwere, we ſay, that it followeth not, becauſe the Fathers doe quote Eccleſiaſticus in their writings, that therefore it is canonicall. Firſt, the Fathers alleage alſo the teſtimonies of the Heathen Philoſophers and Poets, and yet they are nothing leſſe then canonicall. Secondly, Hierome ſaith, Legit Eccleſia, &c. The Church readeth them, but yet doth not take them for canonicall: as then the Church doth reade them, and yet maketh them no Scripture, ſo the Fathers in their writings may vſe them. Thirdly, if it ſhall be ſaid, that the Fathers doe cite this booke as canonicall: to this I anſwere, that therein they may be deceiued as Auguſtine was, who ſometime alleageth Eccleſiaſticus vnder the name of a Prophet, *lib. cont. Pagan.*6. and calleth the booke Propheticall, *lib.*2.*de Geneſ.cap.*5. But this his opinion he retracteth: *lib.*1.*Retract.*10. Or elſe the Fathers doe alleage theſe bookes not as canonicall, but as Hagiographa, that is, holy writings, ſuch as were inferiour to the Scriptures; but yet to be preferred before other mens writings: as Hierome ſaith the Hebrewes did count the bookes of Tobie and Iudith among the Hagiographa, and yet did cut them off from the Scriptures.

Præfat.in Prouerb.

Præfat.in Tobiam.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe thus improue the authoritie of this booke.

1 The author in the Preface ſaith, that he tranſlateth in this booke ſuch things, as before were collected by his grandfather in Hebrew, and excuſeth himſelfe, becauſe that things tranſlated out of the Hebrew doe loſe their grace, and haue not the ſame force: ſo then it appeareth that this booke cannot be canonicall being imperfect: Neither was his grandfathers worke (which is now loſt) to be thought any part of the Scripture, ſeeing he was no prophet himſelfe, but a compiler and a collector of certaine things out of the prophets.

2 He exhorteth his countrey men to take it in good worth, and ſo craueth pardon: but the ſpirit of God vſeth not to make any ſuch excuſe, whoſe workes are moſt perfect, and feare not the iudgement of men.

3 This booke ſaith, chap.46.verſ.20. that Samuel prophecied after his death, and from the earth lift vp his voice. Whereas the canonicall Scripture ſaith not that it was Samuel, but that Saul knew (that is, ſo imagined or thought) that it was Samuel, 1.Sam.28.14. And Auguſtine thinketh it was phantaſma Samuelis, but a ſhew onely and repreſentation of Samuel, and an illuſion of the diuell, *lib. ad Dulcitium, quaſt.*6. For it is not to bee thought, that the diuell can diſeaſe the ſoules of any men, much leſſe of Saints departed. See more of this, *controuerſ.*9.*quaſt.*1.*part.*2. S. Auguſtine ſaith, that Eccleſiaſticus is thought to be Salomons, as before he ſaid of the other booke called the Wiſedome of Salomon: Propter nonnullam eloquij ſimilitudinem: For ſome likenes of the phraſe, *lib.*17.*de ciuit. Dei, cap.*20. S. Hierome: Hac duo volumina legat ad ædificationem plebis: Theſe two bookes the Church may reade for edifying of the people, not any confirmation of doctrine: præfat. in Prouerb. In the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles, there are onely three bookes aſcribed to Salomon, the Prouerbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Canticles; but as for this booke the Canon giueth this caueat, Extrinſecus addiſcant iuuenes ſapientiam eruditi Sirach: Let the young men learne the wiſedome of learned Sirach, beſide and without the Canon. Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome in his decree of the canonicall Scripture, doth bring in onely two bookes vnder Salomons name, the Prouerbs, and Eccleſiaſtes with the Canticles, both which hee maketh one booke. And thus haue wee the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries owne authors againſt them.

See this place obiected against, and anſweted, Retection p.4.

4. Now then whereas Bellarmine would haue Salomon the author of this booke, as to that purpoſe he aledgeth Gregory with other Fathers, chap.14. and yet denieth not but that Ieſus Sirach was alſo the writer thereof, gathering Salomons ſentences together: the one affoording the matter, and the other the forme: heereunto we anſwere: firſt that ſome of the Fathers may count it Salomons booke, for ſome likenes or ſimilitude of phraſe or matter, as we heard before out of Auguſtine and not otherwiſe. Secondly thoſe ſentences were not collected out of Salomons workes, but partly as the Author confeſſeth, they were his Grandfathers obſeruations, out of the Law and Prophets, as hee ſaith in the preface, partly it was his owne worke, wherein he hath powred out the wiſedome of his owne heart, chap.50.27. it was not then the wiſedome of Salomon.

OF THE TWO BOOKES OF THE Macchabees.

OVr Arguments againſt the authority of this booke are theſe enſuing, for our aduerſaries bring nothing on their parte, but ſuch arguments drawen from teſtimonies authorities, as doe generally ſerue for all the Apocrypha, which are anſwered afore.

2.Macch.12,43 1 Iudas is commended, 2. booke chap. 12. for offering ſacrifice for the dead: which was not commanded by the law. And againe, they were manifeſt idolaters: for there were found Iewells vnder their coates conſecrate to the Idols of the Iamnites. And our aduerſaries grant themſelues, that prayer is not to be made for open malefactors dying impenitently. Bellarmine ſaith, that Iudas did godly thinke, that they might repent them at the very point of death. c. 15. ad obiect. 1. Anſw. By this reaſon a man may pray for the wickedeſt man, that dyeth, if he haue a conceit, that hee might repent in the very inſtant of death: but this is contrary to their owne Canons: Decret. par. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 2 c. 4. Gelaſ. Nobis fas non eſt aliud decernere praeter id in quo dies ſupremus quemque inuenit. We ought not to iudge otherwiſe of a man, then as his laſt day findeth him.

2. Lib. 2. cap. 2. many things are reported of the Arke, the holy fire, the altar, the tabernacle, which ſhould be hidde by Ieremy in a caue, and that the Lord would ſhew the people theſe things at their returne. Heere are many things vnlikely and vntrue. Firſt, it is found, ſaith the text, in the writings of Ieremy: but no ſuch ſtory is there found. Secondly, Ieremy was in priſon till the very taking of the Citie, and the Citie being taken the Temple was ſpoyled, the holy things defaced and carried away, how could they then be conueyed by Ieremy? Thirdly in their returne they found neither arke nor fire, nor any ſuch thing. But, ſaith the Ieſuite, the Iewes in their conuerſion to God in the end of the world may haue them againe: as though when they ſhall beleeue in Chriſt, they will any more looke backe to the ceremonies or rites of the law: for what vſe then I pray you ſhal they haue of altar or ſacrifice or any ſuch like?

1.Macch.6.16. 3 There is a great diſagreeing in the ſtory betweene the two bookes concerning the death of Antiochus, lib. 1. cap. 6. v. 6. 16. It is ſaide that Antiochus died for greefe in Babylon, hearing of the good ſucceſſe of the Iewes, lib. 2. 1. ver. 16. 2.Macch. 1.16. Antiochus was with the reſt of his ſouldiers ſlaine in the Temple of Nanea, and his head cut off and throwen forth. Chap. 9. the ſame Antiochus falling ſicke by the way dyed with a moſt filthy ſtinking ſmell, conſumed of wormes: thus, this murtherer and blaſphemer, ſaith the text, 2. lib. 9. 28. died a miſerable death in a ſtrange country among the mountaines. How could this man dye thrice, in Babylon, in Nanea, and by the way in a ſtrange countrey? It is confeſſed by the Ieſuite, that it was the ſame Antiochus, who ſaith hee loſt his armie in the temple, and ſickned by the way, and dyed at Babylon. But the ſtorie ſaith, that their heads were cut off: I thinke then he could not liue, and that he died in a ſtrange Countrey, therefore not at Babylon in his bed. Theſe things hang not together.

2.Macch.2.23. 4 Further, the Author of theſe bookes ſaith, that he abridgeth the ſtorie of one Iaſon a Syrenean, lib. 2. cap. 2. ver. 23. who was an Heathen: but the ſpirit of God vſeth not, neither needeth to borrow of prophane Writers. He ſaith that this worke was not eaſie but painefull to him, but required ſweating and watching, verſ. 26. But to the holy writers of Scripture, though their owne labour and diligence was not wanting, yet was not the worke hard or moleſtious vnto them. 2.Macch.15.39. Laſtly, the Author (ſaith he) writeth for pleaſure and recreation of the Reader, and craueth pardon if hee haue not done well, lib. 2. 15. 39. But to reade for pleaſure is no end of Scripture: neither doth the ſpirit of God vſe any excuſe either for matter or manner.

Our aduerſaries ſay, that S. Paul likewiſe confeſſeth, that he was rude in ſpeaking, 1. Cor. 11. 6. We anſwere, hee ſo ſaith, becauſe the falſe Apoſtles ſo gaue out of him, not that hee was ſo indeede: and yet in that place S Paul doth not excuſe himſelfe, for his not ſufficient handling of his matter, as this Author doth. Neither is that ſpeech of Saint Luke any thing like: for there the Euangeliſt doubteth not to ſay, that he had attained to an exact knowledge of all things. Vpon theſe premiſſes wee conclude, that theſe bookes of the Machabees are not Canonicall: nor to be taken for any part of holy Scripture, though wee denie not, but that there may be ſome profitable vſe of them for the ſtorie.

1.Macch.4.52. 5. 1. Macchab. cap. 4. 52. Iudas is ſaid to haue purged the Temple the 25. day of the moneth Chaſleu, in the yeare 148. which was one yeare before Antiochus death, who died in the 149. yeare. 1.Macch.6 16. 1. Macchabes 6. 16. yet he is ſaid to haue clenſed the Temple two yeares after Antiochus death. 2.Macch. 10.2. 2. Macchab. 10. 2. or as ſome Greeke Copies read two yeares ſixe moneths: Againe Iudas is ſaide to haue beene 1.Macc.9.3.18. killed in the 152. yeare. 1. Macchab. 9. 3. 18. and yet he is brought in, writing an Epiſtle in the yeare 2.Macch. 1.10. 188. 2. Macchab. 1. 10. which was 36. yeare after his death, how can theſe things agree?

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt: that the purging of the Temple was made before the death of Antiochus, though the narration thereof be ſet downe after: and thoſe two yeares muſt bee reckoned not from Antiochus death, but from the prophanation of the Temple. Secondly, he ſaith that the number of 188. yeares muſt be ioyned with the former Epiſtle written in the time of Demetrius, not vnto the latter: and ſo Epiſtles vſe to beare date in the end, and not in the beginning. Bellar. cap. 15.

Contra. 1. The two yeares can not beginne from the time of the prophanation of the Temple which was more then three yeares from the 145. yeare the 15. of Chasleu. 1. Macchab. 1.57. to the 148. yeare the 25. of Chasleu, chap. 4.52. And whereas the most Greeke Copies read 190 yeares and fiue moneths, this number can haue no reference to the time of the prophanation: for the Temple was purged the same day of the moneth, euen the 25. of Chasleu, 2. Macchab. 10. 6. Vpon the which day of the moneth it had beene before polluted. 1. Macchab. 1. 62. then can there not be fiue moneths aboue the euen yeares.

2. Neither the vulgar Latine nor the Greeke originall doe so distinguish and diuide the date from the Epiſtle: and it is vnlike that the former Epiſtle making mention of the deliuerance of the people vnder Demetrius in the yeare 169. should beare date 19. yeares after, the yeare 188. and deferre so long the keeping of their feast in remembrance of the deliuerance? beside what a preposterous courſe were this, firſt to ſet downe an Epiſtle dated anno. 188. and afterward to bring in an Epiſtle written by Iudas 36. yeares before: neither is the date of Epiſtles alwaies added in the end, ſometime it is prefixed in the beginning as 1. Macchab. 14.27. Wherefore it is euident that he which wrote this ſecond book differeth much from the hiſtory of the firſt, which is written more iudiciouſly for the truth and more aduiſedly and prudently for the circumſtance of time, in both which this variable and vncertaine writer fayleth.

6. Laſtly, 2 Macchab. c. 14. v. 42. Razis is commended for killing of himſelfe, contrary to the Scripture. Bellarmine anſwereth, that he is commended not for his godly, but manfull act: he is ſaid to haue died manfully.

Anſw. 1. The word is ἀνδρείως. nobly, valiantly: which very word is vſed, Act. 17. 11. where the Diſciples of Berea are ſaid to be more noble, then they of Theſſalonica, that is, more religious and godly: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, godlineſſe is great riches, ſo is it true nobility: neither ſhall any man finde any nobilitie in Scripture to be commended without godlines. Wherefore this author, if hee ſpeake according to the phraſe of Scripture, commending nobility, meaneth alſo godlineſſe; otherwiſe, as Auguſtine ſaith, Sic fortes laudare ſolet hiſtoria gentium: The hiſtories of the Gentiles doe vſe ſo to commend the valour of their men. 2. Auguſtine, when the Donatiſts alleaged the example of Razis in defence of their madneſſe, which killed themſelues, thus doubteth not to anſwer, denying the authorie of the booke: Non habent Iudæi hunc librum, ſicut Moſis & Prophetarum: The Iewes doe not account of this booke, as of Moſes and the Prophets, Lib. 2. cont. Gaudent. ad cap. 24.

And that the authority of theſe bookes hath alwaies beene vncertaine it may appeare: for that the number of them is not agreed vpon, ſome making but one, ſome two, ſome three Canonicall: Gelaſius in his Canon, holdeth but one of the Macchabees Canonicall: the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles reciteth three Canonicall bookes, the Papiſts generally hold but two: and thus our aduerſaries owne authorities doe not make for them.

Thus haue we ſeene in particular, what credit is to be giuen to theſe Apocriphall books, that they are not to be receiued into the Canon of the Scripture: and now of them all in generall, that they are not to be held to be any part of the Scripture, beſide the arguments before ſet downe, we haue foure moſt euident teſtimonies of antiquity.

The firſt of S. Hierome; who bringeth all the Canonicall bookes to the number of the Hebrue Alphabet, making them but two and twenty in all: for as, ſaith he, there are but two and twenty Hebrue letters, whereby a man learneth to ſpeake, and expreſſe his minde; ſo are there ſo many bookes of Scripture, whereby we are trained vp to holy knowledge. And theſe are the bookes: fiue of Moſes, Geneſis, Exodus, Leuiticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy: eight of the Prophets, Ioſua, the Iudges with Ruth, Samuel, the Kings, Eſaias, Ieremias, Ezechiel, the ſmall Prophets: then nine, which he calleth, Hagiographa, holy writings: as Iob, the Pſalmes, the Prouerbs, Eccleſiaſtes, the Canticles, Daniel, the Chronicles, Eſra, with Nehemiah, Eſter: which make in all two and twenty. Some, ſaith he, make Ruth, and the Lamentations two ſeuerall bookes, and ſo number them foure and twenty, to anſwere the foure and twenty Elders in the Reuelation: Sciamus, quicquid extra hos eſt, inter Apocrypha eſſe ponendum: Let vs knowe, that whatſoeuer booke is not among theſe, is to be placed amongſt the Apocrypha: Hieron. præfat. in lib. Regum.

The ſecond authority is of S. Cyprian: who after hee had rehearſed the Canonicall bookes, then addeth further: Sciendum eſt, quod & alij libri ſunt, qui non Canonici, ſed Eccleſiaſtici à maioribus appellati ſunt: We muſt know, that there are other bookes beſide, not Canonicall, but Eccleſiaſticall ſo called: as the wiſedome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus; the books of Tobie, Iudith, Macchabees: Cyprian, in ſymbolum.

The third authority is from the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles, where none of the Apocrypha are named amongſt the bookes of the olde Teſtament, but three books of the Macchabees only, which are not all held to be Canonicall of the Papiſts.

The fourth and moſt pregnant witneſſe is the Councell of Laodicea, in the 59. Canon: Quæ oportet legi & in authoritatem recipi, hæc ſunt: The bookes that ought to be read and receiued into authority, are theſe, and then the two and twenty bookes Canonicall are rehearſed, no mention at all being made of any of the Apocrypha. This Councell though it were prouinciall, yet is ratified by their owne

Canons, decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 11. and was confirmed in the ſixth generall Councell, Can. 2. as Gratian alſo witneſſeth, decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 7. And the Pope is ſworne to obſerue the eight generall Councels; whereof the Trullane being the ſixth is one. decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 8. And ſo it was decreed in the Councell of Conſtance, ſeſſ. 39. and in the Councell of Baſile, ſeſſ. 38. that the new elected Pope ſhould take his oath not to violate the faith of the eight generall Councels: Wherefore how is not the Pope forſworne in receiuing the Apocrypha into the number of the Canonicall Scripture, contrary to the 59. Canon of the Councel of Laodicea, which was confirmed in the ſixth Trullan, Can. 2. which Councell, and euery Canon thereof, the Pope is ſworne to obſerue: and thus the edge of their owne weapons is turned vpon their owne head.

Now in the laſt place concerning the number of the Canonicall Scriptures, let vs ſee the iudgement and conſent of other Churches, as of the Eaſt and Greeke Church, the South AEthiopike or Abyſſine Church, the reformed Churches in the Weſt, and of the teſtimonie of ſome of the Romane and Latine Church, which euidence of witneſſes I will produce throughout this worke.

The Greeke Church to this day herein followeth the iudgement of auncient Greeke Fathers, as Athanaſius in Synopſ. Greg. Nazianzene lib. de genuin. ſcriptur. Epiphan. Cyrill quoteth foure and Damaſcene, who, as Hierome before, counteth but 22. books of the old Teſtament canonicall: the other, as of Eccleſiaſticus, the Wiſdome of Salomon, he acknowledgeth to be worthie books, but they were not numbred among the propheticall writings, [illegible]. Neither were they placed in the Arke, as other Canonicall bookes were.

Lib. 4. de fide. orthod. c. 18.

The AEthiopians and Abyſſines do only hold the Hebrew Scriptures of the olde Teſtament to bee authenticall, as they teſtifie, which haue written of their religion.

Damianus a Goes de Iud. legat. artic. 11. Villamont. lib. 2. c. 23.

The reformed Churches hold the ſame number of canonicall bookes with Hierome and Damaſcene: as the confeſſion of Belgia, Artic. 3. the French Church, Artic. 4. the confeſſion of Wittenberg, Art. 30. the Engliſh Church, Art. 6. And of the Latine Church: Cliſtoneus ſubſcribeth to Damaſcene: ſee the iudgement of Caietane, Arias Montanus, Tolet before, of the Apocryphall books in generall.

THE SECOND QVESTION CONCERNING THE authenticall and moſt approoued Edition of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

WHereas it is confeſſed that the Hebrue Edition of the old Teſtament is the moſt auncient, in the which tongue the Scriptures were committed to writing by the Prophets; and that the new Teſtament was written in Greeke by the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts: yet our aduerſaries doe generally holde, as it was decreede in the Tridentine Chapter, Seſſ. 4. decret. 2. That in all ſermons, readings, diſputations, controuerſies, the vulgar Latine tranſlation ſhould be taken for authentike before the Hebrue or Greeke, and that no man ſhould preſume vpon any occaſion, to reiect it or appeale from it.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe truely affirme, that although there are diuers Editions of the olde Teſtament beſides the Hebrue, and ſome of them very auncient, as the tranſlation of the Septuagint, compiled by ſeuenty two ancients of the Iewes, at the inſtigation of Ptolomeus Philadelphus King of AEgypt, 300. yeares before Chriſt; and after Chriſt there were other tranſlations in Greeke made by Aquila Symmachus, Theodoſion, and others; alſo a Chaldee Paraphraſe compiled by the Iewes, and laſt of all diuers Latine tranſlations; the which as Auguſtine ſayth, in his time were ſo many, that they could not be numbred; and S. Hierome ſaith, Apud Latinos tot ſunt exemplaria, quot codices: The Latines haue ſo many tranſlations as bookes, præfat. in Ioſu. Yet of all the reſt the Hebrue being the moſt ancient, and the mother of the reſt, and freeſt from corruptions, ought to bee receiued as moſt authentike. And for the new Teſtament, though there be a Syriacke tranſlation very ancient, yet the Greeke ought to be preferred (being the ſame tongue wherein the Apoſtles and the Euangeliſts wrote) to be the onely authentike copie.

The queſtion then betweene our aduerſaries and vs, is not about any other tranſlation of the olde and new Teſtament, but the vulgar Latine, as it is read in their Churches and vſed amongſt them. As for the Chaldee Paraphraſe they themſelues confeſſe, that it is ſtuffed with Iewiſh fables: Bellarm. lib. 2. c. 3. And the Syriake is by him confeſſed not to be ſo ancient, as the times of Athanaſius, Epiphanius, Hierome: and therefore not to bee compared either with the Greeke or Latine tranſlation. And as for the Greeke tranſlations of the olde Teſtament, of them all the tranſlation of the Septuagint, was of greateſt account; who are ſaid to haue beene put apart in 72. celles, and to haue all agreed in their tranſlation: But S. Hierome holdeth this to be a fable, of the 72. celles, the ruines whereof a long time after were ſhewed at Alexandria, ſeeing that neither Ariſteus, who was a chiefe man about King Ptolomie, that ſet the 70. interpreters on worke, nor Ioſephus maketh any mention thereof. And as touching the interpreters themſelues, he ſaith, Aliud eſt vatem agere, aliud interpretem: It is one thing to be a Prophet, another to be an interpreter. And as for the tranſlation, he ſaith, Germana illa & antiqua tranſlatio corrupta & violata eſt: That auncient and true tranſlation of the Septuagint, is corrupted and violated, which as Hierome ſaith, was agreeable to the Hebrew: but ſo is not the Greeke copie now extant, which is full of corruptions, and ſeemeth to be a mixt and confuſed tranſlation of many: wherefore our aduerſaries doe labour to iuſtifie their Latine tranſlations: ſome of their arguments, let vs ſee.

The Papiſts.

*Arg.*1. THe Latine Church hath vſed the vulgar Latine tranſlation for the ſpace of eight hundred, or nine hundred yeares, & it is not like that the Church all this while was without the true Edition of the Scriptures. Ergo it is onely authenticall. We anſwere, firſt, by this argument it followeth that this vulgar Latine being generally vſed, was preferred before other Latine tranſlations, which were at the firſt in great number, not that therefore it is more authentike then the Hebrew in the olde, and the Greeke in the new Teſtaments. Secondly, there were other Churches beſides the Latine all this while, as amongſt the Greekes famous congregations and Churches: that bee it in the Latine Church, the vulgar tranſlation was receined being erroneous; yet the whole Church continued not in that error, which were not ſo tyed and bound to the Latine tranſlation. Thirdly, if men all this while (knowledge decreaſing, and a way being in preparing for Antichriſt) were negligent in correcting and amending the common tranſlation, this is no good argument to make it authenticall.

*Argum.*2. As the Hebrewes had an authentike tranſlation in their owne tongue, and the Grecians in theirs, why ſhould not the Latine Church haue it alſo authenticall in Latine? We anſwere, firſt, it is no good reaſon, becauſe the Lord did conſecrate the Hebrew and Greeke tongue, and therein would haue his word written, that therefore he would or ſhould alſo haue made the Latine as well authenticall, as they. Secondly, if the Latine Church muſt haue an authentike tranſlation, why ſhould not other Countries likewiſe haue their authenticals? The Armenians had the Scriptures of olde tranſlated by Chryſoſtome, the Sclauonians by Hierome, the Gothes by Vlphilas; why ſhould not theſe alſo as well be authenticall? And ſo looke into how many tongues the Scriptures ſhould be tranſlated, ſo manie authenticall tranſlations ſhould there be.

*Argum.*3. They ſay that all other tranſlations which are come forth ſince, are erroneous, and much differ amongſt themſelues. Anſw. Firſt, this is no reaſon to prefer it before the Hebrew and Greeke, though it were better then all other tranſlations. Secondly, they charge vs falſly, that our tranſlations are diſſonant and erroneous: for their diſagreement is not in ſuch ſubſtantiall points, and where any of them doe ſwarue from the originall, we allow them not: and yet there is not the meaneſt of them, but may iuſtly compare with theirs, yea and bee preferred before it. Thirdly, if their tranſlation were ſo pure, as they ſay Beza himſelfe maketh it, hee would not haue ſet forth a new Edition: and hee preferreth it in ſome places before other tranſlations, but is farre off from making it authenticall, and ſo are we.

*Argum.*4. The Hebrew Text of the olde Teſtament in many places is impure and corrupt, and the Apoſtles diuers times in citing the olde Scriptures, doe follow the Septuagint, and not the Hebrew. Ergo it is not authenticall. Bellarmine to proue the Hebrew to bee corrupt, giueth an inſtance of fiue places: the three principall I will ſet downe: firſt, Iſai 9. the Latine hath, his name ſhall be called wonderfull: In the Hebrew, vocabit nomen eius, he ſhall call his name, which Caluine himſelfe confeſſeth, not to be ſo good a reading. Anſwer. Firſt, there is no great difference in the ſenſe, to ſay his name ſhall be called, or hee or they ſhall call his name: for it is obſerued by the learned in this tongue, that verbs of the third perſon are often taken imperſonally among the Hebrewes, ſic Vatablus. Secondly, the ſame letters in the Hebrew doe ſerue for both theſe words, the alteration is in the pricks or points: which as Bellarmine himſelfe ſaith, Extrinſecus addita ſunt, nec mutant textum, were added outwardly, that is, by other writers and interpreters of Scripture, and doe not change the text, which conſiſteth of the letters, not of the poynts. Secondly, he obiecteth that place, Pſal. 21.16. the Latine hath, foderunt manus, they pierced my hands: but the Hebrew is, not Caru, they pierced, but Caari, tanquam leo, as a lyon: but the former reading of all Chriſtians is approued.

Anſwer. Firſt, this is the onely place of moment, which can be obiected: Bellarmine alſo here doth furniſh vs with an anſwere: that theſe two words being ſo like in ſound, and in the characters might eaſily be miſtaken either by the negligence of the writers and pen-men, or by the Rabbins, whom ſome thinke firſt to haue added the prickes. 2. Diuers learned men of both ſides doe teſtifie, that there be many Hebrew copies to be found, which haue Caru, not Caari: *ſic Andradius, Galatinus: Ioannes Iſaachus lib.*2. cont. Lindan.

The third place is that, Pſal. 19. where the Latine hath, as S. Paul doth cite the place, Their ſound is gone forth: but the Hebrew ſaith, their line is gone forth. Anſwer. Indeede the Hebrew word ſo ſignifieth, but the Septuagint, whom the Apoſtles follow, doe interpret according to the ſenſe: for the glorious workmanſhip of the heauens, as with a noiſe or ſound doth ring in euery mans eare, and ſet forth the power of God, as Iob ſaith, How little a portion doe we heare of him, and who can vnderſtand the thunder of his power? Iob 26.14. The works of God doe as it were thunder out the power of God. And this reading, for line to put ſound, agreeth vnto the next words following, And their words vnto the end of the world: Which being prophetically ſpoken of the preaching of the Apoſtles, S. Paul ſo alleageth that place, hauing reſpect to the accompliſhment of the prophecie. But this is no good argument to iuſtifie the Latine tranſlation before the Hebrew, becauſe the Latine followeth the Septuagint, which the Apoſtle approueth: for firſt, by this reaſon alſo the Septuagint ſhould be authenticall, which Iob 26.14.

they themſelues will not graunt. Secondly, S. Hierome ſheweth the cauſe, why the Apoſtles ſometimes followed the Septuagint: Vbicunq; loquuntur ad populos, his teſtimonijs vtuntur, quæ iam fuerant in gentibus diuulgata: So often as they ſpeake to the people, they vſe ſuch teſtimonies, as were commonly knowne amongſt the Heathen: as the tranſlation of the 70. was. Another reaſon thereof was, that when the Apoſtles alleage any teſtimonie out of the olde Teſtament, non verba ſecutos eſſe, ſed ſenſum: that they follow not ſo much the words, as the ſenſe; and therefore where the Septuagint keepe the ſenſe, though not the words, the Apoſtles doe not refuſe them, becauſe the tranſlation was ſo well knowne, as in this place now in queſtion: Sed vbi 70. ab Hebraeis diſcrepant, But where the 70. doe differ from the Hebrew, the Apoſtles expreſſe the Hebrew ſenſe, &c.

Hieron. Algaſ. quæſt. 2.

We anſwere further: firſt, that the Ieſuite hath not proued, nor yet is euer able to proue the Hebrew fountaines to be corrupt: For by whom is it like the Scriptures ſhould haue beene corrupted? not by the Iewes, as Gregorie thus ſheweth: for either the Iewes before Chriſt ſhould haue corrupted them, then Chriſt would not haue ſuffered them to goe vnreproued; and bidding the people to ſearch the Scriptures, he would haue giuen ſome caueat to take heede of their corruptions: or elſe the Iewes ſince Chriſt ſhould haue played this falſe play: but that is not ſo, becauſe the moſt euident propheſies alleged by Chriſt and the Apoſtles, touching the Meſſiah, are found in their bookes. To this purpoſe Hierome alleageth out of Origene. Adde hereunto that teſtimonie of Philo, as he is cited by Euſebius: Iudaeum centies potius moriturum, &c. That a Iew would rather die an hundred times, then ſuffer the law to be changed in any one point. Neither could the Hebrew Scriptures be corrupted by any other, becauſe our bookes doe agree with the authenticall copies which the Iewes haue. Secondly, where they are faultie, it is to be imputed to the negligence, or vnskilfulneſſe of thoſe through whoſe hands they haue paſſed, and no otherwiſe. Thirdly, that the Apoſtles alleaged the Septuagint, it maketh not for the Latine, and they alleaged it not as better then the Hebrew, but becauſe the Greeke tongue was then more vniuerſally knowne. Fourthly, neither did the Apoſtles in citing Scripture alwaies, tye themſelues to the vulgar Septuagint: as for example ſake may appeare in thoſe places, Mica. 5. 2. cited Mat. 2. 6. Ierem. 31. 13. cited Mat. 2. 18. Eſay 9. 2. alleaged Mat. 4. 15. 16. Eſay 42. 1. rehearſed Mat. 12. 18. but the Apoſtles as they being directed with the ſpirit, were able to write Scripture, ſo alſo to recite and alleage Scripture. Fifthly, for thoſe fiue places which the Ieſuit ſaith are faultie in the Hebrew, we are able to ſhew almoſt fifty times fiue places in the Latine, and therefore by this reaſon they haue gained nothing. Theſe are the Ieſuites arguments, de verb. dei lib. 2. cap. 10. and ſome of our Rhemiſts in their preface to the new Teſtament.

Euzeb. lib. 8. cap. 2. de præp. Euangel.

Bellarmine alſo taketh the like exception againſt the Greeke of the new Teſtament, ſhewing in ſome places, that the Latine text is leſſe corrupt. Firſt, ſaith he, 1. Cor. 15. 47. the Greeke hath, the ſecond man is, the Lord from heauen: the Latine more truly, is from heauen heauenly.

Lib. 2. de verbo, cap. 7.

Anſ. 1 How can the trueth of the Latine be tried, but by the Greeke, out of the which it was tranſlated? which being more ancient, muſt firſt be beleeued. 2. The firſt reading is moſt agreeable to the text, and ſo readeth Damaſcen lib. 3. de fide. cap. 12. prouing by this place Chriſt to be God, and man; which could not be ſo well gathered, if we ſhould not reade, The Lord from heauen. 3. The Syriake tranſlation alloweth the firſt reading according to the Greeke.

Secondly, 1. Cor. 7. 33. the Greeke hath, there is a difference betweene a wife and a virgin, or they are diuided: the Latine much better, ioyneth it to the verſe before, the man that is maried, is diuided, that is, diſtracted about many things.

Anſ. 1. The former reading is approued by the Syriake tranſlation, by Theophylact, and Baſil, as Beza ſheweth vpon this place: and S. Hierome alloweth it writing againſt Heluidius, though elſewhere he diſſent from himſelfe. 2. It is more agreeable to the text, for the Apoſtle ſheweth how they are diuided: The vnmaried careth for the Lord, the maried for the things of the world.

Thirdly, Rom. 11. 12. the Greeke hath, ſeruing the time, καιρῷ the Latine much better κυρίῳ ſeruing the Lord.

Anſ. The beſt Greeke copies haue alſo κυρίῳ, ſeruing the Lord, as appeareth in the Syriake tranſlation: and who ſeeth not, that it might rather be a ſcape of the writer, taking one word for another, then a fault in the text. Thus we ſee that Bellarmine by theſe exceptions hath gained nothing for the Latine, nor yet empaired the credit of the Greeke. And be it granted, that ſome ouerſights might be committed through the ignorance of the Scribes and Notaries, yet the authoritie of the originall is ſound ſtill: and for one ſcape in the Greeke, it is an eaſie matter to ſhew twentie in the Latine.

The Proteſtants.

Argum. 1. IF the Latine tranſlation bee authenticall, as it was decreed in the Councell of Trent, then it muſt haue beene ſo from the beginning, ſo ſoone as there was any Latine tranſlation: for the Councell had not authoritie to make that authenticall, which was not, but onely to declare it ſo to be. But the Latine tranſlation, for the ſpace of 600. yeeres after Chriſt, was not receiued as authenticall: for we find that the Latine writers, as Lactantius, Hilarius, Ambroſius, Hieronymus, Auguſtinus, and others, did not vſe the ſame Latine tranſlation: Ergo, this vulgar Latine hauing not been alwaies, ſince it was extant, authenticall, neither ought it to be now.

Argumen. 2. That edition which was made, and framed, and firſt written by the Prophets, Apoſtles, Euangeliſts, is to be prefered before that, which was not ſo written by any Prophet or Apoſtle.

Contra. 1. The two yeares can not beginne from the time of the prophanation of the Temple which was more then three yeares from the 145. yeare the 15. of Chaſleu. 1. Macchab. 1.57. to the 148. yeare the 25. of Chaſleu. chap. 4.52. And whereas the moſt Greeke Copies read fortie yeares and fiue moneths, this number can haue no reference to the time of the prophanation: for the Temple was purged the ſame day of the moneth, euen the 25. of Chaſleu, 2. Macchab. 10. 6. Vpon the which day of the moneth it had beene before polluted. 1. Macchab. 1. 62. then can there not bee fiue moneths aboue the euen yeares.

2. Neither the vulgar Latine nor the Greeke originall doe ſo diſtinguiſh and diuide the date from the Epiſtle: and it is vnlike that the former Epiſtle making mention of the deliuerance of the people vnder Demetrius in the yeare 169. ſhould beare date 19. yeares after the yeare 188. and deferre ſo long the keeping of their feaſt, in remembrance of their deliuerance? beſide what a prepoſterous courſe were this, firſt to ſet downe an Epiſtle dated anno. 188. and afterward to bring in an Epiſtle written by Iudas 36. yeares before: neither is the date of Epiſtles alwaies added in the end, ſometime it is prefixed in the beginning as 1. Macchab. 14.27. Wherefore it is euident that he which wrote this ſecond book differeth much from the hiſtory of the firſt, which is written more iudiciouſly for the truth and more adiuſedly and prudently for the circumſtance of time, in both which this variable and vncertaine writer fayleth.

6. Laſtly, 2. Macchab. c. 14. v. 42. Razis is commended for killing of himſelfe, contrary to the Scripture. Bellarmine anſwereth, that he is commended not for his godly, but manfull act: he is ſaid to haue died manfully.

Anſw. 1. The word is εὐγενῶς, nobly, valiantly: which very word is vſed, Act. 17. 11. where the Diſciples of Berœa are ſaid to be more noble, then they of Theſſalonica, that is, more religious and godly: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, godlineſſe is great riches, ſo is it true nobility: neither ſhall any man finde any nobilitie in Scripture to be commended without godlines. Wherefore this author, if hee ſpeake according to the phraſe of Scripture, commending nobility, meaneth alſo godlineſſe; otherwiſe, as Auguſtine ſaith, Sic fortes laudare ſolet hiſtoria gentium: The hiſtories of the Gentiles doe vſe ſo to commend the valour of their men. 2. Auguſtine, when the Donatiſts alleaged the example of Razis in defence of their madneſſe, which killed themſelues, thus doubteth not to anſwer, denying the authorie of the booke: Non habent Iudæi hunc librum, ſicut Moſis & Prophetarum: The Iewes doe not account of this booke, as of Moſes and the Prophets, Lib. 2. cont. Gaudent. ad cap. 24.

And that the authority of theſe bookes hath alwaies beene vncertaine it may appeare: for that the number of them is not agreed vpon, ſome making but one, ſome two, ſome three Canonicall: Gelaſius in his Canon, holdeth but one of the Macchabees Canonicall: the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles reciteth three Canonicall bookes, the Papiſts generally hold but two: and thus our aduerſaries owne authorities doe not make for them.

Thus haue we ſeene in particular, what credit is to be giuen to theſe Apocriphall books, that they are not to be receiued into the Canon of the Scripture: and now of them all in generall, that they are not to be held to be any part of the Scripture, beſide the arguments before ſet downe, we haue foure moſt euident teſtimonies of antiquity.

The firſt of S. Hierome; who bringeth all the Canonicall bookes to the number of the Hebrue Alphabet, making them but two and twenty in all: for as, ſaith he, there are but two and twenty Hebrue letters, whereby a man learneth to ſpeake, and expreſſe his minde; ſo are there ſo many bookes of Scripture, whereby we are trained vp to holy knowledge. And theſe are the bookes: fiue of Moſes, Geneſis, Exodus, Leuiticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy: eight of the Prophets, Ioſua, the Iudges with Ruth, Samuel, the Kings, Eſaias, Ieremias, Ezechiel, the ſmall Prophets: then nine, which he calleth, Hagiographa, holy writings: as Iob, the Pſalmes, the Prouerbs, Eccleſiaſtes, the Canticles, Daniel, the Chronicles, Eſra, with Nehemiah, Eſter: which make in all two and twenty. Some, ſaith he, make Ruth, and the Lamentations two ſeuerall bookes, and ſo number them foure and twenty, to anſwere the foure and twenty Elders in the Reuelation: Sciamus, quicquid extra hos eſt, inter Apocrypha eſſe ponendum: Let vs knowe, that whatſoeuer booke is not among theſe, is to be placed amongſt the Apocrypha: Hieron. præfat. in lib. Regum.

The ſecond authority is of S. Cyprian: who after hee had rehearſed the Canonicall bookes, then addeth further: Sciendum eſt, quod & alij libri ſunt, qui non Canonici, ſed Eccleſiaſtici à maioribus appellati ſunt: We muſt know, that there are other bookes beſide, not Canonicall, but Eccleſiaſticall ſo called: as the wiſedome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus; the books of Tobie, Iudith, Macchabees: Cyprian, in ſymbolum.

The third authority is from the 84. Canon of the Apoſtles, where none of the Apocrypha are named amongſt the bookes of the olde Teſtament, but three books of the Macchabees only, which are not all held to be Canonicall of the Papiſts.

The fourth and moſt pregnant witneſſe is the Councell of Laodicea, in the 59. Canon: Quæ oportet legi & in authoritatem recipi, hæc ſunt: The bookes that ought to be read and receiued into authority, are theſe, and then the two and twenty bookes Canonicall are rehearſed, no mention at all being made of any of the Apocrypha. This Councell though it were prouinciall, yet is ratified by their owne

Canons, decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 11. and was confirmed in the ſixth generall Councell, Can. 2. as Gratian alſo witneſſeth, decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 7. And the Pope is ſworne to obſerue the eyght generall Councels, whereof the Trullane being the ſixth is one, decr. p. 1. diſt. 16. c. 8. And ſo it was decreed in the Councell of Conſtance, ſeſſ. 39. and in the Councell of Baſile, ſeſſ. 38. that the new elected Pope ſhould take his oath not to violate the faith of the eight generall Councels: Wherefore how is not the Pope forſworne in receiuing the Apocrypha into the number of the Canonicall Scripture, contrary to the 59. Canon of the Councel of Laodicea, which was confirmed in the ſixth Trullan, Can. 2. which Councell, and euery Canon thereof, the Pope is ſworne to obſerue: and thus the edge of their owne weapons is turned vpon their owne head.

Now in the laſt place concerning the number of the Canonicall Scriptures, let vs ſee the iudgement and conſent of other Churches, as of the Eaſt and Greeke Church, the South AEthiopike or Abyſsine Church, the reformed Churches in the Weſt, and of the teſtimonie of ſome of the Romane and Latine Church, which euidence of witneſſes I will produce throughout this worke.

The Greeke Church to this day herein followeth the iudgement of auncient Greeke Fathers, as Athanaſius in Synopſ. Greg. Nazianzene lib. de genuin. ſcriptur. Epiphan. Cyrill quoteth foure: and Damaſcene, who, as Hierome before, counteth but 22. books of the old Teſtament canonicall: the other, as of Eccleſiaſticus, the Wiſdome of Salomon, he acknowledgeth to be worthie books, but they were not numbred among the propheticall writings, [illegible] Neither were they placed in the Arke, as other Canonicall bookes were. Lib.4.de fide. orthod.c.18.

The AEthiopians and Abyſsines do only hold the Hebrew Scriptures of the olde Teſtament to bee authenticall, as they teſtifie, which haue written of their religion. Damianus a Goes de Iud. legat. artic. 11. Villamont. lib. 2.c.23.

The reformed Churches hold the ſame number of canonicall bookes with Hierome and Damaſcene: as the confeſſion of Belgia, Artic. 3. the French Church, Artic. 4. the confeſſion of Wittenberg. Art. 30. the Engliſh Church, Art. 6. And of the Latine Church; Clictoueus ſubſcribeth to Damaſcene: ſee the iudgement of Caietane, Arias Montanus, Tolet before, of the Apocryphall books in generall. Annot. in 18. lib.4. THE SECOND QVESTION CONCERNING THE authenticall and moſt approoued Edition of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

2.Error. WHereas it is confeſſed that the Hebrue Edition of the old Teſtament is the moſt auncient, in the which tongue the Scriptures were committed to writing by the Prophets; and that the new Teſtament was written in Greeke by the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts: yet our aduerſaries doe generally holde, as it was decreede in the Tridentine Chapter, Seſſ. 4. decret. 2: That in all ſermons, readings, diſputations, controuerſies, the vulgar Latine tranſlation ſhould be taken for authentike before the Hebrue or Greeke, and that no man ſhould preſume vpon any occaſion, to reiect it or appeale from it.

The Proteſtant.

WE doe truely affirme, that although there are diuers Editions of the olde Teſtament beſides the Hebrue, and ſome of them very auncient, as the tranſlation of the Septuagint, compiled by ſeuenty two ancients of the Iewes, at the inſtigation of Ptolomæus Philadelphus King of AEgypt, 300. yeares before Chriſt; and after Chriſt there were other tranſlations in Greeke made by Aquila Symmachus, Theodoſion, and others; alſo a Chaldee Paraphraſe compiled by the Iewes, and laſt of all diuers Latine tranſlations; the which as Auguſtine ſayth, in his time were ſo many, that they could not be numbred; and S. Hierome ſaith, Apud Latinos tot ſunt exemplaria, quot codices: The Latines haue ſo many tranſlations as bookes, præfat. in Ioſu: Yet of all the reſt the Hebrue being the moſt ancient, and the mother of the reſt, and freeſt from corruptions, ought to bee receiued as moſt authentike. And for the new Teſtament, though there be a Syriacke tranſlation very ancient, yet the Greeke ought to be preferred (being the ſame tongue wherein the Apoſtles and the Euangeliſts wrote) to be the onely authentike copie.

The queſtion then betweene our aduerſaries and vs, is not about any other tranſlation of the olde and new Teſtament, but the vulgar Latine, as it is read in their Churches and vſed amongſt them. As for the Chaldee Paraphraſe they themſelues confeſſe, that it is ſtuffed with Iewiſh fables: Bellarm. lib. 2. c. 3. And the Syriake is by him confeſſed not to be ſo ancient, as the times of Athanaſius, Epiphanius, Hierome: and therefore not to bee compared either with the Greeke or Latine tranſlation. And as for the Greeke tranſlations of the olde Teſtament, of them all the tranſlation of the Septuagint, was of greateſt account; who are ſaid to haue beene put apart in 72. celles, and to haue all agreed in their tranſlation: But S. Hierome holdeth this to be a fable, of the 72. celles, the ruines whereof a long time after were ſhewed at Alexandria, ſeeing that neither Ariſtæus, who was a chiefe man about King Ptolomie, that ſet the 70. interpreters on worke, nor Ioſephus maketh any mention thereof. Apolog. 2. in Ruffin. And as touching the interpreters themſelues, he ſaith, Aliud eſt vatem eſſe, aliud interpretem: It is one thing to be a Prophet, another to be an interpreter. And as for the tranſlation, he ſaith, Germana illa & antiqua tranſlatio corrupta & violata eſt: That auncient and true tranſlation of the Septuagint, is corrupted and violated, which as Hierome ſaith, was agreeable to the Hebrew: but ſo is not the Greeke copie now extant, which is full of corruptions, and ſeemeth to be a mixt and confuſed tranſlation of many: wherefore our aduerſaries doe labour to iuſtifie their Latine tranſlations: ſome of their arguments, let vs ſee.

The Papiſts.

Arg. 1. THe Latine Church hath vſed the vulgar Latine tranſlation for the ſpace of eight hundred, or nine hundred yeares, & it is not like that the Church all this while was without the true Edition of the Scriptures. Ergo it is onely authenticall. We anſwere, firſt, by this argument it followeth that this vulgar Latine being generally vſed, was preferred before other Latine tranſlations, which were at the firſt in great number, not that therefore it is more authentike then the Hebrew in the olde, and the Greeke in the new Teſtaments. Secondly, there were other Churches beſides the Latine all this while, as amongſt the Greekes famous congregations and Churches: that bee it in the Latine Church, the vulgar tranſlation was reteined being erroneous; yet the whole Church continued not in that error, which were not ſo tyed and bound to the Latine tranſlation. Thirdly, if men all this while (knowledge decreaſing, and a way being in preparing for Antichriſt) were negligent in correcting and amending the common tranſlation, this is no good argument to make it authenticall.

Argum. 2. As the Hebrewes had an authentike tranſlation in their owne tongue, and the Grecians in theirs, why ſhould not the Latine Church haue it alſo authenticall in Latine? We anſwere, firſt, it is no good reaſon, becauſe the Lord did conſecrate the Hebrew and Greeke tongue, and therein would haue his word written, that therefore he would or ſhould alſo haue made the Latine as well authenticall, as they. Secondly, if the Latine Church muſt haue an authentike tranſlation, why ſhould not other Countries likewiſe haue their authenticals? The Armenians had the Scriptures of olde tranſlated by Chryſoſtome, the Sclauonians by Hierome, the Gothes by Vlphilas; why ſhould not theſe alſo as well be authenticall? And ſo looke into how many tongues the Scriptures ſhould be tranſlated, ſo manie authenticall tranſlations ſhould there be.

Argum. 3. They ſay that all other tranſlations which are come forth ſince, are erroneous, and much differ amongſt themſelues. Anſw. Firſt, this is no reaſon to prefer it before the Hebrew and Greeke, though it were better then all other tranſlations. Secondly, they charge vs falſly, that our tranſlations are diſſonant and erroneous: for their diſagreement is not in ſuch ſubſtantiall points, and where any of them doe ſwarue from the originall, we allow them not: and yet there is not the meaneſt of them, but may iuſtly compare with theirs, yea and bee preferred before it. Thirdly, if their tranſlation were ſo pure, as they ſay Beza himſelfe maketh it, hee would not haue ſet forth a new Edition: and hee preferreth it in ſome places before other tranſlations, but is farre off from making it authenticall, and ſo are we.

Argum. 4. The Hebrew Text of the olde Teſtament in many places is impure and corrupt, and the Apoſtles diuers times in citing the olde Scriptures, doe follow the Septuagint, and not the Hebrew. Ergo it is not authenticall. Bellarmine to proue the Hebrew to bee corrupt, giueth an inſtance of fiue places: the three principall I will ſet downe: firſt, Iſai 9. the Latine hath, his name ſhall be called wonderfull: In the Hebrew, vocabit nomen eius, he ſhall call his name, which Calvine himſelfe confeſſeth, not to be ſo good a reading. Anſwer. Firſt, there is no great difference in the ſenſe, to ſay his name ſhall be called, or hee or they ſhall call his name: for it is obſerued by the learned in this tongue, that verbs of the third perſon are often taken imperſonally among the Hebrewes, ſic Vatablus. Secondly, the ſame letters in the Hebrew doe ſerue for both theſe words, the alteration is in the pricks or points: which as Bellarmine himſelfe ſaith, Extrinſecus addita ſunt, nec mutant textum, were added outwardly, that is, by other writers and interpreters of Scripture, and doe not change the text, which conſiſteth of the letters, not of the poynts. Secondly, he obiecteth that place, Pſal. 21. 16. the Latine hath, foderunt manus, they pierced my hands: but the Hebrew is, not Caru, they pierced, but Caari, tanquam leo, as a lyon: but the former reading of all Chriſtians is approued.

Anſwer. Firſt, this is the onely place of moment, which can be obiected: Bellarmine alſo here doth furniſh vs with an anſwere: that theſe two words being ſo like in ſound, and in the characters might eaſily be miſtaken either by the negligence of the writers and pen-men, or by the Rabbins, whom ſome thinke firſt to haue added the prickes. 2. Diuers learned men of both ſides doe teſtifie, that there be many Hebrew copies to be found, which haue Caru, not Caari: ſic Andradius, Galatinus: Ioannes Iſaachus lib. 2. cont. Lindan.

The third place is that, Pſal. 19. where the Latine hath, as S. Paul doth cite the place, Their ſound is gone forth: but the Hebrew ſaith, their line is gone forth. Anſwer. Indeede the Hebrew word ſo ſignifieth, but the Septuagint, whom the Apoſtles follow, doe interpret according to the ſenſe: for the glorious workmanſhip of the heauens, as with a noiſe or ſound doth ring in euery mans eare, and ſet forth the power of God, as Iob ſaith, How little a portion doe we heare of him, and who can underſtand the thunder of his power? Iob 26. 14. The works of God doe as it were thunder out the power of God. And this reading, for line to put ſound, agreeth vnto the next words following, And their words vnto the end of the world: Which being prophetically ſpoken of the preaching of the Apoſtles, S. Paul ſo alleageth that place, hauing reſpect to the accompliſhment of the prophecie. But this is no good argument to iuſtifie the Latine tranſlation before the Hebrew, becauſe the Latine followeth the Septuagint, which the Apoſtle approueth: for firſt, by this reaſon alſo the Septuagint ſhould be authenticall, which Iob 26.14.

they themſelues will not graunt. Secondly, S. Hierome ſheweth the cauſe, why the Apoſtles ſometimes followed the Septuagint: Vbicunq; loquuntur ad populos, his teſtimonijs vtuntur, quæ iam fuerant in gentibus diuulgata: So often as they ſpeake to the people, they vſe ſuch teſtimonies, as were commonly knowne amongſt the Heathen: as the tranſlation of the 70. was. Another reaſon thereof was, that when the Apoſtles alleage any teſtimonie out of the olde Teſtament, non verba ſecutos eſſe, ſed ſenſum: that they follow not ſo much the words, as the ſenſe: and therefore where the Septuagint keepe the ſenſe, though not the words, the Apoſtles doe not refuſe them, becauſe the tranſlation was ſo well knowne, as in this place now in queſtion: Sed vbi 70. ab Hebraïs diſcrepant, But where the 70. doe differ from the Hebrew, the Apoſtles expreſſe the Hebrew ſenſe, &c.

Euzeb. lib. 8. cap. 2. de præp. Euangel.

We anſwere further: firſt, that the Ieſuite hath not proued, nor yet is euer able to proue the Hebrew fountaines to be corrupt: For by whom is it like the Scriptures ſhould haue beene corrupted? not by the Iewes, as Gregorie thus ſheweth: for either the Iewes before Chriſt ſhould haue corrupted them, then Chriſt would not haue ſuffered them to goe vnreproued; and bidding the people to ſearch the Scriptures, he would haue giuen ſome caueat to take heede of their corruptions: or elſe the Iewes ſince Chriſt ſhould haue played this falſe play: but that is not ſo, becauſe the moſt euident propheſies alleaged by Chriſt and the Apoſtles, touching the Meſſiah, are found in their bookes. To this purpoſe Hierome alleageth out of Origene. Adde hereunto that teſtimonie of Philo, as he is cited by Euſebius: Iudæum centies potius moriturum, &c. That a Iew would rather die an hundred times, then ſuffer the law to be changed in any one point. Neither could the Hebrew Scriptures be corrupted by any other, becauſe our bookes doe agree with the authenticall copies which the Iewes haue. Secondly, where they are faultie, it is to be imputed to the negligence, or vnskilfulneſſe of thoſe through whoſe hands they haue paſſed, and no otherwiſe. Thirdly, that the Apoſtles alleaged the Septuagint, it maketh not for the Latine, and they alleaged it not as better then the Hebrew, but becauſe the Greeke tongue was then more vniuerſally knowne. Fourthly, neither did the Apoſtles in citing Scripture alwaies, tye themſelues to the vulgar Septuagint: as for example ſake may appeare in thoſe places, Mica. 5. 2. cited Mat. 2. 6. Ierem. 31. 13. cited Mat. 2. 18. Eſay 9. 2. alleaged Mat. 4. 15. 16. Eſay 42. 1. rehearſed Mat. 12. 18. but the Apoſtles as they being directed with the ſpirit, were able to write Scripture, ſo alſo to recite and alleage Scripture. Fifthly, for thoſe fiue places which the Ieſuit ſaith are faultie in the Hebrew, we are able to ſhew almoſt fifty times fiue places in the Latine, and therefore by this reaſon they haue gained nothing. Theſe are the Ieſuites arguments, de verb. dei lib. 2. cap. 10. and ſome of our Rhemiſts in their preface to the new Teſtament.

Lib. 2. de verbo, cap. 7.

Bellarmine alſo taketh the like exception againſt the Greeke of the new Teſtament, ſhewing in ſome places, that the Latine text is leſſe corrupt. Firſt, ſaith he, 1. Cor. 15. 47. the Greeke hath, the ſecond man is, the Lord from heauen: the Latine more truly, is from heauen heauenly.

Anſ. 1 How can the trueth of the Latine be tried, but by the Greeke, out of the which it was tranſlated? which being more ancient, muſt firſt be beleeued. 2. The firſt reading is moſt agreeable to the text, and ſo readeth Damaſcen lib. 3. de fide. cap. 12. prouing by this place Chriſt to be God, and man; which could not be ſo well gathered, if we ſhould not reade, The Lord from heauen. 3. The Syriake tranſlation alloweth the firſt reading according to the Greeke.

Secondly, 1. Cor. 7. 33. the Greeke hath, there is a difference betweene a wife and a virgin, or they are diuided: the Latine much better, ioyneth it to the verſe before, the man that is maried, is diuided, that is, diſtracted about many things.

Anſ. 1. The former reading is approued by the Syriake tranſlation, by Theophylact, and Baſill, as Beza ſheweth vpon this place: and S. Hierome alloweth it writing againſt Heluidius, though elſewhere he diſſent from himſelfe. 2. It is more agreeable to the text, for the Apoſtle ſheweth how they are diuided: The vnmaried careth for the Lord, the maried for the things of the world.

Thirdly, Rom. 11. 12. the Greeke hath, ſeruing the time, καιρῷ the Latine much better κυρίῳ, ſeruing the Lord.

Anſ. The beſt Greeke copies haue alſo κυρίῳ, ſeruing the Lord, as appeareth in the Syriake tranſlation: and who ſeeth not, that it might rather be a ſcape of the writer, taking one word for another, then a fault in the text. Thus we ſee that Bellarmine by theſe exceptions hath gained nothing for the Latine, nor yet empaired the credit of the Greeke. And be it granted, that ſome ouerſights might be committed through the ignorance of the Scribes and Notaries, yet the authoritie of the originall is ſound ſtill: and for one ſcape in the Greeke, it is an eaſie matter to ſhew twentie in the Latine.

The Proteſtants.

Argum. 1. IF the Latine tranſlation bee authenticall, as it was decreed in the Councell of Trent, then it muſt haue beene ſo from the beginning, ſo ſoone as there was any Latine tranſlation: for the Councell had not authoritie to make that authenticall, which was not, but onely to declare it ſo to be. But the Latine tranſlation, for the ſpace of 600. yeeres after Chriſt, was not receiued as authenticall: for we find that the Latine writers, as Lactantius, Hilarius, Ambroſius, Hieronymus, Auguſtinus, and others, did not vſe the ſame Latine tranſlation: Ergo, this vulgar Latine hauing not been alwaies, ſince it was extant, authenticall, neither ought it to be now.

Argumen. 2. That edition which was made, and framed, and firſt written by the Prophets, Apoſtles, Euangeliſts, is to be prefered before that, which was not ſo written by any Prophet or Apoſtle.

But ſuch are the Hebrew in the old Teſtament, and the Greeke edition in the new, by the confeſſion of our aduerſaries, Bellarmin.cap.7.lib.2. Such is not the Latine, for it is vncertaine by whom it was written: for the Ieſuite confeſſeth that it is not all of Hieromes edition: as the booke of the Pſalmes, Wiſedome, Eccleſiaſticus, the Macchabees, which they thinke were not tranſlated by Hierome. But let vs grant that the whole was of Hieromes doing, yet was he no Prophet nor Apoſtle: ſaith he, aliud eſt vatem eſſe, aliud interpretem: It is one thing to be a Prophet, another to be an interpreter. Wherefore it is no reaſon, that Hieromes, or whoſe tranſlation elſe ſo euer ſhould be receiued before the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles.

But ſay our aduerſaries, if we had a perfect copie of the Hebrew and Greeke editions, wee confeſſe they were to be preferred: but now they are full of faults, and greatly corrupted. Wee anſwere: firſt, the Ieſuite himſelfe diſputing againſt Canus and Lindanus, two Archpapiſts, that though there may be ſome ſcapes in the tranſlations by the fault of ſome Libraries and imperfect copies, yet concerning the doctrine of faith and manners, ſaith, there is no corruption in them, lib.2.cap.2. Secondly, though there may be, and are, ſome words falſly written, and by error thruſt into the text, yet they ſhall neuer proue that they are more corrupt, the Hebrew and Greeke, then the Latine: for it followeth no more, that becauſe of ſome ſcapes the Latine is to be preferred before them, then that a cloake altogether patched and ragged, is better then a cloake of veluet that hath but one piece.

Argum.3. The Ieſuite himſelfe, and other Papiſts confeſſe, that in ſome caſes it is very neceſſarie to haue recourſe to the originall: as when ſome word ſeemeth to be miſtaken by the writer, as where cecinit is read for cecidit: dorix, for vorax: cor, for coram: or when the Latine copies doe varie, as Ioſ.5. ſome Latine bookes haue, Quibus iurauit, vt oſtenderet eis terram, vnto whom hee ſware that he would ſhew them the land: that hee would not ſay ſome other, and this (ſaith Bellarmine) is the truer reading being agreeable to the Hebrew. Thirdly, when the ſentence is ambiguous, as Luke 2. Pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis, Peace vnto men of good will: the originall ſheweth, that (good will) is to be referred to peace: peace or good will vnto men, not vnto men of good will. Fourthly, and laſtly, the force and propertie of the words is better vnderſtood in the originall, Bellarm.lib.2.cap.11. Ergo, by the Ieſuites confeſſion, the originall or fountaines are more certaine and ſure without doubtfulneſſe and ambiguitie, therefore more authenticall then the Latine.

Argum.4. S. Hierome himſelfe findeth fault in diuers places with the vulgar Latine, as it now ſtandeth: and therefore it is not authenticall, nor yet any of Hieromes tranſlation.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that all the olde Teſtament, beſide the Pſalmes, the Wiſedome of Salomon, Eccleſiaſticus, the Macchabees, are of Hieromes tranſlating, and that theſe reaſons may be giuen, why notwithſtanding there are ſome places remaining in the tranſlation, which Hierome found fault with. Firſt, through the negligence of the Notaries. Secondly, becauſe of the diuers acceptions of the Hebrew words, Hierome ſometime taking one ſignification, ſometime another. Thirdly, becauſe Hierome might afterwards correct and amend the place himſelfe, otherwiſe, then he firſt found fault.

Anſ. I will now produce ſome few places out of Hieromes tranſlation, wherein none of theſe former ſhifts ſhall ſerue their turne.

Matth.5.22. S. Hierome readeth: he that is angry with his brother without a cauſe, licet (ſaith he) in pleriſque Latinis codicibus, ſine cauſa, additum non ſit, though in many Latine bookes, this (without a cauſe) is not added: and ſo is it left out in the vulgar Latine.

Hieron. Amando.

Matth.6.34. Hierome readeth, ſufficient for the day is, afflictio, the affliction or griefe thereof; rather, then malitia, the malice thereof, as in the vulgar Latine.

Hieron. Minerio.

1.Cor.15.51. This (ſaith he) which is read in the Latine, Wee ſhall all riſe, but not all be changed, is not found in the Greeke: yet ſo readeth the Latine.

Dial.1.aduerſ. Pelagian.

2.Chron.35. Ioſias was buried in Mauſolæo patrum, in the Mauſoleum or tombe of his fathers; ſo readeth the vulgar Latine: but Hierome ſaith, Iſta vox profana, & gentilis: This is a prophane, and heatheniſh terme.

Ibid.

1.Tim.3.2. Hierome readeth, qui poſſit docere, that is able to teach: the vulgar, a Doctor, or teacher, or docilis, teachable: which Hierome in the ſame place calleth, Latinam ſimplicitatem, the ſimplicitie or ignorance of the Latine tranſlator.

In theſe places alleaged, the tranſlation whereof Hierome reproueth, it may eaſily appeare, that the fault was neither in the Notarie or pen-man, nor yet is the diuers ſignification of the word the cauſe; neither did Hierome correct his iudgement afterward, reſtoring that to the firſt reading which he had corrected: as may appeare moſt ſufficiently by this one place, Rom.12.3. where he ſaith, Male in Latinis codicibus legitur, ſapere ad ſobrietatem: It is an euill reading in the Latine, to vnderſtand according to ſobrietie: for ſobrietie he readeth chaſtitie. So likewiſe, to ſhew that he was no changeling, 1.Tim.2.15. he ſaith, Non vt male habetur in Latinis codicibus ſobrietas eſt legenda: We muſt not read ſobrietie, as it is euill tranſlated in the Latine, but chaſtitie: S. Hierome would neuer haue called the authenticall tranſlation, ſimple, vnlearned, euill, prophane, as hee doth this vulgar Latine, as wee haue ſeene in theſe places.

Ibid.

Argum.5. There are many and great errors in the vulgar tranſlation, and contrary to the originall: Ergo it is not authentike. Some of the places we will quote, as Geneſ.3. ipſa conteret, for ipſum, ſhee ſhall breake the Serpents head, where wee doe reade that not the woman, but her ſeede ſhall breaketh his head. Geneſ.6.verſ.6. for figmentum cordis malum, the thoughts of mans heart are euill, they reade, intenta ad malum cogitatio, inclined to euill: and ſo extenuate originall ſinne. Geneſ.8.4. for the ſeuenteenth day the vulgar Latine readeth the ſeuen and twentieth day: Eccleſ.16.14 for ſecundum opera, a man ſhall receiue according to his workes, they reade after the merite of his workes. Eſdras 9. verſe 8. the vulgar Latine hath paxillum, for pauillum. Prou.18.verſ.11. lapides ſeculi, ſtones of the world: for lapides ſacculi ſtones of the bagge. And though Bellarmine here acknowledge a fault in the copies by miſtaking ſome letter, yet are thoſe words retained in the vulgar Latine ſtill without correction. In their Latine tranſlations of the Pſalmes there are many corruptions: Pſal.2.verſ.12. Apprehendite diſciplinam, apprehend diſcipline or inſtruction, for Oſculamini filium, Kiſſe the ſonne. And thus an euident place againſt the Iewes for the ſecond perſon in Trinity, is obſcured and ouerthrowne by the corrupt Latine text. Pſal.67.verſ.13. Si dormiatis inter medios cleros, though ye ſleepe between two lots, without any ſenſe: the Hebrew thus, inter ollas, though you haue lien amongſt the pots, as being blacke with affliction. It is pretie ſport how Bellarmine and the reſt, that would in all things iuſtifie the vulgar Latine tranſlation, how he runneth himſelfe out of breath, to finde out ſome likely expoſition of this place; and in the end hee thus playeth the interpreter, If ye ſleepe betweene two lots, that is, if ye preachers abide in the midſt betweene two lots, the heauenly, and the earthly, neither giuen wholly to action, nor wholly to contemplation; then ſhall the Church be like a Doue, &c. A goodly expoſition ſure, they muſt ſleepe betweene two lots, action and contemplation, that is, they muſt come at neither, but ſleepe betweene both: the words will rather enforce this ſenſe, if wee take his expoſition. And indeed of this ſort were moſt of their fat bellied Monkes and Friers, neither ſeene in contemplation of knowledge, nor action of good life. Verſ.23. of the ſame Pſalme they reade, conuertam in profundum maris, I will turne them into the bottome of the ſea; for reducam profundo maris, I will bring them from the depth of the ſea, cleane contrarie. Pſal.132.15. viduam eius benedicam, I will bleſſe his widow; for victum, I will bleſſe his victuals. Many ſuch ouerſights are committed in the vulgar Latine tranſlation of the old Teſtament; which are for the greateſt part of three ſorts, either in adding to the originall, or ſubtracting from it, or in changing and altering it. I will giue inſtance of all theſe only in the booke of the Iudges, and thereby we may ſee what is done in the reſt.

For theſe places haue additions: Chap.1.11. which is the citie of letters: verſ.35. mount Horeb, which is interpreted witneſſing: chap.4.5. vnder a palme, which was called by her name: chap.9.25. dum illius praeſtolentur aduentum, while they ſtaied his comming: chap.9.40. Abimelech purſued him, & in vrbem compulit, and draue him into the citie: chap.14.11. when the citizens of that place ſaw him: chap.15.9. and they were ſpread abroad in the place which was afterward called Lochi.

Theſe places are defectiue: Chap.1.24. they ſaw a man: here wanteth ſpies: verſ.35. and (the Amorite wanting) dwelt in the mount: chap.2.18. and the Lord was with the Iudge, and deliuered them out of the hands of their enemies all the daies of the Iudge: all theſe words are wanting: Chap.4.10. he went vp (on his feete wanting): chap.6.2. for feare of the Madianites wanting: chap.8.10. Zeba and Salmona were (in Karkar, wanting) chap.11.12. was buried (in Ailon, wanting) in the countrey of Zebulon.

Theſe places with others are changed: Chap.1.5. when ſhe had ſighed ſitting vpon her aſſe, for, when ſhe had lighted downe from her aſſe: verſ.16. the kinſman of Moſes, for, the father in law of Moſes: chap.5.8. God hath choſen new battels, for, they choſe new gods: chap.6.31. he that is his aduerſarie (for, he that will contend for him) let him die ere the morning: chap.7.19. three hundred men with him, for, an hundred men: chap.9.34. they lay in waite againſt Sichem, in foure places, for, in foure bands: chap.10.12. Amaleke and Canaan, for, the Amalekites and Maonites: chap.11.26. the cities by Iordane, for, the cities by the coaſts of Arnon. Many ſuch corruptions are to be ſeene euery where in the Latine tranſlation of the old Teſtament.

So in the new Teſtament there are alſo many falſe readings. Matth.24.6. Opiniones praeliorum, for, rumores. Chap.20.9. acceperunt ſingulos denarios, for, ſinguli denarios: they tooke euery peny, for, euery man a peny. Chap.21.30. Eo domine, for, ego domine, I goe Lord, for, I Lord. Luke 1.28. plena gratia, for, gratis dilecta, haile Mary full of grace, for, freely beloued. Luke 15.8. euertit domum, for, euerrit: ſhe ouerthrew the houſe, for, ſhe ſwept the houſe. 1.Cor.15.verſ.51. non omnes immutabimur, we ſhall not all be changed, for, omnes immutabimur, we ſhall all be changed. Epheſ.2.10. creati in bonis operibus, created in good workes, for, ad opera bona, created vnto good workes. Rom. chap.16.23. Gaius hoſpes meus & vniuerſa Eccleſia, for, vniuerſae Eccleſiae: Gaius mine hoſt, and the whole Church, for, of the whole Church. 1.Cor.9.22. vt omnes ſaluos facerem, pro, vt omnino aliquos ſaluos facerem, that I might ſaue all, for, that I might ſaue ſome. Heb.12.8. Ergo adulteri, non filij eſtis, pro, ſpurij & adulterini: wherefore ye are adulterers, and not children, for, ye are baſtards, and not children. An hundred more errors and ouer, you may finde noted in the readings of our learned countriman D. Whitak.2. queſt. de ſcript.10.11.12. cap. Theſe I haue ſet downe for a taſte.

And as the vulgar Latine is imperfect and full of corruptions, and maketh the Scriptures darke and obſcure: ſo on the contrary ſide, the originals of the Hebrewe and Greeke are exceeding profitable, and doth bring great light and perſpicuitie to the Scripture: for neuer were the Scriptures better tranſlated, or more plainely vnderſtood, then ſince they were tranſlated out of the originals. Heare the iudgement of a reuerend and learned man ſometime a Biſhop in this land: who in a certaine conference and diſputation of the Biſhops, when ſome of them ſtood mightily for vnwritten tradition, ſtanding vp made an oration, vſing among other theſe words: The Germanes haue made the text of the Bible ſo plaine and eaſie by the Hebrew and Greeke tongues, that now many things may be better vnderſtood without any gloſſes at all, then by all the Commentaries of the Doctors, B. Fox. Fox pag.1183.col.1.

Laſtly, we will rehearſe Auguſtines iudgement: Vtcunque eſt, ei linguæ magis creditur, vnde eſt in aliam per interpretes facta tranſlatio: Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth (ſaith hee) wee ought to giue more credit to that tongue, out of the which other are tranſlated, lib.15.de ciuit.cap.13. Ergo, the Hebrew in the old Teſtament, and the Greeke in the new, out of the which the Latine and all other tranſlations haue iſſued, ought to haue the onely preheminence. To this agreeth S. Ambroſe, lib de incarnat. cap.8. Ita in Græcis codicibus inuenimus, quorum prior eſt authoritas: So wee finde in the Greeke copies, whoſe authoritie is to be preferred. Et lib.2.de ſpiritu, cap.6. Si quis de Latinorum codicum varietate contendat, Græcos inſpiciat codices: If any man doe take exception againſt the diuerſitie of the Latine bookes, let him looke into the Greeke. And S. Hierome ad Lucinium: Vt veterum librorum fides de Hebræis voluminibus examinanda eſt, ita nouorum Græci ſermonis formam deſiderat: As the credit of the old Teſtament muſt be examined by the Hebrew volumes, ſo in the new by the Greeke. And this authoritie of Saint Hierome is ratified and allowed by their owne decrees: Gratian.decr.p.1.d.9, cap.6. And to this purpoſe Franciſcus Mirandula made an oration to Leo 10. and the Councell of Laterane, that the Scriptures might be conferred with the originall copies. So alſo Iſidor.in præfat. ad Concil. Quod ſi veritas quærenda eſt, Græcorum ſequamur ſtylum, eorumq́ imitemur editiones & exemplaria. Et poſtea: Vnitas & veritas ab ipſis quærenda eſt, quorum lingua edita eſſe noſcuntur: If we ſeeke for the truth, let vs follow and imitate the Greeke copies and examples. And afterward: The truth is to be ſought for at their hands, in whoſe tongue or language it is ſet foorth. This he ſpeaketh of the true originall copies of the Councels to be had from the Greeke. And the ſame reaſon alſo ſerueth for the authentike originals of the holy Scriptures. Thus haue we their owne teſtimonies againſt them.

Concerning the iudgement of other Churches: firſt, the Eaſt Church doth not acknowledge as authenticall the Latine tranſlation. The Chriſtians of the Eaſt ſay, that the Popes of Rome haue wholly corrupted and changed the Goſpell and other bookes of our religion. The King of Moſcouia ſaid, The chapters, which thou citeſt out of the Apoſtolicall Epiſtles and Goſpels, agree not with ours. Secondly, the South and Ethiopike Church, are as farre from authorizing the Latine Bible, which it ſeemeth they had neuer ſeene, as may appeare by the queſtions, which Aluares reporteth to haue been propounded vnto him by Preſter Iohn, touching the number of S. Pauls writings. Thirdly, the vulgar Latine is reiected generally by the reformed Churches of the Proteſtants in the Weſt: as the Church of Heluetia thus confeſſeth: We acknowledge that interpretation of Scripture for authenticall, which is taken from the Scriptures themſelues, that is, from the phraſe of that tongue, wherein they were written.

Nicholas lib.4. cap.36.
The anſwere to Rohit.
Aluares c.31.
Latter confeſſ. of Heluetia. cap.2.

Laſtly, we haue plentifull teſtimony from ſome of our aduerſaries themſelues of the Latin Church. Sixtus Senenſis ſaith, that Sanctus Pagninus, when he had perceiued the corruptions of the old vulgar tranſlation, did by the counſell of Leo the tenth conſult with the beſt Hebrew copies, and turned them into Latine. Galatinus doth witneſſe, that the Hebrew ſcripture is much more perfect, then the Latine: and Azor the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that many of their writers ſince the Councell of Trent, as Vega, Canus, Payna, Lindanus, haue noted many errors in the vulgar Latine edition, not only by the fault of the writer, but by the ignorance of the Interpreter.

THE THIRD QVESTION: CONCERNING the vulgar tranſlation of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

THey do not abſolutely condemne the tranſlation of the Scriptures into the vulgar tongue, whatſoeuer they haue thought in times paſt: neither would they generally haue euery man permitted to reade the Scripture, but ſuch only as haue eſpeciall licence from their Ordinarie, hauing the teſtimonie of their Curates that they bee humble and deuout perſons, Rhemenſ. præfat. ſect.6. So then they hold it dangerous for all men to reade Scripture, and they would not willingly licence any, but their Pope-holy deuout Catholikes: they are like to make a mad peece of worke, that goe about to pick their faith out of Scripture, ſay the Rhemiſts, *annot.*1.Cor.1.5. This then is their opinion, that it is neither neceſſarie nor conuenient for all men to haue acceſſe to the Scriptures: we will ſee ſome of their reaſons. So Bellarm.lib.2.de verb.Dei.cap.13.

*Argum.*1. From the time of Eſdras till Chriſt, and in our Sauiours time, the Scriptures were not in the vulgar tongue, but only in the Hebrew, which the Iewes vnderſtood not after the captiuitie: Ergo, it is not now neceſſarie to haue them in the vulgar tongue. That the people vnderſtood not Hebrew, the Ieſuite proueth out of the 8. of Nehemiah: where it is ſaid, that Eſdras did expound the law to the people, becauſe they vnderſtood it not. We anſwere, that the text ſaith cleane contrarie, that he read the law before the people that vnderſtood it, verſ.3. and they might giue the ſenſe, though the people vnderſtood the language. Concerning the places obiected out of the Goſpell, to prooue the Iewes ſpake another language then Hebrue, as it appeareth by thoſe ſpeeches Marc.5. Talitha cumi, Matth.27. Golgotha, which ſauour not of the Hebrue tongue. We anſwere, that although they ſpake not pure Hebrue, but many ſtrange words were vſed, yet they vnderſtood the Hebrue; for why elſe doth Chriſt bid the people to ſearch the Scriptures? And they were not the Iewes, but the Roman ſouldiers that vnderſtood not the voice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, ſaying, he called for Elias. And whereas Bellarmine further would gather by that place, Iohn 7.49. This people, that know not the law, that the Iewes vnderſtood not the Scriptures in the Hebrue tongue; it is a meere cauill: firſt they note the ignorance of the people not in the letter of the law, but the ſenſe thereof, which the Phariſies had obſcured by their traditions, and therfore Mat.23. they are ſaid to haue ſhut vp the kingdom of Heauen. Secondly, it is euident, Luk.4.18. that the people vnderſtood the reading of the law: for when Chriſt had read the text, without further conſtruing, or tranſlating of it, he ſhut the book and ſaid to the people, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your eares. Again, Act.15.21. Iames ſaith, that Moſes is preached, becauſe he is read: in what ſenſe can reading be called preaching, if it be not vnderſtood. And yet it is more euident, that the people vnderſtood the Hebrew tongue, Act.22.2. for when they heard that Paul ſpake Hebrew, they kept ſilence. What dare not now theſe fellowes affirme, thus contrarie to Scripture not being aſhamed to ſay, that the Iewes vnderſtood not Hebrew?

Act.12.2.

But whereas Bellarmine telleth vs, that the Iewes to this day doe reade in their Synagogues the Scriptures in the Hebrew tongue, which the vulgar ſort vnderſtand not, chap.15. *Argum.*1: we anſwer, that wee are not to regard the blinde inſtances and traditions of that obſtinate and peruerſe people (though it is certaine, that the Iewes generally doe better vnderſtand the Hebrew, then in the Romiſh Church the people Latine) for the Romaniſts themſelues doe reiect the vſages of the Iewes, and condemne their Thalmudical fables: Gregorie 9. did adiudge all their Thalmudical volumes to the fire, anno 1230. the like did diuers Popes: Paulus the 4. at the laſt reuiued the ſame decree, anno 1559. at what time by order from the Romane Inquiſition, out of the Iewes Library at Cremona, there were burned at one time twelue thouſand Thalmudicall bookes: as Senenſis one of their owne writers reporteth.

Senenſ. Bibliothec. lib.2.§.tradit. p.125.

*Argum.*2. The Apoſtles (ſaith the Ieſuite) wrote their Epiſtles only in Hebrew or Greeke, and not in the vulgar tongues of the nations to whom they preached: Ergo, it is not neceſſarie that the Scriptures ſhould be in the vulgar tongue. We anſwere, firſt, it had been an infinite labour for the Apoſtles, to haue left their writings in euery language; neither was it neceſſarie, ſeeing out of the originals they might be tranſlated into euery language. Secondly, they preached the ſame things vnto the Gentiles in their owne tongues, which they afterward left in writing. Thirdly, the Greeke tongue, wherein they wrote, was vniuerſally knowne, and few countries were ignorant of it, eſpecially in the Eaſt parts. But it is moſt certaine, that the Apoſtles did write to no Churches in the Greek tongue, which vnderſtood it not. And whereas the Ieſuite giueth an inſtance, of the Epiſtle written to the Romanes, whoſe vulgar tongue was Latine and not Greeke, and the Epiſtles of Iames and Peter written to the diſperſed Iewes: it can be no queſtion, whether the Romanes vnderſtood Greeke, the language being ſo common, and moſt of them being Grecians, as may appeare by their names, yet reſiant at Rome, to whom hee writeth: and how could the Iewes, being diſperſed among the Gentiles, be ignorant of the Greek tongue, ſeeing now alſo they ſpeake the languages of thoſe countries, where they are diſperſed?

Bellarmine argum.2.

*Argum.*3. There is no cauſe (ſay they) why the Scriptures ſhould be tranſlated: if it be for the vnderſtanding of the people, they vnderſtand them not being tranſlated neither. Wee anſwere: many things they may eaſily vnderſtand: and for the harder places, they are neerer the vnderſtanding of them being tranſlated, then before: for then they haue two great lets, the tongue vnknowne, and the obſcure and hid ſenſe; now they need not to labour for the tongue, but only for the ſenſe.

Bellarm. lib.2. cap.15. argum.5.

*Argum.*4. The Scriptures are occaſion of offence and hereſie, being not right vnderſtood. Ergo. And here Bellarmine telleth vs a tale of a certaine woman in England that ſtood vp in the Church when ſhe heard the 25. Chapter of Eccleſiaſticus read and ſaid, Is this the word of God, nay it is the word of the Diuell? We anſwere: firſt, becauſe many ſurfet of meates and drinkes, it is no reaſon that ſober men ſhould be forbidden the vſe of them: no more for heretikes and wicked mens ſakes ought the people of God to be barred from Scripture. Secondly, more haue periſhed by ignorance in Scripture, then by miſ-vnderſtanding it: and the Scripture was ordained of God to meete with offences, and to confute hereſies, 2.Tim.3.16. Wherefore theſe men make themſelues wiſer then God, that thinke the Scripture is an occaſion of thoſe diſeaſes, for the which it is appointed a remedie. The like blinde reaſon ſometime a popiſh Frier vſed againſt Maſter Latimer, in his frierly ſermon; If the rude people, ſaith he, ſhould heare the Scriptures read in Engliſh; the ploughman when he heareth, that he which holdeth the plough, and looketh backe, &c. would thereupon ceaſe to plough any more: and the baker when he heareth it read, a little leauen corrupteth the whole lumpe, might be moued not to vſe leauen at all: and when the Scripture ſaith, If thine eye offend thee plucke it out, the ignorant might be perſwaded to pull out their eyes: and therefore it was not good to haue the Scriptures in Engliſh. To this frierly reaſon, Maſter Latimer vouchſafed no other anſwere but this: he would wiſh the Scriptures no longer to be in Engliſh, till either the ploughman were thereby perſwaded not to plough, or the baker not to bake: Fox p.1734.col.2.

Rhemiſt. præfat. ſect.13.

Now concerning Bellarmines tale, though we need not beleeue it vnleſſe we will, ſeeing hee hath it but by hearesay: yet if any fooliſh woman ſhould be ſo ſimple, as to be offended with the reading of the Scriptures, which ſhe vnderſtandeth not, (and yet this was no part of the canonicall Scripture, but out of the Apocryphall bookes whereat offence was taken) this can be no preiudice to ſo holy an exerciſe no more, then the exclamation of the Pythoniſſe, Act. 16. was vnto S. Pauls preaching. But the Ieſuite pleaſeth himſelfe in this tale, becauſe he miſliketh, that women ſhould be acquainted with the Scriptures: and yet can he not be ignorant how Aquila, and Priſcilla his wife expounded to Apollos the way of God more perfectly, Act. 18. And Ruffinus that tranſlated ſome of Origenes homilies giueth this as a reaſon: Hoc beneficij procreabit hæc lectio, vt prophetia peruenire non ſolum ad viros, verum etiam ad religioſas fœminas poſſit: This benefit, ſaith he, ſhall come by this reading or tranſlation, that the knowledge of this propheſie not onely men, but women alſo may attaine vnto: Prefat. in hom. Origen. in Pſal. 36. In thoſe dayes women vnderſtood the Latine tongue, and were acquainted with the Scriptures tranſlated into that language.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe beleeue and hold that it is requiſite, expedient and neceſſarie for the Scriptures to be vttered and ſet forth in the vulgar and common ſpeech, and that none vpon any occaſion ought to bee prohibited the reading thereof for knowledge and inſtructions ſake: and that Chriſtian Magiſtrates ought to prouide, that the people may haue the Scriptures in their mother and knowne tongue. Wherefore great wrong was offered to the people of England, that diuers 100. yeeres, till King Henrie the eight, could not be ſuffered to haue the Scriptures in Engliſh. And how, I pray you, did the Papiſts ſtorme, when as Tindals tranſlation came forth? ſome affirming that it was impoſſible to haue the Scriptures tranſlated into Engliſh: ſome that it would make the people heretikes: others that it would cauſe them to rebell, Fox pag. 117. col. 1. What foule and ſhamefull ſlanders were theſe? And whereas the late Tridentine chapter would not ſeeme abſolutely to condemne the vulgar tranſlation of Scripture, but permitted the ſame by licence of the ordinarie to the lay ſort, and of the ſuperiour to the regulars: yet ſince this libertie hath beene reſtrained: for Clemens the 8. would giue no more faculties to Biſhops and Inquiſitors, to graunt faculties of reading the Bible: and in Spaine no Bibles or any part of them in the vulgar tongue are permitted at all: as Azarius the Ieſuite teſtifieth. But for the vulgar tranſlations of Scripture we reaſon thus.

Argum. 1. It is Gods commandement, that the Scriptures ſhould be read before the people, that they may learne to feare God, Deut. 31. verſ. 11. 12. The people are commanded to write the law vpon their gates, and in their houſes to conferre and talke with their children, and teach them the law, Deut. 6. 6. 7. 8. And our Sauiour biddeth the people ſearch the Scripture, Ioh. 5. verſ. 39. Ergo what God hath commanded, no man ought to prohibite or forbid: the people therefore muſt not be kept from reading of the Scripture.

Azar. inſtit. mor. par. 2. lib. 8. c. 26.

Deut. 31. 11.

Argum. 2. Without Scripture there is no faith; faith is neceſſarie for all people: Ergo the knowledge of the Scripture: that faith commeth by the Scriptures, reade Iohn 20. 31. theſe things are written, that ye might beleeue Ieſus Chriſt to bee the ſonne of God. Againe, the weapons of Chriſtian men are not denied to any, whereby they ſhould fight againſt their ſpirituall enemies: but the word of God is a ſpeciall part of our harneſſe, and a principall weapon, euen the ſword of the ſpirit, Ergo.

Ephes. 6. 17.

Argum. 3. The Goſpell may be preached in the vulgar tongue, as our bleſſed Sauiour and the holy Apoſtles taught the people: Ergo the word of God may be read and written in the vulgar tongue. The propoſition our aduerſaries grant, that Sermons may be made in the vulgar tongue: but it followeth not, ſay they, that therefore Scripture ſhould be in the mother tongue, Rhem. 1. Cor. 14. 18. But I pray you how can the Preacher alleadge Scripture in his Sermon, vnleſſe it bee recited in the vulgar tongue? or how ſhould the people know they preach the word, vnleſſe they may compare their doctrine with Scripture, as the Berrœans did, Act. 17.

Argum. 4. I will adioyne the teſtimonie of three godly learned Martyrs, vnto whoſe iudgement, I thinke as much ought to bee giuen, as vnto any mans beſide, who ſealed the trueth they profeſſed with their blood: theſe three Martyrs are Tindal, Lambert, Bradford. Tindal was the firſt, that in theſe laſt times tranſlated the new Teſtament into Engliſh. This holy Martyr ſaith, that the very cauſe why the Papiſts would not haue the Scriptures tranſlated, was this, that the people might bee kept in ignorance ſtill, and ſo they might tyrannize ouer their conſcience by their ſuperſtitious doctrines, Fox. pag. 1077.

Lambert ſaith, that there can bee no reaſonable cauſe to withhold the Scriptures from the people, being the foode of their ſoules, eſpecially when they deſire it, no more then bodily foode ought to be kept from thoſe that hunger after it, pag. 1116. col. 1.

Bleſſed Bradford ſaith, that it was plaine robberie to take from the people the Engliſh ſeruice: to whom one Willerton replyed, that the people ought to learne at the Prieſts hands: to whom he anſwered, then will you bring the people to crucifie Chriſt againe, and let Barrabas goe, if all muſt be learned at the Prieſts hands, for ſo the Prieſts then perſwaded the people. pag. 1612.

Argum. 5. We haue the practiſe of the Church of God in times paſt for our warrant: for in Chryſoſtomes time the people had vulgar tranſlations: whereupon he exhorteth them to get them Bibles, or at the leaſt the new Teſtament, the Actes of the Apoſtles, the Goſpels, Homil. 9. Epiſt. ad Coloſſ. And he is held to haue tranſlated the Scriptures into the Armenian tongue, Hierome into the Dalmatike, Vulphilus into the Gothike, Methodius into the Sclauonian language. And here ſo many hundred yeeres agoe in England King Alured tranſlated the Pſalter: a copie whereof was found in Crowland Abbey, called S. Guthlakes Pſalter, as Maſter Lambert witneſſeth: and Beda our learned country man tranſlated

S. Iohns Goſpell, Fox pag. 1115. col. 2. The Rhemiſts alſo confeſſe that more then 300. yeeres agoe the Italians had the Bible tranſlated, and the French men aboue 200. yeeres agoe, Præfat. in Teſtam. 4 ſect. Why ſhould not the people of God haue the ſame liberty now freely to reade the Scriptures, as they haue had in times paſt?

Bellarmine anſwereth, that hee denieth not, but that the Scriptures were in times paſt extant in the vulgar tongue, yet not vniuerſally to all, but to ſuch as might profit by reading of them. Our Rhemiſts alſo ſay, that Chryſoſtome, when he exhorted the people to reading of Scripture, ſpake as a Pulpit man, not as giuing a rule in ſchooles, præfat. in Teſtam. ſect. 14. And Bellarm. addeth, that it was not his meaning that they ſhould all reade Scripture, but ſuch as might doe it ſafely, lib. 2. c. 16. reſponſ. ad argum. 7.

Anſwer. Firſt, ſeeing in times paſt, great and populous nations had the Scriptures tranſlated, as the Armenians, Sclauonians, into their vulgar tongue, how is it like that any man was forbidden the reading of them? As wee doe proue vnto them, that theſe nations had the Scriptures in their owne tongue, ſo if they can ſhew vs any prohibition to haue beene made in thoſe countries, to bar any from reading of Scripture (which they are neuer able to doe) they ſhould ſay ſomewhat. 2. That Chryſoſtomes meaning was, that all men ſhould be exerciſed in reading of Scripture, it doth eaſily appeare: for he ſo exhorteth in his Sermons, vnto the which all the people of all conditions reſorted, therefore he ſpake to all: yea, he would haue boyes and children to reade Scripture. And though Chryſoſtome were now in the Pulpit, what of that? He would not (I thinke) ſay one thing in the Pulpit, and another thing in ſchooles: he would not ſpeake otherwiſe, then he thought; or make the Pulpit a place to vtter lies in. 3. Whereas Chriſt giueth libertie to all to ſearch Scripture, yea commandeth them ſo to doe, with what authoritie can they reſtraine this libertie? And if euery man muſt be readie to render a

1. Pet. 3. 15. reaſon of his faith and hope, 1. Pet. 3. 15. then euery man ought to ſtudie the Scriptures, thereby to learne to giue account of his faith. What profiteth it a man to haue meate, and not to eate it, apparell and not to weare it? ſo what good doth it to haue Scriptures, and not to reade them?

4 But Azarius the Ieſuit hath another anſwer: he confeſſeth that the Greek and Latin tongue were then generally knowne, when the Scriptures were firſt tranſlated into them, and then the people might ſafely bee admitted to the reading of Scripture, which they cannot doe now not vnderſtanding theſe tongues: to this purpoſe this Iudaſited Rabbin. But he hath ſaid nothing to the purpoſe: true it is, that the people reading the Scripture in a tongue, which they know not, cannot profit by it: why then ſhould not the Scripture bee now conuerted into the vulgar tongue which the people may vnderſtand, as was vſed in former times: as the Armenians, Sclauonians, Gothes had the Scriptures tranſlated: yea, Theodoret ſaith, that libri Hebraici conuerſi erant in omnes linguas, The Hebrew books were turned into all languages, which are vſed to this day.

Azar. inſtitut. Moral. par. 1. lib. 8. c. 26.

Theodoret ſerm. 5. de Græcor. affect.

Let vs heare Auguſtines opinion: Lectiones diuinas (ſaith he) & in Eccleſia, ſicut conſueſtis, audite, & in domib. veſtris relegite. I would haue you both to attend vnto the publike readings in the Church, and in your houſe to reade ouer againe the holy leſſons: but how could the people reade them at home, if they were not in their vulgar tongue?

But Auguſtine was but one man, heare then the conſent of whole councels. Turon. ſub Carolo. can. 17. Homilias Epiſcopus transferre ſtudeat in ruſticam Romanam linguam, aut Theotiſcam, quo facilius cuncti poſſint intelligere, quæ dicuntur: The Biſhop muſt haue a care to tranſlate the Homilies into the Countrey, Latine or vulgar tongue, that all men may the better vnderſtand what is ſaid. If it bee anſwered, that Sermons and Homilies may be read and preached in the vulgar, but not the Scriptures; we oppoſe another decree. In eccleſijs parochialib. per ſingulos dies dominicos presbyteri clara voce ac intelligibili ac verbis maternis annuncient 10. præcepta decalogi, et articulos fidei: In the Pariſh Churches euery Lords day, let the Presbyters declare with a loud and intelligible voice, and in the mother tongue, the ten commandements, and articles of the faith: ſynod. Senonenſ. decret. morum 11. And it was alſo decreed, ſynod. Auguſten. cap. 25. That the Angels ſalutation, and the Lords prayer ſhould be ſaid in the vulgar tongue. Thus wee ſee that thoſe Popiſh Prelates that liued 40. or 50. yeeres agoe, were not altogether ſo Popiſh and vnreaſonable, as our Romaniſts in theſe dayes are. I will alſo oppoſe againſt them their owne Maſter of Sentences, who preſcribing the office and dutie of a lector, thus ſaith, Vim accentuum ſciat, diſtincte legat, ne intellectum auditoribus auferat, &c. Let him know the accents, and reade diſtinctly, that hee hinder not the vnderſtanding of the hearers: let him marke what muſt be read indicatiuely, what with an interrogation, and keepe his diſtinctions; which if hee doe not, he troubleth the peoples vnderſtanding, and moueth other to laughter: Mag. lib. 4. diſ. 24. d. But what neede theſe precepts of obſeruing the accents, and keeping diſtinctions, where no man vnderſtandeth what is read: or what neede they feare the hindring of the peoples vnderſtanding, where nothing is vnderſtood? Wherefore it appeareth by this, that it ſtandeth with their Maſters minde, to haue the Scriptures read in the vulgar tongue. But here the Reader is further to be aduertiſed of two other points wherein the Romiſh tranſlators faile, in their vulgar editions of the Scripture, both in obſcure and corrupt tranſlating.

Anno 1548.

Firſt, they doe retaine many obſcure termes and words in their tranſlations: as the Rhemiſts vſe theſe and ſuchlike: as Archiſynagogue, Azymes, character, Didrachme, Euro aquilo, exinanited, Neophyte, paraclete, paraſceue, repropitiate, reſuſcitate; For, chiefe of the ſynagogue, vnleauened bread, a marke, tribute money, a North-Eaſt winde, abaſed, a young ſcholler, the comforter, the preparation, make reconciliation, raiſe vp,&c. The Doway wiſemen doe affect the like obſcuritie in their late tranſlation of the Bible: as they read, Rhamnus, prepuce, hoſtes, victimes, holocauſt, excelſes, bread of propoſition, and ſuch like, for the bramble, fore-skinne, ſacrifices, burnt offering, high places: This their affected obſcuritie, they would iuſtifie by theſe reaſons.

1 Becauſe many Hebrew words, as Amen, Alleluia, are retained both in the Greeke and Latine vntranſlated.

2 The words tranſlated may miſſe of the ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt.

3 The words of Scripture are more ſacred.

4 Proteſtants themſelues leaue many words vntranſlated, as Penticoſt, Ephod, Proſelyte, Sabbath.

5 Theſe words may in ſhort time grow familiar, which at the firſt ſeeme ſtrange. To this purpoſe, they of Rhemes in their preface to the new Teſtament, and they of Doway ſeconding them, in their preface to the Bible.

Contra. 1. Thoſe Hebrew words which the Apoſtles retained in the new Teſtament, by the direction of the ſpirit, we alſo retaine in our Engliſh tranſlations, hauing therein the practiſe of the Apoſtles for our warrant: for they may as well be kept vntranſlated in one tongue as well as in another: but for the vſing of other words vntranſlated, there is not the like warrant, and therefore not the like reaſon.

2 They pretend ſinceritie, in not tranſlating ſome words, but in deede they affect obſcuritie: as the ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt is kept in the tranſlation of other words, ſo why not in theſe? and if the Latine expreſſe the Hebrew in fit words, why may not other tongues alſo finde out fit words to ſignifie the ſame?

3 The words of the original, are not more ſacred in themſelues, but to them that vnderſtand them, and in reſpect of God, the ſanctifier of that tongue, and conſecrator thereof for his diuine oracles: the Latine words are no more Scripture words, then the words of the Engliſh, or any other tranſlation.

4 Thoſe words which cannot well bee tranſlated, the Proteſtants keepe ſtill: the ſame reaſon is not, of thoſe words, which may fitly be tranſlated and interpreted, as their obſcure termes may.

5 So may all the words of Scripture, though not tranſlated, in time grow familiar to them that will learne the tongue: but who ſeeth not, that it would be a great eaſe to the people, to haue as many words tranſlated to their vnderſtanding, as may be? for otherwiſe it would be a double labour, firſt to ſearch for the meaning of the word, and then for the ſenſe of the place.

Secondly, they tranſlate as obſcurely and darkly, ſo corruptly and vntruly; wherein they challenge our tranſlations, but vniuſtly: their accuſation herein ſhall bee returned vpon their owne heads: but firſt let vs take a view of the places which they obiect in our tranſlations. Iohn 3,8.

1 Iohn 3. 8. We (ſay the Rhemiſts) tranſlate The ſpirit breatheth, leauing it indifferent to ſignifie holy Ghoſt, or wind, the Proteſtants tranſlate wind.

2 Luke 8. They were filled. The Proteſtants adde of their owne: with water. Luk.8.23.

3 Luk.22. This chalice, the new Teſtament: not is the new Teſtament, as the Proteſtants. Luk.22.20.

4 Marke 13.19. Thoſe dayes ſhall be ſuch tribulation: not in thoſe dayes. Mark.13.19.

5 Iames 4.6. And giueth greater grace, &c. not the Scripture giueth greater grace, we leaue it in- Iam.4.6. different, the Scripture or the holy Ghoſt, both going before.

6 We reade, a woman a ſiſter, 1.Cor.9.5. not a wife a ſiſter. 1.Cor.9.5.

7 Hell of fire, Matth.5.19. not hell fire, as the Proteſtants.

8 Luk.2.15. Let vs ſee this word that is done, not this thing, &c. Thus the Rhemiſts obiect in their Luk.2.15.
preface to the new Teſtament.

9 The Doway men do obiect theſe places in their preface likewiſe, Gen.4.15. The luſt thereof ſhall Gen.4.15.
be vnder thee: Whereas the Proteſtants applying it to Abels ſubiection to Cain, read thus, Vnto thee his deſire, &c.

10 Geneſ.14.18. For he was a Prieſt, &c. Proteſtants read, and he was, &c. Whereas in other pla- Gen.14.18.
ces, they tranſlate the Hebrew particle Vau, for.

11 Geneſ.31.19. For Idols, Proteſtants tranſlate images. Gen.31.19.

Contra 1. The word ſignifieth ſpirit, but thereby the wind is vnderſtood, becauſe mention is made of the ſound thereof; and it is ſo tranſlated, to take away all ambiguitie: becauſe it followeth, ſo is euery one that is borne of the ſpirit, that is, of the holy Ghoſt.

2 Matth.8.24. It is ſaid, The ſhip was couered with waues: That word is inſerted then, by warrant of that place, for the better explanation.

3 The word is, is inſerted by S. Pauls warrant, who ſo readeth, 1.Cor.11.25.

4 The meaning is, that in thoſe dayes ſhall be great tribulation: as Matth.24.21. Then ſhall there be, &c. We expreſſe the Hebraiſme after our Engliſh phraſe: but if they will bee ſo ſtrict to keepe the very words: why doe they put in tales; ſuch tribulations which is not in the text.

5 The word Scripture is inſerted in another character: the ſpirit cannot be vnderſtoode, which was before mentioned: The ſpirit luſteth after enuie: That ſpirit cannot be ſaid to giue greater grace.

6 It were ſuperfluous and idle, to reade a ſiſter a woman, for the word ſiſter implieth a woman: therefore they inuert the order of the words, reading a woman a ſiſter: the Syriake interpreter, readeth, as we doe, a ſiſter a wife.

7 We, in tranſlating hell fire, for hell of fire, doe therein expreſſe the common ſenſe of the phraſe, as it may be beſt vnderſtood : the hebraiſme doth not ſo well fit our engliſh phraſe : the like libertie they tooke themſelues in reading, Deut. 33. 2. a fierie law, as if the words in the originall were a law of Deut. 33. 2. fire : wheras they are, eſh dath, a fire of a law, as if we ſhould ſay, a lawmaking fire.

8 The Hebrew word דבר dabhar, ſignifieth indifferently a word, or a thing done : as it is vſed, Gen.
Geneſ. 18. 14. 18. 14. is there any word hard to God : yet they there read, is there any thing, which is the meaning : and ſo is it taken heere, as the participle [illegible] done, ioyned vnto it ſheweth.

9 The vulgar reading in the Latine, is very faulty. 1. The Hebrue prepoſition eel, doth not ſignifie vnder, but towards : as the Septuagint reade [illegible] to be toward thee : how can the deſire of ſinne be ſaid to bee toward one. 2. The affix is of the maſculine, his deſire, where as the word Chatath ſinne is of the feminine : it hath not then relation to ſinne. 3. In this ſenſe, it ſhould bee in a wicked
Geneſ. 3. 16. mans power, ſuch as Cain was to haue dominion ouer ſinne. 4. In the ſame phraſe, chap. 3. 16. the ſubiection of the woman toward her husband is expreſſed : thy deſire ſhall be turned, &c. And ſo here it is moſt fitly referred to Abels ſubiection to Cain, as the elder brother, not to the ſubiection of ſinne, which is improperly ſaid to haue a deſire.

10 Though ſometime the Hebrew particle vau, be tranſlated for, it followeth not it ſhould bee
1. Sam. 19. 13. ſo euery where : the Septuagint doe not tranſlate it, for he was, but expreſſe it by the particle δὲ, erat autem, but he was, not erat enim, for he was : and Vatablus their owne interpreter readeth, & erat, and he was, ſo alſo Pagnin, and Montanus.

11 Why may not teraphim in that place be as well tranſlated images, as they themſelues thinke it may be ſo engliſhed, 1. Sam. 19. 13. where it is ſaid, Michal tooke a ſtatua or image, and put it on vpon the bed, &c.

Now on the other ſide, let vs take a view of their goodly tranſlations : it would fill a whole volume by it ſelfe, to ſet downe all their groſſe ſcapes, and corruptions herein : but theſe for example ſake ſhall ſuffice.

Geneſ. 3. 15. 1 Geneſ. 3. 15. They read according to the vulgar Latine, ſhe ſhall bruiſe thy head, whereas in the Hebrue, it is put in the neuter, ipſum, it ſhall breake, &c. And ſo read Montanus, Pagnin, Vatablus : the ſeptuagint reade in the maſculine, he ſhall breake, &c. that is Chriſt.

Geneſ. 4. 13. Geneſ. 4. 13. My ſinne is greater then i may deſerue pardon : whereas there is not a ſyllable in the Hebrue, that ſignifieth to merit or deſerue : neither doe the ſeptuagint, or any other interpretor ſo tranſlate.

Geneſ. 6. 4. 3 Geneſ. 6. 4. All the cogitations of their heart was bent to euill : for, all the imagination of the thoughts of their heart, are onely euill : which is more then inclined or bent to euill : which tranſlation extenuateth originall ſinne.

2. Sam. 21. 19. 4 2. Sam. 21. 19. Adeodatus the ſonne of the forreſt, a broderer : for, Elhanan the ſonne of Iaare-oregim : as Montanus, Pagnin, Vatablus their owne tranſlators reade according to the Hebrew : Iunius alſo and our Engliſh.

1. Chron. 2. 55. 5 1. Chron. 2. 55. Theſe are the Cinites which came of the heate of the father of the houſe of Rechab : without any ſenſe, for, which came of Hamath the father, &c. as the Septuagint, Montanus, Pagnin. Vatablus reade : Iun. Eng.

1. Chron. 4. 22. 6 1. Chron. 4. 22. And hee that made the ſunne to ſtand, and the man of lying, ſecure and burning, which were Princes in Moab : for, and Iokim, and the men of Chozeba, and Ioaſh and Saraph, which had the dominion in Moab : as the Septuagint, Montanus. Pagnin. Vatab. Iun. Eng.

1. Chron. 7. 18. 7 1. Chron. 7. 18. And his ſiſter Queene bare Goodliman : it is not like that Gilead had a Queene to his ſiſter : for, and his ſiſter Molecheth bare Iſhod. Sept. Montan. Pagnin. Vatab. Iun. Eng.

Iob 1. 5. 8 Iob 1. 5. Leſt my ſonnes haue ſinned, and bleſſed God in their hearts : as though it were a ſinne to bleſſe God : though the Hebrew word ſignifie both to bleſſe and curſe : yet neither the Latine nor Engliſh word will beare it. The Septuagint doe read, leſt they haue thought euill in their hearts : ſo alſo Vatablus, leſt they haue curſed. Montanus.

Iunius,* Engliſh. cap.31.18.

25 Cap. 32. 21. I will not make God equall to man: for, I will not giue titles to man. Montan. Pagnin. Vatablus, Iunius. cap.32.21.

26 Cap. 33. 23. If there ſhall be an Angel ſpeaking for him: for, a meſſenger: ſo alſo the Septuag. and Vatab. tranſlate a meſſenger, not an Angel. cap.33.23.

27 Cap. 33. 25. His fleſh is conſumed with puniſhments: for, his fleſh ſhall be as freſh as of a childs: Montan. Pagnin. Iunius, Engliſh tranſlation. cap.33.25.

28 Cap. 37. 11. Corne deſireth clouds: for, he maketh the clouds to labour to water, &c. Montan. Pag. Vatab. Iun. Engliſh. cap.37.11.

29 Cap. 41. 16. When hee ſhall bee taken away, the Angels ſhall feare: for, the mighty are afraid of his excellency: Montan. Pagnin. Vatab. Iun. Eng. cap.41.16.

30 Cap. 42. 14. He called the name of one (of his daughters) Dies, the name of the ſecond Caſſia, the name of the third Cornuſtibij: for Iemimah, Kezaab, Keren-happuch: Montan. Pagnin. Vatab. Iun. Eng. cap.42.14.

If their vulgar tranſlation be ſo full of corruptions in this one booke of Iob, we may eaſily gueſſe how corrupt the whole is.

Let vs ſee the iudgement and practiſe of other Churches, concerning vulgar tranſlations of Scripture. 1. The Eaſt Church haue the Scriptures read in the vulgar tongue, or ſuch a language, as is vnderſtood of all: the [a] Prieſts in Armenia reade the Goſpell in the Armenian tongue, which euery one vnderſtandeth: ſo likewiſe teſtifieth [b] Villamont, that the Armenians, though they can ſpeake diuerſe languages, yet they vſe the Armenian tongue in diuine ſeruice, which is vnderſtood both of men and women: [c] Theuet, writeth of the Muſcouites, that the Prieſts euery Sunday read the Goſpell and the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles in a language that they vnderſtand.

[a] Belon lib.3. cap.12.
[b] Lib.2.cap.23.
[c] Coſmogr.lib. 9.cap.12.

2 So alſo the South Church haue the Scriptures read in the [d] Tigique, that is the Abyſſine language, the firſt country that receiued the doctrine of the Goſpell: The [e] Abyſſine language commeth neare the Arabicke: and is generally vnderſtood.

[d] Theuet. Coſmogr.lib. 2.cap.14.
[e] Aluar.lib. 2.cap.vltim.

3 The ſame is the generall practiſe of the reformed Churches of the Weſt, the confeſſion of Bohemia. cap. 2. The Scripture is rehearſed to the hearers in the common and mother tongue which all vnderſtand: confeſſion of Auſpurge. This is not only commanded by S. Paul to vſe a tongue that the people vnderſtand, but mans law alſo hath appointed it. And herein it is well knowne, that all other reformed Churches concurre with the reſt.

2. Artic. edition Wittemberg. anno 1531.

4 We want not alſo here the teſtimony of ſome of the Latine Church, Eſpenceus, a learned Popiſh Biſhop: Iudei filios ſuos quinquennes ad ſacra biblia adaptabant, &c. The Iewes did fit and apply their children at fiue yeeres of age to the ſacred Bible, and they did attribute the chiefe place in the inſtructing of children to the Scriptures, where they began, &c. Pudeat igitur Chriſtianos, &c. Let it bee a ſhame for Chriſtians to ſhake of this care, &c. So Agrippa, Ioſua legit omnia verba legis, &c. Ioſua read all the words of the Law, before a multitude of men, women and children: and Chryſoſtome would haue the wiues with their husbands to diſpute and conferre thereof. Adde hereunto the teſtimony of Lorinus the Ieſuite: The more noble of Theſſalonica were women, and men not a few, Act. 17. 11. who in examining the volume of the Scriptures, did that which Chriſt had moued the Iewes to doe, to ſearch the Scriptures, which is as Chryſoſtome, and Euthymius doe obſerue, not ſimply to reade, but throughly to ſift and diſcuſſe them.

AN APPENDIX OR PART OF THIS QVEſtion, concerning publike prayers and diuine ſeruice in the vulgar tongue.

The Papiſt.

4.Error. IT was decreed in the Tridentine Councell, that the ſeruice of the Church which they call the Maſſe, ſhould not be celebrated in the vulgar tongue, *ſeſſ.22.cap.*8. And it is the common practiſe euery where of the Romiſh church to vſe the Latine tongue onely. We muſt be content (ſay they) with thoſe three tongues which God honoured vpon the croſſe: namely, the Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine. This libertie onely they grant, that their prieſt may expound ſome things, as he readeth, and ſhew the meaning to the people.

*Argum.*1. Thus they argue: The maieſtie and grauitie of the ſacred buſineſſe, doe require alſo to be vttered in a ſage, ſanctified and graue language: Ergo not in the vulgar. *Bellar.lib.*2.*cap.*15.*argum.*7. We anſwere, the grauitie, reuerence and holineſſe conſiſteth not in words, phraſes, and ſounds, though neuer ſo eloquent, but in the things themſelues. Neither is any tongue that is vnderſtood, before the Lord counted barbarous: for S. Paul ſaith, that hee is a barbarian, and ſpeaketh barbarouſly in the Church, that cannot be vnderſtood, 1.Cor.14.11. And Acts 2.11. the very ſtrangers and barbarians heard the Apoſtles vtter in their languages the wonderfull things of God: they thought the tongue no diſgrace to thoſe holy myſteries they vttered.

Pope Nicholas 1.Epiſt.ad Michaelem Imperator.Conſtantinop. writeth thus of this matter, the Emperour in a certaine Epiſtle to the Pope had termed the Latine tongue barbarous: whom hee anſwereth thus: Omnis operis derogatio, redundat ad opificis iniuriam: ô furorem, qui nec linguæ nouit parcere quam Deus fecit: in eo ipſo, quo verum Deum colit lingua Latina, quantum barbaram, vel Scythicam linguam antecedit, agnoſcitur: The diſgracing of the worke, tendeth to the iniurie of the worker: What madnes is this, not to ſpare that tongue which God hath made? and herein, how farre the Latine tongue exceedeth the Barbarians and Scythians language, it is ſeene, becauſe it worſhippeth the true God. By theſe two reaſons, whereby he proueth the Latine tongue not to be barbarous, we likewiſe affirme neither the Engliſh tongue, nor any other vulgar language of Chriſtians to be barbarous: both becauſe they are the gifts and workes of God, and becauſe the true God is by thoſe vulgar tongues acknowledged and worſhipped.

Bellarm.lib.2. de verb.c.16. reſ.ad arg.2. *Argum.*2. Leuit.16.verſ.17. The people is commanded to ſtand without, till the prieſt went in and made attonement for them: they vnderſtood not the prieſt, for they heard him not: Ergo it is not neceſſarie the people ſhould vnderſtand the Miniſter. We anſwere: Firſt, that was a type of our Sauiour Chriſt, who euen ſo aſcended into heauen, as the high Prieſt did into the holie place: but types and figures proue nothing, ſauing wherein they are types, and whereunto they are deſtined and appointed. Secondly, they vnderſtood not the Prieſt, becauſe they heard him not: but they cannot proue that the Prieſt vttered any thing in their hearing at any time, which they vnderſtood not.

Rhemiſt.annot.1.Cor.c.14 ſect.14. *Argum.*3. We muſt onely vſe thoſe tongues in holie affaires, which were ſanctified in the croſſe: that is, Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine. We anſwere: Thoſe tongues were not then vſed for any ſuch purpoſe, but that the death of Chriſt might by thoſe common and vniuerſall tongues bee the further ſpread abroad. And ſurely if they would proue that theſe tongues were hereby ſanctified, me thinkes Pilate was no fit inſtrument of that ſanctification, by whoſe appointment the title was written: why then are not all tongues as well ſanctified, wherein the holy Ghoſt ſpake, as theſe which were written by Pilate? Thirdly, doth not the Apoſtle ſay, that euery tongue ſhall confeſſe that Ieſus Chriſt is the Lord, &c. 2.Philip.11. Seeing God hath ſanctified euery tongue and language for the confeſſion of the faith, how dare you goe againſt Gods ordinance? Laſtly, if thoſe three tongues only were conſecrated vpon the croſſe, why did Pope Nicholas the 1. when he had decreed that ſeruice ſhould bee ſaid in the Latine tongue, yet diſpenſe with the Sclauonians and Polonians, to haue it in their owne vulgar tongue?

The Proteſtants.

WE doe affirme, that as it hath been the commendable vſe of all ancient Churches, to haue the ſeruice in the vulgar tongue, that the people might vnderſtand, and be better ſtirred vp to deuotion: ſo the ſame godly vſe ought for euer to remaine and be retained in the Church of God.

1.Cor.14.26. *Argum.*1. This is moſt agreeable to S. Pauls doctrine, 1.Cor.14.verſ.26. who would haue all things done to edifying: but by an vnknowne tongue no man is edified: and he ſaith, hee had rather ſpeake fiue words to be vnderſtood, then tenne thouſand otherwiſe. Some of the Papiſts ſay, that Saint Paul ſpeaketh of preaching eſpecially and but obiter of praying: ſo B.Brookes, Fox pag.1879. But in the 14.verſe he ſpeaketh namely of prayer, and in the 16. of the peoples ſaying Amen, which was not giuen at ſermons, but in the end of prayers: this is but a weake anſwere. The Rhemiſts and the Ieſuite ſay, he meaneth certaine extraordinarie Hymnes and giuing of thankes, whereof S. Paul ſpeaketh Epheſ.5.19. Anſw. S. Paul ſpeaketh generally of all publike exerciſe in the Church, whether of prayer, preaching, ſinging, that it ſhould all be done in a knowne tongue: for he vſeth the generall termes of ſpeaking, φωνῆς, and of the voyce, as verſ.11. If I vnderſtand not the power of the voyce (he ſaith not of the ſong or preaching) I ſhall be to him that ſpeaketh, a barbarian: ſo he miſliketh not onely preaching, or ſinging, but any kinde of ſpeaking in the Church in a ſtrange tongue. And againe, S. Pauls reaſon is generall againſt all exerciſes in the Church ordinarie or extraordinarie in an vnknowne tongue, becauſe he would haue all things referred to the edification of the Church. Bellarmine againe thus anſwereth, that the reaſon is not alike, for theſe extraordinarie ſongs and prayers, which were vſed in thoſe times, and for the ordinarie ſeruice: for the end of thoſe ſongs, was the inſtruction and conſolation of the people: but that is not the end of our ordinarie prayers, but the ſeruice and worſhip of God: Bellarm. cap. 16. ad obiect. 1. Anſw. How is not the Ieſuite aſhamed thus to contradict the Apoſtle, who ſaith directly that the Scriptures are written for our comfort and conſolation, Rom. 15. 4. yet he ſaith the end of reading the Scriptures in the diuine office is not for conſolation. Secondly, as though the worſhip or ſeruice of God, can be ſeuered from the inſtruction and conſolation of the people; or can God be rightly worſhipped by that, which giueth no inſtruction to the worſhipper? Thus would the Ieſuite bring in againe, a Samaritane ſeruice or worſhip: for they (as our Sauiour ſaith) worſhip they know not what, and ſo doe the Papiſts: but we, ſaith he, all true worſhippers, worſhip that we know, Iohn 4. 22. and conſequently wee know that wee worſhip. This place of Saint Paul is too euident and plaine, then that it may bee ſo eaſilie wreſted and depraued by their hereticall and deceitfull gloſſes.

Out of this place of the Apoſtle, which maketh ſo directly againſt prayer in a ſtrange tongue, theſe arguments may be gathered. Firſt, no language not vnderſtood ought to be vſed in the Church, becauſe it edifieth not, and they ſhould ſpeake in the aire, that is, vainly, to no purpoſe, verſ. 9. Ergo, ſeruice in the Latine tongue is vnprofitable where it is not vnderſtood. So ſaith S. Ambroſe: Si ad edificandam eccleſiam conuenitis, ea debent dici quæ intelligunt audientes: If you come together to edifie the Church, thoſe things muſt bee ſpoken which may bee vnderſtood. Secondly, he that ſpeaketh with a ſtrange tongue, muſt keepe ſilence if there be no interpretor, verſ. 28. Ergo, Latine ſeruice muſt bee abandoned, vnleſſe they will interprete it, which were a loſt labour, ſeeing they may haue it as well in Engliſh. Againe, S. Ambroſe: Tacere debet in eccleſia, qui lingua loquitur, quam ſolus ſcit: He muſt hold his peace in the Church, which ſpeaketh with a tongue, which he only vnderſtandeth. Thirdly, he that ſpeaketh in a ſtrange tongue is as a Barbarian, or an alien to the hearer that vnderſtandeth not, verſ. 11. but it were abſurd, that the Miniſter of the word or Sacraments ſhould be an alien to the people. Ergo. So S. Ambroſe: Non competit fidelibus audire linguas, quas non intelligunt, ſed infidelibus, qui non ſunt digni intelligere: It is not meet for beleeuers to heare thoſe tongues, which they vnderſtand not, but for vnbeleeuers, who are not worthie to vnderſtand. Fourthly, no prayer or giuing of thankes ought to be vſed in the Church, vnto the which the people cannot ſay Amen, verſ. 16. but they cannot ſay Amen to Latine prayers, becauſe they know them not. Ergo. Fifthly, if it were not lawfull to vſe the miraculous gift of tongues, ſuch as this was in the Apoſtles time, without interpretation: much leſſe is the Latine to be vſed, which may be pronounced and read without a miracle. Argum. Proteſtant. diſput. Weſtmonaſt. pag. 2120. apud Fox.

Argum. 2. Who ſeeth not that prayers made with the vnderſtanding are more comfortable and fruitfull; the other nothing to profit at all, nor yet to be auaileable before God? Howſoeuer our aduerſaries ſay, that the heart and affection may pray, though the vnderſtanding pray not, yet Saint Paul ſaith, they ſpeake in the aire: their prayer is but winde, 1. Cor. 14. 9. and mine vnderſtanding (ſaith the Apoſtle) is without fruite, verſ. 14. Therefore not amiſſe did that godly Martyr M. Wiſehart compare the ridiculous geſtures of the prieſt at Maſſe, being not vnderſtood of the people, to the playing of an Ape: Fox pag. 1156. col. 1. And one Iohn Riburne was vniuſtly troubled of Longland Biſhop of Lincolne anno 1530. for ſaying, if we had our Pater noſter in Engliſh, one ſhould ſay it nine times, againſt once now: Fox pag. 898. col. 1. And was not that ghoſtly and Biſhoplike counſell thinke you of the Biſhop of Canaillon to the Merindolians in France? that it was ſufficient to know their Pater noſter, and Creed in Latine: it was not neceſſarie to ſaluation to vnderſtand or expound the articles of faith (for there were many Biſhops, Curats, yea Doctors of Diuinitie, whom it would trouble to expound the Creed or Pater noſter. Fox Martyrolog. pag. 866. col. 1.

1. Cor. 14. 9.

Fox pag. 1156. col. 1. of the laſt edition, anno 1610.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that a prayer in an vnknowne tongue may be profitable, if there bee the intention of the heart, for the prayer is made vnto God, and it is ſufficient if hee vnderſtand it: wee ſee alſo, that they which are abſent, who neither heare, nor vnderſtand our prayers, yet may be profited by them: neither is the inſtruction or edification of the people any end of prayer, but it is a part of ſeruice that belongeth vnto God: Bellarm. cap. 16. reſp. ad 2. & 4. obiect. Againe, ſaith he, the Apoſtle doth not ſay, that his prayer is without fruite, but only his minde or vnderſtanding, but his ſpirit and affection is profited: for he ſaith, thou verily giueſt thankes well: and the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch a tongue as none doe vnderſtand in the Church: but the Latine, though the common people vnderſtand it not, yet many that know the language doe.

Anſw. The heart cannot be neere vnto God without faith, whatſoeuer intention it hath; but faith is ioyned with knowledge: he then that praieth, he knoweth not what, can haue no faith or hope of thoſe things, which hee knoweth not. And if it were ſufficient, that God vnderſtood our praier, then need not the praier to be vttered by the voice, becauſe God knoweth the thoughts of the heart. Secondly, they which are abſent vnderſtand not the praiers made for them, becauſe they know them not: and they are prayed for, they pray not: but the people is preſent, within hearing of the voyce, and they all offer vp one prayer, therefore they ought to vnderſtand it. Thirdly, it is an abſurd anſwere, that publike reading is not for the peoples inſtruction: it hath no vſe nor end, in reſpect of God, who neede not to receiue any information, or to haue his memorie renued by reading of ſtories: wherfore it is either in vaine, or elſe the end thereof is the peoples inſtruction. And if prayer bee a part of Gods worſhip, which muſt proceede from the loue of God, and God is to be loued, with all our heart, our ſoule and minde, Matth. 22.37. then our prayers muſt not bee made with a bare intention onely, but with knowledge and vnderſtanding: for God requireth both the heart, the minde and the ſoule. Further, where the Apoſtle ſaith, My ſpirit praieth, but my minde is without fruite, he doth not ſo ſpeake, as though the ſpirit (that is the affection) could pray without the vnderſtanding: but by the ſpirit is vnderſtood the ſpirituall gift of ſpeaking with tongues, as Hierome, Sedulius, Primaſius expound this place, as they are cited by Eſpenſæus: de Chriſt. Mediator pag. 234. g. So that the meaning is this, he for his owne part, that hath the gift of tongues, prayeth or giueth thanks well, knowing and vnderſtanding what he prayeth; but the vnderſtanding of other, that heare, is not edified. Fifthly, therefore the Apoſtle miſliking that any ſhould ſo pray, not being vnderſtood of others, I will pray with the ſpirit, and I will pray with the vnderſtanding alſo, verſ. 15. And that the affection cannot bee good in prayer without the vnderſtanding, and that ſuch prayer is without fruite, Saint Ambroſe expounding this place, ſaith: Quem fructum habere poteſt, qui ignorat quæ loquatur? What fruit can he haue, who knoweth not what he ſpeaketh? Sixthly, neither were theſe ſtrange tongues vnderſtoode of none in the Church, for there was alſo the gift of interpretation, as well as the gift of tongues, verſ. 27. and yet manie times your Latine ſeruice is vnderſtood of none in the Church, no not of the Prieſt that ſaieth it: as may appeare by that Prieſt that ſpake falſe Latine, when hee baptized, ſaying: In nomine patria, filia, & ſpiritu ſancta: Which baptiſme was called into queſtion: and for better reſolution, they were faine to poſt vp to Rome to Pope Zacharie, who after much conſultation determined that notwithſtanding the falſe Latine, the baptiſme was good: Decret. par. 3. diſtinc. 4. cap. 86. And that many Popiſh Prieſts are no better Clerkes now a daies, then they were in thoſe times; let vs heare what Eraſmus ſaith: Quanquam ſacerdotum vulgus hodie magni faciat ſua verba, quæ nec ipſi qui ſonant intelligunt: Though now a daies the moſt ſort of Prieſts doe ſo magnifie their Latine words, which they vnderſtand not, that ſpeake them: Præfat. in Hieron. epiſt. Paulino tom. 4.

Argum. 3. In the time of the Law, all things pertaining to their publike prayer, benedictions, thanksgiuings, ſacrifices, were celebrated in their vulgar tongue, 2. Chron. chap. 29. Ezechias commanded the Leuites to praiſe God with the Pſalmes of Dauid and Aſaph, which no doubt were in the Hebrew tongue: If they did ſo in the ſhadowes of the Law, much more ought we now, who, as our Sauiour ſaith, ought to pray, ſpiritu & veritate, in ſpirit and trueth. Argum. Proteſtant. diſput. Weſtmonaſt.

We will conclude with Auguſtine: Quare dicta ſunt, niſi vt ſciantur? quare ſonuerunt, niſi vt audiantur? quare audita ſunt, niſi vt intelligantur? Tract. in Iohan. 21. Why are things ſpoken in the Church (ſaith he) but to be knowne? why are they pronounced but to be heard? why are they heard but to be vnderſtood? Ergo, Leſſons, and Scriptures, and publike prayers muſt bee vſed in a knowne tongue, ſo becauſe to be vnderſtood.

It was thus alſo decreed not long ſince in a generall Councell: Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Innocent. 3. cap. 9. Quoniam in plerisque partibus intra eandem ciuitatem permixti ſunt populi diuerſarum linguarum, diſtrictè præcipimus, vt pontifices huiuſmodi ciuitatum, prouideant viros idoneos, qui ſecundum diuerſitates rituum & linguarum diuina officia illis celebrent, & eccleſiaſtica ſacramenta miniſtrent: Becauſe in many places, in one and the ſame Citie there be mixed together people of diuers languages, we doe ſtraightly charge the Biſhops of thoſe Cities to prouide able men, to celebrate diuine ſeruice, and miniſter the Sacraments of the Church vnto them, according to the diuerſitie of their rites and languages, &c. What could be ſaid plainer, for the celebrating of diuine ſeruice in the vulgar tongue? Bellarmine that would anſwere this authoritie, that Innocentius decree is to be vnderſtoode onely of the Greeke and Latine tongues, and of no other; and that he would haue the ſeruice of the Church celebrated in theſe two tongues and no other, Reſp. 1. This appeareth to bee a weake anſwere, for the decree maketh mention of people diuerſarum linguarum, of diuers languages; and therefore he would haue the diuine office celebrated according to the diuerſitie of their tongues. But diuers tongues imply not a dualitie onely of two, but a pluralitie of many. 2. This Canon prouideth, that ſeruice ſhall be ſaid in diuers languages, becauſe of the diuerſitie of the people: but what neede this prouiſion, if that the vnderſtanding of the people ſhould not be reſpected? for otherwiſe one language might ſerue diuers people. 3. A little before, if the Ieſuite be remembred, hee ſaid, that many hundred yeeres agoe, long before Innocentius time, neither the Greeke in Grecia, nor the Latine in Italy were the vulgar tongues, nor commonly vnderſtood, chap. 15. and yet now he graunteth, that Innocentius would haue Greeke and Latine Seruice, becauſe of the diuerſitie of the people, that is, to their vnderſtanding: ſo Bellarmine neither agreeth with himſelfe, nor with their owne Canon.

Laſtly, in the defence of this truth, that prayers ought to be vſed in the vulgar tongue, Iohn Ardeley, and Iohn Simſon gaue their liues. Fox pag. 1438. col. 1. and Iohn Hallingdale, pag. 1837. col. 2. See the confeſſion alſo of Maſter Rogers before Wincheſter, pag. 1350. col. 1. and of Maſter Bradford, pag. 1469.

1469. col. 2. holy Martyrs. Let the Papiſts ſhew the like conſtancie in their Popiſh profeſſours if they can.

We will alſo adioyne here the teſtimonie of other Churches. 1. The Eaſt Churches doe celebrate diuine ſeruice in a tongue, which is vnderſtood of all. The Armenians in their diuine Seruice, Maſſes, Prayers and Ceremonies vſe the Armenian tongue, which is vnderſtood both of men and women throughout all their Countrey. The Georgians doe celebrate the Liturgie in their owne language, to the end the common people may be able to vnderſtand them: what the vſe of the Muſcouites is herein, is ſhewed in the next queſtion before.

Villamont lib. 2. c.23.
Nicholas lib. 4. c.16.

2 Of the Ethiopicke Church Theuet thus reporteth: I haue ſeene many Biſhops, and haue heard their Maſſes, which they ſay in the Abyſſine language, which is very neere the Arabike, which is the tongue of the Countrey.

Coſmogr. lib. 2. c.14.

3 The reformed Churches doe conſent herein: Confeſſion of Heluetia: Let all ſtrange tongues keepe ſilence in the holy aſſemblies, and let all things be vttered in the vulgar tongue, which is vnderſtood of all men in the companie. Confeſſion of Wittemberg. c. 27. This ſinging, becauſe it was vſed in a tongue not commonly knowne, had no godly vſe: and afterward in the ſame Chapter: They doe therefore godly, who doe ſo appoint the diſpenſation of the Sacraments, ſinging of Pſalmes, reading of holy Scriptures, that the Church may vnderſtand, that which is ſaid and read, &c. Confeſſion of Sweueland, chap. 24. No man ſhould ſpeake with tongues in the congregation without an interpreter. The ſame is the confeſſion of our Engliſh Church. We make our prayers in that tongue, which all our people, as meete is, may vnderſtand, &c. euen as all the holy fathers and Catholike Biſhops, both in the olde and new Teſtament, did vſe ſo to pray themſelues, and taught the people to pray too, &c.

4 Yea, and ſome of the Romane Church haue commended Seruice in the vulgar tongue as more profitable. Lyranus ſaith, if the people doe vnderſtand the prayer or benediction, Melius reducitur in Deum & deuotius reſpondet Amen: They are better brought vnto God, and doe more deuoutly anſwere Amen: ſo Caietane, by this doctrine of the Apoſtle, is gathered, Quod melius eſt ad aedificationem eccleſiae, &c. That it is better for the edifying of the Church, that publique prayers in hearing of the people, ſhould be ſaid in the common tongue: ſo likewiſe Faber, Maxima pars hominum, &c. The greater part of men that pray now a-dayes, I cannot tell whether in the ſpirit, they pray not certaine in the minde, for they pray in a tongue, which they vnderſtand not; but Paul doth ſpecially allow, that the faithfull ſhould pray with their ſpirit and mind; that is, vnderſtanding, &c.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION: OF THE authoritie of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

THe Papiſts of former times doubted not to ſay, that the Scripture is not authenticall without the authoritie of the Church; ſo Echius ſaith, ſo Pigghius, that the authoritie of the Scripture dependeth of the authoritie of the Church neceſſarily. Hermannus a Papiſt moſt impudently affirmeth, that the Scripture ſhould bee of no more credite then Æſopes fables, without the approbation of the Church: a foule blaſphemie. But our Papiſts of later time, being aſhamed of their fore-fathers ignorance, they ſay that the Scriptures in themſelues are perfect, ſufficient, authenticall, but that to vs it appeareth not ſo; neither are we bound to take them for Scripture without the authoritie of the Church: ſo Canus, Bellarmine, Stapleton. So that (ſay they) in reſpect of vs the Church hath abſolute authoritie to determine, which is Scripture, which not. Ex Whitacher. quaeſt. 3. de Scriptur. cap. 1.

5.Error.
Echius enchirid. loc. de authorit. eccleſ.
Pigghius lib. 1. de Hierach eccleſ. cap. 2.
Can. loc. com. lib. 2. cap. 8.
Stap. lib. 9. doc. princip. cap. 1.

Argum. 1. There is no more certaine authoritie, then of the Church: Ergo the Church muſt determine of Scripture, ſic Stapleton. We anſwere. Firſt, the Maieſtie of the Scriptures themſelues is more certaine, and the inward teſtimonie of the ſpirit, without the which wee cannot be perſwaded of the truth and authoritie of the Scripture. Secondly, if they meane by the Church, the Synagogue of Rome, it hath nothing to doe to iudge of Scripture, being the ſeate of Antichriſt: neither is the authoritie of that Church to be credited, but rather ſuſpected and miſtruſted.

Argum. 2. There are certaine writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles not Canonicall; and other writings of ſome that were no Prophets, made Canonicall: Ergo the Church hath authoritie to iudge of Scripture, ſic Stapleton. For the firſt, where he obiecteth that there are many writings of the Prophets, as of Salomon, Nathan, Ahija, Iddo, 2. Chron. 9.29. that are loſt, and if they were extant, ſhould not be receiued: We anſwere. Firſt, it is not to be doubted of, but ſome part of the Canonicall Scripture is loſt. Secondly, how proueth hee that if they were extant, they were not to be acknowledged for Scripture?

2.Chron.9.29.

Stapleton further obiecteth, that Saint Pauls Epiſtle written to the Laodiceans whereof mention is made, Coloſſ. 4. 16. was neuer receiued into the Canon. We anſwere, there is no ſuch Epiſtle mentioned in that place ſent to the Laodiceans, but from Laodicea, as it is in the Originall, which was not like to haue beene of the Apoſtles writing to them, who at that time had not ſeene the Laodiceans, Coloſſ. 2. 1. but an Epiſtle rather written by them to the Apoſtle; which S. Paul would haue the Coloſſians reade, becauſe it might conteine ſomewhat, which did concerne them: that Epiſtle therefore, that carrieth S. Pauls name to the Laodiceans, is but a forged, and baſtard writing, and therefore wor-their number out of the canon. This was the iudgement also of a generall Councell, Nicen. 2. action 6. tom. 5. Inter epistolas diuini Apostoli, quaedam fertur ad Laodicenses, quam patres nostri tanquam alienam reiecerunt: Amongst the Epistles of the diuine Apostle there is one counted, bearing the name to the Laodiceans, which our fathers haue reiected as a baſtard and forraine writing. Their ſentence is that this Epiſtle was fained, and neuer written by S. Paul.

To the ſecond, that bookes not made by Prophets are iudged canonicall, as of Toby, Iudith: Wee anſwere, that theſe bookes ought not to be canonicall, neither that euer they were ſo taken, till of late it was decreed by Councels of no great antiquitie: for in the Laodicene Councell and other ancient Councels they were deemed not to be canonicall, as hath been ſhewed before, Error 1.

Argum. 3. Certaine bookes of the new Teſtament before doubted of, as the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, the Apocalypſe, the ſecond Epiſtle of Peter, the ſecond of Iohn, are receiued into authoritie by the Church; and other bookes, as the Goſpell of Thomas, Matthias, Andrew, Peter, were reiected by the authoritie of the Church. We anſwere: Firſt, we denie not but that the Church is to diſcerne betweene the true Scriptures and forged bookes: but this ſhe doth not of her owne authoritie, but following the direction of Gods ſpirit ſpeaking in thoſe writings: for the Church looking into the ſacred and diuine matter of the Apoſtles writings, was moued to acknowledge them for the word of God though of ſome they were doubted of: and finding the other to be fabulous bookes, did by the direction of the ſame ſpirit reiect them. Secondly, Auguſtine and Hierome thinke that the canon of Scripture might be confirmed in the Apoſtles time, Iohn being the ſuruiuer of them all, who both acknowledged the true writings of the Apoſtles, and condemned the contrarie. If it be ſo (the ſpirit of God in the Apoſtles hauing determined this queſtion alreadie concerning the canonicall Scripture) the Church hath no authoritie to alter or change that decree. Concerning this matter S. Auguſtine writeth thus vnto S. Hierome, epiſt. 19. Veritas diuinarum ſcripturarum, &c. non a quibuſlibet, ſed ab ipſis Apoſtolis, ac per hoc in canonicum authoritatis culmen recepta, ex omni parte verax & indubitata perſiſtit: The truth of the diuine Scriptures was receiued into the canon of authoritie by none other but the Apoſtles themſelues, and therefore is vndoubtedly true. The Apoſtles then by the ſpirit of God haue ſet downe the canon of the Scriptures, which the Church is bound to receiue, and beleeue: it hath no authoritie to make the canon of the Scriptures.

Argum. 4. The Church is more ancient then Scripture, and was before it. Ergo, it is of more authoritie then Scripture: Argum. Eckij Enchirid. & Hoſ. lib. 3. de authoritate ſcripturæ.

Anſw. 1. We graunt, that the Scriptures, that is the word written, haue not been from the beginning: yet though there were a Church before the Scriptures, that is the word written, the word of God notwithſtanding was before the Church, which is the ſame now written, that was before vnwritten. 2. Neither is the argument good, for alwaies that, which is more ancient, is not of greateſt authoritie: for Iohn Baptiſt, in reſpect of his office came before Chriſt, yet was not his authoritie greater.

The Proteſtants.

We doe not deſpiſe the ſentence of the Church, as our aduerſaries doe falſly charge vs: nay we doe reuerence the iudgement of the Church of God, and beare it with all obedience, to whom we confeſſe it belongeth. 1. As a faithfull keeper or treaſurer, carefully to preſerue and keepe the holie Scriptures from being violated or corrupted by heretikes or other enemies of Scripture. 2. According to her ſpirituall cunning, to diſcerne the Scripture from other forged and baſtard writings, as the Goldſmith doth the gold from other adulterate mettall. 3. To propound and preach, and hold out the light of Gods truth to the people. 4. To interpret and expound Scripture according to the analogie of faith: Whitak. quaeſt. 3. cap. 2. de ſcriptur. We confeſſe alſo as much, as hath bin in former times decreed by the Papiſts themſelues: Penes eccleſiam eſt diſcernendi authoritas ſcripturas veras ab adulterinis: ſic etiam poteſtatē habet interpretandi, atque adeo ex eiſdem ſcripturis eliciendi & explanandi dogmata: The Church hath power to diſcerne true Scripture from falſe, alſo to interpret the Scripture, and out of the ſame to deriue and explane precepts of religion, that is to preach, &c. But the Church ought not to ſet the Lords ſtamp vpon falſe coine, as the Papiſts doe in making Apocryphall bookes canonicall. Neither doe we only beleeue the Scripture, because of the Churches teſtimonie, nor chiefly, but becauſe the ſpirit of God doth ſo teach vs, and the Scriptures themſelues doe teſtifie for themſelues: ſo that euery man is bound to acknowledge the Scripture, though there were no publike approbation of the Church: Fulk. 2. Galat. 6. Whitaker. quaeſt. 3. cap. 2. de Scripturis. We doe reaſon thus.

Interrelig. Cæſares cap. 11. anno 1548.

Argum. 1. The Ieſuite doth reaſon ſtrongly for vs: he bringeth fiue arguments to proue the Scripture to be the word of God: veritas vaticiniorum, the conſtant and perpetuall truth of the Prophecies: incredibilis ſcriptorum conſpiratio, the wonderfull harmonie and conſent of holie writers of the Scripture: teſtis eſt Deus ipſe, the ſpirit of God is a principall witneſſe vnto vs: teſtis eſt ipſa Scriptura, the Scripture it ſelfe beareth witneſſe, as 2. Tim. 3. all Scripture is giuen by inſpiration: teſtis eſt diuinorum numerus infinitus miraculorum: laſtly, the many and great miracles wrought by the Prophets and Apoſtles doe teſtifie for the trueth thereof. See this place excepted againſt and anſwered, Retect. p. 98. He maketh no mention heere of the teſtimonie of the Church, but ſaith the ſame that we hold, that the ſpirit of God inwardly working in our hearts by the Scriptures themſelues, which wee finde to be moſt perfect, conſonant, true, of ſingular maieſtie, doth teach vs which is the word of God: Bellarm.de verbo Dei lib.1.c.2.

Theſe arguments or inducements, which do ariſe of the conſideration of the Scriptures themſelues (as Bellarmine here ſetteth downe ſome, and other may be added vnto them) are more forcible to perſwade vs, that it is the word of God, then the bare teſtimonie of the Church. Firſt, doctrinæ maieſtas, the ſingular maieſtie of the Scriptures, in the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and of the heauenly doctrine therein contained: wherein none of the writings of the Philoſophers or Orators, are to be compared vnto them. Secondly, beſide the maieſtie of the matter, the puritie of ſtile, grauitie and diuineneſſe of ſpeech, doth commend the excellencie of Scripture. Thirdly, the antiquitie of theſe holy writings, ſheweth them to be diuine: for the bookes of Moſes are found to bee more ancient, then all the writings in the world. Fourthly, the propheticall predictions and prophecies, which afterward were accompliſhed, yea the very names of certaine men were ſet downe many yeeres before they were borne, as Ioſias 1.King.13.2. Cyrus, Eſay 44.28. Fifthly, the wonderfull and ſtrange miracles, which were wrought by the Prophets and Apoſtles. Sixthly, the teſtimonies alſo of Martyrs, which gaue their liues in defence of the holie doctrine ſet foorth in Scripture, doe euidently declare, that they are diuine writings. Seuenthly, the enemies of the Scriptures, which haue attempted all meanes to extinguiſh them, and could not preuaile, doe ſet foorth the maieſtie, and authoritie thereof. Eightly, the writers alſo of the Scriptures the Prophets and Apoſtles, doe not a little moue vs: who were but ſimple and plaine men, as ſhepheards, heardmen, fiſhermen, before they were called and ſet apart of God for this worke: whereby it is apparant, that God who inſpired them with ſo great grace, was the author of the Scriptures: *Hæc Caluin lib. inſtitut.1.cap.*8. Theſe aforeſaid motiues doe eaſilie conuince, that the Scriptures are no humane, but diuine writings: and they are more able to moue vs, then the bare teſtimonie of the Church: yet perſwade vs they cannot, which is the only worke of the ſpirit, but onely prepare our hearts, and ſtirre vs vp: Ergo, much leſſe is the authoritie of the Church able to doe it.

*Argum.*2. The Scripture giueth authoritie to the Church: Ergo, the Church giueth not authoritie to the Scripture: the firſt wee prooue by our aduerſaries owne confeſſion: for being asked, how they know that the Church erreth not, they alleage ſuch places of Scripture, as Matth.28.20. I am with you to the end of the world, and the like: how then doth the Church giue authoritie to Scripture, ſeeing it taketh her warrant and authoritie from thence? The Ieſuite himſelfe ſaith, that nihil eſt certius vel notius ſcripturis, nothing is more certaine or notoriouſly knowne then Scripture. And againe, ſacra Scriptura eſt regula credendi certiſſima, the holy Scripture is the moſt certaine rule of faith: Bellarm.de verbo, 1.2. If the authoritie of Scripture then be moſt certaine, what reaſon is it, that they ſhould depend vpon the iudgement of the Church, which is nothing ſo certaine? The leſſe certaine ought rather (and ſo doth indeed) depend of the more certaine; the Church vpon the Scripture, not contrariwiſe; for the Scriptures are the foundation of the Church, Epheſ.2.20.

Epheſ.2.20.

*Argum.*3. To beleeue the Scripture is a worke of faith: the Church cannot infuſe faith into vs, but the ſpirit of God: Ergo, the ſpirit of God not the Church teacheth vs to beleeue Scripture, *argum. Whitack.*18.

Againe, if the Scriptures depend vpon the approbation of the Church, then the promiſes of ſaluation and eternall life contained in the Scriptures doe ſo likewiſe: but it is abſurd to thinke that the promiſes of God doe ſtand vpon the allowance of men: Ergo, neither the Scriptures, *argum. Caluini, lib.*1 *inſtitut.cap.*7.

*Argum.*4. The Scripture is the chiefe iudge, and ought ſo to be in all controuerſies: we may appeale from the Church to the Scripture, not from the Scripture to the Church: the Church is ſubiect to the Scriptures, the rule of faith is in the Scriptures, not in the Church: for the companie of the faithfull, which is the Church, are ruled by faith: they doe not ouerrule faith: neither are a rule thereof: the Church is a point of beleefe, as in the Creed, not a rule or meaſure thereof: Ergo, the Church is not the chiefe iudge of Scripture, but it ſelfe to be iudged by Scripture.

*Argum.*5. We haue euident places of Scripture, Iohn 5.34. ſaith Chriſt, I receiue no witneſſe of men: but the Scripture is the voice of Chriſt, and of the ſame authoritie. Ergo. verſ.36. I haue a greater teſtimonie then of Iohn, the Scriptures doe teſtifie of me. verſ.9. The teſtimonie of the Scriptures is greater then the record of Iohn: Ergo then of the Church. 1.Iohn 5.6. The ſpirit beareth witneſſe, that the ſpirit, that is, the doctrine of the ſpirit, is the truth. And verſ 9. If wee receiue the witneſſe of man, the witneſſe of God is greater: Ergo, not the iudgement of the Church, but the witneſſe of the ſpirit doth certifie and aſſure vs of the truth and authoritie of Scripture.

I will adde one ſaying out of Auguſtine: *Mihi certum eſt, nuſquam a Chriſti authoritate diſcedere, non enim reperio valentiorem. Contra Academic.lib.*3.*cap.*20. I am reſolued for no cauſe to leaue the authoritie of Chriſt (ſpeaking in the Scriptures) for I finde none more forcible: Ergo, the authoritie of Scripture is aboue the Church, which is denied by the Rhemiſts, *annot.*2.*Gal.ſect.*2. I will heere vrge them with their own authoritie: Thomas Aquinas hath this diſtinction: that God worketh two waies; firſt by mediate cauſes, as the Prophet ſaith, Pſal.138. Thou haſt made me, that is, by the work of nature: ſecondly, hee worketh ſome things immediatly, as miracles: ſo hee ſaith, Deum hominis intellectum per alias literas mediatè inſtruere, per ſacras immediatè: God inſtructeth man mediatly by other writings, but immediatly by the Scriptures: as miracles then are Gods works immediatly, ſo are the Scriptures his words. Then as miracles of themſelues are knowne to be Gods works, as the Magicians in Ægypt could ſay, digitus Dei eſt, it is the finger of God; ſo are Scriptures knowne to bee Gods writings: for if we ſhould neede the teſtimonie of men to perſwade vs of the word; then God thereby doth not immediatly inſtruct vs, as Thomas Aquinas here ſaith. So then, as the Lawes of Emperours, though they were, ſine die et conſule, without the date of the day and the Conſull, were notwithſtanding authentike, becauſe they were imperiall, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4. leg. 1. Iuſtinian. Much more the holy Scriptures ought of themſelues to beare credite, becauſe they are diuine.

Laſtly, let vs ſee the confeſſion of the holy Martyrs, whoſe iudgement in matters of faith, though our aduerſaries regard it not, yet is of vs much to be regarded, ſeeing they doubted not to ſpend their liues in defence of their faith.

Maiſter Philpot thus anſwereth to Morgans argument, who vrged that the Church was before Scripture, and therefore aboue Scripture: that the word of God conſiſted not onely in letters and externall writing, but it was the word, wherewith the hearts of the Patriarches, Prophets and Apoſtles were inſpired, euen before it was written, as the ſalutation of the Angell was the Scripture of Chriſt, and word of God, euen before it was written: ſic Philpot. pag. 1288. col. 2. diſput. conuocat.

Maiſter Bradford ſaith, that the Church is a meane more ſpeedily to bring vs to know the Scriptures: as was the woman of Samaria a meane to bring the Samaritanes to know Chriſt: but as they, when they had heard Chriſt, beleeued not ſo much becauſe of her report, as for that they heard him themſelues ſpeake: ſo after that Scriptures are diſcerned, and ſhowed to vs by the Church, we beleeue them to be the word of God, not becauſe the Church ſaith ſo, but for that indeede wee finde them to be ſo, as true ſheepe acknowledging the voice of our ſhepheard Chriſt Ieſus ſpeaking therein, hac ille: pag. 1467. col. 1.

Maſter Glouer Martyr, to this argument propounded, the Church ſheweth which is the word of God, Ergo it is aboue the word, anſwereth thus: this is no good reaſon, for by the ſame argument Iohn Baptiſt ſhall be aboue Chriſt, becauſe he ſhewed Chriſt: and he that telleth one which is the King, ſhould be aboue the King. pag. 1555. col. 1.

Robert Drakes Martyr, being asked how he knew the Scriptures to be the word of God, anſwered: by the holy doctrine which it containeth, teaching ſaluation by Chriſt, and giuing precepts of holineſſe, to withdraw vs from a wicked life. William Tims anſwered, that the olde Teſtament doth giue witneſſe to the new, and one of them doth teſtifie for another: whereby it appeareth, they are the verie word of God. Fox pag. 1732. col. 1. All thoſe holy Martyrs died in this confeſſion of their faith: therefore bleſſed be God that hath not left his truth without ſuch excellent witneſſes, in thoſe crooked and euill daies.

For forraine teſtimonies. 1. Firſt, the Eaſt Church doth aſcribe the ſupreame authoritie to the Scriptures. 1. The King of Muſconia thus ſaid, if the Goſpell had not beene written, how could the word of God haue been underſtoode, and if the Apoſtles had not reduced into writing their delegation and commiſſion, how had it beene knowne to the world, that they were ſent to men. 2. Damianus a Goes writeth of the Abyſſines in Africa, that they haue certaine writings beſide the Scriptures, but they held the Scriptures ſufficient without them, and denie not the name of true Chriſtians to thoſe which haue not thoſe bookes, &c. Thus they make the Scripture abſolute in it ſelfe, without the decrees and ordinances of men.

There is no other way but onely by the Scriptures. Pictauius* thus reſolued at the Councell of Trent: Who doubteth the ſacred Scripture, Solam eſſe iudicem, &c. To be the onely Iudge of all controuerſies of religion. Then it will follow that this controuerſie, which are the canonicall Scriptures, muſt be decided by the Scriptures themſelues.

THE FIFTH QVESTION CONCERNING THE perſpicuitie and plaineneſſe of the Scripture.

The Papiſts.

OVr aduerſaries doe hold, that the Scriptures are moſt hard, difficult, and obſcure. Bellarmine ſaith, Neceſſario fatendum eſt, Scripturas eſſe obſcuriſſimas, It muſt needes be graunted that the Scriptures are moſt obſcure, de verbo Dei, lib. 3. cap. 1. They doe not onely affirme that ſome things are obſcure in the Scriptures: but that they are all hard, and doubtfull, and vncertaine, and compare them therefore to a leaden rule, which may be turned euery way, Petrus a Soto. And to a noſe of wax, Lindanus a Papiſt, ex Tilmanno de verbo Dei, error. 5. Our Rhemiſts ſay, it is all one to affirme ſome things to be hard in a writer, and the writer to be hard: ſo they conclude, that the Scriptures are both in reſpect of the matter and manner, very hard, and therefore daungerous for the ignorant to reade them. Rhemenſ. annot. in 2. Pet. 3. verſ. 16. 6. Error.

Argum. 1. They obiect that place, 2. Pet. 3. 16. where the Apoſtle ſaith, ſpeaking of S. Pauls Epiſtles, that many things are hard. Ergo, the Epiſtles of S. Paul are hard, and ſo the Scriptures: this is Bellarmines argument. We anſwere. Firſt, he ſaith not, that Pauls Epiſtles are hard, but many things, which he entreateth of. Secondly, they are hard not to all, but the vnſtable and vnlearned doe peruert them. Thirdly, we denie not, but that ſome places in the Scripture are obſcure, and haue neede of interpretation: but it followeth not, that therefore the whole Scripture is obſcure: and becauſe of ſome hard places, that the people ſhould be forbidden the reading of all. 2. Pet. 3. 16.

Argum. 2. The Scriptures are obſcure both in reſpect of the matter and manner: firſt, the matter is high and myſticall: as of the Trinitie, of the incarnation of the word, of the nature of Angels, and ſuch like. We anſwere, theſe myſteries may bee conſidered three diuers waies. 1. In their owne nature: ſo are they hard indeed, for by humane reaſon, we cannot attaine to the depth of them. 2. In reſpect of their handling in the Scripture: ſo are they not obſcure, for all theſe things are plainely declared in the word, as the nature of ſuch deepe myſteries will afford. 3. In reſpect of vs: ſo muſt they needes be obſcure, if men bee not contented with the knowledge in the word, but curiouſly ſearch further. Luther therefore doth aptly diſtinguiſh of theſe things, hee ſaith that, res Dei, the things of God are obſcure, the very depth of his myſteries cannot be comprehended of vs: but, res Scripturæ, theſe things, as they are opened in Scripture, are plaine, if wee will content our ſelues with that knowledge.

Secondly (ſaith Bellarmine) the manner of handling is hard and obſcure: there are many tropes, metaphors, allegories, Hebraiſmes, which cannot eaſily be vnderſtood. We anſwere. Firſt, many of theſe are rather ornaments of the Scripture, as tropes, metaphors, then impediments to the reader. Secondly, though the phraſe of Scripture ſeeme hard at the firſt, yet by further trauell in the Scriptures it may become eaſie and plaine: for all things are not vnderſtood at the firſt. Thirdly, we denie not but that ſome places are obſcure, and had need to be opened.

Argum. 3. If the Scriptures be not hard, what neede ſo many Commentaries, and expoſitions, Rhemiſt. 2. Pet. 3. 16. & Bellarm. lib. 3. de verb. Dei, cap. 1. We anſwere. Firſt, ſo many Commentaries are not requiſite, ſome may be ſpared. Secondly, expoſitions are needefull for the vnderſtanding of darke places; but many things are plaine enough without expoſitions, and may be vnderſtood of the ſimple. Thirdly, expoſitions alſo of the plaineſt places are needfull, not ſo much for the explication of the meaning, as application for manners.

Argum. 4. Becauſe that place, Geneſ. 4. 23. How Lamech ſaith, I would ſlay a man in my wound, &c. is hard: as likewiſe, that place, Geneſ. 11. 12. where Cainan is put in by the Septuagint, whom Luke followeth, which name is not in the originall: and Geneſ. 36. 2. Eſaus wiues are ſet forth by other names, then Geneſ. 28. hereupon, by reaſon of the difficultie of theſe places, they inferre the Scriptures to be hard: Doway tranſlators, in their ſeuerall annotations vpon theſe places. Gen. 4. 23. Gen. 11. 12. Gen. 36. 2.

Confut. 1. It followeth not, becauſe ſome places in the Scriptures are hard to be vnderſtood, therefore, all the Scriptures are obſcure: we deny not, but that ſome places are profound, and of deepe ſenſe, yet other, and they the moſt, which concerne faith and manners, are plaine and eaſie to be vnderſtood, and fit for the capacitie of the meaneſt, that will apply his heart.

2. The places giuen in inſtance, are not of ſuch inextricable difficultie, as that the Reader ſhould be diſcouraged from the reading of ſuch places: in the firſt place Lamech vaunteth himſelfe vpon hope of Caines impunitie, that hee will not take the leaſt wrong at any mans hand, but ſlay and kill in his wrath, and yet hope to goe vnpuniſhed: for the ſecond, it is moſt like, that S. Luke in a matter of no greater weight, would not diſſent from the Septuagint, being a tranſlation ſo generally receiued: leſt he might haue thereby offended, and brought a preiudice to the whole ſtorie of the Goſpell: touching the third, it is not vnuſuall for the ſame perſons to bee knowne by diuers names, and ſo is it like Eſaus wiues were called. See Iunius vpon that place. 7. Error. See further for theſe places Hexapl. vpon Geneſis.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not hold that the Scripture is euery where ſo plaine and euident, that it need no interpretation, as our aduerſaries doe ſlander vs, and therefore here they doe fight with their own ſhadow. Bellarm.lib.3.de verbo, cap.1. Wee confeſſe, that the Lord in the Scriptures hath tempered hard things and eaſie together, that we might be exerciſed in the Scriptures, and might knocke and labour by prayer and ſtudie, for the opening of the ſenſe: and that there might bee order kept in the Church, ſome to be hearers, ſome teachers and expounders, by whoſe diligent ſearch and trauell, the harder places may be opened to the people. But this we affirme againſt our aduerſaries: firſt, that all points of faith neceſſarie to ſaluation, are plainely ſet forth in the Scriptures. Secondly, that the Scriptures may with great profit be read of the ſimple and vnlearned, notwithſtanding the hardneſſe of ſome places, which in time alſo (vſing the means) they come to the vnderſtanding of, Ex Fulk. annot. 2. Pet. 3. 16. Whitacher. quæſt. 4. cap. 1.

Deut.30.11. Argum. 1. Firſt, that which we maintaine is euident out of the Scripture, Deut. 30. 11. The commandement, which I command thee, is not hid from thee, nor farre off. And as it followeth, Thou needeſt not aſcend to the heauens, or goe beyond the ſea: the word is neere vnto thee, euen in thy mouth and heart, to doe it. argum. Brentij. Ergo the Scriptures are plaine. The Ieſuite anſwereth, that it is meant onely of the decalogue and the ten commandements, that they are eaſie, not of the whole Scripture. As though if the commandements be eaſie the reſt of the Scriptures be not likewiſe, as the Prophets and hiſtoricall bookes, being but commentaries and expoſitions of the decalogue. S. Paul, Rom. 10. 6. vnderſtandeth this place of the whole doctrine of faith, who better knew the meaning of Moſes then the Ieſuite. Againe, the Prophet Dauid ſaith, Thy word is a lanterne to my feet, and a light to my paths: which is not to be vnderſtood onely of the commandements and precepts in Scripture, but of the whole word of God, as Auguſtine expoundeth it: Quod ait lucerna pedibus verbum tuum, verbum eſt, quod ſcripturis omnibus ſanctis continetur: where he ſaith, thy word is a lanterne to my feete, he vnderſtandeth the word of God, which is contained in all the holie Scriptures, Auguſt. concion. 23. in Pſalm. 118.

Pſal.119.105. 2.Pet.1.19. Argum. 2. The Prophet Dauid ſaith, Pſalm. 119. 105. Thy word is a lanterne vnto my feet, and a light vnto my path: and S. Peter compareth the word of the Prophets to a light that ſhineth in a darke place, 2. Pet. 1. 19. The Scriptures then are eaſie, cleare and plaine: Bellarmine telleth vs that the Scriptures are called a light, non quia facile intelligantur, &c. Not becauſe they are eaſily vnderſtood, but being once vnderſtood, then they doe lighten and illuminate the minde, and ſhew the way vnto Chriſt: cap. 2. reſponſ. ad argum. 2. & 4. Contra 1. Yes the Scripture is bothwaies a light, both for inſtruction and vnderſtanding, and then for ſpirituall direction: as Dauid ſheweth, both it is a lanterne to the feet for inſtruction, and a light to the path for direction. 2. Like as a lanterne is both eaſie to be ſeene, and being ſeene directeth; ſo is the Scripture eaſie to be vnderſtood, and being vnderſtood it guideth: for it giueth wiſedome to the ſimple, Pſal.19.7. Pſal. 19. 7. But if it were ſo hard and obſcure, it ſhould be without the reach and compaſſe of the ſimple.

2.Cor.4.3. Argum. 3. 2. Cor. 4. 3. If our Goſpell be hid, it is to them onely that are loſt: Ergo the Scriptures are plaine to the faithfull. The Ieſuite anſwereth, S. Paul ſpeaketh of the knowledge of Chriſt, not of the Scriptures. Firſt it is manifeſt out of the ſecond verſe, that S. Paul ſpeaketh of that Goſpell, which he preached to the Corinthians, which is the ſame hee wrote vnto them: wherefore if the Goſpell preached were eaſie and plaine, why is not the Goſpell written by him, I meane the doctrine of faith, being the ſame which he preached? Secondly, if they grant that the knowledge of Chriſt is eaſie, wee aske no more: for this is that we ſay, that the doctrine of faith and ſaluation is plainely expreſſed in Scripture.

Eſay 29.11. Apoc.5.5. Argum. 4. This is the difference betweene the new Teſtament and the old: the old is compared to a claſped booke, Eſa. 29. 11. the new to a booke opened, Apoc. 5. 5. The knowledge of Chriſtians farre exceedeth the knowledge of the Iewes: it is lawfull for them to reade the Scriptures, much more for all Chriſtians. The Ieſuite anſwereth that our knowledge is greater then theirs, not in all Scripture, but in the myſteries of our redemption onely. We anſwere, this is all we deſire: for if the myſtery of ſaluation and redemption be plainely opened in the Scripture, why ſhould not the people bee admitted to the reading of the word, to be confirmed in the knowledge of their redemption? Who ſeeth not what ſilie anſwers theſe be? Auguſtine thus writeth of this matter, In iis (inquit) quæ apertè in ſcripturis poſita ſunt, inueniuntur ea omnia, quæ fidem continent, moreſque viuendi: De doctrin. Chriſtian. lib. 2. cap. 9. The plaine and eaſie places of Scripture containe all things neceſſarie vnto faith and good life: Ergo, the doctrine of ſaluation in the Scriptures is not hard and difficult, but eaſie of good Chriſtians to be vnderſtood.

Toletan. 5. cap. 16. it was thus decreed: Qui apocalypſin Iohannis à Paſcha vſque ad Pentecoſten Miſſarum tempore in eccleſia non prædicauerit, excommunicationis ſententiam habebit: Hee that refuſeth to preach to the people in the time of diuine ſeruice from Eaſter to Whitſuntide the Apocalypſe of S. Iohn, ſhall haue the ſentence of excommunication. By this appeareth, that this Councell deemed not the reſt of the Scripture ſo very hard, ſeeing they ſo ſtraightly enioyne the reading and preaching of the hardeſt booke in Scripture to the people: which ſome reformed Churches euen at this day doe forbeare the reading of.

Further, if that by the Emperiall law it was prouided, Vt ad omnium notitiam, conſtitutiones valeant peruenire: That the conſtitutions ſhould come to euerie mans knowledge: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 1. lege 3. Iuſtinian: And againe, Conſtitutionum noſtri codicis iubar omnibus clareat. leg. 3. That as the Sun beames our conſtitutions ſhould ſhine vpon all. How much more comfortable and perſpicuous to all is the Sunne light of the Scriptures?

I will alſo vrge them with their owne decrees: Decret. par. 1. diſt. 38. cap. 9. Ignorantia ſcripturarum ignoratio Chriſti: The ignorance of the Scripture, is the ignorance of Chriſt. If then the people be kept from the knowledge of Scripture, they cannot attaine to the knowledge of Chriſt.

Heare alſo what a writer of your owne alleageth to this purpoſe out of Proſper, Paruuli, magni, fortes, infirmi habent in ſcripturis vnde alantur & ſatientur: Great and ſmall, ſtrong and weake, may finde nouriſhment in the Scriptures. And in the ſame place he hath theſe verſes.

I will in the laſt place adde the iudgement of a reuerend and learned man, that faithfull martyr, and bleſſed ſeruant of God D. Tailor, who in an epiſtle of his confuteth a certaine ſermon made by a Popiſh Prieſt in Hadley, whereof the ſaid D. Tailor was Paſtor: he ſaith, the Scripture is full of darke ſentences: but indeed it is called of Dauid, a candle to our feet, and a light to our ſteps. Concerning forrain teſtimonies. 1. Seeing the Eaſt Church do cauſe the Scriptures to be read in the vulgar tongue, as hath been ſhewed before touching the vſage of the Armenians, and Muſcouites, err. 3. 2. And ſeeing the ſame is the vſage of the South and Abyſſine Church to haue the Scripture read in the Tigique language, which is vnderſtood of all: no doubt their opinion is, that the Scriptures are alſo to be vnderſtood of the common people: eſpecially ſeeing; as Theuet reporteth, there are few preachers among the Muſcouites, but they content themſelues with the Lectures of the Goſpell and Epiſtles euery Sunday, in a language, which their people vnderſtand. THE SIXTH QVESTION: CONCERNING the interpretation of Scripture.

THis queſtion doth diuide it ſelfe into three parts: Firſt, concerning the diuers ſenſes of the Scripture. Secondly, to whom the chiefe authority to expound Scripture is committed. Thirdly, what meanes muſt be vſed in the interpretation of Scripture.

THE FIRST PART OF THE SIXTH QVESTION: of the diuers ſenſes of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

THere are two ſtrange aſſertions of our aduerſaries concerning this matter. Firſt, they affirme that the Scripture may haue diuers ſenſes and meanings in the ſame place. 7. Error. The ſenſe of the Scripture is either literall (ſay they) and hiſtoricall, which is the firſt and moſt proper ſenſe; or ſpirituall, that is an higher ſenſe deriued out of the other. The literall ſenſe, which there is gathered directly, and immediately out of the words; the ſpirituall, which hath another reference, then to that, which the words doe properly ſignifie. The literall is of two ſorts, either plaine and ſimple, or elſe figuratiue; as where Chriſt ſaith, I haue other ſheepe which are not of this folde, &c. Iohn 10. Whereby he vnderſtandeth other people beſide the Iewes. Iohn 10.16. The ſpirituall is of three kinds; Allegoricall, Tropologicall, Anagogicall gogicall : they shew by particular instance and induction, that the Scripture beside the literall sense may haue these also.

Galat.4.24. The Allegoricall sense is, when besides the plaine historicall and literall meaning, somewhat is signified, which by an allegorie is referred vnto Christ, or the Church, as Galat.4. beside the truth of the story of the bond and free woman, S. Paul applieth it vnto the two Testaments : Ergo, one place may haue more senses than one.

Deut.25.4. The Tropologicall sense is, when as there is somewhat signified appertaining to manners, as Deut. 25. Thou shalt not musle the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corne : this by S. Paul is applied to the ministers of the Gospell, 1.Cor.9. Ergo, the Scripture hath diuers senses.

Psal.95.11. The Anagogicall sense is, when the place is applied to decipher and set forth the kingdome of heauen and eternall things, as Psal. 95. I sware vnto them if they should enter into my rest : this is literally vnderstood of the rest in Canaan, and spiritually of life eternall : Ergo, many senses. Thus reasoneth Bellarm. lib.3. de scriptur. cap.3.

The Doway translators doe here concurre with Bellarmine, that there are three spirituall senses beside the literall : the Allegoricall, Morall, Anagogicall, &c. As Ierusalem signifieth literally the head citie of Iurie, Morally the soule of man, Allegorically the Church militant, as Hebr.12. and Anagogically the Church triumphant, Apoc.21. annot. in Gen.1. pag.4.

2.Sam.7.13.14. They giue instance of this place, 2.Sam.7.13. I will establish his kingdome: which words they would haue vnderstood of Christ : but verse 14. if he shall doe any thing vniustly, &c. this cannot bee said of Christ, but of Saul : whereupon they inferre, so this place hath many literall senses.

Contra. 1. When diuerse things are inferred, out of one place of Scripture, as an allegoricall, or anagogicall mystery : if it be intended by the spirit, it is part of the literall and direct sense : when one is contained within another ; and so the whole sense is partly historicall and literall, partly allegoricall : but if it be an allegorie deuised by man, it is no part of the sense at all. 2. We denie not but that the same word or sentence being found in diuerse places of Scripture, may haue diuerse literall senses : as Ierusalem, giuen in instance, but not in one and the same place : and yet they are deceiued in this allegation ; for Ierusalem is taken for the triumphant Church, Heb.12.22. It is called celestiall Ierusalem, where an innumerable company of Angels is : likewise in the same place of Scripture, one clause may be vnderstood literally, as of Salomon, another typically, as of Christ ; and yet one and the same sentence or clause in that place shall not haue two diuerse senses. 3. They are contrary to themselues : for in one place they tell vs, there are three spirituall senses beside the literall : and in another, that there are two literall senses, whereof the one is anagogicall concerning Christ : so that place, Deuter.25.4. Thou shalt not musle the mouth of the oxe, &c. : they say hath two literall senses ; it is ment of spirituall labourers, and of oxen ; whereof one is the tropologicall and morall sense.

The Protestants.

We affirme that of one place of scripture there can bee but one sense, which wee call the literall sense, when as the words are either taken properly, or figuratiuely to expresse the thing which is meant : as in this place, The seed of the woman shall breake the Serpents head : the literall sense is of Christ, who should triumph ouer Satan, though it be spoken in a borrowed and figuratiue speech. There can be therefore but one sense, which is the literall : as for those three kinds, they are not diuerse senses, but diuerse applications onely and collections out of one and the same sense : as S. Ambrose saith in 17. cap. Luc. Non vna tantum figura, sed multiplex in scripturis esse consueuit, vt vnus sermo plures species comprehendat : The Scripture is accustomed to afford not one, but diuers figures, that one saying may comprehend diuers kinds vnder it : that is, diuers speciall senses, or applications of one generall sense.

Argum. 1. It shall appeare by a seuerall induction of all these kinds : In the first example of the Allegoricall sense, Galat.4. the Apostle saith not that there is a double sense, but that it may bee allegorically applied, which is historically set downe. There is then but one sense of the place, part whereof consisteth in the storie, part in the allegorie : so that the whole sense is contained in them both. Concerning the second example of the Tropologicall : there is not a twofold sense of that place, but one whole generall sense, that as the mouth of the oxe was not to bee musled, so the minister of the Gospell must be prouided for. Likewise of the Anagogicall kinde : it is not one sense to vnderstand the rest of Canaan, another of the kingdome of God : but there is one whole sense, that as they for their Idolatrie were depriued of the land of promise ; so we should take heed lest by our disobedience we lose the hope of the kingdome of heauen. So we conclude that those are not diuerse senses, but one sense diuersly applied ; the one sense hauing a subordination vnto the other.

Argum. 2. The literall sense is the onely sense of the place, because out of that sense onely may an argument strongly be framed : wherefore seeing allegories and tropes doe not conclude, they are not the senses of the place. An Allegorie or type may be part of the literall sense, and then it concludeth : but when an allegorie is framed beside the literall sense, it concludeth not ; and therefore is no part of the sense : as to reason thus, the oxes mouth must not be musled : Ergo, the Minister must be maintained, it followeth well, because it is part of the sense. But allegories deuised beside the sense proue not, though they may illustrate.

Argum. 3. That properly is the sense of the place, which the text alwaies yeeldeth : for no text of Scripture is without his ſenſe: but the ſpirituall ſenſe is not in euery place to be found, but the literall ſenſe alwaies. And this the Ieſuite confeſſeth: Non inuenitur ſpiritualis ſenſus in omnibus ſententiis ſcripturæ: The ſpirituall ſenſe is not found in euery ſentence of Scripture: Ergo it is not the ſenſe properly.

Here alſo I will vrge the Ieſuite with his owne teſtimonie: Spirituales ſenſus licet ædificent, & tamen non ſemper conſtat, an ſint à ſpiritu ſancto intenti: The ſpirituall ſenſes, though they may edifie, yet it is not alwaies certaine, whether they be intended by the ſpirit: but the literall ſenſe is certaine alwaies to be the ſenſe of the ſpirit. Bellarm. cap. 3. The literall ſenſe therefore is the only ſenſe, because it is the ſenſe of the ſpirit.

I will alſo oppoſe againſt them their owne decrees: Sext. decretal. lib. 5. tit. 2. c. 3. Nec huiuſmodi q. Gloſſæ non fiant, niſi forſan per quas verbi ſenſus, vel conſtructio, quaſi grammaticaliter ad literam, vel intelligibilius exponatur: Let there be no gloſſes made, but ſuch, whereby the ſenſe or conſtruction of the word may be grammatically expounded according to the letter. This decree alloweth none but the grammaticall and literall ſenſe.

The Papiſts.

Their other aſſertion is this, that it is lawfull to allegorize ſcripture both in the old and new Teſtament, Bellarm. lib. 3. cap. 3. They reaſon thus, Rhemiſt. annot. Hebr. 4. verſ. 5. The Apoſtle applieth the reſt of the Sabbath to the eternall reſt: Ergo, the like applications of the Fathers are lawfull. See Annot. Hebr. 7. 2. The Apoſtle (ſay they) findeth great myſteries, euen in the very names: Ergo, it is lawfull to make allegories.

8. Error.
Heb. 4. 5.

The Proteſtants.

We ſay it is dangerous to make allegories of Scripture, without the warrant and direction of Gods ſpirit. This was the occaſion that diuers of the ancient Fathers greatly erred: as the Ieſuite himſelfe giueth an inſtance of Origen, who doth allegorize the ſtorie of Geneſis concerning the terreſtriall paradiſe. And it is much to be wondred at that our aduerſaries doe ſo much ſtand for the allegorizing of Scripture, beyond the literall ſenſe, ſeeing that, contrarie to their owne iudgement, who ſo much eſteeme of tropes and allegories, in theſe words of Chriſt, hoc eſt corpus meum, they ſtand only vpon the literall and verball ſenſe, admitting no trope, figure or allegorie at all. I will put them in minde here of a ſaying of an old popiſh Biſhop, aboue two hundred yeeres agoe: The words in Scripture (ſaith he) muſt not be iudged by the ſenſe which they make, but the ſenſe whereof they are made; the conſtructions in Scripture are not bound to Donates rules, where faith is farre placed from the capacitie of reaſon: Sic Iohann. Treſnant. Epiſcop. Hereford. Fox pag. 465. How well the Papiſts now a daies doe follow this rule it appeareth by the former example.

To their arguments our learned countrie man D. Fulke anſwereth: Firſt, it followeth not, becauſe it was lawfull for the Apoſtles, gouerned by the ſpirit, to make allegories, that it is therefore lawfull for others. Secondly, when the fathers or any other writers can be aſſured of the ſame ſpirit, which the holy writers had, and of the like dexteritie in vnderſtanding and expounding Scripture, they may likewiſe be bold to make allegories.

Let vs heare what Auguſtine ſaith of this matter: Sicut mihi multum errare videntur, qui nullas res geſtas aliquid aliud præter id, quod eo modo geſtæ ſunt, ſignificare arbitrantur: ita multum audere, qui prorſus ibi omnia ſignificationibus allegoricis inuoluta eſſe contendunt: As they are much deceiued, which think that the ſtories in the Scripture doe ſignifie no other thing, but that which was done: ſo they are too raſh and bold, that would draw all things to allegories, which they reade in Scripture. Ergo, it is not lawfull for any to inuent allegories of Scripture, as it ſeemeth good to themſelues.

Concil. Bracarenſ. 1. can. 30. it was thus decreed: Placuit, vt nihil veteris teſtamenti poeticè compoſitum in Eccleſia pſallatur: It ſeemeth good to vs, that no part of the old Teſtament ſhould be ſung in meeter in the Church, or compoſed after a poeticall manner. But what doe they elſe but follow poeticall fictions, that draw the Scripture as they liſt, to imagined allegories? Synod. Auguſt. c. 13. Concionator ſe ad captum auditorum demittat, nunc Catechiſtam agat, nunc interpretem ſcripturarum, nunc vitiorum reprehenſorem, nunc doctorem myſteriorum: The Preacher muſt applie himſelfe to his auditors capacitie, ſometime playing the Catechiſt, ſometime interpreting Scriptures, otherwhile reprehending vice, and againe vnfolding myſteries, &c. He muſt then vnfold myſteries, not allegorize Scripture at his pleaſure, and make more myſteries.

Let them heare alſo their owne decrees: Decr. par. 1. d. 37. c. 4. Pſeudoprophetas nos debemus accipere, qui aliter ſcripturarum verba accipiunt, quàm ſpiritus ſanctus ſonat: Wee vnderſtand them to bee falſe prophets, which doe take the words of Scripture otherwiſe, then the ſpirit ſoundeth. And againe, ibid. cap. 14. Clemens 1. Multas quidem, vt audiuimus veſtrarum partium ingenioſi homines ex iis, quæ legunt, veriſimilitudines capiunt: Certaine wittie conceited men in your parts, as I heare, do gather ſimilitudes and reſemblances out of that which they reade, &c. which vſe is forbidden in this decree: the former canon calleth them, imagines, vmbras, phantaſmata: ſhadowes, and phantaſies. And I wiſh in my heart, that in handling of Scripture, this age of ours were not too much giuen to follow ſuch wittie rather then pithie conceits and phantaſies.

This peremptorie boldnes of allegorizing Scripture, which the Romaniſts are addicted vnto, is not much vnlike the blind practiſe of the Iewes, who, as Buxdorſius writeth, are bound to giue as great beleefe to the myſticall and allegoricall expoſitions of the Rabbines, as to the law of Moſes.

Buxdorſius Synag. Iudaic. cap. 1. pag. 62.

THE SECOND PART OF THE SIXTH QVEſtion: to whom the chiefe authoritie to expound Scripture is committed.

The Papiſts.

9.Error. IT was decreed in the Councell of Trent, that Scripture ſhould be expounded, as the Church expoundeth it, and according to the common and conſonant conſent of the fathers, Seſſ.4. The Rhemiſts ſay, that the ſenſe of the Scriptures muſt be learned of the fathers & paſtors of the Church, Pref.ſect.18. If the fathers agree not, the matter is referred to a generall Councell: if there it be not determined, we muſt haue recourſe to the Pope and his Cardinals. The Ieſuite dare not referre the matter to the Pope alone to expound Scripture, but ioyneth the Colledge of Cardinals with him, Bellarm.lib.3.de ſcript.cap.3.

Deut.17.9. *Argum.*1. They obiect that place Deut.17.9. where the people are commanded to reſort vnto the Prieſt or Iudge in doubtfull matters: Ergo, there ought to be a chiefe and ſupreme Iudge in Eccleſiaſticall matters, Bellarmine. We anſwere: Firſt, here the ciuill Magiſtrate and the Iudge are ioyned together, as verſ.12. Wherefore if they will gather hereby, that the Pope muſt be ſupreme Iudge in all Eccleſiaſticall matters, then the Emperour ought to be as well in ciuill. Bellarm. anſwereth, that by the Iudge is vnderſtood the chiefe Prieſt: or if it be taken for the ciuill Iudge, he is but to execute the ſentence giuen by the Prieſt. *Contra.*1. It appeareth in the 12.verſe, that the high Prieſt and the chiefe Iudge are not all one: that man, that ſhall not hearken to the Prieſt, &c. or vnto the Iudge, howſoeuer the vulgar Latine reade otherwiſe. 2. We graunt that the Prieſts office was to declare to the Iudge the word of God, but not to giue ſentence: for the Prieſt had not to doe with matters of blood, which are named amongſt other cauſes, verſ.8. Secondly, the text ſaith, they ſhall come to the Prieſts, verſ.9. aſſigning many, not to one only Prieſt. Thirdly, they muſt iudge according to the law, verſ.11. not as they liſt themſelues. Bellarmine ſaith, that this is no condition, if they ſhall iudge according to the law; for then the people ſhould iudge the ſentence of the Prieſt: but it is a promiſe, &c. *Contra.*1. Wee ſay not that the people ſhould iudge of the ſentence of the Prieſt, but the law of God it ſelfe: as the Diſciples by the Scriptures did examine the Apoſtles preachings, Act.17. who were not inferiour in office in the Goſpell to the Prieſts in the law. 2. Neither had the Iudges any ſuch promiſe not to erre in iudgement, but ſo farre forth as they followed the law: for there were among them vnrighteous Iudges, as Abimelech Iudg.9. and the two Elders, that condemned Suſanna, which booke is good ſcripture with them. Yea and diuers of the high Prieſts were in great error, as Aaron in making the golden Calfe, Vrias in making an idolatrous altar, 2.King.16.15. the prieſts and prophets ſentenced Ieremie to die: the iudgement then of the high prieſt was not to be obeyed otherwiſe, then if he iudged according to the law: as their ordinarie Gloſſe obſerueth vpon that place: Note, that it is not ſaid vnto thee thou ſhalt obey, niſi docuerint ſecundum legem, vnleſſe they teach according to the law. Fourthly, here is no mention made of doubts in interpreting Scripture, but of controuerſies that may fall out betweene man and man, either eccleſiaſticall to be decided by the Prieſt, or ciuill by the Magiſtrate. Fifthly, we grant that in euery countrey there ought to be a ſupreme and high ſeate of iudgement for the determining of controuerſiall matters betweene men: but it followeth not that there ſhould be a ſupreme Iudge ouer the whole Church, eſpecially in ſuch matters as this concerning the ſenſe of the Scriptures, which is not committed to the iudgement of men, neither is any ſuch controuerſie named in that place, verſ.8.

*Argum.*2. Eccleſiaſt.12.11. The Wiſe man compareth the words of the wiſe to nailes which are faſtened, giuen by one paſtor. In this place Salomon teacheth, that men ought to reſt in the ſentence of the chiefe paſtor, without any further inquirie or ſearch. And if the chiefe paſtor in the old Teſtament had ſuch authoritie, much more the chiefe Prieſt in the new: Ergo, we ought to reſt in the ſentence and iudgement of the Pope with his aſſiſtants, Bellarm.cap.4.argum.3.

We anſwer, the wiſe men are here vnderſtood to be the Paſtors & Miniſters of Gods word, but this one paſtor ſignifieth neither the high Prieſt in the old law, nor the Pope in the new, but Ieſus Chriſt the high ſhepheard for our ſoules. What great boldnes is this to attribute that to the Pope, which is only proper to Chriſt?

*Argum.*3. They alſo picke out ſome places in the new Teſtament, as Matth.16.19. To thee will I giue the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. Chriſt ſaith ſo to Peter: Ergo the Pope hath authoritie to expound Scripture. We anſwere: firſt, by the keyes here is meant commiſſion to preach the Goſpell, not only to expound doubts. Secondly, they were giuen to all the Apoſtles, not to Peter only, Matth. 28.verſ.18.19. Concilio Aquiſgranenſ.cap.9.ex Iſidor. Cæteri Apoſtoli cum Petro par conſortium honoris & poteſtatis acceperunt: The reſt of the Apoſtles were receiued together with Peter, into the ſame fellowſhip of dignitie and authoritie or power. Thirdly, the Pope is not ſucceſſor of Peter, no more then any other godly Biſhop, nor ſo much, vnleſſe he follow Peters ſteps: As S. Hierome ſaith to Damaſus, as it is alleaged in your owne decrees: Decr.p.2.cauſ.24.qu.1.c.14. Petri & fidem & ſedem tenes: You hold both Peters ſeate and faith. So they abuſe that place, Matth.18.17. He that will not heare the Church, &c. Ergo, the Biſhops and chiefe paſtors muſt expound the doubts in Scripture. Anſ. Firſt, our Sauiour ſpeaketh here of the diſcipline of the Church, of corrections and admonitions, not of interpreting Scripture, which dependeth not vpon the will and phantaſie of Pope, Cardinals, or popiſh Councels, but muſt be tried by the Scriptures themſelues. Secondly, we muſt giue eare to the Church, but with a double condition: firſt, we muſt be ſure it is the Church of God, as our Sauiour himſelfe expoundeth, verſ. 20. Where two or three are gathered together in my name, &c. ſo that euery congregation is not the Church, but that which is aſſembled in the name and authoritie of Chriſt. Secondly, we muſt not heare them, contrarie to the Scriptures, but ſo long as they doe teach the doctrine of Chriſt: for otherwiſe an Angell from heauen is not to be heard, 1. Galath. 1. 8.

Argum. 4. Our Sauiour ſaith, Matth. 23. 2. The Scribes and Phariſies ſit in Moſes chaire, all things that they bid you obſerue, that obſerue and doe: We muſt ſtand then to the iudgement and interpretation of the Prelates of the Church, Bellarm. c. 5. teſtimon. 3. Math. 23. 2.

Contra. To ſit in the chaire of Moſes, is not to ſucceed in the place of Moſes, but to teach according to the law of Moſes: the Phariſies then teaching doctrines not agreeable to that law, did not therein ſit in Moſes chaire: this place then proueth not an infallibilitie of iudgement in the Prelates of the Church to interpret Scripture, nor a neceſſitie of obedience: here we will appoſe vnto Bellarmine the iudgement of their owne writers: Stella thus interpreteth that place, they ſit in Moſes chaire, Cum bona docebant, &c. When they taught good things, ſuch as Moſes preſcribed. Ianſenius. Non eſt illis obediendum, &c. They muſt not be obeyed, when they teach any thing contrarie to that chaire. So alſo Maldonat the Ieſuite, De doctrina legis & Moſes loquitur, He ſpeaketh of the doctrine of the law, and of Moſes. Concord. in Matth. 23. 2. cap. 120. Maldonat. commentar. in hunc locum.

Argum. 5. S. Paul went to Ieruſalem to conferre with S. Peter, Iames and Iohn, otherwiſe he ſaith he ſhould haue runne in vaine: Ergo, the iudgement of faith belongeth to Peter, and Peters ſucceſſor, Bellarm. cap. 5.

Anſw. Firſt, S. Paul went not vp to Ieruſalem of neceſſitie, as though he needed to haue his doctrine confirmed by the former Apoſtles: for he himſelfe ſaith contrarie, Galat. 2. 6. They that ſeemed to be the chiefe communicated nothing with me. And againe, Peter was rather confirmed by him, whom he openly rebuketh for a certaine ſlip of infirmitie, verſ. 12. but he ſpeaketh in reſpect of others, that ſaid he taught contrarie to the Apoſtles, leaſt he ſhould haue runne in vaine. Secondly, S. Ambroſe ſaith to this purpoſe, that Paul went vp to Ieruſalem to ſee Peter, not of neceſſitie, Neque vt aliquid ab eo diſceret, qui iam ab authore didicerat, ſed propter affectionem Apoſtolatus, & propter concordiam; Neither to learne any thing of him, who had learned of Chriſt the author himſelfe, but for loue vnto his fellow Apoſtle, and for concord ſake. Ambroſ. in hunc locum.

The Proteſtants.

WE haue a more compendious way to come to the vnderſtanding of the Scripture: It were too long when wee doubt of any place to ſtay till wee haue the generall conſent of the Paſtors of the Church, or to expect a generall Councell, or goe vp to Rome. And it were too much to trouble the Popes grauitie with euery queſtion: the Lord hath ſhewed vs a more eaſie and readie way, ſo that we neede not aſcend to heauen, or compaſſe the earth, or paſſe the Alpes: but the word of God is amongſt vs, the Scriptures themſelues and the ſpirit of God opening our hearts, do teach vs how to vnderſtand them. And yet we ſay not, as they doe falſly charge vs, that wee allow euery priuate mans interpretation of Scripture; and refuſing the iudgement of the Paſtors of the Church, place the gift of interpretation in euery mans particular breaſt, Bellar. de verb. dei. lib. 3. cap. 4. But we denie, that the interpretation of Scripture is aſſigned to any ſucceſſion of Paſtors, or tied to any place or Perſons: and yet grant that it is the office of the Paſtors and Miniſters, to whom the diſpenſation of the word is committed, not of priuate men to expound Scripture according to the ſenſe and meaning of the ſpirit; and to diſcerne betweene the orthodoxall and hereticall interpretations: yet they are but the inſtruments; the ſpirit of God ſpeaking in the Scriptures is the interpreter of himſelfe: and in this vnderſtanding wee conſent to a decree of one of your owne Synodes: Synonenſ. ſynod. decret. 4. de fide: Eccleſia catholicum ſenſum ab haeretico, germanum ab adulterino diſcernit: The Church doth diſcerne the Catholike ſenſe from the hereticall, the true from the falſe. It hath no power to make or coyne interpretations beſide Scripture, but to diſcerne and diſtinguiſh. Our arguments now follow.

Argum. 1. That onely hath power to giue the ſenſe of Scripture, which doth beget vs faith: the ſpirit onely by the Scriptures begetteth faith, Rom. 10. 17. faith commeth by hearing the word: Ergo, the ſpirit of God is the onely interpreter of Scripture. The propoſition alſo is cleere: for ſeeing the Scripture is the true ſenſe and meaning thereof, if any ſhould giue the ſenſe of the Scripture, but that which worketh faith, then vpon him ſhould our faith bee grounded. If the Pope therefore giue the ſenſe of Scripture, and our faith ariſeth of the Scripture vnderſtood, then our faith is builded vpon the Popes ſenſe, argum. Whitach. 2. & 9. Rom. 10. 17.

Argum. 2. The Scriptures cannot bee interpreted, but by the ſame ſpirit, wherewith they were written: but that ſpirit is found no where but in the Scriptures. Ergo. The firſt part the Papiſts themſelues graunt: the ſecond is thus proued. The ſpirit of the Apoſtles is not giuen by ſecret inſpiration, that fauoureth of Anabaptiſme: where is it then to be found: whether is it like that Saint Peters ſpirit ſhould be found in the Popes chaire, or in his Epiſtles? or if they haue S. Peters ſpirit, where is S. Pauls found but in his writings? Yet it is all one ſpirit, and appeareth not elſewhere but in the Scriptures; 1.Cor.2.15. where euery man may find it as well as the Pope: The ſpirituall man iudgeth all things. 1.Cor.2.15. You haue an oyntment from him that is holy, and you haue knowne all things: 1.Ioh.2. verſ. 27. You neede not that any man teach you. By theſe places it is euident, that euery faithfull man by the ſpirit of God according to the meaſure of his gift, and qualitie of his calling, may vnderſtand the Scriptures. To this beareth witneſſe that decree, Synod. Colonienſ. part. 2. cap. 4. Presbyteri in lege domini meditentur die & nocte, & iudicia diuina exquirant & ſcrutentur non propria præſumptione, aut humano ſenſu; ſed ſpiritu ſancto dictante, &c. Let the Preachers and Presbyters meditate in the law of God day and night, and ſearch and try out the diuine iudgements, not by their owne preſumption, or humane ſenſe, but according to the direction of the ſpirit. This Canon referreth Preachers for the vnderſtanding of Scripture, not to the Pope or Cardinals, but to the ſpirit of God as the author; and the diligent ſearching of Scripture as the meane.

Argum. 3. The doctrine of the Church muſt be examined by the Scriptures: Ergo, the Scriptures are not to ſtand to the iudgement of the Church. The former part is prooued by the example of the Act.17.11. Berreans, Act. 17. 11. If they did well in examining Pauls doctrine, much more may the decrees of the Pope, Church, Councels, be examined by the Scriptures. But they knew not whether Paul was an Apoſtle or not, therefore they might examine his doctrine, ſaith the Ieſuite. Anſw. Firſt, they could not be ignorant of his Apoſtleſhip, who was famous throughout the Churches. Secondly, they doubted onely whether Paul was an Apoſtle; but wee are ſure the Pope is none, neither ſucceſſour of any Apoſtle, but very Antichriſt: Ergo, we haue more iuſt cauſe to examine his decrees. Thirdly, if Saint Pauls Apoſtleſhip might be doubted of, much more may the Popes authoritie be called into queſtion.

Epheſ.2.20. Arg. 4. S. Paul ſaith, We are builded vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Epheſ. 2.20. The Pope nor his Church are not the foundation of the Saints: Ergo, we are not to build vpon them nor their interpretation. Bellarmine denieth the aſſumption or ſecond part, and ſaith, that the teſtimonie of the Church is a ſecond foundation: for wee know not which is the word but by the Church. reſp. ad arg. 13. Anſw. 1. The Ieſuite ſpeaketh abſurdly, in ſaying the Church is the foundation, the Church is the building: and the building and foundation cannot be all one. Secondly, 1.Cor.3.11. there cannot be diuers foundations: as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1.Cor.3.11. Other foundation can no man lay, then that which is laid, Ieſus Chriſt. If it ſhall be obiected, how then are Apoſtles ſaid to be foundations? I anſwere; the perſon of the Apoſtles is not the foundation, but their doctrine, which is the faith in Ieſus. Thirdly, it is another vntruth, that the Scriptures are not knowne but by the teſtimonie of the Church: as partly hath bin ſhewed before, and ſhall more afterwards, as Chriſt ſaith, Iohn 5.34. Iohn 5. 34. He did not receiue the teſtimonie of men, his owne works did witneſſe of him; ſo the efficacie of the ſpirit ſpeaking in the Scriptures doth teſtifie of it, that it is the word.

Arg. 5. If the Pope haue authoritie to iudge of Scripture, and that the ſenſe of the Scripture without his approbation is not authenticall, then it would follow, that the Pope is aboue Scripture, which were not onely a great abſurditie, but a grieuous blaſphemie.

Bellarmine. To be ſaid to iudge of the Scripture, may be taken two waies, either to iudge whether the Scripture be true or no: and who ſo thus iudgeth, ſhould be aboue Scripture; but ſo doth not the Pope: Or elſe to iudge of the ſenſe of Scripture, which is not to be aboue Scripture, but aboue the priuate iudgements and interpretations of men, ſic Bellarmin. lib. 3. cap. 10. reſponſ. ad argum. 14.

Anſw. Firſt, to expound and giue the ſenſe of Scripture, by the Scripture it ſelfe, is not to bee a iudge of Scripture, or ſuperiour to it, but to be ſubiected rather vnto it and ordered by it; but the Pope in taking vpon him abſolute authoritie to expound Scripture, doth make himſelfe ſuperiour to it, in as much as the Scripture is not the letter, but the ſenſe thereof: hee therefore that ouerruleth the ſenſe, ouerruleth Scripture. Secondly, againe, hee that may giue the ſenſe to Scripture, as it pleaſeth him, may at his pleaſure make the Scripture true or falſe; for the Scripture is the ſenſe: the Pope for the moſt part giueth a falſe ſenſe of Scripture, and ſo maketh the Scripture falſe: and thus is he become a Iudge of Scripture after the firſt way, which the Ieſuite denieth.

Now let Auguſtine ſpeake: Nouit charitas veſtra omnes nos vnum magiſtrum habere, & ſub illo condiſcipulos eſſe, nec ideo magiſtri ſumus, quia de ſuperiore loco loquimur vobis, ſed magiſter eſt omnium, qui habitat in nobis omnibus, &c. You know brethren (ſaith he) that we are all fellow ſchollers vnder one maſter, and though we ſpeake to you out of an higher place, yet are we not your maſter, he is the teacher and maſter of vs all that dwelleth in vs all, &c. Ergo, the ſpirit of God ſpeaking in the Scriptures, is the chiefe and beſt interpreter thereof.

I will enforce againſt them firſt their Imperiall lawes, then their owne pontificiall conſtitutions, which order I purpoſe God willing to obſerue throughout.

Firſt, Iuſtinian hath this law, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 17. leg. 11. Quis legum ænigmata ſoluere idoneus eſſe videbitur, niſi is, cui ſoli legiſlatorem eſſe conceſſum eſt? Who is thought more fit to open the darke ſentences of the law, but he that hath authoritie to make them? And therefore he concludeth, Tam conditor, quam interpres legum ſolus Imperator iuſte cenſebitur. The Emperour onely is of right taken to bee both the maker, and interpreter of the law. As then the Imperiall lawes muſt be interpreted by the Emperour that made them; so the diuine lawes by the ſpirit of God that gaue them: ſo alſo ſaith your owne law, decret. Gregor. lib. 5. tit. 39. c. 31. Innocent. 3. Vnde ius prodijt, interpretatio quoque procedat: Let the interpretation proceede from whence the law commeth.

Secondly, ſearch further your owne decrees, part. 1. diſt. 20. praefat. Diuinarum tractatores ſcripturarum in ſacrarum ſcripturarum expoſitionibus ei praeponuntur. The interpreters of Scripture for the expoſition thereof, muſt be preferred before the Popes: Ergo, all reſteth not in the Popes breaſt.

Let vs laſtly heare the iudgement of an holy Martyr, that maintained this trueth with the loſſe of his life; who being demanded of Boner, denied that the Pope had any authoritie to expound Scripture; adding further, what a goodly expoſition did the Pope make of Scripture, when hee ſet his foote vpon the Emperours necke, and ſaid, Thou ſhalt walke vpon the Lyon and the Aſſe, the young Lyon and the Dragon: ſic Roger Holland. Fox pag. 2040. col. 2. His reaſon is this, the Pope miſconſtrueth Scripture, and expoundeth it as he liſt. Ergo, this authoritie is not giuen him of God. Pag. 1841. laſt edit.

That the Pope with his adherents hath no ſuch authoritie to interpret Scripture, it is the opinion alſo of other forrain Churches. 1. Nilus Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica, thus deliuereth the iudgement of the Greeke Church: That Peter in the aſſemblie at Ieruſalem tooke not vpon him the primacie, but both he and the reſt condeſcended vnto the opinion of S. Iames. The Muſcouites denie that Peter was the true Biſhop of Rome, or that he was the only head of the militār Church: the ſame they beleeue of the Biſhop of Rome, &c. The Pope then hath no ſuch ſoueraigne power from Peter to expound Scripture. Nilus de cauſ. diſſenſ. Eccleſ. lib. 5. 1. Sacranus Elucid. cap. 2.

2 The Ethiopike Church conſenteth: Preſter Iohn ſaid to Aluares, who had confeſſed that they were obliged to all, which the Pope commanded: If the Pope would vſurpe ſo great prerogatiue, as to vſe toward them an vnlawfull commandement, they would not make any reckoning of it. And if by ſuch meanes their Abuna (who is their Church Biſhop) would preſume ſo farre, they would burne the copie of ſuch commandement. Aluares deſcript. Ethiop. cap. 29.

3 The reformed Churches make the Scripture interpretor of it ſelfe: the former confeſſion of Heluetia artic. 1. The interpretation of the Scripture is to be taken onely from her ſelfe, that her ſelfe may bee the interpretor of her ſelfe, the rule of faith and charity being the guide: confeſſion of Bohemia, cap. 1. The ſpirit himſelfe, openeth and diſcloſeth the meaning, how it ought to be underſtood. confeſſion of Wittemberg, chap. 30. Wheras they ſay that the right of expounding Scripture lieth in the power of the chiefe Biſhops, it is euident that the gift of expounding Scripture is not of mans Wiſedome, but of the holy Ghoſt, &c. confeſſion of Auſpurg, artic. 7. The Church hath the gift of interpretation, that is, of vnderſtanding the heauenly doctrine, but that it is not tied to the name or degree of Biſhops, &c. But thoſe that are learned in the Word of God, and borne againe by his ſpirit in what place ſoeuer they bee, they aſſent vnto the Word of God, and vnderſtand the ſame, ſome more, ſome leſſe, &c. Harmon. ſect. 1. pag. 5. Harmon. pag. 6. Harmon. ſect. 11. pag. 371.

4 Concerning the teſtimonie of the popiſh writers, it is alleaged before, as of Stella, Ianſenius, and Maldonat, in the anſwere to the 4. argument.

THE THIRD PART OF THE SIXTH QVESTION: concerning the meanes or method to be vſed in interpreting of Scripture.

The Papiſts.

OVr aduerſaries preſcribe this method and courſe to be taken in expounding of Scripture, which conſiſteth in foure rules: the generall practiſe of the Church, the conſonant interpretation of the Fathers, the decrees of generall Councels; laſtly, the rule of faith, conſiſting partly of the Scriptures, partly of traditions vnwritten, Stapleton. Concerning the three firſt, wee haue already touched them in part: they appeare to be inſufficient. Firſt, the Councels and Fathers he made chiefe interpretors of Scripture before, and now they are but meanes: what other chiefe iudge then is there to vſe theſe meanes? ſurely none but the Scriptures. Secondly, theſe meanes are moſt vncertaine, the practiſe of the Church is often changed, Fathers agree not in their expoſitions, and Councels cannot alwaies be had. 10. Error.

Concerning the rule of faith conſiſting of vnwritten verities: hee groundeth it falſly vpon that place Rom. 12. 6. Let vs propheſie according to the rule of faith, and Galat. 6. 16. As many as walke according to this rule. This rule was a certaine platforme of religion, giuen by the Apoſtles before the Scriptures were written, according to the which (ſay they) the Scriptures were afterward compiled by the Apoſtles, Rhemenſ. in Rom. 12. 6. Anſwere: Saint Paul meaneth no other rule, but that which is ſet downe in his writings; no other forme of doctrine but that contained in his Epiſtles, as in the 6. to the Galathians, ſpeaking of this rule, he alludeth to the former verſe, where he ſaith, he reioyced in nothing but in the Croſſe of Chriſt: his rule therefore is to receiue Chriſt onely without the ceremonies or workes of the law: againſt the which hereſie he diſputeth in the whole Epiſtle. But of all other it is a great blaſphemie to ſay that the Apoſtles ſet downe the Scriptures by a rule, as though the ſpirit of God, by whom they ſpake, had need of any ſuch direction. So then no vnwritten rule can giue a direction to the written word, but the written word rather giueth a rule to all other things, as one of your owne Popes confeſſeth: Cum ex ſcripturis integram quis & firmam regulam ſuſceperit veritatis, &c. When a man hath gathered a firme and certaine rule of truth out of the Scriptures, then may he compare with it other liberall arts, &c. Concerning alſo theſe foure waies of theirs, Rom. 12. 6. Galat. 6. 16. Clemen. 1. decret. p. 1. d. 37. cap. 14.

I will appoſe them againe with their owne authoritie: dist.9.1.&20.c.3. Innocentius 1. the decree ſtandeth thus, which I will onely ſet downe tranſlated, becauſe it is long: If there bee any cauſe which cannot be aſſoyled by the bookes of the old Teſtament, the foure Euangeliſts and writings of the Apoſtles, then haue recourſe to the diuine writings in Greeke: if nothing be found there, then to the Canons of the Apoſtolike See: if not there, then to the Catholike ſtories of the Church: if neither there, conſider the practiſe of the Saints: if yet the queſtion cannot be diſſolued, gather the elders of the prouince, and aske them, &c. Out of this decree I gather three things: firſt that the meanes here preſcribed, are not to be vſed, but where the Scripture is ſilent: and therefore where any thing may be decided by Scripture, theſe helpes are ſuperfluous. Secondly, in the laſt place we are not referred to the Pope and his Cardinals, but to the Elders, that is, the Biſhops, Paſtors and Miniſters of euery Prouince. Thirdly, hee ſendeth vs to the Greeke originall of the Scriptures, which is one of the meanes that we doe preſcribe.

The Proteſtants.

When we ſay that the Scriptures muſt expound themſelues, our meaning is, that by certaine compendious and readie meanes, we ſhould labour to vnderſtand the Scriptures by themſelues: the meanes are eſpecially theſe foure: Firſt, to haue recourſe to the Originall tongue, as in the old Teſtament to the Hebrue; in the new, to the Greeke: as 1. Tim. 2. 15. Through bearing of children they ſhall be ſaued, if they continue in faith and loue: in the Engliſh it is doubtfull whether this clauſe, if they continue in faith, be referred to children, or to thoſe that beare them; but reade the Greeke and the doubt is remoued: for bearing of children is all one word in the originall τεκνογονία, ſo that it muſt needs be vnderſtood of the women, for the word τεκνογονία, bearing of children is in the ſingular number, that which followeth of the plurall, and it is but an action, not a perſon; ſo that it ſhould be improperly ſaid, if they continue, that is, the bearing of children.

Stapleton obiecteth againſt this meane: that it is not now needfull, ſeeing there is a perfect and abſolute tranſlation authoriſed by the Councell of Trent, he meaneth the vulgar Latine. We anſwere: firſt, it is no perfect, but an erroneous tranſlation, and very corrupt. Secondly, if it were neuer ſo perfect, yet for more certainty, it is profitable to ſearch the originall: euery man will truſt his owne skill, rather then another mans. Thirdly, the Councell did fondly in authoriſing an old blinde tranſlation, before the authenticall copies of the Hebrue and Greeke. For the Greeke originall, we haue the decree of Innocentius the firſt, before repeated: and for recourſe to bee had to the Hebrue, wee haue the practiſe of their owne Maſter of Sentences: who in deciding of a certaine queſtion, in the ſecond of Geneſis, whether we ſhould reade conſummauit Deus, or compleuit, God did conſummate, or accompliſh his workes vpon the ſeuenth day, reſolueth vpon the latter reading: Quod habet Hebraica veritas, which is, ſaith he, according to the Hebrue veritie. lib. 2. d. 15. g.

1.Pet.4.8.

2 Secondly, the ſcope of the place, the circumſtance of it, with that which goeth before, and commeth after, muſt be weighed, which will bring great light to the place we haue in hand: an example we haue 1. Pet. 4. 8. Loue couereth the multitude of ſinnes: the Papiſts gather out of theſe words, that loue doth iuſtifie vs before God, and taketh away our ſinnes: but by the circumſtance of the place, the Apoſtle ſaying immediately before: Haue feruent loue among you, it is euident he vnderſtandeth brotherly loue amongſt our ſelues, whereby faults are buried, forgiuen, and forgotten.

Stapleton obiecteth, that this is but an vncertaine way, and many times faileth: for the Scripture paſſeth many times from one matter and argument to another: how then can it helpe to conſider the circumſtance of the place being of a diuerſe matter? We anſwere, we ſay not that any of theſe meanes ſerueth for euery place, but when one faileth, to vſe another: when the circumſtance helpeth not, to runne to the originall; if there we find no ſuccour, to compare places together; and when we may, to vſe them all or the moſt. This rule of examining the circumſtances, as the precedence, and conſequence of a text, may be alſo warranted by their owne practiſe: So Nicholas the fourth, in expounding of the rule of S. Francis giueth this precept: Sext. decretal. lib. 5. tit. 12. c. 3. Vtriuſque iuris argumenta nos docent, ea, quæ in principio ad medium & finem; illa vero, quæ in medio, ad principium & finem; & quæ in fine ad vtrumque vel eorum alterum ſæpe referri: The reaſon of both lawes doth teach vs, that the beginning muſt be referred to the middeſt and the end; the middeſt to the beginning and the end; the end vnto both the other, or the one of them at the leaſt, &c. If they themſelues then are ſo curious in the ſifting out of the meaning of their ſuperſtitious Father, which what face can they blame our diligence in ſearching the ſenſe of the Scripture.

3 Thirdly, the conference of places is very profitable, as Iames 2. 21. Abraham was iuſtified by workes, compare it with that place, Rom. 4. 2. there S. Paul ſaith flatly, that Abraham was not iuſtified, by workes. Wherefore ſeeing one Apoſtle is not contrary to the other: wee muſt needs gather, that this word iuſtified is diuerſly taken: Paul ſaith that Abraham was not iuſtified, that is, made righteous before God by his workes; Iames ſaith he was iuſtified, that is, declared to be iuſt before men, and ſo Thomas Aquinas expoundeth it.

Stapleton obiecteth, that this meanes in comparing of places is of it ſelfe many times of ſmall force. Anſw. As though we affirme that theſe meanes muſt bee vſed aſunder, and not rather ioyntly together, and where one faileth, another to helpe. Secondly, ſome things are found but once in the Scriptures. Anſwere, they are then either very plaine, or not greatly neceſſarie. Thirdly, heretikes haue erred in comparing of Scripture. Anſw. they compared them not diligently, nor with a ſincere minde, but corruptly and negligently.

Bellarmine obiecteth, that the Scripture cannot interpret, or bee Iudge of it ſelfe: for which one place receiueth diuerſe ſenſes, non poteſt dicere, &c. The Scripture cannot ſay which is the true ſenſe: and in the Common-wealth, the Law and the Iudge are two diſtinct things, &c. cap. 9.

Contra 1. It is vntrue that the Scripture cannot ſay or ſhew, which is the true ſenſe: the Apoſtle often vſeth this phraſe, The Scripture ſaith, Rom. 9. 17. 11. 2. Therefore the Scripture both ſaith and ſpeaketh to the faithfull, that haue eares to heare the voice of the Scripture. 2. Wee denie not but as in the Common-wealth there is the Iudge and the Law; ſo in the Church, there is the Scripture and interpreter of Scripture: who although he hath not like authoritie ouer the diuine law, as the Iudge ouer an humaine; yet as the Iudge muſt fetch the interpretation of the Law out of the Law it ſelfe; ſo he that interpreteth muſt expound Scripture by Scripture.

Let vs heare what that reuerend and learned man, and conſtant Martyr, B. Cranmer thinketh of this meane in comparing and conferring of Scripture: I wonder, ſaith he, that you doe attribute ſo little to the reading of Scripture, and conferring of places, ſeeing the Scriptures doe ſo much commend the ſame, as Ioh. 5. Scrutamini ſcripturas, ſearch the Scriptures, Fox. pag. 1460. in diſput. Oxonienſ. This reuerend fathers iudgement, I dare ſet againſt either Stapletons opinion, or any others of that ſide: nay, put the ſentence of their whole Church in one balance, it ſhall not bee able, in this, or any other point of the Chriſtian faith, to weigh againſt the faith of theſe holy Martyrs in the day of Iudgement, but ſhall be found lighter then vanitie.

Leo the firſt alſo ſometime Biſhop of Rome, whoſe iudgement our aduerſaries, I thinke, dare not refuſe, thus writeth of this meane in hauing recourſe to the Scripture, Epiſtol. decretal. 10. cap. 1. In hanc inſipientiam cadunt hæretici, qui cum ad cognoſcendam veritatem aliquo impediuntur obſcuro, non ad propheticas voces. Apoſtolicas literas, nec ad Euangelicas authoritates, ſed ad ſeipſos recurrunt, &c. Such is the fooliſhneſſe of heretikes, that when as by ſome darke place they are hindred from knowing the truth: they will not reſort to the Prophets and Apoſtles writings, but truſt onely to themſelues, &c. His counſell is, if we meete with any darke place in Scripture, to reſort to none other but to the Prophets and Apoſtles for the vnderſtanding thereof. And Clemens the firſt ſaith, as hee is cited by Gratian. decr. p. 1. tit. 37. c. 14. Ex ipſis ſcripturis debemus ſenſum capere veritatis: We muſt take the ſenſe of the Scripture, from the Scriptures themſelues.

4 The fourth rule is the analogie and proportion of faith, which is nothing elſe but the ſumme and grounds of religion gathered out of Scripture, ſuch as are contained in the Creede, the Lords Prayer, the ten Commandements, and in our whole Catechiſme. We muſt take heede that in the interpretation of Scripture we ſwarue not from this rule of faith, nor impugne any principle of Religion. Wherefore the Papiſts interpretation of thoſe words of Chriſt we doe reiect, Hoc eſt corpus meum, this is my bodie: who would haue the very fleſh of Chriſt preſent in the ſacrament: for this is againſt the article of the Creede, that Chriſt is aſcended into heauen, and there ſitteth till his comming againe in iudgement.

Concerning theſe meanes, thus writeth Auguſtine, Rariſſimè inuenitur ambiguitas in verbis proprijs, quam non aut circumſtantia ipſa ſermonis qua cognoſcitur Scripturarum intentio, aut interpretum collatio, aut præcedentis linguæ ſoluat inſpectio, de doctrin. Chriſt. lib. 3. 4. There is almoſt no ambiguitie in any word properly vſed (that is not metaphoricall or borrowed) which may not either by the circumſtance of the place, the conference and comparing of interpreters, or by looking into the Originals, eaſily be taken away. Auguſtine we ſee approoueth this methode, though our aduerſaries like it not. So alſo in your owne decrees: decr. p. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 3. c. 22. Quicunque aliter ſcripturam intelligit, quam ſenſus ſpiritus ſancti flagitat, quo ſcripta eſt, hæreticus appellari poteſt: He that otherwiſe vnderſtandeth Scripture, then after the meaning of the ſpirit wherewith it is written, is an heretike, &c. Wherefore the Scripture out of Scripture muſt bee expounded: for where elſe is the ſpirit of the Scripture to be found, but in the Scripture.

Beſides theſe meanes, which I haue ſhewed, prayer muſt bee vſed before wee enterpriſe any thing, that the Lord would direct vs. And they which cannot ſo eaſily take this courſe, which is preſcribed, ſhall doe well to ſeeke helpe of learned and godly expoſitors, or to conſult with their Paſtors and Miniſters.

Concerning forraine teſtimonies, that the interpretation of Scripture muſt bee agreeable to the Scripture it ſelfe, and taken out of it. 1. Ieremie Oecumenicus Patriarch, in the name of the Greeke Church, thus teſtifieth: Let theſe things ſuffice you, which as you ſee doe beſt accord and agree with the Scriptures, vnto vs diuinely giuen, according to the interpretation and expoſition of the moſt wiſe and holy fathers inſpired of God, &c. And a little after: Some of you will demaund, by what meanes we may attaine vnto this, that ſhall be doe by the aide and aſſiſtance of God, if he attempt nothing, and follow but that which hath beene ordained by the Apoſtles and holy Councels, &c. 2. The Abyſſines beleeue, that there is not any power, Councell, or whatſoeuer to make lawes, &c. much leſſe any doctrine, which is not grounded vpon the Scripture. The ſame author relateth, that the Abyſſines haue certaine writings beſide the Scripture, of great authoritie among them, called Manda and Abetilis, which they ſuppoſe to haue beene compoſed by the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem; and Preſter Iohn asked Aluares, whether hee had ſeene that booke: yet they make the Scripture ſufficient without theſe bookes: whereby it appeareth, that they preferre the Scripture it ſelfe before all by interpretations.

3 The reformed Churches: Heluetia, latter confeſſion, chap.2. thus approueth of theſe meanes of Harm.ſect.1. pag.1. interpreting Scripture: We acknowledge that interpretation of Scripture for authenticall, which is taken from the Scriptures themſelues, that is the phraſe of that tongue, in the which they were written, they being alſo weighed according to the circumſtances, and expounded according to the proportion of places like or vnlike, or of more and plainer, according with the rule of faith and charitie, &c. Here all thoſe foure rules are approued before ſet downe. Confeſſion of Wittemberg, chap.30. Harm.p.15. The true meaning of Scripture is to be ſought in the Scripture it ſelfe, and among thoſe, that being raiſed vp by the ſpirit of God, expound Scripture by Scripture, &c.

4 Some teſtimonies of the Romane Church are produced before, as of Leo 1. *Clement.*1. Gratian: whereunto I will adde that obſeruation of Arias Montanus of the Phariſies, who interpreting that Comment. in Matth.23. place Matth.23. how they ſhut vp the kingdome of heauen, thus writeth: They did ſo abridge the obſeruation of their owne ceremonies, &c. that they would not permit that any, vel de ſacris ſcripturis cogitarent, ſhould ſo much as thinke of the ſacred Scriptures, but according to the preſcript of their interpretations. Theſe Phariſies, as the Papiſts now, would not haue men to haue recourſe to the Scriptures, but to relie vpon Greg.Moral. in Iob, lib.18. cap.14. their interpretations only. Eſpencæus alloweth that ſentence of Gregorie: Qui verè loqui deſiderant, à ſacris literis ſumant, &c. They who will ſpeake truth, let them take out of the ſacred Scriptures, what they will ſpeake, that whatſoeuer they ſpeake, they may reduce to the foundation of the diuine authoritie.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION: CONCERNING the perfection and ſufficiencie of Scripture.

11.Error. THis queſtion is diuided into three parts. Firſt, whether the Scriptures bee abſolutely neceſſarie. Secondly, whether they bee ſufficient without vnwritten traditions. Thirdly, whether there bee any traditions of faith and manners beſide the Scriptures.

THE FIRST PART OF THE NECESSITIE of the Scriptures.

The Papiſts.

THe Ieſuite laboureth to proue that the Scriptures are not ſimply neceſſarie: which we denie not, for meate is not ſimply neceſſarie, for God may preſerue man without: ſo in reſpect of God nothing is ſimplie neceſſarie: God is not neceſſarilie tied to vſe this or that meanes. But his arguments doe tend to this end, to ſhew that the Scriptures are not neceſſarie at all, and may be ſpared in the Church (ſo ſaith Petrus à Soto) the Scripture was not alway extant, and it is not neceſſarie vnto faith; and the Scripture is not now ſo neceſſarie ſince Chriſt, as it was afore: Tilman, de verb.dei, error 17.

*Argum.*1. There was no Scripture from Adam to Moſes, for the ſpace of two thouſand yeeres, and yet true religion was kept and continued; and why might not true religion be as well preſerued 1500 yeeres after Chriſt without Scripture, as afore? *Bellarmine de verb.dei, lib.*4.*cap.*4.*argum.*1.

We anſwere: It followeth not, becauſe in times paſt God taught his Church immediatly by a liuely voyce, and other extraordinarie meanes, as viſions, reuelations, propheſies, that the written word is not neceſſarie now, when all other meanes ceaſe: for the Lord ſaw it good, that his word ſhould bee left in writing, that we might haue a certaine rule of our faith in this corrupt and ſinfull age. And what elſe is this, but to controll the wiſedome of God, ſaying, it is not neceſſary or needfull for the Church, which the Lord ſaw to be needfull: for if the Lord had thought it as good for vs to be taught without Scripture, as in that ſimple and innocent age of the world (I meane innocent in reſpect of vs) he would not haue moued and ſtirred vp his Apoſtles to write.

*Argum.*2. After the time of Moſes, when the law was written, yet there were many that feared God amongſt the Gentiles, which had not the Scriptures, as Iob, and the other his friends: Ergo, the Scripture not neceſſarie. The Iewes alſo themſelues vſed traditions more then Scriptures, as Pſalme 44. verſ.1,2. The fathers did report the workes of God to their children: by the negligence alſo of the Prieſts the law was loſt, as 2.King.22. we reade that the volume of the law was found, which had been miſſing a long time: Bellarm.ibid.

We anſwere: firſt, euen the faithfull amongſt the Gentiles did reade the Scripture, as the Eunuch Act.8. had the booke of the Prophet Iſay. Secondly, the Iewes declared the workes of God vnto their children, but the ſame were alſo written, as how the heathen were caſt out before them, and of their deliuerance out of Egypt: thoſe were the things they heard of their fathers, as wee reade Pſal.44. and 78. yet all theſe things are recorded in the bookes of Moſes. Thirdly, what though the Prieſts were negligent in preſeruing the Scriptures, it is no good argument to proue that therefore they are not neceſſarie, neither was the whole booke of the law loſt, but either Moſes owne manuſcript, or the booke of Deuteronomie. Yet he hath proued nothing.

*Argum.*3. The Church after Chriſt wanted the Scriptures many yeeres: Ergo, they are not neceſſarie, Bellarm. ibid.

We anſwere, it is a great vntruth: for the old Teſtament the Church could not be without, and the new Teſtament was written not long after in the age of the Apoſtles: whoſe liuely voyce and preaching were vnto them, as their writings are now to vs. See now what ſtrong arguments they bring, the Scriptures were not neceſſarie in the time of the Patriarkes, when God taught them by his owne voyce; they were not neceſſarie in the time of the Prophets and Apoſtles, when they had men inſpired of God to teach them: Ergo, they are not now neceſſarie, when neither God teacheth from heauen, neither haue we any Prophets or Apoſtles to inſtruct vs by heauenly reuelations: nay rather because they were not neceſſarie then, when they had other effectuall meanes, notwithſtanding they are neceſſarie now, ſeeing there is no other way of inſtruction left vnto vs.

*Argum.*4. If the writing of the Scriptures were neceſſarie, then Chriſt would not haue omitted to haue giuen his Apoſtles charge and commandement ſo to doe: but this hee doth not; neither doe the Apoſtles make mention of any ſuch charge that was giuen them, but only to preach: *Bellarmine cap.*4. *argum.*2.

*Anſw.*1. It was not needfull that our Sauiour Chriſt ſhould giue his Apoſtles charge concerning all neceſſarie things to bee done in the Church, ſeeing hee was to ſend them the holy Ghoſt who ſhould leade them into all truth: and therefore our Sauiour telleth them, that hee had many things to ſay, but they could not beare them, but the ſpirit afterward ſhould teach them, Iohn 16.12.13. The inſtitution of Deacons, Act.6. the forbidding of things ſuffocated, Act.15. for a time were neceſſarie, yet herein they receiued no inſtruction from Chriſt, who referred them to the direction of the ſpirit. Secondly, Chriſt notwithſtanding did alſo giue them a charge to write, both by way of implication, where he biddeth them teach all nations, Matth.28. which was impoſſible to be done by their liuely voyce, and therefore muſt be ſupplied by their writing: as alſo directly Iohn is charged to write to the Churches, Apocal.1.11. And this being the laſt booke which is commanded to be written, it is not to be doubted of, but that the reſt were written by the ſame authoritie. Thirdly, the Ieſuite himſelfe ſaith: Apoſtoli non niſi neceſſitate quadam coacti. The Apoſtles did not write, but thereunto moued of neceſſitie. But if the Scriptures were not neceſſarie, there ſhould be no neceſſitie of writing.

Iohn 16.12.13.

Reuel.1.11.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Scriptures are neceſſarie for the people of God, the reading, preaching, and vnderſtanding whereof is the onely ordinarie meanes to beget faith in vs, wee thus proue out of the Scriptures themſelues.

*Argum.*1. Theſe Scriptures containe neceſſarie knowledge to ſaluation, which cannot be learned but out of the Scripture: Ergo, they are neceſſarie. The knowledge of the law is neceſſarie; but that only is deriued from the Scripture: as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, Rom.7.7. he had not knowne luſt to be ſinne, vnleſſe the law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not luſt. And if the right knowledge of the law is not learned, but out of Scripture; much more the knowledge of the Goſpel which is more high and myſticall, and more ſtrange vnto our nature.

Rom.7.7.

*Argum.*2. That whereby we are kept from error and doubtfulnes in matters of faith is neceſſarie: but this is performed by the Scripture. Ergo. Firſt, the Scripture keepeth vs from error: Matth.22.29. Ye erre, not knowing the Scriptures (ſaith our Sauiour.) The ignorance of Scripture was cauſe of their error. Secondly, if our knowledge were only builded vpon tradition without Scripture, we ſhould be doubtfull and vncertaine of the truth: ſo S. Luke ſaith in his Preface to Theophilus, I haue written (ſaith he) that thou mighteſt be certaine of thoſe things, whereof thou haſt been inſtructed. Hence wee conclude, that although we might know the truth without Scripture, as Theophilus did, yet wee cannot know it certainly without it.

Math.22.29.

*Argum.*3. If the Scriptures be not neceſſarie, then we may be without them; but this cannot be: Ergo, the Scriptures cannot be ſpared: for then God had done a needleſſe and ſuperfluous worke in ſtirring vp the Prophets and Apoſtles to write. S. Paul ſaith, that whatſoeuer is written, is written for our learning, that through patience and conſolation of the Scriptures we might haue hope, Rom.15.4. The Lord ſaw in wiſedome that his people could not bee without the Scriptures, which are neceſſarie for their learning, for their comfort, and to ſtrengthen their hope: how then dare our aduerſaries ſay, that the Scriptures are not neceſſarie, ſeeing theſe things wrought in vs only by the Scriptures, knowledge, conſolation, hope, are moſt neceſſarie.

Rom.15.4.

*Argum.*4. The knowledge of eternall life is neceſſarie; but that commeth only by the Scriptures, Iohn 5.39. Search the Scriptures, for in them you thinke to haue eternall life: Ergo, they are neceſſarie. Againe, to be made wiſe vnto ſaluation, and perfect to euery good work, are neceſſary: but theſe things the Scripture worketh, 2. Timoth.3.15,17. Further, a man cannot walke in darkneſſe without light, ſo that light in darkneſſe is neceſſarie: but the Scriptures are light in a darke place, 2.Pet.1.19. Laſtly, our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith to Martha, Luke 10.42. vnum neceſſarium, one thing is neceſſarie, namely that which Mary had choſen, to heare the word and voyce of Chriſt, who elſewhere ſpeaketh not but in Scripture, Iohn 5.39. they teſtifie of me, and verſe 46. Moſes wrote of me: Ergo, the knowledge of the Scriptures is neceſſarie.

2.Pet.1.19.

Ioh.5.39.46.

Let Auguſtine now put in his verdict: Illud credo, quod etiam hinc diuinorum eloquiorum clariſſima au-

[illegible] esse, si homo illud sine dispendio salutis ignoraret. August. de peccator. merit. & remiss. lib. 2.36. I thinke (saith he) that euen concerning this matter (speaking of the Originall or beginning of the soule) the Scriptures would not haue been silent, if we might not safely be ignorant of this matter, without danger of saluation, &c. Ergo whatsoeuer is necessarie to saluation, is onely to bee found in Scripture (for other matters there not expressed, there is no danger in not knowing them) therefore the Scriptures by this Fathers iudgement are most necessarie. Let vs heare a testimonie of their owne.

Concil. Lateranens. sub Innocentio 3. cap. 10. we find this decree: Inter caetera, quae ad salutem spectant populi Christiani pabulum verbi Dei permaxime noscitur sibi necessarium, quia sicut corpus materiali, ita anima spirituali nutritur cibo. Among other things which concerne the saluation of Christian people, the food of the word of God is knowne to bee most necessarie; for as the body is fed with materiall food, so the soule with spirituall, &c. the food therefore of Gods word is most necessarie. And least it might be imagined, that the word vnwritten is as well here vnderstood, as the word written: let it be considered what Gelasius Bishop of Rome writeth in his decretals, Epistol. ad Euphemium. Fides ex auditu, auditus per verbum Dei, illud i. verbum, quod confessioni B. Petri Apostoli portas inferi numquam praevalituras esse promisit: Faith commeth by hearing, hearing by the word of God: that is, that word which promised that the gates of hell should not preuaile against the confession of Peter, &c. And this is the word written; the necessity then of the word of God, is the necessity of the word written.

Respons. Ro-hit. Here we haue the testimonie of forraine Churches for the necessitie of Scripture: 1. For the Greeke Church; the King of Moscouia said, If the Gospell had not been written, how could the word of God haue been vnderstood.

Damianus a Goes de iudeor. legat. artic. 11. 2 The Abyssines haue certaine writings beside the Scriptures, which they call Manda and Abtilas, whereof they make great account; but they doe beleeue that the holy Scripture is sufficient to saluation without these; they hold then the Scriptures onely to be necessarie.

Harmon. p. 2. 3 The reformed Churches in the West; confession of Heluetia, the latter, chapt. 1. We iudge that from these Scriptures is to be taken true wisedome and godlinesse, the reformation and gouernment of Churches, also the instruction in all duties of pietie, &c. But those instructions and directions are most necessarie: confession of Belgia, artic. 2. Afterward God himselfe for that exceeding tender carefulnesse Harmon. p. 10. which he hath of his, and their saluation, gaue in commission to his seruants the Prophets and Apostles, that they should put those his oracles in writing, and hee himselfe also wrote the two Tables of the Law with his owne finger, &c. But if the Lord had not seene, that the Scriptures were necessarie, his tender carefulnes should not haue so much appeared, in causing them to be written: 2. of Bohemia, cap. 1. Without the reuelation of Scripture, there is no wholesome knowledge, no faith nor accesse to God.

Artic. 37 aduers. Luther. Oecolomp. Bibl. lib. 1. p. 44. 4 The testimonie of the Romanists is not here wanting. Roffensis: The Scripture is a certaine conclaue of all truthes, Quae Christianis omnibus necessaria sunt: which are necessarie for all Christians: Eckius; whatsoeuer things are necessarie to saluation, praescripta sunt omnia, They are all written in the Scriptures.

THE SECOND PART OF THE SEVENTH question, of the sufficiencie of Scripture.

The Papists.

12. Error. THey doe strangely affirme, that the Scriptures containe not all things necessarie to bee knowne concerning faith and manners, and that they are not sufficient without traditions, Bellarmine cap. 3. 4. Lindanus a Papist saith, that the Scriptures containe not all things necessarie to saluation. Andradius, that their approued traditions are of equall authoritie with the Scripture, Ex Tilmanno, de verbo error. 2.

Argum. 1. The Iesuite thus reasoneth against the sufficiencie of Scripture: There are diuers books of Canonicall Scripture lost and perished: Ergo that part of Canonicall Scripture which remaineth, is not sufficient. That much is lost, he thus proueth, 1. Chron. cap. vlt. mention is made of the bookes of Nathan and Gad. 2. Chron. 9. of the bookes of Abijah and Ieedo: and in the new Testament, Col. 4. of the Epistle of S. Paul to the Laodiceans: all those bookes are lost.

Answ. 1. S. Augustine thus answereth, those bookes of the Prophets, which are named in the Kings, are not found in the Canon, for what cause, saith he, I know not, Nisi quod existimo prophetas illos, alia sicut homines, historica diligentia; alia sicut prophetas inspiratione diuina scribere potuisse: But that I thinke, that those Prophets might write some stories as men, and some things as Prophets, by the inspiration of the spirit, lib. 36. de ciuitat. Dei c. 38. Thus Augustine thinketh that those books now wanting, were no part of the Canonicall Scripture. But we denie not, but that some bookes are now wanting, which were part of Canonicall Scripture, and yet that which remaineth is sufficient: as some of Salomons bookes are perished, which he wrote of hearbs and plants, and many of his Prouerbs: the Lord saw that they were not so greatly necessarie for vs to saluation, as containing matter of storie rather then of doctrine. Secondly, there is not so much wanting, as the Iesuite would beare vs in hand: for the bookes of the Prophets which he nameth, are the same with the bookes of the Chronicles and of the Kings, which no doubt were written by those Prophets. And as for the Epistle of S. Paul to the Laodiceans, there was neuer any ſuch: The text is, Written from the Laodiceans; it was the Epiſtle rather of the Laodiceans to Saint Paul, vnto the which happily he maketh anſwere in the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, and therefore he would haue it read alſo in their Church. And this is Saint Hieromes iudgement concerning this Epiſtle: Legunt quidam & epiſtolam ad Laodicenſes ſed ab omnibus exploditur: Some doe read the Epiſtle to the Laodiceans, but it is refuſed of all men; catalog. ſcriptor.

Argum. 2. There are two things in Scripture, the letter and the ſenſe: the firſt is knowne to all that can reade, but the ſecond is not had without tradition: Ergo, the Scriptures are not ſufficient, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, the ſenſe of the Scriptures is contained in the Scriptures themſelues, and if it bee not there to be found, it is not the ſenſe of the Scriptures. And of this matter your owne Clemens giueth a good rule, as he is alleaged by Gratian: Decret. par. 1. diſt. 37. cap. 14. Non ſenſum, quem extrinſecus adulteratis alienum & extraneum debetis quærere, &c. ſed ex ipſis ſcripturis ſenſum capere veritatis: You muſt not ſeeke for a ſtrange ſenſe without, which you may adulterate at your pleaſure, but out of the Scriptures themſelues the ſenſe of truth muſt be had. Secondly, the Ieſuite is intangled in his owne ſpeech: for he ſaith, Duo eſſe in ſcriptura, voces ſcriptas, & ſenſum. There are two things in Scripture, the written words, and the ſenſe: Ergo, the ſenſe of Scripture (by his owne confeſſion) is in the Scripture.

Argum. 3. There are many points which we ought in no wiſe to bee ignorant of, which the Scripture ſpeake either obſcurely of, or not at all.

Firſt, theſe things are obſcurely and doubtfully ſet downe in Scripture, the equalitie of the perſons in Trinitie, the proceeding of the holy Ghoſt, from the Father and the Sonne; the doctrine of Originall ſinne.

We anſwere: firſt, if theſe things be found at all in the Scriptures, it is ſufficient concerning the queſtion we haue in hand. Secondly, the Scripture doth manifeſtly declare the truth in all theſe points, the qualitie of the perſons is directly proued, 1. Ioh. 5. 7. There are three, which beare record in heauen, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one: the proceſſion of the ſpirit, John 15. 26. The ſpirit is there ſaid to be ſent from the Father and the Sonne; and Iohn 14. 26. Whom the Father will ſend in my name: Originall ſinne is deſcribed plainely by the Apoſtle, Rom. 5. 12. though the name be not found in Scripture: By one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, for as much as all men haue ſinned.

Iohn 15. 26.
Iohn 14. 26.
Rom. 5. 12.

Secondly, there are diuers things neceſſarie to bee knowne, not at all declared in Scripture: theſe examples he ſetteth downe. It is neceſſarie to beleeue that the Canonicall Scriptures are contained in the old and new Teſtament. And not onely ſo, but to know which bookes are Canonicall, as that the Goſpell of Marke and Luke are Canonicall, and ſo of the reſt: yea it is neceſſarie to know that theſe are the very Goſpels which were written by S. Marke and Luke, and ſo of the reſt of the Scripture: but theſe things cannot be knowne out of the Scriptures themſelues, but by tradition. Ergo the Scriptures containe not all neceſſarie knowledge.

Anſwere: Firſt, the Scriptures doe giue teſtimonie of themſelues, the old Teſtament giueth witnes to the new, and the new againe to the olde. All Scripture is giuen, ſaith S. Paul, by inſpiration: and the harmonie and conſent of Scripture, the propheticall predictions, the holy precepts, the chaſt and pure ſtile, doe euidently ſhew, that they are the writings of the holy Ghoſt: and the iudgement and ſentence of the Church concerning Canonicall Scripture, if it be right, muſt and doth ariſe, and is grounded vpon theſe conſiderations drawne out of the Scriptures themſelues.

Secondly, likewiſe to know euery particular booke of Scripture to be Canonicall, it is not ſimply neceſſarie to ſaluation, ſeeing many godly learned men haue doubted of ſome bookes, who (God forbid) but might notwithſtanding be ſaued. Againe we anſwere, that thoſe very particular bookes, as the Goſpels of Marke and Luke are receiued, the Goſpels of Bartholmew and Thomas refuſed, not ſo much becauſe the Church hath ſo determined, but becauſe their determination agreeth with the truth it ſelfe: ſeeing thoſe forged goſpels are found to be full of fables, and therefore worthy of ſmall credit: the other are pure, chaſt, and diuine writings. So S. Auguſtine ſaith: In Apocryphis licet inuenitur aliqua veritas, tamen propter falſa multa, nulla eſt canonica authoritas: In the Apocryphall books, though ſome things be true, yet becauſe there are many falſe, they are not of any canonicall authority: Lib. 15. de ciuitat. dei. cap. 23.

Thirdly, we anſwere, that it is not neceſſary to know the author of euery booke, for as much as there are diuers bookes of Scripture whoſe authors are not knowne: it is enough to beleeue them to bee Scripture.

Further ſaith the Ieſuite, it is neceſſarie to know that Mary continued a perpetuall virgin. We anſwere, the Scripture ſaith euery where ſhe was a virgin, neither maketh mention of any children ſhee had: and therefore out of the Scripture we gather, that ſhe ſo continued. And thus doth S. Hierome anſwere Heluidius: Vt hæc, quæ ſcripta ſunt, non negamus, ita ea, quæ non ſunt ſcripta renuimus: As we denie not, what is written, ſo we refuſe what is not written. That God was borne of a virgin we beleeue, quia legimus, becauſe we reade ſo in Scripture: but that Mary was married afterward, wee beleeue not, quia non legimus, becauſe we doe not reade it. Secondly, Baſil ſaith that it is ſufficient to know ſhe was a virgin before the birth of Chriſt. Laſtly, to know that the Paſch or Eaſter muſt be kept vpon the Lords day is neceſſary. Anſ. There is no ſuch neceſſity in it to ſaluation, neither needed the Church ſo much to haue contended about it in times paſt: theſe are the mightie weapons, which our aduerſaries vſe. That this day is meeteſt to be kept (as it is) vpon the Lordsday, S. Auguſtine doth ſhew it out of Scripture, Epiſt. 118. Quo die dominus crucifixus, & ſepultus, & reſurrexit, in Euangelio manifeſtum, &c. It is manifeſt in the Goſpell, what day our Sauiour was crucified, buried, and roſe againe: Et vniuerſo orbi perſuaſum eſt Paſcha ſic celebrari oportere: and the whole world was perſwaded, that the Paſch ought to be celebrated after that manner.

Vnto thoſe obiections which the Ieſuite maketh, I will adde alſo one other, which ſometime was obiected to that excellent learned man, and famous martyr Maſter Philpot, by Maſter Chriſtopherſon: How doe you know that Chriſt is homouſios, that is, of one ſubſtance with his father, but by the determination of the Church? Anſ. I doe know it by Scripture, Heb. 1. 3. Chriſt is ſaid to be the expreſſe image of Gods ſubſtance. Obiect. Nay hee ſaith, but expreſſa imago ſubſtantiæ, and an image is an accident. Anſw. Yes, the text is ſubſtantiæ illius, of his, that is Gods ſubſtance: and ye know that in God are no accidents. Neither is this the onely place for this purpoſe, but we haue other: as our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, Ego & pater vnum ſumus, I and my father are one: ſic Philpot. Fox pag. 1820. col. 2.

Heb. 1.3.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not affirme, as our aduerſaries charge vs, that all things neceſſarie to ſaluation, are expreſly contained in Scripture, that is, in ſo many words: but this wee hold, that all things which are neceſſarie to be knowne of vs, are either expreſly declared in Scripture, or neceſſarily concluded out of Scripture, and ſo contained in them. We alſo grant, that it was not Goſpell only which was written, but all that Chriſt and his Apoſtles taught by liuely voyce: the whole ſumme whereof and ſubſtance is contained in the written word: and ſo we conclude, that nothing neceſſarie to ſaluation either concerning faith or manners, is elſewhere to be found but in the holy Scriptures.

Argum. 1. S. Paul ſaith: If we, or an Angell preach vnto you otherwiſe then that which we haue preached, let him be accurſed: Ergo, the Scripture containeth all things neceſſarie.

Firſt, the Ieſuite anſwereth, that S. Paul ſpeaketh not only of his writings, but alſo of his preachings which were not written.

We anſwere, that the ſumme of all S. Pauls preachings, is contained in his Epiſtles and other holy writings: for S. Paul confirmed his doctrine out of the Scriptures, as Act. 17. 10. the Berreans examined his doctrine by the Scriptures, and found it to be conforme, and to agree in all things.

Act. 17.10.

Secondly, he condemneth thoſe which preach any thing, not beſides or otherwiſe, but contrarie: and therefore not any other doctrine beſides Scripture is forbidden, but that which is contrarie. We anſwere, whatſoeuer is impoſed as neceſſarie to ſaluation beſide the Scripture, præter Scripturas, is alſo contra Scripturas, contrarie to Scripture; as are [illegible] traditions, which they lay a neceſſitie vpon, both beſide and contrarie to Scripture. 2. Neither did thoſe falſe Apoſtles, againſt whom S. Paul writeth, ſo much bring in another or contrarie Goſpell, as the Apoſtle ſaith verſ. 7. as they did labour to corrupt and peruert that Goſpell, which S. Paul taught. Therefore all traditions whether præter, or contra, beſide or contrarie to Scripture, are notably by this place ouerthrowne. And as S. Auguſtine ſaith, Qui præter graditur fidei regulam, non accedit in via, ſed recedit a via: Hee that paſſeth beſide the rule of faith, doth not goe in the way, but departeth from the way. So that, as he doth not onely goe out of the way, which goeth againſt it, but hee alſo that goeth beſide it: ſo not onely traditions and ceremonies apparantly contrarie to Scripture, but euen them alſo, which haue a ſuperſtitious ſhew of holineſſe, are againſt it.

Argum. 2. Ioh. 20. 31. Theſe things are written, that ye might beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the ſonne of God, and that in beleeuing ye might haue life through his name: Ergo, the Scripture containe all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: for they ſuffice to worke in vs faith, and faith bringeth vs to eternall life.

Ioh. 20.31.

Firſt, Bellarmine anſwereth, that Iohn ſpeaketh onely of that which he had written. Anſw. If this one Apoſtles writings were able to worke faith, the whole body of Scripture much more: but he rather ſpeaketh of all other holy writings of the Apoſtles, for hee was the ſuruiuer of them all, and acknowledged their writings and approued them. Secondly (ſaith he) the Apoſtle ſaith not that thoſe writings onely ſuffice, but they are profitable, and referred to this end, to worke faith. Anſ. The Scripture is not one of the meanes, but the ſole, whole, and onely meanes: for if they perfectly worke faith, what neede any other helpes: but the firſt is true; for they doe beget in vs a perfect faith, which ſhall bring vs to eternall life: Ergo, they are the onely meanes of faith.

Argum. 3. The whole Scripture (ſaith S. Paul) is profitable to teach, to improoue, to correct, and inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, 2. Tim. 3. 16. Ergo, it containeth all things neceſſarie: for what elſe is requiſite beſides theſe foure, to teach the right faith, improue error, to inſtruct in righteouſneſſe and vertue, and to correct vice?

2. Tim. 3. 16.

Firſt they anſwere, the Apoſtle meaneth as well euery booke of Scripture, as the whole: euery part therefore hath this perfection as well as the whole. But you will not ſay, that euery booke containeth all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: therefore this perfection is not ſo to be taken, Bellarmine.

We anſwere: Firſt, S. Paul vnderſtandeth the body of Scripture, as verſ. 15. thou haſt knowne the Scriptures, he ſpeaketh of them all. Secondly, if euery part had theſe vtilities, you might as well conclude that euery word and ſillable hath them, for they are parts of Scripture. Thirdly, it appeareth by theſe foure great vtilities here ſet downe, that the Apoſtle meaneth not any part or parts of Scripture, but the whole, for euery part of Scripture is not profitable for all theſe ends, but the whole.

Secondly, they ſay it followeth not: the Scripture is profitable, therefore ſufficient, they alſo grant it is profitable. Anſ. But we conclude out of S. Paul, that the Scripture is not onely profitable, but ſufficient, as it followeth, verſ.17. That the man of God may be abſolute, perfectly inſtructed to euery good worke. If then the Scriptures are able perfectly to inſtruct vs, then are they ſufficient, then neede we no other helpes.

Neither are the Scriptures ſufficient only to inſtruct the ignorant and vulgar ſort, but euen the learned, and ſuch as are the teachers of others: That the man of God (ſaith the Apoſtle) may be abſolute, &c. that is, the Preacher of the Goſpell. To this agreeth the 67. Canon, Concil. Cabil. ſub Carolo: Quid generaliter ab omnibus, & in omnibus ſequendum ſit, quid vitandum, qualiter intra ſanctam eccleſiam ſit viuendum, qui plenius noſſe deſiderat, ſanctarum ſcripturarum prata percurrere non deſiſtat: What is of all men, in all caſes to be followed, what to be auoyded, how a man ſhould liue and behaue himſelfe in the Church of God, hee that is deſirous more fully to know, let him not ceaſe to trace the pleaſant fields of the holy Scriptures, &c. The Scriptures then doe teach all men, in all caſes both concerning faith and manners, what is to be done, what to be left vndone.

Further, Auguſtine thus writeth, in Pſal.66. Ne putetis (ſaith he) ex alijs Scripturis petendum, quod forte hic deeſt: Thinke not (ſaith he) that it is to be found in any other writings if it bee not in Scripture. And in another place: In Euangelio quæramus, nam ſi ibi non inuenimus, vbi inueniemus? Let vs (ſaith he) ſeeke to be reſolued in the Goſpell, if we finde not there, where ſhall wee finde it? Ergo, by the iudgement of Auguſtine there is no trueth neceſſarie to be knowne, which is not to be found in the Scripture.

I forbeare to vſe other teſtimonies of the Fathers, as that of Origen: In Euangelijs omnis veritas, & omnis manifeſtatio veritatis: In the Goſpels is all truth, and manifeſtation of truth, Hom.9. in Exod. And that of Ambroſe: Quod non legi vſurpare non debeo: I dare not vſe, or receiue, that which I read not, lib. de incarnat. cap.9. I will ſpare to cite the Fathers on our ſide, becauſe I omit the teſtimonies, which our aduerſaries vſe; profeſſing in this treatiſe chiefly to deale with the Scriptures: I will at this time onely vrge againſt them ſuch euidence, as I finde both in the Emperiall, and pontificiall conſtitutions.

Firſt Iuſtinian. Cod. lib.1. tit.2. leg.1. thus decreeth concerning the authoritie of his conſtitutions, that they ſhould onely be vſed in deciding of all cauſes, Quia recitatio conſtitutionum codicis noſtri ſufficiat: Becauſe the allegation onely of the conſtitutions of our Codex is ſufficient, &c. If then the Emperours Codex be ſufficient for all ciuill cauſes [illegible] thinke that the diuine Codex is leſſe ſufficient for ſpirituall?

Againe, Cod. lib.9. tit.29. leg.1. the Emperours, Theodoſ. Gratian. Valentinian. enacted this law: Qui diuinæ legis ſanctitatem, aut neſciendo omittunt, aut negligendo violant, &c. They are guiltie of ſacriledge, that either of ignorance omit, or of negligence violate the diuine law, &c. Then muſt our aduerſaries be guiltie of ſacriledge, which doe omit and neglect the Scriptures, by following vnwritten traditions.

Secondly, out of your owne Canons, Extrauag. commun. lib.1. tit.3. cap.1. Bonif.8. thus writeth: That none ſhould be receiued as a Legate of the Apoſtolike ſea, niſi fide doceat oculata: vnleſſe he demonſtrate it or make faith to the ſight, that is, by ſome writing: for it is the manner of that ſea to doe no ſuch thing, ſine ſignatis apicibus, without ſigned letters. If then in humane matters, there muſt be fides oculata, and ſignati apices, a faith in ſight, and ſigning of writings, how much more needefull is it in diuine?

Yet more directly, Ioh.22. Extrau. lib.5. tit.8. c. vinc. Diuina exempla debent eſſe actionum noſtrarum regula: The diuine examples in Scripture (for ſo he meaneth, as it followeth in the Canon) muſt be an example of our acts.

Laſtly, the trueth of the doctrine that the Scripture containeth all things neceſſarie to ſaluation, hath been ſealed with the blood of Martyrs: this was one of the articles obiected againſt Doctor Taylor, Fox pag.1522. col.2. And in teſtimonie whereof (ſaith Bradford) I giue and render my life, *epiſtol. ad Londinenſ. pag.*1626. col.1. p.1383. col.2. p.1476. col.2. edit. vlt.

To this alſo giueth teſtimonie, that valiant ſouldiour of Chriſt M. Haukes martyr: Is not the Scripture (ſaith he) ſufficient for my ſaluation? Yes, ſaith one of Boners Chaplaines, it is ſufficient for our ſaluation, but not for our inſtruction. He anſwered, God ſend me the ſaluation, and you the inſtruction, Fox pag.1586. col.2. p.1441. col.1.

For this article alſo that the word of God doth containe ſufficient doctrine to ſaluation, the townſhips of Winſon and Mendleſam in Suffolke were perſecuted, pag.1913. c.1. What neede wee doubt then of this doctrine which is proued by Scripture, grounded vpon reaſon, and confirmed by the blood of the Saints? p.1736. col.1. edit.1610.

Touching the ſufficiencie of Scripture: firſt, the Greeke Church herein followeth the iudgement of Damaſcene, one of their writers: We receiue whatſoeuer is deliuered by the Law and the Prophets, the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts, οὐδὲν περαιτέρω τούτων ἐπιζητοῦντες, ſeeking for nothing out of or beyond them. So Lombard Lib.1. de fid. orthod. c.1.

Harm.p.1. 2. The Ethiopike Church holdeth the scripture to be sufficient without any other traditions, yea without their Manda and Abetilis, bookes among them in next account to the Scriptures.

3 The reformed Churches agree: The later confession of Heluetia, chap.1. In this holy Scripture the vniuersall Church of Christ hath all things fully expounded whatsoeuer belong both to a sauing faith, and also to the framing of a life acceptable to God. Harm.p.9. sect.1. Bohemia, chap.1. In this booke, all things as are necessarie to doctrine, &c. are fully, and absolutely, &c. comprehended. French confession, artic.2. It is the summe of all truth, containing whatsoeuer is required for the worship of God, and our saluation. Harm.sect.1. p.11. Confession of Belgia, artic.7. We beleeue, that this holy scripture doth most perfectly containe all the will of God, and that in it all things are abundantly taught, whatsoeuer is necessarie to be beleeued of man, to attaine saluation. Harm.p.13. sect 1. 4 Some witnesses we haue of the Romane Church, for the sufficiencie and perfection of Scripture. Sum.par.1. qu.36.art.2. col.1. Thomas Aquinas: De Deo dicere non debemus, &c. Wee must not speake any thing of God, which is not found in the Scripture, either in the words, or sense, &c. Marsil.patau. defens.pac.p.2. cap.28. Marsilius out of Augustine: Nulli scripturæ vel sermoni fidem præstare tenemur, de necessitate salutis, &c. We are bound to giue no faith to any speech or writing, of any thing necessarie to saluation, but to the Canonicall, &c. In 2.Timoth. p.121. a. Espensæus speaking of the Scripture, saith: Non qualitercumq; bonum facit, sed perficit, &c. It doth not make one good howsoeuer, but perfectly good, which is the last and greatest profiting, ad perfectionem perducere, to bring vnto perfection. If the Scriptures bring to perfection, then are they sufficient of themselues, complete and absolute.

THE THIRD PART OF THE SEVENTH QVEstion: whether there be any traditions, beside Scripture concerning faith and manners.

The Papists.

23.Error. THey vnderstand by this word tradition, doctrine, precepts, and ceremonies, with other vsages of the Church, which are not written in the Scriptures. They doe not say that all their traditions are necessarie, but they make diuers kindes of them: some are vniuersall, obserued in the whole Church, some particular: some are free, some necessarie: some are Apostolicall, inuented by the Apostles, some Ecclesiasticall by the Church. So thus they conclude, all traditions decreed in Councels, and iudged Apostolicall, and whatsoeuer the Church of Rome receiueth as Apostolicall, are not to bee doubted, but to be Apostolicall indeed. Secondly, all Apostolicall traditions are of equall authoritie with the writings of the Apostles, Bellarm.lib.4.cap.2.& 9. The Tridentine Synode thus also professeth: Pari pietatis affectu suscipit & veneratur, &c. With like pious affection it receiueth and worshippeth the books of the old and new Testament, and the traditions, &c. Sess.4.decr.2. And they are that part of the word of God which is vnwritten, as well as the Scriptures are that part which is written. Let vs see what arguments they bring for these traditions.

Argum.1. They giue an instance of certaine traditions, as the baptisme of infants, and the not rebaptising of those, which were before baptised by heretikes. We answere, these two customes of the Church are grounded vpon Scripture: for as children were in the time of the law circumcised, so are they now vnder the Gospell baptised: and that promise, Genes.17. I will be thy God, and the God of thy seed: as it belonged to them and their children, so doth it appertaine to vs and our children.

Ephes.4.5. Concerning the other point, that they whom heretikes haue once baptised, ought not to bee baptised againe: S. Augustine doth proue it out of the Scripture, Ephes.4.5. There is one faith, one baptisme, Ergo not to be repeated.

But now they come in with other traditions, as the Lenten fast, which they vse most fondly and superstitiously: the eight Ecclesiasticall orders, Bishops, Priests, Deacons, Subdeacons, Acolythists, Readers, Exorcists, Doore-keepers, the worshipping of Images, with many other: these they would face vs out to be Apostolicall traditions, and to haue been vniuersally obserued, which are but their vaine brags, and Thrasonicall crakes: they shall neuer proue them vniuersall, much lesse Apostolicall. And because they finde no scripture to establish these their superstitious phantasies by, they flie vnto tradition, which is their only hauen, where they hope to finde succour, but all in vaine: Bellarm.lib.4.cap.9. Consul.Whitacher.quæst.6.cap.4.

Argum.2. They proceed and alleage Scripture for their traditions, as that place Iohn 16.12. John 16.12. I haue many things to say, but you cannot beare them now: Ergo, say they, there are many traditions not written.

We answere: First, it followeth not, because Christ declared not all things at that time, that therefore he kept them from his Apostles altogether. Nay, whatsoeuer afterwards the Apostles learned of the spirit of God, they had heard before of Christ: for it was the office of the spirit, partly to put them John 14.26. in remembrance of Christs sayings, Ioh.14.26. which they had heard before, but vnderstood them not, out, and ſo forget them, partly they were taught of the Spirit, whatſoeuer was neceſſarie, who ſhould leade them into all truth, and teach them things to come, which are the ſame things which the Apoſtles did both preach and write. Wherefore theſe things, which Chriſt forbeareth to ſpeake, are the ſame things, which were afterward taught by the Spirit, and are contained in the Apoſtles writings. Secondly, if there were other matters, which Chriſt vttered not, how followeth it, nay what great preſumption is it to ſay, that thoſe trifles and apiſh toyes, which the Papiſts vſe in their Idolatrous ſacrifice, and their other beggerly ceremonies (which boyes may well laugh at) are thoſe profound matters, which the Apoſtles were not then able to conceiue.

Argum. 3. This of all other, they take to bee an inuincible place, 2.Theſſ.2.15. Keepe the inſtructions or traditions, which ye haue been taught either by word, or by Epiſtle: Ergo, there are traditions beſide Scripture.

2.Theſſ.2.15.

We anſwere, when S. Paul wrote this Epiſtle, all the Scriptures were not written: wherefore beſides theſe two ſhort Epiſtles, which doe not containe the ſumme of the Goſpell, nor all neceſſarie precepts, he by his preaching ſupplied what was wanting, and ſo declared vnto them the whole myſterie of the Goſpell, as he ſaith, 1.Theſſ.2.2. theſe he calleth his traditions, becauſe yet hee had not written his other Epiſtles, wherein thoſe inſtructions and traditions are contained. This then is but a weake argument: the Theſſalonians had other inſtructions and traditions, beſide the two Epiſtles written vnto them: Ergo, they had other traditions, beſide all the writings of S. Paul and the other Apoſtles. This is their maine and waightie argument. And further, it is not onely the Apoſtles phraſe, but the vſe of the Fathers, to call the Scriptures a tradition: as S. Cyprian epiſt. ad Pompeium: Si aut in Euangelio præcipitur, aut in Apoſtolorum epiſtolis, aut actibus continetur, obſeruetur etiam & hæc ſancta traditio: If it be either commanded in the Goſpell, or contained in the epiſtles or acts of the Apoſtles, let this tradition alſo be obſerued. Likewiſe S. Ambroſe: Corpus Chriſti traditiones ſunt ſcripturarum. The bodie of Chriſt are the traditions of the Scriptures: lib.5. in Luc. And Ambroſe ſo vnderſtandeth that place of S. Paul obiected, 2.Theſſ.2.15. Stand faſt, and keepe the traditions, In traditione Euangelij ſtandum & permanendum monet: He admoniſheth them to ſtand in the tradition of the Goſpel, &c.

2.Theſſ.2.15. Ambroſ. in hunc locum.

The Doway tranſlators doe thus deliuer their opinion, concerning traditions: The hiſtorie of the creation of the world, and ſo for 2400 yeeres, vntill Moſes time, he knew partly by reuelation, partly by tradition from the Fathers, which were of great authoritie, before there were Scriptures, and ſince Scriptures were written, they are alſo neceſſarie for three ſpeciall cauſes: firſt, wee are only aſſured by traditions, which are the bookes of Scripture, &c. Secondly, for the true vnderſtanding of Scripture wee are referred to the Church. Thirdly, for things not expreſſed particularly in holy Scripture, the Scripture and Fathers do commit vs to traditions, and to the iudgement of the Church, as our Sauiour ſaith, he that heareth you, heareth me. To this purpoſe, the Doway Colledge, annot. in Geneſ. c.1.

Contra. 1. It followeth not, becauſe traditions were neceſſarie, before any Scriptures were written: and when as the Church had Prophets, that receiued reuelations, which approued the traditions, that therfore traditions now alſo haue a neceſſarie vſe, the Scriptures being written, and prophecie with reuelations ceaſed.

2 Traditions are not neceſſarie for any of theſe three cauſes: firſt, the Scripture is euidently proued by the Scripture to be the word of God: the teſtimonie of the Church only prepareth a way, but the ſure and certaine knowledge is wrought in the heart by the holy Ghoſt out of the Scripture it ſelfe: as is ſhewed before, Error 5. ſo likewiſe the Scripture is able to interprete it ſelfe: ſee before Error 9. neither are there any things neceſſarie to be knowne vnto ſaluation, which are not warranted by the word of God, as ſhal afterward be proued. And ſo the paſtors, not ſwaruing from the rule of Chriſt, are to be heard, as Chriſt himſelfe: but whoſoeuer preacheth otherwiſe, though he be an Angel, is accurſed.

Galath.1.8.

3 They are contrary to themſelues: for elſewhere they giue this note, vpon that fact of Nadab and Abihu, in offering of ſtrange fire: We are inioined by this to be contented with the doctrine of the holy Ghoſt, and to abhorre hereſies, the fautors whereof adde falſehood to Gods word, and preferre their owne wicked inuentions before the true ſenſe of holy Scripture, &c. And againe, Vnwritten traditions are contained, implied, included in the Scriptures. Here they ſeeme to allow of nothing, which is not implied, and included in Scripture, and whatſoeuer is added to the true ſenſe of holie Scripture. If they will ſtand then to their owne words, vnwritten traditions haue no place.

The Proteſtants.

First, we grant that all things are not written which our Sauiour Chriſt and the Apoſtles taught, and that it was the Goſpell, which they preached, as well as this which is written: yet in ſubſtance they preached the ſame Goſpell, which now is expreſſed in the Scripture: neither was there any neceſſarie precept deliuered in their ſermons, which is not now to be found in the Scriptures. Secondly, we denie not but there were certaine rites and orders ordained by the Apoſtles in diuers Churches, which were not committed to writing, becauſe they were not to continue & endure for euer in the Church; as this precept, Acts 15. that the Gentiles ſhould abſtaine from ſtrangled, and from blood. Thirdly, we alſo grant that the Church may vſe externall rites and orders either left by tradition, or ordained by the Church for decencie and comelineſſe, and tending to edification. But wee conſtantly affirme, that there are no traditions in the Church of God neceſſarie to ſaluation beſide ſcripture: wherein all things are contained neceſſarie to ſaluation, both concerning faith and manners.

Deut.12.32. Reuel.22.18. *Argum.*1. It is not lawfull, as to take ought from the word of God, ſo to adde any thing vnto it, Deut. 12.32. Apocal. 22.18. But they which bring in traditions neceſſarie beſide the Scriptures, doe adde vnto them. Ergo.

To the propoſition the Ieſuite anſwereth: that all addition to the word of God is not forbidden, for the Prophets did write after Moſes, and the Apoſtles after the Euangeliſts. Wee anſwere: firſt, that thoſe holy men had authoritie from God to compoſe ſcripture: if the Papiſts haue the like Apoſtolike authoritie for their traditions, let them ſhew it, and we will beleeue them. Secondly, the Prophets did but explaine Moſes, and expound the law, and the Apoſtles did as it were ſet foorth their Commentaries vpon the Goſpell; this therefore was no addition, becauſe they did not derogate from the perfection of the ſcriptures any way.

To the aſſumption they anſwere: that their traditions are but expoſitions of the ſcripture. We anſwere, their traditions are cleane contrarie to ſcripture, as the worſhipping of Images, and the ſacrifice of their Maſſe; and they adde to ſcripture, making it vnperfect, ſaying, It doth not containe all things neceſſarie to ſaluation. Wherefore they cannot eſcape that curſe, which they runne into, that adde to the word of God.

Math.15.3. Argum 2. All traditions among the Iewes beſides the law were condemned, Matth. 15.3. Ergo, all vnwritten traditions now muſt be aboliſhed. The Ieſuite anſwereth: Firſt, Chriſt condemned not the ancient traditions of Moſes, but thoſe, which were newly and lately inuented. Anſw. Firſt, the Scripture maketh no mention of any ſuch traditions of Moſes; Chriſt biddeth them ſearch the Scriptures, not runne vnto traditions. Secondly, theſe ſeemed to be ancient traditions, bearing the name of Elders traditions, and they were in great authoritie amongſt the Iewes; moſt like, becauſe of ſome long continuance.

Secondly (ſaith he) Chriſt findeth fault with wicked and impious traditions. Anſw. Firſt, their traditions were not openly and plainly euill and pernicious, but had ſome ſhew of holineſſe, as the waſhing of pots, and tables, and beds. I would the Papiſts did not heere take themſelues by the noſe, whoſe traditions come neerer to open impietie, and blaſphemie, then theirs did. Secondly, Chriſt in oppoſing the ſcripture againſt traditions, therein condemneth all traditions not written vrged as neceſſarie, beſides the ſcripture.

Acts 20.27. *Argum.*3. If Paul preaching the whole Goſpell, Acts 20.27. did ſay none other things then Moſes and the Prophets; then all things neceſſarie to ſaluation are contained in the ſcriptures. For it cannot be ſaid to be a whole and perfect Goſpell, if any thing neceſſarie to ſaluation bee wanting. But Acts 26.22. Paul preached nothing, but out of Moſes and the Prophets, Acts 26.22. Ergo, much more now is the ſcripture a perfect rule of faith; wee hauing beſide Moſes and the Prophets, the holy writings of the Euangeliſts and Apoſtles. So that wee further reaſon thus: If Moſes and the Prophets were ſufficient without any other helpes for the times of the law, much more ſufficient is the new Teſtament together with the old now. But the firſt is true, therefore the ſecond. The conſequence of the firſt propo-

Math.13.17. ſition cannot be denied: for we ſee now more then the Prophets did, Matth. 13.17. and if the old Teſtament then was ſufficient, much more the new together with the old. The ſecond part is thus pro-

Luc.16.29. ued, Luke 16.29. The rich mans brethren are ſent to Moſes and the Prophets, which were more ſufficient to inſtruct them, then if one ſhould come from the dead: ſo that the written word is to be preferred before vnwritten reuelations. And Abraham, in ſaying, heare them, teſtifieth, that they contained ſufficient inſtruction vnto life: Ergo, much more the Goſpell now.

*Argum.*4. The Scriptures were written, to be a rule and meaſure of our faith: And they being the worke of God, whoſe works are all perfect, muſt needs alſo be a perfect rule of our faith: and ſo containe all things neceſſarie to faith: for the rule and meaſure muſt not come ſhort of that which is meaſured.

*Bellarm.*1. The Scripture was not ordained eſpecially to bee a rule of our faith: but onely to bee, commentarium quoddam, as a remembrancer to nouriſh and preſerue ſound doctrine by preaching: for if it were to that end, it ſhould containe only ſuch things as belong vnto the faith; but now it containeth many things beſide.

*Anſw.*1. That the Scriptures were not written, to be a rule of our faith, it is a bold and vntrue aſſertion contrarie to Scripture: the Scriptures doe teach and ſhew vs eternall life, Iohn 5.39. but it is

Iohn 3.16. eternall life to beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, Ioh. 3.16. Ergo the Scriptures doe teach and giue rules of our faith and beleefe: yea S. Paul doth in direct termes, call the doctrine of Chriſt crucified, which is ſet

Gala.6.15.16. forth in Scriptures, a rule, Gal. 6.15.16.

*Bellarm.*2. Againe wee ſay, that the Scripture is a rule of faith (though this be not the chiefe end thereof) yet not a totall and abſolute rule, but in part only: the word of God is one part or peece of the rule, vnwritten traditions another.

Prou.1.1. Anſwere 1. That it is the chiefe end of Scripture to be a rule of faith and good manners, the wiſe man ſpeaketh plainlie, Prou. 1.1. The prouerbs of Salomon to know wiſedome and vnderſtand the words of knowledge, to receiue inſtruction to doe wiſely. This is the end of Scripture, to know true wiſedome, and to doe wiſely: And leſt they ſhould ſay, that this is the end only of that booke, S. Paul ſheweth the

1.Tim.3.16. ſame generally to be the end & vſe of all Scripture, 1. Tim. 3.16. 2. If the Scripture be a rule, then is it a perfect rule: for God leaueth not any of his works vnperfect. I know (ſaith the Preacher) that whatſo- euer God doth, it ſhall be for euer: to it can no man adde, and from it can no man diminiſh: Ecleſ. 3. 14. But the Scripture is one of Gods works: Ergo, it is perfect: Yea S. Paul ſaith plainly, that the Scriptures are able to make the man of God perfect to euery good worke: Ergo, themſelues are much much perfect. 3. It is no good argument which the Ieſuite vſeth, the Scriptures containe more then belongeth to faith, or then is neceſſarie to be beleeued: Ergo, they are not properly a rule of faith. Wee anſwere. 1. Though the Scriptures be profitable to other ends, then to inſtruct in faith and good manners, yet this is the chiefe and priticipall, as wee haue ſhewed: and though many things in Scripture declared hiſtorically, are not properly of the ſubſtance of faith; yet there is nothing therein contained, which may not bee referred to faith and good manners, as profitable and helping to one of thoſe ends. 2. This argument may bee returned vpon the Ieſuites owne head: for if the Scripture ſpeake of many things which are not of the neceſſity of faith, much leſſe is it ſilent in all neceſſarie points of faith: if it abound in things not neceſſarie, Non deficit in neceſſarijs, much leſſe doth it faile in neceſſarie.

Eccleſ 3.14.

Laſt of all, although we might multiplie many arguments, but theſe I truſt, ſtrongly concluding out of Scripture, may ſerue as a ſufficient bulwarke againſt all Popiſh paper bullets; let vs heare in the knitting vp the iudgement of Auguſtine. In his rebus, inquit, in quibus nihil certi ſtatuit Scriptura, mos populi Dei, vel inſtituta maiorum, pro lege tenenda. Epiſt. 86. In all thoſe things (ſaith he) ſpeaking of externall rites, and ceremonies, of the which we haue no certaine rule out of Scripture, the cuſtome of the people of God, and the godly conſtitutions of our forefathers muſt ſtand for a law, &c. But concerning matters of faith and good manners the Scriptures doe giue certaine rules: as in another place: In ijs quæ aperte in Scriptura poſita ſunt, inueniuntur illa omnia, quæ continent fidem, moreſque viuendi. de doctrina Chriſt. 2. 9. All things appertaining to faith, and the rule of life, are plainely expreſſed in the Scripture: Ergo, by the ſentence of Auguſtine, traditions beſides Scripture haue nothing to doe with the doctrine of faith and manners, but doe conſiſt onely in externall rites and cuſtoms of the Church.

This doctrine alſo that no traditions concerning either faith are manners as to be receiued beſides Scripture, wanteth not the glorious conſent of Martyrs. Sir Iohn Borthwicke knight was condemned by the Cardinall of Scotland, for affirming, amongſt other things, that the Pope ought not to obtrude vpon the Church any lawes of faith beſide or contrary to the Scripture: for as the Prophets (ſaith he) alwaies in the beginning of their prophecies, ſaid The Word of the Lord, ſhewing thereby, that they preached not their owne phantaſies, but the word of God; and as our Sauiour bad his Apoſtles preach, Matth. 28. not what they would themſelues, but what he commanded them: ſo now nothing ought to be taught in the Church beſide the word of God contained in Scripture, Fox. pag. 1151. col. 1. See the confeſſion alſo of Iohn Fortune Martyr, that he would not beleeue vnwritten verities, which agreed not with written verities. Fox. pag. 1918. col. 2.

Let vs alſo ſee the conſent of antiquitie: Concil. Florentin. general. Seſſ. 7. Andreas Coloſſen. being choſen a champion for the Latine Church, thus ſpeaketh vnto the Greeke diſputers, which ſaid ſpeech was approued of the whole Councell: Velim a vobis (ampliſſimi patres) doceri an ſacratiſſim. euangelium perfectiſſim, religionis noſtræ doctrinam præ ſe ferat: Equidem vos nihil aliud puto pro veſtra ſumma pietate reſponſuros, quam conſummatiſſimam fidei noſtræ ſcientiam in ipſo concluſam eſſe: I would gladly learne af you (honorable Fathers) whether the moſt holy Goſpell doth not ſet forth the moſt perfect doctrine of our religion, I thinke you will make no other anſwere (ſuch is your pietie) then that therein, the moſt abſolute knowledge of our faith is contained.

Further for the Imperiall conſtitutions: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 18. *lex. Vnic. Gratian. Therefore Papiſts be maſters of errors, becauſe they doe not in all things referre themſelues to the Scriptures. I would therefore they were reſolued to follow the voice of the Scriptures, and leaue their blind traditions, as once one of their owne Popes bethought himſelfe, Iohn 22. extrau. tit. 7. c. 1. Dignum eſt, vt adulterinas plantationes, quas non pater cæleſtis, ſed humanæ temeritatis audacia plantauit, Apoſtolici culminis cenſura diuellat: It is meete, that ſuch plantations, as not the heauenly father, but humanie raſhneſſe hath planted, ſhould be rooted out by the Apoſtolicall cenſure. Lib. 6. de sacror. hom. continent. cap. 106

Thus we see, that they themselues, which vrge the necessity of Apostolicall traditions, and make them equall to the word of God; insomuch that they call them the word vnwritten, doe refuse them at their pleasure, and make small account of them; and so herein in their practise are contrary to their opinion.

THE SECOND GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE CHVRCH.

HAuing now finiſhed the queſtions betweene our aduerſaries and vs, concerning the Scriptures, and word of God; which all doe belong to the Propheticall office of Chriſt: in the next place ſuch controuerſies are to be handled, as doe concerne the Kingly office of Chriſt. And ſeeing the Church of Chriſt is his kingdome, where he ruleth and raigneth, we muſt intreat of the Church: and firſt in generall of the whole; then in ſpeciall of the parts and members. This preſent controuerſie concerning the Church in generall ſtandeth vpon fiue principall queſtions.

1. Of the definition of the Catholike Church: two parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether wicked men and infidels be true members of the Church. Secondly, whether the Catholike Church be inuiſible.

2. Whether the Catholike Church may erre; and whether the viſible Church may faile vpon earth.

3. Concerning the true notes and markes of the Church.

4. Of the authoritie of the Church two parts. Firſt, whether the Church haue authoritie in matters of faith beſide the Scriptures, and whether we ought to beleeue in the Church. Secondly, concerning the ceremonies of the Church.

5. Whether the Church of Rome be the true Church: two parts. Firſt, whether it be the Catholike Church. Secondly, whether the Church of Rome be a true viſible Church: of theſe now in their place and order.

THE FIRST QVESTION: OF THE definition of the Catholike Church.

The Papiſts.

THe Catholike Church (ſay they) is a viſible companie of men, profeſſing the ſame Faith and Religion, and acknowledging the Biſhop of Rome to be their chiefe Paſtor, and the Vicar of Chriſt vpon earth. Bellarmin. de Eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. 2. Caniſius capit. de praecept. Eccleſ. articul. 9. Lindanus lib. 4. cap. 84.

The Proteſtants.

THe Catholike and vniuerſall Church is the inuiſible companie of the faithfull elected and choſen to eternall life, Iohn. 10. 16. A particular Church is a member of the vniuerſall and Catholike Church, and it is a viſible companie and congregation of men, amongſt whom the pure word of God is preached, and the Sacraments rightly adminiſtred; in the which viſible congregation, there may be and are many hypocrites, euill and vnfaithfull men found, and ſhall be to the end of the world. So then betweene the vniuerſall and particular Church, there is a treble difference. Firſt, the one is diſperſed ouer all the world; the other in ſome one Countrey, Citie, or any certaine place. Secondly, the vniuerſall conſiſteth onely of the elect; the particular both of good and bad. Thirdly, the Catholike is inuiſible; the other is viſible and to be ſeene.

Math. 3.12.
Matth. 13.47.
2.Tim. 2.20.

The queſtion betweene vs and our aduerſaries, is about the vniuerſall Catholike Church, which they doe falſly define in three points. Firſt, they hold that wicked men are true members of the Catholike Church. Secondly, they allow not this diſtinction of the Church viſible and inuiſible, but doe affirme that the Catholike Church is viſible. Thirdly, they make the Catholike Church to be in ſubiection to the Biſhop of Rome. Concerning this laſt point, it belongeth to the controuerſie of the Biſhop of Rome, and therefore we will not touch it in this place. The other two are now to be handled in this queſtion as two parts thereof.

1.Cor. 12.12.

THE FIRST PART OF THIS FIRST QVEſtion, whether wicked men and Infidels may be true members of the Church.

The Papiſts.

14. Error.

They affirme that not onely the predeſtinate, but euen reprobates alſo may belong vnto the Church, and be true members thereof. Bellarmin.lib.3.de Eccleſ.cap.7. But they denie that the elect which are vnborne, and not yet called, doe appertaine to the Church of Chriſt. Rhemiſts annot. in 2.Tim.3.Sect.10. This then is generally their opinion, that there is no internall grace or vertue required in the members of the Church, but onely the externall and publike outward profeſſion. Bellarmin.cap.2. And therefore they doubt not to ſay, that euen wicked men and reprobates remaining in the publike profeſſion of the Church, are true members of the body of Chriſt. Rhemiſts annot. in Iohan.15.Sect.1.

Bellarmine further thus deliuereth his opinion, that profeſſed Infidels, and ſuch as are not baptized, Heretikes, Schiſmatikes, excommunicate perſons, are not of the Church, neither doe belong vnto it, and that, pertinere ad eccleſiam, that thoſe doe belong to the Church, they which are not predeſtinate, they which are not perfect, manifeſt ſinners, and cloſe Infidels or Atheiſts, lib.3.de eccleſ.c.2.in fine. And of thoſe eight ſeuerall degrees, he hath large tractates in eight following chapters: concerning the which, our opinion briefly is this.

1 They which are yet Infidels, and not admitted to baptiſme, are no parts of the viſible Church, becauſe they doe not ioyne vnto it.

2 Nor yet heretikes, becauſe they are gone out of it.

3 Schiſmatikes are cut off from that particular Church, from the which they deuide themſelues: yet may make by them ſelues a particular viſible Church, if they retaine the puritie of doctrine, and right vſe of the Sacraments.

4 Excommunicate perſons (if they bee rightly cenſured) are not actually parts of the viſible Church, but potentia, they haue a poſſibility vpon their repentance of returning vnto it againe; yet all theſe may belong to election, and ſo be members of the inuiſible Church.

Concerning the reſt. 1. They which are not predeſtinate, may belong to a particular viſible Church, as Iudas, while he followed Chriſt, but of the true inuiſible Church, they are no members.

2 They which are not perfect, may belong both to the viſible and inuiſible Church.

3 Manifeſt ſinners, though de facto, in fact they are parts of the viſible Church, yet de iure, of right they are not.

4 Cloſe Infidels, may be counted of a viſible Church, becauſe they are not diſcerned: but vnto the true Church they belong not, as long as they remaine in their infidelitie.

All theſe may be ſorted out, and reduced to theſe heads. 1. Some are both of the viſible and inuiſible Church, as they which are actually called to the faith. 2. Some are neither of the one, nor the other, as infidels and heretikes not elected. 3. Some are of the inuiſible onely, as all yet vnborne and vncalled, yet elected. 4. Some are onely of the viſible Church, and not of the inuiſible: as hypocrites, that liue in the outward ſocietie of the Church.

And to be of the viſible Church, is diuerſly taken. 1. Some may be of one particular viſible Church, though diuided by ſome difference from another, as Schiſmatikes. 2. Some may bee of the viſible Church potentia, in poſſibilitie, though not in act, as excommunicates. 3. Some may bee of the viſible Church de facto, in fact, not de iure, of right, as notorious wicked perſons, which deſerue to bee cut off. We will now ſee ſome of their arguments, that the wicked and reprobates may be true members of the Church and body of Chriſt.

Math.3.12. Math.13.47. 2.Tim.2.20.

Argum.1. They firſt alleage certaine places of Scripture, as Matth.3.12. The Church is compared to a barne floore, where there is both chaffe and corne. Matth.13. to a net caſt into the ſea, where all manner of fiſh are gathered together. 2.Tim.2. to a houſe, wherein there bee veſſels of honour and diſhonour: Ergo, both good and bad are members of the Church, Bellarm.cap.7.lib.3.

We anſwere. All theſe places muſt be vnderſtood of the viſible Church: which is knowne by the publike preaching of the word, and right adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and therefore Matth.3. compared to a fanne, and Matth.13. to a draw net; the Apoſtles, Paſtors and Teachers are the fiſhermen. Wherefore wee denie not but that wicked men may bee in the Church, but not of it: yea, they may bee members of the viſible Church for a time, but cannot bee truely ingraffed into the body of Chriſt. Fulk annot.Iohan.15.Sect.1.

1.Cor.12.12.

Argum.2. The Church (ſay they) is compared to a body, 1.Cor.12. as in the body there are ſome parts, which haue neither ſenſe nor life: ſo in the Church there are ſome members, which haue neither faith nor charitie, which is the life of the Church: Ergo, wicked men may bee right members of the Church: Bellarm.cap.10.argum.4. There may be alſo ſome fruitleſſe branches in the vine, and ſo euill men may be members of Chriſt. Rhemiſt.annot.15.Iohan.1. Euery branch not bearing fruit in mee ſhall be caſt forth: Ergo, there may be fruitleſſe branches in Chriſt.

Wee anſwere to the firſt, who would haue ſaid, as the Ieſuite doth, that there are parts in the bodie, that receiue neither life nor ſenſe of the body? doth hee meane the nailes and haires, as he ſeemeth to giue inſtance in the end of the 2. Chapter? but they are no parts of the bodie but excrements (he is ſo deepe in his ſophiſtrie, that hee hath forgotten Philoſophie) and yet they receiue ſome gift from the bodie, for they grow and encreaſe; but the wicked receiue no grace at all from the Church. The Rhemiſts yet are more reaſonable, that ſay the wicked in the Church, are as ill humors and ſuperfluous excrements in the body, rather then liuely parts thereof, 1. Iohan. 2. Sect. 10.

To the ſecond: is a dead bough or a branch, I pray you, any part of the tree? I thinke not: the tree cannot conueniently ſpare any one of the parts thereof: but the dead parts are hurtfull and cumberſome, and it doth the tree good to cut them off. But that they haue preuented vs, we would haue vſed no better argument againſt them, then this drawn from the reſemblance of a mans body: for as what is in the body receiuing no life nor power from the body is not properly a part of the body, howſoeuer it ſeeme to bee ioyned to the body: ſo the wicked, although they bee in the outward face of the Church, yet becauſe they are not partakers of the ſpirituall life thereof by Chriſt, are not truely to bee iudged members of it.

Argum. 3. If wicked men ſhould not be right members of the Church, but the faithfull and predeſtinate, we ſhould be vncertaine which is the true Church: which is not to be admitted, becauſe the whole doctrine, and all the principles of Religion do depend of the teſtimonie of the Church. Bellarm. lib. 3. cap. 10.

We anſwere. Firſt, although it is neceſſarie that the true Church ſhould bee certainly knowne, yet not for that cauſe, which the Ieſuite pretendeth: for the religion of Chriſtians is grounded vpon the Scriptures, and although the true Church doth giue a notable teſtimonie thereunto, yet doth not our faith depend vpon their witneſſe, teſtimonie, or allowance. Secondly, the true viſible Church is certainly knowne by the preaching of the word, and the right vſe of the Sacraments: ſo that wee doubt not but there is the true Church, where we finde theſe markes: neither is it needfull to know the eſtate of euery particular member thereof; for ſo long, as all actions in the Church are directed and ordered by the rule of Gods word, we need not to doubt to commit our ſelues to that Church, howſoeuer otherwiſe men doe ſtand before God: and yet, ſo much as is neceſſary: the faithfull may be iudged and knowne by their fruits.

Thirdly, though we admit that wicked men are members: yet the vncertainty remaineth ſtill: for they themſelues hold that neither men not baptized, or perſons excommunicate, or heretikes can bee of the Church: but many may liue in the Church, whom we know not to be baptiſed, which may bee ipſo facto, by the deede doing excommunicate without publike ſentence, and heretikes alſo: Wherefore euen amongſt themſelues they are vncertaine, who are members of the Church.

Argum. 4. There is but one Church; the wicked, which outwardly profeſſe Chriſt, are of ſome Church: Ergo, of this one Catholike Church: argum. D. Day epiſcop. Ciceſt. Anſwere, there is but one true Church, but alwaies vnto the ſame was ioyned in the world a falſe and malignant Church: theſe two Churches were repreſented in the beginning in Cain and Abel, and ſo haue continued. Obiect. I grant you, in the law, before Chriſts comming there were two Churches, but not ſince Chriſts comming. Anſwere. Yes that there was, for was there not a Iudas in the new law, and a Simon Magus? Obiect. But you cannot find me two Churches after Chriſt was aſcended. Anſwere. Yes, S. Paul ſaith that Antichriſt with his falſe generation ſhall ſit in the temple, 2. Theſ. 2. which is not the true, but the falſe Church, reſponſ. Philpotti, Fox. pag. 1818.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold that the Catholike Church conſiſteth onely of the predeſtinate, and comprehendeth the vniuerſall number of all thoſe which ſhall be ſaued; not onely thoſe now liuing on earth, but all that haue been ſince the beginning of the world: of this Church S. Paul was, euen being a perſecutor, for he was neuer a member of the Diuell nor reprobate, as Iohn Huſſe ſaith, articul. 2. Of this Church Iudas the traitor neuer was, though he were reputed for a Diſciple of Chriſt for a while, Huſſ. articul. 7. Therefore the wicked and reprobate though they liue in the outward aſſemblie of Chriſtians, are no more the true members of Chriſt, then the tares in the field may bee counted wheate or good corne.

Fulk. annot. 1. Iohan. 2. Sect. 10.
Fox. pag. 609.

Argum. 1. The true members of Chriſt are alſo his ſheepe: the wicked are not the ſheep of Chriſt: Ergo, neither his members.

The ſheepe of Chriſt heare his voice; the wicked doe not heare his voice: Ergo, If they ſhall anſwere, that hypocrites and wicked men doe heare Chriſts voice, ſo long as they continue in the outward profeſſion of Chriſtians, wee thus improue it: Chriſts ſheepe doe follow him in life and example, Iohn 15.4. but ſo doe not they. If it ſhall bee yet anſwered, that they may alſo a while walke in Chriſts ſteps: this is not enough, for all Chriſts ſhall be ſaued, verſ. 9. Wherefore the Goſpell vnderſtandeth ſuch followers, as continue to the end. Bellarmine would ſeeme here to anſwere with a diſtinction, that ſometimes in the Scripture ſheep are taken both for the good and bad, as where Chriſt ſaith to Peter, Feede my ſheepe: ſometime for the predeſtinate onely, as Iohn 10. My ſheepe heare my voice, cap. 7. reſ. ad argum. 5. Contra. It is enough that he confeſſeth in this place of Iohn, the predeſtinate onely to be vnderſtood by ſheepe: for it followeth in the ſame chapter, verſ. 16. There ſhall bee

Iohn 15.4.
Ioh. 10.16.

one ſheepefold, and one ſhepheard: therefore if the ſheepe only be in the ſheepfold, and the predeſtinate onely be the ſheepe; then they onely belong to the ſheepfold.

Epheſ.5.23.

Epheſ.5.26.27.

*Argum.*2. Chriſt is the head of his Church, and all the parts thereof; but he is not the head of the wicked and reprobate: Ergo. The Ieſuite graunteth that hee is the head, euen of thoſe parts that ſhall periſh, *Bellarm. cap.*7. We thus anſwere, Chriſt is the head only of thoſe, for whom he gaue himſelfe, Epheſ.5.23.25. but he gaue not himſelfe for the wicked: Ergo. If this be denied, wee thus proceede; Chriſt died onely for thoſe whom he ſanctifieth and cleanſeth, to make them a glorious Church without ſpot and wrinckle, Epheſ.5.26.27. But this cannot agree in any wiſe to the wicked: Ergo.

Ioh.11.52.

*Argum.*3. The Church of God is the whole familie of the children of God in heauen and earth, Epheſ.3.15. they both make but one Church; the wicked are not of this familie: for who would ſay that the Saints in heauen, and wicked and reprobate men vpon the earth, are fellow ſeruants, and of one houſhold? Ergo, they are not of the Catholike Church. Likewiſe Ioh.11.52. The end of Chriſts death was to gather together in one the children of God, &c. But the wicked are not the children of God: Ergo, they belong not to the congregation which Chriſt hath gathered together.

Bellarmine anſwereth here by a diſtinction: that ſome are ſaid to be the ſonnes of God and members of Chriſt, according to their preſent iuſtice; ſome according to Gods predeſtination: the wicked may be the firſt way the ſonnes of God, and the members of Chriſt, Bellarm. cap.7.reſp. ad argum.6.

Ioh.10.28.

*Contra.*1. This diſtinction is contrarie to the Apoſtle, Rom.8.17. The children of God are alſo heires: but the wicked are not heires; therefore they are not children. 2. The Ieſuite doth not anſwere to the point in queſtion: for our aſſertion is, that the wicked cannot be the true members of Chriſt: he anſwereth, they may bee ſo called after a ſort, according to their preſent ſtate, which is in ſhew onely, and outward appearance, not in deed and in truth: for they that doe beleeue in Chriſt, and are indeed his ſheepe, ſhall neuer periſh, Iohn 10.28. And againe, verſ.26. Ye beleeue not, becauſe ye are not my ſheepe. Wherefore faith and beleefe maketh men Chriſts ſheepe, contrary to that which the Ieſuite affirmed before, that there is no internal grace, or vertue required to make a member of Chriſts Church.

1.Ioh.2.19.

*Argum.*4. Of all other that is a moſt euident place, 1.Iohn 2.19. They went out of vs, but were not of vs: Ergo, heretikes and reprobates are not of the Church. Bellarmine anſwereth: though they were not of vs, that is, of the Church, animis & voluntate, in ſoule and mind, and purpoſe of heart: yet they were of vs, externa profeſſione, in externall profeſſion. And hee hath this diſtinction beſide: that one may be ſaid to be the true child of God, and a member of the body of Chriſt two waies: Veritate eſſentiæ vel formæ: in the truth of the eſſence or forme: and veritate finis: In the true end, which is the partaking of euerlaſting life: ſome may in reſpect of their preſent grace and charitie bee the firſt way members of the Church, and not the ſecond: cap.8.reſponſ. ad argum.16.

Ioh.15.5.

*Contra.*1. If they are not ioyned to the Church in ſoule and affection, but onely in externall profeſſion, they are not true and liuely members of the Church: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, If they had been of vs, they would haue continued with vs: for the true branches doe abide and remaine in the vine, Iohn 15.5.

1.Iohn 3.9.

2. The eſſence and forme of a Chriſtian can not be loſt: for he that is borne of God ſinneth not, becauſe his ſeed remaineth in him: like as he which hath receiued the eſſence and being of a man, and is borne of his parents, cannot be vnborne againe of humaine ſeed: ſo he that is once borne of the heauenly ſeed, is the ſonne of God, and ſo continueth to the end.

Let Auguſtine ſpeake for vs both: Illa columba, vnica, pudica, caſta, ſponſa ſine macula & ruga non intelligitur, niſi in bonis, iuſtis, ſanctis: That louely doue (ſaith he) the chaſte, vndefiled, and vnſpotted ſpouſe (that is the Church of God) is onely vnderſtood of thoſe that are righteous, faithfull, holy: Ergo, the wicked are not of the Church, which is the ſpouſe of Chriſt.

Concil. Vormatienſ. in præfation. concil. Eccleſiam catholicam pretio ſui ſanguinis redemptam, cum eo credimus in perpetuum regnaturam: That Catholike Church, which is redeemed by his blood, wee beleeue ſhall raigne with him eternally, &c. The wicked therefore and reprobates are no members of the Catholike Church, for they ſhall not raigne with Chriſt.

Wee want not here the teſtimonie of our aduerſaries: *Ioannes de Turre cremata lib.4. de Eccleſ. par.2.cap.*20. holdeth, that they which haue no faith nor no inward grace, doe not belong to the Church.

So the Maſter of the Sentences out of S. Auguſtine affirmeth: Illi ad templum dei non pertinent, qui cognoſcentes deum, non ſicut deum glorificant: They belong not to the temple of God, which knowing God, doe not glorifie him as God, lib.1.d.37.e.

Hereunto agree their owne decrees, Decr.p.2.cauſ.24.queſt.3.cap.8. Ad eccleſiam non pertinent illi, qui in eius vnitate corporaliter miſti, per peſſimam vitam ſeparantur: They belong not to the Church of Chriſt, which being corporally mixed in the ſociety thereof, are ſeparated by an euill life. Againe, Cauſ.33.queſt.3.diſt.1.de pœniten.cap.70. Qui peccator eſt, & aliqua ſorde maculatus, de eccleſia Chriſti non poteſt appellari, &c. Hee that is a ſinner, and polluted, cannot bee called of the Church, which is without ſpot, &c.

Laſtly, this doctrine, that the faithfull onely are the true members of the Catholike Church, which is the myſticall bodie of Chriſt, hath the witneſſe and approbation of holy martyrs. This was one of the articles for the which Iohn Hus was condemned in the Councell of Conſtance, for ſaying that the Catholike Church is the vniuerſall companie of the predeſtinate: grounding his opinion vpon that place of S. Paul Epheſ.5. Chriſt ſo loued the Church, that he gaue himſelfe for the ſame: but he gaue himſelfe only for the faithfull, Fox pag.610. artic.8. Luther openly proteſted before the Emperour at Wormes, that he would not conſent to the Councell of Conſtance, becauſe it condemned this article propounded by Iohn Hus, That the Catholike Church is the communion of the predeſtinate, & ſo aboliſheth, ſaith he, this article of our faith; I beleeue the holy Church vniuerſall: and ſaith further, he was readie to ſpend his blood, rather then to reuoke any truth agreeable to Gods word, pag.832. See the confeſſion alſo of Richard Fenrus a French martyr, That the congregation of Chriſt conſiſted in the number of the elect, Fox pag.912. col.1.

This alſo was the faith of the Merindolians, That the catholike Church was the fellowſhip of Gods elect: who for this and other points of their Chriſtian faith, were perſecuted, and their countrie deſtroyed, Fox pag.954. col.1.

Pag.870.col.1.

That the faithfull only are the members of Chriſt: it is affirmed by Doctor Ridley, and Maſter Latimer martyrs, according to the Scripture, If any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his, Rom.8.9. And the Church of Chriſt ſtandeth only of liuing ſtones, that is, true Chriſtians, not only outwardly in name and title, but inwardly in heart and truth, reſponſ. ad articul. Antonij 7.

Rom.8.9.
1.Pet.2.5.
Fox p.1562. col.1.

The blood of theſe holy martyrs doth giue a liuely teſtimonie vnto the truth, and doth notablie confirme vs therein.

Let vs ſee the teſtimonies of other Churches: 1. For the Eaſt Church, Nilus Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica ſaith, Chriſt builded his Church vpon the faith and doctrine of Peter, and vpon thoſe which ſhall bee keepers and obſeruers of ſuch confeſſion: he requireth faith to the conſtitution of the Church and the members thereof. The Ruthomans and Muſcouites doe ſay, that the Pope is an heretike, and doe excommunicate him and his Clergie, at ſuch times as they celebrate the Lords Supper, as Sarranus reporteth, they take it not ſufficient to be a true member of the Church, to be in the viſible ſhew thereof, as the Pope and his Clergie are.

Elucidat. c.2.

2 The ſame is the iudgement of the Chriſtian Ethiopians: the vniuerſall hiſtories of the Indies make mention that the Pope ſent Onicdo a Spaniard, to draw the Abyſſines or Ethiopians to acknowledge the Romane Church; but the Emperour Claudius of Ethiope, then raigning, chaced him away, and Onicdo was compelled to hide himſelfe.

3 The reformed Churches conſent that the faithful are only members of the Church. Heluetia, the latter confeſſion, chap.17. The Church is a companie of the faithfull gathered out of the World, a communion of Saints, &c. Confeſſion of Baſil: We beleeue an holy Chriſtian Church, that is a communion of Saints, a gathering together of the faithfull in ſpirit, &c. Bohemia, chap.8. He that walketh in this life according to theſe commandements, is a true and liuely member of the holy Church, which bringeth foorth the fruit of faith and loue: but he that loſeth the ſpirit of faith and loue, muſt needs be a dead member. French confeſſion, artic.26. We affirme out of the word of God, that the Church is a companie of the faithfull, which agree together in following the Word of God, and embracing true religion. Belgia, artic.28. This holy companie conſiſteth of thoſe that are to be ſaued. Artic.29. Hypocrites together with the good are mingled in the Church, though properly they doe not pertaine to the Church. Confeſſion of Auſpurg: To ſpeake properly, the Church of Chriſt is a congregation of the members of Chriſt, that is of the Saints, which do truly beleeue, and rightly obey Chriſt. Saxonie, artic.11. Out of mankinde the Lord doth gather vnto himſelfe a Church, to which in all eternitie he might communicate his wiſedome, goodneſſe, &c. Sweueland, artic.15. The Church is a fellowſhip and companie of thoſe, which addict themſelues vnto Chriſt, and doe altogether reſt and truſt in his protection.

4 For the Romaniſts and Latine Church, beſide the ſentence of Ioannes de Turre cremata and Gratian in the decrees before alleaged, we ſhall need no other euidence, then of Bellarmine himſelfe; who thus affirmeth, that the Church is a liuing body conſiſting of a ſoule and body, the ſoule is the inward graces of the ſpirit, the body the externall and outward profeſſion: ſome are both of the ſoule and body of the Church, as they which are perfect: ſome of the ſoule, but not the body, as the excommunicate if they haue faith: ſome of the body, and not of the ſoule, as hypocrites, which haue no inward vertue, but to communicate only in the externall profeſſion: and they are as the haires and nailes, and euill humours in the body, Bellarm. lib.3. de Eccleſ. cap. 2. in fine. By his owne confeſſion the wicked cannot bee true members of the Church, as the ill humours are no part of the bodie.

THE SECOND PART OF THE QVESTION, whether the Catholike Church be inuiſible.

The Papiſts.

They doe affirme that the Catholike Church is, and hath been alwaies viſible: not ſo viſible, becauſe it might be ſeene, but that it hath been alwaies actually viſible, and not ſeene only vnto the members of the Church, but notoriouſly knowne to the whole world, Rhemenſ. annot. in Matth. cap.5. ſect.3. Neither doe they meane any particular Church ſo to haue been viſible, but the vniuerſall Catholike tholike Church, which they define to be a viſible congregation of all faithfull men, Caniſius cap. de fide & Symbol. articul. 18. Bellarm. lib. 3. de Eccleſ. cap. 12. ration. 7.

15. Error.

Argum. 1. The foundation of the Church is viſible: therefore the Church is viſible. The propoſition they proue thus: for whether wee affirme Chriſt, or Peter to be the foundation of the Church: both of them are now viſible in him, which is the Vicar of Chriſt, and Peters ſucceſſor.

Epheſ. 2. 20.

We anſwere: Firſt, wee vtterly denie either Peter to be the foundation of the Church, or elſe the Pope to bee his lawfull ſucceſſor: for Peter is no more the foundation of the Church, then all the Prophets and Apoſtles, Epheſ. 2. 20. whoſe doctrine is the foundation, not their perſons. And as for the Pope, wee care not ſo much for outward ſucceſſion in place, which notwithſtanding they cannot proue to haue been perpetuall without interruption, as wee doe require a ſucceſſion of faith and doctrine. Secondly, wee affirme that Chriſt is the foundation, but not the viſible beholding of Chriſt with the carnall eyes, but beleeuing in his name: for when Peter had vttered that notable confeſſion of Chriſt, he ſaid that fleſh and blood had not reuealed it, but his father in heauen: but if the beholding of Chriſt had giuen Peter a ſight of the foundation, then fleſh had reuealed it vnto him, his carnall eyes had brought him to Chriſt. Thirdly, wee may much better returne this argument vpon themſelues: that becauſe the foundation of the Church, which is faith in Chriſt, is inuiſible, therefore the Church is inuiſible.

Matth. 18. 17.
Philip. 3. 6.

Argum. 2. They heape vp many places of Scriptures, but to ſmall purpoſe, as Matth. 18. Tell the Church. Acts 15. When they came to Ieruſalem, they were receiued of the Church. Philip. 3. 6. Paul perſecuted the Church. How could the Church be perſecuted? how could it receiue the Apoſtles, if it were not viſible? Bellar. cap. 12.

We anſwere: what goodly reaſons here be? a particular Church, ſuch as was at Ieruſalem may bee ſeene: Ergo, the catholike and vniuerſall. Secondly, a particular Church may bee ſometime viſible: Ergo, alwaies. Thirdly, the Church is viſible vnto the faithfull, as in time of perſecution, for to Paul it was not knowne, when he perſecuted it, but only to the brethren: Ergo, it is viſible to the world. For theſe three points they muſt prooue, that the Catholike Church not a particular is viſible, that the Church is not ſometime but alway viſible, yea and to the world, or elſe they ſay nothing. For ſhame maſters make better arguments.

Matth. 5. 14.

Argum. 3. He hath ſet his tabernacle in the Sunne, Pſal. 19. The Church is as a citie vpon an hill, Matth. 5. Ergo, it is alwaies viſible, Bellarm. ibid, Rhemiſt. Mat. 5. ſect. 3.

We anſwere, to let it paſſe, that the text is not well alleaged out of the 19. Pſalme, the words are according to the originall, he hath ſet in them, that is in the heauens, a tabernacle for the Sunne, not as hee readeth according to the vulgar Latine. Firſt, the Apoſtles themſelues, euen at this time, when Chriſt ſpake theſe words vnto them, were not ſo in ſole, or in monte, in the Sun, or vpon the hill, that they were ſeene of the world, nay they were not ſeene nor acknowledged of the Scribes and Phariſies in Iewrie: the Church is ſeene of the faithfull, it is viſible to them that ſearch for her out of the Scriptures: they that can ſee the mountaine, ſhall ſee the citie, the mountaine is Chriſt, the citie is the Church. No marueile if the Church be not alwaies viſible to the world, for they ſee not, neither doe they know Chriſt. Secondly, the Church is ſaid to be on a hill: becauſe the truth ſeeketh no corners, heretikes and falſe teachers flie into the deſert and into ſecret places, Matth. 24. verſ. 26. but the truth is not aſhamed: the Apoſtles confeſſed Chriſt, euen before Kings and Princes, Mark. 13. 19. So Auguſtine expoundeth it, Cont. Fauſtum, lib. 13. cap. 13.

Mark. 13. 19.

Argum. 4. Chriſts Church is alway viſible. Dic eccleſiæ, ſaith he, Tell it to the Church. But how can a man goe vnto that Church, which he knoweth not? argum. Boner. pag. 1691. Marci Antonij obiect. 6.

Anſw. 1. In the times of the Apoſtles, when the Church was perſecuted, they were faine to congregate themſelues in houſes and priuie places: who though they were not knowne by any externall pompe, yet were they knowne among themſelues, and redreſſed things that were amiſſe, euen in their ſecret aſſemblies. Neither were they altogether vnknowne of the world: for how could they then haue perſecuted them, though they were not regarded? reſponſ. Rob. Smithi. Martyr.

2 The fault why the Church is not ſeene, is not becauſe it is not viſible, but becauſe mens eyes are dazeled, and cannot ſee, vnleſſe they looke for it, by the light of Gods word, reſponſ. Brad. pag. 1616. col. 1. D. Ridley ad 6. obiect. Marc. Antony, p. 1719.

Further for the viſibility of the Church, the Doway Diuines doe thus reaſon.

1 The Church had a continuall ſucceſſion of rulers, as well ſpirituall as temporall: therefore alwaies viſible. Doway bibl. p. 35.

2 Theſe points of doctrine (as of one God, of the reſurrection, finall iudgement, eternall ioy, and the reſt) taught no doubt by Noe and his ſonnes, ſhew cleercly a viſible Church, conſiſting of good and bad, p. 48.

3 Multitude of progenie promiſed to Abraham, pertaineth to the Church of Chriſt, p. 205. in the margin: to ſay therefore that the Church of Chriſt ſometime conſiſteth of few or inuiſible perſons, were to ſay, that God kept not promiſe with Abraham, and to make the body and thing figured more obſcure, then the ſhadow and figure, p. 206.

4 Yea, in the fifth age of the world, which was from the foundation of the temple, to the captiui-

in Babylon, the Church and religion continued ſtill, and was no leſſe conſpicuous then before: which they would proue by diuers principall articles of religion, as among the reſt, the Lenten faſt, reliques, adoration of images, merit of good works, p.914.935.936. in the margin.

*Contra.*1. They ſpeake of the ſtate of the Church vntill the flood: which if it ſhould at that time be granted to be viſible, it followeth not that alwaies it was ſo. 2. Neither was the Church then viſible and notoriouſly knowne in the world, ſeeing that it was brought to ſuch a paucitie and ſmall number, as that it conſiſted only of eight perſons in Noahs family, and thoſe not all true and faithfull members of the Church: this argument maketh rather againſt their viſibility of the Church. 3. There was a ſucceſſion of the Fathers in the Church, to preſerue Chriſts line, but that continued ſtill in one family, and what is that, to make Not the Church viſible and notorious to all the world? Theſe few faithfull men were knowne to themſelues, and ſo to them the Church was viſible, but not to the world.

2 The ſucceſſion and preſeruation of true religion, proueth a continuance of the Church, and a diſcerning thereof to the true members, but not an outward viſibilitie to the world.

3 Abrahams ſpirituall ſeede, that is, a number of faithfull people hath beene alwaies in the world, but not alwaies viſible to the world: the promiſe is fulfilled, and the inuiſible Church ouer the world diſperſed, that the Lord promiſed to Abraham, but not a glorious viſible Church alwaies to continue.

4 It is a great vntruth, to ſay, that the Church in that age was no leſſe conſpicuous then before: where was the conſpicuouſneſſe of it, when in the dayes of Ahaz and Manaſſes, both Iſrael and Iudah fell to idolatrie? Againe, ſuch articles of religion, as adoration of images, and of reliques, merits and ſuch like, are notes of a falſe and declining Church, not of a true Church: and though vnder the law one particular Church, as of the Iſraelites had beene viſible: yet from the viſibilitie of a particular nationall Church, to the vniuerſall Catholike Church, diſperſed ouer the world: the argument followeth not.

The Proteſtants.

Concerning the Catholike Church, wee hold, that becauſe it is an article of our faith, it is alwaies vnto the world inuiſible, and not to be eſpied but by the eyes of faith: Fulk Matth.5.ſect.5.

Concerning particular Churches, if by viſible, they vnderſtand that which may bee ſeene, ſo wee grant they are alwaies viſible, Fulk Act.11.verſ.24. If for that which is actually viſible: wee ſay it is not ſo alwaies viſible to the world, nay it may ſometimes be ſo hid and ſecret, that the members know not one another, Fulk in Matth.5.ſect.3.

*Argum.*1. To the Hebrewes it is thus written, chap.12.verſ.18, 23, 24. You are not come to the mountaine, which might be touched, but to the citie of the liuing God, the celeſtiall Ieruſalem, &c. Ergo, the Church is inuiſible, and here oppoſed to the viſible hill of Sinay. Heb.12.23.24.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this is vnderſtood of the triumphant Church in heauen, not of the militant vpon earth, chap.15.

To this we make anſwere, the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth the whole vniuerſall Church in heauen and earth, which both make but one family, Epheſ.3.15. for here hee nameth not onely the ſpirits of iuſt men which are in heauen, but the faithfull vpon earth, whoſe names are written in heauen; the congregation (ſaith he) of the firſt borne: the words are πανηγύρει and ἐκκλησίᾳ, a gathering together, collection or congregation, which muſt needes be vnderſtood of men vpon earth. Againe (ſaith hee) ye are come, not ye ſhall come: they had now left the ſmoking mountaine Sinay, and were come to Sion, the Church vnder the Goſpell. Wherefore this is a moſt firme and inuincible argument: the Catholike Church is the vniuerſall number of Gods choſen in heauen and in earth: Ergo, inuiſible.

*Argum.*2. We will giue an inſtance: In the dayes of Elias the Church was not viſible, for hee complaineth and ſaith that hee was onely left alone, 1.King 19.10. Ergo, the Church is not alway viſible. 1.King.19.10.

The Rhemiſts anſwere: Firſt, at that time the Church was viſible in Iudea, the ſouldiours were numbred aboue ten hundred thouſand, 2.Chro.17. We anſwere. Firſt, belike they haue taken a more exact account of them then the Lord himſelfe: for he (ſaith he) had reſerued 7000. 1.King.19.18. that had not bowed their knees to Baal: they ſay there were ten hundred thouſand. Againe, Elias, if hee had knowne ſuch a number, could not haue beene left ſo comfortleſſe, as in griefe of heart to deſire to die. But be it granted that the Church was viſible in Iudea at this time, though it were not ſo to Elias: yet where was that viſible Church in the dayes of Achaz and Manaſſeh, when Iudea fell alſo to idolatrie. Annot. in Rom.11.ver.4. 1.King.19.18.

Bellarmine alſo anſwereth, as the Rhemiſts doe, that in Elias time the Church was viſible in Iudea, and therefore God ſaith directly, that he had left 7000. in Iſrael: whereby thoſe tribes are vnderſtood which were vnder the King of Samaria, *cap.10. reſp. ad argum.*3.

Anſw. Firſt, they cannot ſhew vs of any Prophet notwithſtanding at this inſtant in Iudea. Secondly, I will aske the Ieſuite, theſe 7000. in Iſrael were they not of the Church? it cannot be denied: Ergo, the Church is not alwayes, and in all places viſible, as they would beare vs in hand: for they were not knowne to Elias, who complaineth that he was left alone. Thirdly, S.Paul vrgeth this example, to ſhew, that there is a remnant ſaued through the election of grace vnknowne to the world, they may as well ſay, that this place is impertinently alleaged by the Apoſtle. And further, ſeeing Iſrael belonged to the couenant alſo, and yet was fallen away from the viſible profeſſion of the true worſhip. The like alſo might happen to Iudah, as it did in the raigne of Achaz and Manaſſeh.

Some other doe anſwere thus: They grant that the Church before Chriſt might be inuiſible; but not the Church ſince Chriſt: for hee ſaith, ædificabo eccleſiam, I will build my Church; not that I doe build, or haue built it: ſic Hetbut epiſcop. Eboracenſ.

Bellarmine alſo ſaith, that the Church of the Iewes was but one particular Church, and though it had failed altogether, yet the vniuerſall Church through the world had not failed; for out of the Church of the Iewes, there were found many faithfull, as Melchiſedech, Iob, and afterward Cornelius, Bellar. c. 16. reſp. ad argum. 3. The Rhemiſts alſo ſay, That there is great difference betweene the Church of the Chriſtians, and of the Iewes: ours reſting vpon better promiſes then theirs. Annot. in Rom. 11. verſ. 4.

Anſw. By ſtanding thus ſtrictly vpon the future tenſe, you may as well proue that Chriſts Church was not at all before his comming, as that it was not viſible before. But Chriſts meaning is this rather, that there is no building in the Church but by Chriſt onely: for Paul and Apollos be but waterers, ſic Bradford Martyr. Fox pag. 1616. col. 1.

Further, to Bellarmine we anſwere, that the viſible Church was tied then to the nation of the Iewes, as it is now onely among the Gentiles: and if it failed in that nation, it could not haue elſe where been found. True it is, ſome faithfull men were then found among the Gentiles, but there was no viſible Church then among them, as they count, a viſible; that is, flouriſhing, famous and knowne in the world: yet Melchiſedech was one of the ſame Church, being held to be Sem, Cornelius alſo was in thoſe times, when the Iewes being reiected, the viſible Church began to bee among the Gentiles. To the Rhemiſts alſo we ſay, that the Church of the Iewes had as ample promiſes for their continuance, vntill the firſt comming of Chriſt, as the Chriſtians haue for their Church to his ſecond comming: neither hath the Church of God ſince Chriſt, any ſuch promiſe, for their viſible flouriſhing and glorious ſtate in the world: but the contrarie rather, as it is propheſied, Apocal. 12. that the woman, which ſignified the Church, ſhall flie into the wilderneſſe.

Argum. 3. To beleeue that there is an holy Catholike Church is an article of our faith: Ergo, it is inuiſible. Bellarmine anſwereth, Firſt, the holineſſe of the Church is inuiſible. Wee reply, ſo the Church is partly viſible, partly inuiſible by his confeſſion. Firſt, why then doe ye define the Catholike Church to be a viſible congregation, if it be not wholly and altogether viſible? they know that definitio muſt conuenire definito, the definition muſt agree wholly to that which is defined: but now it is not: for they ſay, the catholike holy Church is partly viſible as it is a Church, partly inuiſible as it is holy. Secondly, doe we not ſay in the Creede, Credo Catholicam, as well as Credo ſanctam, I beleeue a Catholike Church, as well as I beleeue the holy Church? then it is alſo inuiſible, as it is catholike, becauſe this alſo is part of the article. See I pray you what ſhifting is here.

Secondly, he anſwereth, that ſome thing is ſeene in the Church, ſome thing beleeued: for wee ſee that viſible company of men, which make the Church; but whether that company be the true Church, we doe not ſee it, but beleeue it.

We reply againe: firſt, the Ieſuite hath not yet proued that ſome thing is ſeene in the Church, ſome thing beleeued: but one thing is ſeene, namely the congregation as they are men, another thing is beleeued, that they are the Church: the ſight and beliefe now by his owne confeſſion are not both in the Church. Secondly, we denie that the vniuerſall companie of the Catholike Church, which is the number of the predeſtinate, can be ſeene; therefore all is beleeued, and nothing ſeene. Thirdly, hee ſaith, that by faith we know which is the true Church: Ergo, by faith wee know which are the members of the Church: Ergo, by faith the members doe know themſelues to be of the Church; therefore faith is requiſite in the true members of the Church: then vnfaithfull men cannot be true members of the Church: which point the Ieſuite ſtrongly before maintained againſt vs. Mendacem oportet eſſe memorem, a lier had neede haue a good memorie, leaſt he tell contrarie tales, and ſo hath the Ieſuite here: for before he denied that faith was requiſite to make a true member of the Church; here he ſaith, that without faith a member cannot be knowne, much leſſe therefore made.

Lib. 3. de Eccleſ. cap. 15. reſp. ad arg. 6. cap. 10. lib. 3. de Eccleſ.

Argum. 4. The Rhemiſts confeſſe in theſe very words, that in the raigne of (their imagined and ſuppoſed) Antichriſt the externall ſtate of the Romane Church, and publike entercourſe of the faithfull with the ſame ſhall ceaſe, and that there ſhall be onely a communion in heart with it, and practiſe in ſecret. Annot. in 2. Theſſ. 2. ſect. 10. Where then (I pray you) ſhall be your tabernaculum in ſole, ciuitas in monte, candela ſplendens in domo: your tabernacle in the Sunne, your citie in a mountaine, your candle ſhining in the houſe, that is (ſay you) in the world? Matth. 5. ſect. 3. Ergo out of their owne words we conclude, that the Church ſhall not alwaies be viſible, and [illegible]ouſly knowne in the world.

We muſt not here ouerpaſſe the ſentence and iudgement of the holy Martyrs, whoſe witneſſe is in ſtead of many arguments.

Maſter Bradford reaſoneth thus: As Eue was of the ſame ſubſtance that Adam was of; ſo is the Church of the ſame ſubſtance that Chriſt was of, fleſh of his fleſh, bone of his bones, Epheſ. 5.30. Looke therefore how Chriſt was knowne when he was vpon earth, ſo is his Church: but Chriſt was not knowne by any externall pompe in the world, but being conſidered according to the word of God: Ergo, ſo is his Church, Fox pag. 1613. col. 2.

Epheſ. 5.30.

This was one of the articles for the which Bishop Farrar was condemned, for denying that the Church was alwaies visible vpon earth, Fox, pag. 1554. col. 2. articl. 6.

M. Robert Glouer Martyr giueth an instance of Elias times, when the Church lay hid and was not apparant, no not to the Prophet. It was answered him that Elias complained onely of the ten tribes that fell from Dauids house. He replyeth, that they were not able to shew any Prophets that the other two tribes had at the same time, Fox, pag. 1712. col. 1. Pag.1411. 2.15.

M. Philpot confesseth the Church to be visible, and inuisible, the vniuersall Catholike Church is inuisible, consisting of the elect of God only; the visible consisteth of good and bad, and is knowne by the word of God and Sacraments, pag. 1824. col. 2. Pag.1554. 2.67.

Lastly, we will conclude with Augustine, Aliquando in sola domo Noah Ecclesia erat: in solo Abraham Ecclesia erat: in solo Loth & domo eius Ecclesia erat: in solo Henoch Ecclesia erat: Sometime the Church was onely in Henochs house, sometime onely in Noah, sometime in Abraham alone, in Lot and his house, &c. How then hath the Church been alwaies so visible and notoriously knowne to the world, when it hath lien hidden sometime in one house, yea in one man? Pag.1656. 1.70. Enarrat. in Psal. 128.

Interrelig. Caesarea. cap. 9. Ecclesia, quatenus constat membris talibus quae secundum charitatem viuunt, sanctorum est tantum, & eatenus spiritualis & inuisibilis: The Church as it consisteth of such members, which liue after the rule of charitie, is onely of the Saints and so spirituall onely, and inuisible, &c. Behold here wee haue the testimonie of our aduersaries themselues, sitting in Councell for the inuisibility of the Catholike Church. To this their owne decrees also doe giue consent: Decret. 3. dist. 2. cap. 63. Societas corporis & membrorum Christi Ecclesia in praedestinatis: The society of the body and members of Christ is the Church consisting of the Predestinate, &c. If the Church consist of the elect onely, then is it not visible to men, but onely to God; for hee onely knoweth who are his, 2. Tim. 2. 19.

Our forraine testimonies are these. 1. That the Church which is most flourishing and visible is not the true Church; the East Churches are of opinion with vs: The Patriarke of Ierusalem, as I haue seene, saith Theuet, did excommunicate out of the body of their Church, as well the Pope of Rome, as also all Christian Princes, (to wit those of the Romane Church.) Villamont. The Syrians doe boast themselues to be the first Christians of the world, because that S. Peter had his seate seuen yeeres in Antioch: yet both Ierusalem and Antioch are vnder the tyrannicall gouernment of the Turke, hauing no free exercise of religion: this notwithstanding, they hold themselues rather to bee the Church then the glorious visible Church of Rome. So likewise Ieremie stileth himselfe Oecumenicall Patriarke; and the Diuines of Tubing in their letters doe call the Patriarke of Constantinople Oecumenike, yet is the state of that Church in great miserie, and continually in persecution. Cosmog. lib. 9.

For the South and Ethiopike Church, Aluares reporteth, that in his conference with Prester Iohn, he preferred the Church of Constantinople and Alexandria before the Romane Church: and the Abyssines do hold of the Church of Alexandria, and in their Leiturgie next after their Prince, they pray for the Patriarke of Alexandria; and yet this city with all the Christians there, haue small liberty of their profession. Resp. ad Protestant. Germ. in conclus. artic. Theolog. Descript. Aethiop. cap. 29. Leitur. Ethiop.

3 Let vs see the iudgement of the reformed Churches: Heluetia, latter confession, Of those (that is the faithfull and Saints) which make the Church, is the article of the Creed wholly to be vnderstood, I beleeue the Catholike Church: the Church then is a matter of faith to be beleeued, not of the eye to be seene. Saxonie, artic. 11. In the time of Mary these were the Church, Zacharie, Simeon, Ioseph, Marie, Anna, &c. and did not heare the Sadduces and Pharisies, &c. The Church then was obscure, and not knowne vnto the world. Harm. sect. 10. pag. 306. Harm. sect. 10. pag. 316.

4 For the Romanists: we haue heard the opinion of the Rhemists before: the same is the sentence of Suarez the Iesuite, that in the time of Antichrist, omnem cultum diuinum cessaturum, all diuine worship shall cease. Another principall Iesuite, subscribeth vnto that sentence of Hierome, that in the time of the Arrians, Ecclesiae nauem pene fuisse obrutam: The ship of the Church was almost sunke. And of Hilarie, that the Church was not at that time to be sought: in tectis & exteriori pompa: In the house tops, and in outward pompe: sed potius in carcerib. & speluncis: but in the prisons, and dens: what was become then of the visible conspicuousnesse of the Church? Tom. 2. qu. 59. artic. 6. sect. 6. Gregor. Valent. Analys. lib. 3. cap. 4. §. 4.

THE SECOND QVESTION: WHETHER the Church may erre.

This question is diuided into two parts. First, whether the Catholike Church may erre at all, or not? Secondly, whether the visible Church vpon earth may fall away from God into Idolatrie and Apostasie. 16. Error.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE CATHOlike Church may erre in doctrine.

The Papists.

They doe teach that the Catholike Church cannot possibly erre, not onely in matters absolutely necessarie to saluation, but not in any thing, which it imposeth and commandeth, whether it bee contained in the word of God or not: yea that it cannot erre in thoſe things, which beſide the word of God in the holy Scriptures, are commanded. And by the Church here they doe meane not onely the Paſtors and Biſhops, but the whole company of the faithfull; ſo that neither that which all the Paſtors of the Church doe teach, can be erroneous, nor what is receiued generally of the whole Church, Bellarmin.de Eccleſ.lib.3.cap.14.Rhemiſt.annot.in Iohan.14.verſ.16.

Bellarm.lib.3.cap.14.
Epheſ.5.27.

*Argum.*1. The Church (ſay they) is the pillar of truth, 1.Tim.3. Ergo, it cannot erre. We anſwere: firſt, it is no otherwiſe the pillar of truth, then a Virgin without ſpot and wrinckle, Epheſ.5.27. As that place doth not priuiledge the Church from all ſinne and imperfection of life; ſo neither doth this place exempt her from all error in doctrine. Secondly, ſhe is called the pillar of truth in reſpect of vs, becauſe the truth is preſerued in the true Church, and is not elſe where to be found: not becauſe the truth dependeth vpon the Church: for S. Paul ſendeth not Timothie in this place to learne of the Church, as though it could not poſſibly be deceiued; but (ſaith hee) theſe things haue I written, that thou maieſt know how to behaue thy ſelfe in the houſe of God, verſe. 14.15. Ergo, the word of God is the rule of truth, and the Church hath no warrant to be kept from error, but as ſhe is led and gouerned by the word of God. Thirdly, the argument followeth not, for Peter was a pillar and yet erred, Gal.2.9.11.

Galat.2.9.

Matth.16.18.
Epheſ.4.12.
Ioh.17.17.

*Argum.*2. They heape many arguments together. The Church hath the ſpirit of God, to leade it into all truth, the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it, Matth.16. God hath giuen it Apoſtles, teachers, Euangeliſts, to keepe it in the truth, Epheſ.4. Chriſt hath prayed for the Church that it may be ſanctified in the veritie, Iohn 17. Chriſt prayed that Peters faith ſhould not faile; Ergo, the Church cannot erre, Rhemenſ.annot.1.Tim.3.15.

Ioh.17.20.

We anſwere; euery one of the elect hath the ſpirit of God, neither ſhall the gates of hell preuaile againſt the faith of any one of the elect to ouerthrow it: Chriſt prayeth for euery one, that ſhould beleeue in him, that they may be ſanctified in the truth, Iohn 17.20. Wherefore it followeth as well by theſe arguments, that no one faithfull man can fall into errour. The Paſtors and teachers ſo long as they follow the Apoſtles doctrine, may keepe the Church from errour: but it is not gathered out of that place, Epheſ.4. that the paſtors, if they ſwarue from Gods word, cannot erre: But rather the contrarie; and therefore the Apoſtle addeth farther, verſ.14. that we ſhould not bee carried about with euery wind of doctrine, but follow the truth in loue, verſ.15. The Church then, ſo long as it followeth the truth, and is not carried with wind of doctrine, cannot erre.

Epheſ.4.14.15.

Concerning Peter, Chriſt prayed for him that his faith ſhould not faile in that grieuous tentation, which he fell into. Secondly, he prayed not for him as gouernour of the Church, but as he prayeth for euery faithfull man, Ioh.17.23. Thirdly, for all this prayer Peter erred, Gal.2.

Pag.617.2.60.

*Argum.*3. This argument was vſed in the Councell of Baſil: the Church is without ſpot and wrinckle, Epheſ.5.27. Ergo, without error, Fox pag.672.col.1.ex Aenea Siluio.

Reuel.7.14

We anſwere: firſt, S. Paul ſpeaketh there of a glorious Church, ſuch as ſhall be in the kingdome of heauen, not of the Church, as it is vpon earth: ſo Reuel.7.14. The elders which ſate round about the throne, which are the Saints in heauen, were ſeene in long white robes, which they had waſhed white in the blood of the Lambe.

2 It followeth out of this place, that the Church is as well without ſinne, as free from error: which the diuines in the Councell did alſo grant. But ſeeing by their owne confeſſion euery member of the Church, being clothed in this mortall fleſh ſinneth, how can the Church bee without ſinne? If the Church conſiſt of men, and all men are ſinners, how is the Church free? If all the parts and members bee ſinfull, how is not the whole alſo polluted with ſinne? If all the parts of the bodie bee ſicke and diſeaſed, how can the whole be ſound? The Church alſo is not aſhamed to confeſſe her ſelfe to be blacke, Cant.1.5. ſhe ſhall bee made beautifull and glorious without all ſpot and blemiſh in the kingdome of God: and euen now alſo is made righteous and iuſt before God through Chriſt, not becauſe ſhe hath no ſinne, but becauſe it is remitted: and although ſome errours and imperfections remaine, yet ſhall they be no hinderance to her ſaluation.

Cant.1.5.

The Proteſtants.

THis queſtion, whether the Church may erre, muſt be vnderſtood with a double exception: firſt, that the vniuerſall Catholike Church of Chriſt erreth not, *Caluin.inſtitut.lib.4.cap.8.ſect.*11.12. But there is no viſible Church in the earth, which may not erre, as well in faith as in manners: this poſition was maintained by M. Bucer, in open diſputation at Cambridge, Fox, pag.1388. Secondly, the true Church of God may erre in ſome points not neceſſarie to ſaluation, but cannot fall cleane away from God into any damnable errour, Calu. ibid. Fulk. annot in Epheſ.5.verſ.29. And in this ſenſe is the Church called, Religionis & fidei perpetua mater: A perpetuall mother and preſeruer of faith and religion, Cod.lib.1.tit.5.l.14.Leo & Anthem. That the Church may erre as we ſay, we doe ſhew it thus: and by the Church, we vnderſtand the whole company and congregation, the paſtors with the people.

1 When our Sauiour Chriſt ſuffered, the Church erred in faith: Ergo, it may erre: the propoſition is thus proued. The Church was either in the Scribes and Phariſies, or elſe in the Apoſtles: but both of them erred: they in putting Chriſt to death, the other in their incredulitie, not beleeuing rightly in the reſurrection of Chriſt. Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the Phariſies were priuiledged not to erre, only till the comming of Chriſt. We replie againe: firſt, after Chriſt was come they ſate in Moſes chaire, and Chriſt biddeth they ſhould bee heard, Math. 23. 2. If they erred not afore, neither could they now; for they were not diſplaced out of Moſes chaire: but the truth is, they neuer had any ſuch priuiledge not to erre. Secondly, the Maſter of Sentences ſeemeth herein to bee of another opinion, who thus ſaith, anſwering to a certaine obiection, whether circumciſion ceaſed to be in force ſtraight after the inſtitution of Baptiſme: In Chriſti morte terminata eſſe legalia omnia: That all the legall rites were determined in Chriſts death, and from that time Circumciſion ceaſed, lib. 3. diſt. 3. K. If that al the Legall were in force till Chriſts death, then the Prieſthood alſo: wherefore what priuiledge they had before, they held it till then. Thirdly, if the Phariſies were now prone to error, then by our aduerſaries owne confeſſion, they ceaſed to be the Church: Ergo, the Church was not now viſible, for in them it was not: and the Apoſtles fled from Chriſt, and ſhifted for themſelues: how could then the Church be viſible to the world?

Lib. 3. de eccleſ. cap. 17.

Secondly, the Ieſuite anſwereth concerning the Apoſtles. Firſt, the Apoſtles were not yet entred into their office and Biſhopricke, but only appointed to it, and therefore they might erre. Wee replie againe: firſt, they were not only appointed Apoſtles, but partly already they had exerciſed their Apoſtleſhip: for they were ſent forth to preach the Goſpell, and had power and commiſſion to worke miracles, and heale diſeaſes, Math. 10. How then is not the Ieſuite aſhamed to ſay, that they were not yet Paſtors nor Apoſtles? Secondly, if the Phariſies erred, and the Apoſtles erred, then all the world was in error: Ergo, by their ſaying at this inſtant there was no Church vpon the earth, which is a great abſurditie, for the Church erreth not, they ſay.

Thirdly, (ſaith the Ieſuite) the Apoſtles erred not in faith: they were reproued for not beleeuing the reſurrection: which beliefe becauſe they had not yet receiued, they could not loſe it. We replie. Firſt, though they had not erred in any materiall point, yet if there were any error at all in them, it is ſufficient for our purpoſe: that they erred it is manifeſt, for they fled away from Chriſt. Secondly, he excuſeth them for their infidelitie concerning the reſurrection, becauſe this faith they had not yet receiued. But had not Chriſt (I pray you) often inſtructed them of this matter? and if this were no ſuch error in them, then Chriſt was too ſharpe in reprouing them for their infidelitie. Thirdly, it appeareth, that they wholly were deceiued concerning the Meſsiah, Luk. 24. 21. the two Diſciples ſay, they truſted that it had been he that ſhould haue deliuered Iſrael: ſee then what weake anſweres theſe are: did theſe fellowes thinke that their gloſes ſhould not be examined? or that their dreames ſhould be taken for oracles?

Fourthly, ſome of the Papiſts affirme, that the true faith in the paſsion of Chriſt onely remained in the virgin Maries breaſt: Alexand. Halenſ. Iohan. de turre cremat. If this be true, then is Bellarmines opinion falſe, that the Apoſtles at that time kept the faith. But it is moſt like that they are all deceiued, and that both Mary and the Apoſtles at that time were in great feare and doubt, and their faith ſhaken. That the Apoſtles wauered, we haue alreadie ſhewed: and yet there was greater cauſe, that they ſhould be ſtable in faith, who were alſo to be preachers of faith, then Mary who was a beleeuer only, not an Apoſtle or preacher of the Goſpell.

Turrecrem. lib 1. de eccleſ. cap. 30.

Argum. 2. The Church of the Iewes erred before our Sauiour Chriſts comming: Ergo, the true Church may erre.

The propoſition is proued: In the time of the raigne of good Kings, they did offer ſacrifice vpon hill altars, but onely to the Lord, which was an error, 2. King. 12. 3. 14. 4. The feaſt of the Paſſeouer was not kept ſo preciſely according to Gods word at any time before, no not in the raigne of the beſt Kings, as it was in the eighteenth yeere of Ioſias raigne, 2. King. 23. 22. The feaſt of Tabernacles had not been ſo ſolemnely and truly kept from the daies of Ioſua, as it was in Nehemiahs time, Nehem. 8. 18. Ergo, all this while the Church of the Iewes erred ſomewhat in the externall worſhip of God: Fulk Epheſ. cap. 5. ſect. 10.

Argum. 3. We reade of famous Churches that erred both in faith and manners after our Sauiour Chriſts comming in the fleſh, euen in the Apoſtles time: Ergo, the true Church may erre. The firſt part is thus prooued: the Church of the Corinthians erred in manners: they went to law among heathen Iudges, chap. 6. which was a generall fault among them: Is it ſo, that there is not a wiſe man among you? verſ. 5. They erred alſo in iudgement. It will be anſwered, that the error, or hereſie rather, concerning the reſurrection was not generall: for the Apoſtle ſaith, How ſay ſome among you that there is no reſurrection of the dead? chap. 15. verſ. 13. But that error and abuſe in the receiuing of the Lords Supper ſeemeth to haue been more vniuerſally ſpred: Euery man (ſaith the Apoſtle) when they ſhould eate, taketh his owne ſupper afore, and one is hungry, another is drunken, chap. 11. 21. Euery man, ſaith he, that is, very many, yea and the moſt among them. The Church alſo of the Galathians was (in no ſmall part thereof) infected with this error, that the ceremonies of the Law ought neceſſarilie to be kept together with the Goſpell: and therefore S. Paul vpbraideth in a manner the whole Church: O ye fooliſh Galathians, who hath bewitched you? &c. chap. 3. 1. Ergo, theſe Churches, being notwithſtanding the Churches of Chriſt, erred.

1. Cor. 15. 13.
1. Cor. 11. 21.
Galath. 3. 1.

Bellarmine anſwereth, confeſſing that theſe Churches had their errors (yea hee is more liberall in granting this, then we would haue him) for hee ſlandereth the whole Church of Corinth, as though they denied generally the reſurrection of the dead, which they did not: S. Paul only chargeth ſome of them, that is, the falſe brethren, with this error, as it may appeare 1. Cor. chap. 15. verſ. 12.

Bellarmines laſt refuge therefore is this, that error may be in a particular Church, but not in the vniuerſall Catholike Church: de eccleſ. lib. 4. cap. 2. obſeru. 3.

Anſwere: Firſt, thus Bellarmine himſelfe is conſtrained to vſe Caluines diſtinction which he miſliked before: who confeſſeth that a particular Church may fall into dangerous error, but not the vniuerſall, de eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. 14. princip. cap. Secondly, the Ieſuite hath granted, as much as we would deſire: for if euery particular Church bee ſubiect to error, then the viſible Church is, for the viſible Churches muſt needs be particular: for vniuerſall things are not ſubiect to the ſenſe, but to the vnderſtanding: this then hee hath granted, that a particular Church may erre; but the Italian, Spaniſh, French, and ſo of the reſt, are but particular Churches: Ergo, they may erre. Thus we haue the Ieſuites owne confeſſion, that particular viſible Churches may erre.

Contr. 2. Epiſt. Pelag. lib. 4. cap. 7.

Auguſtine ſaith, Quomodo erit eccleſia in iſto tempore, perfecta ſine macula & ruga, cuius membra non mendaciter confitentur ſe habere peccata? How can the Church be perfect in this life, without ſpot or wrinckle, whoſe members doe truly confeſſe, that they are not without ſinne? Ergo, the Church ſinneth and is imperfect, and why not ſubiect to error? But in the Councell of Baſil it was denied, as yee haue heard, that the Church could ſinne.

We haue their owne teſtimonies againſt them: as before for particular men, of their ſide, wee haue heard the opinion of Alexander. Alenſ. 3. par. quæſ. vltim. artic. 2. and of Iohannes de Turrecremata, lib. 1. de eccleſ. c. 30. That at the paſſion of Chriſt the true faith only remained with Mary: Hereupon it will follow, that the Church that then was, erred and failed in faith; vnleſſe they will ſay, that Mary only was the Church.

But let vs heare the iudgement of their owne Church againſt them: Decretal. Gregor. lib. 5. tit. 39. c. 28. Innocent. 3. Iudicium Dei veritati quæ non fallit, nec fallitur, ſemper innititur; iudicium autem eccleſia nonnunquam opinionem ſequitur, quam & fallere ſæpe contingit, & falli, propter quod contingit interdum vt qui ligatus eſt apud Deum, ſit apud eccleſiam ſolutus, &c. The iudgement of God is grounded vpon the truth, which neither deceiueth, nor is deceiued; but the iudgement of the Church is many times ruled by opinion, which both may deceiue, and be deceiued: whereupon it ſometimes falleth out, that he, which is bound before God, is looſed with the Church; and he that is free before God, is bound by the Church, &c. Behold then a teſtimonie of one of your moſt learned Popes, that the Church may erre in iudgement. But it will be here anſwered, that he ſpeaketh of the diſcipline of the Church, not of doctrine. Anſw. But Bellarmine, to proue that the Church erreth not, obiecteth that place, Matth. 18. dic eccleſie, tell it to the Church: and he that heareth not the Church, let him be as an heathen and Publicane. But this were an hard matter, ſaith he, to binde men to heare the Church if it might erre: Bellarm. c. 14. Now this place is vnderſtood altogether of diſcipline: wherefore his meaning is, that the Church cannot erre in the keyes: and indeed, ſo long as it followeth Gods word, it cannot, as our Sauiour ſaith, What ſoeuer you binde in earth ſhall be bound in heauen: but otherwiſe it may erre in the keyes; ſo that ſometime, that which the Church bindeth in earth, may bee looſed in heauen: as Innocentius in this Canon confeſſeth.

Shall we now in the laſt place to this doctrine put to the ſeale of the holy witneſſes of Gods truth: Maſter Bilney being demanded, what he thought of the Church, whether it might erre or not: anſwered, that the Catholike Church can by no meanes erre in faith; for it is the whole congregation of the elect; otherwiſe he granted not, Fox pag. 1000. artic. 4. The like confeſſion made Iames Bainham martyr, pag. 1028. But concerning the viſible paſtors and teachers of the Church, we haue the ancient confeſſion of Walter Brute, who liued about two hundred yeeres agoe, that they may all erre, and haue erred: yea Peter erred (ſaith he) Gal. 2. and was therefore reproued of S. Paul, only the Scriptures are priuiledged from erring, Fox pag. 477. col. 2.

Pag. 912. 1. 40.
Pag. 937. 2. 20.
Pag. 440. 1. 50.

That the viſible Church with the prelates and paſtors may erre: firſt, it is the opinion of the Eaſt Churches: The Patriarke of Ieruſalem (as we ſaw before) excommunicateth the Pope. The Ruthemans and Muſcouites doe ſay, that the Pope is an heretike, and doe excommunicate him and his Clergie.

Theuet Coſmog. lib. 9.
Sarran. Elucid. cap. 2.

2 Preſter Iohn ſaid to Aluares, that if their Abuna, who is the primate of the countrie, ſhould vſe toward them any vnlawfull commandement, they would burne the copie of ſuch commandement. Hee holdeth then, that he may erre.

Deſcript. Ethiop. cap. 29.

3 The reformed Churches hold, that the viſible Church may erre. Heluetia, the latter confeſſion, chap. 17. Whereupon it is called the piller and foundation of truth, that doth not erre, ſo long as it relieth vpon the rocke Chriſt, &c. and no marvell if it doe erre, if it forſake him, who is the alone truth. Wittemberg, artic. 32. This Church is ſo gouerned of the holy Ghoſt, that although he ſuffereth it to be weak in this earth, yet he doth alwaies preſerue it, that it doe not periſh by errors, or by ſinnes: it may then erre, as it is ſubiect alſo to ſinne, it cannot periſh by error or ſinne. Auſpurg, artic. 5. Surely men doe flatter and deceiue themſelues too much, if they thinke there be no faults conueied into the Church, by the deſires of couetous men, and by thoſe labyrinths and obſcurities of the doctrine and traditions of the ſchoolemen, &c.

Walden.* giue inſtance for example ſake of particular Churches, as the Epheſian, Romane: and Pighius ſaith, Quis per Eccleſiam Romanam vnquam intellexit vniuerſalem Eccleſiam? Who euer vnderſtood by the Romane Church the vniuerſall Church? Hierarch.Eccleſiaſt.lib.6.c.3.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER THE whole Church may faile vpon the earth.

The Papiſts.

They hold that it is impoſſible that the whole Church ſhould vtterly faile vpon the earth, and fall away from God; but that there ſhall alwaies be a viſible and knowne Church vpon the earth, hauing a perpetuall ſucceſſion of Paſtors and Doctors, where the true worſhip of God ſhall bee preſerued and kept, Bellarmin.lib.3.de Eccleſ.cap.13. 17.Error.

Argument.1. Theſe and ſuch places of Scripture they ſtand vpon. The gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it. I will be with you vnto the end of the world. His throne ſhall be as the Sunne, and endure as the Moone: Ergo, the viſible Church ſhall not faile vpon earth, Bellarmin.ibid. Math.16.18. Math.28. Pſal.88.36.37.

We anſwere: that theſe places muſt be vnderſtood of the Catholike and vniuerſall Church, whereof not alone, but euery true particular Church is a part. This Church is the ſpouſe of Chriſt, this Church ſhall not periſh, this is the kingdome of Chriſt, with this Church will he alway be preſent to the end of the world: we denie not but that the inuiſible Church ſhall continue vpon the earth ſo long as the world endureth. Secondly, theſe places are vnproperly vnderſtood of the viſible Church, for therein are both good and bad: how then can that be the ſpouſe of Chriſt, where there are many infidels and wicked ones, which haue not eſpouſed themſelues vnto him? How can it bee called his kingdome, whereas it is not of all acknowledged? But in the true Catholike Church all and euery one are eſpouſed to Chriſt: all and euery one haue the kingdome of God within them, as it is Luke 17. Luk.17.21.

Argument.2. Likewiſe they doe abuſe that place of S.Paul, Epheſ.4.11. He gaue ſome to bee Apoſtles, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors and teachers, for the gathering together of the Saints: Ergo, the Church ſhall alwaies bee viſible till all the Saints are gathered together, Bellarmin.cap.13.Rhemiſt.Epheſ.4. [illegible] Epheſ.4.11.

We anſwere: this place proueth that the Church hath neuer wanted Paſtors and teachers for the continuance of the truth, neither ſhall euer be without them, as the Lord ſaid by the Prophet, Eſay 59. verſ.21. My ſpirit which is vpon thee, and my words which I haue put into thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeed for euer. We therefore denie not but that in all ages, yea in the moſt ignorant times of Poperie, God raiſed vp faithfull teachers vnto his Church: although they were not mitred and crozierd Biſhops, neither could ſhew any outward pompe, or boaſt of any glorious ſucceſſion: Such were Guilielmus de S.Amore, Arnoldus de noua villa, anno 1240. Berengarius, Ioachim Abbas, in the time of Innocentius the 3. Wickliff, Brute, Swinderby, Badby, and others about anno 1400. with many which were not knowne to the world: for the truth neuer in any age wanted witneſſes. Eſay 59.21.

By the continuance of the truth and right faith wee gather, that there haue beene alwaies faithfull teachers, though not notorious to the world, and ſhall be: but who they were, and where they liued, what pompe, what authoritie they were of, it is not materiall to know: wherefore an outward viſible ſucceſſion of Biſhops and Paſtors is not neceſſarie for the continuance of the truth: neither can it bee concluded out of this place.

Argument.3. Thus they reaſon, there haue beene alwaies ſome faithfull men, which haue outwardly profeſſed their faith: for if they diſſembled or cloaked their profeſſion, then were they not faithfull: Ergo, the Church hath beene alwaies viſible, as in the time of perſecution, Bellarmin.ibid.

We anſwere: firſt, the Ieſuite doth cleane peruert and change the ſtate of the queſtion: for he defineth a viſible Church, to be multitudo congregata, in qua ſint prælati et ſubditi; a multitude or companie gathered together, where there are both Prelates and Biſhops, and people obedient vnto them. And now he giueth an inſtance of perſecution, wherein ſome faithfull Chriſtians may giue an outward profeſſion of their faith: where is now that multitude congregate together? where is that iuriſdiction of Prelates? where is that viſible and glorious ſucceſſion? We denie not but that in time of perſecution the faithfull may be knowne to themſelues, and yet ſometime they are not: for in Iſrael there were ſeuen thouſand faithfull beſide Elias, yet he knew none of them. But it followeth not, that therefore the Church is then viſible to the world, and notoriouſly knowne to men, as the Rhemiſts ſay, in Matth.5.Sect.3.& Act.11.Sect.3. Thus they flie manifeſtly from the queſtion.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie not, but that the Catholike vniuerſall Church, as it hath hitherto continued ſince the beginning of the world, ſo ſhall it endure to the end: the Lord ſhall neuer want vpon earth a companie of faithfull men, which ſhall truely ſerue him: though it be not neceſſarie, neither hath alwaies beene ſeene, that they ſhould be in any one place. A viſible Church we define to be a congregation gation of men, amongſt whom the word is truly preached, and the Sacraments adminiſtred. Such a Church hath not alwaies beene, neither can we be aſſured that it ſhall alway be found vpon the earth, wherein the worſhip of God publikely and viſibly is practiſed.

2.King.21.2.

*Argum.*1. In the raigne of Ahaz King of Iuda, there was no viſible Church, where the pure worſhip of God was practiſed; for both Iſrael vnder Pekah, and Iuda vnder Ahaz, fell to Idolatrie, and followed the cuſtome of the Gentiles: yea, Vriah the high Prieſt conſented with the King to ſet vp Idolatrie. Likewiſe in the dayes of Manaſſeh, who did euill after the abomination of the heathen, there was no place where God was publikely worſhipped: for Iuda was corrupted, Iſrael was carried away captiue: Ergo, there was a time when there was no viſible Church.

Bellarmine cannot here ſhift vs off with that anſwere, which hee maketh to the obiection of Elias time; that he complaining of the ſmall number of the faithfull, meant it of Iſrael onely: for at the ſame time, the true worſhip of God was exerciſed in Iudea: for this was ſufficiently anſwered before, 1. queſt. 2. part of this Controuerſie, in argum. proceſ.

The Ieſuite then hath another ſtarting hole; there is not the like reaſon betweene the Church of the Iſraelites then, and of Chriſtians now, for theirs was but a particular Church; and therefore though it failed with them, yet were there many faithfull among the heathen to bee found, as Melchiſedech and Iob: but the Church of Chriſtians, is an vniuerſall Church; lib. 3. Bellarm. cap. 16. reſpond ad argum. 3.

Anſw. Firſt, I demaund of them, was not the Church of the Iewes then the Church of Chriſt, as the Church of Chriſtians is now: but the Church of Chriſt was alwaies Catholike: Ergo, ſo was that Church then: and though it were viſible onely then among the Iſraelites, yet all the faithfull in the world were members of the ſame Church, that the Iſraelites belonged vnto: Ergo, there is no ſuch difference betweene theſe Churches, as the Ieſuite ſuppoſeth. Secondly, what tell you me of certaine beleeuers among the Gentiles? that is not the queſtion: for wee doubt not but that the inuiſible Church of Chriſt hath beene in all times and places: hee ſhould haue proued, that there was another viſible Church to be found among the Gentiles, beſide that of the Iſraelites: which could not be, ſeeing that at Ieruſalem onely the ſacrifices were to be offered, and the law was onely and the Prophets among them, which then were the eſſentiall notes and markes of the Church. Thirdly, yet will the Ieſuite finde it an hard matter to finde any faithfull men at this time among the heathen, when there was none in Iſrael. In Melchiſedechs time, there was Abraham, and when Iob liued, there were manie excellent men in Iſrael, if as ſome thinke, he liued about the time of Moſes: but whom can he name now among the Gentiles, that were true worſhippers, when as Iſrael and Iuda were giuen to Idolatrie? We conclude then, that ſeeing we can aſſigne a time, when as the Church was not viſible among the circumciſed Iſraelites, and among the vncircumciſed it could not be, that there was a time when as the viſible Church failed vpon earth. Auguſtine ſaith, Eccleſia Catholica, non ſolum poſt aduentum Domini & ſaluatoris noſtri prædicata eſt, ſed etiam ab initio mundi multis figuris & ſacramentis deſignata: The Catholike Church began not ſo to bee called after the comming of our Lord and Sauiour Chriſt, but was from the beginning of the world by many figures & ſacraments deſcribed, Serm. 217. Auguſtine here ſaith, that the Church before Chriſts comming was Catholica, Catholike or vniuerſall. Bellarmine ſaith, Eccleſia Iudæorum non erat vniuerſalis, The Church of the Iewes was not vniuerſall or Catholike. Out of Auguſtine I conclude thus, the Church of the Iewes before Chriſt was the Catholike and onely viſible Church of the world, but it ſometime failed: Ergo, the viſible Church may faile vpon earth.

*Argum.*2. In the paſſion of our Sauiour there was no viſible Church, ſuch a Church we ſtill meane, as where there are Prælati & ſubditi, paſtores & oues, Prelates and people, Paſtors and ſheepe. Wee proue it thus.

1 The viſible Church was not amongſt the Phariſees and Prieſts, for they ſhamefully and wickedly erred, Bellarm. c. 17. It was not amongſt the Apoſtles, for they alſo erred; therefore after the Papiſts opinion, they were not the Church: for the Church (ſay they) erreth not. Secondly, hee ſaith, they were yet but materiall parts, not formall, that is, not Biſhops or Paſtors: how then could there bee a viſible Church, which was without the formall and principall parts, that is, Paſtors and Biſhops: Ergo, there was then no viſible Church.

2.Theſſ.2.3.

*Argum.*3 When the abomination of deſolation ſhall ſtand in the temple, and there ſhall bee a generall defection and apoſtaſie from the faith, then ſhall the viſible Church faile vpon earth. But the firſt is true, Matth. 24. 15. 2. Theſſ. 2. 3. Ergo.

Lib.3.c.16.reſ. ad argum. 5.

To the firſt place the Ieſuite anſwereth, that it muſt be vnderſtood of the deſtruction of the temple, lib. 3. c. 16. reſp. ad argum. 5. But the Rhemiſts more liberall then ſo, affirme that it ſhall bee eſpecially accompliſhed in Antichriſts time, when as the ſacrifice of the Maſſe ſhall vtterly be aboliſhed, Annot. in Mat. 24. ver. 15.

To the next place concerning that defection and apoſtaſie, which S. Paul ſpeaketh of, firſt he ſaith, that it ſhall be a defection from the Romane Empire: but the Rhemiſts ſay, it ſhall be a defection from moſt points of Chriſtian religion. Secondly, the Ieſuite anſwereth, that though it be a defection from the Romane faith, yet it ſhall not be generall but particular. But the Rhemiſts better aduiſed grant it ſhall bee a reuolt of kingdomes, peoples, prouinces: and the publike entercourſe of the faithfull with the Church of Rome ſhall ceaſe, they ſhall onely communicate with it in heart, Ament. in 2. Theſ. 2. ſect. 6.

Now out of their owne words wee conclude: there ſhall bee a time whereas the publike ſeruice of God ſhall ceaſe, there ſhall be deſolation in the Churches and temples of Chriſtians; there ſhall bee then no publike entercourſe with the Church, but a priuate communicating in heart: Ergo, there ſhall be a time when there ſhall be no outward viſible Church notoriouſly and famouſly knowne: Ergo, our aduerſaries are in an error, and are condemned by their owne Church.

In the laſt place let vs ſee how this doctrine hath beene ſealed: Maſter Philpot that bleſſed martyr, by that place of S. Paul, 2. Theſſ. chap. 2, verſ. 3. Chriſt ſhall not come, except there be a departing firſt, ſheweth, that there ſhould be an vniuerſall departing from the faith, for ſo the word ἀποστασία properly ſignifieth, and we call him apoſtata that forſaketh the faith: in which ſenſe the word is vſed, 1. Timoth. chap. 4. verſ. 1. When this vniuerſall departing from the faith fell out in the world, which came to paſſe when Antichriſt was reuealed, and the man of ſinne diſcloſed, as the Apoſtle there ſaith: what was then become of the viſible Church? I thinke it failed when the profeſſion of the faith failed.

Examina. Tert. p. 1632. [illegible] edit. 1610.
1. Tim. 4. 1.

Let vs ſee antiquitie for this matter: The Emperour Conſtance, who fauoured the Arians, thus cunningly ſaid to Liberius Biſhop of Rome: Quota pars es orbis terrarum, quod ſolus vindicas hominem nefandiſſimum? I pray thee how many parts of the world art thou, that thou dareſt alone ſuccour this naughtie man? meaning Athanaſius. Liberius anſwereth: Non eo quod ſum ſolus fidei cauſa minuitur, nam & antiquitus tres ſoli reperti ſunt reſiſtentes praecepto regis: The cauſe of faith is not therefore impaired becauſe I am alone, for ſometimes there were onely three found, which reſiſted the Kings wicked commandement, Dan. 3. When the true worſhip of God was only found amongſt three perſons, it is apparant that the viſible Church of God failed vpon earth. Thus haue we an authoritie of one of the Biſhops of Rome againſt them.

Theodor. lib. 2. cap. 16.

That the viſible Church may faile, it is thus proued by forraine teſtimonies. 1. By our aduerſaries owne confeſſion; if the Romane Church, which they hold to bee the Catholike and viſible Church, may faile, then it will follow, that the viſible Church may faile: but the firſt is true in the iudgement of the Eaſt Churches. The Patriarch of Ieruſalem doth excommunicate out of the body of the Church the Pope of Rome. The Ruthenians and Muſcouites doe ſay the Pope is an Heretike. The Neſtorians and other Indians doe call the Pope a Biſhop vnapproued.

2. The Ethiopians in their Leiturgie pray for the chiefe of the Church of Alexandria, and for the Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons of the right faith, &c. whereby it is euident, that they take not the Church of Rome to be a viſible Church, which they exclude out of their prayers.

3. The iudgement of the reformed Churches is this: Heluetia, later confeſſion, 17. chap. It falleth out ſometime, that God in his iuſt iudgement, ſuffereth the truth of his word, the Catholike faith and his owne true worſhip to be ſo obſcured and defaced, that the Church ſeemeth almoſt quite raſed out, and not ſo much as a face of a Church to remaine, as we ſee fell out in the dayes of Eliah and other times, and yet in the meane time, the Lord hath in this world, euen in this darknes his true worſhippers, &c. Belgia, artic. 27. This Church God doth defend againſt all the force and furie of the world, although for a ſmall time, it may ſeeme to be very little, and as it were vtterly extinguiſhed in the ſight of man, &c.

4. We want not here the teſtimonie of the Romaniſts themſelues, Ribera the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that vnder Antichriſt, Romam deſertum iri a fide, &c. That Rome ſhall fall from the faith, and become an habitation of diuels. Suarez, omnem cultum diuinum ceſſaturum, that then all publike worſhip ſhall ceaſe. The ſame Suarez confeſſeth, that in the time of Antichriſt, the Church ſhall remaine in the elect onely, who ſhall not be ouercome, Ibid. but the viſible Church conſiſteth not onely of the elect. If then the Romane Church be the viſible Church (in their opinion) and the Romane ſhall faile: it followeth, that the viſible Church may faile.

THE THIRD QVESTION: OF THE NOTES and markes, whereby the true Church may be diſcerned and knowne.

FIRST OF THE FALSE AND ERRONEOUS NOTES OF THE CHURCH.

OVr aduerſaries doe deuiſe many notes, whereby their Church is deſcribed, as Bellarmine reckoneth vp fifteene in order, too many (certaine) to be found in a good Church: but there are ſixe principall which they doe moſt ſtand vpon; Antiquitie, vniuerſalitie, ſucceſſion, vnitie, the power of miracles, the gift of propheſie. We will firſt touch theſe in order, and then come to ſpeake of the true and infallible notes of the Church.

Of Antiquitie. Note 1.

THe Papiſts make great bragges of the long continuance of their Church: yea, that they can ſhew the deſcent of their Church from Adam, Rhemiſt. annot. in Act. 28. ſect. 5. But (alacke) ſilly men, they muſt come ſhort of our Sauiour Chriſt and the Apoſtles time, by fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres, for the moſt of the opinions which they now hold. Let vs examine their reaſons.

18. Error.

In any great change of religion (ſay they) the authors of the ſect, the time when it began, the perſons that oppugned it may be knowne: but no ſuch thing can be ſhewed of our Church (ſay they) as we can ſhew of yours: we can tell them the yeere, the places, and ring-leaders of their reuolt, ſay our Engliſh Rhemiſts, annot. in 2. Iohn 2. ſect. 5. Bellar. lib. 4. de Eccleſ. cap. 5.

We anſwere: firſt, no marueile if Papiſtrie herein doe much differ from other hereſies: they, as the hereſies of the Arrians, Pelagians, Donatiſts, becauſe they were not long to continue, ſuddenly brake out, and ſuddenly againe were extinguiſhed: But Papiſtrie, being the prop and pillar of Antichriſts kingdome, by whom the world muſt be deluded many yeeres, was at the beginning to worke cloſely and ſecretly, not breaking out at once into open impietie and blaſphemie, but vnder pretence of holineſſe to ſet abroach her deadly poyſon: therefore [a] S. Paul calleth it a myſterie of iniquitie, which began euen to worke in his daies. And ſo ſaith [b] S. Hierome: Nunc quoque myſterium iniquitatis operatur, & garrit vnuſquiſque, quod ſentit. Euen now the myſterie of iniquitie beginneth to worke, and euerie man doth vtter his owne fancies.

And whereas you alleage, that the Authors of euery hereſie may bee aſſigned, which cannot bee ſhewed, you ſay, of your profeſſion: Bernard would haue told you otherwiſe, if you had conſulted with him: for thus he writeth of the heretikes called Apoſtolici: Quære ab his ſuæ ſectæ authorem, neminem dabunt: Aske of them the author of their ſect, they can name none: which hereſie had not it proper author from amongſt men, as the Manichees had Manes, the Sabellians Sabellius, the Arrians Arrius, &c. But with what name will you call this hereſie? ſurely with none: [c] non eſt ab homine illorum hæreſis, their hereſie is not of men, &c. yet is it not by reuelation, ſed per immiſſionem & fraudem dæmoniorum, but by the fraud and deceit of the diuell. Thus farre Bernard. Thus we ſee, that the heretikes called Apoſtolicall, could name no author of their ſect, yet were they heretikes: ſo the Papiſts, that haue ſo much in their mouthes, the Sea Apoſtolike, Apoſtolicall men, Apoſtolicall traditions, &c. and ſo ſhew themſelues to be the Apoſtolici of theſe daies: though the authors of their ſuperſtitions lay hid, yet this were not ſufficient to cleere them of hereſie.

Secondly, we alſo anſwere, that all theſe things, the authors of their ſects, the time, the perſons that withſtood them, may manifeſtly be detected: firſt, concerning the time, we haue a manifeſt prophecie, [d] Apocal. 20. that Sathan ſhould be bound a thouſand yeeres, and afterward ſet looſe: when no doubt Antichriſt ſhould begin to ſhew himſelfe to the world. Concerning this ſpace of a thouſand yeeres, there are two probable opinions: ſome thinke they are to begin immediatly after our Sauiour Chriſts time, and ſo counting a thouſand yeeres, all which time Sathan muſt be bound; then Antichriſt ſhould begin to appeare. Thus [e] Iohn Wickliffe expoundeth it. Others ſay, the thouſand yeeres ought to begin after the three hundred yeeres expired of perſecution; for all that while it is moſt like Sathan was let looſe, when he raged with open mouth like a Lion againſt the Church and Saints of God. Of this opinion was [f] Walter Brute ſomewhat after Wicliffes time: who by this meanes maketh the prophecie of Daniel of 1290. daies, and that in the Apocal. 12. of 1260. daies, to agree with the thouſand yeeres of Sathans binding (a few yeeres excepted, which in the computation of hundreds and thouſands make no great oddes:) for taking euery day for a yeere, we ſhall come to 1290. yeeres after Chriſt: when the thouſand yeeres muſt be expired, beginning from the three hundred yeeres of perſecution. If we count the thouſand yeeres from Chriſt, wee ſhall come to the time of Hildebrand, called Gregorie the 7. who was Pope of Rome a thouſand yeeres after Chriſt and vpward: by whom the mariage of Miniſters is thought firſt to haue beene forbidden. If wee begin after the ceaſing of perſecution, which continued three hundred yeeres, we ſhall fall into the yeere 1300. about the time of [g] Iohn Wickliffe, when the great rabble of Monkes and Friers began to ſwarme, and ſuperſtition to encreaſe.

But we will take a little paine briefly to touch the authors of many ſuperſtitions in Poperie, and of ſome of their erroneous and hereticall opinions. Anno 420. Zoſimus Biſhop of Rome did chalenge a prerogatiue aboue other Churches, that it might be lawfull to make appeales from other Churches to that Sea: and to ſet the better colour vpon it, hee falſly alleaged a decree of the Nicene Councell, but there was no ſuch thing found there: wherefore it was decreed in the Councell of Carthage at that time, that none ſhould appeale ouer the ſeas to Rome.

Boniface the 3. purchaſed of the wicked Emperour Phocas the title of vniuerſall Biſhop. Tranſubſtantiation was firſt concluded againſt [i] Berengarius, anno 1062. vnder Leo the 9. but not publikely enacted before anno 1216. vnder Innocentius the 3. The Dominicke Friers brought in the ſame time, and their ſect eſtabliſhed by Innocentius the 3. Auricular confeſſion alſo was brought in anno 1215. vnder the ſame Pope. [k] Teleſphorus brought in the Lenton faſt. Calixtus inſtituted the foure Ember faſts in the yeere: [l] Hyginus brought in Chriſme. We can alſo ſhew by whom euery peece of their blaſphemous Maſſe hath been patched together: Marriage was firſt prohibited by Nicholas the ſecond, Alexander the ſecond, Gregorie the ſeuenth, about the yeere 1070. The Communion in one kind [m] forged, vrged, and decreed in the Councell of Conſtance, not aboue two hundred yeeres agoe. By theſe few examples it may appeare that it is falſe which the Ieſuite ſaith, that the authors of their ſects and hereſies cannot be ſhewed.

[m] Not firſt then thought vpon, or defended, but firſt by a generall decree impoſed and enforced. See this obiection further anſwered. Retect. p.8.

Now wee will briefly declare what oppugners and gainsayers they haue had in all ages, since their groſſe opinions began to bee receiued: Such were Bertramus and Berengarius about Pope Hildebrands time, that mightily impugned the groſſe opinion of Tranſubſtantiation, Robertus Gallus 1291. Robertus Groſthead Biſhop of Lincolne, who was called malleus Romanorum, the maller or hammer of the Romans, anno 1250. Franciſcus Petrarcha 1350. Iohannes de Rupe ſciſſa, who prophecied againſt the Pope 1340. with many other, which ceaſed not to crie out againſt the abominable vices and erroneous opinions of the Church of Rome. Wherefore it is a great vntruth, which the Ieſuite doth ſo ſtiffly auouch, that we cannot ſet downe the pedegree and deſcent of their Church and faith, and how it hath continually been reſiſted.

Fox præfat.

Now whereas they ſay, that they can name the ring-leaders of our ſect: we haue none other maiſters and authors of our faith, then our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles, by whoſe holy writings we refuſe not to be tried. But you flie from the light, you diſgrace the Scriptures, making them imperfect, and inſufficient: this the true Diſciples of Chriſt would not doe: you are the Diſciples of Chriſt, as the Phariſies bragged that they were the Diſciples of Moſes. And as then the true Church was not in thoſe that ſat in Moſes chaire, though they could alleage great antiquitie, but in Chriſt and his Apoſtles: ſo is not now the true Church to be diſcerned by cuſtome or number of yeeres, but by that truth which was taught and preached by our bleſſed Sauiour, and his apoſtles. Auguſtine alſo ſaith, Poſſunt etiam latrones & adulteri pro ſe antiquitatem aſſerere: Theeues and adulterers can alſo alleage antiquitie for themſelues, quæſt.ex vtroq.teſtam. 114. Antiquitie therefore is not a perpetuall note of the Church.

Here Bellarmine, whereas we alleage, that our Church is moſt ancient euen from the Apoſtles time, though it hath a long time been hid, and not been notoriouſly knowne in the world, as the malignant Church hath been; doth thus reply againſt vs: That if the true Church of Chriſt hath been ſo many yeeres buried in ſilence, it ſhould be in more miſerable caſe, then the people of the Iewes, which haue had alwaies their Synagogues: and where is then that glory of the Church of Chriſt ſpoken of by the Prophets? Bellar.lib.4.de Eccleſ.cap.5.in fine.

Anſw. 1. As for the Iewes, though their name and nation yet remaineth, yet they are a people ignominious through the face of the earth, and as vagabonds doe wander from one nation to another, and therefore are not to be compared to the Church of Chriſt, which though it were in the firſt times obſcured in the cruell perſecutions of the Emperours, and ſince defaced through the ambition of the Biſhops of Rome, yet hath been ſince Chriſts time, for many yeeres a glorious and flouriſhing Church throughout the world. 2. Concerning the glory of Chriſts Church, foretold by the Prophets, it was rather ſpirituall in the propagation of the faith, and preaching of Chriſt to the Gentiles, 1.Tim.3.16. then temporall in the outward glittering ſhew: and yet the Church alſo was outwardly glorious from the time of Conſtantine for many hundred yeeres after. The ſpirituall beautie of the Church hath and ſhall continue to the end of the world: the temporall glory it alwaies enioyed not, as in the perſecutions vnder the Romane Emperours, and ſince vnder the Italian Biſhops; though in the middeſt of the hot perſecutions both then and ſince the true members of Chriſt ſhewed themſelues, as partly I haue touched before, in the ſecond part of this anſwere to their note of antiquitie, that for the ſpace of theſe fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres, there haue not wanted ſome of our Church that haue taſted of their perſecutions.

But ſaith Bellarmine againe, moſt of your Euangelicall Doctors came out of our Church, as Luther confeſſeth himſelfe that he had been a Monke. Anſw. 1. And from whence, I pray you, ſprang our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles? came they not of the Iewes? and were not his Apoſtles taken out of the Iewiſh Church, that was then ſo corrupted in religion? 2. As vnder the gouernment of the high Prieſts and Scribes, there were notwithſtanding many deuout men, that expected the comming of the Meſſia, as Zacharie, and Simeon: ſo we doubt not, but that in Poperie there were many, and ſome of them Monkes, that had a taſte of the Goſpell, and loathed the corruptions of the Romiſh Church.

But concerning this note of antiquitie, that it is no ſufficient marke of the Church, wee can vrge them with both their lawes. Iuſt.Cod.lib.8.tit.53.l.2. Conſtantin. Conſuetudo non valet, quæ rationem vincit aut legem: That cuſtome or antiquitie is of no worth, which goeth againſt reaſon or law. But ſuch is your antiquitie againſt the law of the word of God. Ergo.

Secondly, out of your owne law, Decr.p.1.d8.cap.4. Veritate manifeſtata, cedat conſuetudo veritati: After the truth is manifeſted, let cuſtome giue place to the truth. Cap.5. Gregorius 1. Chriſtus dixit, Ego ſum veritas, non conſuetudo: Chriſt ſaid, I am the truth, not the cuſtome. Cap.8. Conſuetudo ſine veritate, vetuſtas eſt erroris: Cuſtome without truth, is the oldneſſe of error. Likewiſe, Decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.4.cap.11. Conſuetudo non derogat iuri diuino: Cuſtome doth not preuaile againſt the diuine law.

By all theſe decrees it is manifeſt, that cuſtome and antiquitie vnleſſe it bee propped vp with truth, and agreeable to the law of God, is of no force. Such antiquitie vnleſſe you can ſhew for your Church, as we are ſure you cannot, you are able to ſay iuſt nothing.

Laſtly, let them ſpeake that haue ſealed this doctrine with their blood: firſt, Maſter Philpot denieth that truth ought to be meaſured by antiquitie: Ex diuinis nulla occurrit præſcriptio: Preſcription hath no place in matters belonging to God, pag. 1805. exam. 5. c. 2.

Maſter Bradford alſo ſaith, that theſe three notes of the Popes Church, vnitie, antiquitie, conſent, may as well be in the diuels Church as in Gods Church: as for example, the Idolatrie of the Iſraelites had them all three, pag. 1682. col. 1.

Secondly, the ſame bleſſed Martyr Philpot plainly auoucheth, that his religion was older then the Papiſts by a thouſand yeeres, pag. 1842. exam. 11. [illegible]

Roger Holland Martyr, thus alſo with great boldneſſe proteſted: The antiquitie of our Church is not from Pope Nicholas or Pope Ioane; but euen from the beginning from the time that God ſaid to Adam, The ſeed of the woman ſhall breake the Serpents head. Moreouer of our Church haue been the Apoſtles, Euangeliſts, Martyrs, and confeſſors of Chriſt, that haue been at all times, and in all ages perſecuted for the teſtimonie of the word of God. But for the vpholding of your Church, what antiquitie can ye ſhew? your idolatrous Maſſe is not yet 400. yeere old, and ſome of your Maſſes are yonger, as that Maſſe of S. Thomas the traitor: hæc Roger Holland p. 2040. col. 1.

Whereas then we here ioyne in iſſue with our aduerſaries in theſe two points, that neither antiquitie is alwaies a ſure note of the Church, and that antiquitie for the moſt and chiefeſt points of their doctrine is not of their ſide. 1. For the firſt, wee haue the iudgement of other reformed Churches with vs: Heluetia, latter confeſſion, cap. 17. We condemne all ſuch Churches as ſtrangers from the true Church of Chriſt, who are not ſuch as they ought to be; howſoeuer they brag of ſucceſſion of Biſhops, of vnitie, antiquitie: Auſpurge. No cuſtome is to be allowed, which is contrary to the word of God. Bohemia, cap. 15. they thus alleage out of the Canons, Wee praiſe cuſtome, yet that onely which is knowne to vſe nothing contrary to the Catholike faith.

Concerning the other point, that true antiquity is not of our aduerſaries ſide. 1. The Greeke Church teſtifieth: for the Grecians affirme, that their Church is the Princeſſe of other Churches, and hath borne the firſt prerogatiue in the orthodoxall verity: The Syrians boaſt themſelues to be the firſt Chriſtians in the world, becauſe that Peter had his ſeate ſeuen yeeres at Antioch before euer he went to Rome.

Anſwere to the Councell of Auſpurg. cap.13.
Villamont voiages.lib.2. cap.22.
Aluares deſcript.Ethiop. cap.29.

2 So alſo Preſter Iohn ſaid to Aluares, that the Church of Antioch was in a maner the chiefeſt, vntill the Councell of Pope Leo, and therefore he asked him, why they had diuided the Churches of Antioch and Rome, &c. So both the Eaſt and South Church, do giue the priority and priuiledge of antiquity vnto the Church of Antioch before Rome.

3 And further, that the now Romane religion faileth of antiquitie in many chiefe points, it is the confeſſion of their owne writers; as that the celebration of publike prayer in an vnknowne tongue, is againſt the practiſe of the ancient primitiue Church, (and therefore a meere innouation) is confeſſed by Bellarmine; who alleageth out of Hierome, that in Eccleſiis vrbis Romæ, &c. In the Churches of the citie of Rome, as a thunder-heauen, the people were heard ſounding, Amen. And Eraſmus maruelleth how this change came in. Another confeſſeth, that in former times the election of the Pope was confirmed by Chriſtian Emperours, &c. and he ſaith of the contrary in that the Emperours approbation is not now required, noua rerum facies irrupit: A new face or faſhion of things is broken in: neither can the Romane Church ſhew antiquitie for the inhibiting of Miniſters marriage, which Eſpencæus ſheweth in time paſt to haue been lawful by a Canon of the Synod Gangrenſ. meminit Canon Epiſcoporum coniugij, &c. The Canon maketh mention of the mariage of Biſhops at that time lawfull. The cuſtome of receiuing of the Euchariſt in one kind began to be generall not long before the Councell of Conſtance, as Gregor. de Valent. confeſſeth. Many ſuch innouations are to bee ſeene in the doctrine and practiſe of the Romane Church, whereof they haue no ſhew of antiquitie, by their owne confeſſion, as is to be ſeene throughout in this Tractate.

Of Vniuerſality. Note 2.

19.Error.

OVr Church is vniuerſall, ſay they, both in reſpect of time, perſon, and place, it hath alwaies been in the world, in all countries and nations it hath flouriſhed: Ergo, it is the true Church.

That it is vniuerſall, they firſt proue by the name of Catholike, which is, ſay they, by Gods prouidence appropriate to them, which name they affirme without ground to haue been impoſed by the Apoſtles vpon true beleeuers, Rhem. in Act. cap. 11. ſect. 4. Bellar. lib. 4. de eccleſ. cap. 4. ſo the Doway Bible: pag. 22.

Act.11.26.

We anſwere: firſt the name of Chriſtians is a more honourable title then the name of Catholikes: for it is manifeſt, Act. 11. 26. that this name was vſed in the Apoſtles time, and by the Apoſtles themſelues allowed: but it is not certaine that the name Catholike came from the Apoſtles. Againe, many hereticks chalenged this name to be called Catholikes, who did not ſo eaſily obtaine to bee called Chriſtians: as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 8. leg. 6. Theod. Gratian, It is decreed, that the Neſtorian heretikes, non abutantur nomine Chriſtianorum, ſhould not abuſe the name of Chriſtians: the law ſaith not Catholikes. But this ancient and honourable name the Papiſts doe deſpiſe: for in Italie and at Rome it is vſed as a name of reproch, to ſignifie a dolt or a foole, Fulk. in Act. 11. 26.

2 We ſay that you doe vſurpe this name, as the Donatiſts in Auguſtines time would bee called Catholikes: for what is the name of Catholike, without the Catholike doctrine? They are the true Catholikes that profeſſe the ancient and Apoſtolike faith: to vs therefore, bee it knowne to you, this

[illegible] thanke you (O ye Papiſts) yet we haue better arguments to proue our Church by, then by ſyllables and titles. Quaſi nos (ſaith Auguſtine) huius nominis teſtimonio [illegible] ad demonſtrandam Eccleſiam, & non promiſsis Dei: As though wee (ſaith hee) doe leane vpon the name to proue our Church by, and not rather vpon the promiſes of God. And S. Hierome ſaith, lib. 3. aduerſ. Pelag. Quid ſi te alius Catholicum dixerit, ſtatimne aſſenſum tribuemus? ſtultiſsimum eſt, [illegible] per ſola nominis alterius pendere iudicio: What if another man call thee Catholike, ſhall I giue conſent: it is a moſt fooliſh point, concerning my faith to depend of another mans iudgement. So I ſay, it is a vaine thing for them to proue their faith, by the calling and naming of others.

Now then, although we yeeld ſo much of this name, that heretikes alſo haue challenged to themſelues, yet this title as it was firſt taken, doth alſo appertaine to vs: for the Imperiall law ſaith, which was made by Theodoſius and Valentinian &c. that they which hold the equalitie of the Trinitie ſhould be called Catholike Chriſtians, hos iubemus amplecti Chriſtianorum Catholicorum nomen: We will haue them called Chriſtian Catholikes, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 4. l. 1. But I truſt our aduerſaries cannot ſay, but that we beleeue concerning the Trinitie as ſoundly as they themſelues. Therefore wee alſo doe make challenge of right to this title.

Secondly, they proue their vniuerſalitie, by the multitude of people that haue receiued the Romiſh faith, and their Church (ſay they) hath repleniſhed the greateſt part of the world. They would proue this by the propagation of the Church, in the Apoſtles time, in Tertullian, Ireneus, Hierome, Auguſtines yea and afterward in Gregories daies: yea and now alſo beſides many great countries in Europe, they haue of their Church in India, America, and the vnknowne parts of the world, Bellarm. cap. 7. nota. 4. So they of Doway, multitude of progenie promiſed to Abraham pertaineth to Chriſt, pag. 205.

We anſwere: firſt, the truth is not alwaies to be meaſured by the iudgement or opinion of the multitude: Follow not a multitude, ſaith the Scripture, to doe euill: the greateſt part is not the beſt. Chriſt calleth his flocke puſillum gregem, a little flocke: Feare not little flocke (ſaith he): Saint Hierome ſaith, Multitudo ſociorum nequaquam te Catholicum, ſed hæreticum eſſe monſtrabit: The multitude of your fellowes doth not therefore proue you a Catholike, but rather an heretike, lib. 3. aduerſ. Pelagian. And S. Auguſtine: Non omnes hæretici per totam faciem terræ, ſed tamen hæretici per totam faciem terræ, alybi, alybi: All heretikes are not diſperſed ouer the face of the earth, yet heretikes are, ſome here, ſome there, Homil. de paſtorib. Thus we ſee that heretikes may as well ſtand vpon vniuerſalitie, as Catholikes.

The like alſo hath the Ciuill law, Cod. lib. 1. titul. 20. l. 1. Iuſtinian: Neque ex multitudine authorum, quod melius æquiuſque eſt, iudicatote, cum poſsit vnius forſan, & deterioris ſententia, & multos & maiores aliqua ex parte ſuperare: Neither by the multitude of authors iudge ye what ſtandeth beſt with equitie, when as perhaps the ſentence of one that is inferiour, may in ſome reſpect goe beyond the greater and higher ſort, &c. As then equitie in ciuill cauſes goeth not by multitude, ſo neither veritie in diuine.

Heare alſo one of your owne Popes teſtimonie, Nicholaus 1. ad Michael. Imperator. Numerus puſillus non obeſt, vbi abundat pietas; nec multiplex prodeſt, vbi abundat impietas: nolite igitur gloriari in multitudine, quia non multitudo, ſed cauſa, damnationem, vel iuſtificationem adducit: A ſmall companie hindreth not, where pietie aboundeth, neither doth a great companie further, where impietie aboundeth; glorie not therefore in multitude, for not the multitude, but the cauſe iuſtifieth or condemneth. The multitude promiſed to Abraham and performed to Chriſt is great in it ſelfe: as there were ſealed of the 12. tribes 144. thouſand, Reuel. 7. 8. but yet in reſpect of the number of the wicked, Chriſts flock is but a ſmall one.

Secondly, you haue nothing to doe with the Church which was propagated in the Apoſtles time, not for the ſpace of fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres after Chriſt: it was not your Church, for the moſt of your hereſies are more lately ſprung vp then ſo. And you need not bragge of your vniuerſalitie now; for the Turke (I trow) hath a larger dominion then the Pope, and Mahometiſme is as largely ſpred as Papiſtrie, and further too. And for Europe, I hope you need not make your boaſt: the Pope had neuer leſſe iuriſdiction then he hath now, and I truſt euery day ſhal haue leſſe. But many (you ſay) in the new found countries haue been conuerted to your religion. Indeede, if you had had grace, ſuch an opportunitie being offered as the Spaniards had, you might haue wonne that ſimple people to Chriſt. But you thirſted more for their gold, then for their ſoules health: it is notoriouſly knowne to the world what extreame crueltie hath been wrought vpon that innocent people. Was that a Catholike part of the Spaniards to keepe dogs of purpoſe, to woarie and deſtroy the inhabitants, to vſe them as horſe and beaſts, to plough, to carrie, to digge? Thus by your crueltie, there were out of one ſmall Iland called Hiſpaniola, which was well peopled and inhabited, deſtroyed and rooted out in ſhort time, two millions of men and women: the ſtorie of Benzo an Italian, is abroad to be ſeene of this matter: you haue none or few of your Popiſh Catholikes in thoſe countries, but of your owne brood that haue been ſent thither. But enough of this.

Thirdly, we nothing doubt, but that our faith, the truth of the Goſpell hath bin long ſince knowne and publiſhed to the whole world.

Thoſe two conditions, which the Ieſuite putteth in, to make the Church vniuerſall, doe helpe vs very well: the firſt is, that it is not neceſſarie, that all countries wholly ſhould profeſſe the Chriſtian faith; but it sufficeth if there be some of the Church in euery countrie. The second, it is not requisite, that this vniuersalitie of the Church should be all at one time; but if it be dispersed and spread in diuers ages, one countrie to be ioyned to the Church after another, it is enough.

Now keeping these two conditions, we shall easily proue our Church to be vniuersall: for there are no countries in Europe and few in the whole world, wherein there are not some of our faith, namely, that abhorre worshipping of images, doe onely hope to be saued by faith in Christ without merits, and beleeue in the rest, as wee doe. And againe, taking one age after another, wee shall easily make it good, that our faith at times hath spred it selfe ouer the whole world.

Now let vs set to the seale of this our answere, the testimonie of the holy Martyrs.

Pag.1656.2.40 Blessed Philpot first denieth that vniuersalitie, vnlesse it be ioyned with veritie, is a sufficient note of the Church, Fox pag. 1656. For the Church of God hath not for the most part the greatest multitude, for it is the broad way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that finde it; so Richard Wood-

Secondly, Master Philpot denieth that vniuersalitie is a note of the Romish Church: for the faith which that Sea now maintaineth, hath not consent of all nations, neither at that time had: for the Greeke Church, and a good part of Christendome beside, neuer receiued their seruice in an vnknowne tongue, neither yet your Transubstantiation, your receiuing alone, your purgatorie, your images: so Roger Pag.1851.1.10 Holland martyr, pag. 2040. col. 2.

Thirdly, saith Master Philpot, our Church is rather to be counted vniuersall, though it were but in tenne persons, because it agreeth with the faith which the Apostles vniuersally did plant: for Christs Church is not so much called Catholike, because it is vniuersally spred ouer all nations, for so it was Pag.1657.2.16 & p.1656.2.91 not in the Apostles time, but because the doctrine which they had receiued of Christ, was perfect, and appointed to be preached to all the world. So saith Augustine, Ecclesia ideo dicitur Catholica, quia vniuersaliter perfecta est, & in nullo claudicat: The Church is called Catholike, because the doctrine thereof is vniuersally perfect, and faileth not in any point, lib. de Genes. cap. 1.

Now further, if vniuersalitie, and multitude, were a note of the true Church: other Churches, which exceed in largenesse the Papall iurisdiction will lay claime to it, before the Romanists: first, In the East, the Grecians, Armenians and Syrians, and other nations professing Christianitie, in the Northerne and Easterne countries, doe farre in number exceed the Pope-catholikes: the Empire onely of the king of Muscouia doth extend toward the East, almost to the kingdome of Persia. Secondly, in Villamont lib.2.cap.14. * Præf. in Anaph. Basilij. Africa the kingdome of the Abyssines, who are also (as * Masius thinketh) the Cophites and Iacobites containeth more then fourtie kingdomes.

Thirdly, concerning the name Catholike and vniuersall, it cannot bee peculiar to the Romane Church, which should be but one particular Church, and a part of the Catholike Church, if it were a true Church: the Catholike Church is that which is dispersed ouer all the world, and in all nations, though not at one & the same time, some haue bin found belonging to this true Catholike Church.

Harm.sect.10. p.307. Thus the Protestants of Heluetia, in the latter confession, chap. 17. There is but one Church which wee therefore call Catholike, because it is vniuersall, spread abroad through all the parts and quarters of the world, and reacheth vnto all times, and is not limited within the compasse either of time or place. Bohe-

Sect.10.p.317. mia, chap. 8. This is to be thought of any Christian fellowship, whether it be great or small, that it selfe alone is not the holy Catholike Church, but only one part thereof, as the Apostle writeth of the Church of Corinth, 1. epist. chap. 12. Ye are the body of Christ and members of him euery one for his part. English

Sect.10. p.321. confess. art. 4. We beleeue that there is one Church of God, and that the same is not shut vp (as in times past among the Iewes) in some one corner or kingdome, but that it is Catholike and vniuersall, dispersed

Harm.sect.19. p.596. through the whole world. Saxonie in conclus. We desire that the whole true Church of God, that is the faithfull and learned, wheresoeuer they are, may vnderstand what we say, who no doubt will be witnesses with vs; that this doctrine is the consent of the true Catholike Church of God.

Walden. doctrin. fid. tom. 1. lib. 2. cap. 19. Hierarch. Eccles. lib. 8. c. 3. Fourthly, and that the Romane and Catholike Church are not all one: some of their owne writers confesse, as Waldensis affirmeth: Errare posse particularem, &c. that a particular Church may erre: as for example, the Africane and Romane Church. Pighius saith, Quis per Romanam vnquam intellexit vniuersalem ecclesiam: Who by the Romane euer vnderstood the vniuersall, that is, the Catholike Church.

The third Note, of succession.

20. Error. THey make great boast of the long and perpetuall succession of their Popes from the Apostles for the space of these fifteene hundred yeeres and more: condemning all Churches which cannot shew the like order of succession, Bellarm. cap. 8. Rhemist. annot. in Ephes. vers. 13. And further, saith Bellarmine, there are two things requisite in lawfull Pastors and Bishops, succession, and ordination: for first they must succeed either immediatly some Apostle, as Clement did Peter; or some consecrated by the Apostles, as Ignatius succeeded Euodius, whom Peter made a Bishop; or must bee consecrated by him that hath the Apostolike authoritie: but such succession, you can shew none in your Church, either from Apostle, or Apostolike men.

Secondly, ordination is requisite in a lawfull Bishop, that hee bee ordained of three Bishops, which were ordained of others, and they of others before them, till they come to the Apostles: thus Iames was ordained Biſhop of Ieruſalem by Peter, Iames and Iohn: Anacletus epiſt. 2. according to the firſt canon of the Apoſtles: neither can you ſhew ſuch ordination of your Biſhops: Ergo, you haue no true Paſtors, nor lawfull Biſhops, and ſo conſequently no Church, Bellar. cap. 8.

Anſw. Firſt, as touching ordination, then concerning ſucceſſion. 1. That there ought to be in euery Church a comely ordination and conſecration of the Biſhops, Paſtors, and Miniſters, and that according to the example and rule of the Apoſtles, wee denie not; and ſuch wee doubt not, but our Church hath. But ſuch ordination, as the Ieſuite requireth, is not neceſſarie, that euery lawfull Biſhop muſt proue his ordination by three other ſucceſſiuely from the Apoſtles time: as thus it is ſhewed. Firſt, if you will credit S. Hierome, he ſaith, Olim idem erat presbyter & epiſcopus: In the beginning a Biſhop and Prieſt were all one: and before that ſchiſmes entered into the Church, communi presbyterorum concilio eccleſiæ gubernabantur, the Churches were gouerned in common by the whole presbyterie, &c. Which ſentence of his is allowed in your owne canons, Decret par. 1. diſt. 95. cap. 5. If it be thus, that this diſtinction of Biſhops and Prieſts was not brought in in the Apoſtles time, but afterwards, then can no ſuch ordination be ſhewed from the Apoſtles time. Secondly, notwithſtanding the Canon which goeth vnder the name of the Apoſtles, it ſeemeth the practiſe of the Apoſtles, and of the Church was otherwiſe a long time: for Timothie, whom you hold to haue bin a Biſhop, was ordained by the impoſition of the hands of the whole presbyterie or eldership, which was not the aſſemblie of Biſhops onely, as Bellarmine would expound it, but of other paſtors alſo, as Hierome doth interpret it, epiſt. ad Euagrium: and the Rhemiſts alſo in the ſame ſenſe tranſlate it, the prieſthood, and in their annotations ſhew the ancient practiſe of the Church agreeable to this place of S. Paul, when as the reſt of the prieſthood lay on their hands together with the Biſhop. And your owne Canons to this purpoſe approue the ſentence of S. Hierome: Senatum Romani habebant, cuius conſilio cuncta agebant, & nos habemus ſenatum noſtrum cœtum presbyterorum: The Romanes had their Senate, by whoſe counſell they did all things, and we haue our Senate the company of Presbyters, Decret part. 2. cauſ. 16. cap. 7. And S. Ambroſe thus writeth plainly: Non per omnia conueniunt ſcripta Apoſtoli ordinationi, quæ nunc eſt in eccleſia: The writings of the Apoſtle doe not in euery point anſwere the ordination now vſed in the Church, in 4. ad Epheſ. How then is the Ieſuite able to proue their manner of ordination from the Apoſtles time? The practiſe alſo of their owne Church is contrary: as Decr. par. 1. d. 65. cap. 2. Martinus thus decreeth: That at the ordination of a Biſhop, adeſſe oportet omnes, qui ſunt in prouincia ſacerdotes, all the other Biſhops of the prouince muſt bee preſent, whom the Metropolitane muſt ſummon by his letters: and if all come together it is well; but if this cannot be, yet moſt of them muſt come: but they that cannot come, muſt bee preſent by their letters, that ſo the Biſhop may be ordained, omnium facto conſenſu, by a generall conſent of all. And then he concludeth thus: Si aliter factum fuerit, &c. But if it be done otherwiſe, then I haue preſcribed, ſuch ordination is of no force. Likewiſe, diſtin. 66. 1. Anicetus: Archiepiſcopus ab omnibus ſuæ prouinciæ Epiſcopis ordinetur: An Archbiſhop muſt be ordained of all the Biſhops in the prouince, &c. By theſe Canons a preſence of more then three Biſhops is required. Thirdly, whereas the Ieſuite ſaith, that Iames after this manner was conſecrated by three, Peter, Iames and Iohn, out of Anacletus, hee ſpeaketh he knoweth not what, & is too much confident vpō his counterfeit Anacletus: for this Iames the Apoſtle named in the 2. to the Galathians with Peter and Iohn, is the ſame which is held to haue bin Biſhop of Ieruſalem: for the other Iames was ſlaine long before by Herod, Act. 12. and this the Ieſuit elſewhere confeſſeth, lib. 1. de Rom. pontifice cap. 18. but now he bringeth in a third Iames to be Biſhop of Ieruſalem. And if Iames muſt needs be ordained by three, how commeth it to paſſe, that S. Peter, againſt the Canon of the Apoſtles, himſelfe alone appointed Clement his ſucceſſor, ſaying thus, Clementem hunc Epiſcopum vobis ordino? I ordaine Clement your Biſhop? Decr. par. 2. cauſ. 8. quæſt. 1. cap. 2. If it be anſwered, Peter was an Apoſtle, and more then a Biſhop, and therefore might ordaine alone; why then did he not as well alone ordaine Iames Biſhop of Ieruſalem? vnleſſe you will ſay, that it was the chiefe biſhopricke, and therefore required the preſence of more Apoſtles. This vnleſſe you will ſay, you can ſhew no reaſon of Peters ſole ordaining Clement.

1.Tim.4.14.

Fourthly, whereas Bellarmine obiecteth, that as in the old law the Prieſthood went by carnall generation and lineall deſcent from Aaron; ſo in the new it muſt bee deriued by ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles. Wee anſwere: firſt, that our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles could ſhew no lineall deſcent from Aaron, neither had their ordination from his ſucceſſors; and yet were the true paſtors of the Church. Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt began a new Prieſthood after the order of Melchiſedech, and therefore hee was not tied to the lineall deſcent: but from Chriſt and his Apoſtles a ſucceſſion muſt now neceſſarily be ſhewed. Contra. To grant this difference for this time, though indeed Chriſt came not to diſſolue Moſes law, but to fulfill it; yet this we ſay further, that both before Chriſt there were true Paſtors and Prophets, which were not ordained by the Prieſts of Aaron; and ſince Chriſt, that receiued not their ordination ſucceſſiuely from the Apoſtles. Firſt in the old law, when the ordinarie Prieſthood was corrupted, God raiſed vp Prophets from other tribes, that receiued not from the Prieſts their ordination and allowance; ſuch an one was Amos, who was among the heardſmen, and as Hierome ſaith, Ruborum moras diſtringens ſubito propheta effectus: was made a Prophet as hee gathered wild blackberries. After the ſame manner, in the corrupt times of the Goſpell, the Lord hath raiſed vp faithfull Miniſters to his Church, that could ſhew no ſucceſſion from the degenerated Clergie.

Ad Heliodor.

Clergie. Againe, ſince our Sauiour Chriſt S. Paul was appointed an Apoſtle, who had not his ordination from the other Apoſtles, but was immediately called by Chriſt: yet the Ieſuite telleth vs that he was ordained of the other Apoſtles, and quoteth Act. 9. Act. 13. Contra. 1. Act. 9. 17. Ananias layeth his hands vpon Saul to receiue his ſight and to baptize him, but not to make him an Apoſtle: for Ananias himſelfe was but a Diſciple, no Apoſtle; how then could he ordaine an Apoſtle? Secondly, Act. 13. 3. The Prophets at Antioch named in the firſt verſe laid hands vpon Saul and Barnabas, not thereby giuing them ordination of Apoſtles, but ſeparating and ſanctifying them for that eſpeciall worke: for if this impoſition were an ordination, and that office alſo by Ananias, by this reaſon he ſhould be twice ordained: and againe here were none but Prophets at Antioch, no Apoſtles; how then could they ordaine Apoſtles? Thirdly, if S. Paul were ordained by the Apoſtles, then he himſelfe was no Apoſtle, for the Apoſtles had no authority to make new Apoſtles, but all Apoſtles were immediately deſigned from God. Fourthly, the Apoſtle himſelfe ſaith, he was no Apoſtle of men, or by men, but by Ieſus Chriſt, Galath. 1. 1. And againe he did not communicate with fleſh and blood, neither went vp to the other Apoſtles, but after three yeeres, verſ. 16. 17. immediately after his calling from heauen preaching Chriſt. Here is no ordination from the Apoſtles, hee was acknowledged by them, and receiued into the number of the Apoſtles, but not ordained.

Act. 13. 3.

Galath. 1. 1.

If it be anſwered, that this example of S. Paul was extraordinarie, but now in the Church an ordination ſucceſſiuely from the Apoſtles muſt be ſhewed:

We reply againe, that we alleage not this example, as though we did expect the like extraordinary calling now, or refuſe ordination deriued from the Apoſtles, but to this end, that if S. Paul were made an Apoſtle, without the ordination of the lawfull Apoſtles; much more may the Lord raiſe vp new Paſtors to his Church without ordination from the vſurpers of the Apoſtles. Secondly, wee alſo hold that an ordination from the Apoſtles, is alwaies neceſſarie in the Church, but not ſuch as they meane by locall ſucceſſion, and outward tradition: but a lawfull conſecrating and ordaining of Paſtors and miniſters by the authority of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, according to the word of God committed to the faithfull diſpenſers in euery true Church and congregation of Chriſt; which ordination our Church hath. As for their ſuperſtitious ordination, wee refuſe it as ſuperfluous and vnneceſſarie: there may bee lawfull Biſhops and Paſtors without it, as there were Prophets in the Law not of Aaron: yea and much more, for the Prieſthood of Aaron was of Gods inſtitution, ſo is not your Popiſh conſecration: And Saint Hierome here ſaith with vs, Non facit Eccleſiaſtica dignitas Chriſtianum: The Eccleſiaſticall dignitie maketh not a Chriſtian, as he ſheweth by the example of Amos: and thus much concerning ordination. Now in the next place of Bellarmines obiection for ſucceſſion.

We anſwere: firſt, they cannot ſhew ſuch an entire and perpetuall ſucceſſion, without any interruption, or diſcontinuance for ſo many yeers: for ſometime there were two, ſomtime three Popes together: and this ſchiſme continued 29. yeeres, till the Councell of Conſtance, where three Popes were depoſed at once, Benedict. 13. the Spaniſh Pope, Gregorie 12. the French Pope, and Iohn 23. the Italian Pope. Beſide there are many other doubts in their ſucceſſion: Firſt, whether Peter were Biſhop of Rome or not, whereof more ſhall be ſaid afterward in the controuerſie of the Biſhop of Rome: and your owne Canons affirme, that ambo Eccleſiam Romanam conſecrarunt: both Peter and Paul did conſecrate the Romane Church; you muſt ſhew then a ſucceſſion from both. Secondly, it is vncertaine who ſucceded Peter; your decrees hold, that he ordained Clement, as wee haue ſeene before: others affirme that Linus was primus poſt Petrum Epiſcopus, the firſt Biſhop after Peter, as Dorotheus, Euſeb. lib. 3. c. 4. Hieron in catalog. &c. How then can you deriue your ſucceſſion from Peter? Thirdly your ſucceſſion hath been interrupted and broken off, as when Pope Ioane ſtept into the Papall chaire, and a woman managed the affaires of your Church, ſay alſo that ſhe was S. Peters ſucceſſor; ſo then they themſelues cannot ſhew that ſucceſſion, which they boaſt of.

Decr. par. 1. d. 22. cap. 2. Anacletus.

2 If ſucceſſion be ſo ſure a note of the Church, it is found alſo in other Churches beſides, as in Conſtantinople where hath been a perpetuall ſucceſſion (as Nicephorus ſaith) from S. Andrew, and where Ieremiah is at this day Patriarch, at Alexandria from S. Marke, where Melitius alſo hath at this time his Patriarchall ſeate: in other Churches alſo of Grecia, they haue yet their Metropolitanes; as at Theſſalonica, where Gabriel now ſitteth, at Epheſus alſo and Corinth; as it may appeare by theſe reuerend Patriarches and metropolitanes authentike letters directed vnto our Churches here in the Weſt, in the yeere 1593. in the behalfe of Iacomo Milaita, a Grecian of Pathmos, who collecteth for his ranſome. Other Churches therefore wee ſee may alleage ſucceſſion, as well as the Church of Rome.

The Ieſuite here is driuen to his ſhifts, and hath nothing to ſay, but this: that the argument followeth negatiuely, that where there is no ſucceſſion, there is no Church: not affirmatiuely, that where any ſucceſſion can be ſhewed, there ſtraightwaies it ſhould follow there is a true Church: So by the Ieſuites owne confeſſion he hath made but a bad argument for the Church of Rome: wee haue a perpetuall ſucceſſion of Popes from the Apoſtles time: Ergo, we are the Church. It followeth not, ſaith the Ieſuite: we grant it. Why then a little before did hee call it inſolubile argumentum, an inſoluble and vnanſwerable argument?

3 Thirdly, we ſay, that a ſucceſſion of perſons in the ſame place, without ſucceſſion of doctrine, which they cannot ſhew, is nothing worth. A ſucceſſion of the Apoſtolike faith and doctrine proueth a continuance of Paſtors and teachers, and not contrariwiſe. We haue the Apoſtolike faith, and therefore wee doubt not but that there haue beene continually in the Church faithfull teachers, by whom that doctrine hath beene preſerued and kept: though they were not famous, nor carried a glorious ſhew in the world. For that outward ſucceſſion is not neceſſarie, neither ſo much to bee ſtoode vpon. Auguſtine when he had alleaged ſucceſſion againſt heretikes, concluded thus: Quanquam non tantum nos de iſtis documentis praeſumamus, quam de Scripturis ſanctis: although (ſaith he) wee preſume not ſo much vpon theſe documents as of holy Scripture.

Epiſt. 165.

Wherefore briefly to ioyne iſſue with them: firſt we ſay that they themſelues can ſhew no ſuch ſucceſſion in place from S. Peter, as they pretend, as we haue ſhewed before. Secondly, though they did ſucceede in place, yet not ſucceeding in faith and holineſſe, it is nothing: as Symmachus your owne Biſhop ſaith, thus Petrus haereditatem innocentiae tranſmiſit ad poſteros: that S. Peter did leaue to his ſucceſſors the inheritance of his innocencie: decr. p.1. diſt.40.c.1. Therefore hauing left his innocencie, they haue left the ſucceſſion. Thirdly, whereas diuers of the Fathers commend the ſucceſſion of that Sea from the Apoſtles, it was for that they kept alſo the Apoſtolike faith: as decr. p.2. cauſ.24.qu.1.c.25. Hierome thus writeth to Damaſus, Petri & fidem & ſedem tenes: You hold both the ſeate and faith of Peter. Fourthly, a ſucceſſion in doctrine is ſufficient to proue a Church, though in reſpect of the time and place, the ſucceſſion bee interrupted: ſo the Apoſtle ſaith: Cui ſeruio a progenitoribus: whom I doe ſerue from my progenitors, meaning Abraham, Iſaack and Iacob, the firſt Fathers of the faith, for we doubt his immediate progenitors did ſauour of the leauen of the Phariſees: As the Apoſtle proueth his faith by a diſcent though interrupted from his progenitors, ſo wee ſhewe our Church, by ſucceeding the Apoſtles in doctrine.

2.Tim.1.3.

Laſtly your owne decrees do helpe vs well, decr. p.1. diſt.40.c.12. Non cathedra facit ſacerdotem, ſed ſacerdos cathedram, non locus ſanctificat hominem ſed homo locum, non omnis ſacerdos ſanctus, ſed omnis ſanctus ſacerdos: The chaire maketh not a Biſhop, but a Biſhop the chaire; the place doth not ſanctifie the man, but the man the place; euery Prieſt is not holy, but he that is holy is a Prieſt, &c. Wherefore where there is no epiſcopall chaire by ſucceſſion, holineſſe of life and ſinceritie of doctrine may erect an Apoſtolike chaire.

Here wanteth nothing but the ſeale, I meane the blood of Martyrs giuen in teſtimonie of this and other points of our faith.

Bl. Philpot thus anſwereth to the argument of ſucceſſion: that it is no infallible note of the Church; for there may be a ſucceſſion of Biſhops where is no Church, as at Antioche, Ieruſalem: But if you put to ſucceſſion of Biſhops ſucceſſion of doctrine withall, as it was in Auguſtines time when he vſed this argument againſt the Donatiſts, it is a good proofe. Obiect. Why? will you not haue the Church to be certaine? by whom then will you bee iudged? Anſwere. I denie not, but that the Church is certaine, but not neceſſarily tyed to one place longer then it abideth in the word, by which all controuerſies ought to be iudged, *ſic Philpot pag.*1825.

Bl. Bradford being preſſed with this argument, that he could not goe vpward and ſhew a ſucceſſion of Biſhops, as they could, he might make a leape downward, but vpward hee could not goe: maketh this anſwere. 1. The miniſterie of Gods word, and miniſters be an eſſentiall point: but to tranſlate this, ſaith he, to the outward glorious ſucceſſion of Biſhops, is a plaine ſubtiltie.

2. S. Stephen, Acts 7. being accuſed to teach new and falſe doctrine, goeth not vpwards to proue his faith, but beginneth at Abraham, and ſo goeth downwards till Iſaias time, and the captiuitie: from whence he maketh a great leape vntill the time he was in, which was about 400. yeeres: On this ſort can we proue our faith, and ſo can you neuer doe yours, ſic Bradford pag.1614.col.1.

Our Countrymen of Doway doe thus argue: there was a perpetuall ſucceſſion of ſpirituall gouernours in the Church during the law of nature: as from Adam to Noe, from Noe to Abraham, from Abraham to Moſes, *p.*206. ſo likewiſe, *p.19. p.*115. whereupon they inferre, that much more now ſince Chriſt, the Church hath had a perpetuall ſucceſſion.

Contra. 1. The argument followeth not, from the times of the law of nature and afterward, to the time of the Goſpell: for vntill Chriſt, a lineall deſcent was to continue, to preſerue the line of Chriſt, which lineall ſucceſſion is not now neceſſarie. 2. And euen then that genealogie of Chriſt was continued in many obſcure families, not outwardly famous and knowne in the world: ſo there hath bin alwaies ſince Chriſt, a ſucceſſion of faithfull Paſtors in the Church, though not glorious in the eye of the world, & tyed to one place. This argument then proueth not an externall locall ſucceſſion of Biſhops.

If ſucceſſion Epiſcopall were a ſure note of the Church, the Grecians and Ethiopians can ſhew a ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles, as well as the Romaniſts. 1. The Greeke Church doe ſtand vpon the perpetuall ſucceſſion of their chiefe Biſhops of Conſtantinople, euen from the Apoſtles time: and therefore, when as Pope Eugenius at the Councell of Florence, where the Patriarke of Conſtantinople died, would haue had the Grecians to elect a new Patriarke, that might there by the Pope be confirmed, they vtterly refuſed, ſaying, That their Patriarke could not bee elected out of Conſtantinople: whereby it is euident, that they ſtand vpon an entire ſucceſſion, without any dependance of the Pope. The Syrians doe alſo vrge a ſucceſſion at Antioch from S. Peter.

Surius trac.4. Concil.p.469. Villamont. voiag.lib.2. c.22.

2. The Ethiopians alſo doe depend vpon the Patriarke of Alexandria, who pleadeth a ſucceſſion from Leiturg. Aethiop. from S. Marke: and therefore they vſe after their Prince to pray for the chiefe of the Church of Alexandria.

3. The fourth Note, of Vnitie.

21. Error.

OVr aduerſaries doe ſtand much vpon Vnitie: which they thinke is the glorie of their Church: they doe embrace vnitie amongſt themſelues, and all ioyne in obedience to their head. Their vnitie alſo is ſeene, ſay they, in the wonderfull conſent of all their writers in matters of Religion: and the notable agreement and concord in the decrees of their Popes and Councels. But as for vs, and our Church, they ſay, it is full of rents, ſchiſmes and diuiſions. Bellarm. cap. 9. So alſo the Doway Tranſlate-latines, do tell vs of ſects in England, diuers from Luther, and each one from the reſt: euery meane Preacher arrogateth to be his owne Iudge, contemneth to ſtand to Luther, or Caluine, &c. whereas the ſimpleſt Catholike in the world hath the ſame faith in all points with the whole Church, &c. p.50.

Firſt, of the vnitie of their Church, and then of the vnitie of ours. Their vnitie, they ſay, is partly ſeene in their obedience, and louing ſocietie and fellowſhip, partly in their Religion and doctrine.

Firſt, for their concord and loue one toward another: we will take ſome paines, a little to decipher it. About the yeere of the Lord 900. there was pretie ſport amongſt the Popes, nine of them one after another. Stephen the ſixth abrogated all his predeceſſor Formoſus decrees: and not content with that, he tooke vp his body which was buried, and cut two fingers of his right hand off, and commanded his body to be buried againe. After him ſucceeded Pope Rhomanus, Theodorus the ſecond, Iohn the tenth, who ratified and confirmed the doings of Formoſus. After them followed Pope Sergius, who diſanulling all their acts, tooke vp againe the body of Formoſus, cut off his head, and commanded his body to be throwne into Tiber, the great riuer in Rome. Was not here great amitie and loue, thinke you, amongſt the Popes? ex Polychron.

Another notable example of their vnitie we haue in Pope Vrbanus time the 6. againſt whom ſtood vp a contrarie Pope in Fraunce named Clement: it is worth the noting, what coyle theſe two Popes kept: betweene whom many battailes were fought, many thouſands ſlaine. Pope Vrbanus beheaded fiue Cardinals together after long torments. Biſhop Aquilonenſis, becauſe he did ride no faſter, was had in ſuſpition, and ſlaine and cut in peeces by Vrbans ſouldiers, at his commandement. Behold here I pray you the vnitie of theſe Catholikes.

Theoderic. Niem. de ſchiſmat.

Wee will adioyne one other example, no longer ſince then in King Henrie the eights time. The Duke of Bourbon being the leader of the Emperours Armie, laide ſiege to Rome, and ſacked it: the Souldiers brake in vpon the Pope, which was Clement the ſeuenth being at Maſſe, ſlew diuers of the Prieſts, and one Cardinall called Sanctorum quatuor: they laid ſiege to the Caſtle of S. Angell, ſo long till the Pope yeelded himſelfe. The Souldiers dayly that lay at the ſiege, made ieſts of the Pope: ſometimes they had one riding like the Pope with a whore behind him, ſometimes he bleſſed, ſometimes he curſed; ſometimes with one voice they would call him Antichriſt. See, here is their Catholike obedience to their chiefe Biſhop. Thus much concerning their vnitie and concord in life.

Ex paralip. Abbat. Vrſp.

Let vs likewiſe take a veiw of their vnitie in doctrine. Wee heard before how Pope Stephen and Sergius aboliſhed the decrees of Formoſus: how then ſaith the Ieſuite, that the decrees of Popes doe conſent together? The Councell of Baſill, and Conſtance before that decreed, that the Pope ſhould be ſubiect to generall Councels: but this Canon was afterward reuerſed, and now generally the Papiſts hold the contrarie, that the Pope is aboue Councels.

Let vs ſee the conſent of their writers: Bellarmin. lib. 1. de verbo, cap. 12. maintaineth againſt Lyranus, Driedo, Genebrard, and others, that Iudith was in Manaſſes time. Againſt Alphonſus de Caſtro, that heretikes are no members of the Church. Lib. 3. de eccleſ. ca. 4. Againſt Iohannes de turre cremata, that faith is not neceſſarie to make one a member of the Church. Lib. 3. de Eccleſ. cap. 10. And euery where the Ieſuite taketh great libertie to confute and controll other his fellow Papiſts: belike hauing found out ſome ſtarting holes that they either knew not, or were aſhamed to creepe into, as the Ieſuite doth: See more of their diſſentions in opinion, Tetraſtyl. Papiſt. pillar 4.

But (ſaith he) wee denie not, that wee haue diſſentions, but they are not in materiall points, but in ſuch things as appertaine not to faith. I maruell he bluſheth not thus to ſay, himſelfe knowing the contrarie. Is it* not a ſubſtantiall point and belonging to faith, to know which bookes are canonicall Scripture, which are not? but in this queſtion they doe much diſagree. Caietanus the Cardinall ſaith, that we muſt acknowledge no Scripture, but that which was either written or approued by the Apoſtles. But Catharinus a Papiſt doth reiect that opinion. Hugo Cardinalis, Arias Montanus, doe hold no bookes of the old Teſtament to be Canonicall, which are written only in Greeke: the Papiſts now generally hold the contrarie: Ex Whitach. 1. contr. 1. qu. cap. 6. Bellarmine ſaith, that all thoſe opinions which the Church holdeth, as articles or precepts of faith, were deliuered by the Apoſtles: and that the Church muſt not now ſeeke for new reuelations, but content her ſelfe with the Apoſtolike traditions and doctrine. de Scriptur. lib. 4. c. 9. Out of the which words it doth neceſſarily follow, that the Church is not now to found any new article of faith: but this generally is denied by the Papiſts: and Stapleton an Engliſh Papiſt, is not aſhamed to ſay, that the Church may adde more bookes to the Canonicall Scripture, by her abſolute authoritie.

* See the exception to this place anſwered: Retect. pag. 69.

Further, to beleeue that the virgin Mary was without ſinne, yea conceiued without originall ſinne, is now amongſt the Papiſts receiued for an article of faith: and therefore in Paris none are admitted to be Doctors of Diuinitie, which doe not firſt confirme this article by their oth. Yet this was a great queſtion betweene the Scotiſts and Thomiſts, and a great and hot contention aroſe about this controuerſie, anno 1470. betweene the Dominicke Friers, who affirmed that ſhe was conceiued in ſinne, and the Franciſcanes, that held the contrarie. But theſe Franciſcanes had the vpper hand, and foure of the other order were condemned and burned for it at Berne: and yet for all this our aduerſaries will ſay ſtill, that they varie not in matters of faith. Thus wee haue ſeene what is to be thought of popiſh vnitie.

Caſpar. Peucer. Chro. lib. 5.

Now to anſwere briefly to their falſe accuſation, whereby they charge vs with manifold ſchiſmes and diſſentions: yea Bellarmine is not aſhamed to ſay, that an hundred ſeuerall ſects are ſprung vp amongſt vs, cap. 10. lib. 4. de Eccleſ.

1 We ſay with S. Paul, Oportet hæreſes eſſe, 1. Cor. 11. There muſt be hereſies and diuiſions in the Church. And it is a ſigne we haue the truth, when the diuell goeth about by ſchiſmes and contentions to hinder the preaching thereof. We anſwere to you, as Auguſtine did to the Pagans: Non proferant nobis quaſi concordiam ſuam: hoſtem quippe, quem patimur, illi non patiuntur: Let them not boaſt of their concord, and caſt in our teeth the diſſention of Chriſtians: the enemie aſſaulteth not them as he doth vs: Quid ibi lucri eſt, quia litigant, vel damni ſi non litigant: The diuell ſhall get nothing if they ſhould diſagree, nor loſe any thing by their agreement: for he hath ſure hold enough of them alreadie, conſenting all in Idolatrie. But amongſt Chriſtians hee laboureth to hinder the truth by diſcord, becauſe he cannot otherwiſe withdraw them from the true religion. Hearken now (O yee Papiſts) if you conſent together, it is in euill: ſo long it pleaſeth the diuell well enough: hee ſhould deſtroy his owne kingdome in ſowing diſſention amongſt you, for you fight for him. He vſeth to caſt fire brands amongſt good Chriſtians, to withſtand by this meanes the proceeding of the Goſpell.

1. Cor. 11. 19.

2 It is a great ſlaunder, that there are ſo many diuiſions amongſt vs; an hundred ſaith the Ieſuite, but he ſhall neuer proue tch. He might haue bethought himſelfe of a full hundred of ſects amongſt his owne darlings the Monkes and Friers, as maſter Fox hath truly gathered the number, pag. 260. See more Tetraſt. papiſt. 4. pil. where you ſhal find ſome hundreds of diuers opinions and diuiſions among Papiſts. And whereas Bellarmine taketh vpon him, to proue the Proteſtants guiltie of twenty ſeuerall hereſies, cap. 9. I haue reſerued the confutation thereof to another place in the treatiſe of the Pillars of Papiſtrie annexed to this booke: where in the ſecond pillar, par. 3. I haue anſwered the Ieſuites obiections of hereſie, and repaied them with fourtie hereſies, more properly incident to their Church, then his twentie are into ours.

3 Thoſe few ſchiſmes and diſſentions, which we haue (and yet too many, we muſt needs confeſſe) are not about points of faith, and articles of Religion: but concerning ſome things belonging to diſcipline and Church gouernment; which matters we denie not, but haue been ſomewhat too hotly and eagerly followed of ſome amongſt vs: but God be thanked, this contention hath not been purſued by fire or death, as the Franciſcanes did perſecute the poore Dominicks: nor yet to the pronouncing of each other heretikes, as Eugenius your Pope was condemned as an heretike in the Councell of Baſil. Some among vs indeed, aſcribe too little to Luther, Caluine, Beza, and ſuch other worthie inſtruments: but they are ſuch as are beſotted with your ſchoole Diuinitie, and dote vpon your ſchoole Diuines a little too much, which men of ſounder iudgement doe miſlike amongſt vs.

Now, that it may appeare what vnitie is in the popiſh Church, I will giue an inſtance in their head, I meane the Popes, and that out of their owne Canons.

Whereas then diuers of them haue decreed, not to tranſgreſſe the decrees of their predeceſſors, as Decret. 2. cauſ. 25. queſt. 1. cap. 7. Zozimus: Contra ſtatuta patrum condere, vel mutare aliquid, nec huius quidem ſedis poteſt authoritas: No not this Sea hath authoritie to change the decrees of the fathere. And diſt.2.cap.4.Gregor. Si ea deſtruerem, quæ anteceſſores &c. non conſtructor, ſed euerſor eſſe comprobarer: If I ſhould reuerſe what our predeceſſors haue decreed, I ſhould not be a builder vp, but a puller downe,&c. And not only the Canons of Religion but other Ciuill conſtitutions of their predeceſſors ought to be kept: quæſt.25.cap.1.Leo 4. Quod patres ſiue in ſanctis canonibus ſiue in humanis affixere legibus &c. We will not tranſgreſſe, whatſoeuer our fathers haue fixed either in the ſacred Canons or other humane lawes. Yet notwithſtanding theſe conſtitutions the Popes themſelues haue one diſſolued anothers decrees, both in ciuill and religious matters.

Concerning ciuill and outward matters: Clemens 5. reuerſeth Bonifacius 8. his Conſtitution, as touching taxes and impoſitions laid vpon the Church. Clem.lib.3.tit.17.cap.1. Ioannes 22. Extrau. tit.9.cap.1. reuerſeth the conſtitution of Clemens 5. which hee made againſt Iuſtings and Tournements. The ſame Clemens abrogateth the conſtitutions of Benedict 11. againſt the preaching Friers, Clem.lib.3.tit.7.2.1. Benedict. 11 likewiſe correcteth the decrees of Bonif. the 8. as touching the immunities of the preaching Friers, Extrau.com.lib.5.tit.7.cap.1. Bonifac. 8. reuoketh whatſoeuer Celeſtinus had decreed. Extrau. Ioann.tit.7. And thus one of them is ſtill euen with another. Bened. 11. reſtoreth the Cardinals, whom Boniface 8. had depoſed and condemned: *Extrau.commun.lib.5.tit.4. cap.1. Ioann.*22.checketh the decrees of Gregor. 10. and Boniface 8. as touching the reſeruation of benefices.

The like agreement is found amongſt them in matters of religion. *Ioann.*22. determineth againſt *Nichol.*4. that Chriſt was no begger, but had a propertie in thoſe things he had. Extrau.Ioan.tit.14. cap.4. The ſame Ioannes 22. diſſolueth the ſect of the Fraticelles confirmed by Celeſtinus: Extrau. Ioann.tit.7. The ſame Pope ratifieth the ſect of the Beguines diſſolued by Clem.5. Extrau.commun.lib.3. tit.9.cap.1.

If ſuch be the vnitie of the heads, as we haue ſeene, one of them ſtill oppoſing himſelfe againſt another, Iohn againſt Clement, Clement againſt Benedict, Benedict againſt Boniface, Boniface againſt Celeſtine, and they all againſt their predeceſſors, Zoſimus, Gregorie, Leo, &c. what ſhall wee thinke of the reſt of the bodie, if the head be thus diuided? And this is the vnitie of the Popiſh Church, which they doe ſo much bragge of.

Laſtly, let vs adde the ſeale of our doctrine: Maſter Bradford ſaith, that vnitie is no ſure note of the Church: for the idolatrous Iſraelites might haue pretended this argument for themſelues. *Brad.*pag. 1623.col.1.

Pag.1588.2.70

Maſter Latimer martyr ſaith, that a deforme diſagreement is better in the Church, ſo Chriſt be preached, then vniforme ignorance agreeing in Idolatrie, alleaging Hieromes example, whoſe tranſlation of the Bible cauſed diſſention in a Chriſtian congregation: yet Hierome ſaith, Sed ego in tali opere nec eorum inuidentiam pertimeſca, nec ſcripturæ veritatem poſcentibus denegabo: But neither I (ſaith he) will feare their enuie in ſo profitable a worke, nor yet withhold the truth of the Scripture from thoſe which deſire it. Hieron. prolog. ſup. Canonic. epiſtol. See Latimer. epiſt. ad D. Ed. Baynton, pag. 1750. col.1.

Pag 1851.1.20.

Roger Holland alſo thus teſtifieth: As for the vnitie which is in the popiſh Church, what is it elſe but treaſon, murther, poyſoning one another, idolatrie, ſuperſtition? What vnitie was there in your Church, when there was three Popes at once? where was your head of vnitie, when you had a woman Pope? Fox pag. 2040.col.2.

Harm.ſect.10. pag.311.

Concerning this note of vnitie obiected by the Papiſts, wee affirme three things: firſt, that it is no neceſſarie note of the Church: as herein the latter confeſſion of the Heluetians agreeth with vs, chap. 17. who refuſe, ſucceſſion, vnitie, antiquitie, as infallible markes of the Church: and there is more vnitie and conſent of doctrine to bee found, both in the Eaſt Churches that follow the faith of the Grecians, and in the Ethiopike Churches, where fourtie kingdomes vnder Preſter Iohn, are of the ſame faith and religion.

Sect.10.p.320.

Pag.494.

Pag.499.

Harm.ſect.17. pag.517.

Secondly, this vnitie is not neceſſarie in all ceremonies and outward rites, it is ſufficient, if there be a conſent of doctrine. Heluetia, chap.17. We may not denie but that God was in the Church planted by the Apoſtles, howſoeuer there were ſtrifes and diſſentions in it. Auſpurg: Vnto the true vnitie of the Church it is ſufficient to agree vpon the doctrine of the Goſpell, and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, neither is it neceſſarie that humane traditions, &c. ſhould be alike in all places. And againe, art.4. they thus inferre out of Auguſtine: This whole kinde of things hath free obſeruation, and Irenæus ſaith, the diſagreement of faſting doth not breake off the agreement of faith: ſo alſo Pope Gregorie in the twelfth diſtinction, inſinuateth, that ſuch diuerſitie doth not hurt the vnitie of the Church. Againe, in the latter confeſſion of Heluetia, chap.27. Becauſe there is found diuerſitie of rites in the Churches, let no man ſay therefore, that the Churches doe not agree. Socrates ſaith, It is not poſſible to ſet downe in writing all the ceremonies in Churches, which are throughout cities and countries, &c. and wee, at this day hauing diuers rites in the celebration of the Lords Supper and in certaine other things in our Churches, yet doe we not diſagree in doctrine and faith, &c. neither is the vnitie of our Church cut aſunder.

Thirdly, vnitie euen in points of doctrine the Romane Church hath not, which they ſo much boaſt of: as Eraſmus is a ſufficient witneſſe in his Annotations in 1. Cor. 7. which worke was authoriſed by Leo the 10: there he ſheweth how diuers Popes haue been contrarie in their iudgement, one to another: as Iohn 22, and Pope Nicolas, whether Chriſt had any thing proper, or onely in common, the one iudicially decreeing it, the other condemning it: Celeſtinus 3. alloweth diuorce in the caſe of hereſie. Innocentius 3. decreeth the contrarie: Pope Pelagius ordained that certaine Subdeacons of Sicilia ſhould put away their wiues, which they had lawfully married before that conſtitution: Gregory the 1. abrogateth that decree: Alexander 3. by his reſcript ſheweth, that marriage conſummate with one, and contracted with another before, was iudged to be lawfull by ſome of his predeceſſors, which Innocentius condemned as adulterous: he addeth further, that Iohn 22. was forced by the Vniuerſitie of Paris to correct his errour, that the ſoules of the wicked ſhould not bee puniſhed before the day of iudgement.

The fifth Note: Of the power of working Miracles.

22. Error.

THis they affirme both to be neceſſarie in the Church, to haue power to worke miracles, for the confirmation of the faith, when there is any extraordinarie change or innouation of religion, and that it is a ſufficient note to deſcribe the Church: for it cannot bee (ſay they) but that, whereſoeuer this power is found, there ſhould be the true Church.

And hereupon they take occaſion to extoll the miracles of their Church? beginning at the Apoſtles time, and ſo in euery age they take vpon them to ſhew, that their Church neuer wanted thoſe that were endued with this power, Bellarm. cap. 14.

We anſwere: Firſt, the gift of miracles doth no more proue that to bee the true Church where they are wrought, then they to bee holy men and elected of God, that doe them. The Magicians wrought many ſtrange things in Egypt, contending a great while with Moſes: Antichriſt ſhall come working with ſignes and wonders, 2. Theſſal. 2. Therefore this proueth not a Church. The like ſtrange wonders and miracles are to bee ſeene among the Turkes, amongſt whom their religious profeſſors doe many ſtrange things both aliue and dead: as witneſſeth Septem-caſtrenſ. de Turcor. morib. cap. 14. The like things to be done in Dania ſome 300. yeeres ſince, reporteth Saxo Grammaticus: and not long ſince in Gothia, Olaus Magnus. Wherefore miracles make no probation of a Church.

Firſt Bellarmine anſwereth, that theſe were falſe miracles, and but forged, and onely to the eye, and in outward appearance, as Antichriſt is ſaid to come with lying wonders: or elſe ſuch things as though they ſeemed ſtrange to men, yet were not ſo in their owne nature, as the fetching downe of fire from heauen, &c. which things Satan can eaſily performe. Wee replie, firſt they are called lying wonders, not that they are done in ſhew onely, and haue no ſuch thing indeed, but becauſe they are wrought to confirme lies, and diſcredit the truth. Secondly, your miracles are very like to bee ſuch, both wrought by the power of the diuell, and ſome of them but iugling feats of couſoners. Thirdly, yet a wicked man may haue power to worke miracles, not in ſhew, but verily and indeed, as to caſt out diuels, and to doe it in the name and power of Chriſt; and yet be none of Chriſts Diſciples, Mat. 7.22. And it is confeſſed in your owne Decrees, par. 2. cauſ. 1. queſt. 1. that Magi Pharaonis faciebant ſimilia Moyſi, that Pharaoh his Magicians did like things to Moſes. And a writer of your owne faith: Miracula Deo & diabolo, Chriſto & Antichriſto communia: That miracles are common to God and the diuell, to Chriſt and Antichriſt, Eſpenc. in 2. Timoth. p. 93. The miracles then of Chriſt and Antichriſt, of the true and falſe Prophet differ not onely or chiefly herein, that the one are in truth, the other in ſhew: but firſt in reſpect of the power; ſecondly, of the end: for the Saints of God worke by his power; the other by the power of Satan, whom God doth oftentimes reſtraine, as the Magicians were not able to doe the like, when Moſes turned the duſt into lice, Exod. 8.19. And therefore Nicodemus ſaith to Chriſt, Ioh. 3.2. No man can doe theſe workes, that is, ſuch great works, as thou doeſt, vnleſſe God were with him. Secondly, Chriſt and his Apoſtles by their miracles ſought the glorie of God, and the good of men, in conuerting of their ſoules, and healing of their bodies: ſo Satan worketh not, but onely to deceiue men, and confirme lies, as Origen ſheweth, lib. 1. cont. Celſum. And ſuch are moſt of Popiſh miracles, deuiſed for the maintenance of Idolatrie and ſuperſtitious worſhip.

Secondly, Bellarmine bringeth in this diſtinction, that miracles doe demonſtrate the Church, not quoad euidentiam & certitudinem rei, in reſpect of the euidence or certainty of the thing, ſed quoad euidentiam credibilitatis, but doe ſhew onely the certaintie of credibility: His meaning is, that by miracles we may geſſe by all likelihood, which is the Church, but not certainly know it. Bellarm. lib. 4. de Eccleſ. cap. 14.

Anſw. 1. Wee haue then the Ieſuites owne confeſſion, that the power of miracles is no certaine, but a coniecturall note of the Church: what marke or note then call you that, whereby a thing cannot certainly bee diſcerned? 2. Wee ſay, that many times wee cannot ſo much as coniecture of the Church by miracles, which may be done without the Church, as the miracles which Antichriſt ſhall worke.

Heare alſo your owne authority Decr. par. 2. cauſ. 1. queſt. 1. cap. 56. Praeter vnitatem, & qui facit miracula nihil eſt: in vnitate erat populus Iſrael & non faciebat miracula; praeter vnitatem erant Magi Pharaonis & faciebant ſimilia Moyſi: Hee that worketh miracles without the vnitie of the Church, doth nothing: the Iſraelites were in the vnitie of the Church, and did no miracles; the Magicians of Pharao were out of the Church, and yet did like things to Moſes: Ergo, true miracles ſuch as Moſes wrought, may bee done without the Church, and ſo conſequently they proue not the Church.

Secondly, concerning your miracles we anſwere, that they are either fables, and old wiues tales, and no credit to be giuen vnto them; or elſe they are one of thoſe two ſorts, whereof Auguſtine ſpeaketh: Remoueantur iſta vel mendacia fallacium hominum, vel portenta mendacium ſpirituum: Away with thoſe miracles, which are either couſening trickes of deceitfull men, or wonders of lying ſpirits.

De vnitat. Eccleſ.cap. 26.

First, Monkiſh fables are not a whit daintie with our Romiſh Catholikes, their Legends are full of them: As that of Berinus, how being in the middeſt of the ſea ſailing into France, hauing forgotten ſomewhat at home, went backe walking vpon the ſea, and came to them againe, hauing not one thred of his garment wet. Many like tales are reported of Aldelmus Abbot of Malmeſburie, as how hee cauſed an infant at Rome of nine daies old to ſpeake, to cleere Sergius the Pope, who was thought to be his father: how hee drew along a greate piece of timber, that went to the making of the Church at Malmesbury. Such good ſtuffe alſo they haue of Iohn of Beuerlie, of Egwine Abbot of Eueſham, who when he had locked his feet in fetters, and caſt the key into the ſea, afterward a fiſh brought the key againe into the ſhip where he was ſailing. Read Maſter Fox, pag. 125. All theſe and a thouſand more are but Monkiſh fables and dreames, whatſoeuer the Ieſuite maketh of them. And what elſe is that fabulous diſcourſe of theirs of the liues of the Saints, which they call, Legenda aurea, the golden Legend, but a dunghill of lies? containing ſuch monſtrous fictions and Monkiſh tales, as the better ſort amongſt them are aſhamed of. Hereof long agoe complained Petrus Abbot Cluniacenſis lib. 5. epiſt. 29. about ſome foure hundred yeeres ſince, Noſti quantum me pigeant falſa in eccleſia dei Cantica, &c. You know how much theſe lying ſongs in the Church doe grieue me, &c. and hee maketh mention of one ſonnet or hymne of Benedict, containing no leſſe then 24. lies. Lindanus a Popiſh writer maketh mention in his 3. booke, cap. 7. de interpretandis Scripturis, of an ancient complaint of one Agobertus Biſhop of Lions, who ſaid he had corrected the Antiphonarie, amputatis, quæ ſuperflua, leuia, falſa, blaſphema, phantaſtica multa videbantur, cutting off many things that ſeemed ſuperfluous, light, falſe, blaſphemous, phantaſticall: which Biſhop (ſaith Lindane) if hee were now aliue to ſee our Miſſals and Antiphonaries, Deum immortalem, quo ea pingeret nomine? Good Lord (ſaith he) how would he call them? And yet our Papiſts now a daies would make vs beleeue, that all in the Legend is as true as the Goſpell.

What account is to be made of the Popes Legends.

In fine libri ſecund. de corrupt. artib.

I will adde hereunto the teſtimony of Ludouicus Viues, of their Legend: Quàm indigna diuis & hominibus ſanctorum hiſtoria, quam neſcio cur auream Legendam appellent, cum ſcripta ſit ab homine ferrei oris, plumbei cordis: How vnworthie both God and men is the ſtorie of the Saints, which I ſee no reaſon why it ſhould be called the golden Legend, being written by one that had an iron, that is, impudent face, and a leaden and lumpiſh heart, &c. Let any reaſonable man now iudge, what wee may thinke of the miracles of their Saints.

Secondly, beſide that moſt of their miracles are forged: they all tend to an vngodly end, to eſtabliſh their groſſe ſuperſtitions; as to proue the reall preſence, to terrifie men with Purgatorie fire, to bring in adoration of Saints, and the worſhipping of Images, with ſuch like, as one example I will alleage in ſtead of many. The ſecond Nicen Councell which decreed moſt erroneouſly, that Images ſhould be worſhipped, bringeth in many moſt vnſauourie tales and fables, to ratifie this their humane deuice: as in the fourth action of that Synode, a narration is brought in, how a certaine Monke was tempted with a ſpirit of vncleanneſſe, who appearing vnto him ſaid; if thou wilt be rid of me, doe not worſhip this Image, which was the picture of the Virgin. Is it not like now, may any man thinke, that the diuell will diſſwade men from Idolatrie? or if there bee any matter of truth in this tale, it may bee applied againſt them, that therefore the diuell was ſent to vexe this Monke, becauſe hee was an Idoll worſhipper, and ſo ſoone as hee began to forſake his Idolatrie, the vncleane ſpirit alſo did forſake him.

The like fiction in the ſame place is brought in of a certaine image of Chriſt, which being in a certaine Chriſtians houſe, was forgotten of him when he left the houſe, and a Iew ſucceeding in the habitation, hauing inuited other Iewes to dinner, one of them eſpied the Image in dinner while, which the other Iew affirmed he had not ſeene before: then they ran vpon the Image all at once, and pierced it in the ſide, out of the which iſſued ſuch a ſtreame of blood, that they filled an hydria, that is, a great water-pot with it: and then they tooke counſell, to ſee whether there were any ſuch vertue in the blood, to ſprinkle ſicke folkes therewith, and many recouered thereby. The metropolitane of the place hearing hereof, tooke the blood, and ſent it in glaſſe veſſels into Aſia, Europe, Africa, requiring them by letters to keepe the fifth day before the Ides of Nouember with a great ſolemnitie yeerely, as they kept the Natiuitie, in remembrance of this miracle.

How many notable lyes are here couched together? Firſt, that the Chriſtian ſhould be ſo careleſſe to leaue ſuch a monument behind him, which he daily worſhipped. Secondly, that the Iew hauing it alwaies in his eye ſhould neuer ſee it, till it was ſpied by his gueſts. Thirdly, that blood ſhould come out of a piece of wood. Fourthly, that ſuch abundance to fill a water-pot of two or three firkins, ſuch as the Iewes uſed for their purification, as wee reade, Iohn 2. ſuch ſtore of blood as iſſued not out of Chriſts owne ſide vpon the Croſſe. Fifthly, that the Iewes nothing aſtoniſhed at the ſtrangeneſſe thereof, ſhould ſeeke to worke miracles by it. Sixthly, that of this blood ſhould be ſent to all parts of the world: whereas Chriſt gaue no charge to his Apoſtles to gather his blood and ſaue it, that fell from him vpon the Croſſe; but onely to drinke his blood ſpiritually in the Sacrament. Seuenthly, that an holy day ſhould be erected vpon this occaſion, which the Church of Rome it ſelfe, the mother of ſuperſtition, obſerueth not, nor yet (I thinke) any Church beſide.

Is not here goodly ſtuffe, to proue the adoration of Images by? But leſt any man ſhould thinke, that of my ſelfe I charge this Councell with forgerie, I will produce the teſtimonie of a late Pope Adrian the 6. who thus writeth in the beginning of the ſixth Quodlibet: Græci certe in ſua illa Iconomachia ſcriptis admodum incertis & fabuloſis rem egerunt, dæmonum ſpectris, & muliebribus ſomnijs parum verecunde abutentes: The Grecians fighting for Images, doe proue their matter by fabulous and vncertaine writings; abuſing the illuſions of diuels, and womens dreames without all ſhamefaſtneſſe, vt legere eſt in ſynodo Nycena. 2. act. 4. 5. as is to be ſeene (ſaith he) in the ſecond Nycene ſynode, the 4. and 5. action. Thus we ſee, that both our aduerſaries doe abound with many forged and lying miracles, and the ſame brought in to eſtabliſh ſuperſtitions and damnable doctrines.

The like fabulous tales they haue of S. Bernard, who in one day, as Bellarmine is not aſhamed to report out of Gotfridus, did giue ſight to an eleuen blinde, did heale tenne maimed perſons, and 18. more that were lame, and all in one day: and (ſaith the Ieſuite) he wrought ſo many miracles beſide, as it is hard to number them, Bellarm. cap. 14. Thus if we will beleeue the Ieſuite, Bernard wrought more miracles, then either Chriſt or his Apoſtles: but whether is it more reaſonable to credit Bellarmine for this matter, or Bernard himſelfe? for he ſaith plainly, that he could worke no miracles, as Serm. de Benedict. Licet non habeamus noſtra, conſolatio nobis magna eſſe debent patroni noſtri miracula: Although we haue no miracles of our owne, yet our patrones miracles (hee meaneth Benedict) are our comfort. And againe, Serm. 1. in die aſcenſion. Quis nunc dæmonia eijcit, linguis loquitur, &c. Who now adaies caſteth out diuels, ſpeaketh with tongues, &c. diuels are caſt out, when ſinnes are rooted out of the heart, &c. Is not this then hereticall forgerie, to faine ſo many miracles of a man, that denieth himſelfe that he hath any ſuch power?

In like manner, in the life of Damaſcene they forge, that his hand being cut off by the Saracenes for his profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, he praying before the image of the virgine Marie, and ſhewing his hand cut off, fell aſleepe, and awaking, found his hand ioyned to his arme againe, onely a circle or ſeame of blood appearing: and yet the ſaid Damaſcene confeſſeth of himſelfe, ἡμεῖς δὲ μὴ δὲ τὸ τῶν σημείων, &c. δεξάμενοι χάρισμα: We neither haue receiued the gift of miracles, neither, &c.

Damaſcen. lib. 1. de fid. orthod. cap. 3.

Many ſuch fabulous miracles the Popiſh hiſtories are peſtred with: as how the virgine Marie came from heauen to viſite Fulbert when he was ſicke, and gaue him her breaſts to ſucke: How an image of the Crucifix ſpake to *S. Fraunci*s, that he had a rude Lambe, which vſed to goe to Maſſe, and kneele downe at the eleuation: that Antonie of Padua conuerted an heretike by making his horſe adore the hoaſt: That a certaine woman, to make her Bees fruitfull, put a conſecrated hoaſt into the Hiue, and after a certaine time, ſhe taking of it vp, found that the Bees had built a Chappell with windowes, and doores, and an altar, and had laid the hoaſt vpon the altar, and ſung the canonicall Hymnes vnto it. Theſe tales are iuſtified by their moderne authors: So they ſay, that S. Patrike made a ſtolne ſheepe to bleate in the belly of him that had eaten it: and that Bede preached among ſtones, and they anſwered to his prayer, Amen venerable Bede: and to fill vp the meaſure of lying iniquitie, Turſelline telleth vs, that the Ladies houſe at Lauretto in Italy, was the ſame wherein ſhe was borne, and was tranſlated by the Angels out of Galilie into Dalmatia two thouſand miles, ann. 1291. and from thence within the ſpace of foure yeeres, was remoued by the Angels into Picenum, to the Wood of Lauretto, at the comming whereof, all the trees of the Forreſt bowed themſelues, and ſo continued, till they were cut downe, or fell of them ſelues. Theſe ridiculous forgeries are vnſauourie vnto the grauer and more modeſt ſort of Papiſts. Eſpenceus ſaith, no Stable is ſo full of dung, as their Legends are full of fables: And Canus ſaith, To this day I could neuer yet ſee one ſtorie that I could allow.

Thirdly, it is out of doubt, that ſome of them were well practiſed with the diuell, and through his helpe could doe much. Wee will begin with Dunſtane, who cauſed a Roode to ſpeake, which was more ſtrange, then that of Balaams aſſe: for the aſſe had life, though ſhe had no reaſon; but this image had neither: Polydor Virgill thinketh little better of Dunſtane for this deed doing, but that he was a ſorcerer. Fox pag. 158. col. 2.

It is famous in hiſtories, how Silueſter the ſecond was aduanced to the Papacie by the Diuell, and gaue himſelfe vnto him; and how, hauing ſome remorſe before his death, he confeſſed the fact before the people, and willed that his bodie ſhould be drawne of wild horſes when he was dead, and there be buried where the horſes left it of their owne accord. How much ſuch diabolicall practiſes are fauoured by the Sea of Rome, may appeare by this one example, which we will now touch: In Pope Adrians daies, not many yeeres agoe, there was a moſt abominable thing practiſed in Rome, euen vnder the Popes noſe, and by his permiſſion and ſufferance, The Citie of Rome being at that time grieuouſlie ſcourged and puniſhed of God with the peſtilence, there was one Demetrius a Grecian, who with the good liking of the whole Citie, to appeaſe the wrath of their gods, tooke a wild Bull, whom with magicall inchantments he made ſo tame, that he led him with a twine threed, and ſo ſacrificed him: And this being done, the ſickneſſe ſomewhat ſlaked. Call ye this the Church of God, that ſuffereth ſuch heatheniſh and abominable ſuperſtitions to bee done in it? Or ſhall I take theſe men for Chriſtians, that doe allow the idolatrous and diuelliſh ſacrifices of the Heathen?

Pag.1084.2.50.

Pag.1115.2.20.

Fourthly, let vs ſee what pretie fine iugling caſts haue been wrought by the Papiſts to deceiue the people. In King Henries daies, there was a monſtrous Idoll called the Rood of grace, which was ſo made ſo with wiers and engins, that one ſtanding within could make euery part of the Idoll to moue, the hands, the eyes, the mouth: if a man brought but a ſmall peece of ſiluer, it would hang downe the lip; if it were a good peece, then ſhould his iawes goe merily: This abominable Idoll by the Lord Cromwels meanes was broken downe, and the engins and parts thereof ſhewed at Paules Croſſe. Such a like thing was the blood of Hales, which they made the people beleeue was ſome of Chriſts blood, but in the end it was found to be but the blood of a Drake, and ſhewed likewiſe at Paules Croſſe, Fox pag.1188. At Caleis in the Sepulchre, it was ſaid, there were three hoaſts beſprinkled with blood (as it was put in writing vnder Bull and Pardon:) but the place being ſearched at King Henries commandement, they found three white counters ſodred in the ſtone with the top-bone of a ſheepes taile, pag. 1224.col.1. A thouſand ſuch forged deuiſes the Papiſts had, which they are not aſhamed to maintaine for ſtrange and holy miracles. By this that hath been ſhewed, it is euident (I hope) to the indifferent reader, what ſmall cauſe our aduerſaries haue, to boaſt of their miracles.

3 Now to adde ſomewhat concerning the miracles of our Church. Firſt, we truly ſay, that our doctrine is not new nor ſtrange, and therefore they are not to call for miracles at our hands. The miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, are alſo our miracles, ſeeing that we profeſſe the ſame doctrine, which was confirmed by thoſe miracles. And as Iohn Baptiſt comming before Chriſt, and teaching the people to beleeue in him that was to come, wrought no miracle, ſeeing that Chriſt was to confirme that doctrine, which Iohn taught concerning the Meſſiah, with miracles: ſo we comming after Chriſt, and profeſſing the ſame faith which he taught, haue leſſe need of miracles, ſeeing that the doctrine, which we hold, hath alreadie been auouched by the miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. Bellarmines beſt anſwere is here, that Iohn taught nothing againſt the common and receiued doctrine, neither ſeparated himſelfe from the Prieſts.

Anſw. But theſe are vntrue: for firſt, Iohn preached remiſſion of ſinnes by Chriſt, and miniſtred Baptiſme, both which were ſtrange vnto the Iewiſh Church; and againe he liued apart in the wilderneſſe: the Scribes and Phariſees came to him, he went not to them: and he calleth them a generation of vipers; how then did Iohn communicate with them.

Hom.19 oper. imperfect.

In Matth.ſer. 18.

This notwithſtanding, wee affirme ſtill, that miracles are not now needfull: will you heare what Chryſoſtome ſaith: Iam cum nullus ſit infidelis, nulla faciendorum miraculorum nunc eſt neceſſitas; igitur, qui ſignum vel inutile, vel non ſuo tempore facit, falſus propheta eſt, &c. Now ſeeing there are no Infidels, there is no neceſſitie of making miracles: and therefore hee, which goeth about now to worke a miracle vnprofitable, and out of time, is a falſe Prophet. By this ſentence all Papiſts are falſe Prophets, that doe ſo much vrge miracles. But I will further preſſe them with their owne authoritie, Nycen.ſynod.2.act.4. Tharaſius the Preſident thus ſaid, Wherefore doe not our images now a dayes worke miracles? I anſwere with the Apoſtle: Miracula non credentibus data ſunt, &c. Miracles are not giuen to thoſe, that beleeue, but to thoſe, which beleeue not. Hearken then you Romaniſts, you are conuinced of vnbeliefe if you ſeeke for miracles. Secondly, yet, the Lord bee thanked, wee are not deſtitute of miracles, as Auguſtine ſaith: Modò caro caeci non aperit oculos miraculo domini, at cor caecum aperit oculos ſermone domini: Now, ſaith hee, the blinde doth not receiue his bodily ſight by the power of Chriſt, but the blinde heart is lightened and illuminate through the Goſpell of Chriſt. Such miracles (the Lord be bleſſed) we can ſhew: ſinners are conuerted, afflicted conſciences are comforted; the ignorant are inſtructed; many are called by the preaching of the Goſpell.

Beſide theſe, which are daily conuerted among vs by the preaching of the Goſpell, the examples of thoſe in this place would be remembred, that being enemies to the Goſpell; yet by the mightie working of Gods ſpirit, were miraculouſly conuerted from Poperie, euen in time of perſecution, and gaue their liues for the teſtimonie of the truth.

Pag.1680.1.70.

George Tankerfield, hauing beene a Papiſt all King Edwards daies, in Queene Maries time, ſeeing the great cruelty practiſed againſt Gods Saints, began to miſlike both the Papiſts opinions & doings, and grew into ſuch a liking of the Goſpell, that he gaue his life for the ſame. See his ſtorie, Fox pag. 1689.89. Maſter Greene Martyr, firſt an obſtinate Papiſt, was drawne to a loue and liking of the Goſpel, by frequenting Peter Martyrs Lectures, and died for the ſame afterwards, Fox pag.1851.c.1.

Among the reſt, the example of Iulius Palmer is moſt notable, and worthie eternall memorie: who all King Edwards dayes continued an obſtinate Papiſt, refuſing either to reſort to common Prayer, or to Sermons but by compulſion, and was for Poperie expelled Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, where hee was fellow: In Queene Maries dayes hee was reſtored to his fellowſhip by the Viſitors, all this while remaining a very Papiſt: Then by the conſtancie of the Martyrs and bleſſed ſeruants of God in Oxford and elſewhere dying for the truth, hee began to ſettle his heart towards the truth, and by diligent reading of Scripture, and faithfull prayer being therein confirmed, hee became not onely a confeſſour, but a conſtant witneſſe and Martyr of the Goſpell: See his ſtorie, Fox pag. 1934.c.2.

What greater miracles can we deſire for confirmation of the Goſpell then theſe, ſhewed in their miraculous conuerſions?

Fox p.805.2.50

Yet if this will not content our aduerſaries, but they will ſtill crie with open mouth, and ſay, where are your miracles? Behold, to ſtop their wide and clamorous mouth, we will ſhew them alſo ſuch miracles, as they looke for, like to which they haue none. Was not that a miracle, which Oecolampadius reporteth to haue been done at the martyrdome of Maſter Hugh Spengler: who being caſt into the water and ſo drowned, preſently al the water was coloured with blood, he hauing receiued no wound nor hurt in his body before, at the which all the people were greatly amazed?

But what thinke you of that ſtrange ſigne which George Scherter ſhewed at his death, who being beheaded, the body lay a pretie ſpace vpon the belly till one might haue eaten an egge, and then turned it ſelfe vpon the backe, and croſſed the right hand ouer the left, and the right legge ouer the left: the Magiſtrates ſeeing it, hauing condemned his body to be burned before, being moued at the ſight hereof, cauſed it to be buried: Fox ex Matth. Illyrico.

It is worth the remembring, that is reported in the French ſtories of Petrus Bergerius a bleſſed Martyr: who was caſt into a filthie dungeon, where a theefe had lien the ſpace of eight moneths, being almoſt eaten vp with lice, and in ſuch miſerie, that hee curſed his parents that bare him. This man through the teaching and the prayers of the Martyr, felt ſuch comfort in the Goſpell, that hee became very patient in his affliction: and after his conuerſion this ſtrange thing was wrought vpon him, that whereas before hee was ſo full of lice, that hee might haue plucked out twelue at once betweene two of his fingers, the next day hee had not one: Fox ex Iohanne Criſpin. pag. 907. col.2.

Pag.828.1.90.

Many ſuch other miraculous workes ſhewed in the life and death of the holy Martyrs, we are able to rehearſe: as that of Zuinglius, whoſe heart was found whole and vnburned three daies after his bodie was conſumed with fire, ex Oſwald. Miconio: the like whereof is conſtantly reported of bleſſed Cranmer, that his heart was found vnconſumed in the aſhes, his body being burned.

Stephen Brune Martyr at Rutiers in France 1540. could not bee conſumed with the fire that was twice made about him, with veſſels of oyle powred vpon the faggots, ſo that the hangman in the end was faine to thruſt him thorough with his pike: ex Iohan. Criſpin.

Stephen Mangin Martyr burned at Meaux anno 1546. hauing his tongue firſt cut out, yet ſo ſpake, that he might be vnderſtood, ſaying, The Lords name be bleſſed, Iohan. Criſpin. lib. 6.

Pag.831.1.60.

The like alſo is recorded of two other Martyrs, at Sanſerre, Iohannes Filieul, and Iulianus Leuille, who ſpake, their tongues being firſt taken from them, Fox pag.911. ex Iohan. Criſpin: ſo did alſo Peter Rouſeau Martyr at Bloys, anno 1556. ex Iohan. Criſpin. One Faninus an Italian Martyr was burned at Ferrara, anno 1550. for the truths ſake, whoſe body in the burning gaue an odoriferous fragrant ſmell of incomparable ſweetneſſe to all there preſent: ex Henric. Pantal. lib. 7.

Pag.952.2.10.

But wee need not ſearch forraine ſtories for ſuch miraculous workes: God hath ſhewed his great power, and ſet forth his glorie, euen in our Engliſh Martyrs: it is credibly teſtified, that where Wickliffes bones were brent, ſprang vp a well, Fox pag.1044. col.1.

Pag.940.1.2.
Pag.1447.1.20.
Pag.1547.2.50
Pag.1831.2.40.

Iames Bainhams in the middeſt of the flaming fire, his armes and legs being halfe conſumed, ſpake theſe words: O ye Papiſts, behold you looke for miracles, and here now you may ſee a miracle, for in this fire I feele no more paine, then if I were in a bed of down, but it is to me as ſweet as a bed of Roſes, Fox p.1030. col.2. What greater miracle can be looked for, then that the cruel rage of the fire ſhould be ſo ſtrangely ſlaked and mitigated, that it ſhould become not onely not grieuous, but pleaſant to the ſufferers? The like mitigation of paine, that conſtant Martyr Maſter Hawkes, gaue a comfortable and cheerefull ſignification of, by thrice clapping of his hands ouer his head burning of a light fire, when euery man thought he had been dead, Fox pag.1592. Many ſuch examples might here bee brought in: as of Robert Samuel Martyr, whoſe body is ſaid to haue ſhined bright like tried ſiluer in the middeſt of the fire, pag.1704. Likewiſe after the burning of Iohn Noyes Martyr, there was found in the aſhes one of his feete vnburned, whole with the hoſe on, vp to the anckle, Fox pag.2022.

Who ſeeth not now, that if miracles were to bee ſtood vpon, and that thereby wee would make proofe of our Church, that herein wee might haue great aduantage againſt our aduerſaries? But their common anſwere is, that all theſe are fables, which we report of our Martyrs. And why, I pray you, do theſe things ſeeme incredible? May not God as well ſhew his power in theſe holy Martyrs, as hee did in the ancient witneſſes of truth, that were perſecuted and put to death vnder the heathen Emperours? for Gods armes are not ſhortened, he is able to doe as great workes now, as hee did then: And theſe his ſeruants died for the ſame truth, for the which the ancient Martyrs gaue their liues: Why ſhould it be more vnlikelie, that ſome of the Martyrs of our Church haue ſtood at the ſtake vntouched of the fire, as we haue heard before of Stephen Brune, then that Policarpus continued in the fire without burning, the fire hauing no power of his bodie, but was in the end thruſt through, as Stephen Brune alſo was ſerued, or that Cecilia remained a day and a night in a hot bath without hurt, as if ſhe had been in a cold place?

Why might not the Lord giue vnto Stephen Mangin Martyr, and others power to ſpeake, their tongues to be cut out, as he did to Romanus, who being depriued of his tongue ſpake theſe words: He that ſpeaketh Chriſt ſhall neuer want a tongue? Fox pag.90.

Polycarpus before mentioned, his body in the middeſt of the fire gliſtered like ſiluer or gold, pag.43. Why may we not credit the like report of Robert Samuel? There came a moſt pleaſant ſmell from Polycarpus bodie, as it had been of mirrhe, or ſome pretious balme: may not this as well be true of Faninus, whoſe example we ſaw before? Polycarpus being thruſt through with a ſword, for he could not burne, there guſhed out ſuch abundance of blood, as that the fire was quenched therewith. May wee not as well beleeue, that which is reported of Biſhop Latimer, whoſe prayer vnto God was, that hee might giue his heart blood for his truth: and ſo it came to paſſe, that in the fire, his ſides being opened by the violence thereof, the blood iſſued out abundantly, which was ſtrange to behold: Fox p.1740. But I will be ſparing in theſe reports: for we haue better arguments to proue our Church by, as ſhall afterward appeare.

A notable and ſtrange miracle, credible reported of Luther. Fox. pag 864. Pag 789.2.10. edit.1610.

Yea, before I leaue this place, becauſe the Ieſuite hath ſuch a ſpite at Luther, (he is a great eyeſore to him) we will in a word or two declare what ſtrange things were wrought by Luther. It is credibly reported of him, that a certaine young man had bound himſelfe by obligation to the Diuell, ſealed with his blood to giue him his ſoule, ſo hee might haue his wiſh and deſire ſatisfied with money: In ſhort time he grew to great wealth: the matter being diſcloſed with much adoe to Luther, hee calleth the congregation together, and ioyneth in prayer for this young man: and as they prayed, the obligation was caſt in at the window. This credible report of Luthers act, may counteruaile the lying tale of railing Staphylus, whom the Ieſuite ſo much crediteth, how that Luther attempted to caſt a diuell out of a woman, and was in danger to be ſlaine of the diuell himſelfe, Bellarm.cap.16. But why ſhould it ſeeme ſtrange, that by the prayers of the congregation the diuell ſhould depart? For by two waies are vncleane ſpirits caſt out, one is by the extraordinarie gift and faith of miracles, which though it continued ſome ages after the Apoſtles, till the Goſpell was vniuerſally planted, yet wee hold it generally to be ceaſed now: the other way is ordinary by faſting and prayer, which our Sauiour preſcribeth, Matth.17.21. Whereby wee doubt not, but euen in theſe daies, when it pleaſeth God, Satan is chaſed from the poſſeſſion of Chriſts members. And in this kinde Luther was ſingular, who vſed to pray ſo feruently, that the teares were ſeene to fall from his eyes in his prayer: And theſe are the weapons, whereby wee fight againſt Satan, the word of God and prayer, which are more forcible, then your ſuperſtitious croſſings, coniurations, exorcizings, yea then your holy water, or holy water ſprinckle. The experience hereof Origene ſheweth, that as he was preaching of thoſe words, 1.Sam.2. of Anna My heart reioyced in the Lord, one being preſent hauing an vncleane ſpirit cried out: vpon which occaſion Origene further ſaid thus: Contrarius ſpiritus exultationem noſtram in domino ferre non potuit: The aduerſarie ſpirit cannot abide our reioycing in the Lord, &c. Theſe meanes then of the Word and prayer ſeeing Luther had, wee may more eaſilie bee perſwaded of the truth of the ſtorie.

How.in 2.cap. 1.lib.Sam.

And as he was earneſt in prayer, ſo his prayers wanted not effect; for as hee himſelfe confeſſed, hee had obtained of God, that ſo long as he liued, the Pope ſhould not preuaile in his countrey. And is not this alſo a thing to be wondred at, that for all the Pope and Emperour ioyned together, and bent their forces againſt this ſillie poore man; yet the Lord defended him from the Lions teeth, and granted him to end his daies in peace?

Thus it is apparant and manifeſt, that the Lord ſheweth his miraculous power many times in his Saints, to aſtoniſh the wicked: the great miracles which haue bin declared in their holy martyrdoms, would fill a large volume. But theſe arguments wee doe not chiefly ſtand vpon: yet thus much was not amiſſe by the way to bee inſerted, to requite our aduerſaries withall, who doe ſo greatly magnifie and extoll their Antichriſtian Church, for their lying and fained miracles.

Laſtly, if miracles were a ſure note of the Church: and though the Romaniſts could alleage true miracles done among them, yet they ſhould herein haue no preeminence before the Eaſterne and Southerne Churches. 1. For the Greeke and Eaſterne Churches, Marcus Paulus a Venetian reporteth, that at the citie Tauris there is a mountaine ſhewed, which was remoued by the prayer of a Chriſtian, at the inſtance of a certaine Saracen, who obiected vnto the Chriſtians, that if they had faith, as a graine of muſtard ſeede, if they ſhould ſay vnto a mountaine, remoue vnto ſuch a place, it ſhould preſently remoue. Villamont writeth of a towne in Syria called Sardinale, inhabited by the Chriſtians, where Turkes, Saracens, or Moores cannot dwell, but they die before the yeeres end. Faber writeth that not farre from the citie of Muſcouia, is a great Monaſterie, wherein is the ſepulcher of Sergius an Abbot, where two blinde men were reſtored to their ſight. Thomas Lopes reporteth, that the people of Mangalor reſort to the ſepulcher of S. Thomas, where many miracles are wrought.

2 Concerning the South Church, Aluares ſaith, that among the Ethiopians there is a ſepulcher of one of the ſonnes of King Abram, who was a Prieſt, that wrought miracles, and among the reſt, they ſay, that the Angels did miniſter bread and wine vnto him when hee celebrated: the ſame author alſo ſaith, that the Ethiopians doe reſort to the ſepulcher of a King called Balibeta, where many miracles are wrought: But it is vncertaine, what credit theſe reports are of: but that is yet more ſtrange, and teſtified with more credit, which Philippus Camerarius ſetteth downe, of the apparition of the bodies of dead men, riſing out of the ground, not whole, but in parts, as the head, armes, legges, which may be touched, in a little barren hill within halfe a mile of Cairo in Egypt, once in the yeere about the 25. of March, which apparition continueth for the ſpace of 3. daies together: If then any confidence were to be had in miracles, other Churches may better challenge it then Rome.

Camerar. cap. 73. of his hiſtoricall meditations.

3 The French Church agreeth with vs, artic. 5. Wee beleeue the word contained in the Canonicall writings proceeded from God, and for as much as it is the rule of truth, it followeth that neither antiquitie, nor cuſtomes, &c. nor viſions, nor miracles ought to be oppoſed to it.

4 And touching the iudgement of the Romaniſts; Roffenſis ſaith, &c. that the promiſe of Chriſt, concerning the healing of the ſicke, caſting out of diuels, taketh no effect in theſe daies; Nemo enim eſt, qui iam corporaliter eycit, &c. There is no man that doth now corporally caſt out diuels, &c. But this promiſe tooke place, pro tempore naſcentis Eccleſiæ, in the time of the Church then ſpringing vp: Likewiſe Eſpencæus: ſeeing now there is no vnbeleeuers, miraculorum nunc nulla neceſſitas, There is no neceſſity now of miracles.

And further whereas Bellarmine produceth the example of Xauiere the Ieſuite, a great wonder-worker among the Indians, that diuers blind, deafe, dumbe, lame, were healed by him; yea one that was dead, was raiſed againe vnto life: although we ſimply denie not, but God might vpon this ſpecial and extraordinarie occaſion of conuerting Infidels, grant vnto ſuch as are his faithfull Miniſters ſome power of miraculous workes: yet that this tale is vnprobable, may appeare by the teſtimonie of another Ieſuite, one Acoſta, that was alſo in that countrie, and laboured among the Weſt Indians, who ſaith directly, prodigia nulla producimus, neque verò eſt opus: We bring forth no wonders, neither in deed is it needfull. And in another place hee giueth a reaſon thereof, that when the Grecians, and others which excelled in all humane wiſedome, were conuerted by ſimple and vnlearned men, it was neceſſarie they ſhould bee furniſhed with the power of miracles; but now ſeeing they which are there conuerted, are inferiour euery way to their conuerters, it ſeemeth not to bee ſo needfull: to this purpoſe Acoſta.

The ſixth Note, of the gift of Propheſying.

THis alſo our aduerſaries hold to bee a perpetuall marke, whereby to know the Church: for they ſay that the true Church of God wanteth not thoſe which are endewed with the ſpirit of prophecie: And ſo they beare vs in hand, that in euery age there hath flouriſhed ſome Prophet in their Church. The firſt, that the Church ſhall alwaies haue Prophets, they would proue out of Ioel 2. I will powre of my ſpirit vpon all fleſh, &c. The ſecond, that they haue had ſuch Prophets, they doe inferre vpon a few forged examples, of S. Bernard, and Saint Francis, a popiſh Saint, and the founder of the ſuperſtitious order of the Franciſcans, and of ſuch others: Bellarmine cap. 15.

23. Error.
Ioel 2.28.

To the firſt we anſwere. 1. The prophecie of Ioel was accompliſhed in the Apoſtles time, Act. 2. as Saint Peter expoundeth it, and therefore wee need not looke further for the fulfilling of it. 2. The Church of the Iewes wanted Prophets for the ſpace of foure hundred yeeres and more before the comming of Chriſt: for we reade of no Prophet after Malachy: and the Church complaineth of this want, that they had Prophets no more: wherefore, the Church of God after the comming of Chriſt, may better ſpare this extraordinarie function of propheeying, ſeeing both Chriſt is alreadie come, who was the very ſubiect and matter of all the ancient prophecies; and we haue alſo moſt euident prophecies of the Apoſtles, Rom. 11. concerning the calling of the Iewes; 2. Theſ. 2. of Antichriſt: in the Apocalyps, of the generall eſtate and condition of the Church to the end of the world: ſome of which are already accompliſhed, ſome to be fulfilled in their ſeaſon: in theſe prophecies, wee muſt reſt and content our ſelues, not looking for new reuelations. 3. There haue been Prophets amongſt the heathen out of the Church of God: they alſo can bring forth diuers old prophecies; ſo that if the iſſue lay in this point, they might as well contend to be the Church of God. Aſtyages dreamed that hee ſaw a vine growing out of his daughter, that couered all Aſia: which came to paſſe in Cyrus. Auguſtine reporteth a prophecie of Hermes Triſmegiſtus, how that all the images and Idols of the heathen ſhould be broken downe through all Ægypt. The Indians were foretold of the Spaniards comming, many a yeere before their arriuall in thoſe places: Their Zemes, that is, their diuels, which they worſhipped as Gods, told them, that there ſhould come a people with long beards, fierce and cruell, that at one ſtroke ſhould ſtrike men off by the middle: And all theſe things fell out afterwards to that nation accordingly.

But they will anſwere, that theſe were not true prophecies inſpired of God, but vncertaine predictions of the diuell. What will they ſay then to Balaam, that prophecied of Chriſt? There ſhall come a ſtarre of Iacob (ſaith he) Numb. 24.17. and in the ſame place, he ſaith, he heard the words of God. And here our Doway Latine men confeſſe, that Balaam had the ſpirit of Prophecy, but not iuſtifying grace, and that many worke miracles, and yet bee damned: pag. 373. how then can that bee a note of the Church (out of the which none can be ſaued) which doth not alway accompany ſaluation.

The prophecies alſo of Sibil are wonderfull, which many yeeres before the comming of Chriſt, prophecied of his incarnation, and of his paſſion, with the circumſtances thereof, as how hee ſhould bee crowned with thorns, that they ſhould giue him vineger to drinke, how the vaile of the temple ſhould be rent, and darkneſſe ſhould couer the earth for three houres: and hee himſelfe ſhould riſe the third day: yea ſhee ſetteth downe the very name of the Meſſias, Ieſus Chriſt. Theſe prophecies came not of the diuell, for theſe myſteries, without all doubt, were not knowne to the euill ſpirits: for they were not fully reuealed to the Angels themſelues before the comming of Chriſt. Epheſ.3.10. Wherefore we conclude thus, that as the gift of propheciyng is no ſure ſigne that they are members of the Church and elected of God, which are endued with it; as Chriſt ſaith, Matth.7.22. that many which had prophecied in his name, in the day of iudgement ſhould be refuſed; and Balaam is ſet forth as an example of a falſe prophet and wicked man; Ep.Iude 11. So neither is this gift an infallible marke of the Church of God, whereſoeuer it is found. Your owne Canons auouch the ſame, Decr. part.2.cauſ. 2.qu.1.cap.79. Prophetauit & Saul malus rex, & tunc prophetauit, cum Dauid ſanctum perſequeretur. Saul alſo prophecied an euill King, and at that time, when he perſecuted Dauid. The gift then of propheciyng, as it ſheweth not him to be a member of the Church, that hath it: ſo neither that to be the Church, where it is found.

Aug.cont. Iulianos cap. 16. Tom.6. Epheſ.3.10. Math.7.21.

To the Second part, concerning this miraculous gift which our aduerſaries pretend to haue: wee anſwere. 1. They are but fables which they bring: for if all that is reported of S. Bernard in his life, of his miracles and prophecies, were true, neither S. Paul nor any of the Apoſtles were to be compared vnto him for number of miracles: ſuch caſting out of diuels out of men, women and children, healing of ſtrange diſeaſes, foretelling of things to come: the Goſpell almoſt hath not ſtranger things of our Sauiour Chriſt. And S. Hierome, who was long before Bernards time, ſheweth that prophecie was then ceaſed: Prophetia domini paſſione ſignata eſt: All prophecie is ſealed vp in the paſſion of Chriſt, Tom.3.ad Marcellam.

As for S. Francis, you may geſſe by this, what ſpirit hee was of, that preſcribing to his followers, a certaine ſtrict order of liuing, as to weare no girdle, to goe barefoot, and ſuch like, hee calleth it regulam euangelicam, the rule of the Goſpell: belike making himſelfe an other Chriſt, and ſo bringing in another Goſpell: for to all Chriſts Diſciples Chriſts Goſpell is ſufficient. 2. But if they haue any prophecies of credit, which they can ſhew, they are ſuch, as are reported of Pope Silueſter the ſecond, who had warrant from the diuell, that he ſhould not die before he ſung Maſſe in Ieruſalem: and ſo it came to paſſe, for hauing ſung Maſſe in a chapell ſo called, he immediately died. Not much vnlike to this was that of King Henry the fourth, who ended his life in a chamber at Weſtminſter called Ieruſalem, as he had an old prophecie. Edward the fourth alſo was told, that his ſucceſſors name ſhould begin with G. which was the cauſe of George the Duke of Clarence death, his owne brother; but the diuelliſh prophecie notwithſtanding tooke place, for Richard Duke of Gloceſter was King after him. In like manner Valence the Emperour had a blind prophecie, that one ſhould raigne after him, whoſe name began with Theod. which made Theodorus to rebell againſt him: but ſo it came to paſſe indeed, that Theodoſius was Emperour after him. Such blind prophecies wee denie not but the Popiſh Church hath had many, which as you ſee, doe cauſe murther, ſedition, and bloodſhed; but other good prophecies comming of God, wee know them not to haue any.

Fox pag.717. Pag.659.2.20. edit.vltim.

3 Wee denie not but that there haue liued ſome amongſt them in their Church, which in thoſe daies were counted Prophets and prophetiſſes, as Hildegardis, ann.1146. likewiſe Bridget, Catharine Senenſis: whom Bellarmine reckoneth vp amongſt others that wrought miracles, chap.14. But concerning theſe we will anſwere, as the Ieſuite doth for Sibilla a prophetiſſe amongſt the heathen: that ſhe prophecied as touching ſuch matters as ſhould fall out to the Church, for a teſtimony of the faith of the Chriſtians; and ſo to be counted herein a prophetiſſe of the Church rather then of the heathen, chap.15. So we ſay, that if thoſe three aboue named were Prophetiſſes, they were of our Church, and not theirs; for they prophecied of the decay of their Church, and raiſing vp of ours. Hildegardis firſt prophecied of the beginning of Friers, and of their deſtruction, ſaying, that in the end, when their gifts and rewards ceaſed, they ſhould goe about their houſes like hungrie and madde dogges, drawing in their necks like doues. Bridget prophecied of the Church of Rome, that it ſhould be as a body condemned of a iudge, to haue the ſkin ſlaine off, and the fleſh to bee cut in pieces: Catharine de Senis ſpeaketh of a reformation of the Church, and ſuch a renouation of Paſtors, that the onely remembrance thereof ſaith ſhee, maketh my ſpirit to reioyce in the Lord. All theſe things wee ſee now accompliſhed: the ſects of Friers in many places put downe: the Popiſh iuriſdiction caſt out, a notable reformation to bee wrought in the Church: our aduerſaries (I thinke) haue not to reioyce in theſe prophecies; neither haue any great cauſe to challenge them for their Prophets. But I will helpe them a little, and bring to their remembrance a notable Prophetiſſe of theirs in King Henry the eights daies, which was one Elizabeth Barton a Nun, commonly called the holy maide of Kent, who being inſtructed by the Friers, fained, as though ſhe had many reuelations: ſhe prophecied, that if the King proceeded in his diuorce, then in queſtion betweene him and Queene Katharine, that hee ſhould not be King one yeere, no not one moneth: But (God bee thanked) hee liued almoſt twentie yeeres after that, by whom many worthy things were wrought for the good of Chriſts Church. This Prophetiſſe was afterward iuſtly met withall, and worthily ſuffered for her demerits, with all her accomplices: amongſt the which, Fiſher B. of Rocheſter was one, who thereupon was impriſoned, and forfaited his goods to the King. If they will brag of their Prophets, let not the holy maid of Kent be forgotten in any wiſe.

4 Now laſtly becauſe they ſhall not outface vs with a vaine brag of prophets: I will ſhew what propheciesthe Goſpell hath been adorned withall. Was not Iohn Huſſe a Prophet, who thus ſaid at his death: Centum reuolutis annis vos reſpondebitis: after an hundred yeeres you ſhall giue account of this your doing vnto God? Likewiſe Hierome of Prage, poſt centum annos vos omnes cito: I cite you alſo to make anſwere after an hundred yeeres. Which prophecie of theirs tooke effect accordingly: for both theſe holy men ſuffered martyrdome about anno 1416. and iuſt an hundred yeeres after, anno 1516. the Lord raiſed vp Luther, who indeed called the Pope and his doctrine to account.

Was not Sauanarola a Prophet, that ſaid one ſhould paſſe ouer the Alpes like Cyrus, who ſhould deſtroy all Italie? and is it not ſo come to paſſe? for neither Cyrus, nor whoſoeuer elſe could haue more laid waſte the Popiſh Italian Church then the word of God hath done, and the liuely preaching of the Goſpell? Walter Brute prophecied that the temporalities ſhould be taken from the Clergie for the miſuſage of their times: this Walter liued in King Richards daies the ſecond. Bilney that conſtant Martyr and faithfull ſeruant of God prophecied, that many Preachers ſhould come after him, which ſhould preach the ſame faith that he had taught, and ſhould conuert many from their errors. Fox pag.700. Pag.461.1.40 edit.1610.

We will come vnto neerer times: Did not Maſter Hooper prophecie, when taking his leaue of Maſter Bullinger at Zuricke, he ſaid thus vnto him, You ſhall be ſure (ſaith he) to heare from me, from time to time out of England: but the laſt newes of all I ſhall not be able to write, for there where I ſhall take moſt paines, you ſhall heare of me burned to aſhes. And ſo it came to paſſe, for he was burned at Gloceſter, where he was Biſhop, Fox pag.1503.col.1.

Maſter Latimer would alwaies ſay, that the preaching of the Goſpell would coſt him his life, Pag.1366.1.60 and he was perſwaded, he ſaid, that Winchester was kept in the tower for the ſame purpoſe: pag.1740. Pag.1579.1.30 col.1.

Maſter Rogers prophecied in Queene Maries daies, that the Goſpell ſhould bee reſtored, and that Pag.1356.1.60 the diſperſed Engliſh flocke ſhould be brought againe to their former eſtate, pag.1492. A certaine woman alſo in Exceter that died for the truth, ſpake to the like effect: who entring as it happened into S.Peters Church, where ſhe found a cunning Dutchman, making of new noſes to certaine Images, which had been disfigured in King Edwards daies, ſaid vnto him, What a mad man art thou to make them new noſes, which within a few daies ſhall all loſe their heads: as it came indeed to paſſe, pag. 2051. col.1.

Roger Holland ſtanding in examination before bloudie Boner, thus boldly ſaid vnto him: This I Pag.1860.2.1. dare be bold in God to ſpeake, which by his ſpirit I am moued to ſay, that God will ſhorten your hand of crueltie, for after this day in this place, ſhall there not any by him (meaning Boner) be put to death, pag. 2042. And after this day indeed, there was none put to death in Smithfield. Pag.1852.1.10

What ſhall I ſpeake of Maſter Bradford, who writeth thus in his epiſtle to Cambridge: You know I prophecied truly to you, before the Sweat came, what would come, if you repented not your carnall Goſpelling. I might here alſo inferre the propheticall prayers of the Martyrs: as how Maſter Latimer prayed that the Goſpell might once againe be reſtored to England, and earneſtly ſued in his pray- Pag.1759.2.30 ers for the preſeruation of Lady Elizabeth, now our moſt gratious Queene: the which his prayers, the Lord, whoſe name eternally be bleſſed for it, in mercie to this land gratiouſly granted. The like prayer Maſter Philpot made at the ſtake for the reſtoring of the Goſpell, pag.1831. col.1. And, to Pag.1662.1.45. make ſhort, the fiue laſt martyrs burned at Canturburie, deſired God in their prayers before their martyrdome, that their blood might be the laſt that ſhould be ſhed: and ſo it was, Fox pag.2053.

I alleage not theſe examples, vnto the which I could adde many beſides, to this end, as though I Pag.1862.2.55 thought that theſe propheticall gifts are ordinarie in the Church, or that theſe holy martyrs had the calling of Prophets (though it cannot bee denied, but that at ſome times, and in ſome caſes they had the ſpirit of prophecie;) or that hereby we meane to proue our Church: but to anſwere a little vnto our aduerſaries vaine, and vntrue bragges, that it may appeare to all men, with how much better right, we might chalenge this propheticall gift in the behalfe and name of our Church.

Hitherto wee haue touched ſixe onely of the principall notes of the popiſh Church: the reſt which the Ieſuite addeth to make vp the number of fifteene, are ſuch vagrant and vncertaine notes, that I wonder, the Ieſuite for ſhame, would ſtuffe his booke with them: I will therefore only name them.

Another note therefore of Bellarmines Church beſide thoſe ſet downe, is duratio diuturna, nec vnquam interrupta, is the long and laſting continuance of their Church without any interruption: their Church, they ſay, hath endured 1570. yeeres and more alreadie, and is like to continue to the worlds end: but our Church is newly begunne, and ſhall ſoone come to an end: Bellarmine lib.4. cap.6.

Anſw. 1. Duration or continuance is no good argument of the Church: the heathen Idolaters could and did ſay as much for their idolatrie: As Aſclepiades obiected to Romanus (holy martyr) Thy crucified Chriſt, ſaith he, is but a yeſterdaies God, the Gods of the Gentiles are of great antiqui- Fox.pag.89. tie. 2. It is not true that their Church hath endured ſo long, they muſt ſtrike off almoſt 600. yeeres from their account; and yet moſt of their errors are nothing ſo old: yet if they could make vp the full number they ſpeake of, they haue not much to bragge of: The kingdome of the Sycionians, as Auguſtine witneſſeth, endured 950. yeeres, the Monarchie of the Aſſyrians 1300. yeeres and more; Lib.18.de ciuitat.dei, c.26. yet were they not for all this the Church of God. 3. The deſcent and pedegree of their Church hath not all this while, they ſay, beene interrupted. To this wee haue anſwered before, in the third note of ſucceſſion: Our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles could not ſhew a perpetuall deſcent of their Church not interrupted, yet were they the true Church. 4. Their Church ſhall endure to the end of the world: ſo ſhall Sathans kingdome waxe ſtronger towards the end: There ſhall be a generall decay of faith and charitie; yea, and there ſhall be ſome remnant of Antichriſts kingdome euen at the comming of Chriſt: but to what end S. Paul ſheweth, to bee aboliſhed with the brightneſſe of his comming. Math.24.12. 2.Theſſ.2.8.

5. Neither is our Church, as they falſly charge vs, newly ſtart vp: but of our Church were the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Martyrs, as wee haue ſhewed: the Church of God may ſometime lie hidden in the world, and ſo hath ours. But they goe further, Our Church, they ſay, ſhall not long continue: So the heathen ſaied downe the Chriſtians, that their religion ſhould laſt but 365. yeeres: but it proued cleane contrarie; for the Chriſtian faith encreaſed ſtill, and Paganiſme within that compaſſe was baniſhed. As for our Church we know it ſhall continue to the worlds end, though with much trouble and perſecution, and euer after ſhall be with Chriſt. August. de ciuitat. dei lib. 18.cap.53.

Another note, which Bellarmine maketh the ſixth in number, is, Conſpiratio in doctrina cum Eccleſia antiqua: Their conſpiring in doctrine with the ancient Church, cap.9. where hee taketh paines to caſt vpon vs twentie ſeuerall hereſies.

Anſw.1. For the full anſwere of this ſlaunder, I doe referre the reader to the ſecond pillar of Papiſtrie, part. 3. where it is euidently proued, that the Papiſts (and not the Proteſtants) doe reuiue the olde hereſies.

2. It may appeare, by the perpetuall allegation of Auguſtine, and the decrees of Councels generall and prouinciall, yea and of their owne Canons, throughout this Treatiſe in defence of our cauſe, that our doctrine agreeth with antiquitie, and not Papiſtrie.

Notwithſtanding as touching the Ieſuites chalenge of hereſie, where he laieth to our charge twenty ſeuerall hereſies, I haue eaſily remoued them, and requited him with forty ſeuerall hereſies, all proued to be in their Church; for the particular anſwere, to that place I referre the reader. See the 2. pillar of Papiſtry, part. 3.

But now in generall it ſhall appeare by ſuch deſcriptions of heretikes, as heretofore haue bin made, and by them cannot be refuſed, that not we, but they are the heretikes of theſe daies.

1 And firſt, if they will be tried by the definition of an heretike in the Ciuill law, we will not refuſe: as Cod. lib.1. tit.4. leg.1. Gratian and Valentinian thus define an heretike: Qui patris, filij, & ſpiritus ſancti deitatem ſub pari maieſtate non credunt, hæreticorum infamiam ſuſtinere, &c. They which doe not beleeue the Deitie of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt to be of equall maieſtie, ſhall ſuſtaine the infamie of heretikes, &c. But wee doe ſo beleeue: Ergo, are no heretikes. The Popiſh Church is rather to be ſuſpected herein, that affirme, that Chriſt is not αὐτόθεος. God of himſelfe: now if the Father be God of himſelfe and the Sonne haue a beginning of his Godhead; then muſt there be an inequalitie in the Godhead. See more of this afterward, Controu.20. part.2. quaſt.1.

2 Likewiſe, Cod. lib.1. tit.8. leg.2. Gratian. Valentinian. Hæreticus iudicatur, qui à minimo fidei deuiat articulo: He is iudged an heretike, that departeth from the leaſt article of the faith, &c. But it is an article of the faith to beleeue, that Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God, and ſhall not come from thence till the day of iudgement; which the Papiſts muſt needes denie, affirming Chriſts bodie to be really and corporally in the Sacrament; and ſo they muſt either make Chriſt to haue two bodies, one in heauen, another in earth; or elſe they muſt hold, that his body may be in two places at once, contrarie to the nature of a body.

3 We will not refuſe the triall of an heretike by your owne Canons: Decret. par.2. cauſ.24. quaſt.3. cap.28. Hæreticus eſt, qui alicuius temporalis commodi, & maxime gloriæ, principatuſque ſui gratia, falſas ac nouas opiniones gignit: He is an heretike, that for ſome temporall commoditie, eſpecially for glorie and principalitie ſake, doth deuiſe and follow new and ſtrange opinions, &c. But the Papiſts doe ſeeke the glorie and principalitie of the Papall Sea, and the commoditie thereof, and thereto hold new opinions, as that it is of neceſſitie to ſaluation to beleeue the Pope to be head of the Church; that the Pope is aboue Councels and ſuch like: Ergo, they are heretikes. And to ſpeake the truth, moſt of the Popiſh opinions are ſuch as either tend to aduance the pride of the Biſhop of Rome, as the doctrine of his primacie ouer other Churches, his ſuperioritie ouer Kings, Princes, and ſuch like; or elſe to make their owne purſes fat, as their opinions of their reall preſence, Maſſes propitiatorie for the quicke and the dead, purgatorie, pardons, pilgrimages, and ſuch other. And it was well ſaid (though merily) of Eraſmus to the Duke of Saxonie, who asked his iudgement of Luther; that he medled with two dangerous matters, that would not be touched, the Popes Crowne, and the Monkes belly.

4 Further, alſo it followeth thus in your Canons as touching an heretike: Decret. par.2. cauſ.24. quaſt.3. c.30. Qui non ad Propheticas voces, non ad Apoſtolicas literas, non ad Euangelicas authoritates, ſed ad ſeipſos recurrunt, magiſtri erroris exiſtunt, &c. They which haue not recourſe to the Prophets, Apoſtles writings, and the Euangelicall authorities, but runne to themſelues, are become the maſters of errors. And what this meaneth is expounded by Pope Vrbane in the ſame place, cap.32. Quia magiſter erroris eſt, non tantum hæreticus, ſed etiam hæreſiarcha dicendus eſt: Becauſe he is a maſter of error, he is not onely an heretike, but an hereſiarch, that is, a maſter of hereſies, &c. But the Papiſts, and not wee, leaue the Propheticall, Apoſtolicall, Euangelicall writings, and runne vnto traditions, that is, to themſelues: Ergo they, not we, are the heretikes.

5 Likewiſe, Decr.p.2.cauſ.16.quaeſt.7.Gregor.7. defineth, that he that ſhould grant away to lay perſons or others, then to Prieſts, oblations and tithes, inter maximos hereticos non minimus habeatur, let him bee counted not the leaſt among the greateſt heretickes. But the Pope is the man that firſt alienated the propertie of tithes, and erected impropriations, and ſo maintained them, as it may appeare in King Henry the thirds time, when the Biſhops of this land made ſuite to the Pope to haue impropriate benefices reſtored to the firſt vſe; at the contrarie ſuite of the Monkes, the Pope determined that they ſhould ſtand ſtill: Ergo, they are the heretikes.

Ex Flor.hiſtoriar.an.1261.

6 Againe, your owne Canons allow this ſaying of S. Hierome, deciphering the authors of hereſie, Decr.p.2.cauſ.24.quaeſt.3.cap.33. Veteres ſcrutans hiſtorias inuenire non poſſum ſcidiſſe eccleſiam, &c. & populos ſeduxiſſe, niſi eos, qui ſacerdotes a Deo poſiti erant: Looking ouer the ancient ſtories I cannot find that any did make ſchiſmes in the Church, and ſeduce the people, but the Prieſts, &c. But the Papiſts ſay, that they only haue the prieſthood, and that they are the true prieſts. If hereſie then and ſchiſme begin among the prieſts, as Hierome in his reading obſerued, and the Papiſts take themſelues to be the prieſts of theſe daies; then the ſeminarie of hereſie is amongſt them. If it ſhall be anſwered, that Hierome ſpeaketh of the times before vnder the law, not ſince: the words following ſhew the contrarie, Iſti vertuntur in laqueum tortuoſum, in omnibus locis ponentes ſcandalum, Theſe, ſaith he, meaning the Prieſts, are become ſnares, in euery place putting a ſtumbling blocke. He ſpeaketh of the time preſent and then being.

7 Or will they allow of the Maſter of Sentences definition of an heretike, who out of Hilarie affirmeth thoſe to be heretickes, aliter interpretantes ſcripturas, quàm dictorum virtus poſtulat; de intelligentia enim hæreſis, non de ſcriptura eſt; which doe interpret the Scripture, otherwiſe then the words are: for hereſie commeth not of the Scripture, but by the falſe vnderſtanding, lib.4.diſt.13.C. But the Papiſts doe thus interpret the Scripture cleane beſide the text: for the probation whereof I referre the reader to the treatiſe annexed, 2.pillar, part.2. Ergo, they are heretickes.

8 Heare alſo how one of your owne champions deſcribeth an hereticke and hereſie: Hereſie is a falſe opinion defended with pertinacie cleerely repugning the word of God; Iohn Wynrime in his ſermon at S. Andrewes in Scotland, at the condemnation of M George Wiſchart, *an.*1546. Fox p. 1268. But many ſuch opinions the Papiſts maintaine contrary to the Scriptures, as more at large in the place quoted before in the treatiſe annexed I haue ſhewed: Ergo, they are the heretickes.

Many other deſcriptions of hereſie I could alleage out of the Fathers, but theſe may ſuffice, gathered out of their owne authorities, by the which it is euident that Papiſts, not Proteſtants are heretickes.

The third note omitted, but with Bellarmine the eighth, is Sanctitas doctrinæ, the holines and pureneſſe of their doctrine, cap.11.

Anſw. I thinke theſe men will not bluſh in the end, to make a Saint of the diuell: for what more vnchaſt and vnpure religion can there be, then Poperie is? Call you that an holy religion, that canonized Thomas Becket for a Saint, who was a rebell and traitor to his Prince? Is that pure doctrine that calleth the mariage of Miniſters the worſt ſort of fornication, ſic Rhemiſt. That alloweth ſwearing and blaſpheming? One Sanpaulinus, for reproouing a man of ſwearing, was ſuſpected to be a Lutheran, and thereupon examined, condemned, and burned, Fox pag. 904. Is that an holy and perfect religion, which reprobates may attaine vnto? for the Popiſh profeſſion requireth no more, then may bee found in reprobates. See a treatiſe of this ſet foorth by W.Perkins.

Pag.825.1.95.

Laſtly, let Roger Holland ſpeake, firſt a Papiſt, afterwards by Gods mercifull working an holy Martyr: He confeſſing of himſelfe in the hearing of his enemies, that while he was a Papiſt, he was giuen to carding and dicing, to riot, drunkenneſſe, all kind of wantonneſſe, in hope of auricular confeſſion to the prieſt, and giuing him ſomewhat to doe penance for him, thinking, that hauing ſo done, he was of a cleere ground, and might returne to his old vomit againe. See his ſtorie, Fox pag. 2040. Iudge now what a pure Religion this may bee, which is a doctrine of libertie, and patrone of all licentious liuing?

The fourth note omitted, but with Bellarm. the ninth, is Efficacia doctrinæ, the efficacie and force of their doctrine in cõuerting many vnto the faith, as he giueth inſtance in diuers ages, as in the 7.8.9.11 centuries, or hundred yeeres, many were conuerted in Hungarie, Germanie, Norway and other places to the papall faith, & many thouſands in the new Indian world in our age: to this purpoſe Bellar.c.12.

Anſw. 1. The conuerſion or drawing of people from one religion vnto another, is not alwaies an argument of the right faith: for the Phariſees made many Proſelytes of their profeſſion, yet were they two-fold more the children of hell, then themſelues: ſo in the time of Valens the Emperour, the Arrians conuerted the Gothes: Bellarmine heere anſwereth, Non conuerſos fuiſſe ab Arrianis, ſed miſere deceptos, that they were not conuerted by the Arrians, but miſerably deceaued. The like doe we ſay of the poore Indians, that they were not conuerted, but peruerted rather by the Spaniards, and forced thereunto rather by their tyrannie, then perſwaded by their falſe Chriſtianitie.

Freculphus tom.2.lib.4.c.20.

2 The nations conuerted in the ages giuen in inſtance, were wonne not vnto the Popiſh, but to the Chriſtian faith of the Trinitie, which is yet profeſſed in Poperie: for thoſe ages were not ſo full of Popiſh ſuperſtition, as this preſent age is peſtered now: and admit, that then the Chriſtian faith was ouer-ſpread with many ſuperſtitious rites, it was for the loue of the faith, not of thoſe ſhadowes wherewith it was masked, that the nations yeelded themſelues, as the Bridegrome marrieth the Bride for loue to her perſon, not for her apparrell ſake.

Mercurius Gallobelgic. ann. 1610. tom. 8. lib. 3. p. 24.

3 If the power of their religion appeared, in the conuerting of thoſe Countries from Paganiſme to Poperie, our religion is more powerfull, that hath reduced thoſe from Poperie to Proteſtancie: beſide, the conuerſion of many Papiſts to become Proteſtants, as in the age before vs, George Tankerfield, Iulius Palmer, Miſtreſſe Lewes, Roger Holland: See before in the 5. note of miracles. And ſo ſince that time other Countries haue afforded many like examples of our conuerts to our faith: as among the reſt of late, a noble woman, Marie the Abbeſſe of Drebnits in Germanie, left her rich Monaſterie, and became a Proteſtant.

4 But the power of Proteſtants faith and religion, was chiefly ſeene in the firſt conuerſion of the Gentiles, by the preaching of the Apoſtles and Diſciples: for wee profeſſe none other faith then they preached: and if the Proteſtants had the like oportunitie offered them, as the Spaniards had among the Indians, we doubt not but wee ſhould ſee more powerfull effects of our religion, then they haue found of theirs.

The fifth note omitted, with Bellarmine the tenth, is Sanctitas vitæ, the holineſſe of life of the authors, and profeſſors of their religion, cap. 13.

Luitprand. lib. 6.

Anſw. Goe to then, let vs ſee what holy Fathers the patrones of Poperie haue beene; we will begin with their Popes: Was not Pope Ioane a holy woman, who hauing played the whore, fell in trauell in the middeſt of Proceſſion? Was not Pope Iohn 13. another, who is ſaid to haue drunke to the diuell, to haue deſloured virgins and ſtrangers; he lay with Stephana his fathers Concubine, and at the laſt was ſlaine in adulterie? Silueſter the 2. was a Coniurer and a Sorcerer, and couenanted with the diuell for his Popedome: To theſe we will ioyne Gregorie the 7. to make vp a meſſe, of whom Benno writeth, that he raiſed vp the diuell, and poyſoned ſixe Popes his predeceſſors. Many ſuch examples we may finde amongſt their Pope-holy fathers.

To thoſe we may ioyne other of their chiefe pillars. The Cardinall of Crema being ſent Legate into England, anno 1129. in a Councell at London inueighing againſt the mariage of Prieſts, ſaid it was a ſhamefull thing to riſe from the ſides of an whore, to make Chriſts body: who the night following, was ſhamefully taken with a notable whore, Fox pag. 1167.

Pag. 1065. 1. 60

Doctor Maillard a great Sorboniſt in Paris, was ſo notoriouſly practiſed in the filthie acts of Buggerie and Sodomitrie, that almoſt all the children in the ſtreetes did knowe it: ex Iohan. Criſpin.

Fox pag. 2102. Pag. 1905. 1. 57 edition, 1610.

And to come neerer home: that ſtout champion of Poperie, and captaine diſputer Doctor Weſton, was he not apprehended in adulterie, and depriued of all his ſpirituall liuings?

Neither were thoſe the practiſes of a few, but ſuch generally was the guiſe of their Clergie: It was one of the grieuances exhibited by the Nobilitie of Germany in the Councell at Norenberg, that the Prieſts being forbidden to marrie, did goe about day and night to attempt and trie the chaſtitie of matrones, virgines, wiues, &c. pag. 680. Yea, and it is too ſhamefull to rehearſe what filthie abominations were brought to light at the ſuppreſſion of the Abbayes heere in England, which they practiſed in corners, as the Apoſtle ſaith; It is a ſhame to ſpeake of the things, which are done by them in ſecret, Epheſ. 5. 12. See Maſter Bale his Preface to his booke De actis Romanorum pontificum. Wherefore the Ieſuite needed not, ſeeing their nakedneſſe is laid open to the view of the world, thus to boaſt of the holineſſe of their profeſſors, as to make it a note of their Church, which falleth out cleane contrarie.

The ſixth note omitted, with Bellarmine the fifteenth, is ſaith he, Confeſſio aduerſariorum, The confeſſion of their aduerſaries. But here he is very weake in his prooues: Caluinus vocat Bernardum pium ſcriptorem: Caluin (ſaith the Ieſuite) calleth Bernard a godly writer, cap. 16.

Anſwere. Firſt, I pray you, what hath hee got by Caluins confeſſion heere? May not a man commend ſomething in one, and yet not commend all? Caluin commendeth Bernard for a godly deuout man, yet hee approoueth not his iudgement in all things: godlineſſe of life is one thing; pureneſſe and ſinceritie of iudgement another. But what if he had ſimply commended Bernard, what is this to them? who though in many things he ſauour of ſuperſtition, yet in the moſt points is a witneſſe with vs rather then with them, as I could eaſily ſhew, if it were either needefull or conuenient in this place.

Secondly, the Ieſuite, to prooue the confeſſion of his aduerſaries, giueth but one poore inſtance of Caluines confeſſion, and ſuch another of Melancthons, which make nothing for them. But wee can bring forth many confeſſions of the truth vttered by Papiſts: ſome for examples ſake I will ſet downe.

Panormitane, that mightie champion for the Pope, hauing diſputed much in the Councell of Baſil, for the preeminence of the Pope aboue generall Councels, in the end, the matter going againſt him, returning to his lodging complained with teares, that he had beene compelled by his King, to ſtriue againſt the truth, and to put his ſoule in danger: ex Æneâ Syluio.

Ex Henric. Pantal lib. 19. anno 1543.

Doctor Mollius an Italian Martyr, being before the Cardinals of Rome examined of his doctrine, which he confirmed by Scripture, concerning Iuſtification, Free-will, Purgatorie, at the length (they being not able to conuince him) receiued this anſwere, that it was truth which hee affirmed; but it was not meete for this preſent time, becauſe it could not be taught without detriment of the Apoſtolike Sea.

Doctor Biſſens openly in an Oration proteſted in a great aſſembly, that he was diſquieted in conſcience for giuing iudgement againſt thoſe which they called heretikes, becauſe he found moſt part of their opinions agreeable to Scripture, Fox pag.945.col.2. Pag.862.2.30.

The Biſhop of Cauaillon in France, committed the articles of the Merindolians to a certaine Doctor of Diuinitie to be examined, who after eight daies peruſing of them, gaue his anſwere, that hee found them agreeable to Scripture, pag.949.col.2. Pag.866.1.40.

But amongſt all other the confeſsion of Winchester lying vpon his death-bed, is worthie to bee remembred: who being put in minde by another B. of Iuſtification onely by the blood of Chriſt, anſwered, that it was dangerous to open this gap to the people, yet to him, and ſuch other in his caſe it might be vttered: reported by one that was a great doer about Wincheſter, pag.1788.col.1. Pag.1623.1.5.

I will alſo here adioyne the teſtimonie of Eraſmus, whom although the Ieſuite will not acknowledge wholly to be theirs, yet he vouchſafeth to call him ſemi-Chriſtianum, a ſemi-Chriſtian, or halfe-Catholike, lib.1.de verbo Dei, cap.9. he thus writeth to the Archbiſhop of Mentz: That many things were condemned in the bookes of Luther of Monkes and Diuines for hereticall, which in the bookes of Bernard and Auguſtine are read for ſound and godly.

We cannot deſire more large and ample confeſsions of our faith, then haue beene made by the enemies thereof, as in euery point of controuerſie almoſt is ſhewed throughout this Treatiſe: theſe examples may ſuffice: wherefore this note better a great deale ſerueth our turne, then it maketh for the Ieſuite.

Of the iudgements of God vpon Popiſh perſecutors.

TWo other of the Ieſuites notes remaine, the fourteenth, and fifteenth: The vnhappy end (ſaith he) of the enemies of their Church, and the externall happineſſe, and flouriſhing eſtate of the defenders thereof, *cap.*17.18.

Anſwere. Firſt, more fearefull examples of Gods iudgements we ſhall not finde in any, then haue fallen vpon the perſecutors and butcherly ſlaughtermen of Gods ſeruants for the Goſpels ſake: you ſhall finde a whole Treatiſe of this matter, wherein ſuch examples are gathered together, Fox p.2100. Vnto that place I refer the reader, becauſe it were too long to giue particular inſtances of euery thing: yet becauſe the Ieſuite produceth certaine examples of Gods iudgements vpon Luther, Zuinglius, Oecolampadius, Caluin, whom he ſhamefully belieth; I will take a little paine, firſt to make anſwere to his ſlanders, and then to ſhew ſome notable examples of Gods iudgements amongſt them. Firſt, he ſaith, that Luther, after he had ſupped merily, and made all his gueſts ſport, died the ſame night; Zuinglius was ſlaine in battell; Oecolampadius died ſuddenly in the night; Caluin was conſumed of lice, and calling vpon the diuell died, *Bellar.cap.*16.

Anſwere. Firſt, in ſome of theſe reports, the Ieſuite reporteth vntruly: for Luther died not of a ſurfeit or drunkenneſſe, as they report, but of an olde infirmitie and weakneſſe of ſtomacke, and not in the night, but the next morning at eight or nine a clocke: alſo hee made a moſt comfortable end, with a ſweet prayer immediatly before his death, and commending his ſoule heartily into the hands of God; as Melancthon reporteth the manner of his death. And Oecolampadius died not ſuddenly, but of an olde ſickneſſe he had, encreaſed with ſorrow for the death of Zuinglius. Fox pag.873.col.1. Pag.797.2.5. And as touching Maſter Caluin, Bellarmine doth too ſhamefully belie him, who as hee liued, ſo died the ſeruant of God, whatſoeuer theſe children of the father of lies ſay to the contrarie: Maſter Beza, who hath written the ſtorie of his life and death herein deſerueth more credit, then any of your lying and railing Libellers. The like vnſauourie lie Bolſecus Bellarmines author, reporteth of Maſter Caluin, how he was confederate with one Bruleus Oſtuno, a poore ſtranger at Geneua, that hee ſhould faine himſelfe dead, and ſhould be raiſed vp to life by Maſter Caluin; and how the ſaid Bruleus ſo diſſembling, when Caluin came in, and ſaid his praiers ouer him, was found dead indeede, *Bellarm.cap.*14. But we do nothing marueile at the impudent ſpirit of our aduerſaries: for thus alſo they belied Bucer, that faithfull learned man, that hee ſhould denie at his death that Chriſt the Meſſiah was come: And that all the world may know their impudencie, euen this laſt yeere, they were not aſhamed to blaze abroad in their writings, that Beza died a Papiſt conuerted, and that at his motion made at his death, the whole Church of Geneua was reuolted to Papiſtrie: which lying Libell is confuted by Maſter Beza himſelfe, and the reſt of the Miniſters of Geneua in a pamphlet publiſhed in this laſt yeere 1597.

Secondly, ſome of theſe iudgements, which the Ieſuite rehearſeth, wee take to be none at all, as to be ſlaine in battaile, as Zuinglius was; who as a good ſhepheard gaue his life for his flocke, and would not leaue them fighting in the defence of the Goſpell: he did not goe as a Captaine to wage battaile, as ſome of your Popes, and Popiſh Biſhops haue done, but as a Paſtor to teach and comfort them, which your owne Canons allow: as it was decreed, Synod.Franciſcan, That the ſeruants of God, propter diuinum miniſterium, for the diuine miniſterie or ſeruice might goe to warre. Neither is it to bee counted a plague to die by the ſword, or of any other violent death, to him that hath liued well, as S. Auguſtine well ſaith: Noli timere, non poteſt malè mori, qui bene vixerit: Feare not, hee cannot die ill, that hath liued well. And againe, Vndecunque mors pio, bona eſt: Death howſoeuer it commeth to a godly man, is good: *in Pſal.*148. And further, ſaith he, Doeſt thou thinke it an euill death, to die of ſhipwracke, to be ſlaine by the ſword, torne of wilde beaſts; did not the Martyrs endure the like deaths?

Thirdly, it ſhall euen now appeare, that all theſe iudgements which the Ieſuite hath brought forth, and many more haue iuſtly fallen vpon Popiſh perſecutors. And for his ſiue fained examples, wee are able to giue him tenne times ſo many: but it ſhall not be needfull to rehearſe ſuch a number, yet ſome I will ſet downe.

Now then in the next place, as the Ieſuite hath endeuoured, but to ſmall purpoſe, to ſingle out ſome Proteſtants, as noted with Gods iudgements: (ſo I will, ſomewhat to ſatisfie the reader) requite them with the like, not referring him altogether to Maſter Foxes treatiſe of this matter. For as Auguſtine well ſaith, Noui quemadmodum ſoleat, contriſtare lectorem, cum à libro, quem gerit in manibus ad alium mittitur, quem forte non habeat: I know how it doth trouble the reader, when as hee is referred from that booke he hath in his hands, to another which he hath not: and ſo hee ſaith, facilius eſt offerre habenti, quam differre non habentem: It is better to offer to him that hath the booke, then to deferre him that hath it not, *Auguſt.lib.*2.*de Baptiſ.cap.*1. I will therefore, for their cauſe that haue not that large volume, ſort out ſome notable examples of Gods iudgements vpon perſecuting Papiſts: and becauſe they may denie them, though they be ſtrange, to be iudgements, I will together with the alleaging of them vſe theſe probations.

First, the likeneſſe of puniſhment in the old perſecuting Pagans, and in the new perſecuting Papiſts. Secondly, the confeſſion of our aduerſaries. Thirdly, the confeſſion of thoſe that were puniſhed and iudged of God. Fourthly, the prediction of the Martyrs, whom they perſecuted. Fifthly, their deſperate ends. Sixthly, the ſame iudgements fell vpon them, which they procured vpon others. Seuenthly, the extraordinarie courſe of Gods iudgements.

Firſt then, if we ſhall finde perſecuting Papiſts to haue ſuſtained the very ſame puniſhments with the Heathen tyrants, no man can doubt, but that they were iuſtly iudged of God. Antiochus a miniſter of crueltie in the fifth perſecution vnder Alexander, while he was in the execution of torments vpon one Agapitus for the Chriſtian faith, ſuddenly fell downe dead from his iudiciall ſeate, crying out, that his bowels within him burned with fire, *Henric. de Erford.lib.*6.*cap.*29. So at the condemnation of Wolfgangus a Germane Martyr, the Commendator of S. Antonie of Vienna ſitting for the ſpirituall Iudge, ſuddenly fell downe and died, and the Abbot of Clarilocus his aſſiſtant not long after at the cracke of gunnes fell downe and died, anno 1525. Pantal.

Againe, Claudius Preſident vnder Valerian, in the eighth perſecution a cruell perſecutor, was vexed Pag.67.2.7. of the diuell, and biting his owne tongue into many ſmall pieces died, Fox pag.74.col.2. In like manner Cardinall Creſcentius was vexed of the diuell, who was Preſident of the Tridentine Chapter, who ſitting vp late to write letters to the Pope, ſaw in his chamber comming toward him an huge blacke dogge with fierie eyes, and therewith ſtriken with a great feare died: vpon whoſe death the Councell Pag 1909.1,89 was diſſolued, pag.2107.

Maximinus that cruell tyrant was ſtriken with a moſt fearefull diſeaſe, conſuming his entrals, whereout iſſued an innumerable multitude of lice, with a moſt filthie ſtinking ſauour, that no man could abide him: his Phiſitions, becauſe they could not cure him, he commanded to be ſlaine, pag.82. Pag.74.1.30. col.1. In like ſort was Minerius plagued, the perſecutor of the innocent Merindolians; whoſe bowels rotted within him being conſumed with wormes: who alſo commaunded his ſurgeon to be apprehended, that gaue him good exhortation; and hee miſerably died with extreame ſtinch of the lo- Pag.1910.1.40 wer parts, with horrible blaſphemies, &c. pag. 913. col. 2. Twyford likewiſe a furious Papiſt, who Pag.1908.1.33 ſet vp the ſtakes in Smithfield, rotted aboue the ground, ſo that no man could abide him, pag.1218. col.1.

Phillips the betrayer of innocent Tyndall died of lice. Bale alſo the Promooter in Queene Maries Pag. 985.1.25. daies, was eaten of lice, pag.2101.col.1.

Maxentius that tyrant falling with his horſe from the bridge, which hee did lay for Conſtantine, was drowned. The like iudgement befell a certaine young Gentleman, an horrible blaſphemer, who being admoniſhed of his ſwearing, ſtill multiplying oathes, pricked forward his horſe, being vpon the bridge: from the which the horſe ſprung aſide into the water, hee crying vpon his backe, Horſe Pag.1907.2.50 and man and all to the diuell, pag.2105. In like ſort Iohn Vander, a chiefe officer of Antwerpe, and a cruell perſecuter, riding to the Citie in his Wagon, when hee was come to the bridge, the horſe ſtanding ſtill, cried out to the driuer, Ride on in a thouſand diuels names: and the horſe ſpringing beſide, hee was caſt into the towne ditch, and ſo drowned. Thus wee ſee, how in all reſpects as the perſecutors of the Primitiue Church were puniſhed, ſo the enemies of Chriſts Church in theſe daies were recompenced. If then ſtrange kindes of death were to bee counted iudgements in them, ſo are they in theſe.

Secondly, wee haue our aduerſaries owne confeſſion: for the Ieſuite noteth foure iudgements of God, as I haue ſhewed before, which hee falſly affirmeth to haue fallen vpon thoſe learned Proteſtants: firſt, ſuddenneſſe of death: ſecondly, to bee vexed of the diuell: thirdly, to die blaſpheming: fourthly, to die ſecurely and merily after pots and cups, as hee ſlandereth Luther. Three of the firſt I haue before touched, and giuen an inſtance of themſelues, that haue taſted of thoſe iudgements: and for the laſt,the Ieſuite might haue remembred how Pope Leo the 10.ſitting at ſupper, and very pleaſant,was ſuddenly ſtriken with a feuer,whereof he died, pag.854. And for ſecure death, Eckius, that mightie impugner of Luther,might haue been thought vpon, whoſe laſt words when hee died were theſe: In caſe the foure thouſand Guilders were ready, the matter were diſpatched; with the which, as it is thought,he ſhould haue purchaſed ſome preferment at Rome.

Thirdly,let vs heare their owne confeſſion that were puniſhed. King Henry the 2.of France hauing receiued his deadly wound at Iuſting,ſaid,hee feared hee was ſtriken for falſely impriſoning the poore Chriſtians,pag.2112. Likewiſe one Baſtian Captaine of the armie, that went againſt the Proteſtants of Luſerne,and S. Martin,threatning that day to doe much againſt them, and returning wounded, it was ſaid vnto him,Now it is well ſeene that their religion is better then ours,pag.967.

Pag.882.1.5.

Fourthly,the prediction & foretelling of the Martyrs of the iudgements that followed,do ſhew that they were ſent of God, as M. Patrike Hamelton at his death did cite the black Frier Campbel,that was his accuſer,to appeare before the moſt high God to anſwer for the innocencie of his death at a certain day of the next moneth: immediatly before which day the Frier died,pag.975.col.2. Likewiſe, anno 1561.at Amboiſe in France certaine gentlemen being vniuſtly condemned to death by the Chancellor Oliuier,one of them tooke of the blood of his fellowes that were beheaded, and lift his hands to heauen,and ſaid; Lord behold the blood of thy children, thou wilt in time reuenge it: and ſhortly after the Chancellor died in great deſpaire, Fox pag.2112.

Fifthly the ſame iudgements ouertooke ſome of them, which they threatned, and had done to others: which ſheweth, that they were ſtriken of God: One Iohn Martin of Briqueras in France, threatned he would ſlit the Miniſters noſe; who was himſelfe aſſaulted of a wolfe, which bit off his noſe, whereof he died mad,pag.955. Sir Raſe Ellerker Knight Marſhall at Calice,when Adam Damlip was executed,ſaid,he would not go away before he ſaw his heart: but he himſelf afterward was taken in a skirmiſh of the French,his priuie members cut off, and his heart raked out of his belly, p.1229. One Landeſdale a cruell enemie to the Goſpel,that ſuffered a poore man to die in a ditch by his houſe, was not long after caſt by his horſe into a ditch,and ſo died, Fox pag.2104.

Pag.871.1.28,

Pag.1907.1.10

Sixthly,their deſperate and fearfull ends do declare that Gods reuenging hand was amongſt them; as Plankney and Hanington,both fellowes of New Colledge in Oxford,drowned themſelues,and were taken vp,with their Crucifixes hanging about their neckes,pag.2104. Clarke,an open enemie to the Goſpell,hanged himſelfe in the tower,pag.1201.col.1. and diuers of them beſide killed themſelues: others died in deſpaire. Gharlatus a learned man of Louaine, and a mightie defender of Poperie, vttering moſt horrible blaſphemies in his ſicknes,cried out,that his ſins were greater then could bee forgiuen: and ſo wretchedly in deſpaire ended his life: ex epiſtol. Claudij Senarclai ad Bucer. In like manner Iacobus Latomus,a mightie impugner of Luther,in his open Lecture in Louaine fell mad,and ſo was carried home and ſhut vp in a cloſe chamber till he died, who had nothing in his mouth,but that he was damned: ex ead.epiſtol. Many ſuch examples might be alleaged to this purpoſe: but theſe may ſuffice to ſhew,that their deſperate madneſſe of ſome in killing themſelues, of others in dying in deſpaire without all comfort,doth euidently ſhew that they were iudged of God.

Pag.1906.2.65.

Pag.1908.2.29

Pag.1909.1.1.

Seuenthly, it may appeare by the extraordinarie meanes whereby ſome of them were puniſhed: Doctor Whittington Chancellor,a perſecutor in King Henry the 7.daies, comming from the burning of a faithfull woman,whom he had condemned, was ſlaine of a Bull,that offered to touch none of the people beſide,but comming againſt him,ranne vpon him,and toſſed him vpon his hornes,trailing his guts all along in the ſtreete,pag.775. Burton Bailiffe of Crowland, an earneſt defender of the Maſſe, and an enemie to the Goſpell,was poyſoned with the excrements of a crow, which flying ouer his head,as he rode by the way,let them fall vpon his noſe and beard, with the ſtinch whereof he fell into a continuall vomiting,whereof he died,pag.2100. A Frier of Mounſter, as hee was in the pulpit inueighing againſt the doctrine of the Goſpel,was ſmitten with a ſudden flaſh of lightning,and ſo died: ex Pantal.2.part,&c. Wherefore as the Ieſuite noteth it to haue been a iudgement of God vpon Anaſtaſius the Emperor,a fauourer of the Eutychian heretikes,that was ſmitten of lightning: ſo can it not be denied,but in like ſort this was a iudgement vpon this Frier. Thus we ſee how little the Ieſuit hath gained by making the iudgements of God a note of the Church.

Of the externall happineſſe of the Church,the fifteenth Note.

NOw concerning externall happineſſe and good ſucceſſe: firſt,it is no certaine note of the Church of God, which oftner is without it, then it doth enioy it: for Chriſts kingdome is not of this world. And as the Lord ſuffered his people to ſoiourne as ſtrangers, and to bee euill entreated foure hundred yeeres,from Abrahams time to Moſes: ſo is it the condition for the moſt part of the Church of God ſtill; as the Prophet Ieremie ſaith, Dedit dilectam animam ſuam in manus inimicorum eius; Hee hath giuen his beloued and deare heart into the hands of the enemies thereof. And Saint Auguſtine ſaith, Beneficentiſſima prouidentia omnipotens deus terrenam felicitatem conceſſit & impijs, ne pro magno quæreretur a bonis? Almightie God of his bountifull prouidence, hath granted earthly felicitie to the wicked,that the godly ſhould not ſo greatly deſire it, epiſt.120. ad Honorat. cap.5. How then can that be a note of the Church which is common to the wicked? Nay, one of your own writers ſaith contrarie, that Crux eſt eccleſiæ nota, the Croſſe is a note of the Church, Eſpenc. in 2. Tim. p. 103. d. And againe, Prædixit Chriſtus labores, Pſeudochriſti proſpera: Chriſt foretold of labour and ſorrow, the falſe Chriſts prophecied of peace and proſperitie, pag. 100. g. By this ſentence Bellarmine is a falſe prophet, that would haue felicitie and proſperitie a note of his Church.

Secondly, as the Ieſuite ſheweth in the examples of Iuſtinian the elder, and Heraclius the Emperour, that they proſpered in their warres till they fell to be maintainers of hereſie, then all things went backward, cap. 18. The like examples wee can produce of the euill ſucceſſe and vnhappie end of thoſe who reuolted from the Goſpell to Papiſtrie, whom God bleſſed in all their enterpriſes before. This was the King of Nauarre his caſe, father to the late French King; who after hee had ſuſtained a while the cauſe of the Goſpell, was content at the length to alter his profeſſion, and ioyne with the Duke of Guize, and was ſtriken with a pellet at the ſiege of Roane, whereof he died, much repenting his reuolt. It had been happie if the ſonne in the ſame caſe had remembred his fathers fall. The like experience of Gods wrath vpon reuolters, others of meaner place haue felt: as Henry Smith ſometime a profeſſor of the Goſpell, afterward at Louaine peruerted to Poperie, comming home hanged himſelfe, with his Agnus dei about his necke. One Williams a ſtudent of the inner Temple, firſt a Goſpeller, then a Papiſt, fell ſtark mad, and ſo continued, Fox pag. 2105. Arnoldus Bomelius a young ſtudent of the Vniuerſitie of Louaine proſpered well, ſo long as he fauoured the Goſpell: afterward being peruerted by Tyleman Maſter of the Popes Colledge, fell into deſpaire, and killed himſelfe with his dagger: whoſe ſtorie Maſter Fox hath at large, pag. 1106. Thus it doth appeare how vnhappely it fareth with popiſh reuolters, contrarie to the Ieſuites obſeruation: therefore they cannot bragge of their outward felicitie.

Pag. 1908. 1. 1.

Pag. 1908. 2. 66

Thirdly, neither of late can our aduerſaries, I think, boaſt of ſuch good ſucceſſe of their kingdome: for ſince the reuiuing of the Goſpell in the world, the Popes Crowne and dignitie hath been much impaired, and many Princes haue withdrawne their collers and ſhoulders from vnder his yoke. And as for England (God enlarge our hearts to be thankfull therefore) there was neuer ſeene the like continuance of peace, and abundance of temporall bleſſings, as the Goſpell hath brought with it hitherto. And I am perſwaded, were it not for our ſinnes, we ſhould enioy many yeeres ſtill, as I truſt in God we ſhall, if we will humble our ſelues before God by true repentance.

Concerning forren teſtimonies: firſt, if outward proſperitie were a note of the true Church, the Emperour of Ethiopia hath better right vnto it, then the Papall and Romane Biſhop, who at this day raigneth in peace ouer fortie kingdomes of Chriſtians, as Villamont reporteth.

Villamont. lib. 2. cap. 4.

2. But it is denied to be a ſure marke of the Church, and that in the iudgement of the Eaſt Churches of the Grecians, Syrians, Armenians, who profeſſe themſelues to bee the Church of God, notwithſtanding they liue and ſuffer much vnder the tyrannicall gouernment of the Turks and Perſians.

3 Thus ſtandeth alſo the confeſſion of Saxonie: Doe not determine with thy ſelfe, that by reaſon of thy proſperitie thou art in fauour with God, &c. Alexander doth not therefore pleaſe God, becauſe he is a conquerour, and enioyeth a large Empire, &c.

Harm. ſect. 9. p. 287.

4 Yea, our aduerſaries doe witneſſe with vs: Gregorie of Valence confeſſeth, that ſometime the Church may be ſo toſſed by the waues of errors, and perſecution, that to ſuch as are vnskilfull, it will be very hard to be knowne, as it fell out when the falſehood of Arrians bare rule almoſt ouer the whole world: and our Rhemiſts alſo grant, that during Antichriſts raigne, the externall ſtate of the Romane Church and publike entercourſe of the faithfull with the ſame, may ceaſe, &c. What ſhall then become of this externall felicitie, which they make to be a marke of the true Church.

Commentar. Theolog. Tom. 3. p. 141.

Thus farre of the Ieſuites fifteene notes, whereby the popiſh Church is deciphered. Now it followeth, that we declare the infallible and moſt certaine notes of the true Church.

Of the true and infallible Note of the Church of Chriſt.

THe outward tokens whereby the true viſible Church is diſcerned, are not many in number, as our aduerſaries doe reckon vp many: the Ieſuite no leſſe then fifteene, ſupplying belike in number, that which they want in waight. Neither in this place doe wee ſpeake of the vniuerſall Catholike inuiſible Church, which is beleeued and not ſeene, being an article of our faith: but of particular viſible Churches, which are diſcerned and knowne by theſe two eſſentiall markes, the true preaching of the word, and right vſe of the Sacraments: Some alſo doe adde a third, namely, Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, Beza confeſſ. de Eccleſ. art. 7. Hooper vpon the Creed, artic. 72. But this partly is comprehended in the two former: for there cannot be hearing and preaching of the word, and the frequenting of the Sacraments, vnleſſe there be an exerciſe of Church diſcipline: partly alſo we ſay that it is not ſo eſſentiall a note, as the other are: for the abſence of the other make a nullitie of the Church. If the word or Sacraments in ſubſtance be corrupted, the Church alſo is defaced: but if there be not an exact forme of diſcipline, it doth not ſtraightway ceaſe to be a Church: it rather is required ad bene eſſe, to the well being of a Church, then ad eſſe ſimplie to the being and eſſence thereof. Wherefore we conclude, that the true preaching of the word, and right vſe of the Sacraments, are the onely neceſſarie and eſſentiall notes of the Church: where theſe two are rightly vſed according to Gods word, there is a right Church, as here in England, God bee bleſſed: where they are falſely and impurely handled, there is a falſe and corrupt Church, as among the Papiſts: where they are not at all in vſe, there is no Church, as amongſt the Turkes, Iewes, and Infidels. Firſt wee will examine our aduerſaries arguments, and then bring foorth our owne.

The Papiſts.

Arg.1. BEllarmine thus argueth: The true notes of the Church ought to be proper and particular, not common and generall, as theſe are: for euery ſect of heretikes doe chalenge to themſelues the right preaching of the word, and vſage of the Sacraments: Ergo, they are no true notes, Bellarm.lib.4.de Eccleſ.cap.2.

We anſwere: Firſt, it skilleth not how many doe lay claime to thoſe notes: the word of God it ſelfe is a manifeſt iudge where pure doctrine is taught, and the Sacraments rightly kept according to the inſtitution. It is no matter, howſoeuer Papiſts and other heretikes doe make their brags, the Scriptures themſelues can ſoone decide this queſtion. And S.Hierome ſaith well to this purpoſe: Nec ſibi blandiantur, quod videantur de ſcripturarum capitulis affirmare, quod dicunt: Neither let them flatter themſelues, becauſe they proue their aſſertions out of Scripture: For ſo the diuell alſo alleaged ſcripture: Sed ſcriptura non in legendo conſiſtunt, ſed intelligendo: But the Scriptures conſiſt not in the reading but vnderſtanding, &c. Cont. Luciferian. So then although heretikes by the letter of Scripture may take vpon them to proue their Church, yet by the true ſenſe thereof they ſhall neuer. Secondly, nay rather this argument may be turned vpon the Ieſuites head: for it is therefore the more like, that theſe ſhould bee the true notes of the Church, becauſe euery hereſie doth labour to proue their Church thereby: for if it were not the right coyne, they would not goe about to counterfeit it. Thirdly, I maruell they are not aſhamed to obiect, that our notes are common, ſeeing theirs are moſt common: for not only aſſemblies of heretiks, but euen the heathen and idolatrous Gentiles might as wel proue themſelues to be the Church, by thoſe popiſh notes, of vniuerſalitie, for Idolatrie had ouerſpread the whole world; of vnitie, they all conſented to perſecute the Church of Chriſt; of antiquitie, for the worſhip of Idols continued aboue 2000. yeers; of ſucceſſion, for the monarchie of the Aſſyrians endured 1300. yeeres, their kings all this while one ſucceeding another. They had alſo prophets, and ſuch as wrought miracles. Our aduerſaries may be now aſhamed to caſt vs in the teeth, that our notes are common, when as theirs doe well agree to the Synagogues of Satan, and aſſemblies of Infidels.

Argum.2. Saith he, the note or the marke muſt be better knowne and more notorious, then the thing marked or notified by it: ſo are not theſe; for wee know not which is the word of God, nor what bookes are Canonicall, and to be taken for Scripture, but by the Church, Bellarm.ibid.

We anſwere: the Ieſuite ſtill beggeth that which is in queſtion: a foule fault in a profeſſed diſputer: for haue we not largely proued before, 1.*contr.quaeſt.*4. that the Church dependeth vpon the authoritie of the Scripture, and not contrariwiſe, and that there is no more certaine and euident and vndoubted thing in the whole world, vpon the which a man may be bold to build and ground his faith, then vpon the Scriptures? This ſure is a childiſh and ridiculous argument, to take that as granted, which is moſt of all in controuerſie. Secondly, he committeth the ſame fault himſelfe, chap.14. where he maketh the power of miracles a note of the Church, and yet confeſſeth, Ex Eccleſia miracula demonſtrari: That true miracles are demonſtrated by the Church; why then may not the word of God as well ſhew the Church, although in ſome ſenſe the Church ſhew the word? Thirdly, the Ieſuite confeſſeth, *cap.*2. that where the Scripture is receiued, and the Church doubted of, there the Scripture declareth the Church: which is our very caſe in theſe daies: for ſeeing our aduerſaries and wee are agreed concerning the moſt of the Canonicall Scriptures, but differ about the Church, in the Ieſuits iudgement in this caſe we muſt demonſtrate the Church by the Scriptures. Fourthly, the Ieſuite miſtaketh the matter: for we doe not thus reaſon, where the Scriptures are acknowledged for the word, there is the Church; for the Iewes receiue the old Teſtament, the diuell knoweth it is the word of God, which is contained in the Scriptures; but they are neither of the Church: but where the word is faithfully preached, profeſſed, receiued, and beleeued, there is the Church.

Argum.3. The true notes (ſaith he) are inſeparable from the Church: it is neuer without them. But many true Churches haue wanted theſe: The Church of the Corinthians was a true Church, and yet they beleeued not the reſurrection, 1.Cor.15. The Galathians were a true Church, and yet they held that Moſes law was to be obſerued together with the Goſpell. And the Corinthians likewiſe did not ſincerely obſerue the Sacraments, 1.Cor.11. And as many true Churches haue wanted theſe notes, ſo falſe Churches may haue them: for there may be true doctrine among ſchiſmatikes, ſuch as the Donatiſts were: for ſchiſmatikes may hold all points of ſound doctrine, who faile in charitie rather then in faith: Ergo, theſe are no true ſignes, Bellarm.ibid.

We anſwere: firſt, this argument may with better right bee returned vpon their owne head: for many true Churches haue wanted their markes: Chriſt and his Apoſtles had neither ſucceſſion from Aaron, nor vniuerſalitie, and yet they made the true Church. The Church of the Iewes after Malachies time had no Prophets, nor miracles, for the ſpace of foure hundred yeeres before Chriſt, and yet were they the true Church, and ſo of the reſt of your notes, the Church of Chriſt hath many times wanted them. Secondly, it was not the whole Church of Corinthus that doubted of the reſurrection, but certaine falſe Apoſtles that laboured to ſeduce others. Some of you (ſaith the Apoſtle) haue not the knowledge of God: he ſaith not, all. So likewiſe amongſt the Galathians there were falſe teachers, 1.Cor.15.34. Galath.5.9.

that ſtood for the law of Moſes. A little leauen doth marre the whole lumpe. It was not therefore a publike doctrine in the Church, but ſecretly taught by falſe Apoſtles. Thirdly, there may be ſome error in the Church, but being not fundamentall, ſuch an one as deſtroyeth faith, it doth not diſſolue the Church: as there was ſome abuſe amongſt the Corinthians in receiuing the Sacrament: but the forme and inſtitution and ſubſtance of the Sacrament was kept. Nay, yet to grant a little more, though the error be dangerous, and of great waight and moment, and ſuch an one, as being ſtifly maintained, would deſtroy the faith and Church too: yet if they haue fallen into it rather of ignorance, then any other cauſe, and doe not continue in it, but doe ſubmit themſelues to be reformed by the word, it ceaſeth not for all that to be a Church. So the Corinthians referred themſelues wholly and their opinions to the iudgement and determination of the Apoſtle.

To the ſecond part of the argument, that pure doctrine may be found in an impure Church.

We anſwere firſt, the example which the Ieſuite alleageth of the Donatiſts, is nothing to his purpoſe: for the Donatiſts did not only offend in their ſchiſme, but they held alſo ſchiſmaticall and vntrue opinions, as that the Sacraments were polluted by the Miniſters, that Baptiſme giuen by heretikes, ought to be iterated: that the Church in the earth conſiſteth only of the good without any mixture of euill men: that the Church was periſhed from the whole world, and remained only amongſt them: theſe were the opinions of the Donatiſts: they had not therefore pure doctrine. Auguſtine doubteth not to ſay vnto a chiefe Donatiſt: Schiſmaticus es ſacrilega diſceſſione, hæreticus ſacrilego dogmate: Thou art a ſchiſmatike, for thy ſacrilegious departure from the Church, and an heretike for thy ſacrilegious opinions, Cont. Gaudent. lib.3. Wherefore the Ieſuite was much ouerſeene in alleaging this example. Secondly, there are no ſchiſmatikes, which doe ſeparate themſelues from the Church, but they doe diſſent in ſome opinion, and ſo as well falſe in faith as in charitie: for what elſe ſhould moue them, to be diuided from the Church, but diuerſitie and difference of doctrine? So Auguſtine anſwereth Creſconius, who made this difference of hereſie and ſchiſme: Hereſis, ſaith the Donatiſt, eſt diuerſa ſequentium ſecta, ſchiſma eadem ſequentium ſeparatio: An hereſie is a ſect of thoſe that follow other opinions, a ſchiſme is a ſeparation of thoſe which are of one opinion. No, ſaith Auguſtine, Nulla ſciſſio, vel ſchiſma eſt niſi diuerſum ſequantur: There is no ſchiſme, vnleſſe they follow diuers opinions. And that ſaying of S. Hierom is allowed in your owne decrees, Nullum ſchiſma, non aliquam ſibi confingit hereſim: There is no ſchiſme, which doth not inuent ſome new hereſie: decr. par.2. cauſ.24. qu.3. c.26. For although a ſchiſmatike ſhould be of the ſame iudgement in all other things, yet herein hee faileth in ſound doctrine, in that he thinketh it lawfull, to diuide himſelfe from the Church: yet the Ieſuite ſhall neuer be able to ſhew me ſuch a ſchiſmatike, which did not beſide his ſeparation, hold ſome doctrine contrarie to the Catholike truth. And further we ſay, that ſchiſmatikes, though they hold ſome falſe points of doctrine, yet if their errors bee not fundamentall, and if they retaine the puritie of doctrine in all points neceſſary to ſaluation, and the right adminiſtration of the Sacraments, may make a particular Church by themſelues, though they are no part of that viſible Church, from the which they are diuided by ſchiſme. And here to this purpoſe I will remember a wiſe reſolution of [a] Atticus Patriarke of Conſtantinople, next but one after Chryſoſtome, who being very auſtere toward other heretikes, yet ſeemed to fauour the Nouatians, and ſuffered them to haue their aſſemblies in the citie: and hereof he vſed to giue two reaſons, both becauſe they had ſuffered much together with other true Catholikes for the orthodoxall faith vnder Conſtantius and Valens two Arriane Emperours: and for that, although they had diuided themſelues from the Church, in fide nihil innouarunt, they had innouated nothing concerning faith, &c.

[a] Socrates lib.7. cap.25.

Wherefore we conclude, that whereſoeuer true and ſound doctrine is taught wholly and in euerie part, for the matter, though not for the manner, there is the Church: as S. Paul ſaith, So Chriſt be preached, whether vnder pretence or ſincerely, I therein reioyce.

Philip.1.18.

The Proteſtants.

1 For the ſufficiencie of theſe notes, we would deſire no better arguments then thoſe which our aduerſaries alleaged againſt vs: for firſt our notes are proper only to the Church, and cannot be found in any place, where the Church of God is not. Secondly, they are moſt notorious markes, and a man by the Scriptures may more eaſily know, what true doctrine is, and which are the right Sacraments, then which is the true Church. Thirdly, theſe markes cannot be abſent from the Church, but doe alwaies accompanie it, and it is no longer a true Church, then it hath thoſe markes.

Argum.2. We are able out of the Scriptures to proue theſe marks, which may ſtand in ſtead of many reaſons. His ſheepe heare his voyce. Clenſing it by the waſhing of water through the word. Ergo, the Word and Sacraments are true notes of the Church.

Iohn 10.3.
Epheſ.5.26.

Bellarmine anſwereth to the firſt place, that the hearing of the word, is not a viſible note of the Church, but a ſigne vnto euery man, whereby he may know his election. Wee replie againe: which way a man is knowne to be a member of the Church, by the ſame way the Church alſo it ſelfe is diſcerned: if the hearing of the word doe make one a ſheepe of Chriſt, then doth it alſo ſhew which is the flocke and fold of Chriſt: As I know my hand or foote to be a part of my bodie, becauſe it hath life and motion of the bodie; euen ſo the bodie is diſcerned from a carcaſe, becauſe it moueth and liueth.

To the ſecond place he anſwereth, verie ſimply, that the Apoſtle there ſheweth not, which is the Church, but what good Chriſt hath wrought for his Church. Wee reply againe: But the Church is beſt knowne by the benefits that Chriſt hath beſtowed vpon it, amongſt the which the Word and the Sacraments are not the leaſt: Ergo, by theſe the Church is knowne, and in that place by the Apoſtle deſcribed: and let the reader iudge, whether that place of the Apoſtle, where there is direct mention made of the Word and Sacraments, be not fitly applied to our purpoſe, concerning the deſcription of the Church.

Argum. 3. Looke how Chriſt is knowne, ſo is his Church: but Chriſt is knowne onely by the Scriptures, as he himſelfe ſaith, Search the Scriptures, for they doe teſtifie of me: Ergo, the true Church is to be knowne by the Scriptures: The word of God therefore is an infallible note of the Church; argum. Bradford. epiſt. ad Cantabrigienſ. This argument alſo vſeth D. Ridley Martyr, alleaging a place out of Chryſoſtome to this ſenſe: In times paſt there were many waies to know the Church of Chriſt by, as by good life, chaſtity, miracles, &c. but now theſe things are common to heretickes: and therfore the true Church is now to be knowne, tantummodo per ſcripturas, only by the Scriptures: Hom. 49. in Mat. in oper. imperf.

John 5.39.

S. Auguſtine alſo ſaith, In ſcripturis didicimus Chriſtum, in ſcripturis didicimus eccleſiam, epiſtol. 166. In the Scripture we doe learne Chriſt, in the Scripture let vs likewiſe learne the Church, &c. His argument is the ſame that here wee haue vſed. Looke how Chriſt is knowne, ſo is his Church: but Chriſt is onely knowne by his word: Ergo, ſo is his Church.

Now let vs adde the ſeale and ſtampe, which the holy Martyrs haue ſigned this doctrine with, in their blood. Richard Feurius Martyr, who ſuffered at Lions for the truth, anno 1554. ſaith, that the Church of God is onely to be knowne by the word of God, and the right inſtitution of the Sacraments. Fox pag. 912. Fredericke Danuille Martyr at Paris, being asked whether theſe two were the notes of the Church, anſwered, That doe I beleeue, and therein will I liue and die, Fox pag. 922. col. 2. See the confeſſion alſo of Thomas Benet, Martyr. pag. 1039. col. 2. Of George Marſh Martyr 1565. col. 2. Of Bartlet Greene Martyr, The true markes of Chriſts Church, ſaith he, is the true preaching of his word, and miniſtery of the Sacraments, pag. 1852. col. 2. All theſe with many others aduentured their liues, dying in the faith of that Church, which was knowne by thoſe two infallible notes. Let the Papiſts bring forth any that durſt doe the like for their vniuerſalitie, antiquitie, and the like.

Let vs ſee what teſtimonies other Churches will affoord vs. 1. The Greeke Church holde the Scriptures ſufficient, to lead into all truth: as Ieremie Oecumenicall patriarke ſaith: Let theſe things ſuffice you, most deare brethren, which (as you ſee) doe beſt of all accord and agree with the Scriptures, &c. for feare that being once drawne, or led out of the way of Euangelicall doctrine wee erre: they thus holding, muſt needs take that to be the Church, where the pure word is taught and profeſſed, as preſcribing all things neceſſarie to ſaluation. 2. The ſame is the faith of the Abyſſines, and Æthiopike Church, that the Scriptures are ſufficient to ſaluation, without thoſe other bookes, which they call Manda, and Abetilis, whereof they make greate account, and they denie not the name of true Chriſtians, to thoſe that haue not thoſe bookes: they hold them to bee true Chriſtians that beleeue the Scriptures, and all things therein contained.

3. This is the generall conſent of the reformed Churches, that the true Church of God is diſcerned by the preaching of the word, and the right vſe of the Sacraments. The Synod of Collen determineth, that the euangelicall doctrine, præcipuam Eccleſiæ notam, is the chiefe note of the Church: ſo alſo *Intertelig. THE FOVRTH QVESTION, OF THE authoritie of the Church.

THe Papiſts affirme, that the authoritie of the Church conſiſteth in theſe fiue points. Firſt, in authoriſing the Scriptures, and defining which are Canonicall. Secondly, in giuing the ſenſe of the Scripture. Thirdly, in determining matters besides Scripture. Fourthly, in making lawes and constitutions for the Church. Fifthly, in exercising of discipline.

Concerning the two last, we doe not greatly stand with them. We acknowledge the Church hath Act.15. authority to make decrees and constitutions, but so, as the Apostles did: Visum est nobis & spiritui 1.Cor.5.4. sancto, It seemeth good to vs and the holy Ghost: the Church must bee directed by the wisedome of the spirit speaking in the Scriptures.

We also acknowledge the wholesome power of the Church in exercising of holy discipline: but it must be done in the name and power of Christ, not according to the will of men.

Concerning the two first: we haue already shewed, that neither the Church doth giue authoritie to the word of God, but doth take her authority from them; for the Scriptures are of sufficient credit of themselues, 1.contron.quest.4. neither that the sense of Scripture dependeth vpon the interpretation of the Scripture, but that the word expoundeth it selfe, 1.contron. quest.6.

There remaineth therefore onely one point to be discussed of the authority of the Church: namely, in deciding of matters beside the Scriptures: which are of two sorts, either necessarie appertaining to faith, or indifferent concerning ceremonies: of both these in their order.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE CHVRCH hath authority in matters of faith beside the Scriptures.

16.Error. WE ought to take our faith and all necessarie things of saluation at the hands of our superiors, Rhemist. Act.10.sect.8. In points not decided by Scripture wee must aske counsell of the Church, Praefat.sect.25. The Church is the onely pillar and stay to leane vnto in all doubts of doctrine, without the which there can bee no certainty nor securitie: wee must therefore beleeue it and trust it in all things, annot.1. Timoth.cap.3.sect.9. Yea it hath authority, say they, to make new articles of faith: as in the Councell of Constance it was decreed to bee necessarie to saluation, to beleeue Rhemist.1. Tim.3.9. the Pope to be head of the Church. In the Councell of Basile it was made an article of the faith, to beleeue that the Councell was aboue the Pope; and therefore Pope Eugenius in not obeying the Councell was adiudged to be an heretike.

Ioh.15.27. Argum.1. Vpon these words in the Gospell, Ioh.15.27. the spirit shall testifie of me, and you shall beare witnesse also: they conclude thus: Ergo, the testimonie of the truth ioyntly consisteth in the holy Ghost and Prelates of the Church, Rhemist.Ioh.15.sect.8.

We answere: the witnesse of the spirit, and of the Apostles, is all one witnesse: for the spirit first testifieth the truth to the Apostles inwardly, and the Apostles inspired by the spirit did witnesse it outwardly: so the Pastors of the Church witnessing with the spirit, which is not now inspired by reuelation, but tiuely found in the Scriptures, are to be heard: but if the spirit testifie one thing in the word, and they testifie another, there we must leaue them.

Argum.2. The Church erreth not: Ergo, we must heare her in all things, Rhemist.1.Timoth.3.sect.9. We answere: first, the Church may erre, if she follow not the Scriptures proued before, 2.Contron.quest.2. Secondly, so long as the Church heareth Christs voice, we are likewise to heare hers: and so long as she is preserued from errour, she will not swerue from Christs precepts, neither impose any thing vpon her children, without the warrant of her spouse.

Saint Paul meaneth not, that the word of God in it selfe killeth, which is the word of life, but that the word is vnprofitable, and killeth him that is voide of the spirit of God: and therefore the Apostle saith, that the Gospell was to some the sauour of life to life, and to some the sauour of death, &c. Respons.Philpot.Mart.ibid.

Obiect. The word cannot be iudge of the word: Ergo, there must be another iudge beside. Arg. Stori pag.1805.col.1. Answere. Our Sauiour Christ saith, Verbum, quod locutus sum, indicabit in no- Pag.1638.2.60 uissimo die, The word that I haue spoken, shall iudge at the last day: If the word shall iudge at the last day, much more it ought to iudge our doings now, Respons.Philpot.Mart.ibid.

The Protestants.

THat the Church hath no such power to ordaine articles of faith, or impose matters to be beleeued necessarie to saluation not contained, or prescribed in the holy Scriptures: we proue it thus, and we are sure, that the true Church of Christ will neuer challenge any such prerogatiue.

Argum.1. All truths and verities in the Scriptures are not so necessarie to saluation, that the ignorance thereof should bring perill of damnation: Ergo, much lesse are any verities out of Scripture of any such necessity; the first is manifest: for to know the iust chronologie of time or space of yeeres, from the beginning of the world to Chriſt, is a veritie in Scripture, yet not neceſſarie, ſo to beleeue that Mary continued a virgine euer after the birth of our Lord, was thought by Baſile to be no neceſſarie point to ſaluation, if wee did hold her to haue been a virgine afore: and many ſuch other points there are in Scriptures which a man may be ignorant of without perill of ſaluation: Ergo, much more may we be ignorant of vnwritten verities, or rather Popiſh fables. For it is not like that the Scriptures doe abundare in ſuperfluis, abound in ſuperfluous things, that be not neceſſarie to ſaluation, & deficere in neceſſarijs, and be wanting in neceſſarie.

Argum. 2. The Church hath no more authoritie then the Apoſtles, nor yet in all things ſo much: but they had no power to make articles of faith: for S. Paul deliuereth that which hee had receiued concerning the Sacrament, hee durſt not adde vnto it, as the Papiſts haue been bold to doe ſince, 1. Cor. 11. Vpon which place S. Ambroſe thus writeth: Indignum dicit domino, qui aliter myſterium celebrat, quàm ab eo traditum eſt: non enim poteſt deuotus eſſe, qui aliter præſumit, quàm datum eſt ab authore: The Apoſtle ſaith, hee is vnworthie of the Lord, which doth celebrate the myſterie otherwiſe then it was by him deliuered: for hee hath no true deuotion, which preſumeth to doe otherwiſe then the author preſcribed: Ergo, the Church may explaine and open articles of faith out of the Scriptures, but not make new. Heare of this matter alſo a writer, whom ye will not refuſe: Vincentius Lirinenſis vpon theſe words, 1. Timoth. 6, 20. O Timothie, Keepe that which is committed vnto thee: Intelligatur te exponente illuſtriùs, quod antè obſcuriùs credebatur: eadem tamen, quæ didiciſti, doce, vt cùm dicas nouè, non dicas noua: Let that bee vnderſtood more cleerely by thy expoſition, which was obſcurely beleeued before: yet teach none other things then thou haſt learned, that though you ſpeak them after a new manner, yet vtter no new things. If Timothie then was to bring in no new things, but onely to explaine the old, how much leſſe the Paſtors of the Church now.

1.Tim.6.20.

Argum. 3. We proue it by the confeſſion of our aduerſaries. The fathers of Baſile, that concluded, it was an article of the Chriſtian faith to beleeue the ſuperiority of the Councell, did gather it out of the ſaying of Chriſt, dic eccleſiæ, and therefore enforced it as an article. Whereby wee gather, that they held, that the Church could eſtabliſh no article of faith without Scripture. Bellarmine likewiſe ſaith, that the Church is not now gouerned by new reuelations, but we ought to bee contented with thoſe decrees, which we haue receiued from the Apoſtles: Ergo, as Doctor Whitakers doth ſtrongly conclude, the Church cannot coyne new articles of faith.

Fox, pag.677.

Controuerſ.de Script.quæſt.6 cap.4.

Argum. 4. If the Scriptures doe teach all neceſſarie points both concerning faith and manners, then hath the Church no authoritie to eſtabliſh other articles of faith beſide: but the firſt is true: for the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Scriptures are able to make a man perfect to euery good worke: but where perfection is, there is nothing wanting, 2. Timoth. 3. 17. Ergo, the Church hath no ſuch power: ſee more of this, controu. 1. quæſt. 7. part. 2.

1.Tim.3.17.

Laſtly, wee haue before proued at large out of the word of God, that the Scriptures containe all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: and therefore all articles of faith muſt be deriued from thence, 1. copt. quæſt. 7. And ſo we conclude with Auguſtine: Lingua ſonos, quibus inter ſe homines ſua ſenſa communicent, pacto quodam ſocietatis ſibi inſtituere poſſunt: Quibus autem ſacris diuinitati congruerent, voluntatem Dei ſequuti ſunt, qui rectè ſapuerunt; Quæ omnino nunquam defuit ad ſalutem iuſtitiæ pietatique hominum: Men, ſaith he, may deuiſe among themſelues what language they will vſe to expreſſe their minde: but how to ſerue God, wiſe men euer followed the will and commandement of God, which was neuer wanting to mẽ vnto ſaluation in matters concerning righteouſnes & godlines, &c. By this Fathers ſentence, the Scriptures which containe the will of God, containe all neceſſarie things. Ergo, we neede not ſeeke elſewhere.

Epiſtol.49. quæſt.2.

This truth is ſealed by the confeſſion and glorious witneſſe of the holy Martyrs, that the holy Scriptures being written by the inſpiration of the holy Ghoſt, are the very true word of God, and therefore to be heard accordingly, as the Iudge in all controuerſies and matters of religion: this was the confeſſion of the holy Martyrs ſet forth anno 1554 ſubſcribed by Iohn Hooper, Iohn Rogers, Rowland Taylor, Iohn Philpot, Iohn Bradford, Laurence Saunders, and others, Fox, pag. 1470. col. 2. 1471. col. 1.

Pag.1336.2.5. & 2337.1470.

Laſtly, we haue the authority of their owne Councels, Concil. Baſilienſ. epiſtol. ſynodal. Pope Vrbane is alleaged thus writing: Sciendum eſt quia inde Romanus pontifex nouas leges condere poteſt, vnde Euangeliſtæ nequaquam aliquid dixerunt, &c. Know this, that the Biſhop of Rome hath authoritie in this caſe to make new lawes, where the Euangeliſts and Scriptures are ſilent, &c. But the Scriptures are not ſilent in any point concerning faith and manners. See the Councell of Caulon. can. 67. cited before contron. 1. quæſt. 7. part. 2. argum. 3. Ergo, neither the Church or Pope hath authoritie herein to make new lawes. And laſtly I will produce one of your owne Popes teſtimonies, Iohn 22. extrau. tit. 14. c. 5. verſus finem. Articuli fidei in ſymbolis continentur, &c. articuli fidei habent per ſcripturam probari: The articles of faith are contained in the Symbols or Creeds. Againe, the articles of faith muſt be proued by Scripture. Ergo, the Church can make no new article of the faith: but is bound to receiue thoſe contained in the Creed, and proued out of the Scriptures. Likewiſe Concil. Ferraria. ſeſſ. 9. Beſſarion thus ſaith, Sciatis addendi ſymbolo facultatem, non ſolùm Romanæ, verùm vniuerſali Eccleſiæ, generalique ſynodo interdictam eſſe: Know yee that to adde to the Creede, not onely the Romane, but the vniuerſall Church and generall Synod hath no authority.

Concerning forraine teſtimonies. 1. For the Greeke Church, Ieremie, Oecumenicall Patriarke thus writeth, for feare leſt being once drawne, or led out of the way of Euangelicall doctrine, and the path of true wiſedome and vnderſtanding, wee may erre: The Church then cannot determine any thing without Scripture, vnleſſe ſhe will erre. 2. The Abyſſines beleeue, that there is not any power, whether Councell or whatſoeuer, &c. which may bring in any doctrine, not grounded vpon the Scripture.

3 The reformed Churches agree: Wittenberg. artic. 32. The Church hath ſo farre authority to iudge of doctrine, that notwithſtanding ſhe muſt keepe her ſelfe within the bounds of the holy Scriptures, which is the voice of her husband, from which voice it is not lawfull for any man, no not for an Angell to depart. Confeſſion of Auſpurg. artic. 7. As for that which Chriſt ſaith, I haue yet many things to ſay vnto you, doubtleſſe he meaneth not thoſe fooliſh ceremonies, that the Popes haue brought in, or any new article of faith, but a further illumination of that Goſpell, which he had already deliuered.

4 Some of the Romaniſts doe beare witneſſe with vs: Marſilius ſaith, Nulli ſermoni vel ſcriptura ratam fidem, &c. We are not bound to giue faith vnto any decree or writing as neceſſarie to ſaluation, but onely to the Canonicall Scripture. Eſpenceus thus writeth vpon theſe words, 2. Tim. 2. That worthy thing which was committed vnto thee, keepe, &c. Quod tibi creditum, non a te inuentum; quod accepiſti non excogitaſti, &c. rem ad te productam, non a te prolatam; in qua cuſtos eſſe debes, non author; ſequens, non ducens: Which was committed to thy truſt, not found out by thee, which thou haſt receiued, not conceiued; which is brought vnto thee, not from thee, wherein thou muſt bee a keeper, not an authour, following, not leading, &c. He ſheweth that the Paſtors of the Church haue no authority to excogitate new points of doctrine, but they muſt keepe that, which is deliuered vnto them out of the Scripture; Bellarmine alſo himſelfe calleth the Scripture, regulam fidei certam, A ſure rule of the faith.

AN APPENDIX OR MEMBER OF THIS PART of the queſtion, whether we are to beleeue in the Church.

The Papiſts.

25. Error.

WE ought to beleeue and truſt the Church in all things: yea to beleeue in the Church, Rhemiſt. 1. Tim. 3. ſect. 9. the Scripture alſo vſeth this ſpeech, to beleeue in men. annot. in. 10. Rom. 1. ſect. 41.

Exod. 14. 31.

Argum. 1. Exod. 14. 31. they beleeued in God and Moſes, Ergo, We anſwere. Your owne vulgar text hath it, crediderunt Deo & Moſi ſeruo eius: they beleeued God and his ſeruant Moſes: that is, hauing ſeene the great power of God in the deſtruction of the Egyptians in the red ſea, according to the word of Moſes, they gaue credit vnto Moſes, which ſpake vnto them from God.

Philem. v. 5.

Argum. 2 Philem. verſ. 5. Hearing of thy loue and faith which thou haſt toward the Lord Ieſus and vnto all the Saints. See, ſay they, here is faith toward the Saints.

Wee anſwere: there is no man, that is not peruerſly diſpoſed, but may eaſily diſtinguiſh the Apoſtles words; to attribute faith to Ieſus Chriſt, and loue to the Saints: which may appeare by the altering of the prepoſition, as they themſelues reade in their owne tranſlation, loue and faith in Ieſus Chriſt, and toward the Saints: ſo it muſt needs bee thus vnderſtood, faith in Chriſt, and loue toward the Saints: this therefore is but a ſophiſticall cauill.

The Proteſtants.

THis word, Credo, beleeue, is taken three waies: for there is credere Deo, to beleeue God, that is, to truſt him in all things, credere Deum, to beleeue God to bee, credere in Deum, to beleeue in God, as our Creator, Lord, and Redeemer. So we doe credere eccleſiam, we beleeue there is one holy Catholike Church: credere eccleſiæ, we doe alſo beleeue and giue credence to the Church, following the word of God: But we doe not in any wiſe credere in eccleſiam, beleeue in the Church.

Iohn 14. 1.

Argum. 1. We muſt not beleeue or put any confidence in a creature: the Church is but a creature: Ergo: for to beleeue in God, is onely proper to the Godhead: and therefore Ioh. 14. 1. where Chriſt ſaith, ye beleeue in God, beleeue alſo in me: we doe neceſſarily out of theſe words inferre, that Chriſt is God, becauſe we are commanded to beleeue in him.

Argum. 2. Faith is of things that are abſent and not ſeene: but the Church is preſent alwaies vpon earth, and alwaies viſible, as our aduerſaries holde: how then can it be an obiect of our faith? Wee cannot beleeue in that which is viſible and ſeene, for it is againſt the nature of faith.

Ierem. 17. 3.
Tom. 3. diſput. 1. qu. 1. punct. 1
Thom. 2. 2. q. 1 act. 10.
2. 2. qu. 11. ar. 2.

Argum. 3. The Prophet ſaith, curſed is the man, that truſteth in man: but they which beleeue in the Church truſt in man: for they make the Church to be nothing elſe in the end, but the Pope himſelfe: as Gregor. de Valent. by the Church wee meane, her head, that is to ſay, the Romane Biſhop: and Thomas, the making of a new Creed belongeth to the Pope, as all other things doe which belong to the whole Church: yea, the whole authority of the Church abideth in him.

Auguſtine ſaith, Sciendum eſt quod eccleſiam credere, non tamen in eccleſiam credere debemus, quia eccleſia non eſt Deus ſed domus dei: de tempore ſerm. 131. We muſt know, that we are to beleeue there is a Church, not in the Church, for the Church is not God, but onely the houſe of God. Your owne decrees alſo doe approue that ſaying of S. Auguſtine, Hom. 3, ad Neophytos, decr. par. 3 diſt. 4. c. 73. Non quomodo in Deum credimus, ſic in Eccleſiam ſanctam catholicam, quia propterea ſancta & catholic lica eſt, quia certè credit in Deum: Non ergo diximus vt in Eccleſiam quaſi in Deum crederetis, ſed vt in Eccleſia ſancta conuerſantes in Deum crederetis, &c. As we beleeue in God, ſo we doe not beleeue in the Church; which is therefore holy, becauſe it beleeueth aright in God: therefore wee ſaide not, you muſt beleeue in the Church as in God, but that hauing your conuerſation in the Church, you ſhould beleeue in God, &c. From whence wee reaſon thus: that which beleeueth vpon another, is not to bee beleeued vpon; but the Church beleeueth vpon God: Ergo: the reaſon of the propoſition is this, becauſe faith and beliefe is the laſt refuge of a Chriſtian; but beyond our beliefe in the Church there ſhould be another beliefe in God. And againe, there is but one and the ſelfe ſame obiect of faith; but now ſhould there be diuers, God the obiect of the Churches faith, and the Church the obiect of our faith.

For the confeſſion of this truth, that we ought to truſt onely in God, and not in men, and that we are bound no further to beleeue the decrees of the Church, then they are agreeable to the Scriptures: two conſtant Martyrs, H. Voes, and John Eſch, gaue their liues at Bruxelles, an. 1523. Fox pag. 874.

Laſtly, let vs ſee the iudgement of other Churches. 1. The Greeke Church doth hold all the ſayings, ſtatutes, writings, canons, and determinations of the Church of Rome to be nothing: ſo farre are they from giuing credit, or beleeuing their Church. Pag.798.2.60. Sacranus de relig. Ruth. c.2.

2 And Zaga-zabo an Æthiopian Biſhop, confeſſed, that their Biſhops neither of them ſelues nor in Councell could make any lawes, whereunto any man ſhould be bound vnder paine of mortall ſinne: ſo farre are they alſo from requiring any confidence, or beliefe to be repoſed in the Church. Damianus a Goes de legat. Indor.

3 Adde hereunto the iudgement of the reformed Churches; as of Auſpurge artic. 7. who allow that ſaying of Auguſtine, Neither muſt we ſubſcribe to Catholike Biſhops, if they chaunce to erre, or hold opinions, which be againſt the Scriptures. Harm. ſect. 11. p. 366.

4 Some of their owne Doctors are for vs: as Thomas, Our faith reſteth and ſtayeth it ſelfe vpon the reuelation, giuen to the Apoſtles and Prophets which writ the canonicall bookes, and not vpon reuelation, if any ſuch haue beene made to other Doctors: Alliaco ſaith, Ad ſcripturas fit vltima reſolutio Theologici diſcurſus, &c. Vnto the Scriptures is the laſt reſolution of Theologicall diſcourſe: but that onely muſt be the obiect of our faith and beliefe, which is the laſt refuge and reſolution. Thom. 1. qu. 1. art. 8. 1. Senten. qu. 1. art. 3. 1. Coroll.

THE SECOND PART OF THE QVESTION, concerning the ceremonies of the Church.

The Papiſts.

THey doe hold that the Church of God may vſe and bleſſe diuers elements and creatures for the ſeruice of God: as holy water to driue away diuels: the hallowing of ſalt, waxe, fire, palmes, aſhes, oyle, creame, milke, honey, Rhemiſt. 1. Tim. 4. ſect. 12. & 13. Yea that the Church may borrow rites and ceremonies of the Iewes: ibid. ſect. 18. Yea by the creatures thus bleſſed, or rather coniured, they ſay, remiſſion of ſinnes is obtained, ſect. 14. 26. Error.

Argum. 1. Remiſſion of ſinnes was annexed to the oyle wherewith the ſicke were annointed, Iam. 5. Ergo, remiſſion of ſinnes may bee applied by the like conſecrated elements, Rhemiſt. 1. Tim. 4. ſect. 14. Iam. 5. 14.

Wee anſwere: Firſt, it followeth not becauſe the creature of oyle was vſed in the miraculous gift of healing, and by the appointment of Chriſt (which ceremonie alſo was no longer to continue then that miraculous gift endured) it followeth not that other elements may bee vſed ſo now without any ſuch warrant, and there being not the like occaſion, ſeeing all ſuch miraculous gifts are now ceaſed. Secondly, it was not the oyle whereby their ſinnes were forgiuen them, neither was it applied to that end, it was onely a pledge vnto them of their bodily health: but the prayer of faith ſhall ſaue the ſicke, ſaith the Apoſtle, verſ. 15. for God hath promiſed to heare the faithfull prayers of his children both for themſelues and others.

Argum. 2. S. Paul vſed impoſition of hands, which was a ceremonie of the law vſed in conſecrating of Prieſts: Ergo, it is lawfull to borrow ceremonies of the Iewes.

We anſwere: It followeth not, becauſe Chriſt and the Apoſtles by the ſpirit of God retained ſome decent actions vſed in the law, therefore now the Church at her libertie may take of the Iewiſh ceremonies: this is great preſumption to thinke it is lawfull for the Church to doe whatſoeuer Chriſt and his Apoſtles did.

Argum. 3. They would warrant their ſuperſtitious ceremonies by S. Pauls example, how napkins and partlets went from his body, and they receiued health thereby: and the woman that came behind Chriſt, and touched the hemme of his veſture, was healed of her diſeaſe, by that ceremonie, argum. Feckenni.

Anſw. Concerning the firſt example, the text ſaith, God wrought no ſmall miracles by the hand of Paul, Act. 19. 12. It was God therefore that wrought, not theſe ceremonies. And for the other, Chriſt ſaith, vertue is gone out of me: it was not then his veſture that healed the woman, but the vertue; and therefore our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, goe thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole, reſponſ. Thom. Hawkes. Mart. pag. 1588. col. 2. Act. 19. 12. Pag. 1443. 1. 50

The Proteſtants.

ALthough there be great moderation to be vſed in the ceremonies of the Church, and there is alſo ſome limitation for them: yet hath the Church greater libertie in the rites and ceremonies, which are appointed for order and comelineſſe ſake, then in the doctrine of faith and religion. The doctrine of ſaluation is alwaies the ſame and cannot be changed, and toucheth the conſcience: but rites and ceremonies are externall and commaunded for orders ſake: and neither are they vniuerſall, the ſame in euery Church, nor perpetuall, but are changed according to times, and as there is occaſion. Againe, the precepts of Chriſtianitie are either directly expreſſed, or neceſſarily concluded out of the Scriptures: but externall rites and ceremonies are not particularly declared in the word: there are onely certaine generall rules ſet downe, according to the which all ceremonies brought into the Church, are to be examined: As for the Sacraments of the Church, they cannot bee altered, hauing a perpetuall commandement from Chriſt: Therefore the Church cannot appoint, what, how many ceremonies ſoeuer ſhe ſhall thinke good, but according to theſe foure rules and conditions, which follow here in order.

1.Cor.10.31. 1 All things ought to be done to the glorie of God, euen in ciuill actions, much more in things appertaining to the ſeruice of God. Our aduerſaries offend againſt this rule, applying and annexing remiſſion of ſinnes to their owne inuentions & ſuperſtitious ceremonies, as vnto penance and extreame vnction, which they alſo make Sacraments: for this is greatly derogatorie to Chriſts inſtitution, who hath onely appointed the hearing of his word, and vſe of the Sacraments, for the begetting and encreaſing of faith, and by this faith onely is the death of Chriſt applied vnto vs for the remiſſion of ſinnes.

1.Cor.14.40. 2 All things ought to be done orderly and decently: Wherefore all ridiculous, light and vnprofitable ceremonies are to be aboliſhed: ſuch our aduerſaries haue many, as knocking, kneeling, creeping to the Croſſe, lighting candles at noone day, turning ouer of beades, and many phantaſticall geſtures they haue in their Idolatrous Maſſe, as turning, returning, looking to the Eaſt, to the Weſt: croſſing, lifting, quaffing, and ſhewing the emptie cup, with many ſuch toyes.

1.Cor.10.32. 3 All things ought to be done without offence. But to whom, that hath but a little feeling of religion, is not the abominable ſacrifice of the Maſſe offenſiue? what good conſcience doth it not grieue, that the Prieſt ſhould create his maker, as they ſay? ſhould offer vp the body of Chriſt in ſacrifice, and be an interceſſour as it were for his mediator, deſiring God to accept the ſacrifice of his ſonnes body? as alſo to make it a propitiatorie ſacrifice for the quicke and the dead? But of theſe matters we ſhall haue fitter occaſion to entreate afterward, when we come to the ſeuerall controuerſies.

1.Cor.14.12. 4 All things ought to bee done to edifying: But the Popiſh ceremonies are ſo farre from edifying, that by reaſon of their infinite rabble and number, they are a clogge vnto Chriſtians, and more burdenſome, then were the obſeruations of the Iewes: They haue hallowed fire, water, bread, aſhes, oyle, wax, flowers, branches, clay, ſpettle, ſalt, incenſe, balme, chalices, paxes, pixes, altars, corporals, ſuperaltars, altarclothes, rings, ſwords, and an infinite company beſides: doe theſe tend (thinke you) to the edification of the minde? Nay, they doe cleane deſtroy and extinguiſh all ſpirituall and internall motions, drawing the heart from the ſpirituall worſhip of God, to externall beggerly and ragged reliques and ceremonies, Fulk. 1. Timoth. 4. ſect. 1. Beza lib. confeſſ. de Eccleſ. articul. 18. 19. 20.

Gloſſ.ordin. de 4.Concil. primitiuæ eccleſ. Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie concerning ceremonies: Modus colendi deum per externos ritus, & ceremonias legis, quia hæc fuerunt vmbra Chriſti & myſteriorum eius, ideo adueniente veritate Euangelica euanuerunt, & illicita facta ſunt: The manner of worſhipping God by externall rites and ceremonies of the law, becauſe they were a ſhadow of Chriſt, and of his myſteries, are now by the comming of the Euangelicall truth aboliſhed and made vnlawfull.

But ſuch Iewiſh ceremonies many yet are retained in the Popiſh Church, Colonienſ. part. 9. cap, 16. Quicquid in huiuſmodi rebus ad abuſum & ſuperſtitionem ſpectat, & quo populus à Deo ad collocandam in externis rebus fiduciam, abduci poſſit, prohibemus: Whatſoeuer in ceremonies tendeth to abuſe and ſuperſtition, and may withdraw the people from God to truſt in externall things, we forbid, &c. But that ſuch Iewiſh ceremonies are not to be retayned in the Church, neither that it is lawfull after the example of the Iewes to inſtitute the like ceremonies in Chriſts Church; heare further the teſtimonie of one of your owne Popes: Innocent.3. decr. Gregor. lib.3. tit.47. c.1. Poſtquam vmbra legis euanuit, & illuxit veritas Euangelij, ſi mulieres poſt prolem emiſſam actura gratias Eccleſiam intrare voluerunt, eis Eccleſiarum non denegandus eſt ingreſſus: After that the ſhadow of the law is vaniſhed, and the truth of the Goſpell hath appeared, if women after their deliuerance will enter the Church to giue thankes, it muſt not bee denied vnto them, &c. But by the law, women could not, but after a certaine time enter into the temple: wherefore as in this ceremonie Moſes law bindeth not, ſo neither in the reſt. And to this purpoſe may bee applied that rule in the Ciuill law, Cod. lib.7. tit.6. leg.1. Iuſtinian. Abſurdum eſt ipſa origine rei ſublata, eius imaginem relinqui: It is an abſurd thing, the originall being remoued, for the image or ſhadow to bee retained, &c. But the ceremoniall law of the Iewes is remoued, and therefore there ought not ſo much, as a ſhadow thereof to remaine. Vnto theſe we will adioyne the reaſons, & iudgement of the holy Martyrs concerning Popiſh ceremonies. Theſe orders of the Church are moſt pure, which doe come moſt nigh the example of the Primitiue Church:

to the [illegible] orders of the Popish Church, but are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] they are [illegible]

2 [illegible] the proposition was false; for the Church [illegible] in her infancie, [illegible] [illegible] that peace [illegible], which afterward it was to be [illegible] with ceremonies. [illegible] reporteth that ceremonies were increased at the first, for the rude infancie [illegible] [illegible], and therefore it was a token of great perfection in the primitiue Church, that it had few ceremonies, and of the [illegible] of the Popish Church, because it had so many ceremonies, [illegible] [illegible] and vnprofitable, &c. And it is too too absurd, to thinke the state of any Church more pure, than the Primitiue vnder the Apostles: as Gregor. Nazianzene, as Orosius [illegible] rum parum [illegible] [illegible] They receiue the communion of the [illegible] as they come nearer to Christ. So then it the [illegible] the fountaines are cleanest, so the [illegible] to Christ purest.

Iohn Fox [illegible] alleaged this place of Scripture against Popish ceremonies: All plants that are not planted by my heauenly father shall be plucked vp by the rootes. So saith our Sauiour; but such are Popish ceremonies: Ergo. Obiect. Nay they are good and godly, necessarie to bee vsed. Answere. But S. Paul calleth them weake and beggerly, and saith, they are bewitched, that seeke to bee in bondage vnto them, Galath. 4. Fox pag. 1741. col. 2.

Lastly, in the same booke, [illegible] gaue his life, who refused to come to procession, to beare taper or candle, or to receiue ashes, or to beare palme, to receiue the Pax at Masse, or holy water, or holy bread, or to obserue the ceremonies and vsages of the Popish Church, Fox p. 1027. col. 2. [illegible]

We haue also here the testimonie of other Churches. 1. Damascenus of the Greeke Church thus testifieth: [illegible] The trueth hauing appeared, the shadow is vnprofitable. And againe, since Christ was baptized, and the holy Ghost descended, &c. [illegible] the spirituall worship is preached. The Russians say, the extreame vnction cannot giue any remedie against the frailtie of sinne, and that Iames did meane, that it was onely to helpe and cure bodily infirmities.

2. Neither doe the Abyssines vse Chrisme or oyle of extreame vnction, as Aluarez reporteth: nor yet doe they allow any lawes to binde the conscience beside the Scriptures: as Damianus a Goes before alleaged.

3. The reformed Churches agree with vs: Heluetia, former confession artic. 23. As for other vnprofitable and innumerable circumstances of ceremonies, as vessels, apparrell, vailes, candels, altars, gold, siluer, so farre as they serue to peruert religion, &c. we haue remoued. French confess. artic. 24. We doe not onely reiect all those things for a false opinion of merit added thereunto, but also because they are the inuentions of men. Auspurg. artic. 4. They condemne Canons, 1. Because of the superstitious opinions ioyned vnto them. 2. They were multiplied out of measure. 3. They were set aloft before the commaundements of God. 4. The opinion of necessitie was laid vpon them: so also the confession of Saxonie artic. 20. condemneth these abuses in ceremonies. 1. They were disagreeing to the word of God. 2. They thought that they deserued remission of sinnes. 3. They imagined they were workes of perfection. 4. And tied vnto them an opinion of necessitie. 5. They made them a part of the diuine worship.

4. Some of the Romanists themselues haue complained of the importable burthen of ceremonies: as Agrippa saith, that Christians are more loaden with ceremonies daily encreasing then the Iewes. Polidor. Virgil. [illegible] &c. A certaine wood of Iewish and heathenish ceremonies hath possessed the Church. Caietane, the burthens which some Ministers impose vpon mens shoulders are importable.

THE FIRST QVESTION, WHETHER THE Church of Rome be the true Church.

THis question hath two parts. First, whether the Romane Church be the Catholike Church or not. Secondly, whether the Church of Rome be a true visible Church.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE ROMANE Church be the Catholike Church.

The Papists.

BEllarmine defining the Church, maketh this one part of the definition to bee subiect vnto the Bishop of Romes iurisdiction, lib. 3. de eccles. cap. 2. And therefore they conclude, that they are out of the Church and no better then heretikes, that doe not acknowledge the Pope to bee their chiefe Pastor, Canis. de precept. eccles. cap. 9. So they make the Romane faith, and Catholike, to be all one: Rhemist. annot. in 1. Rom. sect. 5.

27. Error.

Their reasons are none other, then we haue seene before, taken from vniuersalitie, antiquitie, vnitie, vnto the which we haue alreadie answered, quæst. 3. of this controuersie, Not. 1. 2. 3.

The Protestants.

WHile the Church of Rome continued in the doctrine of the Apostles, it was a notable and famous visible Church, and a principall part and member of the vniuersall Catholike: but now since

since it is degenerate and fallen away from the Apostolike faith, from being the house of God, to be a Synagogue for Antichrist we take it not to be so much as a true visible Church. But neuer was it to be counted the Catholike Church, as though all other Churches were parts and members of it: but it selfe onely was a part as others, and Catholike too, while it continued in the right faith: but not Catholike as hauing iurisdiction ouer the rest and all to receiue this name of her.

Argum. 1. The vniuersall Catholike Church is so called, because it containeth the whole number of the elect and the house of God, whereof many are now Saints in Heauen, many liuing in the earth, many yet vnborne. But all these were not, neither are of the Romane faith: the holy men departed knew not of these superstitions and prodigious vsages, which now doe reigne in the Church of Rome, nay many of them neuer heard in their life so much as of the name of Rome: Ergo. Heb.12.23.

Argum. 2. It is called Catholike and vniuersall, because they that are to be saued, must belong to this company, and be of this Church, for without the Church there is no saluation: for Christ onely gaue himselfe for his Church to sanctifie it and cleanse it. But all that dissent of the faith of the Romane Church doe not perish. Nay verily, we doubt not to say, but that all which depart this life in the communion thereof without repentance, are barred from saluation and vtterly out of grace. You say, that who is out of your Church is damned; and wee thinke verily on the other side, that if wee depart from the true Church, whereon wee are grafted in Gods word, wee should stand in the state of damnation, sic Philpot. Mart. p.1800. We are in the right faith: neither will we be our owne iudges, the Scripture shall iudge vs: Euery spirit that confesseth, that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God. We beleeue aright in both the natures and all the offices of Christ: which you doe not, which doe greatly deface his propheticall office, in not reuerencing his word, but making it imperfect: his kingdome, in appointing him a Vicar and Vicegerent vpon earth, as though he of himselfe were not sufficient to gouerne: his Priesthood, in setting vp another sacrifice: Ergo, your spirit is not of God. Ephes.5.25. 1.John 4.2.

Argum. 3. The Catholike Church is so called, because it embraceth the whole and onely doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles. But the Romane Church receiueth many things contrarie to Scripture, and addeth many things vnto it, as it shall appeare throughout this whole discourse. Ergo. Ephes.2.20.

The Catholike Church hath the name, because it is dispersed ouer the whole earth, Act. 1. ver. 8. But so was neuer the Romane faith, which is now professed, as wee haue shewed before, Quest. 3. de Eccles. Not. 2. Ergo. And this may further appeare out of S. Augustine thus writing to Saint Hierome, Epist. 19. If we count it an euill thing to fast Saturday, we shall condemne the Romane Church, &c. but if we count it euill, non ieiunare Sabbato, not to fast Saturday, we shall condemne so many Churches of the East, & maiorem orbis Christiani partem, and the greater part of the Christian world: Ergo, the greater part of the Church did not receiue the ceremonies of the Romane Church, and so consequently, it cannot be the Catholike Church.

We will adde the testimonie of the holy Martyrs: Master Philpot reasoneth thus, the world being deuided into three parts, Asia, Europa, Africa; two parts thereof, Asia and Africa, professing Christ as well as wee, did neuer consent vnto the Church of Rome: yea and most part of Europa doth not allow the Church of Rome; as Germanie, Denmarke, Poland, a great part of England and Zeland: Ergo, neither your faith nor your Church is vniuersall or Catholike, Fox pag.1804.

He alleageth also a saying out of Augustine, Aestimamus fidem Catholicam à rebus praeteritis, praesentibus & futuris: Wee iudge the Catholike faith of that which hath beene, is, and shall be: If then you be able to proue that your faith and Church hath beene from the beginning taught, is, and shall be, then may you count your selues Catholike, otherwise not.

Iulius Palmer Martyr, vseth this reason: your Church of Rome is not vniuersall, but a particular Church of shauelings: Ergo, it is not the Catholike Church, Fox pag.1935.col.1. Pag.1759.1.60

For this truth also with other, George Marsh gaue his life, for saying that the Church of Rome is not the true Catholike Church, Fox p.1566.col.1. Pag.1422.2.60

1 See also for this point your owne authoritie, Basiliens. Concil. epist. Synod. 3. Dicimus Romanam sedem principalem inter alias sedes; sed vnquid dum partem laudatis, obliti estis totius: vnquid dum vnam Ecclesiam extollitis, eam quae vniuersalis est, in qua Romana continetur, praetermittitis? Wee grant, that the Romane See is the principall among others; but while you commend a part, forget not the whole: Is it reason, that while you aduance one Church, the vniuersall Church, in the which the Romane is comprehended, should be pretermitted?

Againe, in the appendix of the same Councell, Romana Ecclesia non est vniuersa, sed de vniuersitate: The Romane Church is not the vniuersall Church, but of the vniuersall Church: and Concil. Ferrar. sess. 9. Romana Ecclesia vniuersali Ecclesiae inferior est: The Romane Church is inferiour to the vniuersall Church. By these authorities it appeareth, that the Romane Church is one, the vniuersall and Catholike another.

2 See also to this purpose the lawes Imperiall: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 5. l. 15. Leo, Anthemius; Sacrosanctam huius religiosissimae ciuitatis Ecclesiam, matrem nostrae pietatis & Christianorum orthodoxae religionis omnium, honores iure ante alias residendo habere iudicamus, &c. The holy Church of this most religious Citie (meaning Constantinople, where Acatius was then Patriarke, as appeareth in the beginning of the law) the mother of our faith, and of all right beleeuing Christians, we doe decree to haue this honor to haue the first place before all other, &c. Here then we haue the Constantinopolitane Church the mother of the orthodoxall faith euery where profeſſed: and ſo by this law the Church of Rome alſo ſhall be a daughter of that Church, and therefore not the mother of vniuerſall Church it ſelfe.

3 Herein alſo concurreth the South and Ethiopike Church: who preferre the Greeke Church before the Latine, as Aluares reporteth, that Preſter Iohn ſent vnto him, to aske why we haue diuided the Churches of Antioch and Rome, ſeeing that the Church of Antioch was in a manner the chiefeſt vntill the Councell of Pope Leo. But the Church of Alexandria, the Patriarke whereof they acknowledge, they preferre before both the other, as is euident in their Liturgie, wherein after the Prince they pray for the chiefe of Alexandria: Theſe are farre off from acknowledging the Romane for the true Catholike Church.

Liturg. Æthiop.

4 The reformed Churches thus deliuer their ſentence: French confeſ. artic. 26. We condemne the Papiſticall aſſemblies, becauſe the pure truth of God is baniſhed from among them. Sweueland, artic. 15. They cannot by any meanes repreſent the Church of Chriſt, &c. which are not Chriſts, and therefore propound no Chriſtian things, but whatſoeuer is contrarie to the doctrine of Chriſt, &c. Theſe doe not acknowledge the Romane for a true Church, much leſſe for the only Catholike, and herein we haue the ioynt conſent of all the reformed Churches. See further in the end of the next queſtion.

Ibid. pag. 335.

THE SECOND PART: THE CHVRCH OF Rome is not a true viſible Church.

The Papiſts.

Their arguments are as wee haue heard, queſt. 3. of the notes of the Church, grounded vpon their ſucceſſion, miracles, gift of propheſying: anſwered ſufficiently afore, Note, 4. 5. 6. We need not, nor muſt not for breuities ſake repeate the ſame things often.

18. Error.

The Proteſtants.

We denie vtterly that they are a true viſible Church of Chriſt, but an Antichriſtian Church, and an aſſemblie of heretikes, and enemies to the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt.

1 That cannot bee a true Church where the word of God is not truly preached, nor the Sacraments rightly adminiſtred according to Chriſts inſtitution: So are they not in the Popes Church: For the word is not ſincerely taught, but they haue added many inuentions of their owne, and doe preach contrarie Doctrines to the Scripture. The Sacraments alſo they haue not kept, for firſt they haue augmented the number: they haue made fiue more; of Confirmation, Orders, Penance, Matrimonie, Extreme vnction: beſide, the Sacraments of Chriſt they haue corrupted. In Baptiſme, beſide water, they vſe ſpettle, ſalt, oyle, chriſme, contrarie to the inſtitution: and they lay ſuch a neceſſitie vpon this Sacrament, that all which die without it, ſay they, are damned. In the Lords Supper, they haue turned the Sacrament to a ſacrifice, made an Idoll of bread, changed the Communion into priuate Maſſes, taken the cup from the lay people, and many other abominations are committed by them: Ergo, neither hauing the Word, nor Sacraments, according to the inſtitution, they are no true Church.

The propoſition or firſt part of this argument is S. Pauls, Galath. 1. 8. He that preacheth otherwiſe then the Apoſtles taught, is accurſed: yea that Church that ſo teacheth is accurſed; whether it adde to Chriſts doctrine, or detract or take away from it. And Ambroſe of taking away from Chriſts inſtitution thus ſaith: Negat Chriſtum, qui non omnia, quæ Chriſti ſunt confitetur: He denieth Chriſt, which doth not confeſſe and acknowledge all that Chriſt taught, lib. 6. in Luc. And for adding to the Scripture hee thus teſtifieth, writing vpon thoſe words of our Sauiour, Be not the ſeruants of men, 1. Cor. 7. Serui hominum ſunt, qui humanis ſe ſubijciunt ſuperſtitionibus: They are the ſeruants of men, that ſubmit themſelues to humane ſuperſtitions, &c. If they bee the ſeruants of men, they are not the ſeruants of Chriſt: ſo S. Paul concludeth, Galath. 1. 10. Thus the propoſition is ſtrengthened. But the Popiſh Church doth adde vnto the Scriptures, as it is euident in the Sacraments, wherein they vſe many rites beſide Chriſts inſtitution: It doth alſo detract, as in denying marriage to Miniſters, and the cup to the Laitie, both which the Scripture alloweth: Ergo, it is not the true Church.

Galath. 1. 10.

Argum. 2. They which are enemies to the true Church, and doe perſecute the members thereof, are not the viſible Church: they cannot be of that Church which they perſecute; as Bellarm. ſaith of Paul: how could he be of that Church which he with all his force oppreſſed? de Eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. 5. But they perſecute the Saints of God, and are moſt cruell towards them, as their conſciences beare them record: Ergo. So ſaith Auguſt. Eſt mundus qui perſequitur, de quo Chriſtus, ſi odit vos mundus, me prius odio habuit: eſt & mundus quem perſequitur; Deus erat in Chriſto mundum reconcilians ſibi: mundus damnatus, quicquid præter eccleſiam, mundus reconciliatus eccleſia: There is a world that perſecuteth, of the which Chriſt ſpeaketh, If the world hate you, it hated me firſt. There is another world which is perſecuted, of the which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelfe, 2. Cor. 5. the reconciled world is the Church, the damned world beſide the Church: Ergo, by Auguſtines ſentence the perſecuting Church, ſuch as is the Church of Rome, is not the true Church.

And yet more plainly Chryſoſtom, as he is cited by one of your owne writers, Hom. 19. oper. imperfect. Nunquid ouis lupum perſequitur, non potius lupus ouem, &c. Doth the ſheep perſecute the woolfe, and not rather the woolfe the ſheepe? the ſheepe eateth herbes, the woolfe deuoureth fleſh: he therefore whom thou ſeeſt to feed vpon the herbes of Scripture, is a ſheepe: quem in ſanguine perſecutionis gaudentem, lupus: whom to delight in bloudy perſecution, he is a woolfe, &c. But who are they which ratifie the Scriptures, and only feed of them, as ſufficient to ſaluation? they are not the Papiſts, who ground their faith vpon vnwritten traditions, but Proteſtants: They are not then the ſheepe: and they are knowne to bee the moſt bloodie perſecutors of theſe daies: then they are the wolues, and therefore not the Church.

2.Theſ.2.4. Argum. 3. The habitation of Antichriſt cannot be the Church of Chriſt; ſo is theirs: the Pope himſelfe is Antichriſt, for who elſe but he ſitteth in the Temple, being an enemie to Chriſt. Where haue you a citie in the world built vpon ſeuen hils but Rome? Apocal. 17.9. But of this matter wee ſhall of purpoſe entreate afterward: Ergo, they are not a true viſible Church. And that Rome is the ſeate of Antichriſt, it appeareth by their owne confeſſion, who by Babylon vnderſtand Rome, Rhemiſt, annot. in 1. Pet. 5.13. and ſo likewiſe Apocal. 17. verſ. 5. But Babylon is the ſeate of Antichriſt, and Rome is Babylon: Ergo. They haue here commonly two euaſions: firſt, it was called Babylon in reſpect of the perſecuting Emperours, Rhemiſt. Secondly, becauſe that before the end of the world Antichriſt ſhall haue his ſeate there, ſic Bellarm. But Saint Hierome in his time doubted not to call Rome Babylon, when as both the Heathen perſecutions were ceaſed, neither yet their Antichriſt, whom they ſay ſhall come, reuealed: as thus he writeth, Fugite de medio Babylonis, &c. cecidit Babylon, & facta eſt habitatio dæmonum: Flie out of the middeſt of Babylon, let euery man ſaue his owne ſoule: for Babylon is fallen and become an habitation for diuels, &c. Hee exhorteth them to leaue Rome, which here he calleth Babylon.

Reuel.17.9.

Ad Euſtach. & Marcell.

And that the Pope is Antichriſt, ſee one of their Popes authoritie, Decr. p.3. diſt.3. c.12. Gregor. They that forbid any worke to be done vpon the Saturday, are the preachers of Antichriſt, who when he commeth ſhall command vpon the Saturday, as well as the Lords day, to ceaſe from all worke, &c. But this doth the Pope, forbid labour vpon the weeke daies, making them feſtiuall and holy daies, and neceſſarily to be kept. Ergo.

Laſtly, for this doctrine, that the Church of Rome, as it now ſtandeth, is not the true Church of Chriſt, many holie Martyrs haue giuen their liues: Thomas Man Martyr, for holding that the Popiſh Church was not the true Church, artic. obiect. 9. Fox pag. 815. Richard Feurius Martyr at Lyons, anno 1554. for ſaying it was not the true Church, becauſe it was gouerned by the traditions of men, and not the word of God, pag. 912. col. 1.

Maſter Saunders Martyr, that the Romiſh Religion is rauening, and wooluiſh, as it appeareth, ſaith he, in three points: Firſt, it robbeth God of his due and onely honour. Secondly, it taketh away the true comfort of conſcience in obſcuring or rather burying Chriſt, and his office of ſaluation. Thirdly, it ſpoileth God of his true worſhip and ſeruice in ſpirit and truth, &c. Saunder. epiſt. ad Epiſcop. Wintonienſ. pag. 1404. col. 2.

Maſter Robert Glouer Martyr, by theſe arguments prooueth the Church of Rome not to bee the Church of Chriſt: Firſt, Chriſts Church acknowledgeth Chriſt Ieſus only to be their head: the Church of Rome ſetteth vp the man of ſinne for their head. Secondly, Chriſts Church heareth his voice, and is ruled by his word, neither adding to, nor taking ought from it: the Church of Rome addeth to Gods word, and runneth a whoring after their owne inuentions. Thirdly, the true Church laboureth to reſiſt the luſts and deſires of the world, the fleſh and the diuell: thoſe for the moſt part giue themſelues to all voluptuouſneſſe, ſecretly committing ſuch things, which as Saint Paul ſaith, it is a ſhame to ſpeake of. Fourthly, the Church of Chriſt is perſecuted: the Church of Rome doth perſecute, murther, and ſlay the ſeruants of God: Ergo, it is not the true Church: plura apud Fox, pag 1720. col. 2.

Hereunto further ſhall bee added the teſtimonies of other Churches, leſt the opinion of Engliſh Proteſtants ſhould ſeeme to be ſingular. 1. The Greeke Church to this day hath no fellowſhip or communion with the Roman Church: [a] one writeth, that the Chriſtians of Taprobane, and the Iſlands neere thereunto, doe not acknowledge, nor their fathers euer did acknowledge, the Popes, Cardinals and Prelates of Rome: alſo the Neſtorians and other Indians doe call the Pope a Biſhop vnapproued. [b] The Muſcouites and Ruthenians doe ſay, that the Pope is an Hereticke, and doe excommunicate him and his Clergie at ſuch time as they doe celebrate the Lords Supper. Another teſtifieth thus; The Greekes departed long ſince from the Church of Rome, and appointed them Patriarkes, whom they acknowledge to be their heads, and not onely the Greekes obey them, but all the prouinces which follow the Greeke religion, as Walachia, Bulgaria, Moſcouia, Ruſſia.

2. Concerning the Ethiopike Church, they in their Liturgie, pray for the chiefe of the Church of Alexandria, and for their owne Archbiſhop, and for the Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons of the right faith: making no mention at all of the Romane Church. The Ieſuites in their trauels report, how comming to Alexandria they ſaluted the Patriarke, but they could by no meanes obtaine of him, Vt cum Romana Eccleſia in gratiam rediret, That he would be reconciled with the Romane Church.

3 Our reformed Churches with one conſent hold the Romane to be a falſe Church: confeſſion of Bohemia, cap. 8. calleth the Romane Church Antichriſtian. All kind of vices in the Antichriſtian Church are openly practiſed. Belgia, artic. 27. The falſe Church doth alwaies attribute more vnto her ſelfe, and to her owne decrees and traditions, then to the word of God. Saxonie, artic. 21. Such Biſhops as doe ſet forth other doctrine differing from the Goſpell, and doe obſtinately eſtabliſh Idolatrie, are no members of the Church of God. Heluetia former confeſſion, cap. 17. Wee condemne all ſuch Churches, as ſtrangers from the true Church of Chriſt, who are not ſuch, as we haue heard they ought to bee: that is, reteyning the puritie of doctrine, and right vſe of the Sacraments: Theſe Churches vpon theſe reaſons abandon the Church of Rome, becauſe it nouriſheth without controlment or puniſhment notorious vices, preferreth traditions before the word of God, maintaineth idolatrie, hath not the true vſe of the word and Sacraments.

4 Nay, we haue here a teſtimonie of one of their Councels againſt them, namely, the Councell of Baſile, which decreed the Pope to be ſubiect to a Councell: If the Church be a mother, the Pope muſt acknowledge himſelfe to be a ſonne, otherwiſe how ſhall he haue God to be his father, this our Sauiour ſhewed when he ſaid to Peter (tell the Church) which authority, if the Pope ſhall contemne, he ought to be accounted as an Ethnike and Publican. But now the Pope refuſeth to ſubmit himſelfe to a generall Councell, and taketh himſelfe to be ſuperiour vnto it: hee is therefore by the ſentence of this Synod held no better then an Ethnike: If the heade bee ſo, what ſhall the body be? a true Church it is not whoſe head is to be held as an Ethnike.

THAT THE CHVRCH OF THE PROteſtants is a true viſible Church.

The Papiſts.

THe arguments, which our aduerſaries vſe againſt vs to proue vs to bee no Church, drawne from antiquitie, vniuerſalitie, ſucceſſion, the power of miracles, prophecying, and ſuch like, I haue anſwered at large before in their ſeuerall places, that I ſhall not neede to repeate them againe. But generally the ſumme of our anſwere is this, that, whereas their argument may be thus framed: That Church which hath neither antiquitie, vniuerſalitie, vnity, ſucceſſion, &c. is no true Church: but ſuch is the Church of the Proteſtants: Ergo. To this argument we haue thus anſwered: firſt, denying the propoſition, and ſhewing, that neither that alwaies is a Church where theſe notes are found; and that there may be a Church where they are wanting. Secondly, we alſo infringe the aſſumption: for moſt of theſe notes I haue declared to bee more agreeable to our Church, and rather to bee found amongſt vs, then with them. But who deſireth to ſee our anſwere more fully, I referre him to the ſeuerall places before, wherein theſe things are handled.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Churches of the Proteſtants, and namely the Church of England, are true viſible Churches, and notable members of the Catholike Church, beſide the arguments drawne from the preaching of the word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, which alwaies proue a Church; we will produce other reaſons, and ſuch as might perſwade our aduerſaries themſelues, if they were indifferent iudges.

Argum. 1. That Church which ſendeth forth Martyrs, as Chriſts faithfull ſouldiers, is the true Church: but the Church of the Proteſtants hath brought forth many Martyrs: Ergo.

The propoſition, I thinke, is not doubted of: for out of the Church there are no Martyrs: as S. Cyprian ſaith, Qui occiſi, &c. They which are ſlaine out of the Church, doe not winne a crowne of their faith, but a reward of their follie, lib. 1. epiſt. 1. Againe, the Martyrs of Chriſt are vndoubtedly ſaued, their ſoules are vnder the Altar, which is Chriſt, Apocal. 6. 9. And as Origen applieth that place of the Prophet Eſay, 63. 1. To them the Angels doe thus ſay and welcome them into heauen: Quis eſt iſte qui aſcendit ex Boſra? Who is this that aſcendeth from Boſra? that is, from the bloodie field: but there can be no ſaluation out of the Church. And further, the ſame Origen thus reaſoneth out of the words of our Sauiour, I haue a baptiſme to be baptiſed with, Luk. 12. 56. meaning his paſſion: Chriſtus profuſionem ſanguinis baptiſma vocat: Chriſt (ſaith he) calleth the ſhedding of his blood, baptiſme, &c. But there is no kinde of true baptiſme and acceptable to God, but within the Church: Ergo, true martyrdome, which is a kind of baptiſme, is onely to be found in the Church. But the propoſition needeth no long proofe: I come to ſhew the aſſumption, that thoſe Saints, which out of our Church haue died for the Goſpell, were true and vnfained Martyrs.

Luk. 12. 56.
Hom. 7. in Iudic.

The ancient writers do giue vs foure rules wherby to know and diſcerne the Martyrs of the Church: the firſt is Saint Cyprians rule, by their ſingular patience: Sunt qui certis artibus, &c. There are ſome which by certaine artificiall meanes doe ſtupifie their bodies that they feele not the torments; there be alſo ſome impotent and outragious affections, which take away the ſenſe of the bodie, &c. ſed placidum illud et manſuetum non videmus niſi in Chriſti martyribus: but wee finde not that quiet and meeke kinde of death, but onely in the Martyrs of Chriſt, &c. But ſuch examples of patient death in the bleſſed Martyrs of our Church we haue many: and their patience appeareth both by their owne comfortable words and teſtimonie, by their couragious and conſtant behauiour, as alſo by the con-feſſion of their enemies. Firſt, for their owne teſtimonie: one Nicholas, or Francis Thieſſen, or one of Pag.813.1.10. them, which ſuffered for the Goſpell at Mechlin, anno 1545. when hee felt the fire, ſaid thus; What day, and vpon a Saturday I ſhall be married againe to Chriſt, pag. 903. col. 1. Notable is the teſtimo-nie of that reuerend and godly Biſhop and Martyr B. Farrer, who thus ſaid to one Maſter Richard Pag.1413.1.60 Ihones, who ſeemed to lament the painfulneſſe of his death, that if hee ſaw him once to ſtirre in the paines of his burning, he ſhould then giue no credit to his doctrine: and as hee ſaid, ſo being aſſiſted by Gods ſpirit he performed the ſame. But amongſt all other moſt glorious is the teſtimonie of Iames Baynham Martyr, who hauing his armes and legges halfe conſumed in the fire, thus cried out? Behold O ye Papiſts, you looke for miracles, and here now may you ſee a miracle: for in this fire I feele no more paine, then if I were in a bed of downe, but it is to mee as ſweete as a bed of Roſes, pag.

Pag 940.1.4. 1030. col. 2.

Now for their conſtant and couragious behauiour, it was ſuch as became the valiant ſouldiours of Chriſt, voide of all feare and doubtfulneſſe. Fiue conſtant Martyrs burned at Lyons, anno 1553.
Pag.826.2.87. when the fire was readie to be put vnto them, they made this petition, that each might embrace and number might be alleaged, of their conſtant and quiet behauiour: but theſe may ſuffice.

Their conſtancie alſo may appeare by the confeſſion of their aduerſaries. Firſt, William Huſſon Martyr at Roane, anno 1544. ſo cheerefully carried himſelfe in his death, that whereas ſome maliciouſly ſaid hee had a diuell, they were of others reproued, who ſaid, that if hee had a diuell hee ſhould ell and painfull death was ſo couragious, that the beholding thereof did more more aſtoniſh the King, then all the other before, pag. 903. Likewiſe that reuerend Archbiſhop and holy Martyr D. Tho- mas Cranmer did ſo manfully and valiantly endure the fire, not once mouing or ſtirring in the middeſt of the flames, that one Frier Iohn being ignorant of the conſtancie of Martyrs, ſaid to the Lord Pag.1714.1.46 Williams, he died in deſpaire: who ſmiling onely ſo rebuked the Friers follie, pag. 1886. But enough hath been ſaid concerning the probation of this matter, namely, the patience of the Martyrs, no whit inferiour to the conſtancie of the ancient Martyrs in the Primitiue Church. And thus much of the firſt rule to know a Martyr by.

The ſecond and third rules are Bernards, who thus writeth: Illa mors precioſa eſt, quam commendat vita, &c. That death is precious which a good life commendeth: but that is more precious, which a good cauſe commendeth, Serm. 22.

Pſal.116. Secondly, then true Martyrs are to be iudged by their holy life and innocent conuerſation: for as it is in the Pſalm. 116. Precious in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints, or holy ones. They then that haue liued an vngodly and vncleane life, vnleſſe they bee conuerted and change their waies, are no fit witneſſes of Gods truth: But ſuch the Lord appointeth for the witneſſe of his truth, that are of vnſpotted life and of a godly conuerſation. The Popiſh Church hath canonized for Martyrs, ſome that were rebels and diſobedient to their Prince, as Thomas Becket, and S. Hugh: ſome that were Sorcerers and Magicians, as Hildebrand their Pope, and S. Dunſtane: ſome haue been taken for Saints amongſt them that were ſlaine in their drunkenneſſe, as it may be ſeene, Decr. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 45. cap. 1.
But our Church can ſhew another kind of Martyrs, men of excellent vertuous life: as Maſter Brad- ford holy Martyr, a notable example of chaſte and continent life: Biſhop Cranmer of innocencie, Biſhop Hooper of hoſpitality; Maſter Latimer of painfull and diligent preaching; Tomkins of continuall and feruent prayer. See their ſeuerall ſtories, and I thinke they cannot name one of the Martyrs of the Goſpell of an infamous life, after they came to the knowledge of the Goſpell: and ſo is a true Reuel.14.5. Martyr deſcribed, Apocal. 14.5. In their mouthes is no guile, &c.

Thirdly, this note of an innocent life is not ſufficient of it ſelfe, vnleſſe it bee ioyned with the other, namely the goodneſſe of the cauſe; which no doubt our Martyrs had, as I ſhew it thus: Firſt, it is a good cauſe to die in defence of the true worſhip of God, againſt the falſe adoration or worſhip of Idols: but ſuch is the cauſe of the Martyrs of the Goſpell in theſe daies: Ergo. The propoſition is proued by a particular induction of the ancient Martyrs both before the law, vnder the law, and ſince
Geneſ.31.30. the law, which haue been perſecuted for this cauſe: as before the law Laban perſecuted Iacob, becauſe Geneſ.35.2. of his gods. And Iacob putteth away all the ſtrange gods in his familie. In the time of the law vnder the Iudges Gedeon should haue been slaine for destroying the Altar of Baal. Vnder the Monarchie of the Chaldeans the three children were put into the fierie fornace, because they would not bow downe to the image of gold, Dan.3. Since the time of Christ vnder the Romaine Emperours many thousand Christians were put to death, because they refused to worship the Idols of the Heathen. Iudg.6.30.

Now that our Martyrs haue died in the same cause, which is the second part of the argument, it may be thus proued. First, our aduersaries themselues cannot denie, but that they haue put many Protestants to death for refusing to worship their images of gold, as the storie of the Martyrs is full of such examples. But here is their exception, that their images are not like the Heathen Idols, nor the worship of their images Idolatrie. Contra. That they are the only knowne Idolaters of this time, first it is shewed by the Scripture, Apocal.9.20. for there the Apostle and Prophet speaketh of the worshipping of Idols of gold and siluer, after the opening of the seuenth seale, and the blowing of the sixth trumpet, which must be by course of that prophecie long after the Idoll worship of the Heathen; so that the popish Church must needs thereby be signified, there being no knowne nation beside in these parts of the world, that worshippeth Images. Secondly, the Iewes themselues doe say, that Christians worship Images contrarie to the law of God: as a Iew obiected to Master George Wisheart as they sailed together vpon the Rhene, Fox pag.1269.col.2. Wherefore it is manifest, that our Martyrs hauing stood by death against the idolatrie of these times, haue died in the same cause, for the which the ancient Martyrs gaue their liues against the idolatrie of the Heathen. Apoc.9.20.

Secondly, it is a good cause to die for the faith of Christ, and they are the faithfull Martyrs which hope only to be iustified by his death: Apocal.7.14. These are they which haue washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lambe. But in this faith haue our Martyrs died, hoping only to finde life by faith in Christs blood: whereas the Papists seeke to make their robes white in the blood and merits of Saints. And againe, whereas the Apostle speaking of the last times of persecution, saith, Here is the patience of the Saints; here are they that keepe the commandements of God, and the faith of Iesus. There haue none else in all the world been persecuted for the faith of Christ in these latter times, but the Protestants only: the Papists persecute, they are not persecuted: and where they suffer, it is not for religion or the faith of Iesus, but for treason, and wilfull transgression of the Princes lawes. This then it is euident that our Martyrs are they in this place prophecied of, and dying in so good a cause, must needs be the faithfull witnesses of God. Apoc.7.14.

A fourth rule to discerne true Martyrs in their death, is by those miraculous and strange workes of God declared in their martyrdome, though we doe not alleage this either as a necessarie or vniuersall note. So S. Ambrose extolleth the martyrdome of S. Paul: De Pauli ceruice vnda lactis, &c. Out of Pauls neck being beheaded, streamed milke rather then blood. And no maruell if the nourisher of the Churches abounded with milke, who saith (writing to the Corinthians) I gaue you milke to drinke, &c. So Policarpus could not be consumed with fire: Romanus spake, his tongue being cut out; Cecilia remained a day & a night in an hot bath, not being hurt. The like miracles are credibly reported to haue been shewed in the death of the Martyrs of the Gospell. Stephen Brune could not be consumed with the fire being twice renued, though oyle were powred into it, but the hangman was constrained to thrust him thorough. Stephen Mangin Martyr spake, his tongue being cut out. The like also is recorded of Gabriel Berandinus a French Martyr, anno 1550. pag.904. See more of such examples before in the second controuersie, third question, in the fifth note of Miracles: but we stand not so much vpon this point. Wherefore shortly to conclude this argument, where true Martyrs are, there is the Church: the Protestants Church hath true and faithfull Martyrs, as I haue shewed, by their singular patience, holy life, their honest and good cause, and by the wonderfull workes shewed in their death: Ergo, we are the true Church of Christ. Serm.68. Pag.825.1.76.

*Argum.*2. Secondly, we reason thus: That Church which hath been from time to time persecuted in the world, is the Church of God: that which hath alwaies persecuted and been filled with the blood of the Saints, is the malignant Church. But our Church for these foure or fiue hundred yeeres hath been alwaies persecuted; and they haue been the persecutors. Ergo.

For the probation of the assumption or second part of the argument, we need not much labour: for all the world knoweth how the popish Church continually hath persecuted the Protestants, and especially within these fiftie or sixtie yeeres since the reuiuing of the Gospell; in which time they haue spilled the blood of not so few as an hundred thousand of Gods Saints, if an account be taken thereof. For in France only in that bloody massaker in the yeere 1572. there were put to the sword in one moneth thirtie thousand Protestants, Fox pag.2153. And the Pope at Rome hearing tell thereof, hee with his Cardinals caused a solemne procession to be made, with singing of Te Deum, and proclaimed a yeere of Iubilee. We haue also for this point the confession of the Rhemists: That Protestants (whom they call heretikes, as Paul of the persecuting Iewes was counted an heretike, Act.24.14.) are put to death at Rome, and that they allow of their punishment in other countries, *Rhemist. annot. in Apocal.*17.*sect.*8.

Now for the truth of the first part of the argument, that it is the lot of the Church of God to be persecuted in this world, the Apostle thus witnesseth, Gal.4.29. As then he that was borne after the flesh persecuted him that was borne after the spirit, so is it now. And further, that it is a proper badge of the malignant Church to sucke the blood of the Saints: wee reade in the Reuelation, 17.6. I saw the wo- Galath.4.29. man was drunken with the bloud of the Saints, &c. In which place by the bloudthirſtie whore of Babylon is ſignified the perſecuting Antichriſt at Rome: which is ſo plaine a text to conuince the aduerſarie, that they cannot poſſibly auoide it, though they haue ſought out diuers ſhifts and euaſions, and eſpecially three, but all to little purpoſe: I will ſet them downe in order.

Firſt, by this whore the Rhemiſts would vnderſtand the whole corps of all the perſecutors that haue been from the beginning of the world to the end, Annot. in Apoc. 17. ſect. 5. Contra. But this cannot bee ſo. Firſt, chap. 17. verſ. 1. the Angell ſaith to Iohn, I will ſhew thee the damnation of the great whore: ſpeaking of the time to come, not of the time paſt. Secondly, verſ. 6. She is drunken with the bloud of the martyrs of Ieſus: which muſt of neceſſitie be vnderſtood of the perſecution ſince the manifeſtation of Ieſus to the world. Thirdly, verſ. 18. The whore is the great citie, that reigneth ouer the kings of the earth: it is a certaine Citie or regiment, the Rhemiſts put an vncertaine and indefinite bodie or companie. Reuel.17.18.

Secondly, by the whore of Babylon the Rhemiſts vnderſtand the terrene ſtate of the perſecuting Emperours, not the Church or Eccleſiaſticall ſtate there, annot. 4. in Apocal. ſect. 4. Contra. Firſt, the beaſt, whereon the whore ſitteth, ſignifying that great citie, which bare rule ouer the kingdomes, was and is not, cap. 17. 8. that is, the imperiall ſtate was remoued, when the Popes ſucceeded; yet in them was reuiued the imperiall tyrannie. And hereunto agreeth that prophecie, chap. 13. 11. where the beaſt commeth out of the earth, which did all that the firſt beaſt could doe, and healed his deadly wound, and gaue life and ſpirit to the image of the beaſt, verſ. 15. This is the beaſt that was, and is not, namely the beaſtly tyrannie of the perſecuting Emperours reuiued by the antichriſtian Popes: wherefore the whore cannot ſignifie the terrene ſtate of the Emperours, for this beaſt was, and is not. Secondly, S. Hierome alſo thus expoundeth, ſaying to Rome, Maledictionem, &c. Thou maiſt by repentance eſcape that curſe threatned thee by our Sauiour in the Apocalypſe, lib. 2. aduerſ. Iouinian. But when S. Hierome thus did write, the heatheniſh perſecution was ceaſed: wherefore by Babylon the imperiall ſtate is not ſignified. Reuel.17.8, Reuel.13.11.

Thirdly, the Rhemiſts by the beaſt, that was, and is not, doe inſinuate Antichriſt, who is not yet come (ſay they) in our daies, neither ſhall come as long as the Empire of Rome ſtandeth, ibid.

Contra. 1. By the ſame reaſon we conclude that Antichriſt is alreadie come, becauſe that which letted, or hindred the reuealing of Antichriſt, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 2. Theſſ. 2. 6, 7. namely the Romane Empire, is taken away: for nothing now remaineth of the imperiall ſoueraigntie, but only an image thereof: firſt, the large dominion of the Empire is loſt; he beareth little ſway that is Emperour, but in his owne Seignorie, which he hath beſide the title of the Empire. Secondly, the ſeate of the Empire is changed, which was at Rome, but now is in no certaine place. Thirdly, then the Empire went by deſcent and ſucceſſion, now by election. Fourthly, they were called the Romane Emperours, now the Emperours of Germanie. Fifthly, then Rome and Italie were ſubiect to the Emperour, now hee hath nothing to doe there: ſo that the Romane Empire is long ſince deceaſed and diſſolued; and vpon the diſſolution thereof Antichriſt was to be reuealed. 2. Whereas Antichriſt by their owne confeſſion muſt be the ſeuenth Regiment, fiue were then paſt in S. Iohns time, the Regiment of Egypt, Canaan, Babylon, the Perſians, Greekes, the ſixth was the Romane Empire: (though theſe ſixe Regiments are better referred to the ſixe formes of gouernment among the Romanes; the Kings, Conſuls, Decem-uiri, Tribuni militum, Dictators, Emperours) then the ſixth, which is the Romane Empire, being aboliſhed (for now there is no Emperour, but a King of the Romanes, and that but a bare title neither, the Emperour is of Germanie) the ſeuenth which is Antichriſt muſt needs ſucceed: wherefore Antichriſt is alreadie come. 3. S. Hierome thus did write in his daies, calling Rome Sodome, epiſt. ad Lucinum. And againe, Dum in Babylone verſarer, & purpuratæ meretricis eſſem colonus, &c. While I was in Babylon, meaning Rome, and was an inhabiter of the ſkarlet whore, &c. præfat. ad Paulin. He neither vnderſtandeth this prophecie of the time paſt, nor ſuſpendeth it for the time to come, but euen in thoſe daies ſheweth how it began to be accompliſhed, the Heathen perſecution being then ceaſed. So then it is cleere, that Rome was not only, neither ſhall be only, but euen now is and hath been a great while that ſkarlet whore of Babylon, drunken with the blood of the Saints: and what Saints blood haue they ſucked, but of the Proteſtants? And thus much for our ſecond argument. 2.Theſſ.2.6.

Argum. 3. Thirdly, the holie Apoſtle ſaith, Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is of God, 1. Ioh. 4. 2. But the Church of the Proteſtants ſo confeſſeth: Ergo, it is of God. 1.Ioh.4.2.

Obiect. The Rhemiſts in their Annotations vpon this place ſay, that this was a note onely for thoſe times: for there are many which confeſſe that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, and yet are heretikes.

Contra. Firſt, the contrarie appeareth, for that the Apoſtle in the firſt verſe giueth a caueat to trie euery ſpirit, and afterward ſetteth downe this rule, whereby to trie them: this rule then is generall for euery ſpirit. Secondly, by this rule Antichriſt is to be tried, both he that was then come, and hee that ſhould come, verſ. 3. Ergo, it was a rule alſo for afterward. Thirdly, this rule is the ſame with that confeſſion of Peter, Thou art Chriſt the ſonne of the liuing Lord, Matth. 16. 18. Vpon which rocke Chriſt ſaith he would build his Church: Ergo, this confeſſion being the foundation of the Church, is a touchſtone for all ages. Fourthly, I will oppoſe againſt them a Synode of their owne, that maketh this rule generall for all ages: Synod. Colonienſ. p. 6. c. 15. Fidelis diſpenſator &c. He is a faithfull diſpenſer, as Iohn witneſſeth, whoſe only ſcope Chriſt is, and whoſe ſpirit confeſſeth that Chriſt is come Matth.16.18.

in the fleſh, & as S. Paul doth interprete, Tit. 2. that the grace of God our Sauiour hath appeared to all men, to teach vs to denie vngodly luſts, &c. in the which words the Apoſtle doth comprehend two natures in Chriſt; of the Word, in teaching vs the will of his father; of the fleſh, in being offered for vs, &c. Fifthly, though ſome heretikes may in word confeſſe Chriſt to be come, yet if they detract from any of his offices, as the Papiſts doe from his Prieſthood, in making other mediators, and ſatisfactions, in that they denie that, for the which Chriſt came, they deny Chriſt. Wherfore we conclude; that ſeeing we hold the confeſſion of Peter, vpon the which the Church is builded, and acknowledge that Chriſt for his natures God and man, for his offices our only King, Prophet, Prieſt, and Mediatour is come in the fleſh; our ſpirit is of God, and our Church the true Church of Chriſt.

Argum. 4. Fourthly, wee reaſon thus; that Church, which maintaineth no hereſie contrarie to the Scriptures, is the true Church of Chriſt: but ſuch are the reformed Churches of the Proteſtants. Ergo.

The propoſition cannot be denied, the aſſumption or ſecond part is thus proued: They which beleeue the Law and the Prophets, and all things contained in the Scriptures, cannot maintaine any hereſie: ſo doth Saint Paul cleere himſelfe from the accuſation of hereſie, Act. 24. 14. But the reformed Churches beleeue all written in the Scriptures, ſubmitting themſelues to the iudgement of the word for the triall of their faith and doctrine: Ergo, our Church cannot be iuſtly charged with hereſie. Beſide, I haue ſhewed before, by the ſeuerall definitions of hereſie, that it can in no ſenſe bee laid to our charge. And againe, in the other treatiſe of the pillars of Papiſtrie it is proued at large, that the Churches of the Proteſtants hold no one opinion, in the pureſt ages of the Church condemned for hereſie. And though Bellarmine doth charge vs with twentie hereſies, he ſhall neuer be able to proue one: but into their ſinke of ſuperſtition, fortie ſeuerall hereticall ſtinking puddles at the leaſt doe runne downe, as in the ſame place more at large may be ſeene. So then Proteſtants are no heretikes, nor yet their Church hereticall, and conſequently a true Church.

See before queſt. 3. in the ſixth note of the Church.

Arg. 5. Fifthly, where the true foundation is laid, which is Ieſus Chriſt only, there is the houſe of God. But our Churches lay no other foundation beſide Ieſus Chriſt: Ergo. The propoſition is the Apoſtles, 1. Cor. 3. 11. Other foundation can no man lay, then that which is laid, Ieſus Chriſt. And Eph. 2. 20. The Church is thus deſcribed to be built vpon the foundation of the Prophets, and Apoſtles, Ieſus Chriſt being the chiefe corner ſtone.

1. Cor. 3. 11.
Epheſ. 2. 20.

The aſſumption alſo is manifeſt: for that we receiue only the Scriptures, no vnwritten traditions: we acknowledge no Mediatour, but Chriſt; no ſatisfaction for ſinne, but his blood, and in all things make him the onely foundation of our building: whereas our aduerſaries doe ioyne as fellow with Chriſt the virgin Mary, as the Ieſuite in the end of all his bookes moſt blaſphemouſly doth aſcribe the honour and praiſe of his labours to Chriſt, and the bleſſed Virgin. So beſide faith onely they haue brought in merits, ſatisfactions, works of ſupererogation, and ſuch like: & they do not condemne any doctrine of the Proteſtants more then faith only, which in effect is to deny Chriſt only, the obiect of faith, to be the foundation. Wherefore they laying another foundation, are not the Church: and the Proteſtants by the ſame reaſon are the Church, being builded only by faith vpon Ieſus Chriſt the only foundation.

Thus farre then I haue by moſt euident arguments ſhewed, that the reformed Churches of the Proteſtants are the true Churches of Chriſt: firſt, for that they haue ſent forth conſtant Martyrs as faithfull witneſſes of Chriſt. Secondly, becauſe they haue been alwaies perſecuted and kept vnder by the malignant Synagogue. Thirdly, they haue the true confeſſion of Ieſus Chriſt to be come in the fleſh, which proceedeth from the ſpirit of God. Fourthly, they can ſhew no hereſie, condemned in the purer ages of the Church for hereſie, to bee maintained by our Church. Fifthly, they are founded vpon the true foundation Ieſus Chriſt, and therefore are the right buildings and true Churches of Chriſt. Many other reaſons might be alleaged, and may hereafter at better leiſure, for the demonſtration of our Church; but I will content my ſelfe with theſe for this time, and ſo proceed vnto the reſt.

THE THIRD GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING COVNCELS.

A Councell is nothing elſe but an aſſemblie and gathering together of the people of God, about the affaires and buſineſſe of the Church: and they are of two ſorts, either vniuerſall in the name of the whole Church; or particular, which are either Nationall, when the learned of a whole Realme are called together; or Prouinciall, when as the Churches of one Prouince doe aſſemble into one place to conſult of Religion.

There may be two eſpeciall occaſions of Councels: the one for reſiſting and rooting out of hereſies, as the Apoſtles and elders met together, Act. 15. againſt thoſe which would haue impoſed the Iewiſh ceremonies vpon the beleeuing Gentiles. So the Councell of Nice was celebrated the yeere of the Lord 327. to confound the hereſie of Arrius, who denied Chriſt, as he was God, to be equall to his Father. In the Councell of Conſtantinople, anno 383. or thereabout, the hereſie of Macedonius was condemned, which denied the holy Ghoſt to be God. In the Epheſine Councel the firſt, Neſtorius hereſie was ouerthrowne, which affirmed Chriſt to haue two perſons, anno 434. The Councell of Chalcedon was collected, anno 454. about the hereſie of Eutiches, which held that there was in Chriſt but one nature after his incarnation; ſo confounding his humanitie and diuinitie together.

The other cauſe of the calling of Councels, is, to prouide and eſtabliſh wholeſome Lawes, decrees and conſtitutions, for the gouernment of the Church: ſo the Apoſtles called the brethren together, Act. 6. to take order for the poore. And in the Councell of Nice an vniforme order was eſtabliſhed for the celebration of Eaſter, which before had much troubled the Church.

Ex admonit. legator. ſeßi. Concil. Trident.

Vnto theſe two cauſes of aſſembling Councels, which are extirpatio hæreſis & reformatio morum, the rooting out of hereſies, and the reformation of manners, may alſo be added a third, and that is, pax externa Eccleſiæ, the externall peace of the Church, namely in compounding of controuerſies, and in working reconciliation betweene ſome principall members of the Church. As in the generall Councell of Epheſus, the matter was agreed betweene Zenon Biſhop of Cyprus, and the Patriarch of Antioch, who chalenged a prerogatiue ouer that Iland, that the Biſhops of Cyprus ſhould chuſe their owne Metropolitane. In the Councell of Chalcedon, action. 11. 12. the ſtrife betweene Baßianus and Stephanus for the Biſhoprick of Epheſus was taken vp: Concil. Baſilienſ. An order of agreement was ſet betweene the French King, and the Duke of Burgundie. Concil. Florentin. great labour made for the vniting of the Latine and Greeke Church, &c.

Ex Appendice Concil.

The queſtions betweene vs and the Papiſts concerning Councels, are theſe: Firſt, whether generall Councels be abſolutely neceſſarie. Secondly, by whom they ought to be called. Thirdly, of what perſons they ought to conſiſt. Fourthly, who ſhould be the Preſident of the Councell. Fifthly, concerning the authoritie of them. Sixthly, whether they may erre or not. Seuenthly, whether they are aboue the Pope. Eightly, of the conditions to bee obſerued in generall Councels. Ninthly, which are to be counted the true general Councels: of theſe in order.

THE FIRST QVESTION CONCERNING the neceſſitie of Councels.

The aſſertion of the Papiſts.

29. Error.

THey ſeeme in words to affirme, that generall Councels are not abſolutely neceſſarie: for the Primitiue Church was without any Councell for the ſpace of three hundred yeeres and more: yet they hold that ſome Councels, either generall or particular, are of neceſſitie to be had, Bellarm. de concil. lib. 1. cap. 11. And yet this is to be maruelled at, that they ſhould ſo much ſtand for Councels, ſeeing they might vſe a farre more compendious way, in referring all to the determination of the Pope, whom they boldly, but very fondly affirme, that he cannot erre.

Although they ſeeme to lay a neceſſitie vpon generall Councels, yet in truth they doe contrarie: for they allow no Councels at all, without the Popes conſent and authoritie; neither thinke it lawfull for any Nation or Prouince, to make within themſelues any innouation or change of Religion. So in the aſſembly at Zuricke, anno 1523. For the reformation of Religion, Faber tooke exception againſt that meeting, affirming that it was no conuenient place, nor fit time, for the diſcuſſing of ſuch matters, but rather the cognition and reſolution thereof belonged to a generall Councell. Sleid. lib. 3. Fox p.1763.2. 20.

And further they hold, that what hath beene decreed in a Councell, cannot be diſanulled but by the like Councell, as if the Councell of Trent were to be diſanulled, it muſt bee done by the like Synod. Bellarmine de concil. lib. 2. cap. 2. Which Councell they affirme to haue beene generall, and therefore another generall Councell muſt by their opinion neceſſarily bee expected, ere this can bee reuoked.

The confeſſion of the Proteſtants.

WEe doe hold that generall Councels are an holeſome meanes for the repreſſing and reforming both of errors in Religion, and corruption in manners: and that true generall Councels ought to bee much deſired, and conueniently expected: that is, ſuch a Councell, where euery man franke and free may vtter his minde without feare: an holy Councell, where euery man may goe about to ſet vp godlineſſe, not to oppreſſe the truth. Such a Councell King Henrie the eighth of worthie memorie in his proteſtation for the Church of England, for not comming to the Councell of the Pope, truely affirmeth, that he deſired, and craued nothing ſo oft of God: but becauſe there is no hope of any ſuch Councell, ſeeing the Pope would be the chiefe doer in it, and it is too vnreaſonable, that the ſame man ſhould be both a party, and a iudge; we doubt not, but that it is lawfull by the Word of God, for euery Prince, Duke, Lord, within his owne ſeignorie, without any further delay, or expectation, by the aduice and counſaile of the learned and godly of the land, according to Gods lawes, to reforme their Church.

Firſt, becauſe all delayes in matters of the Church are dangerous, and inconueniences are at the firſt hand to be met withall, as we ſee, Act. 6. and Act. 15. immediatly, when any queſtion did ariſe, the Apoſtles aſſembled together. In the Councell of Baſil, where it was defined, that the Pope was ſubiect to the Councels, Panormitane a ſtiffe champion on the Popes ſide, would haue the decree ſtaied till the returne of the Princes Embaſſadors: But Arelatenſis that worthie Cardinall, ſtepped vp, and ſhewed what danger there might be in a ſmall delay, by the example of Hannibal, who, deferring his going but one day to Rome, was driuen cleane out of Italy, hauing beene very like to haue taken the citie, if he had vſed the opportunitie. But without all controuerſie, matters of faith ought not to bee delayed: which could not be auoided, if a generall Councell ſhould alwayes be waited for.

Secondly, a Prince hath the like authoritie in his dominion, as the houſholder hath in his houſe. But euery man ought to reforme his houſe, without any further delay, aduiſement or conſultation, as Ioſua ſaith, I and my houſe will ſerue the Lord, 24. vers. 15. Wherefore the Prince may and ought to performe the like in his countrey. Ioſu.24.15.

To this purpoſe is that place fitly applied in the ſecond Pſalme, Erudimini qui iudicatis terram, get you learning ye that are Iudges of the earth: to what ende? that they may bee able to vnderſtand the diſeaſes of the ſicke Church, and to ſeeke redreſſe for the ſame within their owne Realmes. Sir Henrie Kne. in proteſtat.

Laſtly, we finde by experience, that the Lord hath bleſſed ſuch reformations, which haue beene made by Princes in their owne territories: as that in Zuricke anno 1523. at Berne, 1528. and the moſt happie reformation of our Church of England begun by King Henrie the eighth, encreaſed by that moſt vertuous Prince King Edward the ſixth, and proſperouſly continued and eſtabliſhed by our late gracious Soueraigne Queene Elizabeth: and now againe ratified and confirmed by his excellent Maieſtie.

I will adde the teſtimonie of Auguſtine, who anſwering to the Pelagians, which obiected that they were condemned by certaine ſingle Biſhops in their owne Dioceſſe, without a Synod, hee ſaith thus, Aut vero congregatione ſynodi opus erat, vt aperta pernicies damnaretur? quaſi nulla hæreſis aliquando, niſi ſynodi congregatione damnata ſit, &c. contr. 2. Epiſtol. Pelag. lib. 4. cap. 12. As though, ſaith hee, a Synod or Councell were alwayes neceſſarie to condemne a knowne hereſie. Nay, we finde that more hereſies without compariſon, haue beene in the ſame places condemned, where they firſt ſprang, without any ſuch neceſſitie, more ſo, then otherwiſe.

The ſame alſo hath beene the iudgement of the holy Martyrs, that in reforming of religion generall Councels are not alway to be expected. So ſaith Richard Feurus Martyr, in his examination, ſpeaking of the Church of Geneua; that albeit the Pope and the Miniſters of the Church of Rome were not called to the inſtitution of the foreſaid Church of Geneua, yet it followeth not, that there was no lawfull order obſerued, in eſtabliſhing that Church, ex Hiſtor. Criſpin. lib. 6. Pag.834.1.60.

Thus alſo Biſhop Ridley that godly and learned Martyr. We doe not reade that Chriſt in any place hath laid ſo great a burthen vpon the members of his ſpouſe, that he hath commanded them to goe to the vniuerſall Church; Chriſt ſendeth them, that would know the truth, to ſearch the Scriptures. But that all men ſhould meet together out of all parts in the world, to define the articles of our faith, I neither finde it commaunded of Christ, nor written in the word of God, reſponſ. Ridlei obiect. 9. Martyrum.

See alſo the conſent of antiquitie, Concil. Agrippinenſ. ſub Iulio. 1. Valerianus a Biſhop thus ſpeaketh, Et ſi non omnes conſacerdotes adeſſent Agrippinae in hoc concilio, ſufficeret tamen ſi [illegible] Epiſcopi Euphratem blaſphemum pronunciarent: Although all wee fellow elders had not met heere in this Councell, it had beene ſufficient, if fiue Biſhops had pronounced Euphrates a blaſphemous heretike, for denying Chriſt to be God.

Concil. Aquileienſ. Palladius an Arrian heretike refuſing to anſwere, ſaying hee expected a generall Councell, Ambroſe being preſent, maketh anſwere thus: Nec multitudine opus non eſſe, ubi veritas non laboraret in pluribus, ſi locata eſſet in paucis: There needed no multitude to be aſſembled, where the trueth remained with a fewe. There is no ſuch neceſſitie therefore of generall Councels.

Now I will adde the practiſe and iudgement herein of other Churches.

Guagnini de religion. Moſcouitar.

1 The Greeke Church holdeth not ſuch neceſſitie of generall Councels: the Muſcouites vnder the great Dutcheſſe Olga, and Wolodimirus her ſonne, generally receiued the Chriſtian faith, and reformed their idolatrous Countrie, in the yeere 991. not ſtaying for a generall Councell.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

2 For the South Church, Dauid Emperour of Aethiopia, thus profeſſeth in an Epiſtle written to the Biſhop of Rome, anno 1524. Praedeceſſores mei auxilio non alio quam diuino, &c. My predeceſſors being aſſiſted by none other then the diuine helpe, haue propagated the faith in their large kingdomes, which I alſo ſtill endeuour to doe, &c. Which faith, he there ſheweth, to haue beene continued amongſt them without any alteration euer ſince the conuerſion of the Eunuch: by Philip, who returning home, baptiſed the Queene, and preached the faith. This great Emperour ſtayed not for a generall Councell to reforme his Country.

Harmon of confeſſ. ſect. 19. Confeſſ. of Sweueland in concluſ.

3 Thus alſo the Church of Sweueland ſupplicateth to the Emperour of Germanie, If ſo bee that in time, wee may not haue opportunitie for a generall Councell, yet at the leaſt your Maieſtie may appoint a prouinciall aſſembly, &c.

4 Neither doe the Romaniſts themſelues hold generall Councels ſo neceſſarie, ſeeing the Pope hath diſcontinued that decree of the Councel of Conſtance, for the holding of generall Councels euery tenth yeere. I will alſo vrge againſt them a teſtimonie of one of their Popes, decret. part. 2. cauſ. 24. quaeſt. 1. cap. 2. Gelaſius: Sabellius was condemned by a Synod, neither was it neceſſarie afterward for the condemnation of his followers, ſeuerally to celebrate or ſolemnize Synodes. Wherefore Synodes are not in euery caſe neceſſarie now: we may inſiſt and reſt vpon the decrees of the auncient Synodes agreeable to Gods word.

THE SECOND QVESTION, BY WHOSE AVthoritie Councels ought to be called.

The Papiſts.

30. Error.

THey doe generally hold, that generall Councels ought onely to be called and appointed by the Popes authoritie, or his aſſignement: ſome of their reaſons are theſe.

Math. 18. 20.

Argum. 1. Councels ought to be congregate in the name of Christ, that is, by him that hath authoritie from Chriſt ſo to congregate them: Matth. 18. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Concil. cap. 12. Anſwere. See here is a goodly expoſition, to aſſemble in the name of Chriſt, is to aſſemble by the authoritie of the Pope: ſo belike where Chriſt ſaith, where ſoeuer two or three are gathered together in my name, &c. Chriſt will not be preſent with them, vnleſſe we ſend vp to Rome for licence, that two or three may come together.

Then are Councels aſſembled in Chriſts name, when they ſubmit themſelues and their actions to bee gouerned by the ſpirit of God ſpeaking in the Scriptures. But who ſhall be iudge (ſaith Bellarmine) whether Councels are ruled by the word of God, for both Papiſts and Proteſtants alleage Scripture for their decrees in Councels: wherefore this point is yet left vncertaine, vnleſſe we doe deferre this matter of calling and iudging of Councels to the Pope, that hath receiued that authoritie from Chriſt. Anſwere. 1. The Scriptures themſelues ſhall bee iudges, whoſe decrees are agreeable to Scripture: they neede not any ſuperiour Iudge. And whatſoeuer our aduerſaries ſay for their decrees, it is certaine, the moſt of them are not grounded vpon Scripture: nay it is their doctrine, that the Scriptures containe not all things neceſſarie concerning faith and manners: this one opinion ſheweth, how well the reſt of their decrees agree with Scripture. 2. Wee denie, that the Pope hath receiued any ſuch authoritie from Chriſt, as ſhall afterwards appeare: I maruell then that the Ieſuite will ſtill preſſe vs with that point, that is in queſtion betweene vs.

Argum. 2. Generall Councels ſhould be appointed by them, that haue generall authoritie to command men to come to the Councell: but this authoritie ouer the whole Church neuer any Emperour had, in ſuch ample manner, as the Pope hath: Ergo. Anſwere. Firſt, it is a great vntruth, that the Popes ſpirituall iuriſdiction which he falſly challengeth, was at any time greater than the Emperours dominion; for Conſtantine ruled ouer both the Weſt and Eaſt Churches, but the Churches of Greece were neuer, nor are not to this day ſubiect to the Sea of Rome. For Pope Eugenius would haue diſſolued the Councell of Baſil vnder this pretence, becauſe the Greekes, which ſhould come vnto the Councell for the vniting of their Church, would not paſſe the Alpes: but this vniting neuer went forward, *an.*1431. Againe, if the commandement of one Emperour or Potentate be not large enough to appoint a generall Councell, as in theſe dayes it is not, it may be done by the conſent and agreement of Princes.

*Argum.*3. Prouinciall Councels are aſſigned and ſummoned by Metropolitanes in their Prouinces, and Nationall by Primates or Patriarkes: therefore Generall Councels muſt alſo be ſummoned by the Pope; for as the Metropolitane is to his Prouince, the Biſhop to his Dioceſſe: ſo is the Pope to the vniuerſall Church. Bellarm. ibid.

*Anſw.*1. It followeth not, that the Pope may doe that in the vniuerſall Church, which is lawfull for the Metropolitane in his Prouince, or a Biſhop in his Dioceſſe: As it is no good conſequent, there may be a Monarch ouer one or two kingdomes: Ergo, alſo ouer all the world: for why ſhould there be one Eccleſiaſticall Prince rather ouer the vniuerſall Church, then one ciuill Magiſtrate ouer all the world?

2 Wee denie that it belongeth to Metropolitanes or Primates in their Prouinces to appoint prouinciall Councels, for eſtabliſhing Eccleſiaſticall lawes: but that it appertaineth of right to the Princes and Dukes in their ſeignories. Neither is the Conuocation of the Clergie in England ſummoned without the Princes authoritie: neither any decree made to ſtand in force without the royall aſſent. As for the Synodes, ſcenes, viſitations and ſuch like of Metropolitanes, Biſhops, Archdeacons in their ſeuerall iuriſdictions, they are for another end: not to enact new Eccleſiaſticall Lawes, but to ſee to the execution onely of them, which are alreadie enacted.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold it as a fond and vnreaſonable aſſertion, that generall Councels ſhould be ruled at the Popes beck, but that this authoritie is due, and hath beene of olde vnto Chriſtian Princes and Magiſtrates, and the Pope in ſo doing doth but vſurpe vpon their right.

*Argum.*1. That the Pope hath not abſolute authoritie, to call, remoue, diſſolue, or eſtabliſh Councels, it is proued out of Scripture: for Act. 6.2. the twelue Apoſtles, and not Peter onely, whoſe ſucceſſour the Pope doth falſly chalenge to bee, called the multitude together about the election of Deacons. Act.6.2.

*Argum.*2. The Councels in times paſt were ſummoned by the Emperours, which our aduerſaries themſelues cannot denie, as the Nicene firſt, by Conſtantine the great: Conſtantinopolitane 1. by Theodoſius the elder. *Epheſin.*1. by Theodoſius the younger: Chalcedonenſ. by Martianus. But, ſay our aduerſaries, theſe Councels were not appointed without the conſent of the Biſhops of Rome. I marueil they are not aſhamed ſo to ſay: for when Theodoſius called the Councell of Chalcedon, Leo then Biſhop of Rome, neither liked the time, for he would haue had it deferred; nor the place, being deſirous to haue it in Italy; yet he was content to obey the Emperors commandement, and ſent his Agents to the Councell, there to appeare for him: *Epiſt.*31.34. ad Martianum: This was alleaged by Tunſtal & Stokeſlie, two Archpapiſts, in their Epiſtle to Cardinall Poole.

It ſeemeth therefore to be a meere forgerie, that Gelaſius writeth Epiſtol. ad Epiſcop. Dardaniæ, Authoritatem vt ſynodus Chalcedonenſis fieret, ſola decreuit apoſtolica ſedes: The Apoſtolike Sea by it ſole authoritie decreed, that the Councell ſhould be holden at Chaldcedon: for firſt Leo miſliked the time; Epiſcopali ſynodo Imperator nimium breue & anguſtum tempus indixit. Epiſtol. 13. The Emperour hath ſet too ſhort a time for the Councell. Secondly, he would haue had the Councell remoued into Italy: Omnes ſacerdotes cum lachrimis manſuetudini veſtræ ſupplicant, vt generalem ſynodum iubeatis intra Italiam celebrari, Epiſtol. ad Imperator. 23. All the Clergie with teares doth beſeech your clemencie, that you would commaund a generall Synode to be kept in Italy: to the ſame effect he writeth to Theodoſium, Epiſtol. 31. and to Pulcheriæ Auguſtæ, Epiſtol. 34. For all this ſute, the Emperour would not condeſcend to haue the Councell in Italy: but whereas he had ſummoned it to be kept at Nice, he from thence remoueth it to Chalcedon, whither alſo hee ſendeth for Leo himſelfe to come; who excuſeth himſelfe for not comming, by reaſon of other great lets, yet ſendeth his Legats in his place, Epiſtol. Leon. 43. It appeareth then, that Leo at this time wanted of his will, and was ouerruled by the Emperour, as it was good reaſon, to whom the ſoueraigne right of ſummoning Councels did onely appertaine.

Bellarmine graunteth, that theſe auncient Councels were congregate by the Emperours, yet the right was in the Pope ſtill: he rendereth two reaſons why the Emperors authoritie was then requiſite: firſt becauſe, although it belongeth to the Pope to call Councels, yet he cannot gather the aſſemblies in any Citie or conuenient place, without the leaue and conſent of the Lord of the ſoile: as if now a Councell ſhould be appointed by the Pope, and ſome place aſſigned for it, in Germanie, Fraunce, or Spaine, the conſent of the Lord of the citie muſt firſt be required.

Anſwere. Firſt, the matter is then come to this iſſue: the Pope cannot call a Councell, without the leaue of the ciuill Magiſtrate, but may be by him letted from his purpoſe: but the Prince may call his ſubiects together, and aske the Pope no leaue; neither is the Pope able to reſiſt his proceedings: I pray you which of theſe hath the beſt right, and the moſt Soueraigne power to congregate theſe great aſſemblies?

Secondly, if the Pope hath receiued authoritie from Chriſt, as you ſay, to proclaime and ſummon generall Councels: what reaſon is there that Chriſt ſhould waite vpon earthly gouernours, and aske their leaue, to haue his ordinance take place? Nay, if Chriſt had entitled the Pope with any ſuch matter, he would both haue giuen him power ſufficient, and all helpes and meanes requiſite, to effect and accompliſh his holy, ſoueraigne, and puiſſant commiſſion.

Bellarmines ſecond reaſon, why the Emperours authoritie is not now ſo needfull, as it was then: becauſe in thoſe daies they were Lords of the world, and the Pope did ſubiect himſelfe to the Emperour, in temporall matters: But now the Pope is a temporall Prince in his owne ſeignorie, as any of the reſt are.

Anſwere.1. Yea, but vnleſſe the Pope were a temporall Prince ouer all the Chriſtian world, as the Emperours were, the Ieſuite hath anſwered nothing: If he be a Prince in his owne Territorie, let him meddle with his owne ſubiects, to call them together at his pleaſure; but what is this to generall Councels? Secondly, doe ye then confeſſe, that the Pope was then a ſubiect to the Emperour, but ſo he is not now: that then he was no temporall Prince, as now he is? Why maſters, what iugling is this? If it be Saint Peters patrimonie which now the Pope hath, why hath he not alwaies had right vnto it? And why ſhould the Popes now chalenge more then their predeceſſors, ſeeing they would beare vs in hand, that by perpetuall ſucceſſion, euen from S. Peter, they can fetch the Iuriſdiction of Popes both ſpirituall and temporall.

Argum.3. It is a good reaſon which was alleaged in the Councell of Baſile, that if Popes onely ſhould call Councels, there ſhould be no meanes left to withſtand a wicked and vicious Pope. Who would thinke (ſay they) that the Biſhop of Rome would congregate a Councell, for his owne correction, or depoſition?

Argum.4. The Pope hath no more authoritie, nor, by their leaue, nothing like as Peter had: but he chalenged not this dignitie amongſt the Apoſtles, to ſummon Councels. We reade of foure onely Councels of the Apoſtles, ſay the Fathers of Baſile (for this alſo is their argument) the firſt was for the chooſing of Matthias, Act.1. congregate at the commandement of Chriſt, who enioyned them not to depart from Ieruſalem. The ſecond, Act.6. congregate by the twelue, not Peter onely, for the election of Deacons. The third, which was holden as touching the taking away of Circumciſion, and other ceremonies of the law, was gathered together by a generall inſpiration, Act.15.6. The fourth, wherein certaine things contained in the law are permitted, ſeemeth to be gathered by Iames, Act.21.18. Vpon theſe reaſons the Councell thus concludeth: That if the Pope would reſiſt, and haue no Councell congregate; yet if the greater part of the Church doe iudge it neceſſarie to haue a Coun-cell, the Councell may be congregate, whether the Pope will or not. Ex Æneа Syluio, Fox pag.676. col.2.

Act.21.18.

Auguſtine ſaith, Catholicos Epiſcopos & partis Donati iuſſu imperatoris diſputando inter ſe contuliſſe. Breuicul. collation. lib.1. cap.1. That the Catholike Biſhops and the Donatiſts, did meete together to diſpute at the commandement of the Emperour: There were in that Councell, which was at Carthage, of the Catholike Biſhops 286. and of the Donatiſts 279.

We haue alſo further euidence. 1 Nilus ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church, who giueth inſtance of the firſt, third, and fourth generall Councels, which were aſſembled by the Imperiall decree, as in the firſt Nicene the Chriſtian Biſhops aſſembled, doe profeſſe, that the grace of God, &c. [illegible] and Conſtantine gathered them together. The Epheſine Councell thus writeth to the Emperours, Theodoſius and Valentinian: The Synode was gathered together by the grace of God, καὶ νεύματι τοῦ ὑμετέρου κράτους, and by the beck of your power: ſo in the ſubſcription of the Chalcedon Councell, they acknowledge, it was gathered together by the grace of God, and καὶ θεσπίσματι &c. and by the decree of their moſt Chriſtian Kings.

2 The ſame is the iudgement of the South Church: for in the ſixth generall Synode, at Conſtantinople, which was congregate by the Emperour Conſtantinus, as appeareth in the firſt action of that Synode, then was preſent one Petrus Presbyter of Alexandria, ſupplying the place of the Apoſtolike Sea there, who ſubſcribed vnto the acts of the Councell. And at this day the Emperour of Æthiopia ſtileth himſelfe columna fidei, the piller and propagator of the faith, as is extant in the ſecond Epiſtle of the Emperour Dauid ſent to the Biſhop of Rome: to whom elſe then ſhould it belong to congregate Councels for the propagation of the faith, then to him, who is the chiefe pillar and propagator of the faith.

Confeſſ. Sueuia in concluſ.

3 And of this opinion alſo are other reformed Churches: as they of Sweueland thus ſupplicate vnto the Emperour, That you would procure that as ſpeedily as may be, a generall, true and Chriſtian Councell may be ſummoned, &c.

Cuſanus Concord. Cathol. lib.2.c.25.

4 And of the Romane Church, Cardinall Cuſanus confeſſeth, that the eight generall Councels, per imperatores congregabantur, were congregate by the Emperours, and thus the Biſhop of Rome, as well as other Patriarkes did receiue the Imperiall monitions for comming or ſending to the Councell, &c.

Laſtly, we haue the determination of two Popiſh Councels againſt them, Concil. Conſt. ſeſſ.1. It was decreed, that the going away of the Pope ſhould be no let or ſtay, but the Councell might proceede. So Pope Eugenius would haue diſſolued the Councell of Baſile, but the Councell cited him to appeare by himſelfe or his Legates, vnder a great penalty.

By this it appeareth, that the Pope hath no right to call, continue, or diſſolue generall Councels.

We haue alſo their owne decrees againſt them, Decret.part.1 diſt.15.cap.1. The Nicene Councell was perfected vnder Conſtantine, the ſecond generall at Conſtantinople was aſſembled vnder Theodoſius the elder, &c. that is, by their authoritie: Et diſt.16.cap.6. The ſixth Synode Conſtantinus the Emperour congregated.

THE THIRD QVESTION, OF WHAT PERSONS the Councell ought to conſiſt.

The Papiſts.

WHereas there are foure ſorts of men vſually preſent at Councels, the Princes and Magiſtrates, Biſhops and inferiour Miniſters and Prieſts, and other lay people: of all theſe, Biſhops (they ſay) onely muſt haue a deciding or determining voyce: Prieſts and other learned may diſpute and haue a conſultatiue voyce: Princes are there to defend the Councell, and ſee order kept; other of the Laitie may be there as officers and miniſters, as Scribes and Notaries: but the ſuffrages and voyces muſt onely be giuen by Biſhops, Eckius loc. de concil. Bellarm. de concil. lib.1.cap.15. Let vs ſee ſome of their reaſons. 31.Error.

Firſt, to teach and to feed is proper for the Paſtors only, and to eſtabliſh and decree in Councels, is nothing elſe but to feed and teach: Ergo, Paſtors only muſt rule in Councell: which none are but Biſhops: Soli Epiſcopi paſtores ſunt (ſaith the Ieſuite) neque laici neque eccleſiaſtici quicunque: Only Biſhops are paſtors, and none other of the Clergie beſides: And to them only, he ſaith, that is to be applied, Act.20. Take heed to your ſelues, and the flock, ouer the which God hath made you ouerſeers. Act.20.28.

I anſwere: Firſt, what an abſurd ſaying is this and void of ſenſe, that the Biſhop is the onely paſtor of his Dioceſſe, and that euery Miniſter is not paſtor in his owne pariſh? Nay, if the Ieſuite would ſpeake truth, he ſhall finde that popiſh biſhops are neither paſtors nor Doctors, for the moſt of them neither feede nor teach; and they be not aſhamed to profeſſe it. Anno 1540, or thereabout, Thomas Forret Martyr, being found fault withall by the Biſhop of Dunkelden in Scotland, becauſe he preached ſo oft, exhorted the Biſhop againe, and wiſhed that hee did preach. The biſhop anſwered: Nay, nay, let that be, wee are not ordained to preach. And in further talke the blind blockiſh biſhop bewraied his owne ignorance, I thanke God (ſaith he) that I neuer knew what the old and new Teſtament was. Thereupon roſe a common prouerbe in Scotland, You are like the biſhop of Dunkelden, that knew neither the old nor new law: Fox Martyriol. pag.1266.col.2. Pag.1153.2.70

With this blind ſaying of the popiſh biſhop, our countrimen of Rhemes alſo do agree, which doubt not to ſay, that many which haue no gift to preach, yet for their wiſedome and gouernment, are not vnmeete to be paſtors and biſhops: Annot. in 1.Tim.5 ſect.13.

2 I anſwere, the Ieſuite bewraieth his ignorance, in making no difference betweene communis, and propria politia eccleſiæ, the common and ſpeciall policie and office of the Church: for there are proper offices and duties, ſome of paſtors, ſome of gouernours, ſome of other miniſters: but this office to be performed in generall Councels, is not proper to paſtors, but common to the whole Church: whereupon we denie, that it is proprium paſtorum munus, ſuffragia ferre in concilijs, the proper dutie of paſtors, to giue voyces and make decrees in Councels.

3 By the Ieſuites argument, the fathers of Baſil doe conclude cleane contrarie out of that place, Epheſ.4. That becauſe Chriſt inſtituted not only Apoſtles and Prophets, but paſtors and teachers for the worke of the Miniſterie, who doubteth (ſay they) but that the gouernance alſo of the Church is committed vnto others together with the Apoſtles? And hence they inferre, becauſe the worke of the Miniſterie is laid vpon the reſt of the Clergie, that therefore they ought not to be excluded from Councels. Epheſ.4.12.

4 That place, Act.20. vrged by the Ieſuite, is otherwiſe expounded by S. Hierome: Ad vnius eccleſiæ ſacerdotes ita Paulus loquitur, &c. Paul thus ſpeaketh to the Miniſters of one Church, calling them all Biſhops: whom before, verſ.17. he calleth Preſbyters or Prieſts; And from this place he concludeth, that in the Apoſtles time there was no difference betweene a biſhop and a prieſt: Hieron. Euagrio.

*Argum.*2. Secondly, Panormitane in the Councell of Baſil thus reaſoneth for Biſhops: That they were the pillars and keyes of heauen, and therefore had onely deciding voyces. Vnto him anſwered at that time the wiſe and couragious Cardinall Arelatenſis, ſhewing Auguſtines iudgement vpon thoſe words (I will giue thee the keyes of heauen) that the iudiciall power was giuen not only to Peter, but alſo to the other Apoſtles, and to the whole Church, the biſhops, the Prieſts. Whereupon he inferreth, that if the prieſts haue a iudiciall power in the Church, they alſo ought to haue a determining voyce in Councels.

*Argum.*3. Thirdly, Lodouicus the Prothonotarie in the ſame Councell thus argued: Albeit (ſaith he) Chriſt choſe twelue Apoſtles and 70. Diſciples, notwithſtanding in the ſetting forth of the Creed, only the Apoſtles were preſent; thereby giuing example, that matters of faith did pertaine onely to the Apoſtles, and ſo conſequently to Biſhops. To him Arelatenſis made this anſwere: Firſt, it followed not, becauſe the Apoſtles only are named, that they therefore onely were preſent at the ſetting forth of the Creed: for we ſee that Princes beare the name and commendation of many actions, which was done notwithſtanding by their helpers. Secondly, Lodouicus cannot be ignorant (ſaith hee) that there be ſome articles in the Creed, which were not put to by the Apoſtles, but afterward by generall Councels: as that part, wherein mention is made of the holy Ghoſt, which the Councell of Lyons did adde. Thus much out of the Councell of Baſil.

The Proteſtants Confeſſion.

OVr opinion grounded vpon truth and Scripture is this: that, not onely Biſhops, but all other Paſtors admitted to the Councell, and the learned and diſcreet amongſt the lay men, ought to haue concluding voyces in Councell: and that rather the diſcuſſing and conſulting of matters pertaineth to the learned Diuines, the deciding to all, then contrariwiſe.

Argum. 1. Firſt, that inferiour Paſtors are to be ioyned with Biſhops and Prelates, it was amplie proued in the Councell of Baſil, of the which I haue ſo often made mention, as noble Arelatenſis reaſoneth thus: The dignitie of the fathers is not to be reſpected but the truth: neither will I preferre a lie of any Biſhop, be he neuer ſo rich, before a veritie or a truth of a poore prieſt. This is his firſt reaſon, that the truth ought to be receiued at any mans mouth be he neuer ſo ſimple: and therefore Prieſts as well as Biſhops are to be admitted to the Councell.

Argum. 2. He declareth the ancient practiſe of the Church: In the Councell of Nice, where there were aſſembled 332. Biſhops, Athanaſius being then onely a Prieſt, withſtood the Arrians, and infringed their arguments. In the Synode of Chalcedon, there were preſent ſixe hundred Prieſts, which name is common both to Biſhops and Prieſts. When Paul Biſhop of Antioch preached that Chriſt was a man of common nature: the Councell aſſembled againſt him at Antioch, where the ſaid Paul was condemned: neither was there any man, which did more confound the ſaid Paul, then one Malchion Prieſt of Antioch, which taught Rhetorike there.

Concerning the ſecond part, that lay men alſo with Prieſts ought to be admitted: firſt we haue teſtimonie out of the word of God for it. Tit. 3.13. For this cauſe Zenas the Lawyer is ioyned as fellow in commiſſion with Apollos. But we haue a more euident place, Act. 15.22. It ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders with the whole Church. Here we ſee that not only the Elders but the whole multitude, were admitted into conſultation with the Apoſtles. To this place our aduerſaries doe thus anſwere: Lodouicus the Prothonotary firſt thus raſhly and fondly gaue his verdict in the Councell of Baſil, that there was no argument to be gathered of the Acts of the Apoſtles, whoſe examples were more to be marueiled at, then to be followed. But to this Arelatenſis replied, that hee would ſtay himſelfe moſt vpon the Apoſtles doings: for what (ſaith he) is more comely for vs to follow, then the doctrine and cuſtomes of the Primitiue Church? And Æneas Siluius reporteth (who writeth of the acts of that Councell) that all men impugned this ſaying of Lodouicus, that the Apoſtles were not to be followed, as a blaſphemie.

Wherefore the Ieſuite hath found out another anſwere; he ſaith that none but the Apoſtles gaue ſentence, the reſt only gaue conſent, and inward liking and approbation. This cauill Arelatenſis met withall long before the Ieſuite was borne, in the forenamed Councell. Neither this word, ſaith he, It ſeemed good, ſignifieth in this place conſultation, but deciſion, and determination. And ſo it doth indeed, for ſeeing there is one word applied to them all ἔδοξε, placuit, it ſeemed good to the Apoſtles, Elders, and the whole multitude, why ſhould it not be taken in the one and ſelfeſame ſenſe, and after the ſame manner vnderſtood of them all?

Argum. 2. Seeing the Councell doth repreſent the whole Church, there ought to be preſent and to giue ſentence of all ſorts and callings of men; and the rather, becauſe the matter of faith and religion is a common cauſe, and as well appertaineth to lay men as to Biſhops, it behoueth them alſo to be preſent. And further, it were more reaſonable that Princes and temporall Magiſtrates ſhould binde their ſubiects to their lawes, without their conſent, then that, eccleſiaſticall perſons ſhould lay yokes vpon Chriſtians againſt their wils, for ciuill matters are more indifferent and left to our choice, then ſpirituall are: Yet we ſee there are no lawes enacted in our Realme but by the high Court of Parliament, where alwaies ſome are appointed for the Commons, euen the whole neather houſe, without whoſe conſent no act can paſſe. So it were very reaſonable, that no law ſhould be laid vpon the Church, without the generall conſent thereof.

Thirdly, Auguſtines iudgement wee heard before alleaged by Arelatenſis, that ſeeing the iudiciall power of the keyes is committed to the whole Church, to Biſhops, to Prieſts, they all ought to be entertained in generall Councels.

Laſtly, that not only Biſhops, but other alſo of the Clergie haue determining voyces in Councell, we haue the conſent of antiquitie. In the Councell of Antioch aſſembled againſt Samoſatenus, the whole Synode writeth thus: Epiſcopi, presbyteri, & diaconi dilectiſſimis fratribus in domino ſalutem: The Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, to our beloued brethren in the Lord, greeting. And in their epiſtle they write thus: Neceſſarium eſt viſum, hunc reſiſtentem Deo, neque acquieſcentem veræ fidei abijci, &c. It ſeemed neceſſarie to vs, that this fellow, enemie to God, and not obedient to the truth, to be cut off: They all both Elders and Deacons gaue conſent to his condemnation.

Aquiſgranenſ. ſub Lodouico; Cœtus venerabilium præſulum, & ſequentis ordinis religioſorum ſacer-dotum ſynodaliter congregatus: The aſſemblie of the reuerend Prelates, and of the next order, of the deuout Prieſts, being councellike aſſembled together, &c.

Chalcedonenſ. action. 1. Orientales Clerici vna cum Epiſcopis clamarunt, Flauianus in proprio loco quare non ſedet? The Clergie of the Eaſt parts together with the Biſhops cried out, Why doth not Flauianus ſit in his proper place? This Flauianus Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was diſgraced in the hereticall Councell, Epheſin. 2. and thruſt downe to the fifth place: and therefore in this Catholike Councell, the Clergie thus cried out: then the Egyptians together with Dioſcorus the Eutychian heretike, cried againe, Imperator Epiſcopos vocauit, ſynodus Epiſcoporum eſt, ſuperfluos [illegible] clericos: The Emperour hath called the Biſhops together, the Synode conſiſteth of Biſhops, theſe fellowes are ſuperfluous. Theſe heretikes were the firſt that tooke exception againſt the voyce of ſimple prieſts in Councell, calling them ſuperfluous.

We haue alſo here further euidence. 1. Nilus ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church who thus writeth, ſpeaking of the acts of Councels, [illegible] which in matters belonging to the common faith did make a common inquiſition, that is, required the ſentence of all. The ſame author alſo alleageth, out of the 11. action of the ſixth Synode, how Conſtantinus an Archdeacon (no Biſhop) did ſubſcribe among the reſt, to the acts of that Synode.

Nilus lib. 2. de primat.

2. The ſame was the cuſtome of the South Church: as appeareth in the ſubſcription of the ſeuenth Synode, where Ioannes a Presbyter of Alexandria, called [illegible], an aſſiſtant to the Patriarke was preſent, and ſubſcribed. And at this day the Patriarke of Ethiopia hath twelue eccleſiaſticall perſons his aſſiſtants (which are not required to be Biſhops) in the gouernment of the Church, and eccleſiaſticall affaires.

Titelmann. de fide & morib. Æthiop. in fine

3. So alſo other reformed Churches, require the preſence as well of other learned men, as of Biſhops: as the Church of Sueueland thus ſupplicateth to the Emperour, that his ſacred Maieſtie would appoint a ſynodiciall aſſemblie, as they call it, of the learned men of euery degree and ſtate wherevnto all, for whom it is expedient to bee preſent, may freely and ſafely reſort, euery man may be heard, &c. And againe a little after: that all the beſt learned, and moſt godly men being called together, they may ſift out of the diuine Scriptures, what is to be thought of euery point of doctrine, &c.

Confeſſ. Sueu. in concluſion. Harm. p. 602.

4. Concerning the Latine, beſide the iudgement of the Councell of Baſil, before alleaged throughout this queſtion, long before that, it was the vſe for Presbyters as well, as Biſhops to giue voyce in Councels, as in the Romane Councell vnder Pope Hilarie, in the laſt Canon, where it was propounded, that no Biſhop ſhould appoint his ſucceſſor, but that he ſhould be elected. Ab vniuerſis Epiſcopis & presbyteris acclamatum eſt: An acclamation was made by all the Biſhops and Prieſts: ex citatione Eſpenc. in 1. Timoth. p. 371. a.

And leſt it ſhould be ſaid, that the Prieſts did not ſit as Iudges, but only to aduiſe and diſcuſſe matters, I will anſwere them out of their owne Decrees; Decret. p. 1. diſt. 23. c. 1. In the Lateran Councell vnder Nicholaus 2. this report is made, Conſidentibus reuerendiſſ. Epiſcopis, & Abbatibus, presbyteris, &c. While the reuerend Biſhops, Abbots, and Prieſts did ſit, &c. Nicholaus began thus, &c. they all therefore did ſit as Iudges. And yet more euidently, diſt. 93. c. 6. Presbyteri ab initio negotiorum iudices eſſe mandati ſunt, & intereſſe ſacerdotum concilio: Prieſts in the beginning were appointed to be the iudges of the affaires of the Church, and to be preſent in Councels, &c. Marke this, they muſt be preſent as iudges.

As touching alſo the preſence of graue and wiſe men of the Laitie in Councels, wee haue the practiſe and examples of former times. In the Chalcedon Councell, there were preſent 7. noble Earles, appointed as Iudges, Anatolius, Palladius, Tacianus, Vincomalus, with the reſt, and ten noble Senators, Florentius, Nauritus, Protogenes, with others.

Toletan. 6. cap. 3. Conſonam cum rege, corde & ore promulgamus ſententiam, ſimul etiam cum ſuorum optimatum, & illuſtrium virorum conſenſu ſancimus, &c. We decree our ſentence, in heart and voyce according with our Prince, and together with the conſent of his Nobles, we doe enact, &c. Here the Eccleſiaſticall and Ciuill ſtate decree in Councell together.

We haue alſo a moſt cleere teſtimonie euen of a Pope himſelfe: Nichol. 1. epiſtol. ad Michaelem imperatorem. Vbinam legis imperatores anteceſſores veſtros in ſynodalibus conuentibus interfuiſſe, niſi forſitan in quibus de fide tractatum eſt, quæ vniuerſalis eſt, quæ omnium communis eſt, quæ non ſolum ad Clericos, verum ad laicos, & ad omnes omnino pertinet Chriſtianos? Where, I pray you, doe you reade, that the Emperors your predeceſſors were preſent in Synods, but where they entreated of faith, which is common to all, and doth not only concerne the Clergie, but lay-men alſo, and generally all Chriſtians? Ergo, of matters of faith lay-men may together with ſpirituall perſons conſult in Councels.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Pope Nicholas is ſo to be vnderſtood, that the Emperour may bee preſent not as a Iudge, but onely as one to defend the faith by good lawes, and where need is with the ſword.

Contra. But the Emperour Martian ſaith otherwiſe in his oration in the Chalcedon Councell: Nos ad confirmandam fidem, non ad oſtendendam virtutem, &c. We by the example of Conſtantine thinke good to be preſent in the Synod, to confirme the faith, not to ſhew our power, &c. But the Ieſuite ſaith, to ſhew his power, and vſe his ſword.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, WHO OVGHT TO be the Preſident and chiefe moderator in Councels.

The Papiſts.

With one whole conſent they all agree and hold, that the Pope onely ought to haue the chiefe place in Councels, either himſelfe in his owne perſon, or elſe his Legates and deputies for him, and that as ſupreame Iudge hee ſhould moderate all things, Bellarmine cap. 19. they reaſon thus.

John 21.15. 1 The Pope is the chiefe paſtor of the vniuerſall Church: for vnto Peter onely it was ſaid, Paſce oues meas, Feed my ſheepe, and he is called and ſaluted in Councels by the name of father: and all other both Princes and Biſhops are ſheepe in reſpect of him. Bellarm. cap. 19.

We anſwere: firſt, in the Ieſuites argument, there is petitio principij, a begging of that which is in queſtion: for yet hee hath not prooued that the Pope is the vniuerſall Paſtor. Secondly, that place, Feede my ſheepe, prooueth it not: Auguſtine ſaith, Redditur negationi trinæ trina confeſſio, ne minus amori lingua ſeruiat, quàm timori: In Iohan. tract. 123. He recompenſeth a threefold deniall, with a threefold confeſſion, leſt that his tongue ſhould be leſſe ſeruiceable to loue, then it was to feare. So that by this fathers iudgement, it was no priuiledge to Peter to be thrice admoniſhed, but hee is thereby put in minde of his thrice deniall of Chriſt. Againe, I marueile the Ieſuite can ſo ſoone forget himſelfe: for in the fifteenth chapter afore, he prooued by theſe words (Feede my ſheepe) that Biſhops onely were paſtors; and he can now turne the words to ſerue onely for the Pope. Thirdly, what great matter is it for the Pope to bee called father, ſeeing hee is not ignorant that all Biſhops aſſembled in Councell and other learned, are called by that name? Nay, it is no rare matter for other Biſhops to be ſaluted by the name of Pope: as Proſper writing to Auguſtine, twice in one epiſtle calleth him, beatiſſimum Papam, moſt bleſſed Pope, Tom. 7. Princes and Biſhops to the Pope are ſheepe, ſaith the Ieſuite. Firſt, for Biſhops, though he had a iuriſdiction ouer all, which it will be hard for him to proue, yet ſhall they bee no more his ſheepe, then prieſts are to Biſhops, and Biſhops to their Metropolitanes, who cannot be ſaid to be their ſheepe, though they haue ſome preeminence ouer them: for Auguſtines rule muſt ſtand, Nemo ſe noſtrum Epiſcopum Epiſcoporum conſtituit. de Baptiſ. 1.2. No man is a Biſhop of Biſhops, nor ſhepheard of ſhepheards. Secondly, for Princes hee hath nothing to do with any but thoſe in his owne biſhopricke: and as they are his ſheepe one way, as they are taught of him; ſo hee and his Cardinals are the Magiſtrates ſheepe another way, and in reſpect of the ciuill gouernment he is their ſhepheard: And both he and they, Prince and Prieſt are ſheep-fellowes, vnder Ieſus Chriſt the chiefe ſhepheard: as Auguſtine ſaith, Tanquam vobis paſtores ſumus, ſed ſub illo paſtore vobiſcum oues ſumus: in Pſal. 126. We are ſhepheards to you, but both you and I are ſheepe vnder that great ſhepheard.

Argum. 2. Peter was Preſident in the Councell of the Apoſtles, Act. 15. Ergo, the Pope ought to be now, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, S. Iames ſeemeth rather to haue been Preſident there, then S. Peter, and to haue determined the matter in queſtion: firſt, becauſe S. Iames ſpeaketh laſt, S. Peter firſt: and the laſt place is commonly giuen to the moderator or determiner. Secondly, S. Iames, when he had ſpoken, con-
Acts 11. 10.19. cludeth thus: verſ. 19. wherefore my ſentence is, &c. hee determineth and giueth ſentence: whereas Saint Peter ſaith not ſo, my ſentence is, as a moderator, but rather as a perſwader and counſellor: Now therefore, why tempt ye God? &c. verſ. 10. Thirdly, it is confeſſed by our aduerſaries, that S. Iames was Biſhop at Ieruſalem, and therefore was moſt like to bee the chiefe, if any were, in his owne iuriſdiction.

But we affirme neither of theſe, to haue had any ſuch preeminence aboue the other, to be the Preſident and chiefe Iudge, or to haue an ouerruling voyce: but that the matter was decided by an vniforme conſent of them all, being directed by the holy Ghoſt: It ſeemed good to the holy Ghoſt and vs, Acts 15,28. verſ. 28. Yet we grant, that Peter had for the moſt part a prioritie of ſpeaking for order ſake, as being the moſt ancient: as Act. 1. in the election of Matthias, and Act. 2. when the Apoſtles had receiued the holy Ghoſt hee ſpake firſt, and for the reſt: and thus much the Greekes confeſſe that they gaue vnto him τὸ τοῦ πρώτου λέγειν ἀξίωμα, the honour to ſpeake firſt: Bellarmine de principat. cap. 2. Yet it followeth not, that hee had a negatiue, ouerruling, or approuing voyce, which prerogatiue the Romaniſts chalenge to the Pope.

Secondly, though Peter had been Preſident then, it followeth not that the Pope ſhould be now: for we denie the Pope to be Peters ſucceſſor, either in his Apoſtolike doctrine, or Apoſtolike office: as ſhall appeare when we come to that place.

Argum. 3. Bellarmine taketh vpon him to proue, that the Pope was Preſident by his Legates in the eight generall Councels, and maketh a particular induction of them all.

Anſw. But this argument rather maketh for vs, as it followeth argum. 3. that becauſe the Pope was not Preſident in any of the eight generall Councels, therefore the Preſidentſhip belongeth not vnto him: for in ſome of them, the Pope was not preſent neither perſonally, nor by his Legates, as in the firſt of Conſtantinople, where Nectarius was Preſident: in ſome the Pope was reſiant in the citie, but not preſent in the Councell, as Vigilius was in Conſtantinople, what time the fifth generall Councell was there held: in ſome of them the Popes Legates were preſent, but they had not the chiefe or Preſidents place, as in the fourth generall Councell. But ſee more hereof afterward, argum. 3.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe truely affirme, that the ſoueraigne Maieſty of the Emperour and chiefe Magiſtrate, or his Legate, if he either be preſent himſelfe, or ſend, ought to bee Preſident of the Councell: or elſe in their abſence, one to be choſen and elected by the Councell for that function, as Cardinall Arelatenſis was choſen in the Councell of Baſil by the fathers to be moderator.

Argum. 1. Firſt, that it belongeth to the Prince, to haue this prerogatiue, it is hence proued, becauſe he is the chiefe iudge in all matters and cauſes, both Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall: And it appeareth by the ancient practiſe of the godly Kings in Iſrael and Iuda: Dauid gathered a Councell together, when he brought the Arke to Ieruſalem, 1. Chron. 15. 3. where he was the chiefe doer, and director; for he appointed the Leuites their courſes, and ſet forth a certaine forme of thankſgiuing to be vſed, 1. Chron. 16. 4. 7. Hezekiah aſſembled a Councel, 2. Chron. 30. 2. where it was decreed, that the Paſſeouer ſhould be ſolemnely kept: and the poſts were ſent forth with the Kings writ or commiſſion. In Ioſiah his raigne there was a great aſſemblie at Ieruſalem, of the Princes, the people, Prieſts and Leuites, and all from the greateſt to the ſmalleſt: where the King himſelfe was preſident and chiefe agent, reading the law before the people, 2. Chron. 34. 30. 31.

1. Chron. 15. 3.
1. Chron. 16.
2. Chron. 30. 2
2. Chron. 32. 30

Bellarmine anſwereth. 1. Theſe are extraordinarie examples: Dauid and Salomon did deale in Eccleſiaſticall matters, not as Kings, but as Prophets.

Anſ. That Dauid and Salomon were Prophets we grant, as by their Propheticall writings may appeare: But for the reſt of the godly Kings of Iuda, how is it likely that they were Prophets, ſeeing neither by word or writing they deliuered any prophecies? Againe, the care of religion was neither in Dauid, or the reſt extraordinarie or propheticall: for how can that be extraordinarie, which was vſuall and commonly practiſed of all the religious Kings? And further, it was not the Prophets, but the Kings office to command their ſubiects to aſſemble together, as Hezekiah and Ioſiah did: for if it belonged to the Prophets, not to the Kings to aſſemble Councels, then Nathan, not Dauid; Iſaias, not Hezekiah; Ieremias the Prophet, not Ioſias ſhould haue called thoſe holy aſſemblies, which were ſummoned by theſe Kings. Laſtly, not onely theſe godly Kings of Iudah tooke this vpon them, but euen the King of Niniue with the conſent of his Nobles did call a faſt, Ionas 3. 7. So properly is it incident to the Emperiall crowne to take care of religion.

Ionas 3. 7.

Bellarmine. 2. We ſee that ſome of the Kings were puniſhed, for medling with the prieſtly affaires: for this cauſe Vzziah was ſtricken with leproſie, 2. Chron. 26. by this it appeareth, that it was extraordinarie in Kings to handle matters eccleſiaſticall, Bellar. ibid. cap. 20.

2. Chron. 26. 16

Anſw. Vzziah would haue offered incenſe vpon the Altar, which was onely lawfull for the prieſt, and therefore was worthily puniſhed. Neither doe we ſay that the Prince ought to deale with preaching of the word, adminiſtring of the Sacraments, giuing of orders, or ſuch like duties, which are properly incident to the paſtors office: But concerning theſe duties, of ſummoning Councels, and enacting eccleſiaſticall lawes, and the commanding of all eſtates and perſons euen in religious matters, we affirme that the right and power hereof, is meerely ciuill, and belongeth properly to the ciuill gouernour.

Argum. 2. Secondly, we finde that the Emperours themſelues haue been preſent at Councels: as in the Nicene, Conſtantine the great was preſent: in the Councell of Chalcedon, Martianus: in the Conſtantinopolitane 3. Conſtantinus the Emperour; in the Conſtantinopolitane 4. Baſilius the Emperour was preſent. Is it to be thought that theſe noble Emperours, were at the Councels as inferiours or vnderlings? or had they not the chiefe places? then ſure they were Preſidents: for in the Councell the chiefe place belongeth to the Preſident. They might appoint a ſpeaker or prolocutor for them, as in the Parliament houſe, though the Prince bee preſent, yet the Lord Chancellor ſpeaketh: but the chiefe power and Soueraigntie in the Councell, was in the Emperours.

Bellarmine here anſwereth by a diſtinction: Imperator non præſidebat concilio propriè vt iudex, præſidebat ſaltem quo ad locum materialem: The Emperor was not preſident in Councels properly as Iudge, but onely as chiefe in the place: And a little after he ſaith: Non tam ex loco, quam ſubſcriptione colligenda eſt præſidentia: The Preſidentſhip is not ſo much by the place to be knowne, as by the ſubſcription: de Concil. lib. 1. cap. 19.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Ieſuites diſtinction is nothing worth: for hath not alwaies the iudge in place of iudgement the chiefeſt roome? ſeeing then the preſident or Iudge in Councels, hath the ſupreme and chiefe authoritie, and to the higheſt perſon of right belongeth the higheſt place; how can it otherwiſe be, but that to whom the chiefeſt place in Synods was aſſigned, the Preſidentſhip alſo of right appertained.

Secondly, that the Emperours and in their abſence their Legates, were preſidents in Councels, not onely in reſpect of the higheſt place, but as Iudges properly: wee are able to iuſtifie it by the ancient acts and monuments of antiquitie. Concil. Epheſin. epiſt. ad Theodoſium, rogamus clementiam tuam, ut per literas [illegible] pietatis [illegible] confirmare quae Concilio decreuimus. The Councell writeth thus to the Emperour: We beſeech your clementie that by your godly letters you would ratifie and confirme the decrees of the Councell.

Martianus the Emperour in his oration to the fourth generall Councell of Chalcedon ſpeaketh thus: Nos ad confirmandam fidem, non ad oſtendendam virtutem exemplo Conſtantini adeſſe ſynodo cogitauimus: we not to ſhew our power, but to confirme the faith, haue thought good, by Conſtantines example, to be preſent in the Synode, &c. To whom now (I pray you) did it belong to confirme and ratifie the acts of Councels, but to the Iudge and preſident? but this did the Emperours. Ergo.

In the Chalcedon Councell, action. 1. thus we finde Reſidentibus magnificis, & glorioſiſſimis iudicibus in medio, &c. The moſt glorious and magnificent Iudges ſitting in the middeſt, and on the left hand the reuerend Biſhops, Paſcaſinus and Lucentius, Leo the Biſhop of Romes deputies, and Anatolius Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople: and on the right hand, Dioſcorus Patriarch of Alexandria, &c. Wee ſee then, that the Noble men, ſupplying the Emperours place, were Iudges and preſidents in this Councell, not ſo much becauſe of their ſeate, as for their authority: for whereas Paſcaſinus and Lucentius tooke exception againſt Dioſcorus, ſaying, Non ſedeat in Concilio, ſed audiendus intromittatur: Let him not ſit in the Councell as iudge, but come in to be heard and iudged, &c. yet the noble Iudges permitted it not.

3. That the Emperours were preſidents, they or their deputies in their name: we proue it not onely by their place in Councels, but by their ſubſcription, Concil. ſub Syluestr. cap. 20. Conſtantinus, with his mother Helena ſubſcribed. Toletan. 3. Reccaredus the King, together with Badda the Queen ſubſcribed to the decrees of the Councell. Concil. 6. general. Conſtantinop. action. 18. Conſtantinus the Emperour ſubſcribed thus: Subſcriptio piiſſimi & Chriſto dilecti Conſtantini imperatoris: the ſubſcription of the moſt deuout and beloued of Chriſt Conſtantinus the Emperour.

Iuſtinianus the ſecond ſubſcribed to the decrees of the ſixth generall Synode aſſembled in Trullo. Wherefore if the Emperours had the chiefe place in generall Councels, and the greateſt authority, and by their royall conſent, and ſubſcription confirmed the acts and decrees of Councels, why ſhould it be doubted that they were chiefe preſidents in Councels, and ought of right ſo to be.

Argum. 3. As we haue ſhewed that Emperours or their deputies were preſidents in generall Councels; ſo with as eaſie labour can we make it plaine, that the Popes and Biſhops of Rome, were not in their owne perſons, or by their Legats, preſidents in any of the eight generall Councels.

In the firſt generall Councell Nicene, Euſtathius of Antioch was preſident: ſo witneſſeth Felix Biſhop of Rome, Epiſt. ad Zenonem imperatorem.

Wherefore Bellarmine in ſaying, that Vitus and Vincentius the Biſhop of Romes Legats, were the preſidents, doth oppoſe himſelfe againſt the teſtimonie of the Biſhop of Rome himſelfe, and giueth him the lie. Their owne decrees alſo thus teſtifie, decr. part. 1. diſt. 15. c. 3. Gelaſius, That the Nicene Synode was celebrate, Mediante Conſtantino: Conſtantinus the Emperour being the mediator, or moderator: and Euſtathius was his ſpeaker or prolocutor.

Conſtantinopol. 1. The ſecond generall Councell was celebrated vnder Nectarius, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, ſic patres Chalcedon. ſynod. action. 36.

Here Bellarmine confeſſeth that neither the Pope, nor his Legates were preſent, but that Nectarius was preſident: Ergo, by his owne confeſſion the Pope was not Preſident in this Councell: And whereas he ſaith the Emperour was not Preſident, it is contrary to their owne decrees, decr. part. 1. diſt. 15. c. 3. Gelaſius, who affirmeth that the ſecond generall Synode was held at Conſtantinople: Mediante Theodoſio ſeniore: Theodoſius the elder being mediator.

Epheſina ſynodo ſanctae memoriae Cyrillus praeſedit: Cyrillus of bleſſed memorie was Preſident in the Epheſine, the third generall Councell, ſic Leo epiſtol. 45.

Bellarmine ſaith that Cyrillus was the Popes Legate in this Councell. Anſwere. 1. Leo before cited maketh mention of no ſuch thing. 2. The Pope did vſe to ſend Legates of his owne, and not to nominate Biſhops of the Greeke Church. 3. Cod. lib. 1. tit. 8. l. 3. Valentinian, Martian thus teſtifie of this Synode, Cui beatae memoriae Cyrillus praefuit: Where Cyrillus of happie memorie was Preſident. The ſame witneſſeth Gelaſius, decr. part. 1. diſt. 15. c. 3. In the Epheſine Synode, Neſtorius with the conſent of Celeſtinus was condemned, Mediante Cyrillo, &c. Cyrillus being the mediator or Preſident. And againe, diſt. 16. c. 10. The Fathers in this Councell did conclude twelue articles againſt ſo many hereſies of Neſtorius authore Cyrillo, Cyril being the author.

Gelaſius decret. de Apocryphis, affirmeth the Councell of Chalcedon, which was the fourth generall to be celebrated, Mediante Martiano Auguſto, & Anatolio Conſtantinopolitano: By the mediation or Preſidentſhip of Martianus the Emperour, and Anatolius Patriarch of Conſtantinople. Yet notwithſtanding this authoritie of Gelaſius, Bellarmine ſtill auoucheth that the Popes Legates had the Preſidentſhip in this Councell. Contra. 1. The Synode ſaith, Reſidentibus magnificis iudicibus, &c. The moſt magnificent Iudges ſitting, &c. there was ſeuen noble men by the Emperour appointed as Iudges: but who elſe is iudge but the Preſident? 2. Theſe ſeuen Iudges ſit in the middeſt by the altar, the Patriarch of Alexandria on their right hand; Paſchaſinus and Lucentius, the Biſhop of Romes Legates, on the left hand: wherefore by their place it ſeemeth they were not Preſident. 3. They would haue Dioſcorus excluded out of the Councell, but the Iudges would not permit it.

4. Dorotheus [illegible] diſt. 16. [illegible] is ſaid to be author of the 27. Canons made againſt Eutyches; wherefore he rather was the Preſident then the other. See alſo to this purpoſe the ſecond Nicen Councell, actione [illegible], where Tharaſius Preſident of that Councell ſaith, Anatolium [illegible] ſedi principem fuiſſe: That Anatolius was the Prince or Preſident of the fourth Synode: Ergo, the Popes Legates were not.

Conſtantinopol. 2. The fifth generall Councell was kept, Praeſidente ſanctiſſimo & beatiſſimo domino noſtro patriarcha Menna: Our moſt holy and bleſſed Lord Mennas Patriarch of Conſtantinople being Preſident, coll. 1. 2. 3. [illegible] 4. Yet Bellarmine is bold to ſay, that not Mennas, but Eutychius his ſucceſſor was Preſident in the fifth generall Councell; whereas in euery action of this Councell, which are but [illegible] in all, there is mention only made as before, of the Preſidentſhip of Mennas.

But what hath Bellarmine gained, if Eutychius and not Mennas was Preſident? What maketh this for the Popes Preſidentſhip? And if it be ſo, that Vigilius the Biſhop of Rome was at that time preſent at Conſtantinople, as the Ieſuite thinketh, why came he not to the Synode to challenge his Preſidentſhip, but that he feared to be thruſt downe into the ſecond place, as Illyricus truely coniectureth, and is without cauſe challenged by the Ieſuite of a lye, ſeeing he himſelfe confeſſeth as much in the beginning of the 19. chapter, alledging this as a reaſon, why the Pope refuſed perſonally to be preſent in the Greeke Synodes, becauſe the Emperour or his Legates would ſit in the Preſidents place?

Conſtantinopol. 3. The ſixth generall Councell, actione 1. Praeſidente piiſſimo imperatore Conſtantino, The moſt deuout Emperour Conſtantinus being Preſident.

Yet notwithſtanding the words of the Councell ſtand thus, Bellarmine ſaith, that the Legates of Agatho the Biſhop of Rome had the Preſidentſhip: whereas beſide the direct teſtimony of the Councell, as we haue heard, which maketh the Emperour Conſtantinus Preſident, the Legates of the Biſhop of Rome ſat vpon the left hand of the Emperour, and on the right George Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, and Macarius of Antioch, as the chiefer men.

Nicen. 2. The ſeuenth generall Councell, Tharaſius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was Preſident and author of the decrees.

This is notwithſtanding denied by Bellarmine that Tharaſius was preſident: and yet the words of the Synode are theſe; we thinke it very meete and conuenient, that the moſt holy and high paſtor and rector Preſident of the imperiall citie of Conſtantinople, new Rome, in the beginning to propound what matters ſhall bee handled, and as it were to open a doore to the reſt, &c. But whoſe office was it elſe, but the Preſidents to propound the queſtions, and to moderate the diſputations? Though we need not to contend for this Synode, which was moſt erroneous, groſſe and idolatrous, and not worthie to be counted amongſt the eight generall Councels, and indeed it is none of them.

Conſtantinopol. 4. The eight generall Councell, Baſilius the Emperour was preſent, and Preſident; for he concludeth the Councel thus, Praeſtamus omnibus qui in mente aliquid habent ambiguum, in medium exhibeant: We giue licence to all, that haue any doubt, to bring it forth. He was then the Preſident, whatſoeuer the Ieſuite can obiect to the contrarie.

In theſe eight generall Councels the Pope of Rome was not himſelfe perſonally preſent: what will you ſay now to a generall Councell, where the Pope was preſent in perſon, and yet not Preſident.

In the Councell of Florence, Palaeologus Emperour of Conſtantinople, and Ioſephus Patriarch there, alſo Eugenius the fourth Biſhop of Rome were perſonally preſent, with the whole ſtate Eccleſiaſticall both of the Greeke and Latine Church: yet was not Eugenius preſident, as may appeare by theſe arguments.

1 At their firſt meeting there was great contention about their ſeates in the Councell, the Pope would haue placed the Greekes with their Emperour on the left hand, the Latine Clergie on the right, and himſelfe to ſit in the vpper end in the middeſt betweene them both: but the Emperor would not ſuffer this, ſaying, that that place was meeter for him then for the Pope: Hereupon the Pope relented, and was contented to ſit on the right ſide ouer againſt the Emperour; but if he had been preſident, that place in the middeſt of right had belonged vnto him.

2 The Grecians craued leaue of their Emperour, and Patriarch, when they began to ſpeake, as Beſſarion both ſeſſ. 1. and Marcus Biſhop of Epheſus ſeſſ. 3. and ſeſſ. 13. Iohannes Monachus ſaith thus to Marcus, Non ego ſed Imperator tibi legem loquendi ponet: Not I, but the Emperour is to appoint you the law of diſputing: But this onely belongeth to the preſident and moderator. 3. Seſſ. 20. Imperator iuſſit vt iterum ſeſſio haberetur, The Emperour commanded another ſeſſion to bee kept: Ergo, he was preſident, and not the Pope.

Argument. 4. Laſtly, not to heape vp many reaſons in ſo plaine a cauſe, I will alleage one example moſt manifeſt out of Auguſtine: who writeth, that in that great Councell at Carthage where the matter was diſcuſſed betweene the Catholikes and the Donatiſts, there being preſent more then 500. Biſhops of both ſides, Marcellinus was appointed to be moderator of that diſputation: who diuers times putteth in his ſentence in the diſputation, and laſt of all, bidding both parts to goe aſide, hee writeth the ſentence definitiue, and concludeth againſt the Donatiſts, approuing the actes of the Catholike Biſhops, Aug. breuicul. collation.

And for further euidence herein. 1. The Greeke Church holding, as hath beene ſhewed before in the ſecond queſtion, that the right of calling Councels belonged to the Chriſtian Emperours, conſequently alſo doe allow them to be Preſidents, and to haue the chiefe place in Councels, which hath been alleaged before out of the acts of the Councell of Florence, where Paleologus the Emperour of Conſtantinople was preſent: Yea Nilus goeth further, and ſheweth how Peter, though hee ſpake firſt, did not challenge vnto himſelfe any ſuch Preſidentſhip or iudiciall authoritie, in that Councell, Act. 15. but rather, [illegible] All aſſented vnto thoſe things, which Iames ſpake, yea Peter himſelfe.

Lib. 1. de primat.

2 The ſame alſo is confirmed by the practiſe of the South Church, for in the Chalcedon Councell, there were ſixteen Iudges appointed by the Emperour as Preſidents ſitting in the middeſt, where was preſent Dioſcorus Patriarch of Alexandria placed on their right hand, allowing of their Preſidentſhip. And at this day the Emperour of Æthiopia called Preſter Iohn maketh no reckoning of any vnlawfull decree made by their Abuna, or Patriarch, but ſaith, he would burne the copie of ſuch commandements: ſo he alloweth not vnto him any deciding or definitiue voice.

Aluares deſcript. Æthiop. cap. 29.

3 The ſame is the iudgement of the reformed Churches, that the ciuil Magiſtrate inſtructed by the word of God, and directed by the learned, hath the chiefe authoritie to confirme, and eſtabliſh the decrees of Councels: as the confeſſion of Sueueland thus writeth to the Emperour, That it would pleaſe your ſacred Maieſty to follow the examples of the moſt mighty and happy Emperours, Conſtantine, Iuſtinian, Theodoſius, and others, who both by doctrine taught in all [illegible], by moſt holy and vigilant Biſhops, and alſo by Councels lawfully aſſembled, and by a wiſe diſcuſſing of all things, did deale with them that erred, &c.

Confeſſ. Sueue. in concluſ.

4 Cardinall Cuſanus confeſſeth, that in the ſecond Epheſine Councell, they proceeded, not expecting the preſence of the Ambaſſadours of Pope Leo, after many delaies of their comming: here the Pope was neither preſent, nor Preſident. Franciſcus de Victoria allegeth out of Cardinall Turrecremata and Syluester, that a Councell may bee congregate, contra voluntatem papæ, againſt the will of the Pope, to redreſſe his inſolencies, as the Emperour aſſembled a Councell againſt Iohn 12. an incorrigible Pope. It were an hard matter to make the Pope Preſident in ſuch a Councell, and to ſet him to be a Iudge, where he is to be cenſured and iudged.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, WHETHER Councels may erre or not.

The Papiſts.

33. Error.

THey are not all agreed, what to determine of this matter: ſome affirme that Generall Councels can in no wiſe erre, although the conſent of the Pope be wanting: thus the Fathers in Baſile concluded, Who is it, ſay they, that will preferre a ſinfull man before an vndefiled Church? But Bellarmine more the Popes friend then ſo, holdeth, that euen generall Councels may erre, vnleſſe they follow the inſtructions and directions of the Pope; Yea that it is not ſufficient for the Pope to call a Councell, and ſend his Legate thither, but he muſt write continually for aduertiſement from his maſter before any thing be concluded: and therefore they doubt not to ſay, that the Councell of Baſile erred, though it had the conſent of the Popes Legate in defining, that the Councell is aboue the Pope, becauſe hee had no ſuch direction from the Pope, Bellarmine de concil. lib. 2. cap. 11.

Nay the Ieſuite goeth further, that particular Councels being approoued by the Pope cannot erre, cap. 5. So they hold that the holy fathers of the cruell [a] Inquiſition cannot erre; Yea Panormitane was not aſhamed to ſay openly in the Councell of Baſile, that he would prefer the iudgement of the Cardinals of Rome before all the world. This then is the Ieſuites opinion, that no Councels by the Pope confirmed can erre: and that a particular Councell hauing his allowance, is to bee preferred before a generall without. Let vs ſee ſome of their reaſons.

[a] This is obiected againſt as vntrue, but ſeeing they hold that particular Synods confirmed by the Pope cannot erre, it will follow, that their cruell Inquiſition hauing the Popes approbation it likewiſe ſo priuiledged. See their obiection further anſwered. Recect. pag. 13.

1 They doe wreſt certaine places of Scripture for their purpoſe: as that Act. 15. It ſeemed good to vs, and the holy Ghoſt: I am with you to the end of the world: He that heareth you, heareth me. Bellarmine cap. 2. Rhemiſt. in Act. 15. 8. 20. ſo then thus they argue, Councels are neuer without the ſpirit of God: therefore they cannot erre. Anſwere. As though the ſpirit of God were at their commandement, or were tied to places or perſons: They muſt firſt performe the condition before they can challenge the promiſe: that is, to follow the rule of Gods word, and obediently to ſubmit themſelues thereunto; then will God vouchſafe to be preſent. The Goſpell ſaith, that wheresoeuer two or three are gathered together in my name, I will be preſent euen in the middeſt of them: Here promiſe is made, not to thouſands or hundreds, but to two or three; and therefore by this place an aſſemblie of few perſons may as well bee exempted from errour, as Councels. But there is a condition, In nomine meo, in my name, and then followeth, in medio illorum, in the middeſt of them: if then they are not met in the Lords name, they cannot looke for the preſence of Chriſt. I pray you, where was the holy Ghoſt preſent in that Councell at Rome vnder Ioh. 23. when there appeared a great Owle, which ſtared and outfaced the Pope, who bluſhing at the matter, and fuming, roſe vp and departed? At the ſight of which Owle they whiſpered one in anothers eare, that the ſpirit appeared in the likenes of an Owle: and after that in another ſeſſion the ſame Owle appeared, & could not be driuen away, vntill by throwing bats and cudgels at her, ſhe fel down dead before them, ex Nichol. Clemang. In the beginning of the Councell of Constance after the accustomed hymne sung, Veni sancte spiritus, a bill was set up with these words, Alijs rebus occupati, nunc adesse non possumus. We are now otherwise occupied, we cannot be present with you. Wee see now how sure the Papists are of the holy Ghost in their Popish Councels.

Argum. 2. Act. 15. 28. It seemed good to vs and the holy Ghost: As the Apostles might say, that their decrees were the decrees of the holy Ghost: so all other Councels are sure to haue the assistance of the spirit: Ergo, they cannot erre. Bellarm. lib. 2. cap. 2. Act.15.28.

Answere. First, if the Councels which are now helde in the Church, are as sure not to erre as the Apostolicall Councels, by the same reason euery particular Pastor of the Church may haue as good a priuiledge, to be exempted from error, as the Apostles themselues had: for their Councels which erred not, consisted of particular members likewise not erring. But there is not the like reason of the Apostles, and their Councels then, as there is of ours now: for the Apostles, whose preachings, decrees, and writings, are now, and were then to be rules of our faith, for this cause receiued the spirit of God, whereby they were assured to be led into all truth, Ioh. 16. 13. But Councels now are not to set rules of our faith, neither are their decrees to be taken for Scripture: therefore there is not the like reason of the assistance of the spirit now in such measure, as they had it. John 16, 13.

Answere. 2. Yet wee graunt that the spirit of God is present still in Councels assembled in Christs name, to direct them in all things necessarie: so that they be content to be ruled by the Scriptures, as we see the Apostles grounded their decrees vpon Scripture, Act. 15. 16. For thus the Apostles concluded, that seeing God foretold by his Prophets, that the Gentiles should be called as well as the Iewes, that they were not therefore to be clogged with Iewish ceremonies, seeing they were ordained to be a people holy vnto God, as well as the Iewes: But if the Pastors of the Church refuse to heare the voyce of God in the Scriptures, they are very like to be deceiued, yea, are sure to misse the line of truth.

Argum. 3. The Church cannot erre: for the Apostle calleth it the pillar of truth, 1. Timoth. 3. but a generall Councell representeth the whole Church: Ergo, it cannot erre. Bellarm. lib. 2. de Concil. c. 2. 1.Timoth.3.

Answere. First, concerning the assumption or second part of this argument, we grant, that a generall Councell lawfully assembled in some sort representeth the vniuersall Church, but is not the vniuersall Church: fewe Councels are so generall, at the which some of euery nationall Church are present, which thing ought to be in an vniuersall Councell. And againe, a generall Councell may erre, when as notwithstanding some particular members of the Church hold the truth: as in that generall assembly of 400. of Baals Priests in Achabs time, they all being in error, the Prophet Micaiah onely was in the right.

Secondly, concerning the proposition, first we denie that the Church is absolutely freed from error, neither doth it follow, it is the pillar, therefore cannot erre; for Peter erred, and yet was a pillar, Galath. 2. Secondly, the Church is called a pillar, and ground of truth, not absolutely or substantially, as though the truth should be measured by the Church, but onely demonstratiuely, because it professeth the truth, and as a golden candlesticke holdeth out the light in the world, which is not elsewhere to be found but in the Church: and it is the pillar of the truth, as it is the house of God, suffering it selfe to be ruled and guided by the word of God. Galat,2.9.

The Protestants.

WE doubt not to say, that Councels haue erred, and may erre, presuming any thing besides the warrant of Gods word, and that neither vniuersall or particular Councels are priuiledged, much lesse any one man, no not the Pope, not to erre in matters of faith, otherwise, then following the truth of the Scriptures, for in so doing, they are sure not to be deceiued.

Argum. 1. We haue examples in the Scripture of Councels that erred, as that assembly in Achabs daies of 400. Prophets, who were all deceiued. The Iesuite thus answereth, that it was an assembly of Prophets, not of Priests: as though Priests were more priuiledged from error, then Prophets. And the Iesuite, if he be well remembred, whereas we alleaged the examples of Dauid, Hezekiah, Iosias, that assembled Councels, he gaue vs this answere, that they did it as Prophets, and not as Kings: wherefore by his owne confession it belongeth to Prophets as well as to Priests to assemble, and be assembled in Councell. Secondly (saith he) these were false Prophets, not Prophets of the Lord. We grant so, and this withall, that wheresoeuer the Lords Prophets and Pastors, and Ministers assemble, that there they will heare the Lords voyce: which the Pope in his Councels doth not. But he still supposeth, that the Pope and his Ministers are Christs disciples: which is an vnreasonable supposition, seeing we hold him to be Antichrist, and that the Iesuite knoweth. Thirdly, this Councell was called by the authoritie of the King, not of the high Priest, and therefore might erre. Answere. First, the holy Councels summoned by Dauid, 1. Chron. 15. 3. by Hezekiah, 2. Chron. 30. by Iosias, 2. Chron. 34. though they were by the authoritie of the King, not the high Priest collected, were notwithstanding godly and lawfull Councels. Secondly, neither was it the authoritie of the high Priest, that could priuiledge Councels from error, seeing they themselues erred, as Vriyah the high Priest vnder that vngodly King of Iuda Ahaz was a most grosse idolater, 2. King. 16. 11. Wherefore the Iesuite hath here answered nothing. 2.King.16.11.

Argum. 2. Such a Councell alſo was that of the Iewes, Ioh. 9. where all they were excommunicate that confeſſed Chriſt, and Mark. 14. Chriſt himſelfe was by the Councell condemned: It cannot be denied, but that this Councell erred. Let vs heare the Papiſts goodly anſweres: ſome ſay that the Councell erred in a matter of fact, de facto, non de iure, not in a caſe of right, as whether Chriſt ſhould be put to death; As though in condemning him, they denied not that he was the Meſsiah. Other that they erred in their owne opinion, not in the ſentence giuen; for Chriſt indeed was guiltie of death, ſay they, becauſe he did beare our ſinnes: the Ieſuite findeth not much fault with this anſwere, and yet it is an open blaſphemie, as is that alſo of the Papiſts, that the Iewes had ſinned mortally, if they had not put Chriſt to death. Some of them ſay, the Councell erred not in that which was done, but in the manner of iudgement, becauſe it was tumultuous and diſorderly, and done by ſuborning of falſe witneſſes; and this ſaith the Ieſuite, is probabilis reſponſio, a probable anſwere, ſaith he, being moſt impious and blaſphemous. And their Maſter of Sentences determineth otherwiſe: Occidere Chriſtum fuit mala actio & peccatum: To kill Chriſt was an euill and ſinfull action, lib. 2. diſt. 48. b. But he dare not reſt in this anſwere, but findeth out a fourth of his owne, that the chiefe Prieſts and Councels of the Iewes could not erre before the comming of Chriſt, but after he was come, they might. A blind Popiſh anſwere; for doth not Chriſt euery where impugne the traditions and decrees of the Elders, as Mark. 7. which our Sauiour ſhould not haue done belike, ſeeing the Elders before his comming could not erre: or will they ſay, that thoſe traditions were right and good before, and afterward erroneous? I know not elſe what they ſhould ſay.

Diſtinct. 13. Item in Margin.

Popiſh blaſphemie.

Againe, I oppoſe againſt the Ieſuite the determination of their owne Maſter: who ſaith, In Chriſti morte terminata eſſe Legalia omnia: That all the Legals were determined and tooke their end in the death of Chriſt; and ſo long Circumciſion (ſaith he) was in force, lib. 4. Sentent. diſt. 3. k. But the law and Prieſthood ceaſed together: Ergo, till Chriſts death the Prieſts ſhould be priuiledged not to erre, if they had any ſuch priuiledge at all.

Argum. 3. We ſee by experience that many Councels haue erred. In the third Councell of Antioch, celebrated anno 345. Athanaſius was condemned. In the fourth Antiochene Councell anno 367. the Macedonian hereſie was confirmed: anno 354. a Councell of 300. Biſhops at Millaine decreed againſt the Catholike faith: the Ariminine Councell of 600. Biſhops, ſtood for the Arrians: But they will tell vs, that thoſe generall Councels erred, becauſe they were not ratified by the Pope: as though the Popes themſelues haue not erred, as ſhall be ſhewed afterward; how then can they preſerue others from error? and how like it is, that one man ſhould be alwaies freer from error, then a whole Councell, let any indifferent man iudge; we will then giue inſtance of ſuch Councels, as haue beene confirmed by the Pope.

In the Councell of Neoceſarea confirmed by Leo the fourth can. 7. ſecond mariage is forbidden: that the Prieſt ſhould neither giue conſent to ſecond mariage, nor be preſent at the mariage feaſt, but rather enioyne penance for ſecond mariage.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Non prohiberi matrimonium, ſed ſolemnitatem ſecundi matrimonij, that not ſecond mariage, but the ſolemnitie of ſecond mariage is forbidden; for the celebritie of mariage was once onely accuſtomed to be done in the Church, (ſaith hee) when as virgins were coupled in matrimonie.

Contra. 1. The Canon ſpeaketh not of any ſolemnitie in the Church, but of the feaſt at home, Presbyterum conuiuio ſecundarum nuptiarum intereſſe non debere, That the Prieſt or Miniſter muſt not be preſent at the ſecond mariage feaſt. Secondly, the Canon ſaith, Quis eſt presbyter, qui propter conuiuium illis conſentiat nuptijs: He is a Prieſt of no worth, that for the feaſt ſake will giue his conſent to ſecond mariage. And againe, Præcipitur ſecundis nuptijs pœnitentiam tribuere: He is commanded to enioyne penance for ſecond mariage: not for the ſolemnitie of ſecond mariage, but for the mariage it ſelfe. It is plaine therefore, that this Canon forbiddeth ſecond mariage it ſelfe. Thirdly, neither is it true which the Ieſuite ſaith, that all ſolemnitie in the Church was cut off in ſecond mariage: It was decreed indeed, Concil. Lateran. part. 9. cap. 2. In ſecundis nuptijs non debet benedictio iterari: The matrimoniall or mariage bleſſing muſt not be iterate in ſecond mariage, becauſe it was once giuen before: yet both firſt and ſecond mariage was to be ſolemnized in the Church, Synod. Colonienſ. part. 7. cap. 43. Coniunctio coniugum in facie eccleſiæ peragenda; The ioyning together of couples is to be done in the face of the Church. He ſaith not in the firſt or ſecond mariage, but indefinitely of all.

Toletan. 1. can. 17. Is qui non habet vxorem, & pro vxore concubinam habet à communione non repellatur: He that hath not a wife, but in ſtead of his wife a concubine, is not for this cauſe to be repelled the communion: a manifeſt error. This Councell was confirmed by Leo, as it may appeare canon 21. Bellarmine anſwereth, that a concubine is here taken for a wife, Ducta ſine dote, & externa ſolennitate, maried without a dowrie, and any outward ſolemnitie, as Agar is ſaid to be Abrahams concubine, yet ſhe was indeed his wife: and Keturah likewiſe.

Contra. 1. A wife is one thing, a concubine another, Sicut aliud libera, aliud ancilla, as a free woman is one thing, a bond woman another: ſo ſaith Leo the approuer of the foreſaid Councell, as he is alleaged, Synod. Triburienſ. cap. 38. And further, he ſaith, that if a man giue his daughter to one in mariage that hath a concubine, Non ita accipiendum eſt, quaſi eam coniugato dederit, It is not ſo to be taken, as if he had giuen her to one maried alreadie: Niſi fortè illa mulier ingenua ſit facta, & dotata legitimè, & in publicis nuptijs honeſtata videatur: Except the woman be made free and haue her dowrie, and be receiued in mariage publikely ſolemnized, &c. Therefore ſhee that is neither endued with dowrie, nor ſolemnly maried, is no wife, but a concubine, which cleane ouerthroweth Bellarmines anſwere.

Whereas Bellarmine telleth vs, that in the Ciuill law a wife maried without ſolemnitie, is called a concubine, his law here deceiueth him: for whether he will be tried for this point by the Ciuill law or Canon, they make both againſt him. As Cod. lib.5. tit.16. leg.2. Authentic. forbiddeth that a ſouldiour ſhould make a gift to his focariæ, or concubinæ, his concubine, or houſe-maid: which there is taken for one that is kept without mariage. Likewiſe, titul. 16. *l.*1. Conſtantin. It is lawfull for no man to keepe a concubine, conſtante matrimonio, as long as he is married. In the ſame ſenſe is a concubine taken in the Canon law: *Decret. p.*1. *diſt.*34. *c.*6. Et ſi non habetis vxores, &c. Though you haue no wiues, yet is it not lawfull for you to haue concubines, &c. Thus then a concubine is one, and a wife another.

3. That Agar was not Abrahams wife, but his concubine, it appeareth thus: Firſt, ſhee was not made free, but remained a bond-woman ſtill, Gen.16. and 21. Secondly, ſhee had no dowrie, nor her ſonne any inheritance with Iſaac, Gen.21.10. Thirdly, if ſhee had beene Abrahams wife, hee ſhould haue done euill in diſmiſſing of her, and ſending her away. Fourthly, the Scripture onely calleth Sara Abrahams wife, Gen.16.3. the other a bond-woman, euen after ſhe had a childe by Abraham, Gen. 21.13. ſhe is alſo called the maide of Sarai, and Sarai her dame or miſtreſſe, Gen.16.6.9. Sara alſo giueth Agar to Abraham, and ſaith, It may be I ſhall receiue a childe by her, Gen.16.2. the bond-womans childe is by right her dames and miſtreſſes according to the law, Exodus 21.4. All this proueth that Agar was a concubine onely, not wife to Abraham in any reſpect.

As for Keturah, it cannot be denied, but that ſometime the Scripture calleth her Abrahams wife, Gen.25.1. ſometime his concubine, 1.Chron.1.32. yet in a diuers reſpect: for ſhee was his concubine, as ſome thinke, while Sara liued, and his wife afterward: and the Iewes doe holde that Keturah and Agar, are all one woman. To which opinion Hierome ſeemeth to encline, being moued thereunto by two places of Scripture: the firſt, 1.Chron.5.19. where beſide the Agarens, are named Iethur and Naphiſh, as enemies to Iſrael, which were the ſonnes of Iſmael, Gen.25.15. The other is, Pſal.83.6. where the Iſmaelites and Agarens are named as two diuers nations: but Agar had no more ſonnes but Iſmael, ſo that the Iſmaelites and Agarens muſt be all one, vnleſſe the ſonnes of Keturah be vnderſtood for Agarens, which is moſt like. But how could Keturah her ſonnes be named Agarens, if ſhee alſo were not Agar? But leauing this as a coniecture of hiſtorie, whether Keturah were the ſame that Agar, or not, it is verely to be thought that ſhe was both a concubine and a wife, the firſt while Sara liued, the ſecond after her death. So whatſoeuer the Ieſuite hath ſaid, or can ſay, the Toletan Councell decreed an error.

In the 6. generall Synode, *Can.*2. the Councell vnder Cyprian which concluded that heretikes ſhould be rebaptized, is approoued, *Can.*72. The mariages betweene Catholikes and heretikes are iudged to be voyd, huiuſmodi nuptias, ſaith the Canon, irritas exiſtimari, a manifeſt error, and contrarie to S. Paul, 1.Cor.7.13. Can. 12. ſpeaking of the Canons of the Apoſtles, *Can.*6. which permitteth Miniſters to dwell with their wiues, which by them is forbidden in this place, they ſay thus, Statum eccleſiaſticum in pulchriorem ordinem prouehi volentes: Being deſirous to reduce the eccleſiaſticall ſtate to a more beautifull and perfect order, then it was in the Apoſtles time. As though any Church ſince was purer, then the primitiue vnder the gouernment of the Apoſtles. *Can.*67. Damnamus eos qui cuiuſcunque animalis ſanguinem aliqua arte condiunt, & ſic comedunt: Wee condemne thoſe that by ſkill of Cookerie doe dreſſe the blood of any beaſt to be eaten. But Saint Paul ſaith, euery creature of God is good, and not to be refuſed, &c. 1.Tim.4.4. Theſe and diuers ſuch errors were concluded in this generall Councell: conſented and ſubſcribed vnto by Iuſtinian the Emperour, the Biſhop of Rome, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and by 200. Biſhops beſide and more, as may be ſeene Can. 102. And approoued in the 7. generall Councell, *action.*4. where Tharaſius the Preſident ſpeaketh thus of the Canons of the ſixth Councell, Scandalum eſt dubitare an ſint ſextæ ſynodi: It is ſcandalous, or offenſiue to doubt, whether they be the right Canons of the ſixth Synode. And Adrian Biſhop of Rome thus writeth to the ſame Tharaſius, as he is alleaged in the Decrees: I receiue the ſixth Synod with all the Canons thereof, *Decr.p.*1. *diſt.*16. *c.*5.

*Concil. Carthaginenſ.*3. *Can.*47. The Apocryphall bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Eccleſiaſticus, Sapientia, the Machabees, are made Canonicall, contrarie to the Laodicen Councell, cap. vltim. where all theſe bookes are reiected out of the ſacred Canon. Therefore the Councell of Carthage erred.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt that the Councell of Carthage is of more authoritie then the Laodicen, becauſe it is the latter, and for that it is ratified by Leo 4. *diſt.*20. *c.*1. and ſo is not the other.

*Contra.*1. The Councels the more ancient they are and neerer the Apoſtles times, ought to bee ſo much the more had in authoritie, and not the new to be preferred before the olde: I meruaile that the Ieſuite, which ſo much vrgeth antiquitie, would haue vttered ſuch a ſpeech. 2. And againe, the ſame Leo the 4. in the ſame place confirmeth the Laodicen Councell: and likewiſe Felix 4. *Decret.*2. citeth the 26. and 59. Canons of this Synod: and it is confirmed in the ſixth generall Councell, *Can.*1. and ſo is not the Councell of Carthage: as it is alſo alleaged in the Decrees, *diſtin.*16. *c.*7. Wherefore the Laodicen is to be preferred, and the Ieſuite hath ſaid nothing.

In the ſecond Councell of Nice, act. 5. it was concluded, that Angels and the ſoules of men haue bodies of their owne, and are circumſcriptible & imitabiles pictura, and may be deſcribed by picture; and that the Angels viſitatis in propriis corporibus viſi, haue often beene ſeene in their owne bodies. Act. 7. It was decreed, Has eſſe veritatem in ſanctis eccleſiis venerandas imagines colendas: That in holy Churches the images of Saints ſhould be worſhipped. Yet in the Eliberin Councell it was long before determined in this wiſe, Can. 36. Placuit, picturas in eccleſia eſſe non debere: It ſeemeth good to vs, that there ſhould be no pictures at all, or images in the Church. And to this Councell ſubſcribed Oſius Biſhop of Corduba in Spaine, who had beene preſent before in the firſt Nicene Councell, and ſubſcribed for the Biſhop of Rome: this appeareth therefore to be a manifeſt error, which was decreed concerning the adoring of Images. And to make the error more foule, being blaſphemous enough in it ſelfe, action 4. one Iohannes Monachus ſteppeth vp, and ſaith, Imago maior eſt quam oratio: An Image is more worth then prayer: whereas prayer is inſtituted of God, an Image is the deuice of man. And in the ſame place, the ſame ſuperſtitious and idolatrous Monke ſaith, that it were better for a man to breake his oath, & iuramentum peierare, and to be forſworne, then to keepe his oath, in deſtructionem imaginum, for the pulling downe of Images. And yet for all this Bellarmine will not yeeld that this Councell erred.

In the Councell of Rome vnder Pope Stephen the 6. all the acts of Formoſus his predeceſſor were reuoked. And in the Councell of Rauenna vnder Iohn 9. Pope, Formoſus acts were eſtabliſhed, and Stephens decrees abrogate.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that Pope Stephen erred onely in a matter of fact, being falſly informed, that Formoſus was not the lawfull Pope. Contra. But to reuerſe all the acts and decrees made by the Pope, ſheweth an error in iudgement alſo in one of them, either in him that firſt enacted them, or in him that after reuerſed them: As the putting of Chriſt to death, though it were a matter of fact, yet proceeded from a corrupt, blinde, and reprobate iudgement. By this ſhift the Ieſuite alſo may excuſe the high Prieſts from error, that put Chriſt to death.

Laſtly, in the Councell of Conſtance they are excommunicate, that receiue the Sacrament in both kindes: the Councell of Baſil on the contrarie ſide, permitteth and giueth leaue to the Bohemians to vſe both kindes. One of theſe Councels muſt needes erre, and both of them were confirmed by the Popes: the Councell of Conſtance by Martin the 5. the Councell of Baſil by Felix 5. By this induction of many particulars we inferre and conclude, that Councels euen approued by the Pope, may and haue erred.

Lib. 2. de baptiſm. cont. Donatiſt. tom. 7.

4 Laſtly, Auguſtines opinion is this, that prouinciall Councels ought to giue place to generall: Et ipſa plenaria priora poſterioribus emendari: And the former generall Councels muſt be amended by the latter. The Rhemiſts haue found out this ſhift, that in matters indifferent, which are to be changed, according to time and place, Councels may be altered, Act. 15. ſect. 8. But to that it is anſwered, that the word emendare ſignifieth not onely a change, but a correcting of that which is amiſſe. And that clauſe of Auguſtines muſt be put in, why Councels muſt be amended: Si a veritate deuiatum ſit, If they ſwarue from the truth: de Baptiſm. lib. 2. cap. 3. Wherefore we conclude that Councels may erre.

Againe, that ſaying of Auguſtine is confirmed in your owne Decrees: Ego ſolis eis ſcriptorum &c. I haue learned, onely to thoſe writers which are called Canonicall, to attribute this honour, that I beleeue none of them to haue erred in writing, &c. Decr. p. 1. diſt. 9. c. 5. If the holy writers onely are priuiledged from error, then all other that are not Canonicall may erre, and ſo Councels among the reſt.

Laſtly, let vs put to the ſeale of this doctrine, the teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs witneſſed by their blood: M. Rogers Martyr, alleageth the authority of a learned Lawyer of the Church of Rome, namely, Panormitane, which ſaith that vnto a ſimple lay man, that bringeth the word of God with him, there ought more credit to be giuen, then to a whole Councell gathered together: vnto which ſentence the ſaid bleſſed Martyr giueth his conſent, Fox pag. 1487.

Concerning the teſtimonie of forraine Churches. 1. The Greekes reiecting all the generall Councels which Bellarmine reckoneth vp to be eighteene in all, lib. 1. de Concil. c. 5. Excepting onely the firſt ſeuen: as Ieremie Patriarke of Conſtantinople profeſſeth, and others of the Greeke Church, doe conſequently hold, that the other pretended generall Councels were in error.

2. The Chriſtian Aethiopians, as appeareth by the confeſſion of Zaga Zabo one of their Biſhops, doe ſpecially reuerence the foure firſt generall Councels gathered againſt the Arrian, Macedonian, Neſtorian, and Eutychian heretikes: other Councels in the ſaid confeſſion are not mentioned, as neither of like truth nor authoritie.

3. The reformed Churches doubt not, but that generall Councels, if they follow not the rule of the Scripture, are ſubiect to error, Confeſſ. of Wittemberg. c. 34. As it is wont to fall out in ciuill meetings, ſo doth it alſo in the meetings of the Church, for the moſt part the greater ſide ouercommeth the better. And a little after: Seeing the doctrine of the Apoſtles and Prophets is confirmed of God, the ſentence of no one man, nor of any aſſemblie of men, is to be receiued ſimply without triall for the oracle of the holy Ghoſt. The Church of Saxonie, artic.11. among other doctrines differing from the Goſpell, counteth this for one, That Synodes cannot erre wherein their Biſhops giue their voices: and artic. 23. Let the Councell ſee to it, that they condemne not a manifeſt truth. 4. Yea, the Romaniſts themſelues do refuſe ſome Canons of generall Councels: as Surius ſaith, that the 28. Canon of the Chalcedon Councell, which giueth like priuiledges to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, as to the Biſhop of Rome, was reiected by Leo. Likewiſe the ſame Surius ſaith of the 52. Canon, of the ſixth generall Councell, which findeth fault with the Church of Rome for faſting vpon Saturdaies: Hic Canon non recipitur, quia reprehendit, &c. This Canon is not receiued, becauſe it reprehendeth the Romane Church, the mother of all Churches: It followeth then, euen by their owne practiſe, that generall Councels may erre.

THE SIXTH QVESTION, CONCERNING THE AVthoritie of generall Councels, whether they may abſolutely determine without Scripture, and neceſſarily bind all men to the obedience of their Canons.

The Papiſts.

IN words they would ſeeme to magnifie the Scripture aboue Councels: for they ſay, that the authoritie of the Scripture dependeth not in it ſelfe, of Church, Pope, or Councels; but in reſpect of vs: the word of God, is the word of God, ſay they, though there be no determination of the Church: but we doe not know it ſo to be, but becauſe the Church hath ſo defined: Bellarmine lib.2.de con.cap.12. Here is a goodly gloſſe, but nothing to the purpoſe: for in that they ſay the Church hath abſolute authoritie to declare and pronounce which is the word, (which indeede it hath not without teſtimonie and warrant of the word it ſelfe) by this meanes it commeth about, that much is taken for the word of God which is not: and ſo the Church doth not onely declare the word, but maketh that the word which is not. 34. Error.

Firſt, beſide the Apocrypha, which they make part of the word, as we haue ſhewed afore, they hold that their traditions are alſo the word of God, Bellarmine cap.12. Secondly, Gratian is ſo bold to affirme, that the decretall Epiſtles of the Popes are to bee counted amongſt the Canonicall Scriptures, diſt.19.can.in canonicis, and that the Canons of Councels are of the ſame authoritie, diſt.20.can.decretales. And Greg.1.epiſt.24. ſaith, he doth reuerence the foure generall Councels, as the foure Euangeliſts. Thirdly, they boldly affirme, that whatſoeuer the Paſtors and prieſts doe teach in the vnitie of the Church, is the word of God, Rhemenſ.1.Theſ.2.verſ.12.

Firſt then they conclude, that Councels are not bound to determine according to the Scriptures, but as iudges may determine of their owne authoritie. Secondly, that all men are bound of neceſſitie to receiue the decrees of Councels, without any further triall or examination. They reaſon thus out of Scripture.

Argum. 1. Deut.17.12. He that harkeneth not vnto the prieſt, that man ſhall die. But marke I pray you, what goeth before, verſ.11. according to the law which they ſhall teach thee, and according to the iudgement which they ſhall tell thee, ſhalt thou doe: See then, here is no abſolute iudiciall power giuen to the prieſt but according to the law of God. Deut.17.12. Bellar.lib.1.de concil.cap.18.

Thus anſwered Maſter Latimer Martyr, to the like obiection made by Biſhop White: If any controuerſie did ariſe, they were indeed referred to the Prieſts who were to iudge, not as they would themſelues, but ſecundum legem Dei, according to the law of God, Fox.pag.1762. Pag.1600.l.20.

Argum. 2. The example of the Apoſtles Act.15, is as fondly alleaged, where it was decreed (ſaith the Ieſuite) that the Gentiles ſhould not be burthened with ceremonies, which, ſaith he, was not determined by the Scriptures, but by the abſolute ſuffrages of the Apoſtles. Againe, their decrees were abſolutely impoſed vpon the Churches, without any further examination of the Diſciples: Ergo, we are now abſolutely bound to obey all decrees of Councels, Bellar.de concil.1.18.

We anſwere: firſt, it is falſe, that this matter was determined without Scripture: for Iames alleageth Scripture: and Peter thus reaſoneth, We beleeue through the grace of God to be ſaued aſwell as they, verſ.11, therefore what neede this yoke of ceremonies? Secondly, Though there had been no Scripture, who ſeeth not that the ſpirit of God ſo ruled the Apoſtles, that their writings and holy actions ſhould ſerue for Scripture vnto the ages following? Thirdly, the Diſciples needed not to examine their decrees, knowing that they were gouerned by the ſpirit, as they themſelues write: It ſeemed good to vs and the holy Ghoſt; yet we ſee the brethren of Berea ſearched the Scripture for the truth of thoſe things, which the Apoſtles preached, Act.17.11. When they can prooue ſuch a plenarie power and fulneſſe of the ſpirit in their Paſtors and Councels, as was in the Apoſtles, we will alſo beleeue them. Act.15.11. Act.17.11.

Argum. 3. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, if he refuſe to heare the Church, let him be vnto thee as an heathen man and publicane: Ergo, the Church is abſolutely to be obeyed in all things, Beller.lib.1.de concil.cap.18.

Anſwere: firſt, our Sauiour in this place ſpeaketh not of the Canons and decrees of the Church concerning faith: but only preſcribeth the forme of Church diſcipline, for reformation of manners and correction of ſinne: If thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, &c. verſ. 15. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith no more then this, that Chriſtians ought to obey the ſentence of the Church in cenſuring of ſin: but it followeth not that we ought to receiue new articles of faith impoſed by the Church beſide Scripture. Secondly, Chriſt ſpeaketh not of euery Church abſolutely, but of a Church guided and ruled by his word, and aſſembled in his name, verſ. 20. for otherwiſe by the Ieſuites collection, our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles ſhould haue been as Publicans, becauſe they obeyed not the Scribes and Phariſes, amongſt whom they cannot denie, but that the Church was at that time. Math.18.15.

The Proteſtants.

WE do firmly beleeue that neither the Church nor Councels haue any ſuch abſolute power to determine without the holy Scriptures, either beſide or againſt them; or to bind other men to obey ſuch decrees: Neither that the true Church of God dare, or will arrogate ſuch power vnto it ſelfe: But that Councels are ordained for the diſcuſſing and deciding of doubtfull matters, according to the Scriptures and word written.

Argum. 1. If the Apoſtles preachings might be examined according to Scripture, much more the acts of all other Biſhops and paſtors. But that was lawfull in the Diſciples of Berœa, Acts 17.11. which are commended for it: therefore called noble couragious Chriſtians, becauſe of this their promptneſſe, and diligence in ſearching out of the truth. Ergo.

Argum. 2. All things neceſſarie to ſaluation to be beleeued, are articles of our faith: but all ſuch articles muſt be grounded vpon the word of God: therefore nothing can be impoſed as neceſſarie to ſaluation without the word of God. Wherefore it is a blaſphemous ſaying of the Papiſts, that the Church may make new articles of faith, Rhemenſ. annot. in 1. Tim. 3. ſect. 9. And Eckius maintained the ſame point againſt Luther, in the diſputation at Lipſia, and brought foorth a new article of faith, agreed of in the Councell of Conſtance, that it is de neceſſitate ſalutis, of the neceſſitie of ſaluation, to beleeue that the Pope is the head of the Church. The fathers of Baſil more modeſt then ſo, concluding that it was an article of faith to beleeue that Councels were aboue the Pope, doe vſe this reaſon: Thoſe things (ſay they) which we alleage for the ſuperioritie of generall Councels, are gathered out of the ſayings of our Sauiour Chriſt: Ergo, we are all bound to obey them. Therefore we conclude, that the word of God onely written is the rule of faith, and of all things neceſſarie to be beleeued: Rom.10.10. Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the word. Councels are to explane and declare articles of faith, not to eſtabliſh new. Martyrol. Fox. pag.848. Martyrol.Fox pag.677. Rom.10.10.

Argum. 3. S. Paul ſaith, that if an Angell ſhould preach otherwiſe then the Apoſtles had preached, (the ſumme of whoſe preaching is now onely to be found in their holy writings) let him be accurſed, Galath.1.8.9. But an Angell preaching beſide Scripture, is to be heard as ſoone, nay ſooner then a Councel aſſembled of men decreeing any thing beſide the word of God: Ergo, neither is ſuch a Councell to be receiued, but rather to be iudged accurſed. Galath.1.8.9.

This was the faith alſo of the holy Martyrs, for the which they nothing doubted to giue their liues, that the Scriptures contained all things neceſſarie to ſaluation: neither would they receiue any decree of Church, Pope, or Councell, not agreeable to the ſame.

Firſt, M. Bradford ſaith, In teſtimony of this faith I giue my life, Epiſt. ad Londinenſ. pag. 1626. col. 1. Pag.1476.2.80.

Maſter Philpot holy Martyr, to Stories demaund, who ſaid vnto him, When as the Iudge in Weſtminſter hall giueth ſentence, doth the word giue ſentence or the Iudge? maketh this anſwere: Ciuill matters be ſubiect to ciuill men, and they haue authoritie to iudge of them: but the word of God is not ſubiect to mans iudgement, but ought to iudge all the thoughts, wiſdome, and doing of man, Fox pag. 1805. col. 1. Pag.1638.2.80.

Maſter Hawkes Martyr, when Boner had thus ſaid to him: Ah ſir, you will haue no more then Scripture teacheth, but euen as Chriſt hath left it bare. He thus anſwered: He that teacheth me any otherwiſe: I will not beleeue him, pag. 1587. col. 1. Thus we ſee our doctrine hath been laid to the touchſtone, and tried in the fire: and neither the workemen were aſhamed, nor yet their worke burned. Wherefore it remaineth ſound and ſure, againſt the contentious brabling, and ſophiſticall cauils of all the Papiſts in the world. Pag.1441.2.56.

Laſtly, we wil heare Auguſtine ſpeake, Nec tu debes Ariminenſe, neque ego Nicenum tanquam præiudicaturus proferre concilium; Scripturarum authoritatibus, &c. Neither muſt I alleage the Nicen Councell, nor you the Arimine, I am neither bound to the one, nor you to the other, let the matter be tried by Scripture, contra Maxim. Arrianum lib. 3. cap. 14. By this fathers ſentence therefore, no man is bound of neceſſitie to be tied to Councels, but the Scripture only is abſolutely to be beleeued.

We haue alſo for this matter the euident teſtimonie of antiquitie, Conſtantinus the great thus ſpake in the Councell of Nice: Euangelici ſunt libri & Apoſtolici antiquorumque Prophetarum ſanctiones, quæ nos erudiunt, quid de ſacra lege ſapiamus: expellentes igitur hoſtile certamen, ex verbis diuinitus inſpiratis ſolutionem quæſtionum mente capiamus: There are the bookes of the Goſpels, of the Apoſtles, and Prophets, which doe teach vs, what to hold in religion: therefore expelling all hoſtile and bitter contention, let vs ſeeke the ſolution of theſe queſtions out of Scripture.

Florentin. concil. ſeſſ. 3. Andreas Coloſſenſ. thus ſpeaketh in the name of the Latine Church; Diuino Euangelio supremum obtinenti locum & dignitatem, imprimis nobis est innitendum: We must relie eſpecially vpon the holy Goſpell, as hauing the chiefe place and dignitie, &c. Councels then muſt determine according to the Scripture, neither are we bound otherwiſe to giue care vnto them.

The ciuill law thus ſaith, Cod.lib.1.tit.4.leg.13. Martian. Iuxta Apoſtolicas expoſitiones, &c. Thoſe things which concerning the faith were decreed in the Councell of Chalcedon by our commandement, were defined according to the expoſitions of the Apoſtles, &c. Et tit.8.leg.4. Valentin. ſpeaking of the Chalcedon Councell he ſaith; Nihil adimens ſacroſancto ſymbolo, nec adijciens: Adding nothing to the ſacred Creed, not taking from it. Councels then muſt determine according to Scripture, and cannot adde new articles of faith.

So likewiſe their owne decrees teſtifie: Decr.p.2.cauſ.24.quæſt.1.chap.21. Non afferamus ſtateras doloſas, &c. Let vs not bring deceitfull weights, to weigh as we thinke good our ſelues, ſaying, this is heauie, this light: but let vs bring the weights and balance out of the Scriptures, &c. And their owne Maſter of Sentences thus ſaith: Ne vltra præfinitionem dei ſermo de deo ſit; forma fidei certa eſt, nec ergo aliquid addendum: That of God beyond Gods owne warrant, we ſhould not ſpeake: the forme of faith is certaine, and nothing to be added to it, lib.1.diſt.33.e.

Adde hereunto the teſtimonies of other Churches. 1. The Greeke do not hold an abſolute authoritie of all generall Councels: for they acknowledge only ſeuen generall Councels, and anathematize all the reſt. Ieremie Patriarch of Conſtantinople, thus writeth concerning the authoritie of the Miniſters of the Church, Siquidem fidei dogma peruertat, etiamſi angelus ſit, ab audire nolit: If any peruert the doctrine of faith, though he be an Angel, hearken not vnto him. If an Angell be not to be heard teaching otherwiſe then the Scriptures, much leſſe mortall men, though gathered together in Councell.

Scarga.lib. pelan.p.3.c.2. err.Græc.7. Cenſur.Oriental Eccleſ.c.8.

2 Zaga Zabo ſhall ſpeake for the Aethiopike Church: That to the bookes of the old and new Teſtament it is lawfull to adde nothing or detract, quanquam Angelus de cœlo id nobis perſuadere conaretur, although an Angell from heauen ſhould ſeeke to perſwade vs. And it followeth; Quare nec patriarcha, &c. Wherefore neither our Patriarch, nor our Biſhops by themſelues or in Councell doe thinke, that they may make lawes, quibus ad mortale peccatum obligari quis poſſit, whereby any may bee bound vnto mortall ſinne, &c. That is, if they tranſgreſſe them: then in his opinion, new articles of faith cannot be deuiſed by Councels, nor any bound abſolutely vnder paine of mortall ſinne to obey their decrees.

Damianus a Goes de Æthiop.morib.

3 And that the Church repreſented in Councels hath no authoritie abſolutely to determine without Scripture; nor to make new articles of faith: it is the iudgement of other reformed Churches of the Weſt. Confeſſion of Wittenberg artic.32. The Church hath ſo farre authoritie to iudge of doctrine, that notwithſtanding ſhe muſt keepe her ſelfe within the bonds of holy Scripture. Saxonie artic.7. As for that which Chriſt ſaith, I haue yet many things to ſay vnto you; doubtleſſe he ment not the fooliſh ceremonies, which the Popes haue brought in, nor any new articles of faith, but a further illumination of the Goſpell, which he had alreadie deliuered.

Harmon.ſect. 10.pag.334.

4 Of the Popiſh Latine Church, Gerſon, ſaith, that the Scripture is the rule of faith, which being well vnderſtood, no authoritie of man is to be admitted againſt it. Durand. The manner of our knowledge muſt be not to exceed the meaſure of faith; continentia ſacræ Scripturæ menſuram fidei exprimit, The content of the Scripture expreſſeth the meaſure of faith.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, WHETHER Councels be aboue the Pope or not.

The Papiſts.

THis is a matter yet not fully determined amongſt the Papiſts: neither are they all of one opinion. In the Councell of Conſtance and Baſil, it was fully concluded, that the Councell is aboue the Pope. Gerſon of Paris, that was alſo preſent in the Councell of Conſtance, and a great doer againſt Iohn Huſſe, ſtiffly maintaineth the authoritie of Councels aboue the Pope. Other Papiſts more fauourable to their new god almight, ſay, that the Pope is by right aboue the Councell, but hee may (if hee will) ſubmit himſelfe to the Councell. But now commeth in the ſtout Ieſuite, and ſaith with the reſt of the Schoolemen, that the Pope hath ſuch a ſoueraigntie aboue the Councell, that hee cannot be ſubiect to their ſentence, though he would, Bellarm.de concil. lib.2.14. Yet he is in a mammering with himſelfe: for ſaith he, in periculo ſchiſmatis, When there is a ſchiſme, and it is not knowne who is the true Pope; in ſuch a caſe the Councell is aboue the Pope. Let vs examine ſome of his beſt reaſons.

35. Error.

Argum. 1. Now commeth in a great blaſphemie. All the names, ſaith the Ieſuite, that are giuen to Chriſt in the Scriptures, as head of the Church, are aſcribed to the Pope, as he is called fidelis diſpenſator, Luk.12. a faithfull ſteward in the Lords houſe: Paſtor gregis, Ioh.10. the ſhepheard of the flocke: Caput corporis eccleſiæ. Epheſ.4. the head of his bodie the Church: Vir ſeu ſponſus. Epheſ.5. the husband or ſpouſe of the Church: All theſe titles (ſaith he) are due to the Pope: Ergo, he is aboue the Church, and ſo conſequently aboue generall Councels, Bellarmine de concil.lib.2.17.

O Lord, what great blaſphemie is heere, to appropriate the titles of Chriſt, to a mortall man! But goe to Bellarmine, and the reſt of that packe, fill vp the meaſure of the iniquitie of your forefathers:

thers: ſay with Pope Anaſtaſius, that the people of the world are the parts of his bodie: with Cornelius the Biſhop in the Councell of Trent, the Pope being the light came into the world, and men loued darknes rather then light: with Pope Callixtus in the Councell of Rhemes, who, when hee ſaw the Councell would not conſent to excommunicate the Emperour, impiouſlie cried out that they had forſaken him, as Chriſt was left of his Diſciples: with Innocentius the third, that all things in heauen and earth, and vnder the earth doe bowe the knee vnto him: with Otho no Pope but a Cardinall, that ſitting amongſt his Biſhops, blaſphemouſlie applied to himſelfe the viſion of Ezechiel, chap.1. reſembling the Biſhops to the foure faced beaſts, himſelfe vnto God that appeared to the Prophet in the midſt. Euen thus with the like ſpirit of blaſphemie, doe the Ieſuites crie out, that the Pope is the chiefe ſhepheard, ſteward, huſband, and head of the Church vpon earth.

But we will leaue to charge them ſo deepely with blaſphemie, which notwithſtanding they cannot auoide: let vs heare what the fathers of Baſil ſay to this point. Bellarmine ſaith, the Pope is the huſband; but they reaſon cleane contrarie: the Church (ſay they) is the ſpouſe of Chriſt: the Pope, make the beſt of him you can, is but a Vicar: but no man doth ſo ordaine a Vicar, that he maketh his ſpouſe ſubiect vnto him, but that the ſpouſe is alwaies thought to bee of more authoritie then the Vicar, forſomuch as ſhe is one bodie with her huſband; but the Vicar is not ſo: thus haue they to the full anſwered the Ieſuite, ex Aenea Syluio. Better arguments they haue none for the Popes prerogatiue, then we haue ſeene.

Argum. 2. The Pope by his ſole authoritie may congregate a generall Councell: Ergo: hee is aboue a generall Councell.

Damianus a Goes de Æthiop. morib.

Anſw. Firſt, to this anſwereth the Councell of Baſil, Epiſtol. Synodal. after this manner: by denying of the argument: Ante Concilij congregationem Concilium non eſt, ſed vt primum congregatum eſt, ſtatim poteſtas vniuerſalis eccleſiæ, quæ eſt immediate a Chriſto, in ipſum transfunditur & fit ipſum Concilium ſupra Papam: Before the gathering together of the Councell, it is as yet no Councell: but as ſoone as it is congregate, the power and authoritie of the vniuerſall Church is transfuſed into it, and ſo the Councell becommeth aboue the Pope: therefore it followeth not, that becauſe the Pope doth call it before it be a Councell, that he is aboue it, when it is called.

Secondly, we anſwere, as we haue ſhewed in the queſtion before, that this authoritie of ſummoning Councels belongeth not to the Pope.

Other arguments vſed by our aduerſaries are anſwered to the full, by Iohannes Patriarch of Antioch, opuſculo Baſil. Concil. annexo. As firſt the Church receiueth the iuriſdiction of the keies from the Pope: Ergo, it is inferiour. Secondly, Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe, the paſtor is aboue the ſheepe. Thirdly, the Pope is the head of the Church: Ergo non licitum eſt membra ab obedientia capitis recedere: Therefore it is not lawfull for the members to depart from the obedience of the head.

Anſw. The Patriarch anſwereth thus: to the firſt, Petrus recepit claues ſub nomine & ſigno eccleſiæ: Peter receiued the keyes not in his owne name, but in the name and ſignification of the Church. The Church then receiueth them not from Peter, but he receiued them for the Church.

Trithem. catal. ſcripto. Eccleſ. [illegible]

To the ſecond, Chriſt in ſaying to Peter, Feede my ſheepe, gaue him power ſuper ſingularia membra, ouer ſome particular members, not ouer the vniuerſall Church.

To the third he frameth this anſwer: firſt, he denieth the Pope to be head of the vniuerſall Church. Secondly: and yet he ſaith, Si caput in humano corpore efficitur languidum, &c. If the head in the body be weake and diſtempered, it is lawfull for the parts, illud ligare & cauterizare, to bind and cauterize it, leſt the ſicknes of the head ſhould affect the whole bodie. And againe, he putteth this caſe: Si Papa eſſet furioſus, & diſcurreret cum gladio, &c. If the Pope were mad, and ſhould runne vp and downe with a drawne ſword, killing whom he met, it were lawfull for his ſubiects to take him, and bind him: Si hæc liceret pro ſaluatione corporis, &c. If this be lawfull to be done by priuate men, for the health of the bodie, much more may a generall Councell repreſenting the vniuerſall Church do it, for the health of the ſoule. Who liſt to ſee ſhall find diuers other popiſh arguments there anſwered: opuſcul. Iohan. Patriarch. Antiochen.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope is by right, and ought to be ſubiect to general Councels, and that they haue authoritie to iudge, examine, ſuſpend, puniſh, and depoſe him, if there be iuſt cauſe, it is prooued thus: This matter was pithily diſputed vpon by the fathers of Baſil, ſome of whoſe reaſons, it ſhall be ſufficient here to follow.

1 They prooue this concluſion out of Scripture. Firſt, whereas Panormitane had ſaid, that the Pope was Lord of the Church: vnto him Segouius anſwered, that it was the moſt honourable title of the Biſhop of Rome, to be called the ſeruant of the ſeruants of God: and Peter, ſaith he, forbiddeth paſtors to behaue themſelues as Lords ouer the Clergie, 1.Pet.5. And if Chriſt the ſon of God, came not to be miniſtred vnto, but to miniſter and ſerue, how then can his Vicar haue any dominion? So was Panormitane anſwered.

Againe, the Diuines thus argued: Chriſt ſaith to Peter, Dic eccleſiæ, Peter is ſent to the Church or Councell: Ergo, the veritie doth remit the Biſhop of Rome to the Councell. But to this the Ieſuite ſaith, that Peter was not yet entred into his office to bee chiefe Biſhop, but was as a priuate perſon. So then belike, this rule of our Sauiour Chriſt, dic eccleſiæ, tell it to the Church, did but binde Peter, till Chriſt were aſcended, and hee receiued his Vicarſhip.

This cauillous anſwere the fathers of Baſil wiſely foreſaw, and preuented it; for they ſhew how Peter was ſubiect to Councels euen after the aſcenſion: as Acts 11. Peter is rebuked (ſay they) by the congregation, becauſe he went to Cornelius, an heathen man: as if it had not beene lawfull for him to attempt any great matter without the knowledge of the congregation. But that ſeemeth to make more for the purpoſe, Galath. 2. where Paul rebuked Peter to his face, becauſe contrarie to the decree of the Councell of the Apoſtles, he did cogere gentes Iudaizare, he would conſtraine the Gentiles to doe like the Iewes: Ergo, Peter was ſubiect vnto the Councell, ex Æneа Sylvio.

Galath.2.11.

Other reaſons many were alleaged by the fathers of Baſil. Firſt, the Biſhop Burgenſ. As in euery well ordered kingdome the whole realme ſhould be of more authoritie then the King; ſo the Church ought to be of more authoritie then the Pope, though he were prince thereof.

Argum. 2. The Diuines brought theſe arguments: The Church is the mother of the faithfull, and ſo of the Pope, if he be a faithfull man: the Pope is then the Churches ſon, as both Anacletus and Caliſtus Biſhops of Rome confeſſed: Ergo, how much the ſonne is inferiour to his mother, ſo much is the Church ſuperiour to the Pope. Secondly, the Pope is inferiour to Angels, hee is not greater then Iohn Baptiſt, of whom it is ſaid, that the leaſt in the kingdome of God is greater then he: but the Angels doe reuerently accord vnto the doctrine of the Church, Epheſ. 3. 10. Ergo, the Pope is bound to doe the ſame, who is leſſe then the Angels. Theſe fathers thought none ſo abſurd to denie the Pope to be inferiour to Angels, and therefore labour not to proue it. Yet Antoninus an old Papiſt ſaith, Non minor honor datur Papæ quam Angelis: There is no leſſe honour due to the Pope, then to the Angels. Nay another ſaith (I thinke it be Pope Paſchalis) Datur Epiſcopis, quod nec Angelis, vt Chriſti corpus crearent: It is granted to Biſhops, which is not giuen to the Angels, to create the bodie of Chriſt. But the fathers of Baſil thought not theſe men worthie the anſwere; no more doe wee, and ſo let them paſſe. Thirdly, the Pope (ſay they) being the Vicar of the Church (for he is more truly ſo called then the Vicar of Chriſt) he may be depoſed of the Church: for a Lord may put out his Vicar at his pleaſure: Ergo, the Pope is vnder Councels.

Epheſ.3.10.

Argum. 3. If the Councels might not ouerrule the Pope, there were no remedie left to reſiſt a wicked Pope: Shall we ſuffer all things, ſay they, to runne into ruine and decay with him? for it is not like, that he would congregate a Councell againſt himſelfe. To this the Ieſuite anſwereth: that there is no remedie left, but to pray to God in ſuch a caſe; who will either confound, or conuert ſuch a Pope. Here is goodly diuinitie: wee know that Antichriſt ſhall at length be deſtroyed at the comming of Chriſt; but if hee ſhould be let alone in the meane while, and not be brideled, hee might doe much hurt, as hee hath done too much alreadie. Yet the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that a wicked Pope may be reſiſted by force and armes: and why not, I pray you, as well by peaceable meanes? theſe ſayings are contrarie, Bellarm. cap. 19.

So then, this is popiſh diuinitie, that be the Pope neuer ſo wicked, doe he neuer ſo much harme, he is not to bee controlled of any mortall man. Such doltiſh ſchoole points, maintained eſpecially by begging Friers, the fathers of Baſil complained of: As that they ſhould ſay, that no man ought to iudge the high and principall ſeate; that it cannot bee iudged, either by Emperour, Clergie, King, or people. Other affirme that the Lord hath reſerued to himſelfe the depoſition of the chiefe Biſhop. Others, yet more mad, are not aſhamed to affirme, that the Biſhop of Rome, though he carrie ſoules in neuer ſo great number to hell, yet is he not ſubiect to any correction, or rebuke. For all theſe ſtrange and blaſphemous poſitions, the fathers concluded, as ye haue heard, that the Pope ought to obey generall Councels.

Laſtly, I will adioyne the iudgement of Auguſtine, who writing in his 162. epiſtle concerning the Donatiſts, whoſe cauſe was heard and determined by the Emperours appointment at Rome before Miltiades then Biſhop there, and other Biſhops aſſiſtants: and yet for all this the Donatiſts would not be quiet. Thus he ſaith, Putemus, illos iudices, qui Romæ iudicauerunt, non bonos iudices fuiſſe: Reſtabat adhuc plenarium eccleſiæ vniuerſæ concilium, &c. Put caſe (ſaith he) that the biſhop of Rome and the reſt, iudged corruptly: there remained (yet another remedie) a full Councell of the whole Church, where the Iudges & the cauſe might further haue bin tried and examined, and their iudgement, if there were cauſe, reuerſed, &c. Whereby it appeareth, ſay the fathers of Baſil, that not onely the ſentence of the Pope alone, but alſo the Pope with his Biſhops ioyned with him, might be made fruſtrate by a Councell. Heere the Ieſuite paltereth and ſaith, that a matter determined by the Pope in a particular Councell, may be called againe in queſtion by the Pope in a generall Councell. Firſt, what need that, ſeeing that a particular Councell hauing the Popes authoritie, as the Ieſuit confeſſeth, cannot erre: Againe, Auguſtine ſaith, Vbi cum ipſis iudicibus cauſa poſſit agitari: In the which generall Councell, the cauſe together with the iudges, of the which Miltiades was one, may be tried & examined: ſo that the Pope himſelfe might be adiudged by the Councell, and not the cauſe only. Vpon the premiſſes wee truly and iuſtly conclude, that the Pope is, and of right ought to be ſubiect to generall Councels.

This alſo was the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Biſhop Cranmer appealed from the Pope to the next generall Councell: the tenour of whoſe appeale you may finde, Fox pag. 1882. Maſter Latimer alſo being vniuſtly condemned by Biſhop White, the Popes Commiſſioner, appealed from his ſentence to the next generall Councell which ſhould be congregate in Chriſts name. And with this thers: ſay with Pope Anaſtaſius, that the people of the world are the parts of his bodie: with Cornelius the Biſhop in the Councell of Trent, the Pope being the light came into the world, and men loued darknes rather then light: with Pope Calixtus in the Councell of Rhemes, who, when hee ſaw the Councell would not conſent to excommunicate the Emperour, impiouſlie cried out that they had forſaken him, as Chriſt was left of his Diſciples: with Innocentius the third, that all things in heauen and earth, and vnder the earth doe bowe the knee vnto him: with Otho no Pope but a Cardinall, that ſitting amongſt his Biſhops, blaſphemouſlie applied to himſelfe the viſion of Ezechiel, chap. 1. reſembling the Biſhops to the foure faced beaſts, himſelfe vnto God that appeared to the Prophet in the midſt. Euen thus with the like ſpirit of blaſphemie, doe the Ieſuites crie out, that the Pope is the chiefe ſhepheard, ſteward, husband, and head of the Church vpon earth.

But we will leaue to charge them ſo deepely with blaſphemie, which notwithſtanding they cannot auoide: let vs heare what the fathers of Baſil ſay to this point. Bellarmine ſaith, the Pope is the husband, but they reaſon cleane contrarie: the Church (ſay they) is the ſpouſe of Chriſt: the Pope, make the beſt of him you can, is but a Vicar: but no man doth ſo ordaine a Vicar, that he maketh his ſpouſe ſubiect vnto him, but that the ſpouſe is alwaies thought to bee of more authoritie then the Vicar, forſomuch as ſhe is one bodie with her husband; but the Vicar is not ſo: thus haue they to the full anſwered the Ieſuite, ex Ænea Syluio. Better arguments they haue none for the Popes prerogatiue, then we haue ſeene.

Argum. 2. The Pope by his ſole authoritie may congregate a generall Councell: Ergo: hee is aboue a generall Councell.

Anſw. Firſt, to this anſwereth the Councell of Baſil, Epiſtol. Synodal. after this manner: by denying of the argument: Ante Concilij congregationem Concilium non eſt, ſed vt primum congregatum eſt, ſtatim poteſtas vniuerſalis eccleſiæ, quæ eſt immediatè à Chriſto, in ipſum transfunditur & fit ipſum Concilium ſupra Papam: Before the gathering together of the Councell, it is as yet no Councell: but as ſoone as it is congregate, the power and authoritie of the vniuerſall Church is transfuſed into it, and ſo the Councell becommeth aboue the Pope: therefore it followeth not, that becauſe the Pope doth call it before it be a Councell, that he is aboue it, when it is called.

*Argum.*3. If the Councels might not ouerrule the Pope, there were no remedie left to reſiſt a wicked Pope: Shall we ſuffer all things, ſay they, to runne into ruine and decay with him? for it is not like, that he would congregate a Councell againſt himſelfe. To this the Ieſuite anſwereth: that there is no remedie left, but to pray to God in ſuch a caſe, who will either confound, or conuert ſuch a Pope. Here is goodly diuinitie: wee know that Antichriſt ſhall at length be deſtroyed at the comming of Chriſt; but if hee ſhould be let alone in the meane while, and not be brideled, hee might doe much hurt, as hee hath done too much alreadie. Yet the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that a wicked Pope may be reſiſted by force and armes: and why not, I pray you, as well by peaceable meanes? theſe ſayings are contrarie. Bellarm. cap. 19.

So then, this is popiſh diuinitie, that be the Pope neuer ſo wicked, doe he neuer ſo much harme, he is not to bee controlled of any mortall man. Such doltiſh ſchoole points, maintained eſpecially by begging Friers, the fathers of Baſil complained of: As that they ſhould ſay, that no man ought to iudge the high and principall ſeate; that it cannot bee iudged, either by Emperour, Clergie, King, or people. Other affirme that the Lord hath reſerued to himſelfe the depoſition of the chiefe Biſhop. Others, yet more mad, are not aſhamed to affirme, that the Biſhop of Rome, though he carrie ſoules in neuer ſo great number to hell, yet is he not ſubiect to any correction, or rebuke. Decret.p.1. dist.40.cap.6. For all theſe ſtrange and blaſphemous poſitions, the fathers concluded, as ye haue heard, that the Pope ought to obey generall Councels.

Laſtly, I will adioyne the iudgement of Auguſtine, who writing in his 162. epiſtle concerning the Donatiſts, whoſe cauſe was heard and determined by the Emperours appointment at Rome before Miltiades then Biſhop there, and other Biſhops aſſiſtants: and yet for all this the Donatiſts would not be quiet. Thus he ſaith, Putemus, illos iudices, qui Romæ iudicauerunt, non bonos iudices fuiſſe: Reſtabat adhuc plenarium eccleſiæ vniuerſæ concilium, &c. Put caſe (ſaith he) that the biſhop of Rome and the reſt, iudged corruptly: there remained (yet another remedie) a full Councell of the whole Church, where the Iudges & the cauſe might further haue bin tried and examined, and their iudgement, if there were cauſe, reuerſed, &c. Whereby it appeareth, ſay the fathers of Baſil, that not onely the ſentence of the Pope alone, but alſo the Pope with his Biſhops ioyned with him, might be made fruſtrate by a Councell. Heere the Ieſuite paltereth and ſaith, that a matter determined by the Pope in a particular Councell, may be called againe in queſtion by the Pope in a generall Councell. Firſt, what need that, ſeeing that a particular Councell hauing the Popes authoritie, as the Ieſuit confeſſeth, cannot erre: Againe, Auguſtine ſaith, Vbi cum ipſis iudicibus cauſa poſſit agitari: In the which generall Councell, the cauſe together with the iudges, of the which Miltiades was one, may be tried & examined: ſo that the Pope himſelfe might be adiudged by the Councell, and not the cauſe only. Vpon the premiſſes wee truly and iuſtly conclude, that the Pope is, and of right ought to be ſubiect to generall Councels.

This alſo was the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Biſhop Cranmer appealed from the Pope to the next generall Councell: the tenour of whoſe appeale you may finde, Fox pag. 1882. Maſter Latimer alſo being vniuſtly condemned by Biſhop White, the Popes Commiſſioner, appealed from his ſentence to the next generall Councell which ſhould be congregate in Chriſts name. And with this Pag.1708.1.74 appellation the Biſhop ſeemed to be content, contrarie to the opinion of the Ieſuite, who maketh the Pope ſupreame Iudge of generall Councels, and ſuperiour vnto them, Fox pag. 1767. col. 1. Pag. 1603. 275.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie. In the ſixth generall Councell, Conſtantinopol. Action. 3. Honorius Biſhop of Rome was condemned, becauſe he was a Monothelite, affirming one will only to be in Chriſt, and ſo conſequently but one nature. Sergio & Honorio anathema, Pyrrho & Paulo anathema: We hold Sergius and Honorius, Pyrrhus and Paulus accurſed: thoſe three were Patriarkes in Conſtantinople and held the ſame error: the Councell iudged and condemned Honorius: Ergo, it was greater in authoritie.

Marcellinus alſo was condemned in the Sinueſſane Councell, for offering incenſe to Idols. Bellarmine anſwereth firſt, that in the caſe of infidelitie ſuch as this was, the Councel may diſcuſſe the Popes caſe. Ergo, by his owne confeſſion in ſome caſe the Councell is aboue the Pope.

Secondly ſaith he: Marcellinus firſt condemned himſelfe, and after that hee was iudged of the Councell.

Contra. But the matter appeareth to be farre otherwiſe: 1. Marcellinus appeared foure times before the Councel: the firſt time he laid the blame vpon the Prieſts and Deacons that did forſake him: the ſecond time hee asketh one of the witneſſes vpon what day hee ſaw him offering incenſe, and ſo would haue denied the fact: thirdly, he extenuateth the fault, that he did not offer ſacrifice, but onely burnt the incenſe in the fire. 2. There were 72. witneſſes produced againſt him, to conuince him. 3. One Quirinus a Biſhop ſeeing Marcellinus ſo ſtiffe in his owne defence, roſe vp in the Councell and ſaid thus; Non recedam de ſynodo, I will not depart from the Synode, till thy heart be manifeſted, &c. and ſo Marcellinus at the laſt fell flat to the earth, and confeſſed his ſinne, and was condemned of the whole Councell, where were preſent three hundred Biſhops, and thirtie Prieſts. Wherefore the Ieſuite may be aſhamed to goe againſt ſo euident a ſtorie.

Sixtus the third was accuſed of one Baſſus: whereupon the Emperour Valentinian aſſembled a Councell, wherein he was cleered and purged: Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 2. quaeſt. 5. c. 10.

Symmachus in a Romane Synode, dignitate ſua expoliatus, was depriued of his dignitie: Decr. part. 2. cauſ. 2. quaeſt. 7. c. 41. in gloſſa.

Likewiſe the Church of Rome did anathematize Dioſcorus Pope after his death: cauſ. 24. quaeſt. 3. cap. 6. Wherefore by theſe particulars it appeareth, that Councels haue been of an higher authoritie then the Popes: we can vrge alſo their owne authorities againſt them.

Conſtant. Concil. ſeſſ. 4. it was thus decreed: Synodus in ſpiritu ſancto congregata generale concilium faciens poteſtatem a Chriſto immediatè habet, cui quilibet cuiuſcunque ſtatus, etiamſi papalis exiſtit obedire tenetur: A Synode congregate in the holy Ghoſt making a generall Councell, hath power immediatly from Chriſt, to the which euery man, of what ſtate ſoeuer, although he be the Pope, is ſubiect to obey. And ſeſſ. 45. Pope Martin ratified and confirmed whatſoeuer was decreed in this Councell, in materijs fidei, in matters of faith: And that this was veritas fidei catholicæ, a veritie of the Catholike faith, to hold generall Councels to be aboue the Pope, it was concluded, Baſilienſ. Concil. Seſſ. 33. The practiſe alſo of theſe two Councels was according to their decrees: for in the Councell of Conſtance, three factious Popes were depoſed: Iohn 23. Gregorie 12. and Benedict, 13. and Martinus the fifth choſen Pope. In the Councell of Baſil Eugenius the fourth depoſed, and Felix the fifth elected.

Laſtly, Ægidius Viterbienſis, in his oration or ſermon before the Laterane Councell, in the hearing of Pope Iulius the 2. ſaid thus: Siqui forte ipſum pontificem per ſe inermem paruipendere auſi ſunt, ſynodi authoritate metuere, & vereri conſueuerunt: Nam ſi ſynodorum res geſtas repetamus, nihil illis potentius, nihil maius, nihil munitius intelligemus: If any haue been ſo bold, as to ſet light by the Pope, being but weake of himſelfe, yet they feared and ſtood in awe of a Councell: for if we will but call to minde the acts of Synods, we ſhall vnderſtand that there is nothing of greater power, ſtrength, or defence then they, &c. Here is a large confeſſion, vttered euen in the hearing of the Pope, without checke or controlement, that Councels are of greater authoritie then the Pope. And it is agreeable alſo to their owne Canons: Decret. p. 2. cauſ. 2. qu. 7. c. 35. If Peter were corrected by Paul, &c. how much more eaſily that which is confirmed by the whole Church, Vnius Epiſcopi authoritati, &c. ought to be preferred before one Biſhops authoritie. And, cauſ. 25. quaeſt. 1. c. 1. Gelaſius, Euery Chriſtian ought not to be ignorant, that what the vniuerſall Church in Synode hath aſſented vnto, nullum magis exequi ſedem oportere, no Sea ought more readily to execute, then the firſt. So that by this Canon, euen the firſt Sea is bound to keepe the decrees of the vniuerſall Church.

Concerning forraine teſtimonies, that the Pope is no ſuperiour, but ſubiect to generall Councels: firſt, Nilus Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church, who bringeth in diuers arguments to this purpoſe: whereof ſome are theſe: 1. If others were bound to aſſent to the Popes decrees, an Oecumenicall and generall Councell were ſuperfluous. 2. He alleageth the 34. Canon of the Apoſtles, that the Primate himſelfe ſhould not decree any thing, without the ſentence of al. 3. Then he vrgeth the example of Honorius Biſhop of Rome, who was iudged and anathematiſed of the ſixth Synode. 4. Further hee thus reaſoneth: If any man ſay that the Pope is not ſubiect to the lawes and ſtatutes of the fathers, he is by no meanes to be borne: becauſe he himſelfe hath receiued his prerogatiue from the fathers.

Nilus de primatu, ἀπὸ τῆς πάπα ἀρχῆς lib. 1. pag. 30. lib. 2. pag. 71. παρὰ τῶν πατέρων αὐτὸς τὸ πρεσβεῖον εἴληφε, lib. 2. pag. 82.

2 The Emperour of Ethiopia ſaid to Aluares, that if their Abuna (which is their Patriarke) ſhould preſume ſo farre, as to vſe toward them any vnlawfull commandement, they would burne the copie of ſuch commandement. They doe not giue an abſolute authoritie to their Patriarke to ouerrule their Councels. Aluares deſcr. Æthiop.p.19.

3 Of the ſame opinion are the reformed Churches, Confeſſion of Sueueland: In the concluſion they ſupplicate to the Emperour, that a generall true and Chriſtian Councell may be ſummoned, &c. for the ſetting of Eccleſiaſticall affaires at a ſtay: which were to no purpoſe, if the Pope, the chiefe diſturber of the Church, ſhould bee iudge of, and not be iudged, and tried by Councels. Harm.p.601.

4 The iudgement of many of the Latine Church is ſeene before in the practiſe of the Councels of Conſtance and Baſil, which tooke vpon them to iudge, and depoſe the Pope.

THE EIGHTH QVESTION, OF THE CONDItions and qualitie of generall Councels.

The Papiſts.

Their vnreaſonable and vnequall conditions, are theſe, and ſuch like, as follow.

1 That the Pope only ſhould haue authoritie to ſummon, call, proroge, diſſolue and confirme Councels, and he only to be the Iudge, Preſident and moderator in Councels, or ſome at his appointment.

2 They will haue none to giue voyces but Biſhops, and ſuch as are bound by oath of allegeance to the Pope.

3 That the Councell is not bound to determine according to Scripture, but to follow their traditions, and former decrees of Councels.

4 That no Councell is in force without the Popes aſſent, yea the Pope himſelfe (ſay they) by his ſole authoritie may abrogate and diſanull the Canons and decrees of Councels.

Theſe and ſuch other conditions the Papiſts require in their Councels: So they will bee ſure that nothing ſhall be concluded againſt them. And how vnreaſonable theſe conditions are, I haue ſhewed ſeuerally in the particular queſtions belonging to this matter.

The Proteſtants.

Our conditions, which wee would haue obſerued and kept, in generall Councels, are theſe, moſt iuſt and reaſonable:

1 That the Pope, which is a partie, ſhould be no iudge: for it is vnreaſonable, that the ſame man ſhould be both a partie and a iudge: and therefore he ought not to meddle with calling and appointing Councels, with ruling, or moderating them, ſeeing it is like hee would worke for his owne aduantage.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this rule, that the ſame man ought not to be a partie and a iudge, may hold in priuate and inferiour iudges, but not in the chiefe iudge, Bellarm.lib.1.cap.21.

Contra. If it be iuſt that no man ſhould be iudge in his owne cauſe, the ſame rule of Iuſtice ought to binde both the inferiour and ſuperiour iudges: ſo Athanaſius tooke exception againſt the Patriark of Antioch, by whom he was depoſed, becauſe he was his enemie, and a partie; and his exception was admitted in the Chalcedon Councell, Decret.p.2.c.3.qu.5.c.15.

Alſo Pope Nicholas the firſt, Epiſt.ad Michaelem Imperator. bringeth in a ſaying of Gelaſius ſometime Biſhop of Rome: Quaero, iudicium, quod praetendunt, vbinam poſſit agitari? an apud ipſos, vt ijdem ſint & teſtes & iudices? ſed tali iudicio, nec humana committi poſſunt negotia: I aske, that courſe of iudgement, which they pretend, where ſhould it be handled? would they haue it among themſelues, to bee both witneſſes and iudges? Which is not to bee admitted, no not in humane affaires: Ergo, the Pope, by the teſtimonie of a Pope himſelfe, ought not to bee both accuſer and iudge. Yea both the Ciuill and Canon law doe refuſe him as an incompetent iudge, that is a partie in the cauſe: as Cod.lib.2.tit.6.leg.6.Valentin. That no man in the ſame cauſe, ſhould be an aduocate and a iudge; lib.3.tit.5.leg.1.Gratian. Nemo in ſua cauſa iudicet: That no man ſhould be iudge in his owne cauſe. So likewiſe their owne Canons; Decret.part.2.cauſ.4.qu.4.c.1. Fabianus: That no man ſhould preſume to be both an accuſer and a iudge. And c.2.Damaſus; The ſame parties muſt not be both accuſers and iudges. Yea and that the Pope himſelfe, whom they make the ſupreame iudge, ought to obſerue this rule, a preſident we haue in the Chalcedon Councell, where, when as Puſchaſinus and Lucentius the Biſhop of Romes Legates would haue Dioſcorus excluded out of the Councell, the iudges ſaid thus to Lucentius: Si iudicis obtines perſonam, non vt accuſator debes perſequi: If you take vpon you the perſon of the Iudge, you cannot proſecute the matter as an accuſer. Wherefore we iuſtly take exception againſt ſuch Councels, where the Pope taketh vpon him to be iudge, ſeeing he ought not to be a iudge in his owne cauſe.

2 That ſuch a time and place bee appointed, as when and where the Churches of Chriſtendome may moſt ſafely and conueniently meete together: not at ſuch a time as Paulus the third called a Councell, when all Princes in Chriſtendome were occupied in great affaires: nor ſuch a place, as hee then appointed at Mantua in Italie, whither Princes could not come without perill of iourney and danger of life, being penned in by the Popes gariſons. Thus Pope, or Biſhop Leo, (for then there were no Popes) wrote to Martianus the Emperour, to haue the Councell remooued from Calchis to Italie, but he preuailed not. So Pope Eugenius would haue diſſolued the Councell at Baſil, and brought it vnder his owne noſe: but was withſtood by the Councell.

Concerning the quietneſſe and freenes of the place to be choſen for the Councell, the Synode of Baſile thus writeth to the Bohemians, that whereas they had complained in times paſt, that they could not haue liberam audientiam, a free and ſafe hearing, iam ceſſabit, ſay they, omnis querela occaſio, now all occaſion of complaint ſhall ceaſe; Ecce iam locum & facultatem plenæ audientiæ præbemus: Behold we offer vnto you both freedome of place, and libertie of hearing.

Here Bellarmine maketh this anſwere, that whereas Cyprian hath this Canon, lib. 1. Epiſt. 3. That controuerſies ſhould there be tried, where they ariſe: that this is to bee vnderſtood of the particular ſuites of men, not of matters of faith, which may be in any place determined, as he ſheweth by diuers preſidents.

Contra. That ſuch a place, not for iudgement of matters of fact onely, but in deciding of points of faith ought to be choſen, to the which all parties may ſafely, and without danger reſort, both the Ciuill law, and your Canons doe warrant, as firſt, Cod. lib. 3. tit. 14. l. 1. Conſtantini. Perſonæ miſerabiles, &c. Miſerable and poore perſons muſt not be drawne out of their prouince; And lib. 7. tit. 62. l. 26. Gratian. Itineris longinquitas, &c. The length of the iourney doth hinder appeales to be made a farre off: So alſo the decrees conſent hereunto, p. 2. cauſ. 3. qu. 6. c. 13. Anacletus. Peregrina iudicia ſubmouenda; That iudgement in a ſtrange countrie muſt not be admitted, decr. Gregor. lib. 1. tit. 3. cap. 28. Innocent. 3. That no man ſhould be called aboue two daies iourney from home, no not by the Apoſtolike letters, becauſe of expenſes, and wearineſſe of iourney, &c. theſe two cauſes being rendred both by the Ciuill law and Canon, why no man ought to be ſummoned a farre off, may very well ſtand, and be obſerued in congregating and calling of Councels.

3 We would haue it a free Councell, where euery man might fully vtter his minde, and that there ſhould be a ſafe conduct granted to all to come and goe: which the Pope for all his faire promiſes is vnwilling to doe, as it was flatly denied to Hieronimus of Prage in the Councell of Conſtance; to whom it was anſwered, that he ſhould haue ſafe conduct to come, but none to go. Neither if they ſhould giue a ſafe conduct, were they to be truſted, for it cannot be forgotten, to their perpetuall infamie, that they brake the Emperour Sigiſmunds ſafe conduct granted to Iohn Huſſe in the Councell of Conſtance, ſaying, that faith was not to be kept with heretikes.

Concerning this point alſo, the libertie of ſpeech in Councels: Conſtantinus the Emperor thus writeth, epiſt. ad Nicen. 2. Damus vnicuique libertatem, vt ſine omni formidine ea eloquatur, quæ ſecum animo deliberauerit, quo veritas magis magiſque eluceſcat, & intrepida voce audiatur: We giue vnto euerie man libertie, to vtter without feare, what hee hath deliberated in his mind, and to be heard without dread, that the truth may better appeare.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that it is reaſonable, a ſafe conduct ſhould be granted, as was offered of late at the Councell of Trent.

Contra. Indeed ſuch a ſafe conduct, as was offered to Iohn Huſſe by the Councell of Conſtance, as I haue ſaid, which they might breake at their pleaſure; but that ſuch a place ought to bee choſen indifferently, where euery man might goe and come ſafelie, one of your owne Popes thought it reaſonable, thus wrighting in defence of the King of Sicilie, cited and ſummoned by the Emperour: Clementin. lib. 2. tit. 11. c. 2. Nunquid venire debuit ad iudicem exercitu feroci ſtipatum, &c. What ſhould he come to a iudge being garded with a fierce armie? Or to a populous place and of great power which was bent againſt him? &c. Now if the Pope would call a Councell in Rome or in Italie, or in any other place, where hee is receiued, may wee not vſe the ſame defence, which Pope Clement did for the King of Sicilie?

4 The matter ſhould not bee left wholy to Biſhops and Prelates, but the learned of the Clergie and Laitie beſides, ſhould giue voices, ſeeing the cauſe of religion is common and concerneth all. But moſt of al, nothing ſhould be caried with violence or popularity, againſt the Scriptures, but euery matter determined according to the truth thereof.

See for this matter the teſtimonie of Pope Nicholas the firſt, cited before queſtion 3. of this controuerſie. Fides vniuerſalis eſt, omnium communis eſt, quæ non ſolum ad Clericos, ſed Laicos pertinet, &c. That faith is vniuerſall, and a thing common to all, and appertaineth not onely to the Clergie, but to Laymen, and generally to all Chriſtians.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that it is againſt the forme of all Councels, that any but Biſhops ſhould haue deciding voices in Councels.

Contra. The Ieſuite if hee would ſpeake his conſcience, knoweth the contrary: for firſt in that Councell held by the Apoſtles, whoſe authoritie was greater, then of Biſhops, Act. 15. the queſtion is determined by the whole conſent of the Apoſtles and Presbyters or Elders: as verſe 6. The Apoſtles and Elders came together to looke to this matter: and verſe 22. It ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders, &c.

So in the Chalcedon Councell there were aſſembled 630. Fathers, not all Biſhops, but many of them Prieſts, as in the firſt action, the Ægyptian Biſhops tooke exception againſt the Prieſts, calling them ſuperfluous: and Martianus alloweth the acts of this Councell, inſtituta à ſacerdotibus, which were done by Prieſts aſſembled at Chalcedon, Cod.lib.1.tit.1.leg.3.

And S. Hierome ſaith, whoſe ſentence is approoued, decr.p.2.cauſ.16.qu.1.c.7. That as the Romanes had their Senate, without whoſe Councell they did nothing: Ita & nos habemus ſenatum noſtrum, cœtum Presbyterorum: So the Church alſo hath their Senate, the companie of Presbyters: Wherefore if Prieſts be as Senators in Councels, there is no queſtion but they ought to haue determining voyces.

5 It is a moſt reaſonable condition, that all things in Councels ſhould bee decided by the Scriptures. Bellarmine anſwereth no, becauſe according to the law of Martian, nothing ought to be called in queſtion, which hath beene concluded in Councell, as this hath beene determined in the ſeuenth generall Synode, that traditions not written ought to be receiued, Bellarm.lib.1.c.21.reſponſ.ad 4.conditio.

Contra. Firſt, the law of Martian ſpeaketh of articles of faith once concluded, which ought not afterward to be doubted of, and of ſuch concluſions, as are made iuxta Apoſtolicas inſtitutiones: according to the inſtitutions of the Apoſtles: Cod.lib.1.tit.4.leg.3. But this decree of the ſeuenth Synode is neither an article of faith, nor yet agreeable to the Apoſtles inſtitutions. Secondly, as for the ſeuenth Synode, we reiect it as an idolatrous Synode, and afterward repealed with the acts thereof in the Councell of Frankford, vnder Charles: yea one of their owne Popes, Adrian the ſixth thus writeth of this Synode, Parum verecunde abutentes, &c. They doe without all ſhame abuſe olde wiues fables and dreames, &c. Thirdly, that it is agreeable to the ancient practiſe of Councels, to haue all things decided by Scripture: ſee before queſtion 6. of this controuerſie.

Adrian quodlibet. 6.

Such a Councell we refuſe not, nay wee much deſire, which is the true generall Councell: that is not generall, where all men cannot ſpeake, no freedome nor libertie granted for men to vtter the truth, where all things are partially handled, and are ſwayed by one mans authoritie. Wherefore the Rhemiſts ſlander vs in ſaying wee raile vpon generall Councels, annot. in Act. 15.10. and that wee refuſe them, 2.Galath.2. Whether we or they are enemies to true, generall, free, holy, indifferent Councels, let all men iudge.

Concerning forraine teſtimonies of this matter. 1. Nilus the Greeke Archbiſhop thinketh it vnreaſonable, that enemies ſhould ſit as Iudges: it were vnfit then for the Pope to be Iudge in his owne cauſe. And touching free acceſſe and libertie of ſpeech: Ioannes Baſilius, that ſterne Emperour of Muſcouia, did freely grant it vnto Robit a Miniſter: whereas ſaith hee thou writeſt, that thou mayeſt freely and boldly ſpeake, we remembring our promiſe, Nihil te metuere iubemus, doe bid thee to be afraid of nothing: the Pope is not ſo equall.

Nil.lib.2. de primat.

Reſponſ. ad Robit.c.14.

2 The Aethiopike Chriſtians doe not like, that the Pope or any other ſhould impoſe his decrees vpon other Churches; as Zaga Zabo, an Aethiopian Biſhop ſaith; I am not ſent hither from my mightie Lord to the Biſhop of Rome for diſputation ſake, either to encreaſe, or decreaſe humane traditions, but to make amitie and friendſhip, &c.

Damianus a Goes de Æthiop.morib.

3 Thus alſo the reformed Churches: Confeſſion of Heluetia, the latter artic.18. We doe not diſallow of generall Councels, if that they be taken vp according to the example of the Apoſtles, to the ſaluation of the Church, not to the deſtruction thereof. Sweueland in concluſ. ſuch a Councell, whereunto all, for whom it is expedient to be preſent, may freely and ſafely reſort, euery man may be heard, &c.

Harm.Sect.11, p.346.
Sect.14.p.62.

4 Touching the iudgement of the Latine Church, ſee the decrees of Fabianus and Damaſus, Biſhops of Rome, cited before.

THE NINTH QUESTION, WHICH ARE TO BE counted the true generall Councels, and of the number of them.

Bellarmine reduceth all the generall Councels to foure orders. 1. Some are ſimply refuſed and diſanulled. 2. Some ſimply approoued. 3. Some partly approoued, partly refuſed. 4. Some neither allowed nor refuſed.

36.Error.

Of the firſt ſort he reckoneth the 3. Antiochene Councell celebrated ann. 345. wherein Athanaſius was condemned, the 4. Antioch. ann. 367. which confirmed the hereſie of Macedonius: the Councell of Millaine, ann. 354. againſt the Catholike faith. The ſecond Epheſine ann. 449. where the Eutychian hereſie was ratified. Two Councels of Conſtantinople, one ann. 730. vnder Leo Iſaurus, the other vnder Conſtantinus Copronymus, ann. 754. wherein the adoration of images was condemned, the Piſane Councell, ann. 1511. wherein Leo 10. was depoſed: and the aſſembly of the Lutherane Miniſters at Witemberge, ann. 1536.

Of the ſecond ſort, he numbreth eighteene, the 1. Nicence, the 1. of Conſtantinople, the 1. Epheſine, the Chalcedon, the 5.6.7.8. generall Councels held at Conſtantinople. 4. Latterane Councels vnder Caliſtus 2. Innocentius 2. Alexander the 3. Innocentius 3. two at Lyons vnder Innocentius 4. and Gregorie 10. the Councell of Vienna, in the time of Clement the 5. the Councell of Florence vnder Eugenius the 4. the fifth Laterane vnder Leo 10. and the Councell of Trent vnder Paulus 3. Iulius 3. Pius 4.

Of the third ranke are the Councell of Sardis, the Syrmian Synode, the Councell of Frankford vnder Charles the great, the Councell of Conſtance and Baſile.

Of the fourth ſort he mentioneth onely one, the Piſane Councell anno 1460. which depoſed Gregorie the 12. and Benedict the 13. and chooſe Alexander the 5.

The iſſue betweene vs, is, concerning theſe 18. Councels, which they would haue approoued; and ſome of thoſe which he refuſeth, as the two Councels at Conſtantinople condemning the worſhip of Images. Bellarmine hath no other reaſon for the credite of thoſe 18. Councels, but this, that they were ratified and confirmed by the Pope, Bellar. c. 5. 6. 7. 8. lib. 1. de Concil.

Bellar. lib. 2 de Roman. Pontif. c. 21.

Centur. 7. p. 460. ex Hugon. de Concil.

Diſtinct. 16. c. 8.

Anſweare. 1. All theſe generall Councels had not the Popes conſent: for Leo Epiſt. 59. as Bellarmine alſo confeſſeth, alloweth not the Chalcedon Councell the fourth generall, but ſo farre onely as it decreed concerning the faith: becauſe the like priuiledges were yeelded to Conſtantinople as to Rome. And Pope Sergius refuſed to confirme the acts of the 6. generall Councell, becauſe the 13. 36. 46. 52. Canons were againſt the Church of Rome. Neither doe the Romaniſts herein allow theſe Councels to this day: which notwithſtanding is againſt the Popes profeſſion, that he will ad vnum apicem immutilata ſeruare, keepe in euery tittle without change the eight generall Councels.

2. So farre is the Popes conſent from eſtabliſhing generall Councels, that wee therefore refuſe all thoſe, wherein the Pope hath vſurped as chiefe moderator, director, and confirmer of Canons, as being a partiall Iudge in his owne cauſe.

The Proteſtants.

WE differ here from the Romaniſts in theſe two points. Firſt, we neither allow all theſe to be generall Councels, which they doe, onely the foure firſt, whereunto alſo we care not to adde the fifth, we acknowledge to be true generall Councels. Secondly, we reiect not ſome of thoſe generall Councels, which they refuſe, as the 7. generall Councell vnder Conſtantinus Copronymus.

Canon. Concil. Trident. ad Colen. 1575.

Lib. 23. anno 1552.

For the firſt our reaſons are theſe. 1. Diuers of thoſe Councels are erroneous: the ſixth generall Councell alloweth the rebaptizing of thoſe which are baptized by heretikes: The 7. and 8. doe decree the adoration of Images. 2. After the 7. generall, the Pope tooke vpon him to be the chiefe preſident of Councels, and ſo ruled all according to his owne pleaſure: whereupon the Greekes acknowledge but onely the firſt 7. generall Councels. 3. Many of thoſe Councels are not extant, but onely ſome ſcraps of them collected by others: as the firſt and ſecond Laterane, the firſt and ſecond of Lyons: the Councell of Vienna, none of theſe are extant. 4. Some of them were no generall Councels, as that of Trent, wherein Bellarmine telleth vs there were 280. Biſhops, with Archbiſhops, Cardinals, Abbats generals: ſome other count 255. But Sleidane more truly reporteth, that there were in all but 62. Now againſt this laſt Councell, which the Papiſts doe ſo much bragge of, we take theſe exceptions.

1 The number was not ſufficient to make a generall Councell: there haue beene more in ſome prouinciall Synodes.

2 They were all ſworne to the Pope, and ſo ruled and directed by him.

[b] In Tit. 1. p. 42

Iuel. defenſ. of the Apol. p. 79.

Innocent. Gentil. exam. p. 96.

3 The moſt of the Biſhops there, were Italians: which nation onely in number of Biſhops, aut ſuperat aut aequat alias nationes. Doth either exceede or equall other nations, as [a] Lodouicus Cardinall of Arles, ſaid in the Councell of Baſil. And [b] Eſpencaeus ſaith, Haec eſt illa Helena, quae nuper Tridenti obtinuit, This is that Helena, which wonne the ſpurres of late at Trent, &c. for Italy hath aboue 300. Biſhops, Archbiſhops, and Patriarkes, as many as all Europe beſide.

4 Some of them were Biſhops without Dioceſſe: as Rich. Pates B. of Wincheſter, that had beene blinde, Sir Robert of Armath.

5 While they were ſitting in the Councell, the Pope was deuiſing Canons at Rome, which were ſent downe by packets, Poſts going too and fro continually. This then was a partiall conuenticle, no true generall Councell.

[c] Eſpenc. in 1. Tim. lib. 2. c. 2. p. 257.

In Luc. c. 6. vpon theſe words, If the blinde leade the blinde.

Fox. p. 210. Ex proteſtation. Concionat. Germ. aduerſ. conuent. Tridentin.

6 Adde further, the inſufficiencie and ſcandalous behauiour of the Popiſh Biſhops there aſſembled: Eſpenceus ſaith, that none of them was knowne to preach, all the while the Councell continued: and Stella ſaith, that the Biſhops brought with them Doctos Theologos, qui ipſos illuminent: learned diuines to illuminate them: And he addeth further: In hac quidem re non potui mihi a riſu temperare: I could not but laugh (ſaith hee) thoſe Biſhops ſhould haue done better to haue giuen ouer their Biſhoprickes to theſe Diuines, &c. And for their behauiour, two of their Biſhops were ſlaine being taken in adulterie, the one whereof was ſeene the next morning hanging dead out of a windowe. Now I appeale vnto any indifferent man, whether this be not worthie to be numbred among the number of generall Councels.

For the other point, that the Councell of Conſtantinople helde vnder Conſtantinus Copronymus, wherein the adoration of images was condemned, is rather to be held the 7. generall Councell, then the 2. Nicene vnder Conſtantinus and Irene his mother, wherein that ſuperſtitious adoration was confirmed: our reaſons are theſe.

Zonaras tom. 3 Platin. & Bergomen. lib. 10.

1 The Emperour Conſtantin. Copronymus, decreed the other to be held for the 7. generall Synode, and the fathers of that Councell agreed thereunto.

2 The 2. Nicene was held by the Empreſſe Irene, in the nonage of her ſonne Conſtantine, who afterward cauſed the ſame to be abrogated and diſanulled.

3 The 2. Nicene was maintained by violence and fraud: for whereas, there was a Synode held before at Conſtantinople, where in open diſputation, they which ſpake againſt the adoration of images, were ſuperiour to the other, and conuinced them out of Scripture: the aduerſe part diſſolued the Synode: and in the meane time preuailed ſo with the Empreſſe, that the Catholicall Biſhops were partly diſarmed, ſome baniſhed, and then a ſufficient armie being prouided, the Nicene Synode was ſummoned.

Paul.Diacon. lib.23.

4 The whole Synode was ſwayed by the authoritie of the Popes Legates: and the Biſhops confeſſe, that they did conſent to the adoration of images, Legatorum Romanorum inſtinctu, by the inſtinct and perſwaſion of the Romane Legates they gaue conſent to pleaſe them.

Nicen.2. actio.3.

5 Tharaſius, the Patriarke of Conſtantinople, and preſident of this Councell, being an ignorant man, and newly of a lay man made a Biſhop: and therefore, as Carolus Magnus alleageth againſt him, it was no maruell, Si non recte prædicat qui ad prædicandi officium non recte peruenit: If he preach not aright, that came not the right way to the office of preaching: Et ea docere quæ conſtat eum nunquam didiciſſe, and ſo teacheth thoſe things, which it is certaine, he neuer learned himſelfe.

Centur.8.p.603.

Eſpenc.relatl. lib.digreſſ.2. p.299.

6 Whereupon, Carolus aſſembling a Councell at Frankford, anno 794. cauſed the decrees and acts of the ſaid 2. Nicene Councell to be reuerſed.

Abeatium lib.4

Thus then it may appeare, vpon what good ground the 7. Councell held at Conſtantinople, is preferred before the 2. Nicene.

Now then to conclude, whereas ſome onely receiue the two firſt Councels, as the Neſtorians, becauſe their hereſie was condemned in the third. Some onely admit the three firſt, as the Eutychians, which were condemned in the fourth. Some allow of the fiue firſt, as [a] Adelbertus: [b] Bellarmine falſly maketh the authors of the Centuries of that opinion, but he ſheweth not the place. The Greeke Church receiueth onely ſeuen: as [c] Barlaam confeſſeth, and Ieremie the Patriarke, who writing to the Germane Miniſters, ſaith, that they alſo profeſſe to receiue and embrace the ſeuen generall Synodes: but therein hee doth threape kindneſſe of them. Some doe acknowledge the whole rabble of them, euen 18. generall Councels, as Bellarmine. We refuſing all thoſe, doe onely approue the foure firſt generall Councels, whereunto alſo may be added the fifth.

THE FOVRTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE BISHOP OF ROME, COMMONLY CALLED THE POPE.

This great and waightie Controuerſie containeth tenne ſeuerall queſtions;

1 Whether the regiment of the Church be Monarchicall.

2 Whether Peter were the Prince of the Apoſtles, and by our Sauiour Chriſt made head of the Church.

3 Whether Peter were at Rome and died Biſhop there.

4 Whether the Biſhop of Rome be the true ſucceſſor of Peter.

5 Concerning the primacie of the Biſhop of Rome: ſixe parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether he haue authoritie ouer other Biſhops. Secondly, whether appeales are to be made to Rome. Thirdly, whether the Pope be ſubiect to the iudgement of any. Fourthly, whether he may be depoſed. Fifthly, what primacie he hath ouer other Churches. Sixthly, of his titles and names.

6 Whether the Biſhop of Rome may erre, and likewiſe whether the Church of Rome bee ſubiect to error.

7 Of the ſpirituall iuriſdiction of the Biſhop of Rome: two parts. Firſt, whether hee can make lawes to binde the conſcience. Secondly, whether other Biſhops doe receiue their iuriſdiction from him.

8 Of the Popes temporall iuriſdiction: two parts. Firſt, whether hee haue authoritie aboue Kings and Princes. Secondly, whether he be a temporall Prince.

9 Of the prerogatiues of the Pope.

10 Concerning Antichriſt: nine parts. Firſt, whether Antichriſt ſhall be ſome one ſingular man. Secondly, of the time of his comming. Thirdly, of his name. Fourthly, of his nation and kinred. Fifthly, where his place and ſeate ſhall be. Sixthly, of his doctrine and manners. Seuenthly, of his miracles. Eightly, of his kingdome and warres. Ninthly, whether the Pope be the very Antichriſt: of theſe in their order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, WHETHER THE Regiment of the Church be Monarchicall.

WE are not ignorant that the Philoſophers made three formes and ſtates of gouernement in the common-wealth: the Monarchicall, when as the principall and ſoueraigne power reſted in one, as in the King, Queene or Emperour: as Rome ſometime was ruled by Kings, and many yeares after by Emperours. Secondly, the Ariſtocraticall, when the common-wealth was gouerned by an aſſembly and Senate of Nobles, as the Romanes had a long time their Conſuls and Senators. Thirdly, the Democraticall, which is the popular ſtate, when the people and multitude bare the greateſt ſway: as ſometime in Rome alſo, tribuni plebis, the officers for the people had the chiefe authoritie. Now of all theſe in common-wealth matters, the firſt kind is the beſt and ſafeſt, the Monarchicall or princely gouernment. The queſtion now is, whether the ſame forme ought to be retained in Church gouernment: and in this queſtion certaine things are to be obſerued: Firſt, that we haue not to deale in this place with that part of Eccleſiaſticall regiment, wherein the Prince hath intereſt, as in ordaining Eccleſiaſticall Lawes, and ſeeing to the execution thereof: but the queſtion is onely of that regiment Eccleſiaſticall, which is proper to the gouernours of the Church, which conſiſteth in the miniſterie of the word and Sacraments, in ordaining & electing of Church-miniſters, in the diſpenſing of the keyes of the Church, in the Eccleſiaſticall cenſures and diſcipline, and ſuch like: whether in the Church there ought to be one chiefe Biſhop, from whom all other receiue this power in the premiſſes. Secondly, the queſtion is not of the ſpirituall gouernment of Chriſt, who is the chiefe Monarch and King of his Church, but of the outward and externall regiment vpon earth. Thirdly, we ſpeake not of the ſtate of any particular Church, either Nationall, prouinciall, or oppidall, but of the generall ſtate of the Church: whether ouer all Churches there ought to be one chiefe Biſhop. Theſe things premiſed, we come now to the queſtion.

The Papiſts.

37. Error. THat there ought to be one chiefe Monarch and high Biſhop ouer all the Church, in all Eccleſiaſticall matters, for the deciding of controuerſies, preſeruing the vnitie of the Church, from whom all other Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters doe receiue their power and authoritie, they thus would proue.

*Argum.*1. The militant Church is in all things anſwerable and correſpondent to the triumphant companie in Heauen: as Heb. 8. 5. Moſes was bid to make all things according to the paterne ſhewed in the Mount. But in heauen there is beſide God himſelfe, a Monarch and chiefe commander of the Angels, euen Michael the Archangell, Reuel. 12. 7. Michael and his Angels fought. Ergo, it ought to be ſo vpon earth, *Bellarmine lib.*1 *de Rom. pontif. cap.*9. Heb. 8, 5. Reuel. 12.7.

Wee anſwere: Firſt, the Church vpon earth, neither is, nor can be altogether like to the celeſtiall congregation: for there is no temple, Reuel. 21, 22. There ſhall enter no vncleane thing: and many ſuch like differences there are: Wee are bid to follow them in holineſſe and obedience, ſo farre wee muſt imitate the Angels, as in the Lords prayer, 3. Petit. As for imitation and conformitie in other things, we haue no ſuch commandement: we are promiſed hereafter to be like them, but that is not yet. Neither doth that place proue any ſuch thing, Heb. 8. For how followeth it, Moſes was ſhewed a paterne to make the Tabernacle by: Ergo, the Church hath a paterne of her gouernement from heauen? When they can ſhew any ſuch paterne reuealed in the word (for their dreames and phantaſies we will not beleeue) for the Church, as Moſes had for the Tabernacle, then they ſhall ſay ſomewhat. Reuel.21,22.

2 It is a vaine curioſitie ſo to deſcant of the Angels, as to appoint them a Captaine and commander, and to make nine orders or bands of them, as our Rhemiſts annot. 1. Epheſ. ver. 21. Theſe are but their dreames, they haue not a word in Scripture for it. And concerning Michael, they are much deceiued, for in that place, Apocal. 12. 7. Chriſt is called Michael: Michael and his Angels fought againſt the Dragon. And who, I pray you, is the chiefe Captaine of the Church againſt the diuell and his hoſt but Chriſt? And ſo is it expounded verſ. 10. Now is ſaluation in heauen, and the ſtrength and kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt: Here he is called Chriſt, who before is Michael.

In other places also, Michael is vnderstood to bee Christ, as Dan. 10. 21. there is none that holdeth with me but Michael your Prince: here Michael is the Prince of the Church, and not of the Angels. Dan. 10. 21. And that Michael is not the Prince of the Angels, as our aduersaries meane, taking Michael for an Angell, it is proued out of the 13. verse, Michael one of the chiefe Princes: the Angels are all called Princes, and not one to be Prince aboue them.

Likewise the nature and signification of the word Michael agreeth hereunto: for it is compounded of three Hebrew particles, as much as to say, one that is equall vnto God: which name in that sense cannot be giuen vnto any creature.

Further, Epistle Iud. 9. there is mention made of Michael the Archangell, who stroue against the Diuell, and said, the Lord rebuke thee Satan: where the Apostle alludeth to that place of Zachar. 3. 2. Iud. 9. Zachar. 3. 2. where the very same words are found: but there the Prophet calleth him Iehouah, that spake those words, and here the Apostle calleth him Michael: So that in this place it must needs bee vnderstood for Christ.

To conclude, we denie not, but that Michael may bee the name of some glorious Angell; but out of these places it cannot be proued. And againe, we will not stand with them, but that there may bee degrees of excellencie amongst the Angels, as there shall bee amongst the Saints: but that any one hath any such soueraigne and commanding authoritie ouer the rest, it is a curious and presumptuous surmise.

Argum. 2. The Church of the old Testament was a figure of the Church vnder the New: but they had a high Priest aboue the rest: Ergo, there ought to be now, Bellarm. ibid.

We answere: first, we grant the high Priest was a figure, but neither of Peter nor Pope, but onely of Christ: for in two things did the high Priest resemble Christ, in offering of sacrifice (so hath Christ offered vp himselfe, Heb. 7. 27.) and in entring into the sanctuarie to make attonement for the people: so Christ is entered into the heauens, to appeare in sight for vs before God, as the Apostle saith, Heb. 9. 24. I trow in neither of these the high Priest could be a type either of Peter or Pope. Heb. 7. 27. Heb. 9. 24. Yes, saith Bellarmine, Aaron was a figure, not of Christ onely, but of Peter, and his successors, cap. 9. resp. ad 3. ratum. Contra. First, then belike Peter and his successors are priests after the order of Aaron: how then are your priests after Melchisedechs order, as some of you haue blasphemously affirmed; they cannot be both after the order of Aaron, and of Melchisedech too. Secondly, the Apostle thus reasoneth, Heb. 7. 12. Where there is a change of the priesthood, there must be a change of the law; and so consequently, where the law is changed, the priesthood must bee likewise: Heb. 7. 12. how then can the priesthood of Aaron be a patterne of the priesthood vnder the Gospell, the law being changed?

3 Neither doth it follow, because there was an high priest in one countrie, therefore there ought to be one ouer the Churches in all countries: as the Iesuite frameth another argument by a comparison: because a Bishop is ouer his diocesse, a Metropolitane ouer his prouince, there may bee as well a Pope ouer the whole Church. For by the same reason, because a Lord may be the chiefe in his seignioritie, a Duke in his prouince, a Prince in his Kingdome, therefore there ought to bee an Emperour ouer all the world: or as M. Caluine saith, because one field is committed to one Husbandman to dresse and to till, therefore the whole world may: which were a thing impossible.

Bellarmine answereth; first, it followeth rather strongly on the contrarie, that if one particular Church had need to haue one chiefe priest to keepe it in vnitie; much greater neede hath the whole Church to haue one principall, because the whole Church is in greater danger of schisme and diuision, then one particular.

Contra. First, the Iesuite had said something, if one man were as well able to prouide for the peace of the whole Church, as for the vnitie of one: but now he is not. But the best way to auoid schisme, is for euery country to be gouerned in it selfe: as in the Ciuill state, one Monarch is better able to keep one kingdome from rebellion, then many kingdomes: And this is the reason why the great Monarchies were dissolued, for that their prouinces rebelled, and withdrew their obedience from them. Secondly, there is also one head of the vniuersall Church, that doth preserue it in vnitie, Iesus Christ, and therefore we neede none other: as the Apostle saith, Ephes. 4. 15. Let vs follow the truth in loue, and grow vp vnto him which is the head, that is Christ. Ephes. 4. 15.

Bellarmine secondly thus answereth Master Caluines similitude: that one husbandman is not by himselfe sufficient, yet by his seruants may occupie many large fields: and so the Pope by his ministers may be pastor of the whole Church.

Contra. Yet the similitude holdeth still: for as it were inconuenient, that all tillage in the world, nay in one countrie, should bee occupied vnder the title and interest of one man; for by this meanes corne might be engrossed, prices raised, the common-wealth hindered: so were it as hurtfull for the Church to be vnder the command of one that forestalled all causes, and sought aduantage to himselfe, &c.

Argum. 3. The Popish English Colledge of Doway, whose chiefe arguments in euery question shall bee dispersedly handled, haue found out new arguments for the vniuersall Monarchie of the Church: As because there was one onely Arke, and one chiefe gouernour thereof, they inferre, that there must be one chiefe gouernour of the Church: and againe, say they, Moses recounteth the Monarchicall succession of one chiefe, and supreme head from Adam, by the line of Seth, Enos, Cainan, Ma- In their edition of part of the old Testament. Annot. in 7. c. Genes. pag. 28.

lalaleel, &c. and Noe: whereupon they giue this note in the margen, are ſupreme heads of the Church.

In the remonſtrance after the 7.c.p.35. Pag.28.

Contra.1. To the firſt part, they ſhall make anſwere themſelues, who thus note in the margen, and Noe ſignifieth Chriſt the Arke the Church, this one chiefe gouernour then of the Church is Chriſt. 2. It followeth not, becauſe thoſe Patriarkes were the chiefe in their families, and the moſt ancient, were the chiefe Doctors of the Church of God, which liued there together in thoſe parts of the world about Caldea, and Meſopotamia, that therefore there ſhould bee one chiefe gouernour of the vniuerſall Church diſperſed ouer the world. 3. Whereas all theſe long liued Patriarkes liued together, Adam, Seth, Enos, Kenan, Malalael, Iared, Henoch, Methuſelah, Lamech: and after the flood, Noe, Sem, Arphaxad, Selah, Eber, Peleg, Rega, Serug, Nahor, Terah, continued a while aliue together, it wil be hard for them to ſhew, which of all thoſe had the monarchicall chiefdome ouer the reſt; it may be thought rather that they were all ioyned together in a kinde of Ariſtocratical gouernment.

The Proteſtants.

Iuel.anſw.to the Apol.pag. 657.

THat there ought not to be any one chief Biſhop, Pope or prelate, to exerciſe iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, we doe thus make it good.

Argum.1. We acknowledge no head of the Church but Chriſt, neither doth the Scripture attribute this title of Maieſtie ouer the whole Church, but onely to Chriſt. If the Pope or any elſe bee the head, the Church is his bodie, which Bellarmine dare not grant. Pope Athanaſius doubted not to call populos mundi, partes corporis ſui, the people of the world, the parts of his body.

Epheſ.4.16.

Againe, if he be the head, he muſt doe the dutie of an heade, which is, to knit and ioyne the parts together, and to giue effectuall power to euery part. Epheſ. 4.16. where the Apoſtle alludeth to the gouernment of mans body: in the which the parts receiue a double benefit from the head, the knitting and ioyning together by ſinewes, which come from the head; and ſenſe and motion alſo giuen to euery part from the head: but it were blaſphemie to think this of the Pope, that he giueth any influence to the Church. If they anſwere, he is but a miniſteriall head, Chriſt is the principall. Wee ſay againe, that although theſe things are principally wrought by the principall head, yet they muſt bee done inſtrumentally, or miniſterially by the Miniſteriall head: or elſe it is but a rotten head: ſuch an one as the Wolfe found in a caruers ſhop (as you know the fable is) a goodly head, ſaith he, but without wit or braine. If Chriſt performe all the dutie of the head himſelfe, then is there no other head: if the Pope doe ſomewhat that belongeth to the head, tell vs, what is it? If he will bee an head and doe nothing, ſurely he muſt needs be a braineleſſe and witleſſe head.

Argum.2. It is a dangerous and impoſſible thing to haue the charge of all Churches committed to one man: God alone is ſufficient to beare that burthen. Saint Paul ſaith, who is ſufficient for theſe things? No paſtor or miniſter, that is but ſet ouer one flocke or pariſh, is ſufficient to preach the word: much leſſe is any one man ſufficient to gouerne the whole Church.

2.Cor.11.28.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, S. Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that he had the care of all Churches, 2.Cor. 11.28. We reply againe, firſt, then belike S. Paul was vniuerſall paſtor and not Peter. Secondly, wee muſt conſider that the Apoſtles were ſent to all the world: their calling was not limited; when they had planted the Goſpell in one place, they did take care alſo for other places: but now there is no ſuch Apoſtolicall calling. Thirdly, Paul did not beare this burthen alone, but the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts were his coadiutors and fellow-helpers.

Secondly, ſaith he, why may not the care of the whole Church be committed to one man, as well as the gouernment almoſt of the whole world was appointed by God to Nabuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Auguſtus: ſeeing the gouernment of the Church is eaſier then the ciuile and politike regiment.

1.King.4.21.

Wee replie. Firſt, wee neuer read of any that had dominion ouer the whole world, as the Pope challengeth to haue ouer the whole Church, which is diſperſed throughout the world. Secondly, theſe great and large Monarches are ſaid to haue been giuen of God, Dan. 2.37. Not that this large dominion and vſurpation ouer other Countries ſo much pleaſed God; for the people of God the Iſraelites in their moſt flouriſhing eſtate neuer had ſuch ſoueraigntie ouer other Countries, but by voluntarie ſubiection, as in Salomons daies, 1.King.4.21. the Kings round about brought preſents vnto him;) but becauſe the Lord turned and vſed this their large and mightie dominion to the good of his Church; for Cyrus was a defender of the Church, againſt all that bare euill will thereat: and the large Empire of the Romans ſerued very commodiouſly for the propagation of the Goſpell. Thirdly, the Ieſuite ſheweth his skill, when hee ſaith, that the regiment of the Church is eaſier then the gouernment of the Common-wealth: Whereas there is no greater and waightier burthen vpon earth, then is the charge of ſoules. It ſeemeth the Pope taketh his eaſe, finding the care of the Church to bee ſo eaſie and pleaſant a thing: indeed as hee vſeth it, it is no great matter; for hee preacheth not, but giueth himſelfe to eaſe and idleneſſe, and all princely pleaſures. But England hath found by experience, and ſo did that worthie and famous Prince King Henrie the eight, that there was neuer matter ſo hardly compaſſed, as was the reformation of the Church, and the ſuppreſſion of idolatrie and ſuperſtition in this land. Saint Chryſoſtome better knew the waightie charge of a Biſhop, then any of the Popes that preach not, or then the Ieſuite ſeemeth to vnderſtand: he writeth clean contrary, Eſſe difficilius Epiſcopum agere, quàm regem: That it was an harder matter to bee a Biſhop then a King,&c. And againe; the whole world hath but one Emperour, Vnius vrbis Epiſcopus eſt,&c. A Biſhop is but ouer one citie, but his care is ſo much the greater, as a tempeſtuous ſea exceedeth a ſmall riuer troubled with the winde, Hom.8.in Acta. This godly father ſheweth the vanitie of the Ieſuites argument, that an example from the Ciuile ſtate is not to be taken for Eccleſiaſticall gouernment. And how impoſſible it is for one man to manage all the buſineſſe of the Church, one of your owne Popes thus complainingly writeth: Boniſac.8.Extrau.commun.lib.3.tit.6.c.2. Multis arduis, quaſi torrens pregrauamur negotijs,&c. We are ouercharged with multitude of buſineſſe, as a brooke that runneth downe with many waters,&c. Wherefore Auguſtine thus ſaith, Nemo noſtrûm ſe Epiſcopum Epiſcoporum conſtituit, aut quaſi tyrannico terrore ad obſequendi neceſſitatem collegas ſuos adigit. de Baptiſ.l.3. None of vs doth count himſelfe a Biſhop ouer other Biſhops, or taketh vpon him after a commanding manner, as tyrants vſe, to enforce his fellowes to obey. Ergo, by his iudgement all Biſhops are of like and equall authority.

Argum.3. The Apoſtle deſcribing the Hierarchie of the Church, ſaith, that Chriſt hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets,&c. he ſaith not, he hath ordained one chiefe Biſhop. And againe one body, one ſpirit, one baptiſme, one faith: he ſaith not, one Pope,&c. Epheſ.4.11.

Epheſ.4.11.

Bellarmine anſwereth. 1. That the chiefe gouernment of the Church was committed to all the Apoſtles while they liued: but after the death of the Apoſtles, the Apoſtolike authoritie remained in Peters ſucceſſor onely, and ſo the Pope is ſignified in the Apoſtles, reſp.ad argum.2.

Contra. Firſt, why ſhould not the reſt of the Apoſtles haue power as well as Peter, to leaue their authority to their ſucceſſors, as S. Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.9.5. Haue wee not power,&c. as well as Cephas to leade a ſiſter [a] a wife,&c. As he had power equall to Peter in this particular, ſo in the reſt alſo. Secondly, if Peter left the gouernment Apoſtolicall to his ſucceſſor, what doe you thinke of S.Iohn, the ſuruiuer of the Apoſtles, had he alſo reſigned his Apoſtleſhip to Peters ſucceſſor, for he liued after Peter? Thirdly, there were other Seas alwaies as well counted Apoſtolicall, as Rome: Syricius epiſtol.4.can.1. Extra conſcientiam ſedis Apoſtolicæ,&c. That no man ſhould take vpon him to ordaine a Biſhop, without the knowledge of the Apoſtolike Sea: meaning the Primate or Metropolitane. By your Popes teſtimonie, euery Primate is Apoſtolicall.

1.Cor.9.5.

[a] Great out-cries are here made by a Popiſh cauiller, becauſe wee reade ſo, rather then a ſiſter a woman, which were ſuperfluous, for a ſiſter implieth a woman: ſo ſaith Reioſh.p.218.

Bellarm.2. The Pope is comprehended in theſe words; one bodie, one ſpirit: for as the body is knit in one obedience to the head, ſo the Church to the Pope.

Contra. Firſt, by this reaſon the Church ſhall be the Popes bodie, which the Ieſuite denied before. Secondly, he hath vttered a great blaſphemie: for that which the Apoſtle attributeth onely to Chriſt, by whom all the body being coupled,&c. Epheſ.4.16. he giueth to the Pope.

We may adioyne vnto this that hath been alleaged, certaine reaſons out of Biſhop Longlands Sermon, which he preached before the King: who although in his time he were a great perſecutor of the flocke of Chriſt, yet herein he held the truth: that there can be no other head or Monarch of the vniuerſall Church, but Chriſt: thus he ſheweth it: Chriſt onely is the great Prophet: ſo the Angell declared vnto Mary, Magnus vocabitur, he ſhall be called great, Luk.1. And againe, Propheta magnus ſurrexit inter nos, a great Prophet is riſen amongſt vs, Luk.7. Sin maketh a man ſmall and little, vertue and holineſſe maketh him great. No man was euer without ſinne but Chriſt: Ergo, hee onely was the great Prophet. The Pope nor yet any mortall man, cannot forgiue ſin, as this Biſhop doth; nor iuſtifie as he doth; neither enter into Sancta Sanctorum with his owne blood, as hee did: therefore no mortall man can be this great biſhop: Hac ille, Fox. pag.1100.col.1.

Loe, ſee what antiquitie ſaith, Tharaſius patriarch of Conſtantinople preſident of the ſeuenth generall Councell thus writeth, Epiſtol.ad Adrianum Papam. Nos accipientes venerandos viros legatos veſtros ad ipſam Metropolim venimus: & omnibus nobis ſedentibus, eligere nobis caput; nempe ipſum Chriſtum viſum eſt. We together with your reuerend Legates came to the Metropolis or chiefe City of Nice, and ſitting all together, it ſeemed good to chuſe vs an head, euen Chriſt, &c. Hee acknowledgeth no head of the vniuerſall Church but Chriſt.

Laſtly, in defence of this article Iohn Huſſe gaue his life: Non eſt ſcintilla apparentiæ, quod oporteat eſſe vnum caput in ſpiritualibus regens Eccleſiam: There is no appearance or likelihood of truth, that there ought to be one head in ſpirituall things to gouerne the Church. Chriſtus ſine talibus capitibus monſtruoſis per ſuos veraces Diſcipulos ſparſos per orbem terrarum, melius ſuam eccleſiam regulauit: Chriſt without ſuch monſtrous heads did better gouerne his Church by his true Diſciples diſperſed ouer the world: Articul.27.obiect.Conſtantienſ.Concil.

I will adde the teſtimonies of other Churches. 1. That one Monarch ought not to bee ouer the whole Church: The Greeke Church to this day is of opinion; as Nilus the Archbiſhop ſheweth out of the Canons of the fourth generall Councell, where it was decreed, Can.9. that if any Biſhop had any controuerſie with his Metropolitane he ſhould goe to the gouernour of the Dioceſſe, or to the Sea of the princely citie of Conſtantinople, and there be iudged. This Synode maketh the Patriarchall Sea of Conſtantinople the laſt refuge of all controuerſies of thoſe parts, and ſendeth them not to the Romane Eccleſiaſticall Monarch, that would be.

Nilus lib.2.de primat.p.71.

2. The ſame is the iudgement and practiſe of the Æthiopike Church, which to this day, doe elect and chuſe their great Patriarke, whom they call Abuna, from the Church of Alexandria, as Zaga Zabo ſheweth in the confeſſion of the faith of their Church: which is agreeable to the ſixth Canon of the πάντων τούτων ἔχειν ἐξουσίαν. the firſt Nicene Councell, that in Egypt, Lybia, Pentapolis, the Biſhop of Alexandria ſhould exerciſe iuriſdiction ouer all theſe: The ſame Canon giueth the like power vnto the Patriarches of Rome and Antioch, and to other chiefe Churches in their prouinces.

Harmon. ſect. 10. pag. 330. 3 The reformed Churches thus deliuer their opinion. Wirtemberg: If the Biſhop of Rome were a godly man, and did teach the Goſpell of Chriſt, then he had a miniſterie of high authoritie on earth, to wit, a miniſterie of remitting and retaining ſinnes. But hee alone ſhould not haue this miniſterie, but hee hath it in common with all thoſe, who by a lawfull calling doe preach the Goſpell of Chriſt, &c. French confeſſion, artic. 31. We beleeue that all true Paſtors, in what place ſoeuer they be placed, haue the ſame and equall authoritie among themſelues giuen vnto them vnder Ieſus Chriſt the onely head, and the chiefe, and alone vniuerſall Biſhop, and that therefore it is not lawfull for any Church to challenge vnto it ſelfe dominion or ſoueraigntie ouer any other Church. Harm. ſect. 11. pag. 359.

Quod qui tenet, eſt præcurſor Antichriſti. 4 Gregorie the firſt, miſliketh that any ſhould be called Vniuerſall Biſhop, which title Iohn Patriarch of Conſtantinople arrogated to himſelfe: he ſaith, hee that holdeth it, is the forerunner of Antichriſt. Epiſt. 34. and thus he writeth to Iohn Patriarch of Conſtantinople: Quid in Chriſto vniuerſalis eccleſiæ capiti, &c. What wilt thou anſwere vnto Chriſt, the head of the vniuerſall Church, in the examination of the laſt day, qui cuncta eius membra tibi conaris vniuerſalis appellatione ſupponere, which doſt ſeeke to bring vnder to thy ſelfe al his members vnder the title of vniuerſality, &c. This Biſhop of Rome was of opinion, that there could not, neither ought to be one vniuerſall paſtor in earth of the whole Church. Lib. 6. epiſt. 24.

THE SECOND QVESTION, WHETHER PETER were the chiefe, and Prince of the Apoſtles, and aſſigned by Chriſt to be head of the Church.

The Papiſts.

38. Error. THis our aduerſaries doe ſtiffely maintaine, that he was not onely head of the Church, but of the Apoſtles alſo, Bellarm. lib. 1. de pontif. cap. 11. And the Rhemiſts doubt not to call him the chiefe and Prince of the Apoſtles, 1. Cor. 9. verſ. 5.

Argum. 1. We will omit many of their waightie arguments, as out of theſe and ſuch like places: I haue prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith ſhould not faile: Caſt foorth thy net into the deepe, I will make thee a Fiſher of men: Peter paied toll for Chriſt and himſelfe: Peter drew the net to the land full of great fiſh: Peter onely drew out his ſword in the defence of Chriſt. Ergo, Peter was the Prince of the Apoſtles and head of the Church. ex concil. Baſilien. Fox. pag. 673. col. 1. Pag. 61[illegible]

Such other goodly arguments our Rhemiſts doe make: Peter did excommunicate Ananias and Sapphira: he healed the ſicke by his ſhadow: Ergo, he was the head of the Church, Annot. 5. Act. ſect. 5. 8. Againe, Peters perſon was guarded with foure quaternions of Souldiours, Act. 12. 4. the Church prayed for him, ibid. ſect. 4. Paul nameth him Cephas, 1. Cor. 9. 5. Ergo, he was chiefe of the Apoſtles. Are not here goodly arguments thinke you? To theſe reaſons I neede make no other anſwere, then that which our learned Countrie-man doth in his Annotations. You muſt, ſaith he, bring better arguments, or elſe children will laugh you to ſcorne, Fulk. Annot. Act. 5. ſect. 5. Let vs ſee therefore if they haue any better. Acts 12. 4.

Matth. 16. 18. Argum. 2. They take that to be a maine inuincible place for them, Matth. 16. 18. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I build my Church: Ergo, the Church is built vpon Peter.

To make this argument the more ſtrong, they ſet vnder it diuers props: Firſt, why did Chriſt giue Peter this name more then to any other of the Apoſtles, to call him Peter, of Petra a Rock, but to ſhew that he was appointed to be the foundation of the Church? Bellar. cap. 17. We anſwere, Chriſt hereby ſignified, that Peter ſhould be a principall pillar of his Church, as the reſt of the Apoſtles, Epheſ. 2. 20. He changed alſo the names of ſome other Apoſtles, as Iames and Iohn were called Boanerges, the ſonnes of thunder, Mark. 3. Therefore this was no ſuch preeminence to Peter: neither is it true that Peter was almoſt called by no other name, for hee is often in the Goſpell after this called by his old name Simon, Matth. 16. 17. and 17. 25. Fulk. Annot. in Ioh. 1. ſect. 7. Secondly, againe (ſaith Bellarmine) the text is ædificabo, I will build my Church: but if Chriſt bee here taken for the rocke, his Church was built alreadie, for many beleeued in him. But Peter was not made the foundation of his Church, till afterward after his reſurrection, and therefore he ſaith, I will build. Epheſ. 2. 20.

We anſwere. Firſt, it is a corrupt gloſſe, to ſay the Church of Chriſt was not builded, till after the reſurrection: for ſeeing that many beleeued before in Chriſt, and made a Church, either they muſt graunt, that the Church was without a foundation, or elſe, that the foundation was changed from Chriſt to Peter. Secondly, it is taken therefore for the enlarging and increaſing of the Church of God. It followeth not, becauſe Chriſt ſaith, I will build, and his Church was begun to be built alreadie, that therefore another kind of building muſt be excogitate: no more then, becauſe Chriſt gaue his ſpirit to the Apoſtles, Matth. 10. 1. and againe, Ioh. 20. 22. and yet biddeth them ſtay at Ieruſalem till they ſhould receiue the holy Ghoſt, Acts 1. 7. that therefore they ſhould looke for another holy Ghoſt, or as though they had not receiued the holy Ghoſt before. But as the ſending of the holy Ghoſt, is meant for the increaſe and more plentifull meaſure thereof, ſo is the building of the Church here taken for the increaſe of the building.

We yet further anſwere with Auguſtine: Super hanc petram, quam confeſſus es, ædificabo eccleſiam: vpon this rocke, which thou haſt confeſſed, will I build my Church: So that in this place is meant not Peter to be the rocke: but either Chriſt, whom he confeſſed, or his faith, whereby hee confeſſed him; which commeth all to one effect. There is no great difference, whether we ſay, the Church is builded vpon Chriſt, or faith is the foundation of the Church, for faith is an apprehenſion of Chriſt: but of the perſon of Peter it can no more be vnderſtood then of the reſt of the Apoſtles, who in ſome ſenſe are called the foundation of the Church, namely in reſpect of their holy Apoſtolike doctrine, vpon the which the Church is built, Epheſ.2.20. Tract.vlt.in Iohann.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites denie not, but here is relation alſo to the faith of Peter, but faith conſidered in his perſon. We anſwere: if they meane Peters particular faith, which was a proper adiunct to himſelfe, the vniuerſall Church cannot be built vpon that faith, ſeeing when Peter died, his faith alſo, as a proper accident to his perſon, ceaſed: if they vnderſtand that generall faith, whereby Peter in the name of all the reſt made this confeſſion: then they all are as well made pillars and foundations of the Church, as he, becauſe it was their generall confeſſion, Fulk.annot.in 16. *Matth.ſect.*8.

Let vs now ſee how the holy Martyrs haue vnderſtood this place, Thou art Peter: &c. Firſt, Iohn Huſſe thus interpreteth this place: that Chriſt in ſaying, vpon this rocke, &c. did not purpoſe to build the Church vpon Peter, but vpon himſelfe, who is the true Rocke: for as much as Ieſus Chriſt is the onely head and foundation of euery Church, and not Peter, Fox.pag.610.*reſp.ad articul.*9. Pag.561.1.50.

Sir Iohn Borwike Knight, condemned for the truth in Scotland, anno 1540. thus declareth his minde: As Abraham tooke his name of the multitude, which ſhould come of his ſeede, ſo Peter was named of the rocke; but Abraham was not the multitude it ſelfe, no more was Peter the rocke: for the Church ſhould be ſtaied vpon a weak foundation if Peter were the ground thereof, who being amazed and ouercome with the words of a little wench, did ſo conſtantly deny Chriſt, Fox.p.1260.col.2. Pag.1148.2.50.

Biſhop Ridley Martyr agreeth in the ſame expoſition: Chriſt ſaid vnto Peter, vpon this rocke of thy confeſſion I will build my Church: for this beleefe that Chriſt is the ſonne of God, is the foundation of Chriſtianitie, and the foundation of the Church: Chriſts Church is not built then vpon the frailtie of man, but vpon the ſtable, and infallible word of God, Fox.pag.1758.col.2. Pag.1596.1.70.

See the conſent alſo of antiquitie: Fabianus B. of Rome, Epiſtol.3. In eccleſia ſupra petram ſtatur, dum confeſſionis ſoliditas humiliter tenetur: In the Church, we then ſtand vpon the rocke, while wee hold the ſound confeſſion of faith with humilitie.

Fabianus epiſtol.ad Zenonem imperator. vpon theſe words: Tu es Petrus, thus writeth: Super iſta confeſſione ædificabo eccleſiam meam: I will build my Church vpon this confeſſion, and the gates of hell, &c.

Concil.Baſilienſ. oration ad Bohemos in appendice. Super hanc petram, ſcilicet fidei, ædificabo eccleſiam: I will build my Church vpon this rocke (that is to ſay) of faith, &c. Thus we ſee, that thoſe ancient Biſhops of Rome, and former Councels haue expounded this text, no otherwiſe then wee doe now.

S. Ambroſe is a notable witneſſe in this caſe: Petrus primatum confeſſionis accepit, non honoris, &c. Peter receiued the primacie of Confeſſion, not of honour, the primacie of faith not of order, hee anſwered before the other, nay for the other Apoſtles: *de incarnat.cap.*4. And againe, *cap.*5. Fides eſt Eccleſiæ fundamentum. Faith is the foundation of the Church: for it was not ſpoken of Peters fleſh, but of his faith, that the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile againſt him, &c.

And Origen hath an excellent place to this purpoſe: *Tract.*1. in Matth. Petra eſt quiſquis, &c. Euery Diſciple of Chriſt, that drinketh of the ſpirituall rocke, is this Peter or rocke: for if wee thinke that the Church is built vpon Peter alone, what ſhall we ſay of Iohn the ſonne of thunder, and of the reſt of the Apoſtles? ſhall we dare to ſay, that the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt Peter onely? &c. Thus theſe Fathers expound this place, not of Peters perſon, but of his faith.

*Argum.*5. Another place, which our aduerſaries mightily vrge, are thoſe words which follow verſ. 19. I will giue vnto thee the keyes of the Kingdome of Heauen; whatſoeuer thou ſhalt bind in earth, ſhall be bound in Heauen: Ergo, Peter had eſpeciall iuriſdiction giuen him more then any of the reſt, *Bellarmine cap.*12. Matth.16.19.

We anſwere. Firſt, as Peter confeſſed in the name of al the reſt, ſo this power is giuen him not onlie for the reſt (as the Rhemiſts falſely charge vs, that we make Peter a proctor for others) but together with the reſt. Peters perſon muſt be excluded: for immediatly after he deſerued for a certaine ſlip of his perſon to be called Satan: it were an vnfit match, the ſame perſon at the ſame time to bee honoured with the glorious title of the rocke of Chriſt, and to ſuſtaine ſo great a rebuke as to bee called Satan. Secondly, here is no more promiſed to Peter then vnto all the reſt of the Apoſtles, Mat. 18.18. They likewiſe haue authoritie giuen them to bind and looſe; and it is performed to them all alike, Iohn 20.23. Matth.18.18. Iohn 20.23.

3 By the keyes here cannot bee vnderſtood that large iuriſdiction which the Papiſts dreame of, as not onely the authoritie and chaire of doctrine, iudgement, knowledge, diſcretion betweene true and falſe doctrine, all which wee grant together with Peter to haue been giuen to all the Apoſtles beſides: But, ſay they, hereby is ſignified the height of gouernement, the power of making lawes, of calling Councels and confirming them, of ordaining Biſhops and Paſtors, finally to diſpenſe the goods of the Church ſpirituall and temporall: All this is added without ground, neither had either Peter or any of the Apoſtles this ample authoritie, no nor the Biſhops of Rome for many hundred yeeres after Chriſt. For this plenarie power of the keyes, when they ſignifie a ſoueraigne and chiefe, and ſurpaſſing power, are ſo only giuen vnto Chriſt, and to no mortall creature: He is ſaid to haue the key of Dauid, who openeth and no man ſhutteth; who ſhutteth, and no man openeth, Apocalyps 3.7. Fulk. Annot. 16. Matth. ſect. 23.

Laſtly, I will oppoſe the iudgement of the fathers of Baſil, who alleage out of Auguſtine, that Peter receiued the keyes for the whole Church; and out of Ambroſe, that when Chriſt ſaid to Peter, paſce oues, the bleſſed Apoſtle tooke not charge of them alone, ſaith he, but together with vs, and we together with him, Fox pag.675.col.1.

It ſhall not be amiſſe alſo to adioyne the opinion of the holy Martyrs, concerning the true ſenſe of this place: I will giue vnto thee the keyes, &c.

Firſt, Thomas Benet Martyr, he ſaid that, as well to the reſt, as to Peter: for Peter had no more authoritie giuen him then the other Apoſtles: or elſe the Churches planted in euery kingdome by their preaching, are no Churches. S. Paul alſo ſaith, vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Epheſ.2.20. that is, indifferently vpon them all, Fox pag.1039.col.1.

Pag.948.1.50.

Sir Iohn Bortwike confeſſor of the truth in Scotland, and condemned for the ſame; he alleageth out of Auguſtine, that Peter, when he receiued the keyes, did figurate the whole Church: for as Peter, all being demanded, anſwered for them all, thou art Chriſt; ſo hee receiued this power for them all, and in the name of the reſt, Fox pag.1260.col.1. So anſwereth alſo Maſter Lambert Martyr, alleaging to that purpoſe the authoritie of Cyprian [illegible] 3. pag.1119.col.1.

Pag.1148.2.30

Maſter Philpot Martyr ſaith, that Peter receiued the keyes in the name of the reſt: citing a place out of Auguſtine to that end: Si hoc Petro ſolum dictum eſt, non habet Eccleſia; ſi autem Eccleſia habet, quando claues accepit, totam Eccleſiam deſignauit: If it were ſaid only to Peter, then the Church hath not this power: but if the whole Church haue this power, namely to binde and looſe; then Peter, when he receiued the keyes, repreſented the whole Church &c. 50. tract. in Iohann. Philpot, pag.1804. col.2.

For the meaning of this text alſo, we haue the conſent of ſome Counceſs: Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap.9. ex Iſidor. Cæteri Apoſtoli cum Petro par conſortium honoris & poteſtatis acceperunt: The reſt of the Apoſtles together with Peter receiued the like fellowſhip of dignitie and authoritie.

Synod. Colonienſ. ſub Adolpho: Medium 6. cap.1. vpon theſe words, Tibi dabo claues, &c. do comment thus: Quam promiſſionem non ad vnum Petrum pertinere ſed in omnes Apoſtolos tranſmiſſam alio loco dicit Chriſtus vbi inſinuat, Amen dico vobis, &c. Matth. 18.18. Chriſt in ſaying to Peter, I will giue thee the keyes, &c. did not make that promiſe only to Peter, but that it belongeth alſo to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Chriſt doth ſhew, Mat.18. Verily I ſay vnto you, whatſoeuer you binde in earth, ſhall be bound in heauen, &c. Thus alſo S. Hierome expoundeth this place, lib.1. aduerſ. Iouinian. But thou wilt ſay, Super Petrum fundatur Eccleſia, &c. The Church is founded vpon Peter: yet in another place, the ſame thing is done to all the Apoſtles, and all receiued the keyes of the kingdome of heauen: & ex æquo ſuper eos, and equally vpon them all the ſtrength of the Church is eſtabliſhed. So Origine alſo long before him interpreteth: tract.1. in Matth, An verò ſoli Petro, &c. Are the keyes of the kingdome giuen only to Peter, and none of the bleſſed beſide ſhall receiue them? &c. Wherefore if this be common to the reſt, how not the other ſayings alſo, &c.

*Argum.*4. Other arguments they alleage for the primacie and preeminence of Peter, as Matth.10. he is named in the firſt place, *Bellarm. cap.*18. We anſwere, this might be, becauſe Peter was the moſt ancient in yeeres, or one of the firſt that was called: and ſo S. Hierome ſaith, asking the queſtion why Peter was preferred before Iohn: Ætati delatum eſt, quia ſenior erat: His age was preferred becauſe he was the elder. But howſoeuer it was, it is no great matter: for this order is not alway kept, as Galath.2. Paul nameth Iames firſt; Iames, Cephas, Iohn, ſaith he, verſ.9. the Ieſuits beſt ſhift is heere to denie the text, ſaying it ſhould be read, Cephas, Iames, Iohn: vnleſſe Iames bee named firſt, becauſe he was Biſhop of Ieruſalem. Marke, I pray you: Ergo, at Ieruſalem Peter was not before Iames, but next vnto him: therefore not prince of the Apoſtles.

Lib.1.aduerſ. Iouinian.

But for a more full anſwere as touching this obiection of the firſt naming of Peter: firſt I denie, that hee is alwaies named firſt, as in the place alleaged. And againe it is euident, that the Scripture doth not perpetually obſerue the ſame order in ſuch rehearſals, as Apocal.26.19. The twelue Apoſtles are compared to twelue precious ſtones, whereof the Iaſper is the firſt, but Exod.28.20. where the twelue precious ſtones are named, which ſhould be ſet in Aarons breaſt-plate, the Iaſper ſtone is the laſt. If the Iaſper for the dignitie thereof doe ſignifie Peter in the Apocalypſe, how is it placed laſt in Exodus? So then we may here ſay with Origene who thus writeth of the order of the twelue Patriarkes: Sciendum eſt, quod in ſingulis locis, &c. It is to be marked, that euery where, where the Scripture maketh mention of the Patriarkes, there is great diuerſitie in the order: there is one order obſerued in their [1] natiuitie, another in their [2] going downe into Egypt; another when they are [3] bleſſed of Iacob; another when they are [4] numbred to do any thing in the wildernes; another, when the land of [5] Canaan was diuided, &c. after the ſame manner when the twelue Apoſtles are named, they are not alway ſet downe in the ſame order. Bellarmine obiecteth, that Peter euery where is named med firſt, though the reſt be not ſet down alwaies in one order, cap. 18. Cont. So Ruben is the firſt named of all the Patriarkes in thoſe fiue ſeuerall places noted by Origene. He is firſt borne, firſt entreth into Egypt, firſt bleſſed, firſt numbred, firſt diuided: yet Ruben for all this was not the chiefe among the Patriarkes: neither by this reaſon ſhall Peter be the greateſt among the Apoſtles.

Againe, ſay they, Peter ſtandeth vp in the election of Matthias, Acts 1. preacheth the firſt Sermon, Acts 2. Acts 15. Peter ſpeaketh firſt. We anſwere to the firſt: We denie not a primacie of order to haue been in Peter: but it followeth not, that he which ſpeaketh firſt, or giueth the firſt voyce, ſhould bee the head and commander of the reſt. To the ſecond, we alſo grant that Peter in zeale, promptnes and forwardnes, was not behinde any of the Apoſtles, but euen with the firſt: for in him was that ſaying of Chriſt verified vpon the woman: She loued much, becauſe much was forgiuen her, Luke 7. ſo was it with Peter, to whom Chriſt forgaue much, and therefore he loued much. To the third we anſwere, that by the Ieſuites owne confeſſion, Iames, who was (as they ſay) Biſhop of Ieruſalem, had the primacie there: how then can they now giue it to Peter? That Iames was the Biſhop of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, it is affirmed alſo by Stephen Gardener in his book de vera obedientia, by the teſtimonie of Euſebius, and by Biſhop Stokeſly and Biſhop Tonſtal, out of Clement Alexandrinus, who thus writeth: Petrus, Iacobus, Iohannes, poſt aſſumptionem Saluatoris, quamuis ab ipſo fuerant omnibus pene prælati, tamen non ſibi vendicarunt gloriam, ſed Iacobum apoſtolorum epiſcopum ſtatuunt: Peter, Iames and Iohn, after Chriſts aſcenſion into heauen, although they were by him preferred almoſt before all other, yet they chalenged not that glorie to themſelues, but decreed Iames to bee the chiefe of the Apoſtles: Epiſtol. ad Reginald. Polum. Fox pag. 1066. col. 1. Luke 7.47. Pag.973.1.10.

There is another place, beſide theſe alreadie alleaged, which our aduerſaries commonly obiect for the primacie of Peter: for that Chriſt ſhould ſay vnto him thrice, paſce oues meas, feed my ſheepe, that is, rule and gouerne them.

To this anſwereth, firſt Walter Brute an ancient confeſſor of the truth: that Chriſt ſaid vnto him thrice, feede my ſheepe: becauſe hee preached chiefly vnto three Churches, and inſtructed them in the faith: namely, the Iewes, Grecians, and Romanes.

Doctor Tonſtal out of Cyrillus thus alleageth: that becauſe Peter had thrice denied Chriſt, whereby hee thought hee had loſt his Apoſtleſhip, Chriſt by thrice asking if he loued him, reſtored him to his office againe; pag. 1062. col. 1. So in your decrees, p. 2. c. 6. queſt. 1. c. 10. Peter becauſe he denied Chriſt thrice, doth alſo confeſſe him thrice. Pag.969.1.80.

Againe, Sir Iohn Borthwike Knight condemned for the truth, ſaith, that to feed the flocke of Chriſt ſignifieth not to beare rule or dominion ouer them: for in the ſame words he exhorteth all other paſtors to feede their flock, 1. epiſt. 5. Whereby it appeareth, that either our Sauiour Chriſt gaue no ſuch authoritie to Peter more then to others, or that Peter did equally communicate that right to others: pag. 1261. col. 1. reſponſ. ad articul. 1. See the anſwere alſo of Maſter Bradford to the ſame effect, epiſt. ad Domin. Vanam, pag. 1647. Pag.1148.2.70. Pag.1496.2.20

The Proteſtants.

THat Peter had no ſuch iudiſdiction ouer the Apoſtles, as to bee called the head and prince of them: but that to them all indifferently were the keyes committed, and did all faithfully execute their Apoſtleſhip without any ſubiection of each to other, but ioyned the right hands of fellowſhip together: we thus confirme it out of the holy Scripture, and neceſſarie arguments deriued out of the ſame.

Argum. 1. Epheſ. 2. 20. Apocalyp. 21. 14. The Church is ſaid to be built vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles: Ergo, no primacie of power amongſt the Apoſtles, they all founded the Church. Epheſ.2.20. Reuel.21.14.

Bellarmine confeſſeth that in reſpect of their doctrine, there was no difference betweene Peter and the reſt, for they all were firſt planters of Churches, they all preached the Goſpell by reuelation: but in reſpect of gouernment, they were not equall: they had chiefe authoritie committed to them as Apoſtles and Embaſſadors of Chriſt; but Peter, as ordinary paſtor. Bellarm. cap. 11.

We anſwere: Firſt, by his owne confeſſion the Apoſtles had chiefe authoritie as Apoſtles, but there was no higher authoritie or power then of the Apoſtleſhip. But as they were Apoſtles they were equall (ſaith the Ieſuite:) Ergo, there could be no ſuperioritie; for the calling of the Apoſtles was the higheſt in the Church. See alſo your owne decrees, where that ſentence of S. Cyprian is allowed, Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 1. c. 18. Hoc erant vtique cæteri Apoſtoli, &c. The reſt of the Apoſtles were the ſame that Peter was, hauing the like fellowſhip of honour and power.

Argum. 2. To preach the Goſpell, and to haue iuriſdiction of gouernment, doe both belong to the power of the keyes: but the keyes were equally committed to all: Ergo, they had all equall power both to preach and to gouerne. That they all had the power of the keyes equally granted vnto them, we haue proued before out of Matth. 18. 18.

Bellarmine himſelfe confeſſeth, that Iames was Biſhop and ordinary Paſtor at Ieruſalem, and ſaith with Anſelme and Thomas Aquinas, that therefore he is named firſt by S. Paul, Gal. 2. Bellarm. cap. 19. Therefore at Ieruſalem Peter was to giue primacie to the ordinarie paſtor there.

If they anſwere, that Rome was then the chiefe Citie, and therefore Peter being Biſhop of Rome was to haue the preeminence, To this we replie: that Ieruſalem was rather to be preferred in reſpect of place, which was choſen by the Lord himſelfe, to bee the chiefe citie of his Church: but Rome through the tyrannie and vſurpation of the Romanes ouer other countries was aduanced to that dignitie, not by the election of God.

But Bellarmine anſwereth, that Peter was Biſhop of the whole Church, and ſo of Ieruſalem too. We anſwere, hee now ſaith leſſe for Peter, then if hee called him, as hee was, the Apoſtle of the whole world: for it was more to be an Apoſtle then a Biſhop. Diuers were called in the Apoſtles times, epiſcopi, ouerſeers, or Biſhops, that were not Apoſtles, as the paſtors of Epheſus, Acts 20.28. Wherefore now hee hath ſaid iuſt nothing: in ſeeking to aduance Peter, hee hath diſgraced him, in pulling him downe from his high Apoſtleſhip, to the chaire of a Biſhop. See alſo your owne decrees, part.2.cauſ.24.qu.1.c.4.in gloſſ. Vnde cum omnibus Diſcipulis, &c. Seeing that Chriſt gaue to all his Diſciples the like power of binding, and looſing, &c. Yea your owne maſter alloweth that ſaying of S. Hierome: Habuit eandem iudiciariam poteſtatem alij, &c. The other Apoſtles had the ſame iudiciarie power, ib.quæſt.19.c.

Argum.3. Peter had no ſuperioritie ouer Paul, for they ioyned right hands of fellowſhip: and this allotment was made betweene them, that Paul ſhould be the chiefe of the Gentiles, and Peter of the circumciſion, Galath.2.9. Ergo.

Galath.2.9.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, they were ioyned as fellow-labourers in the preaching of the Goſpell: but Peter might for all this be greater in the office and power of gouerning. We anſwere: yea, but the text ſaith, that Paul only was not appointed to preach to the Gentiles, but he had the chiefe Apoſtleſhip. Now to the Apoſtleſhip belongeth, not onely the function of preaching, but the whole vſe of the keyes, and power of iuriſdiction. Ergo, in al reſpects S. Paul ouer the Gentiles had the chiefe Apoſtleſhip.

But leſt any man ſay, that this was an humane compact amongſt themſelues, and Paul had his lot at Peters aſſignement: the text ſheweth, that the Lord himſelfe had made this diſtribution. For when they ſaw, ſaith S. Paul, that the Goſpell ouer the vncircumciſion was committed to me, verſ.7. So then the Apoſtles did but confirme by their conſent, that diſtribution, which they ſaw the Lord himſelfe had appointed.

Further, ſaith the Ieſuite, the diuiſion was not ſo made, but that it was lawfull for Peter alſo to preach to the Gentiles. We anſwere, we grant it; and for Paul to preach to the Iewes; yet that diſtinction remained ſtill, that Peter was chiefe of the circumciſion, Paul of the vncircumciſion.

Againe, ſaith hee: but Peter had the more excellent lot, for Chriſt himſelfe firſt preached to the Iewes. Wee anſwere, wee denie not but that hee had the firſt lot in order; for to the Iewes was the Goſpell firſt offered: but Paul had the larger and more glorious lot: the Church of the Iewes now decaying, and the Gentiles beginning to bee planted in their roome. But howſoeuer it was, it cannot be denied, but that Paul was chiefe towards the Gentiles: And therefore the Church of Rome might with better right haue deriued their authoritie from S. Paul, then from S. Peter: both of them they cannot make patrons of their Sea: ſeeing by their owne rules the Pope cannot be ſucceſſor to them both.

Galath.2.9.

Heare alſo how notably to our purpoſe S. Ambroſe expoundeth this place, writing vpon this verſe, Galath.2.9. Petrum ſolum nominat, &c. He nameth only Peter, and compareth him with himſelfe; becauſe hee had receiued the primacie to found the Church, and himſelfe was likewiſe elected to haue the primacie in founding the Churches of the Gentiles: yet ſo that both Peter might preach to the Gentiles, and Paul to the Iewes, if there were cauſe: for both of them are found to haue done both: and yet it is knowne that full authoritie was giuen to Peter in preaching to the Iewes, and full authoritie to Paul in preaching to the Gentiles.

Further, out of the ſame place, Galath.2.11. another thing commeth to bee obſerued, that Peter was rebuked of Paul, and in ſuch ſort, that it appeareth there was no great inequalitie between them: for he doth it to his face openly, before all men, and at Antioch, in Peters owne biſhopricke, as they ſay: Can it be now thought that Paul was any thing inferiour to Peter?

Cap.15.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites anſwere, that the Pope may be rebuked of an inferiour, and ought to take it patiently, if it be done in zeale and loue: Bellarm.c.15.

Anſw. Firſt, we doe not ſimply thus conclude, becauſe Paul reprehended Peter, therefore he was not his ſuperiour, but becauſe of the manner, as wee ſhewed: it was done in ſuch ſort, ſo plainly, ſo openly, without any ſubmiſſion or crauing of pardon, that there can appeare no inequalitie at all betweene them. Secondly, although they ſeeme here to grant, that the Pope may be rebuked, yet is it otherwiſe in their Canon law, which ſaith, that though the Pope doe leade innumerable ſoules to hell, no mortall man may preſume to reproue his faults, part.1.diſt.4.c.Si Papa. And howſoeuer the Ieſuite counteth this a light argument, both Hierome and Ambroſe doe enforce it, and your owne decrees allow it, par.2.cauſ.2.qu.7.c.33. Hierome ſaith: Paul doth reprehend Peter, becauſe he knew himſelfe not to be vnequall, &c. And in the gloſſe S. Ambroſe is thus alleaged: Which of them durſt reſiſt Peter, to whom the Lord gaue the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, niſi alius talis, but ſuch another that knew himſelfe, by the confidence of his election, not to be vnequall.

This place in the ſecond to the Galathians is much vrged by ſome of the Papiſts themſelues againſt Peters ſupremacie: for S. Paul ſaying, that as the Apoſtleſhip of the Circumciſion was committed to Peter, ſo the Apoſtleſhip of the Gentiles was giuen to him: hereby ſheweth, that he knew no primacie of Peter ouer the Apoſtles, or the whole world, but onely among the Iewes. This alſo manifeſtly appeareth, for that Peter, being ſent for by Cornelius a Gentile, durſt not goe to him without a ſpeciall viſion from God, Act. 10. thereby declaring, that he had no ſuch primacie giuen him ouer the Gentiles: Hac Tonſtall, in Concion. p. 1062. col. 1. Pag.969.1.30.

Maſter Lambert Martyr groundeth diuers arguments out of this chapter 2. to the Galathians, that Peter was not ſuperiour to S. Paul: firſt, they ioyned with him the right hand of fellowſhip: Ergo, hee was their equall and fellow. Secondly, Iames is named before Peter, which Saint Paul would not haue done, who loued order, if there had beene any ſuch preeminence in Peter. Thirdly, S. Paul reproued S. Peter to his face, which he would not haue done, except he had knowne himſelfe equall to Peter. And as Peter was here reproued by his fellow Apoſtle, ſo was he blamed generally of them of the Circumciſion, who contended againſt him, Act. 11. 2. And yet Peter did not alleage any preeminence or authoritie, or charge them with diſobedience, for rebuking him: Lambert pag. 1120. col. 2. Act.11.2. Pag.1022.1.80.

Maſter Tindal holy Martyr goeth further, and ſheweth, that if there were any oddes or inequalitie at all, S. Paul rather was of higher authoritie, then Saint Peter: becauſe he laboured and preached more than the [a] reſt, and ſuffered [b] more for the teſtimonie of Chriſt.

Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, diſprooueth the ſupremacie of Peter ouer the Apoſtles by this argument: The Apoſtles at Ieruſalem [c] ſent Peter and Iohn to Samaria to confirme them in the Goſpell. Ergo, he was not their chiefe or head: for it had beene an vnmannerly part for the members, to ſend their head in Embaſſage: Brad. in epiſtol. ad Domin. Vanam. p. 1647. Pag.1496.2.30

Iohannes Patriarch of Antioch, opuſcul. in appendice Concil. Balienſ. enforceth the ſame argument: Apoſtoli miſerunt ad Samaritanos Petrum & Iohannem; at maior eſt qui mittit, minor, qui mittitur: The Apoſtles ſent Peter and Iohn to the Samaritanes: but he that ſendeth is the greater, hee that is ſent the leſſe. Ergo. It may be obiected, Petrus miſſus eſt conſilio, non authoritate: Peter was ſent by their counſaile and aduice, not commandement or authoritie: he anſwereth, that not Peter alone was ſent, but Iohn alſo. So then, as Iohn was ſent, in like manner was Peter: the one had no greater preeminence then the other in this Embaſſage.

Argum. 4. Laſtly, what reaſon was there, why Chriſt ſhould giue the ſupremacie to Peter ouer the reſt? Chriſt was no acceptor of perſons: if he had beene, Iohn ſhould haue beene preferred, whom hee loued moſt. If deſerts be weighed, I thinke Peter deſerued no more then the reſt of his fellowes: Nay, I thinke the wiſedome of the ſpirit, fore-ſeeing the queſtions that ſhould afterward ariſe in the Church about Peter, hath ſo diſpoſed, that this Apoſtles infirmities both in number more and weight greater then any of the reſt, ſhould be euidently ſet forth in Scripture. We will briefly runne them ouer, not to derogate from the bleſſed memorie of ſo excellent an Apoſtle; but a little to ſtay and bridle the prepoſterous zeale of our aduerſaries, who doe aſcribe more vnto him, then euer hee would haue chalenged to himſelfe.

To let paſſe the ſmaller ſlips and ſcapes of this Apoſtle, as his raſhneſſe in aduenturing beyond his ſtrength, to walke vpon the Sea, Matth. 14. Secondly, his vnaduiſed ſpeech in the mountaine, Matth. 17. Let vs make three Tabernacles. Thirdly, his ignorance, Matth. 19. in ſaying to Chriſt, How often ſhall I forgiue my brother? till ſeuen times? Fourthly, his impatiencie, as in drawing out his ſword and cutting off Malchus eare. Fifthly, his timorouſneſſe in flying from Chriſt at his apprehenſion. Sixthly, his curioſitie, Iohn 21. in asking concerning Iohn, What ſhall this man doe? To let paſſe theſe as common infirmities: there are foure great faults which Peter fell into, much amplified, and ſtood vpon by the Fathers.

1 Hee dehorted our Sauiour from his paſſion with theſe words, [d] Maſter, fauour thy ſelfe, and was therefore called Sathan, an aduerſarie to the death of Chriſt, and ſo to the redemption of man. Auguſtine chargeth him with great forgetfulneſſe, hauing made ſo notable a confeſſion of Chriſt before, and noteth him for ſome ſparkes of diſtruſt and infidelitie: Ille Petrus, qui iam eum confeſſus fuerat filium Dei, timuit, ne ſicut filius hominis moreretur, in Pſal. 138. The ſame Peter (ſaith he) which a little before had confeſſed him to be the Sonne of God, feared leaſt hee ſhould die and periſh as a man.

2 In promiſing raſhly not to denie Chriſt, yea vnto death, whereas Chriſt had fore-tolde him of his fall before, Auguſtine noteth great preſumption: Petrus ex egregio praſumptore creber negator effectus, Epiſt. 120. cap. 14. Peter of a great preſumer, is become a deſperate denier. And hereof thus your owne decrees, par. 2. cauſ. 6. queſt. 1. cap. 10. Petrus lapſus eſt, &c. Peter did fall, becauſe he preſumed of himſelfe, ſaying, Though other be offended in thee, yet not I. But Origen goeth further, Non ſolum inconſiderate, ſed pene etiam impie, &c. Peter ſaid not onely vnaduiſedly, but almoſt impiouſly, Though all men be offended, &c. tract. 25. in Matth.

3 The third great ſinne was committed by Peter, in denying of Chriſt, and that thrice, yea with an oath, at the inſtance of a mayden, and in a very ſhort while, before the Cocke crew twice. The Ieſuite anſwereth, that this was no hinderance to Peters primacie, but a furtherance and a confirmation of it. But whether it were a let to his primacie or not, let all men iudge, ſeeing it had beene ſufficient to haue hindered his ſaluation, and deſtroyed his faith, without the great mercie of GOD. Expoſit. in Pſal. 140. Tract. in Iohan. 66.

Let vs heare Auguſtines iudgement of Peters fall. Some man may excuſe Peter, and ſay, that hee did nothing, but as Chriſt fore-warned him. What then (ſaith he) if Peter therefore did not amiſſe, becauſe his fall was fore-told by Chriſt: Rectè etiam fecit Iudas, qui tradidit dominum, quia & hoc prædixit dominus? Then Iudas did well too (ſaith he) in betraying of Chriſt, for this alſo Chriſt ſhewed afore? But ſome againe may ſay: he denied not Chriſt, for hee ſaid he knew not the man: Quaſi vero (ſaith he) qui hominem Chriſtum negat non Chriſtum negat: As though he that denieth the man Chriſt, doth not flatly denie Chriſt. Chriſt alſo taketh away all doubts (ſaith he) when he thus ſaid to Peter, The Cocke ſhall not crow till thou haſt denied me thrice: Hee ſaith not, till thou haſt denied the man, but me. Againe, Ipſe potius [illegible] defenſores ſuos: Peter himſelfe doth confute his maintainers and defenders: Agnouit plane peccatum ſuum [illegible] Petri: Peters owne conſcience gaue him that he ſinned, for he went out and wept bitterly, &c. But if by this meanes his primacie was confirmed, he had occaſion to reioyce, and not to weepe. Yea, he wept bitterly, his ſinne was very great: how then dare one of your ſect ſay with a blaſphemous mouth, Petrus non fidem Chriſti, ſed Chriſtum ſalua fide negauit: Peter denied not the faith of Chriſt, but his faith remaining ſafe and ſound, he denied Chriſt? The ancient writers durſt not ſo extenuate Peters fall, no not Peter himſelfe, that wept full ſore, as theſe men preſume to doe. For firſt Origen thus amplifieth Peters fall, Non ad modicum derelictus, &c. Peter was not a little forſaken, to denie once, but he was abundantly forſaken, to denie thrice: firſt he denied him before all, and againe he denied him not ſimply, but with an oath: thirdly, not onely with an oath, but with a ſpeciall depoſition, I know not the man: Tract. 35. in Matth.

Copus. vide Iuel. pag. 665. defenſ. Apolog.

S. Ambroſe goeth further, Hexemer. lib. 5. c. 24. Peter before the Cocke crew falleth; yea the third time he falleth, that you may know that it was not a ſlip onely of his ſpeech, but that he was troubled in minde.

S. Hierome alſo thus writeth: de Vincul. Petri ad Euſtoch. What ſhall I doe, I haue denied my Lord and maſter? neither, as ſome thinke, haue I onely denied the man; I haue denied him to whom I ſaid, thou art Chriſt the ſonne of the liuing God: I haue denied him whom I ſaw walking vpon the waters, whom I heard with his call raiſing vp the dead; whom I ſaw with Moſes and Elias, &c.

And your owne decrees: Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 11. quaſt. 3. cap. 85. The Lord ſaid not to Peter, thou ſhalt denie thee to be my diſciple, but thou ſhalt denie me: wherefore he denied him, when he denied himſelfe to be his diſciple: and what did he elſe but denie himſelfe to be a Chriſtian? Such then and of this nature and qualitie was the fall and deniall of Peter, howſoeuer our aduerſaries goe about to ſeeke colours and defence for it.

4. The laſt fault noted in Peter was that, for the which he is reproued of Paul Galath. 2. Tuſh (ſaith Bellarmine) it was a very ſmall and light offence. Yea, was it ſo ſmall a fault to conſtraine the Gentiles to doe like the Iewes? for this was the point, as S. Paul writeth, Galath. 2. 14. And Auguſtine ſaith, Petrus non obiurgatus à Paulo fuit, quod ſeruabat conſuetudinem Iudæorum, in qua natus & educatus fuit, ſed quod eam gentibus imponere volebat: Expoſit. ad Galat. Peter was not rebuked of Paul, becauſe hee kept the cuſtome of the Iewes, wherein he was brought vp, but becauſe he would lay it vpon the Gentiles, &c. Was this leuiſſimum peccatum, a ſmall tranſgreſſion? S. Paul ſhould greatly haue beene to blame, for rebuking Peter openly, and ſo plainly for ſo ſmall an offence, and ſhould haue done againſt his owne rule, Galathians 6. 1. But Peter did it of a good minde (ſaith Bellarmine.) Yea did? then he was worthie to be excuſed, not worthie of blame, as S. Paul writeth. He might alſo doe it ignorantly and vnwittingly (ſaith he.) How can that be, ſeeing he was one that made the decree, Act. 15. That no yoke ſhould be laid vpon the Gentiles, other then there expreſſed; and now contrarie to that decree, he conſtraineth the Gentiles, Iudaizare, to play the Iewes. Theſe things do not hang together.

Galath. 6. 1. Bellar. cap. 28.

The Rhemiſts ſay, that it was not an error in doctrine or iudgement here reproued in Peter, but a default onely in conuerſation: annot. Galat. 2. verſ. 11. ſect. 9.

Contra 1. One of your owne Biſhops Gelaſius, tom. de Anathemat. Vinculo, is of a contrarie opinion, Sanctus Petrus primus, &c. Holy Peter, the firſt of the Apoſtles, thinking that the grace of the new teſtament ſhould be ſo preached, that he depart not from the inſtitutions of the olde law, did ſomething diſſemblingly, &c. and therefore his fellow Apoſtle doth worthily rebuke him, &c. It was then an error in Peters thought and iudgement.

S. Ambroſe in 2. ad Galat. If Peter had diſſembled onely, it had beene no error, &c. But this was the cauſe of the reprehenſion: Peter did not onely ſeparate himſelfe from thoſe with whom he had liued Gentile-like, but he compelled them to play the Iewes alſo; ſo that the Gentiles were ignorant which was the trueſt way. And your owne gloſſe ſaith, Decr. p. 2. cauſ. 2. quaſt. 7. c. 39. Par eſt à fide exorbitare, &c. It is all one to goe aſide from the faith, and by example or word to turne others from the faith: Ergo, this in Peter was an error in faith.

I will now conclude out of Auguſtine, as he alleageth out of Cyprian: Nec Petrus, &c. cum ſecum Paulus de circumciſione diſceptaret, poſtulauit vindicauit ſibi aliquid inſolenter, vt diceret ſe primatum tenere: de Baptiſ. c. 2. Howſoeuer it was, Peter, &c. when Paul reaſoned thus with him, did not ſtand vpon his patronage, and challenge any primacie to himſelfe, &c. But it is very like, if there had beene any ſuch primacie in Peter of power and iuriſdiction (a primacie of order we grant, as Cyprian in that place calleth Peter, primum, the firſt) that this ſharpe reprehenſion of Paul ſhould either haue beene ſpared, or elſe not done in that vehement manner.

It shall not be out of the way in this place, to see the iudgement of certaine Papists of great account in their time, contrary to the opinion now receiued in the Popes Church.

Thus the Bishop of Winchester reasoneth in his booke de vera obedientia: The scholler ought not to be aboue the master: how could then Peter take that vpon him, to be chiefe, which Christ his master did so constantly refuse?

That Peter was primus, that is, first and chiefe in number of them which confessed Christ, it cannot be denied: for first he confessed, first he taught the Iewes: first he stood in defence of the veritie, and was the first prolocutor among them. A primacie of order we grant, but not a primacie of rule and dominion: he was first in order, but it followeth not therefore that he was the chiefe in dignitie: As it is no good reason, Paris is nominate the first of all Vniuersities: Ergo, they are subiect to it.

Bishop Tonstal also in a certaine sermon, vseth these and suchlike arguments against the supremacie of Peter. Peters person (saith he) could not be the rocke of the Church: for then wee should put another foundation of the Church, then Christ; which were contrarie to S. Paul: No man may put any other foundation, then that which is put alreadie, which is Christ Iesus, 1.Cor.3.

1.Cor.3.11.

So saith he, in the one and twentieth chapter of the Apocalypse, the new citie & heauenly Ierusalem, is described by the holy Ghost, not with one foundation of Peter, but with twelue foundations after the number of the Apostles, *plur. Fox p.*1062.

Pag.969.1.50.

Let vs see the consent of other Churches, that Peter was not the Prince and superiour of the other Apostles. 1. Of the Greeke Church, Ieremie their Patriarke shall speake, Cœli ipsius claues Apostolis, illisq; omnib. &c. Christ credited the keyes of heauen to the Apostles, and to all those which are to succeede in their place. This authoritie was committed no more to Peter, then to the rest. And whereas that place is vrged for Peters supremacie, vpon this rocke will I build my Church, Nilus saith, that Christ built his Church (vpon Peters confession of God) and vpon all those, which shall hold the same profession. Barlaam saith, that euery one of the twelue Apostles receiued the keyes of heauen, (as well as Peter.) And againe, how could Peter be the Prince of the Apostles, seeing (hee did not ordaine them:) yet a primacie of order Peter had to speake in the first place, as in the election of Matthias, and at the comming downe of the holy Ghost: this was his prerogatiue, that others gaue him the honour to speake first. Basile saith vpon these words, Peter louest thou me, feede my sheepe, &c. consequenter omnib. Pastorib. et Doctorib. eandem potestatem tribuit, cuius signum est, quod omnes ex æquo ligant et absoluunt, quemadmodum ille, &c. And consequently he gaue the same power to all Pastors and Doctors, a signe whereof is, that all doe equally binde and loose as well as he, &c.

2 The same is the iudgement of the South Church: Tertullian a Presbyter of Carthage, maketh all the Apostolike Churches planted by the Apostles equall, Omnes primæ, omnes Apostolicæ: They are all first, and all Apostolike. Cyprian Bishop of Carthage, Erant vtiq; et cæteri Apostoli, quod fuit Petrus, &c. The rest of the Apostles were the same that Peter, hauing the like fellowship of honour and power. Augustine here also saith directly: Non a Petro Petra, sed Petrus a Petra, sicut non Christus a Christiano, &c. super hanc Petram, quam confessus es ædificabo ecclesiam, &c. The rocke was not so called of Peter, but Peter of the (Petra) or rocke: as Christ is not called of the Christians but the Christians of Christ, &c. Christ saith, I will build my Church vpon this rocke which thou hast confessed, &c. And againe, Non Petrus solus, sed vniuersa ecclesia ligat soluitq; peccata; Not Peter onely, but the vniuersall Church doth binde and loose. The Aethiopike and South Church at this day maketh Peter and Paul equall as the Emperour Dauid in an Epistle to the Bishop of Rome, speaking of those two Apostles, saith, Hi sunt Domini regni cœlorum, et totius mundi iudices: These are the Lords of the kingdome of heauen, and Iudges of the whole word: hee meaneth, that the Keies of the kingdome of heauen, were committed to the one as well as to the other.

4 Of the Romane Church: Cardinall Cusanus saith: Scimus, quod Petrus nihil plus potestatis a Christo accepit alijs Apostolis: We know, that Peter receiued no more power of Christ, then the rest of the Apostles: Franciscus de victor. approueth that sentence of Cyprians before, that the rest of the Apostles were the same that Peter: and he addeth, non est audienda glossa, The glosse is not to be heard, which saith, this must not be vnderstoode, of the plenitude or fulnesse of power.

Relect.2. qu.2. concl.3.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING Peter his being at Rome.

This question hath two parts: first, whether Peter were at all at Rome or not. Secondly, whether he were Bishop of Rome.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER PETER were at Rome, and there died.

Our aduersaries would seeme to proue it by these and such like arguments.

39. Error.

*Argum.*1. Out of that place of S. Peter 1.5.13. The Church that is at Babylon saluteth you:

1.Pet.5.13.

Babylon here (ſay they) is taken for Rome, from whence Peter wrote his Epiſtle, Bellar.lib.2.cap.2.de pontif. Rhemenſ.argum.in 1.Epiſt.Petri.

We anſwere: Firſt, it is a ſillie argument for them hereby to proue Peters being at Rome: for thus much they haue gained by it, that Rome is Babylon, and ſo the ſeate of Antichriſt, Reuel.18. Secondly, there were two Babylons, one in Syria, the other in Egypt, from either of which Saint Peter might date his Epiſtle: and it is moſt like that he would keepe the common and knowne name of the place, that it might bee out of doubt what Church hee meant. As for the name of Babylon, to bee aſcribed to Rome, though it were ſo myſtically, yet was it not ſo called: for why might not Paul as well haue written his Epiſtle to the Romans vnder that name, the Church of Babylon, as Peter wrote from thence.

Argum.2. Againe, they alleage that ſtorie, how Peter ouercame Simon Magus at Rome, when he would haue taken his flight into the aire, hauing made himſelfe wings, and by the prayer of Peter was brought downe againe and brake his legges, and ſo died: whereupon Nero being offended with Peter, would haue apprehended him; who being counſelled by the Church, would haue fled from Rome: but meeting Chriſt at one of the gates, and ſaying vnto him, Whether goeſt thou Lord? And hee anſwered, I come againe to be crucified. Peter vpon thoſe words returned backe againe, and was crucified for the teſtimonie of Ieſus, Bellarm.cap.2.3.

Wee anſwere: Though wee ſhould not denie that Peter was at Rome, yet it were enough to ſhew the inſufficiencie of their arguments: And againe, we moue ſuch doubts, as by them are yet vnanſwered, as afterward ſhall be ſhewed. Secondly, concerning this ſtorie of the victorie ouer Simon Magus, they that doubt of Peters being at Rome, may alſo doubt of this, neither of them being neceſſarie to be beleeued as articles of faith, but probable and coniecturall, as matters of ſtorie. For ſome part of the ſtorie is denied by Auguſtine, as how Peter faſted vpon the Saturday, the combate betweene him and Simon Magus, following vpon the Lords day after: and thereupon roſe the cuſtome of the Saturday faſt among the Romans; Eſt quidem (ſaith hee) hæc opinio plurimorum, quamuis eam perhibeant eſſe falſam plerique Romani: This is (ſaith he) a probable opinion of many, (concerning Peters faſt) yet the Romans themſelues thinke it to be falſe. Epiſtol.80.

2 That concerning Chriſts apparition to Peter, ſeemeth to bee moſt vnlike of all, and fauoureth ſomwhat of the Popiſh Legends. Like vnto this are the tales of S. Chriſtopher, how he carried Chriſt, and how S. Gregorie entertained him for one of his gueſts at his table of hoſpitalitie: Such viſions and apparitions of Chriſt are contrarie to the Scriptures, which ſay, that the heauens muſt containe him till his comming againe. Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by this meanes, we doe compedes Chriſto inijcere, we fetter Chriſt in heauen. We anſwere, belike then heauen is a priſon, with the Ieſuite: God ſend all that are his ſuch a priſon at the length. Againe, Chriſt is no otherwiſe concluded and ſhut vp in heauen, then as it pleaſeth himſelfe, and as he hath appointed ſo to be.

2 He obiecteth: that Chriſt appeared neere vnto the earth to Paul. We anſwere: Firſt, there is no ſuch thing proued out of the text, but rather the contrarie, that the voice was heard from heauen; Act.22.6. not neere the earth, but aboue Act.22.6. Secondly, Paul heard a voice onely, hee ſaw no man, neither Act.9.7. hee nor the companie with him, Act.9.7.8. but onely a great light they ſaw ſhining from heauen, Act.22.6.9. Therefore out of this place they cannot proue any ſuch apparition of Chriſt neere vnto the earth.

Your owne decrees alſo here are againſt you: Decr.p.3.diſt.2.cap.44. Corpus domini in quo reſurrexit vno loco eſſe oportet: The body of our Lord, wherein he roſe, muſt be in one place. And againe, Donec ſeculum finiatur ſurſum eſt dominus: As long as the world endureth, our Lord is aboue; that is, in the heauen: Ergo, not beneath in the earth.

Argum.3. Peter died at Rome, his ſepulchre is to be ſeen there to this day; Ergo, he was at Rome, Bellarm.cap.3.

We anſwere: Firſt, it followeth not, if Peter were buried at Rome, that therefore he died there: for the tranſlation of the bones and bodies of Martyrs is no vſuall thing in your Church: As it followeth not, becauſe Iohn Baptiſts head, as you ſay, is to be ſeene at S. Syluesters at Rome, that therefore hee died there; ſo neither doth it follow of S. Peter.

2 Againe, how ſhall wee beleeue you that it is S. Peters ſepulchre, which is ſhewed at Rome; ſeeing you haue made ſo manie mockeries alreadie, making the world beleeue, that Peters bodie is ſomtime in one place, ſometime in another? Halfe his bodie (you ſay) is at S. Peters in Rome, halfe at Saint Pauls, his head at S. Iohn Laterane, his neather iawe with the beard at Poicters in France, many of his bones at Triers, at Geneua part of his braine. You ſee that we may as well doubt whether Peters bodie be at Rome, as in any of theſe places. And ſuch as you ſee are our aduerſaries arguments for Peters being at Rome.

The Proteſtants.

Concerning Peters being at Rome: firſt, wee doe not vtterly denie it, but onely affirme that hee could not come thither ſo ſoone, as in the ſecond yeere of Claudius, and ſit there ſo long, namely, fiue and twentie yeers, as they hold. Secondly, it may be granted that he was there, as a matter of ſtorie, not an article of faith. Thirdly, we haue certaine doubts and arguments, about ſome circumſtances of his being there, which our aduerſaries are not able to anſwere.

Argum. 1. There is great diſagreeing amongſt the writers, concerning the time of Peters comming to Rome: Oroſius ſaith, hee came thither in the beginning of Claudius raigne: Hierome ſaith, the ſecond yeere of his raigne; other ſay, the fourth yeere: other, the thirteenth yeere: Damaſus would haue him come thither in Nero his raigne. This diſſention of writers ſheweth that the matter may be iuſtly doubted of. Fulk. in Rom. 16. ſect. 4.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites anſwere: No more doe all agree concerning the time when the world was created, nor for the ſtorie of Chriſts life, in what time euery thing was done when he ſuffered, and ſuch like; yet it followeth not, that thoſe things were not true, becauſe there is ſome diuerſitie about the time. Rhemiſt. 1. Pet. 5. 13.

We replie: Firſt, moſt of theſe things concerning the chronologie of Scripture, though it bee not neceſſarie to ſaluation, yet by diligent ſearch may bee found in Scripture. Secondly, if they can ſhew any Scripture for Peters being at Rome, as we haue for the other ſtories, wee will beleeue it, though the time perfectly be not knowne. But ſeeing the Scripture maketh no mention at all of his being there, and the time is vncertaine, we may worthily doubt of it, much leſſe are bound neceſſarily to beleeue it.

Argum. 2. The ſtorie of Peters comming to Rome in the ſecond yeere of Claudius, his abiding at Rome fiue and twentie yeeres, his death and martyrdome in the 14. yeere of Nero, and the 37. yeere after Chriſts aſcention: we proue out of the Scriptures to bee falſe. For Peter was at Ieruſalem and in thoſe quarters round about till 18. yeeres after Chriſt: for Paul ſaw him there three yeeres after his calling, and againe 14. yeeres after that, Galath. 2. there is 17. yeeres, and one yeere was paſt before Pauls conuerſion: in all 18. yeeres: adde vnto theſe the 25. yeeres of Peters being at Rome, that maketh 43. yeeres: and ſo Peter ſhould ſuffer in Veſpaſians raigne, and not in the time of Nero.

Galath. 2. 1.

Bellarmine and the Ieſuites anſwere: that Peter was at Rome ſeuen yeeres before the Councell held at Ieruſalem, Act. 15. which was in the 18. yeere after Chriſt: and that being expelled the citie by Claudius with the reſt of the Iewes, hee returned to Ieruſalem, and there ſpake with Paul, and after that went to Rome againe, and there ended his life.

This anſwere we ſhew to be very inſufficient. Firſt, Act. 15. 2. it appeareth that there was, as it were, a ſtanding and ſet Councell of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, of the which Peter was one: for the Church thought good to ſend vp to the Apoſtles and elders, which were at Ieruſalem. Secondly, till the 18. yeere when this Councell was held, it ſeemeth that Peter had laboured onely or eſpecially amongſt the Iewes, of whom there were then but few at Rome: For (ſaith the Apoſtle) hee that was mightie in Peter in the Apoſtleſhip ouer the circumciſion, was alſo mightie in mee, Galath. 2. 8. Therefore Peter was not knowne to haue laboured vntill this time but in the circumciſion. Thirdly, afterward it is more like he went to Antioch then to Rome: for after this Paul rebuked Peter at Antioch, Gal. 2. Fourthly, theſe are but bare coniectures of our aduerſaries, and craftie euaſions without Scripture: but ſeeing wee appoſe them out of Scripture, it is great reaſon they ſhould likewiſe anſwere vs out of Scripture.

Act. 15. 2.

Laſtly, it is but Bellarmines coniecture, and a very fable that Peter went from Rome to Ieruſalem to ſpeake with Paul, like to that tale, which Chriſtianus Maſſæus hath, Chronicor. lib. 8. of one Trophimus conuerted by Marie Magdalene, who going to Rome to ſee Peter, as hee ſailed, his wiſe being great with child died in trauell, and was buried with her child in a rocke: whom S. Peter carried to Ieruſalem, and ſhewed him the holy places, and after two yeeres returning to Rome, found his childe playing at his mothers breaſt, who being raiſed as it were out of ſleepe, told her husband, how that Mary Magdalene had ſhewed her the ſame holy places, which hee had ſeene. I maruell the Ieſuite did not ground his conceite of Peters going to Ieruſalem from Rome vpon this fable: which of the better ſort amongſt them is reiected, as Eſpene. in 2. Tim. c. 4. p. 183. a.

Lib. 2. de Pontif. cap. 10.
Centur. 1. lib. 2. cap. 16.

Aluares de ſcript. Ethiop. cap. 29.

Argum. 3. We haue diuers other obiections alſo out of the Scriptures: as firſt, that if Peter were at Rome, it is not like that Paul would leaue him out in his ſalutation in the end of his Epiſtle, Rom. 16. ſent to the brethren. Our aduerſaries anſwere but very ſimply, that at that time, when S. Paul wrote his Epiſtle, either Peter was not at Rome, or elſe Paul might write ſome eſpeciall letters to him by himſelfe, and this Epiſtle encloſed in them: ſuch goodly coniectures they haue. But I pray you what needed S. Paul to haue written vnto the Romans, if Saint Peter, ſo faithfull and vigilant a paſtor, were continually amongſt them?

See more hereof Hexapl. vpon the Rom. c. 16. conſ. 8.

S. Ambroſe hereof thus writeth in his Commentaries vpon the 16. to the Romans, Ad confirmationem Romanorum, &c. For the confirmation of the Romans, all theſe, whom he ſaluteth, are vnderſtood to haue beene there: but it would haue made more for their confirmation, if Peter had been ſaluted amongſt them, if he had been there. Againe, Ariſtobulus iſte congregator, &c. This Ariſtobulus, whom the Apoſtle maketh mention of, is vnderſtood to haue beene a gatherer together of the brethren: but Peter was a more principall congregator of them; therefore it is like the Apoſtle would haue remembred him, as well as Ariſtobulus.

Other places alſo of Scripture we haue; as Philip. 2. 20. ſpeaking of Timothie hee ſaith, I haue none like minded to him, that will faithfully care for your matters. Coloſſ. 4. 11. Theſe onely are my work fellowes, 2. Timoth. 4. 11. onely Luke is with me: Ergo, Peter all this while was not at Rome, for Paul would not haue left him out of the number of his fellow-helpers: at the leaſt he would not haue commended Timothie, though he were a worthie yong man, before him. That which Bellarmine anſwereth, is iuſt nothing; that Saint Paul ſpeaketh in thoſe places onely of his domeſticall helpers, which did miniſter vnto him; when Saint Paul ſpeaketh plainly of his fellow labourers; Theſe onely are my workfellowes to the kingdome of God, Coloſ.4.11.

1.Tim.4.16.

Another argument doth ariſe out of S. Pauls words, 2.Tim.4.16. At my firſt anſwering no man aſſiſted me: Ergo, it is like that Peter was not then at Rome, for he would not haue forſaken Paul. Bellarmine anſwereth, that he ſpeaketh only of ſuch fauourers as he had in Cæſars Court, that they would not make ſute for him to the Emperour. But this is a weake ſolution. Firſt, it appeareth by that which followeth, that they left him without helpe in his open Apologie or defence; they did not aſſiſt me (ſaith he) but the Lord aſſiſted me: that is, gaue me ſtrength to defend my cauſe: So that the word, aſſiſting, muſt bee taken in the ſame ſenſe before, that they failed him in that, wherein God aſſiſted him, that is, in ſpeaking boldly in the defence of the truth. Secondly, it is proued by the diuers ſucceſſe that he had at his firſt and ſecond anſwering: at the firſt all left him, but at the next many were imboldened through his bonds: What to doe? More frankely to ſpeake the word, Philip.1.14. Ergo, at the firſt they forſooke him, becauſe they were afraid to ſpeake the word.

Philip.1.14.

I will for the ſenſe of this place bee tried by your owne interpreters: as Eſpenc. thus writeth: No man aſſiſted me, that is, as an helper both to defend me before the Prince, and to helpe the Chriſtian cauſe. And againe he complaineth, that hee was forſaken of thoſe which might haue helped: as there was a great number at that time at Rome of Chriſtians conuerted from among the Iewes, that might haue helped him. And againe it was occaſion of great heauineſſe to the Apoſtle, to bee oppugned of ſtrangers, and not propugned by his domeſticals, but to bee bereft of all comfort, yea betrayed: *in 2. Timoth. cap.4. pag.*180. So then the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the domeſticals of Cæſars familie, but the domeſticals of the ſame faith; neither of not ſuing for him in Court, but the forſaking of the defence of the faith.

Theſe arguments, which wee haue here oppoſed, are much vrged by Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, againſt Peters being at Rome: As becauſe, while Paul was priſoner at Rome, there is no mention made, that Peter all that while viſited him, who at that time, they ſay was at Rome. Againe, Saint Paul in his Epiſtle to the Romans ſaluteth many meaner perſons, then Peter was: and therefore it is not like that Peter was then at Rome; for he among the reſt ſhould not haue been omitted, but eſpecially remembred. Theſe and other ſuch places are vrged by that holy Martyr: *epiſtol. ad Dom. Vanam. pag.*1648.

Lib.2.de Pontif.cap.10.
Centur.1.lib.2.cap.10.

Now herein we want not ſome euidence of other Churches. 1. Firſt, of the Greeke Church, Chryſoſtome thus writeth, expounding that place Matth.23.34. Behold I ſend vnto you Prophets, wiſe-men, and Scribes, of them you ſhall kill and crucifie, &c. Intelligit Apoſtolos, et qui cum Apoſtolis fuerant: He vnderſtandeth the Apoſtles, and thoſe which were with the Apoſtles: His opinion is, that ſome of the Apoſtles ſhould be crucified at Ieruſalem: But they can ſhew none elſe to haue been crucified there, vnleſſe it were Peter, or Andrew: But Bellarmine confeſſeth that Andrew was put to death in Achaia. And whereas he telleth vs of Simeon, the ſucceſſor of Iames, that he was crucified in Ieruſalem; and of Matthias he ſaith, probabiliter exiſtimant, ſome probably thinke, that hee was crucified in Iudea; it is not certaine that that Simeon was one of the Apoſtles; for it is not like that one Apoſtle ſucceeded an other; he is thought rather to haue beene one of the 70. Diſciples; and of the other there is leſſe certaintie, nor ſo much as any probable coniecture.

Aluares de ſcript. Æthiop. cap.19.

2 For the South and Æthiopike Church, although they denie not Peter to haue been at Rome, yet they hold it of more certaintie, that hee was at Antioch: which made the great Emperour there aske Aluares, why they diuided the Churches of Antioch and Rome, ſeeing the Church of Antioch was in a manner the chiefeſt, vntill the Councell of Pope Leo, &c. and indeed of Peters being at Antioch there is euidence in Scripture, Galat.2.11. but of his being at Rome, none at all.

3 Other Diuines of the reformed Churches haue likewiſe obiected againſt Peters being and dying at Rome: as Vldaricus Velenus, who hath written a treatiſe of this argument: and Illyricus, lib. cont. primat. pap.: *Caluin lib.*4. inſtitution. c.6. ſect.15. Magdeburgenſ. Centur. 1. *lib.*2. *c.*10. *col.*561.

See more hereof Hexapl. vpon the Rom. c.16.contr.8.

4 Neither doth this want euidence from ſome of their owne ſide: as Lyranus vpon that place, Matth.23.34. thus writeth: ſome of them you ſhall kill, as Iames the brother of Iohn, &c. ſome you ſhall crucifie, as Peter and Andrew his brother: hee thinketh, that Peter was crucified at Ieruſalem, and therefore Bellarmine here, hauing nothing elſe to anſwere, reiecteth him.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER PETER were Biſhop of Rome.

OVr aduerſaries would gladly bring it about that Peter was Biſhop of Rome, there enthronized, and ſate in the Biſhoplike chaire many yeeres, and after left it to his ſucceſſors.

*Argum.*1. Peter firſt preached to the Gentiles, Act.15.7. Yee know that a good while agoe God choſe out me, that by my mouth the Gentiles ſhould heare the word of God and beleeue: Rhemiſt. annot. vpon this place. And ſeeing there were many Chriſtians in Rome, before Saint Paul came thither, it is like that Peter firſt preached to the Romanes, and was the firſt founder of the faith there: Bellarm. lib. 2. de Rom. pontif. c. 2. Hence is inferred, that Peter was the firſt Biſhop of Rome.

Anſw. Firſt, that S. Peter preached before S. Paul to the Gentiles, is not agreeable to the hiſtorie of the Acts: for before S. Peter had receiued that viſion from heauen, Act. 10. he made queſtion, whether it were lawfull to preach to the Gentiles: but before that S. Paul was conuerted, and immediatly vpon his conuerſion he preached to the Gentiles, Act. 26. 17. and went into Arabia, Galat. 1. 17. Neither doth S. Peter ſay, that firſt by his mouth the Gentiles heard the word. Indeed S. Iames ſaith, Simeon hath declared how God firſt did viſite the Gentiles: which word (firſt) is to bee referred not to the time of the conuerſion of the Gentiles, but to the order of Saint Peters ſpeech, which was firſt of Gods viſitation of the Gentiles: or if we referre it to the time of their conuerſion, it ſheweth only the beginning in generall of Gods viſitation of the Gentiles, as the Syrian interpreter giueth the ſenſe, Simeon hath ſhewed how God began to chuſe one of the Gentiles, &c. it maketh no compariſon or difference or prioritie in the beginners. The meaning then is this, that then was the time, whether by Saint Peter, or others, when it pleaſed God firſt to call the Gentiles: and to this purpoſe Saint Iames alleageth Scripture, not to ſhew a prioritie of Peters preaching, but of the calling of the Gentiles.

Act. 26. 17.
Galath. 1, 17.

Secondly, that Peter firſt preached not at Rome, it is thus gathered: becauſe it is not like that the Chriſtian faith being ſpread farre abroad, could be kept from Rome the ſpace of twelue yeeres: for ſo long it was by their account, before Peter came to Rome. Againe, there were diuers that dwelled at Rome, which heard the Apoſtles ſpeake diuers tongues, Acts 2. being ſtrangers then and ſoiourners at Ieruſalem: and Rom. 16. 7. hee maketh mention of Andronicus and Iunia, which were in Chriſt before him. By ſome of theſe it is moſt like that the Chriſtian faith was firſt ſowed at Rome. Thirdly, it is more like that Paul preached at Rome before Peter: for when he came to Rome, he called the Iewes together, who ſaid vnto him, that they had heard nothing concerning him by letters, or from the brethren out of Iudea, Acts 28. 22. But if Peter had been there, Paul no doubt ſhould haue been knowne at the leaſt by name. The Iewes alſo ſay vnto him, We will heare of thee what thou thinkeſt: and ſome of them were perſwaded by Paul; ſome beleeued not. It ſeemeth by this place that the Iewes at Rome had not heard of the Goſpell before. But if Peter had been amongſt them, who had an eſpeciall charge of the Circumciſion, he would haue had the greateſt care of the Iewes to win them to Chriſt. Fourthly, though Peter had firſt preached to the Romanes, it would not follow that therefore he was Biſhop there: for Paul firſt founded the Church of Epheſus, yet they ſay Iohn was firſt Biſhop there: wherefore they ſhould gaine nothing by this argument, if it were true, that Peter was the firſt preacher, and conuerter of the Romanes to the faith. Saint Ambroſe ſaith, Quia Paulus magiſter &c. Becauſe Paul was appointed the maſter of the Gentiles, it became him to take care, to teach there where Chriſt had not been preached: in 15. ad Rom. Ergo, S. Paul preached firſt to the Romanes, rather then S. Peter.

Acts 2. 10.
Rom. 16, 7.

Acts 28, 22.

See more here of Hexapl. vpon the Rom. cap. 1. qu. 29.

Argum. 5. Rome was alwaies called and counted the chiefe of all Churches; what other reaſon can bee yeelded thereof, then becauſe Peter the prince of the Apoſtles was their proper and peculiar paſtor? And ſeeing Peter continued not at Antioch, let them ſhew where elſe Peter died Biſhop, then at Rome, vnleſſe they will ſay, he was Biſhop of the vniuerſall Church, and not of any particular place, which they will not willingly grant: Bellarm. lib. 2. de Rom. pontif. c. 4.

Anſw. 1. Neither was Peter the prince or chiefe of the Apoſtles, but had onely a prioritie of ſpeaking, as it may be a prioritie of ſitting for order ſake, as Barlaam ſaith: neither had the Church of Rome her precedence by ſucceſſion from S. Peter, but afterward by the decrees of the fathers, becauſe it was * the chiefe and imperiall citie, as the ſame Barlaam ſheweth.

Barlaam. lib. de princip. pap. cap. 2.
* διὰ τὸ βασιλεύουσαν εἶναι τὴν πόλιν. c. 3.

2. Neither was Peter Biſhop of any particular place, but Paſtor of the vniuerſall Church, as were alſo all the Apoſtles beſide: and therefore it is not neceſſarie to aſſigne him any certaine ſeate after he left Antioch: though in other places he had alſo his ſucceſſors, as Marke was as well appointed by him in Alexandria, as Euodias at Antioch.

The Proteſtants.

If we take the name of Biſhop generally for that office which hath the publike cure and charge of ſoules: in that ſenſe we denie not but Peter and the reſt of the Apoſtles may be called Epiſcopi, Biſhops, as Chriſt is called the ſhepheard and biſhop of our ſoules, 1. Pet. 2. 23. But taking it ſtrictly for a Biſhop of this or that place, which is called Epiſcopus intitulatus, a Biſhop intituled, wee denie that either Peter or Paul were Biſhops, Fox pag. 15.

1. Pet. 2. 25.

Argum. 1. Paul was Apoſtolus Gentium, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and Peter of the Circumciſion: therefore it is more like that Paul was chiefe paſtor of the Romanes, becauſe they were of the Gentiles, and part of his charge: and vnleſſe they can proue that Paul reſigned ouer his lot vnto Peter, that hee alſo ſhould be the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, as he was of the Iewes; Peter ſhould haue intruded himſelfe into Pauls charge, not in preaching to the Gentiles, (for both Paul might preach to the Iewes, and Peter to the Gentiles) but in taking vpon him to be the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, which was giuen before to S. Paul.

Argum. 2. The Rhemiſts themſelues grant, that the Church of Rome was founded both by Peter and Paul: Annot. in 2. Galat. ſect. 6. Biſhop Tunſtal a ſtrong champion of theirs, but varying from them in this opinion, ſhewed in a letter of his to Cardinall Poole, how in times paſt, both Peter and Paul were counted patrones of the Church of Rome, and principes Apoſtolorum, the chiefe of the Apoſtles. Euſebius ſaith, that Clemens was the third Biſhop after Peter and Paul: Alexander ſucceeded in the fifth place after Peter and Paul.

Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, epiſtol. 1. thus writeth: Romanam Eccleſiam beatiſſimi Petrus & Paulus ſuo Martyrio coronarunt: The bleſſed Apoſtles Peter and Paul did crowne the Romane Church by their martyrdome. Gelaſius alſo, Decret. de ſcripturis. Petro data eſt ſocietas beatiſſimi Pauli, & pariter ſanctam Romanam Eccleſiam Deo conſecrarunt: Vnto Peter bleſſed Paul was ioyned in ſocietie, and they together did conſecrate vnto God the Romane Church. If therefore the Biſhops of Rome challenge any preeminence of authoritie from Peter, they may doe it as well from Paul: for they both founded that Church, preached there, and both there ſuffered, Fox pag. 1066.

Epheſ. 4.11.

Argum. 3. No Apoſtles were Biſhops: for they were diuers offices, Epheſ. 4.11. he gaue ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome to be Paſtors and Doctors: Ergo, they were diuers offices, and the ſame were not Apoſtles and Paſtors or Biſhops, for both are all one. The offices were much different: Apoſtles were immediatly called of God, Biſhops and Paſtors were ordained by the Apoſtles: the Apoſtles calling was generall ouer the whole world, the Paſtors were obliged to their dioces and pariſhes and particular Churches: the office of the Apoſtles was extraordinarie, and but for a time: the calling of Paſtors was to endure euer in the Church. Wherefore it can in no wiſe bee, that the Apoſtles were Biſhops of any certaine places. Irenæus ſaith, that Fundata Eccleſia beati Apoſtoli Lino officium Epiſcopatus iniungunt: The Church of Rome once founded, the holy Apoſtles laid the charge of the biſhopricke vpon Linus. Whereby it appeareth, that they only retained their Apoſtleſhip enioyned them of Chriſt, Tonſtal. ex Fox pag. 1066. It had therefore been contrarie to the commandement of Chriſt, who ſaid, Ite in vniuerſum mundum, Goe into all the world: if they ſhould haue left their calling, and bound themſelues to any peculiar Church: Ergo, we conclude, that neither Peter nor Paul were Biſhops of Rome.

Eſpenc. in 1. c. 1 ad Timoth.

Gal. 1.1.
1. Tim. 2.7.

1. Cor. 7.40.

One of their owne writers hereunto beareth witneſſe, and ſheweth out of S. Chryſoſtome a treble difference betweene an Apoſtle and a Biſhop: Hic ſcilicet Epiſcopus per homines vocatur, &c. A Biſhop is called by men, is ſet ouer a certaine place, he is not alway certaine that hee hath the ſpirit, &c. Hom. 19. in Matth. But an Apoſtle is immediatly called of God, Galath. 1.1. he is ſent to preach, not to any one place, but to all Churches, as 1. Timoth. 2.7. Saint Paul ſaith, he was ordained an Apoſtle, that is, a teacher of the Gentiles. Thirdly, he is ſure he hath the ſpirit not to erre: as in the ſame place, I ſpeake the truth in Chriſt, I lie not. And 1. Cor. 7.40. I thinke that I haue the ſpirit of God. Wherefore it is euident, that the Apoſtles were no Biſhops properly ſo called: yet we denie not, in a larger ſignification and vſe of the word, but that many which were but Biſhops were called Apoſtles: as Theodoret witneſſeth, They which are now called Biſhops, were in times paſt named Apoſtles: ſo Epaphroditus was the Apoſtle of the Philippians, Titus of the Cretenſians, &c. Sed procedente tempore, &c. But afterward the name of Apoſtleſhip was left to thoſe which were the true Apoſtles, &c. Therefore taking the name of an Apoſtle properly, and ſo likewiſe of a Biſhop; wee muſt of neceſſitie vnderſtand two diſtinct offices, not coincident, or compatible together: otherwiſe, as I haue ſhewed concerning the name of an Apoſtle, ſo the name of a Biſhop was diuerſly taken: for in one ſenſe Chriſt onely is called our Biſhop, 1. Pet. 2.25. As Origen alſo noteth, Proprie Epiſcopus Dominus Ieſus, Our Lord Chriſt is properly our Biſhop. So the Apoſtles in a larger vſe of this name may be called Biſhops: but as it is taken commonly for the ruler or ouerſeer of ſome particular Church, it can no way agree to the Apoſtles.

Let vs ſee the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Iulianus Leuille Martyr at Sanſerre in France, anno 1554. denieth that Peter was euer Pope of Rome.

Maſter Bradford a holy Martyr ſaith, It doth no more follow, Peter died at Rome, or Peters chaire was at Rome: Ergo, he was Biſhop there, and the ſeate of the primacie muſt needs therefore bee at Rome; then this followeth, Moſes and Aaron firſt exerciſed their offices vnto their death in the wilderneſſe: Ergo, the wilderneſſe was the place of their prieſthood: or therefore the principalleſt place of the Iewiſh Church ſhould be in the wilderneſſe, *Epiſt. ad Dom. Damianus a Goes.

Here alſo we haue the conſent of other Churches profeſſing Chriſtianitie: 1. The Muſcouites denie S. Peter, verum papam, & verum Romanæ Eccleſiæ Antiſtitem, to haue bin the true Pope, a true Biſhop of the Romane Church. Barlaam ſaith, that none of the Apoſtles was called Biſhop of this or that place or region, but [a] had the ſame authoritie euery where. And againe, all the Diſciples of the word (Chriſt) [b] were the paſtors and teachers of the whole world. And a little after: Who euer (ſaith he) called Peter Biſhop of Rome, or Clement the chiefe.

2. The South and Ethiopike Church calleth Rome, ſedem ſanctorum Petri & Pauli, the Sea of the holy Saints Peter and Paul: as their Emperour Dauid in his epiſtle to the Biſhop of Rome. In their opinion then, Peter was no more Biſhop there then Paul. And touching the firſt conuerter of the Gentiles to the faith, they hold, that the Eunuch baptiſed by Philip, returning home conuerted the Queene to the faith, and baptiſed her, with a great part of her familie, and euer ſince the Chriſtian faith hath continued among them: thus writeth their Emperour Dauid to the Biſhop of Rome, and Zaga Zabo an Ethiopian Biſhop in his confeſſion of the Ethiopike faith. Now this was done before Peter went vnto Cornelius, to preach vnto him the faith.

3. What the Diuines of other reformed Churches doe hold, is ſhewed before in the end of the former queſtion: for they which doubt of Peters being at Rome, doe make queſtion alſo of his ſitting as Biſhop there.

4. And we haue ſeene before, the teſtimonie of Cornelius and Gelaſius Biſhops of Rome, that ſhall ſpeake for the Latine Church, who deriue their ſucceſſion as well from S. Paul, as from S. Peter.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, WHETHER THE Biſhop of Rome be the true ſucceſſor of S. PETER.

The Papiſts.

THey doe generally hold, that the Biſhops of Rome being lineally deſcended by ſucceſſion from Peter, haue the ſame primacie, Apoſtolike authoritie, and iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, which Peter had, Bellarm. lib. 2. de pontif. cap. 12. 41. Error.

They are very barren and ſcant of arguments in this place to maintaine and vphold this ſucceſſion by, and in the end the Ieſuite runneth to tradition: and at the length hee thus concludeth; that it is not de iure diuino, it is not neceſſarie by the law of God, that the Romane Biſhop ſhould be Peters ſucceſſor: but it dependeth only vpon the ordinance of Peter, and is proued by tradition, not diduced out of Scripture. That it was neceſſarie for Peter to haue a ſucceſſor, they ſay, it is proued out of Scripture: which wee alſo grant, that all faithfull Paſtors and Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, though they haue not their plenarie and Apoſtolike power: but that the Pope ought to bee and is his ſucceſſor, it ſtandeth vpon tradition. Bellarm. c. 12.

We ſee then the grounds of their opinion: Scripture they haue none but blinde tradition: vnleſſe therefore they could bring better ſtuffe for the Papall ſucceſſion, we will not ſpend any time in confuting nothing.

Yet Bellarmine ſeemeth thus to reaſon: A ſucceſſion in the Church is now neceſſarie in the new Teſtament, as Aaron had his ſucceſſion in the old Teſtament: but there can bee no certaine ſucceſſion now ſhewed, but in the chaire of Peter at Rome: Ergo, the Biſhops of Rome are the true ſucceſſors of Peter. For either at Antioch muſt the ſucceſſion of Peter be, or at Rome: but not at Antioch, becauſe S. Peter remoued from thence to Rome, and there died, Bellarm. cap. 12.

Anſw. Firſt, a locall, perſonall, and lineall ſucceſſion is not now needfull, as before vnder the law: the true worſhip of God is not now tied to perſon or place, as our Sauiour ſheweth, Ioh. 4. 21. God will be worſhipped, neither in this mountaine, nor at Ieruſalem: and by the ſame reaſon, neither at Rome, &c. Secondly, yet a ſucceſſion of doctrine, and of faithfull paſtors wee grant, and the Church was neuer without: ſuch as the Prophet ſpeaketh of, Eſay 59. 21. My ſpirit, that is vpon thee, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeed, &c. and in this ſenſe all faithfull Biſhops do ſucceed the Apoſtles. Concil. Aquiſgr. c. 10. Iſidor. Apoſtolis decedentibus, &c. The Apoſtles deceaſing, Biſhops haue ſucceeded, being appointed thorough the world in the ſeates of the Apoſtles. Yea S. Hierome doubteth not to ſay, that not only Biſhops, but all other faithfull Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: ad Heliodor. Abſit vt de his, &c. God forbid I ſhould iudge ſiniſterly of them, qui Apoſtolico gradui ſuccedentes, which ſucceeding the degree of the Apoſtles, doe conſecrate the bodie of Chriſt, &c. Thirdly, there may be ſhewed a ſucceſſion to this day in Conſtantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Epheſus, as afterward ſhall appeare, and not onely at Rome. Fourthly, the death of Chriſt the chiefe Biſhop is more forcible to priuiledge Ieruſalem for the chiefe ſeate, then the death of Peter at Rome maketh for the preeminence of that Sea before Antioch. Iohn 4. 21. Eſay 59 21.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope or Biſhop of Rome neither can, is, or ought to be S. Peters ſucceſſor, in the high and Apoſtolike authoritie, primacie, and iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church: thus we declare it.

Argum. 1. The Pope, though hee were Peters ſucceſſor, yet can hee not receiue that from him, which hee neuer had: but Peter had neuer any ſuch primacie of power, as wee haue ſhewed before, Queſt. 1. 2. Ergo, he is not herein his ſucceſſor.

Argum. 2. That primacie which Peter had, could not be conueied to any other: namely his primacie of confeſſion, which hee firſt of all the Apoſtles did vtter concerning Chriſt, proceeding from faith, did adhere ſo to his perſon, that it could not be deriued to any ſucceſſor of his: for Peters faith was a proper adiunct to himſelfe, Argument. Tonſtalli, Fox p. 1067. col. 1. Pag. 974. 1. 30.

Againe, how can he haue the Apoſtolike authoritie being not an Apoſtle: but an Apoſtle he is not: for Chriſt only made Apoſtles, the Apoſtles did not ordaine other Apoſtles, Argum. Nili.

To this Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt by a diſtinction, that whereas three things are to be conſidered in an Apoſtle: firſt, that he be immediatly called of God, and inſpired to write Scripture: the ſecond, to be a founder of the Churches, where none were before: thirdly, that hee haue authoritie ouer the whole Church. The firſt (ſaith he) agreeth not to the Pope, but the two other doe: for by the Pope many Churches haue been planted, and he hath authoritie ouer the whole Church, as Peters ſucceſſor, &c. Bellarm. cap. 12. reſp. ad obiect. 2. Nili.

Anſw. Firſt, there be other properties required in an Apoſtle beſide theſe, as I ſhewed before out of Chryſoſtome, whereof none agree to the Pope. Secondly, to admit theſe three conditions named by the Ieſuite, if they bee all neceſſarie to make an Apoſtle, then the Pope wanting one of them, by his confeſſion, can be no Apoſtle. Thirdly, wee denie, that either the Pope hath founded any Churches ſince the Apoſtles times, he hath peruerted many nations, conuerted none; neither are the Popes much giuen to preaching, whereby nations are begotten vnto the faith: either that he hath ſuch vniuerſall authoritie ouer the whole Church, which is the thing in queſtion. For hee calling himſelfe Biſhop of Rome, and ſo fixing his chaire in a certaine place, can be no Apoſtle: for the Apoſtles were no Biſhops of one place more then another, as I haue ſhewed, but were ſent to preach to all the world.

Secondly he anſwereth, that not the Apoſtles, but Chriſt did conſtitute the Biſhop of Rome, to bee the Apoſtolike and vniuerſall Biſhop of the whole Church.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtles were immediatly called of Chriſt; then if the Pope be of Chriſts making an Apoſtle, he muſt ſhew his immediate calling in Scripture. Secondly, Bellarmine forgetteth himſelfe: for a little before he ſaid that the Biſhop of Rome is Peters ſucceſſor, by Peters fact, not by the inſtitution of Chriſt.

3 Hee ſucceedeth not Peter rightly in place: for ſeeing Peter ſate at Antioch, why may not that Church chalenge ſucceſſion, as well as Rome? Why might not alſo other Churches haue Apoſtolike ſucceſſion, as Alexandria from Peter and Marke, Ieruſalem from Iames, Conſtantinople from Andrew?

Further, they haue no certaine ſucceſſion from Peter: Tertullian maketh Clement the next ſucceſſor to Peter. Optatus firſt nameth Linus, then Clement: Irenæus after Peter, placed Linus, and Cletus, and Clement the fourth. What certaintie therefore can they haue of ſo vncertaine ſucceſſion? Fulk. annot. in Rom.16. ſect.4.

4 It skilleth not who commeth in the place and roome of the Apoſtles: They that will be their true ſucceſſors, muſt follow their example, and walke in their ſteps, teaching their doctrine and embracing their holy vertues. Wherefore the Pope is not Peters right ſucceſſor, ſwaruing both from his doctrine and example. Non ſanctorum filij ſunt, qui tenent loca ſanctorum, ſed qui exercent opera eorum: They are not the children of the Saints, which occupie the ſame places, but they which doe their workes: Lambert. So Bernard writing to Eugenius, chargeth him, that in the reſpect of his pompe and pride, he did rather ſucceed Conſtantine, then Peter: Iohann. Huſſ. pag.610.

Fox pag.1120.

5 All good Biſhops and Paſtors are as well the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, as the Pope; nay rather then, he, being a wicked man: Iohn Huſſ. articul.4. Fox pag.590. Lambert pag 1120. Nay, they haue greater and more excellent titles, then to bee called the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: for thoſe that walke in obedience vnto Gods commandements, our Sauiour calleth them, his ſiſters, kinsfolkes and brethren, Matth.12.50. Ergo, the Pope is not the right ſucceſſor of Peter.

Cont.liter.Petil.lib.2.cap.51

Laſtly, of this matter Auguſtine thus writeth: Cathedra tibi quid fecit eccleſiæ Romanæ, in qua Petrus ſedit; & in qua hodie Anaſtaſius ſedet: vel eccleſia Hieroſolymitana, in qua Iacobus ſedit, & in qua hodie Iohannes ſedet? What hath the Sea of Rome done vnto thee, wherein ſometime Peter ſate, and where Anaſtaſius now ſitteth? or what hath the Church or chaire of Ieruſalem committed, where ſometime Iames ſate, and Iohn now ſitteth? In thoſe words Auguſtine aſcribeth as much to the ſucceſſion of other Apoſtolical Churches, as he doth to the ſucceſſion of the Biſhops of Rome. And therfore Caniſius craftily leaueth out the one halfe of the ſentēce, concerning the Church of Ieruſalē. Neither is it true, which our aduerſaries ſay, that Peters Sea remaineth ſtill at Rome, when all other Apoſtolicall Seas are gone: for euen to this day the Sea of Antioch ſtandeth and hath a Patriark: likewiſe the Sea of Alexandria. The Sea of Conſtantinople neuer wanted ſucceſſors to this day: nor the Church of Epheſus. In India and Ethiopia, there hath been alwaies a ſucceſſion in thoſe Churches planted by the Apoſtles, and is at this day: Fulk. 2. Theſſ.2. ſect.7. Wherefore they haue no cauſe to bragge of their ſucceſſion, which is found in other places, as well as at Rome.

Cap. de præcept. eccleſ. artic.9.B.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie: Clemen. Epiſtol.1. Peter is brought in ſpeaking thus: Hunc Epiſcopum vobis ordino, cui ſoli mea prædicationis & doctrinæ cathedram trado: I ordaine this man (namely Clement) to be your Biſhop, to whom only I deliuer my chaire of preaching and doctrine. Alſo in the ſame Epiſtle, Poſt me non imperitus aliquis aut indoctus, aut ignorans verbi diuini myſterium, ſuſcipiat cathedram meam: After me, let no vnskilfull or vnlearned man, or ignorant in the myſterie of the diuine word, take my chaire. In this Clementine Epiſtle (which though it force not vs, becauſe we hold it forged, yet it preſſeth our aduerſaries, being of them receiued) we ſee that he only is Peters ſucceſſor, who ſucceedeth him in doctrine.

Pope Felix alſo thus writeth ad Petrum Antiochen. Qui participes Apoſtoli eſſe volunt, ducuntur & doctrina ipſius: They that will be partakers of the Apoſtleſhip, muſt follow the Apoſtles doctrine. But the Pope doth not embrace the Apoſtles doctrine: Ergo, he is not Apoſtolike. So alſo Symmachus, as he is alleaged in the decrees, Decret. p.1. diſt.40. cap.1. Petrus hæreditatem innocentiæ miſit ad poſteros: Peter did leaue the inheritance of innocencie to his poſteritie: the Biſhops of Rome then, hauing loſt Peters innocencie, are not the rightfull heires of Peter.

Iohn Huſſe died for this article with others, for ſaying, Papa non eſt verus Petri ſucceſſor, ſi viuit moribus contrarijs Petro: The Pope is not the true ſucceſſor of Peter, if he be of contrarie manners in his life to Peter. Articul.14. obiect. Concil. Conſtantienſ.

And for farther euidence: 1. Nilus the Archbiſhop ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church: Is not the Pope then the ſucceſſor of Peter? Yes he is: (but as hee is [a] a Biſhop) which euery of thoſe Biſhops are alſo, which were ordained by him, as many receiued this benefit by his hands: nay euery Prieſt is by this reaſon a [b] ſucceſſor of the Apoſtles, of whom by tradition they haue receiued the prieſthood, &c. And in the ſame place, Peter was an Apoſtle, and the chiefe of the Apoſtles, the Pope is no Apoſtle, &c. Peter was the Teacher of the whole world, but the Pope is Biſhop of Rome and ſo called. So then his opinion is, that the Pope ſucceedeth not S. Peter in his Apoſtolike preeminence. Nay he is not his ſucceſſor at all, if he depart [c] from the truth: for then he ſhall be no more the ſucceſſor of Peter, then [d] a diſeaſe of health, darkneſſe of light, &c.

Barlaam c. 13. lib. de princip.

3 That the Pope ſucceedeth not Peter in any ſuch vniuerſal iuriſdiction, it is the iudgement of other reformed Churches: confeſſion of Belgia, artic. 30. In what place of the world ſoeuer the Miniſters of the word of God doe keepe, they haue all of them the ſame and equall power and authoritie, being all of them equallie the Miniſters of Chriſt, the onelie vniuerſall Biſhop, and head of the Church.

Harmo. ſec. 11. pag. 364.

4 Let Gregorie ſpeake for the Latine Church: Petrus vniuerſalis Epiſcopus non vocatur: Peter is not called vniuerſall Biſhop. And againe of Paul he ſaith: being conuerted to the Chriſtian faith, caput effectus eſt nationum, & obtinuit Eccleſiæ totius principatum, he was made the head of the Nations, and obtained the principalitie of the whole Church. The Pope then ſucceedeth not Peter in his vniuerſall Biſhoprick which he neuer had, or no more then Paul, and other of the Apoſtles.

Lib. 4. epiſt. 32. In 1. Reg. lib. 4. cap. 4.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, CONCERNING the primacie of the Sea of Rome.

This queſtion hath diuers parts, which muſt be handled in their order. Firſt, whether the Biſhop of Rome haue authoritie ouer other Biſhops. Secondly, whether appeales ought to be made to Rome from other countries. Thirdly, whether the Pope be ſubiect to the iudgement of any. Fourthlie, whether he may be depoſed. Fifthly, what primacie he hath ouer other Churches, and how it began. Sixthly, of the titles and names giuen to the Biſhops of Rome.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE BISHOP of Rome hath authoritie ouer other Biſhops.

The Papiſts.

They doubt not to ſay, that the Biſhop of Rome hath authoritie and ought ſo to haue, to ordaine and conſtitute Biſhops, to depriue and depoſe them, to reſtore them likewiſe to their former dignities, and this power he exerciſeth ouer the vniuerſall Church.

42. Error.

Argum. 1. The Ieſuites principall argument is drawne from certaine examples: how the Biſhops of Rome haue in times paſt, conſtituted, depoſed, and reſtored ſome Biſhops in the Greeke Church, as in the Patriarchall Sees of Conſtantinople, Alexandria, Antioch: Ergo, he hath power ouer all Biſhops.

Bellarm. lib. 2. de Rom. pont. cap. 18.

We anſwere. Firſt, It was not done by the abſolute authoritie of the Romane Biſhops, any ſuch conſtitution, or depoſition, though perhaps their conſent and allowance were required, as Leo writeth to Martianus the Emperour, about the ordaining of Anatolius Biſhop of Conſtantinople. Satis ſit, quod veſtræ pietatis auxilio & mei fauoris aſſenſu Epiſcopatum tantæ vrbis obtinuit: It is ſufficient, that by your godly helpe and my fauourable aſſent, he hath obtained ſo famous a Biſhopricke. Whether was greater now, the helpe and furtherance of the Emperour, or the bare aſſent of Leo? Secondly, we denie not but that the Pope ſometimes, what by ſufferance of others, what by his owne intruſion, hath vſurped this power ouer other Biſhops: but this ought not to make a law: that which is once or twice done by a falſe title, cannot prooue the iuſtneſſe of the title. Thirdly, that the Biſhop of Rome hath no ſuch authoritie, it appeareth by this, that he doth not, neither of many yeeres hath conſtituted or ordained the Patriarches of the Greeke Church: they came not vp to Rome, nor yet ſent thither for their pals as other Archbiſhops here in the Weſt parts haue done, and paied full deerely for them, being made ſlaues to the beaſt of Rome.

Epiſtol. 54.

This appeareth notably in the Councell of Florence, Seſſ. 25. for it ſo falling out, that Ioſephus Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who was there perſonally preſent, being an aged man, and wearied with long trauell, ſuddenly died; whereupon the Pope Eugenius the fourth, dealt with the Grecians very earneſtly, Vt nunc in ſynodo Patriarcham eligerent: That they would chuſe them a Patriarch now in the Synode: vt quem vos effeceritis, nos confirmemus: that whom you appoint, we may confirme, ſaith the Pope. The Grecians made him this anſwere: Se hic Patriarcham eligere non poſſe, cum Græcis mos ſemper fuerit, in ſua eccleſia Patriarcham ſufficere, ſimulq; conſecrare: They could not chuſe their Patriarch here, ſeeing it alwaies hath been the Grecians manner to chuſe the Patriarch in his owne Church, and there to consecrate him, &c. See then, it was denied to the Popes face, that he had doe with electing, consecrating, or confirming the Patriarch of Constantinople.

The Pope indeed doth take vpon him to this day, to make Patriarches: assigning to o
Constantinople; to another, the Patriarchship of Antioch, and so of the rest; but they h bare names, without either the dignitie or iurisdiction of those places: not much vnlike custome in the Emperours Court at Constantinople; the wanton Courtiers to make them vpon solemne daies were accustomed; aliquem e laicis insignibus episcopalibus compo nalem Patriarcham ageret: To take some lay man, and attyre him like a Bishop, who sh feit the Patriarch: which abuse was reformed, Synod 8. Constantin. can. 16. The like corrected in the Councell of Basil *Sess.*21. Turpem illum abusum remouendum censemus, ni celebritatibus nonnulli cum mitra, baculo, ac vestibus pontificalibus more episcoporum be thinke good that abuse bee remooued, that some at certaine solemnities of the yeare, d them with a Miter, a Staffe, and other pontificall vestures, as Bishops to giue blessing, &c. to these counterfeit Patriarches and Bishops, are the Popes Patriarches, who haue nothi name and habite of Patriarches.

Argum. 2. The Iesuite with the rest doe very much vrge a certaine place of Cyprian Cornelium: Non aliunde oborta sunt hæreses, aut nata schismata, quam inde, quod sacerdo temperatur, nec vnus in Ecclesia ad tempus sacerdos Christi vice cogitatur: From hence s and schismes, that Gods priest is not obeyed, and that one Priest or Pastor at once in t Christs stead is not acknowledged, &c. Whereupon they would conclude, that the Pop this one chiefe Priest, and Pastor in the Church: for Cyprian thus speaking writeth to Cor of Rome.

Answ. We must vnderstand that Cyprian at this time had to deale with the Nouatia at Rome where Cornelius was, and at Carthage where Cyprian was Bishop, diuiding the the Church, erected schismaticall Bishops of their owne against the Catholike Bishops: V casion Cyprian sheweth, that there ought to be but one Bishop, not ouer the whole vni euery particular Church: for he complaineth, that this vnitie of the Priesthood was no thage, as well as at Rome: for thus he writeth in the same Epistle, Epistol. 3. Cæterum di dico prouocatus, quando Episcopus in locum defuncti substituitur, &c. plebi suæ in Episcop nio iam probatus, toties ad leonem petitus, &c. ijs ipsis diebus quibus ad te has literas feci, ad postulatus, cum talis frater a quibusdam desperatis & perditis extra Ecclesiam constitu videtur: But I speake it with griefe, I speake it being prouoked, when a Bishop is substitu of the dead, &c. for the space of foure yeeres knowne and approoued to his people, so for to be throwne to the lyons, yea and that instant, when I wrote these letters to you, for to the lyons: when such a brother shall be impugned of certaine desperate and damn runnagates from the Church, &c. Who seeth not, that Cyprian here speaketh of himsel Cornelius, who was Bishop of Rome but two yeeres and an halfe; and complaineth that thage the right Pastor and Bishop was not obeyed? This place therefore serueth not at a macie of the Bishop of Rome.

The Protestants.

That the Pope neither hath, nor yet ought to haue any such authoritie ouer o

We haue alſo the conſent of antiquitie, the decrees of the eight generall Councels, that the Biſhop of Rome hath no ſuch preeminence or predominant power ouer his fellow Biſhops.

Concil. Nicen. 1. can. 6. Honos ſuus cuique ſeruetur eccleſiæ, &c. To euery Church be reſerued the honour and dignitie thereof, let the olde cuſtome in Lybia, Egypt, Pentapolis, take place; Ita vt Alexandrinus Epiſcopus horum omnium habeat poteſtatem, quia & vrbis Romæ Epiſcopo parilis mos eſt: So that the Biſhop of Alexandria haue the iuriſdiction ouer all theſe Prouinces, becauſe the like vſe of manner remaineth to the Biſhop of Rome; that is, the Biſhop of Alexandria ſhall haue authoritie ouer his confines, as the Biſhop of Rome ouer his: not as Bellarmine doth odly expound it, let the Biſhop of Alexandria rule his Prouince, becauſe the Biſhop of Rome hath the like cuſtome ouer the ſame prouince of Egypt, Lybia, &c. for this were, idem per idem, to proue the ſame by the ſame: and the Canon ſaith, parilis mos, the like vſe: Ergo. Alexandria hath the like authoritie. But if Rome were aboue the Sea of Alexandria, their iuriſdiction ſhould not be like, but vnlike. And againe, let euery Church haue it owne honour. But if Rome were the commander of the reſt, the honour ſhould be onely reſerued to it, and to no Church beſide.

Conſtantinopol. 1. the 2. generall, Can. 2. the former Canon of Nice is ratified.

Epheſin. 3. general. Can. 8. it was decreed, after that Zenon Biſhop of Cyprus had complained of the vſurpation of the Patriarch of Antioch, affirming, that they within the Iland did alwaies chuſe their owne Metropolitane, and that neither the Biſhop of Antioch, nec alius quiſpiam, nor any other did euer ordaine there: it was decreed, that Cyprus ſhould be exempt from the iuriſdiction of Antioch, or of any other Sea; and ſhould chuſe their Metropolitane themſelues: Ergo, much leſſe was Cyprus ſubiect to the Sea of Rome.

Chalcedonenſ. the 4. generall, action. 16. they determine, the Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, Eiſdem primatibus honoris dignum: To be worthie of the ſame primacie of honour, which the Biſhop of Rome hath: This was decreed, though Paſchaſinus, and Lucinius the Popes Legates earneſtly withſtood it. And further in the ſame place, the matter was thus in that Councell diſcuſſed: Sedi ſenioris Romæ, propter imperium ciuitatis illius, &c. Vnto the Sea of the elder Rome, becauſe it was the imperiall Citie, the Fathers did giue priuiledges: And by the ſame reaſon the 150. Fathers aſſembled in Conſtantinople being moued, Æqua ſanctiſſima ſedi nouæ Romæ, &c. Did aſcribe equall priuiledges to the moſt holy Sea of new Rome; thinking it reaſonable, that the Citie, which was adorned both with the imperiall ſeate, and Senate, ſhould enioy equall priuiledges with olde Rome, and in Eccleſiaſticall affaires to haue maieſtie as well as the other. and to be ſecond after the other, &c. Out of the acts of this Councell three things may be gathered: Firſt, that both in this Synode, and in the ſecond generall Councell of Conſtantinople equall priuiledges were giuen to the Sea of Conſtantinople, with Rome. Secondly, that notwithſtanding, Rome for antiquitie ſake had the firſt place. Thirdly, that theſe two Patriarchall Seas had thoſe priuiledges by reaſon of the imperiall dignitie; contrarie to that, which Bellarmine beareth vs in hand, that Rome had the primacie ouer other Churches from Chriſt, and not from Cæſar, c. 17. And yet beſide the authoritie of this Councell, in the Trullane the ſixth generall, Can. 38. it was thus decreed: Si qua ciuitas à regia poteſtate innouata, &c. If any Citie in reſpect of the ciuill ſtate bee innouated and exalted by the princely power, that the order alſo of Eccleſiaſticall matters ſhould follow, that is, it ſhould be chiefe alſo in Eccleſiaſticall affaires, as in ciuill, &c. wherefore it is euident, that olde Rome enioyed her priuiledges by the benefit of the Empire.

Conſtantinop. 2. the 5. generall, action. 1. the Synode ſpeaking of Leo Biſhop of Rome, and Cyrillus of Alexandria, ſaith thus, Qui æqualiter, ab hac ſynodo, pro ſtatu orthodoxæ fidei honorati ſunt: Whom this Synode honoureth alike, becauſe of the right faith, &c. The Synode giueth like honour to the Biſhops of Rome and Alexandria.

Conſtantinop. 3. the 6. generall, which is alſo the Trullane. Can. 36. Decernimus vt thronus Conſtantinopol. æqualia priuilegia cum antiqua Romæ throno obtineat: We decree that the Sea of Conſtantinople enioy equall priuiledges with the ancient Sea of Rome.

Concil. the 7. generall, action. 2. Adrianus the Biſhop of Rome writeth to Tharaſius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, giuing him this ſtile, Dilecto fratri Tharaſio, vniuerſali Patriarchæ: To my beloued brother Tharaſius, vniuerſall Patriarch, &c. We ſee then that the Biſhop of Conſtantinople had both the like ſtile and authoritie, which the Biſhop of Rome had.

Conſtantinop. 4. the 8. generall, Can. 21. Definimus, qui patriarchalibus ſedibus præſunt, omni honore dignos iudicandos: We define, that the preſidents of the patriarchall Seas are worthie all honor, &c. and then are reckoned vp, firſt Rome, then Conſtantinople; after theſe Alexandria, Antioch, Ieruſalem: ſo that the Sea of Rome is but patriarchall, as the reſt: a primacie onely of order it hath, to be named before the reſt.

Thus we haue the conſent of the 8. generall Councels, to the which Auguſtine agreeth, Habe[illegible] Epiſcopus, ſaith hee, pro licentia libertatis ſuæ arbitrium proprium, tanquam iudicari ab alio non poſſit, [illegible] modo nec ipſe poteſt alium iudicare, ſed expectemus vniuerſi iudicium domini noſtri Ieſu Chriſti: Euery Biſhop is priuiledged by his owne authoritie to follow his owne iudgement, neither is ſubiect to the iudgement of other Biſhops, as hee is not to iudge them, but they all muſt bee referred to the iudgement ment of Chriſt, &c. See then in this place Auguſtine ſetteth Biſhops in the higheſt roome in the Church, and ſaith, they haue no Iudge aboue them but Chriſt.

Of this iudgement alſo were the holy Martyrs: that the Biſhop of Rome had no ſuch ſoueraigntie ouer other Biſhops Thomas Benet Martyr affirmed, that the Pope of Rome was but Biſhop ouer his owne Dioceſſe, and that he had no further power, Fox pag.1039.col.2.

M. Philpot telleth Boner, that by the word of God, the Pope hath no more authoritie, then the Biſhop of London hath, Fox pag.1811.col.1. And he ſheweth further, how that Cyprian called the Biſhop of Rome his fellow Biſhop, p.1804. col.2.

Pag.1644.1.50.

The ſentence of theſe holy Martyrs ſealed with their blood, is of greater waight then many arguments: and by thoſe that loue the truth, ought much to be reuerenced, and had in great regard.

Now laſtly we will obiect againſt them the Imperiall conſtitutions, together with their owne Canons: for the firſt, Cod.lib.1.tit.5.l.6.Honor.Theodoſ.Vrbs Conſtantinopolitan. veteris Romæ prærogatiua lætatur: The Citie of Conſtantinople hath the prerogatiue of old Rome. And *leg.*15. Leo, Anthem, Conſtantinop.Eccleſia mater noſtræ pietatis, &c. The Church of Conſtantinople the mother of our faith, and of all right beleeuing Chriſtians, &c. And in the ſame place, the priuiledge of that Church, ante alios reſidendi, to haue the firſt ſeate, is ratified and confirmed. And whereas Bellarmine vrgeth the Epiſtle of Iuſtinian written to Iohannes Biſhop of Rome, where he acknowledgeth Rome to be the head of all Churches: Cod.lib.1.tit.4.leg.4. the ſame Iuſtinian tit.20.l.1. thus expoundeth himſelfe, hauing giuen the ſame title of headſhip vnto Rome, Romam intelligimus, non ſolum veterem, ſed hanc regiam noſtram: By Rome we vnderſtand, not onely olde Rome, but this princely Citie alſo, Quæ melioribus condita eſt augurijs: Which was firſt founded and built with more happie and proſperous beginnings, &c. Thus wee ſee that the Imperiall Citie of Conſtantinople by the lawes Imperiall was made equall to Rome. And their owne decrees alſo doe ratifie that Canon of the Chalcedon Councell, that Conſtantinople ſhould haue ſimilia priuilegia, like priuiledges to the Citie of Rome, Decr.p.1.diſt.22. cap.6.

Here alſo we haue the conſent of other Churches. 1. Nilus of the Greeke Church thus teſtifieth: The primacie, which the Biſhop of Rome hath ouer other vniuerſall Biſhops, is not like vnto that, which a Biſhop of a prouince hath ouer thoſe which are vnder him: For there the primacie is (for [a] order ſake, and rather in words, then in deedes) but in the other there is an equalitie in words, and a primacie in deede. And againe, if becauſe thou [b] art the firſt in number, thou wilt chalenge a dominion, grant this alſo to the Patriarke of Conſtantinople, for he alſo is ſet before him of Alexandria. And afterward, if becauſe Peter died at Rome, thou count the Romane Sea great, Ieruſalem ſhall be farre greater, ſeeing our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, there vndertooke [c] his liuely death.

2 The South Church hath not in times paſt acknowledged any ſuch ſuperioritie of the Biſhop of Rome ouer other Biſhops: as it may appeare by the oppoſition of the Biſhops of Africa againſt Pope Celeſtine, about a certaine Canon of the Nicene Councell, and before that betweene Cyprian and Stephen Biſhop of Rome in the queſtion of rebaptizing: with Cyprian tooke part one Firmilianus, who thus reproueth the inſolencie of the Biſhop of Rome. What can be more baſe or vaine, then to holde contention, with ſo many Biſhops through the world, breaking peace, &c. ſometime with the Eaſterne people, ſometime with you of the South. The ſame is the practiſe of the South, and the Aethiopike Church at this day: their great primate whom they call Abuna, being elected by the Aethiopian Monkes at Ieruſalem, is conſecrated by the Patriarke of Alexandria, who hath his ſeate at Cayro in Egipt: not expecting the confirmation of the Biſhop of Rome, to whom yet they yeeld a primacie (of order) among other Biſhops, as Zaga Zabo an Aethiopian Biſhop in his confeſſion of their faith.

Wee beleeue that all true Paſtors, in what place ſo euer they bee placed, haue the ſame and equall authoritie among themſelues, giuen vnto them vnder Ieſus Chriſt, the onely head, and the chiefe, and alone vniuerſall Biſhop: and therefore it is not lawfull for any Church, to chalenge vnto it ſelfe, dominion or ſoueraigntie ouer any other Church, &c. Hereunto agreeth our Engliſh confeſſion, artic.5. That the Biſhop of Rome hath no more iuriſdiction ouer the Church of God, then the reſt of the Patriarkes either of Alexandria, or Antioch haue, &c.

Harm.p.360.

4 And that this claime of the Popes, to ouertop and ouerrule other Biſhops, hath beene contradicted in times paſt, and oppoſed againſt, ſome of the Popiſh writers themſelues acknowledge: as Cardinall Cuſanus ſaith: That the Councell of Afrike withſtoode Celeſtine, in that he would do againſt the Councell of Nice, and Celeſtine replied not that he might doe it, but alleaged for himſelfe the Councell though corrupted. Surius maketh mention of an Epiſtle of the Emperour Theodoſius, directed to Dioſcorus Patriarke of Alexandria, in the Epheſine Councell the third generall: wherein hee yeeldeth the primacie vnto him. See alſo their owne decrees before alleaged, for the equalizing of the Sea of Conſtantinople vnto Rome, as was decreed in the Chalcedon Councell.

THE SECOND PART CONCERNING APpeales to be made to Rome.

The Papiſts.

SVch, ſay they, is the preeminent authoritie of the Biſhop of Rome, that appeales may be made vnto him from all Churches in the world, and that all ought to ſtand to his ſentence and determination. 43. Error.

For the proofe hereof they bring no Scripture, nor any ſound argument, but ſtand chiefly vpon certaine odde examples of ſome that haue appealed to Rome: which wee denie not to haue beene done: but our anſwere more at large is this, Bellar. lib. 2. de pontif. cap. 21.

1 One cauſe of theſe appeales, was both for that they which were iuſtly condemned of other Churches, found greater libertie and fauour at Rome, as Apiarius did; who being condemned in the ſixth Aphricane Councell for his deteſtable conditions, found fauour with Zoſimus Biſhop of Rome, who wrote for him to the Councell to be receiued againe. No merueile then, if licentious fellowes, hoping to finde more fauour at Rome, did appeale thither: As alſo the ambition of the Biſhops of Rome did ſomewhat helpe forward this matter, who were as readie to receiue ſuch appeales, as others were to make them.

2 Biſhop Tunſtall doth anſwere very fully to this point, that, although appeales were made to Rome, yet was it not for any iuriſdiction that the Sea had: but this was the cauſe, partly for that there were many diuiſions and part-takings in the Orientall Churches, as alſo becauſe many were infected with hereſies, from the which the Weſt and Occidentall Churches were more free; they were content to referre the cauſe many times to the Biſhop of Rome, as being a more indifferent Iudge, and not like to be partiall, being no partie in the cauſe. Neither was their ſuite to the Biſhop of Rome ſingularly, but to the whole congregation of the Biſhops of Italy and France, or of the whole Weſt, as it appeareth by the Epiſtles of Baſile. Tunſtal, apud Fox. 1067. col. 1. Pag. 973. 2. 80.

The Ieſuit alleageth the fourth and ſeuenth Canons of the Councell of Sardis, which he ſaith was a generall Councell conſiſting of 300. Biſhops: which ſaid Canons do allow & authoriſe appeales made to the Sea of Rome, and there the cauſes to be determined, or by direction from the Biſhop of Rome.

Anſw. 1. That ſuch Canons are to be found in the Councell which beareth the name of Sardis, wee grant: but that ſmall credit is to be giuen vnto thoſe Canons, which goe vnder the name of this Councell; we are led by theſe coniectures and likelihoods ſo to thinke. 1. Hoſius Biſhop of Corduba in Spaine, was the author of theſe two Canons, who both might be partiall in behalfe of the Occidentall Patriarch of Rome: neither is much to be attributed to him, for his inconſtancie, becauſe he ſubſcribed to the Arimine Councell of the Arrians. 2. Whereas it is affirmed that there were preſent 300. Biſhops of the Weſt and 76. of the Eaſt, Can. 21. we finde that there were of this number but 121. that ſubſcribed: for the Greekes went apart by themſelues, and it ſhould ſeeme that many Biſhops of the Latine Church departed alſo: this Canon therefore had not the conſent of the Greeke Church: ſo it ſeemeth to haue beene a tumultuarie and diſordered Councell, for otherwiſe it ſhould haue beene counted the ſecond generall Councell, as being next in time vnto the firſt Nicene Synode. 3. That there are diuers Canons forged vnder the name of this Councell, of the which it is like theſe are, it appeareth by the preface to this Councell, where we reade thus: Sunt alia 40. regulæ quæ per Oſium Epiſcopum Cordubenſem currunt, quæ titulantur tanquam Epiſcoporum apud Sardicam, &c. There be beſide theſe 40. other rules which paſſe vnder the name of Oſius Cordubenſ. which are entituled, as decreed by the Biſhops at Sardis, which the Grecians haue not, but are found onely among the Latines. 4. One of their owne Cardinals ſaith, It may be doubted, an Sardicenſis concilij conſtitutio extat. whether any ſuch conſtitution of the Councell of Sardis be extant, becauſe the fathers of the 6. Africane Councell write, that they found no ſuch conſtitution in any Synode of the fathers. 5. And that Canon being admitted, yet the Popes authoritie of receiuing appeales, is much cenſured and reſtrained thereby: for thus ſaith the Canon, when any appealeth to the Biſhop of Rome, he may ſend if he thinke good, Qui præſentes cum Epiſcopis iudicent, which preſent together with the Biſhop of the Prouince ſhall iudge the cauſe, &c. the ſole power is not left vnto him, but together with other Biſhops, which examined and iudged the cauſe before. Cuſan. lib. 2. Concord. c. 25.

Anſw. 2. We haue many decrees and Canons of better Councels, to oppoſe againſt this tumultuous conuenticle of Sardis.

Leo.Epiſtol.82.ad Anaſtaſium, Biſhop of Theſſalonica: he reproueth the ſaid Biſhop, for citing peremptorily one Atticus a Biſhop to come before him, and compelling him, iter aſperum & periculis plenum per inuias niues agere, to take a bitter iourney, and dangerous, through ſnow, and vnknowne wayes, in ſo much that ſome of his companie periſhed by the way, &c. As this was a fault in him; ſo hath it beene in diuers Popes, that haue cauſed many in the depth of Winter, with perill, yea loſſe of life, to obey their citations.

Conſtantinopol.generel 8.can.26. Liceat Epiſcopis prouocare ad Patriarcham, ſi crediderint ſe iniuſtitiam pati à Metropolitano, à quo litibus finis imponatur: It ſhall bee lawfull for the Biſhops to appeale to their Patriarch, if they be wronged by their Metropolitane, and the Patriarch ſhall end the ſtrife. There neede not then any further appeale to Rome.

The Proteſtants.

THat appeales ought not to be made to Rome, but that all matters and controuerſies may beſt be ended and determined at home, where they doe ariſe: It is thus confirmed.

1 This matter was notably handled, anno 420. in the ſixth Councell of Carthage, where Auguſtine was preſent, with Proſper and Oroſius: To this Councell Pope Zozimus ſent his Legate with certaine requeſts, of the which this was one; that it might bee lawfull for Biſhops and Prieſts to appeale from the ſentence of their Metropolitanes, and alſo of the Councel, to Rome: alleaging for himſelfe a decree of the Nicene Councell. The Councell of Carthage ſent forthwith to the Patriarches of Conſtantinople, Antioch and Alexandria, for a copie of the Councell of Nice, wherein no ſuch Canon was found, that appeales ſhould bee made to Rome: but the contrarie; for in the ſixth Canon of that Councell, it was found how all matters, and all perſons Eccleſiaſticall, both Biſhops and others were committed to their Metropolitanes. Vpon this decree the Councell of Carthage drew out certaine reaſons why appeales ſhould not be made to Rome: Firſt, it is not otherwiſe to be thought, but that the grace of God is as readie at hand in one prouince as in another. Secondly, there is no need to ſeeke any outlandiſh helpe: for the partie grieued may appeale to a prouinciall or generall Councell. Thirdly, it were not equall nor right to appeale from the Councell to the Biſhop of Rome: for it is not like that God will inſpire his truth vnto the Biſhop, and denie it to a multitude congregated in his name. Pag.973.a.80.

Fourthly, no forraine or outlandiſh iudgement can bee ſo vpright or iuſt: becauſe the witneſſes cannot be preſent, being hindred by infirmitie of ſexe, age, ſickneſſe, by whom the truth ſhould bee diſcuſſed.

Vpon theſe reaſons the Councell concluded, that neither any appeales ſhould bee made to Rome: neither that Legates ſhould be ſent from Rome for deciding of matters: And this anſwere they made to Zozimus firſt, then to Bonifacius and Celeſtinus, that in ſhort time one ſucceeded another. And for all the Biſhop of Romes abſolution, Apiarius was againe called coram, and brought to confeſſe his fault.

Now out of the Acts of this Councell, and their reaſons alleaged we conclude, that it is not fit, conuenient nor reaſonable, that appeales ſhould be made to Rome.

The Ieſuite anſwereth, that appeales were forbidden to bee made by Prieſts to Rome, not by Biſhops. This is but a vaine ſhift, for the reaſons of the Councell are generall againſt all appeales. And one of Pope Zozimus his requeſts, which the Councell iudged to bee vnreaſonable, and therefore would not yeeld to it, was generall, that it might be lawfull for Biſhops and Prieſts to appeale from the ſentence of their Metropolitanes, and alſo from the Councell to the Sea of Rome: the Ieſuites ſurmiſe therefore is falſe, that the Councell onely prouided againſt the appellation of Prieſts to Rome, and not of Biſhops, Concilior.tom.1.Concil.Carth.6.

But whereas Pope Zozimus is charged with forgerie, for corrupting of the Canons of the Nicene Councell: Bellarmine doth buſily beſtirre himſelfe to preſerue the credite of his great maſter, and ſo the reſt of that ſide, but all to little purpoſe.

Firſt, in the 20. Seſſion of the Florentine Councell, where the Biſhops of the Greeke Church were preſent with their Emperor, Marcus Biſhop of Epheſus affirmed that Zozimus had corrupted the Nicene Councell; for the copies ſent from Cyrillus of Alexandria, and Proclus Patriarch of Conſtantinople contained no ſuch thing, as was alleaged by Zozimus, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould be called vniuerſall; or Oecumenicall Biſhop; and ſo concludeth that the Biſhop of Rome did ſend falſum decretum, a falſe decree vnto the Synode. Againſt him roſe vp Iohannes the Prouinciall, affirming that to be falſe that was reported of Zozimus, and that the Greeke copies were corrupted rather, for Athanaſius did write to Marcus Biſhop of Rome for the true copie of the Nicene Councell, which the Arrians had burned at Alexandria. But Bellarmine himſelfe reiecteth this anſwere, as vntrue, for that Marcus was not then liuing, when the Arrians (Athanaſius being expulſed) burned the bookes: and therefore Athanaſius could not write to a dead man. And againe, if Marcus (ſaith he) had ſent the true copies to Athanaſius, then the copies kept at Alexandria, would not haue varied from that, which Zozimus ſent afterward. Thus Bellarmine confuteth the allegation of the Prouinciall, cap.25. therefore he hath deuiſed two other eſpeciall anſweres beſide. Firſt, he ſaith, that many Canons of the Nicene Councell are wanting, and theſe cited by Zozimus might be ſome of them. Contra. It is verie like, that more Canons, then are now extant, were agreed vpon in the Nicene Councell, as Gre-

[illegible] sent to the King of Armenia for a true copie of the Nicene Councell, which was thought to be all extant in that tongue: yet the Church of Rome neuer receiued but 20. Canons, amongst the which, those of Zozimus cannot be found, so saith Stephanus one of your Popes, dist. 16. can. 13. Or we may answere with their Iesuite Pisanus, who obserueth out of a certaine Greeke author, that there were two kind of decrees in the Nicen Councell, the one called diatyposes constitutions, the other Canons, concerning Ecclesiasticall discipline, &c. though the number of their constitutions be not knowne, yet the number of the Canons may be certaine.

Alphons. Pisan. initio, 3. lib. de Concil. Nicen.

Secondly, these Canons cited by Zozimus were not extant in the Councell of Nice, but of Sardis, which were both taken for one Councell, and of like authoritie; and therefore the Canons of the one might be taken for the other.

Contra. First, these two Councels could not be taken for one, there being at the least twentie yeeres betweene; nor of like authoritie, the Councell of Sardis not hauing the consent of the Greeke Church, as I haue shewed. Secondly, the Canons of the Nicen which are wanting, are thought to haue been inserted into the Councell of Antioch, not this of Sardis, as Stephanus thinketh, dist. 16. cap. 13. And therefore they had better reason to mistake that Councell, rather then the other for the Nicen. Thirdly, all that the Iesuite hath said, if it were as he affirmeth, doth but excuse the Pope from wilfull corruption of the Councell, and imputeth it to his ignorance: but I will spend no longer time about this matter.

Thirdly, their coniecture is as vaine, which imagine, that the Greeke copies of the Nicen Councell were corrupted by the Arians: Baron. tom. 5. annot. 419. numer. 80. For both Cyrillus of Alexandria, and Atticus of Constantinople were professed enemies to the Arians, who affirme, that they sent the true and vncorrupted copies of the Councell. Cyrillus calleth them fidelissima exemplaria, most faithfull copies, which he sent: and Atticus saith, Canones in integro direxi, I haue directed vnto you the entire Canons, as they were ordained in the Nicen Synode.

Surius tom. 1. rescript. Cyril. epist. Attic. ibid. pag. 590.

Argument. We can bring the decrees of a latter Councell, then this of Carthage: for in the Councell of Basil it was decreed, that no actions or controuersies should be brought from other Countries to be pleaded at Rome, which were more then foure daies iourney distant from the said court of Rome, [illegible] principall matters onely excepted, apud Fox. pag. 699.

Lateranens. Concil. sub Innocent. 3. cap. 37. Statuimus, ne quis vltra duas dietas extra suam dioecesim per literas apostolicas ad iudicium trahi possit: Wee ordaine, that no man should bee drawne by letters Apostolicall (he meaneth Citations from Rome) aboue two daies iourneie out of his owne diocesse.

Argum. 3. This also is flatly contrarie to the rule of the Apostle, that appellations should bee made out of the Church a farre off. Is it so, saith he, that there is not a wise man amongst you, no not one that can iudge amongst his brethren? 1. Cor. 6. 5. Ergo, euery Church hath wise men sufficient in it, whereby their controuersies may be ended.

1. Cor. 6. 5.

4 Augustine also thus writeth concerning this matter, (Miltiades Episcopus Romanus,) non sibi vsurpauit (iudicium de causa Caeciliani) sed rogatus imperator iudices misit Episcopos, qui cum eo sederent, epist. 162. Miltiades Bishop of Rome did not vsurpe or take vpon himselfe to iudge the cause of Caecilian, but the Emperour being requested, sent other Bishops, that should sit and determine the cause together with him. Out of these words first we note, that it had been vsurpation and presumption for the Bishop of Rome to haue taken vpon him the iudgement of this matter, not belonging vnto him, vnlesse the Emperour had committed it. Secondly, that Miltiades did not suffer other Bishops to sit with him, as Bellarmine imagineth: but he could not otherwise chuse, for they were ioyned in commission by the Emperour, to be iudges as well as he. Thus we see what small shew or colour of title the Pope hath, to heare or receiue appeales from other countries.

Lastly, concerning the vnlawfulnesse of appeales to Rome, we haue the full consent and determination of the Clergie of England, in King Henrie the 8. his daies, assembled then in the Conuocation house: in the which number of them which consented and subscribed, were Stephen Gardener, Tonstal, Stokesly, Boner, Heth, and other, which were Archpapists in those daies, with many other: In a certaine instrument therefore, whereunto they subscribe, they protest against the Pope, for receiuing of forraine appellations in this manner: The Popes, say they, doe transgresse their owne profession made in their creation: for they, in their creation doe make a solemne vow and promise, inuiolably to obserue and [illegible] made in the first eight generall Councels; among the which is especially prouided, [illegible] that all causes shall be determined in the same prouince where they began, [illegible]. Fox p. 1064. col. 1.

Pag. 971. l. 40.

[illegible] Imperiall and Pontificall constitutions concerning the inhibiting of appeales to [illegible] farre off. Cod. lib. 3. tit. 13. leg. 3. Dioclesian: Actor debet sequi forum rei. That the plaintiffe must sue in the court of the defendant, where he dwelleth. And lib. 3. tit. 19. l. 2. the same Diocles. Quamcunque causam agendam, &c. What cause so euer a man hath in hand, hee must goe to the President of the prouince, where they haue their dwelling, whom hee impleadeth, &c. Thus euen by the light of nature, the heathen Emperour could see what was right and reasonable in this case. [illegible] Christian Emperours also haue decreed the same, as Constantin. Cod. lib. 3. [illegible] Ter- aliam prouinciarum non cogantur excedere? That widowes, pupils, impotents, and sicke persons should not be called out of their owne prouince, no not by warrant from the Emperour. And concerning Ecclesiasticall persons, Leo and Anthemius enacted thus: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 3. leg. 31. Vt sacerdotes cuiuscunque gradus, &c. That priests of what degree soeuer, should not be called to forren Courts. Which law is generall for all Clergie men, of what degree soeuer: which taketh away the Iesuites cauillous answere, that it was forbidden inferiour priests, but not Bishops, to appeale to the Court of Rome.

Their owne Canons herein are agreeable to the Ciuill law: Decret. part. 2. causs. 3. quaest. 6. c. 1. Fabianus, ibi causa agatur, vbi crimen admittitur: The cause must be handled, where the crime was committed. And cap. 1. Accusatum non oportet alibi quam in foro suo audiri: That he which is accused should not elsewhere be iudged but in his owne Court. Can. 17. Sixtus, Si quis Clericus, &c. If any Clergie man bee accused of what crime soeuer, in the same prouince where the partie accused remaineth, the action must be followed, &c. Here is no exception made of Bishops, nor any reseruation for the Sea of Rome, as in some other Canons may be found. Thus we see that the Bishop of Rome in arrogating to himselfe this authoritie to receiue appeales from all the parts of the world, doth therein contrarie to the Imperiall, and Pontificiall lawes.

Let the constant iudgement and practise of the holy Martyrs also bee seene: Iohn Husse being wrongfully condemned in the Councell of Constance, appealeth not from them to the Pope, but to the tribunall seate of Christ, Fox p. 611.

Pag. 562. 2. 19. Bishop Cranmer appealeth from the sentence of the Pope to a generall Councell: thereby shewing what he thought of appeales made to Rome.

Pag. 1708. 2. 74. Master Philpot, when one Curtop obiected, how that Ireneus went vp to Rome vnto Victor then Bishop there, to aske his aduice about the excommunication of certaine heretikes, and thereby would prooue the Popes supremacie, and prerogatiue in receiuing of appeales: he answereth, This fact (saith he) of Ireneus, maketh no more for the supremacie of the Pope, then mine hath done, which was at Rome, as well as he, and might haue spoken with the Pope, if I had list, and yet I would none in England did fauour his supremacie more then I, &c. pag. 1803. col. 2.

Pag. 1637. 1. 60. Now concerning appeales to be made to the Bishop of Rome. 1. The East Church denieth it: as both Nilus, lib. 2. de primat. And Barlaam de princip. pap. c. 9. doe alleage the 9. and 17. Canons of the Councell of Chalcedon, where the right of appeale is giuen vnto the Sea of Constantinople: if any Bishop be wronged by his Metropolitane, he should bee iudged by the President of the diocesse, or prouince, or by the Sea of Constantinople.

2. The iudgement and practise of the South Church in times past, we haue seene before in the sixth Africane Councell: and the same is the opinion of the Aethiopike Church, as Zaga Zabo confesseth, that he was not sent by his great Lord the Emperor of Aethiopia to the Bishop of Rome, either to increase or diminish humane traditions, but to contract friendship; and concerning the heresies of Arius, to know whether the Christians of Europe agreed with them. They will not make the Pope a iudge, to prescribe rules vnto them, but onely to know, how he accordeth and consenteth with them.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

3 The iudgement of the reformed Churches is: That it is not lawfull for any Church, to challenge vnto it selfe dominion ouer another. French confession artic. 25. That no mortall creature is able rightlie to conteine and put in order the vniuersall Church, that is, all parts of the world. English confession artic. 5.

4 Wee haue seene the decrees of the Romane Church before, restraining appeales from one countrie to another. And Æneas Syluius one of their own Popes confesseth, that before the Nicen Councel, euery one liued to himselfe, and small respect was had to the Church of Rome: till that time then appeales were not made to Rome, and in the Councell of Nice, the like authoritie was giuen to the other Patriarches, as to the Bishop of Rome. can. 6.

Epist. 301.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER THE POPE be subiect to the iudgement of any.

The Papists.

44. Error.

THe Pope neither can nor ought to be iudged either of the Emperour, or any other Secular or Ecclesiasticall Magistrate, no nor of any generall Councell, Bellar. cap. 26. Nay, he should doe iniurie vnto God, to submit himselfe to the iudgement of any, Iacobat. in Tilbemont. de pontif. Rom. art. 34.

Beside certaine blind Canons and constitutions, and a few examples grounded vpon the insolent practises of Popes, they haue no other arguments either out of Scripture, or drawne from reason, to confirme this their vnreasonable opinion withall.

Argum. 1. Bellarmine reasoneth thus: The Prince is not to be iudged by the common-wealth, but is greater then his kingdome: the Pope is the Prince of the Church, Ergo.

We answere: First, concerning the Princes high and soueraigne authoritie, we will not now dispute: we make it not infinite, the word of God must bee a rule and square both of Ciuill and Ecclesiasticall iudgement. Secondly, it is sufficient for vs here to answere, that the Iesuite hath said nothing:

for that which he aſſumeth for a reaſon, is the greateſt matter in queſtion betweene vs; and ſo great an vntruth he hath vttered, that he is conſtrained to leaue Scripture, and ſeeke helpe elſewhere. But he ſhall neuer, by any good reaſon, or ſufficient authoritie proue, that the Pope hath any ſuch Princedome in the Church, as he would beare vs in hand, or as the Prince hath in the commonwealth.

Argum. 4. Bellarmine alleageth a decree of the Siueſſane Councell, Nemo vnquam iudicauit pontificem: prima ſedes non iudicabitur a quoquam: Neuer any man iudged the Pope; the firſt ſeate ſhall not be iudged of any.

Anſw. 1. By this decree the Biſhop of Rome is no more exempted from iudgement, then all Biſhops are by that decretall of Pope Pius 1. epiſt. 1. decretal. Epiſcopi a Deo ſunt iudicandi, ipſo Domino exemplum dante, quando per ſeipſum non per alium ſacerdotes ementes & vendentes eiecit e templo: The Biſhops muſt be iudged of God: whereof the Lord himſelfe giueth vs an example, when by himſelfe and not another, he caſt out the prieſts that bought and ſold out of the temple. But Bellarmine heere hath found out an anſwere for vs: Epiſcopum non poſſe iudicari niſi a Deo, dico intelligi debere, in rebus dubijs & occultis: That a Biſhop is not to bee iudged but of God, I ſay, it muſt bee vnderſtood, in ſecret and doubtfull matters, lib. 2. de Roman. pontif. cap. 26. reſponſ. ad Cypriani locum: So wee anſwere concerning the Pope, that he is left to Gods iudgement, only in ſecret matters.

2. Concerning the Councel Siueſſane, notwithſtanding thoſe words which are thruſt in in the end of the Councell, it is certaine that Marcellinus Biſhop of Rome, for ſacrificing to Idols, was iudged and condemned of the Councell, as may appeare by theſe circumſtances: Firſt, Marcellinus was brought before the Councell, and appeared foure times, twice denying his fault, and caſting it vpon others, the third time he excuſeth his fault, that he did not ſacrifice, Sed tantum grana leuatis manibus ſuper prunas tumbuſſi: I did onely lifting vp my hands caſt incenſe into the fire: the fourth time, hee falleth flat vpon the ground confeſſing his fault, and ſaying, Peccaui coram vobis: I haue ſinned before you all. Secondly, there were 72. witneſſes produced againſt him; for the Councell ſaith, In 72. comparentibus damnabitur præſul: A Prelate muſt be condemned by 72. witneſſes. Whereto then ſerueth this ſtreight examining, the often appearing of Marcellinus, and the producing of witneſſes, if he were not iudged? Thirdly, and yet the thing is made more manifeſt; in that one Quirinus a Biſhop ſtanding vp in the Councell, ſaid thus: Infudiſti cor tuum pontifex malitia: Thou haſt (O Biſhop) filled thy heart with malice: propterea ego non recedam de ſynodo, donec perſpiciam cor tuum manifeſtum: therefore I will not riſe from the Synode, before thy ſtained heart be made manifeſt. And then it followeth, Ibi ergo iacentem & moram facientem damnauerunt: They condemned Marcellinus lying vpon the ground. How can it be denied now, but that Marcellinus was both rebuked and condemned in this Councell?

Argum. 5. The Rhemiſts thus argue, out of that place of the Apoſtle, 2. Corinth. 8. 5. They gaue themſelues firſt to the Lord, then to vs: therefore (ſay they) the principall reſpect next after God, is to be had of the Miniſters of religion, in all temporall and ſpirituall duties, Annot. in hunc locum.

2.Cor.8.5.

Anſw. It is true that the Miniſters of God, teaching according to his will, as the Apoſtle here ſaith, ought of all men principally to be heard: yet this excludeth not the ſoueraigne authoritie of the Prince ouer all perſons, to whom the Apoſtle elſewhere exhorteth euery ſoule to be ſubiect, Rom. 13. 1. The Apoſtle then in this place ſpeaketh of ſpirituall inſtruction, not of ciuill adminiſtration.

Rom.13.1.

The Proteſtants.

That the Pope, as well as other eccleſiaſticall perſons, ought to bee, and is by right, ſubiect to the iudgement and authoritie of the Emperour, King, Prince, or other ſupreame Magiſtrate, and may alſo by generall Councels be corrected and cenſured, thus it is prooued.

Argum. 1. Peter was iudged of Paul, Galat. 2. and of him iuſtly reprooued: Ergo, the doings of the Pope may be iudged and cenſured.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that it was not iudicialis cenſura, but fraterna correptio, it was no iudiciall cenſure, but a brotherly reprehenſion.

We replie: firſt, publike cenſure and reprehenſion is a part of eccleſiaſticall iudgement and diſcipline, therefore Peter being publikely rebuked, was thereby iudged alſo of Paul. Secondly, the queſtion is not onely concerning publike and open iudgement, but whether it be lawfull to call the Popes doings into queſtion, and whether his decrees are abſolutely to be receiued without any ſcanning or diſcuſſing, or making any doubt thereof: for this we hold, that it is the dutie of all Chriſtians to examine and trie the truth of all things, which they are to receiue and to beleeue, though they ſit not formally and iudicially, as in Conſiſtories, to iudge their ſpirituall paſtors: ſo the Bereans iudged of the Apoſtles doctrine: ſo may the Popes decrees bee examined and iudged. Thirdly, the Ieſuite graunteth, the Pope may be rebuked and brotherly reproued: but the Extrauagant denyeth it, Nemo eſt, qui dicere audeat, domine cur facis ſic? None dare ſay vnto him, ſir why doe you ſo?

[illegible] Nilus lib.1. de primat.

Argum. 2. Euery ſoule muſt be ſubiect to the higher powers: Ergo the Pope, Rom. 13. 1. Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh of all ſuperiours both ſpirituall and temporall, and therefore it cannot be concluded, that the Pope ought to obey, but he muſt be obeyed, because he is alſo a ſpirituall power.

Rom.13.1.

[illegible] Barlaam c.10.

We replie: Saint Paul in this place ſpeaketh onely of the Ciuill Magiſtrate. Firſt he calleth them Princes, which is not meant of Eccleſiaſticall or Church gouernours, nor ſo taken in any place of Scripture. Secondly, they are ſaid to beare the ſword. Thirdly, tribute is paid to them: theſe things agree not to Eccleſiaſticall gouernours: ſo the Ieſuit is anſwered.

This Maſter Bradford holy Martyr ſometime anſwered to this place: Let euery ſoule (ſaith the Apoſtle) be ſubiect to the ſuperiour power: and he ſheweth what power, quæ gladium geſtat, which beareth the ſword which is not the ſpirituall, but the temporall power. And in the ſame place he declareth out of Chryſoſtome, how that Biſhops, Prophets, Apoſtles, ought to be obedient to temporall Magiſtrates, Fox pag. 1608. col. 1.

Pag. 1460. 2. 80. Saint Chryſoſtome out of this place inferreth, that all men both Prieſts and Monkes, as well as temporall men, Whether thou be an Apoſtle, ſaith he, an Euangeliſt, or Prophet, &c. ought to be ſubiect to the higheſt power.

Their owne Maſter of the Sentences expoundeth this place of the ſecular power, Sciendum eſt Apoſtolum loqui de ſeculari poteſtate &c. lib. 2. diſt. 44. c.

Argum. 5. S. Peter alſo exhorteth, as the Apoſtle doth here, that they ſhould be ſubiect to euery humane creature, 1. Pet. 2. 13. that is, to the temporall gouernour.

To this place, Innocentius 3. firſt thus anſwereth, as he is alleaged Decret. Greg. lib. 1. tit. 33. cap. 6. that ſpirituall perſons are not here vnderſtood; for by the ſame reaſon (the Apoſtle naming euerie humane creature, to whom they ſhould be ſubiect) they ſhould ſubmit themſelues to euery ſeruant.

Contra. Who ſeeth not how wilfully blind this Pope is: for the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of euerie man ſimplie, but of men in authoritie: as Bellarmine confeſſeth, Humanæ creaturæ poteſtatem habenti: For by that reaſon, not onely ſpirituall perſons, but temporall ſhould be ſubiect to euery meane perſon.

Secondly, Bellarmine vnderſtandeth, by euery humane creature, as well the power ſpirituall, as temporall, though a ſpeciall inſtance be giuen of the King, cap. 29. reſp. ad argum. 3.

Contra. I will here oppoſe againſt Bellarmine the contrarie iudgement of the Rhemiſts, who vpon that place Rom. 13. 1. thus write: S. Paul here (as S. Peter doth 1. chap. 2.) expreſly chargeth euerie man to be ſubiect to his temporall Prince. And againe, by humane creature, 1. Pet. 2. 13. they vnderſtand the temporall Magiſtrate elected by the people, in their Annotations vpon that place.

Thirdly, our Rhemiſts yeelding this place to be vnderſtood onely of the temporall Magiſtrate, yet denie that this commandement is giuen to ſpirituall men, but affirme that the King is called moſt excelling in reſpect of other his inferiour miniſters and officers, not in reſpect of Popes, Biſhops, Prieſts, &c.

Contra. Firſt, the Rhemiſts affirme S. Paul, Rom. 13. and S. Peter in this place to haue both one meaning: but there by euery ſoule, all perſons as well ſpirituall as temporall are vnderſtood: Ergo, it muſt be ſo taken here. Secondlie, S. Peter would haue all them to be ſubiect, to whom he writeth: to ſpirituall Paſtors and Elders, chap. 5. Ergo, they alſo muſt be ſubiect, and in reſpect of them alſo is the King moſt excelling. Thirdly, they haue power ouer all euill doers to puniſh them, verſ. 15. but there are ſuch in the Clergie: Ergo.

See alſo the conſent of antiquitie. Marcellinus, as we heard before, was condemned in the Sinueſſane Councell. Sixtus 3. being accuſed of one Baſſus, a Councell thereupon being aſſembled at the commandement of Valentinian the Emperour, Cum magna examinatione per iudicium ſynodicum a 56. Epiſcopis purgatur: After great examination, is purged by 56. Biſhops, by the iudgement of the Synode: ex libr. pontifical.

Symmachus being accuſed of Feſtus and Probinus, two Senators of Rome, aſſembled 115. Biſhops, Et facta ſynodo purgatur a crimine: And by the Synode is purged of the crime, ex pontifical.

Concil. Ilerdenſ. decret. 3. ex Gratiano: Mention is made, how Leo Biſhop of Rome in the Church of Saint Peter, in the preſence of the Emperour Charles, the Clergie and the people, did purge himſelfe by his oth.

Pelagius being accuſed that he was acceſſarie to the death of Vigilius the Pope, did purge himſelfe vpon his oth, ex pontifical. So Leo 3. Paſchalis 1. Leo 4. were alſo purged by their oth.

The Councell of Conſtance iudged and depoſed Pope Iohn 23. The Councell of Baſil Eugenius the 4. If Popes then haue been examined in Councels, accuſed, and brought to their purgation, and condemned, then is there no queſtion, but that they are ſubiect to iudgement.

See alſo your owne decrees, part. 2. cauſ. 2. quæſt. 7. cap. 41. Leo 4. doth ſubmit himſelfe in theſe words to the Emperour Lodouicus: If we haue done any thing incompetently, &c. Veſtro & miſſorum, &c. we will amend it according to your iudgement, and of thoſe whom you ſend.

[illegible] Nilus lib. 2. de primat. [illegible] Barlaam c. 10. Now for further teſtimonie herein, 1. For the Eaſt Church, Nilus vrgeth the example of Peter, who ſuffered himſelfe to be rebuked of Paul: how then will the Pope of Rome, as a tyrant, admit none to cenſure his life, ſeeing he boaſteth to be the ſucceſſor of Peter. The ſame Nilus and likewiſe Barlaam vrge the third Canon of the ſixth generall Synode, and the 55. Canon, which reformeth two abuſes of the Romane Church, the firſt is the reſtraint of the mariage of Miniſters, the other touching the Saturdaies faſt, they impoſe a law vpon the Romane Church: for thus they decree, that this Canon ſhould be obſerued in the Romane Church.

2 For the South Church, the Emperour of Aethiopia proteſted vnto Aluares, that if the Pope ſhould vſurpe ſo great prerogatiue, as to wiſh toward them any vnlawfull commandement, they would not make any reckoning of it: [illegible]

3 The reformed Churches doe take vpon them, and that most iustly, to examine and censure the corrupt doctrine of the Church of Rome: as the confession of Belgia, the latter, chap. 17. Wee doe not allow of the doctrine of the Romish prelates, who will make the Pope the generall Pastor, &c. And a little after: By taking away the Romish head, we doe not bring in any confusion into the Church: for wee teach that the gouernment of the Church, which the Apostles set downe, is sufficient to keepe the Church in due order, &c. The same is the practise of other reformed Churches.

Harm. sect. 10. pag. 309.

4 Of the Latine Church, Cardinall Cusanus confesseth, that Pope Leo speaking of the Canons of the Nicen Councell, saith, Necesse est me perseueranter exhibere famulatum: I must of necessity yeeld my perpetuall obedience. Franciscus de Victoria saith, that the celebrating of Councels is profitable, ad refraenandas exorbitantias quorundam pontificum, &c. to refraine the exorbitant courses of some Bishops, &c. and hee giueth instance of a Councell called at Rome by the Emperour against Pope Iohn 12. an incorrigible man: which fact, the same author saith, Turrecremata commendeth. By the sentence then of these Romanists, the Pope may be censured, and lawes may be prescribed vnto him.

Lib. 2. Concord. Cathol. c. 20.

Tract. de pontif. Rom. relect. 4. prop. 23.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER THE Pope may be deposed from his Papacie.

The Papists.

SOme of them hold that the Pope ought not, neither can be deposed for heresie; because it is not possible for the Pope to fall into heresie: Sic Pighius. The Iesuite confesseth this to be a probable opinion: but himselfe defendeth it not: He alleageth also the opinion of Caietanus, that the Pope may be deposed for manifest and apparant heresie. Bellarmines opinion is this: that the Pope cannot bee deposed for any cause but heresie: and not for all heresie, but that which is manifest and apparant: neither is he then deposed by any act of the Church, but is of himselfe deposed, and ceaseth any more to be Pope: So the Church may afterward punish him, but he is then no Pope, for as soone as hee is become an heretike, his Popedome in the very act is gone from him, Bellarm. cap. 30.

45. Error.

He reasoneth thus: A manifest heretike is not so much as a member of the Church, much lesse can he be Pope, who, they say, is the head of the Church: and therefore in such a case the Pope is deposed without any sentence: and if afterward the Church proceed against him, they doe not iudge the Pope; for he had lost his Papacie before.

We answere: First, if a manifest heretike be actually deposed, it is by the secret iudgement and sentence of God: for by no other authoritie can he be deposed, as they hold: but before God manifest heresie, and close and secret heresie is all one: therfore the Pope is also actually deposed for secret heresie, and not only for manifest: And so some of the Papists thinke, as Iohannes de Turrecremata. Secondly, what call you manifest heresie? or how is he knowne to be a manifest heretike? Can he be an heretike before he be conuinced? shall iudgement passe against him vncondemned? A murtherer is a dead man by law, yet he liueth till iudgement passe vpon him: so is the Pope being an heretike, yet Pope, till he be iudicially proceeded against: as a murtherer dead by right is in act yet liuing, till by law he is depriued of his life. An heretike, saith S. Paul, after two or three admonitions auoid: that is, saith the Iesuit, he is now ipso facto excōmunicate, before the sentēce of the Iudge. Be it so, but he must first be admonished, and if he still continue obstinate, then hee is a manifest heretike: so before the Pope can be knowne to be a manifest heretike, he must be found obstinate; he cannot bee obstinate, vnlesse he refuse to be admonished; if he be admonished, then is he iudged. Thirdly, an heretike ceaseth not to be a priest, (as they speake) no not after heresie is knowne, for manifest heretikes may baptise. The Donatists in Augustines time were manifest heretikes, and yet the Church did not baptise againe after them: If a manifest heretike cease not to be a priest, neither ceaseth hee to be Pope; there is like reason of both: for if an heretike, because he is not a member of the Church, cannot be a Pope, neither also can he retaine the priesthood.

Tit. 3. 10.

Lastly, who seeth not what bare and friuolous shifts these are? one saith, the Church may iudge the Pope not as he is Pope, but in respect of his person: another saith, that they may iudge the man which was Pope, but he is then no Pope, because his heresie tooke from him the Papacie. Why maisters what iugling is here? is the Pope one thing, and the Popes person another? By the same reason you may say, that the Pope neither eateth, nor drinketh, nor sleepeth, nor dieth, and so make a God of him, because it is the Popes person that doth all this, and not the Pope. And by this shift you make no difference betweene an heretike Bishop, or heretike Priest, and heretike Pope: for by the same reason none of them all shall be subiect to the iudgement of the Church: for we may say, that a manifest heretike, whether Bishop or Priest, hath lost by that very act of falling into heresie, his Priesthood and Bishopricke, and then is neither Bishop nor Priest. And so you may conclude altogether, that neither Pope, Bishop, nor Priest can be deposed for heresie.

Caietan.

The Protestants.

WE doubt not to say, that the Pope both lawfully hath been depriued sometime by the Emperour, sometime by generall Councels, not onely for heresie, but for other notable crimes, and may ſtill bee proceeded againſt by the ſame right, as well as any other Biſhop or Prelate.

1. Diuers examples wee are able to bring fourth, how the Pope hath been depoſed for other crimes, beſide hereſie. Pope Iohn the 13. was depoſed in a generall Councell by the conſent of Otho the Emperour, for other matters beſide hereſie: as that hee ordained Deacons in a ſtable, that hee committed inceſt with two of his ſiſters, that playing at dice, he called to the Diuell for helpe, that hee deflouered virgins, that hee lay with Stephana his fathers concubine, likewiſe with Rainera and Anna, and her Neece: for theſe beaſtly parts and ſuch like, hee was depoſed: there was no hereſie obiected againſt him. And thinke you not he was worthily vnpoped? yet the Papiſts thinke no: for they admit no cauſe of depriuation but hereſie. This diuelliſh Pope, through the harlots of Rome (for hee was well beloued of them) recouered his Popedome againe; but at the length the Lord himſelfe diſplaced him: for in the tenth yeere of his Popedome, being found without the citie with another mans wife, he was ſo wounded of her huſband, that within eight daies after he died. Fox pag. 158.

Boniface the 7. tooke Pope Iohn the 15. who was made Pope a little before, and he expelled, yet recouering the Papacie by force, he tooke him, put out his eyes, and threw him in priſon where he was

Fox pag. 160. famiſhed. Likewiſe was Iohn the 18. ſerued by Gregorie the 5. his eyes were thruſt out firſt, and he afterward ſlaine. I marueile how our Catholikes can excuſe theſe furious outrages of their ghoſtly fathers of Rome.

In the Councell of Brixia, Gregorie the 7. was depoſed, not for hereſie, but for other abominable vices: as maintaining of periurie and murthers: for following Diuinations and Dreames, Sorcerie and Necromancie. Fox pag. 181. Pope Iohn the 23. depoſed in the Councell of Conſtance: Eugenius in the Councell of Baſil: yet neither of them for hereſie. And yet our aduerſaries would ſtill make vs beleeue, that Popes cannot be depoſed for any crime but hereſie.

2. Wee can haue no better argument, then from our aduerſaries themſelues. It is a ſport to ſee what diuers opinions they hold, and doe runne as it were in a maze, not knowing which way to get out. Pighius thinketh, that the Pope cannot poſſibly fall into hereſie, and therefore for no cauſe may be depoſed. Some other thinke, that the Pope for ſecret and cloſe hereſie is actually depoſed of God, and may alſo be depoſed and iudged of the Church: thus holdeth Iohan. de Turrecremat. Caietanus is of opinion, that for manifeſt and open hereſie the Pope is both alreadie by right depoſed, and may alſo actually be depoſed of the Church. But Bellarmine confuteth all theſe. There is a fourth opinion moſt groſſe: that the Pope neither for ſecret nor open hereſie, is either alreadie of right depoſed, or may bee actually depriued of the Church. Laſtly commeth in the nice and daintie Ieſuite with his quirkes and quiddities, who ſaith, that the Pope in caſe of manifeſt hereſie, ceaſeth to be Pope, and is euen now depoſed; and if after the Church proceed againſt him, they iudge not the Pope, for now he is no Pope. Which opinion how abſurd it is, I haue declared before.

That the Pope may be depoſed for other crimes then hereſie, beſide the practiſe of former times, as wee haue ſhewed before, wee haue alſo the decrees of Councels. The fathers of Baſil alleaged theſe places of Scripture: If thy eye, hand, or foote offend thee, cut it off. Euery tree that bringeth not foorth good fruite is caſt downe, &c. Alſo our Sauiour ſaith, Euery branch that bringeth not foorth good fruit, my father will cut off. Ioh. 15. Vnprofitable ſalt is good for nothing but to be caſt forth, &c. Hence they conclude, that an offenſiue and wicked Pope, may bee depoſed and caſt foorth as an vnprofitable branch: ex Ænea Syluio.

Againe the ſame Councel ſaith, Epiſtol. ſynodal. Concilium Conſtantienſe Benedictum propter ſchiſma; Iohannem 23. propter deformitatem vitæ depoſuit: The Councell of Conſtance depoſed Benedictus for ſchiſme; Iohn 23. for the deformitie of life.

But if they anſwere as they doe, that this Councell of Baſil was ſchiſmaticall: (which I marueile how they can ſay, ſeeing it was congregate by the Popes authoritie) what will they ſay to the Councell of Lateran ſub Iulio 2. ſeſſ. 5. where it was decreed, that if the Pope were choſen by Simonie, vt huiuſmodi electio nulla exiſtat: that his election ſhould ſtand voide as none at all, and he holden for no Pope: and that it ſhould be lawfull for his ſubiects, ab obedientia eius diſcedere, to caſt off all obedience.

So then, the Pope may be depoſed for Simonie, which though it be there termed ſimoniaca hæreſis, the ſimoniacall hereſie, yet it is not ſo properly, but rather a fault in manners, then an error in faith.

They haue alſo this rule in their owne law, Extrauag. commun. lib. 5. tit. 8. cap. 1. The Pope thus writeth againſt a certaine Biſhop whom he depoſed for his enormous life, Illud ſalubre ſatis [illegible] remedium, &c. We count that an holeſome remedie, that where wee cannot take away, velle, a mans euill will, we ſhould take away his, poſſe, his power to doe euill, &c. Why ſhould not this rule as well take place in a wicked Pope, as in an impious Biſhop?

Lib. 2. de pri- matu. Wee haue alſo further teſtimonie from other Churches: 1. Nilus ſheweth how Honorius Biſhop of Rome, was condemned and anathematized for an heretike in the ſixth generall Synod, Decret. 16. 2. And of the South Church there was preſent one Petrus a Preſbyter ſupplying the place of the Patriarke of Alexandria, as it appeareth in the firſt action: and gaue conſent to the decrees of the Councell.

3 Confeſſion of Auſpurg, artic. 5. It belongeth ſpecially to the Emperour, to aboliſh idolatrie with might and maine. Confeſſ. of Heluetia, the latter, c. 30. they make it the ciuill magiſtrates dutie to root out lies, and all ſuperſtition with all impietie and idolatrie: then is it conſequently in their power to depoſe hereticall and idolatrous Popes and Biſhops. Harm. ſect. 18. p. 554.

4 We haue ſeene before the practiſe of two generall Popiſh Councels of Conſtance and Baſile in depoſing of Popes: And before them both, the Piſane Councell anno 1409. depoſed two Popes Gregorie 12. and Benedict 13. Sacranus one of their owne writers reporteth, how Conſtantinus the third Emperour of Conſtantinople depoſed Pope Martin, and baniſhed him: and Conſtantine the ſixth depoſed Michael Patriarke of Conſtantinople: and the ſame power the Emperour of Muſcouia hath at this day ouer their Patriarke. Sacran. Elucid. err. Ruthen. c. 3

THE FIFTH PART, CONCERNING THE ORIGINALL AND BEGINNING OF THE PRIMACIE OF ROME.

The Papiſts.

THey doe boldly affirme without any ground, that the primacie of that Sea hath his beginning from no other but Chriſt: they are the Ieſuites owne words, Romani pontificis eccleſiaſticum principatum, authore Chriſto, principium accepiſſe: That the princely dignitie of the Biſhop of Rome, acknowledgeth no other author or beginner thereof, but Chriſt, Bellar. cap. 17. lib. 2. 46. Error.

Argum. 1. They would build the primacie of the Romane Church vpon certaine places of Scripture: as Matth. 16. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I build my Church. Luk. 22. I haue prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith ſhould not faile. Ioh. 21. Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe: Ergo, Peter and Peters ſucceſſors haue their primacie from Chriſt, Bellarm. Matth. 16. 18. Luk. 22. 32. Iohn. 21. 16.

To theſe places Tunſtal and Stokeſley, two Popiſh Biſhops, yet in this point holding the truth, did pithily make anſwere in their Epiſtle ſent to Cardinall Poole.

To the firſt: They affirme out of the ancient expoſitors, that it is meant of the faith which was then firſt confeſſed by the mouth of Peter, and not of Peters perſon. Further, confirming out of S. Paul, that neither Peter, nor no creature beſide, could be the foundation of the Church: for no other foundation can any man lay (ſaith the Apoſtle) beſides that which is laid, Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Cor. 3.

To the ſecond they anſwere: That Chriſt ſpeaketh onely of the fall of Peter, which he knew in his godly preſcience, giuing an inkling vnto him, that after his fall he ſhould be conuerted and ſtrengthen his brethren: for if it were meant alſo of Peters ſucceſſors, they muſt firſt faile in faith, and after confirme their brethren.

To the third: The whole flocke of Chriſt was not committed to Peter to feede: for he himſelfe teſtifieth the contrarie, exhorting all Paſtors to feed the flock of Chriſt, which was giuen them in charge by Chriſt, as it followeth in that place: when the chiefe ſhepheard ſhall appeare, ye ſhall receiue the incorruptible Crowne of eternall glory. He calleth not himſelfe the chiefe ſhepheard, but only Chriſt. It is euident therefore (ſay they) that your 3. Scriptures meant nothing leſſe, then ſuch a primacie ouer all, Fox pag. 1067. 1. Pet. 5. Pag. 973.

Argum. 2. There can be no time aſſigned ſince Chriſt (ſay they) when this primacie ſhould begin, nor no author named that brought it in: Ergo, it muſt needes be attributed to Chriſt, hee muſt of neceſſitie be found the author thereof.

We anſwere: the time may be aſſigned, the authors named, when, and by whom this pretenſed and vſurped authoritie was brought in, as euen now we will ſhew.

The Proteſtants.

THat the vſurped iuriſdiction of Rome tooke not the beginning from Chriſt, nor his Apoſtles, neither was heard of for many yeeres after: we thus are able to proue it.

1 Before the Nicene Councell, which firſt deuided the regiment of the Church into foure Patriarchall ſeates: Rome had ſmall or no preeminence. So Æneas Syluius witneſſeth, who afterward was Pope of Rome, and called Pius the ſecond: Ante Nicenum concilium ſibi quiſque viuebat, & ad Romanam eccleſiam paruus habebatur reſpectus, Epiſt. 301. Before the Nicene Councell, euery Biſhop liued to himſelfe; there was no great reſpect had to the Church of Rome. What more euident teſtimonie can we haue then of a Pope himſelfe? Yet the Ieſuite ſaith, that it is falſe in part, which he writeth. He is ſomewhat mannerly, in making him but halfe a lyer; yet I wonder that he will confeſſe any vntruth at all in his ghoſtly fathers words, Bellarm. cap. 17. lib. 2.

Secondly, in the Councell of Nice there was no primacie of power giuen to Rome ouer the whole Church: but the other Patriarches of Alexandria, Antioch, Ieruſalem, were priuiledged in like manner in their confines, as the Biſhop of Rome was in his: They had all equall authoritie giuen them in their owne Prouinces: Sic Tonſtal. Stokeſl. ad Poolum. Pag. 973. 2. 10.

Thirdly, afterward there was a certaine primacie of order granted vnto the Patriarch of Rome aboue other Patriarches; as to haue the firſt place, to ſit firſt, to giue his ſentence firſt. One cauſe hereof was, for that Rome was then the Emperiall and chiefe Citie in all the world: this reaſon was rendered in the Councell of Chalcedon, Can. 28. Another cauſe thereof was, the ample priuiledges and immunities, which the Emperours endowed it withall, as Conſtantine the great, and Gratianus the Emperour made a law, that all men ſhould retaine that religion, which Damaſus of Rome, and Peter Biſhop of Alexandria did hold.

A third cauſe was, the vnquiet eſtate of the Greeke Church, who often voluntarily referred their matters to the Biſhop of Rome, as being leſſe partiall and a more indifferent Iudge, they themſelues being diuided and rent into ſects. And hereupon, and other like cauſes it came about, that the Biſhop Fox.pag.18. of Rome a little ſtepped aboue his fellow Patriarches; but yet had no ſuch preeminent authoritie, as to command them.

Fourthly, the Popes of Rome being thus tickled with vaine glorie, becauſe they were reuerenced of other Churches, many matters were committed vnto them, and their conſent required vnto the decrees of Councels, when they were abſent. Hereupon they laboured euery day more and more to aduance that Sea, taking euery ſmall occaſion that might helpe forward their ambitious deſire, till Anno 606. or ſomewhat after, Boniface the third obtained of wicked Phocas the Emperour (who murthered his Maſter the Emperour Mauritius and his children, to come to the Empire, and was after ſlaine himſelfe of Heraclius that ſucceeded him) of him, I ſay, Boniface for himſelfe and his ſucceſ- Fox.pag.110. ſors obtained, to be called vniuerſall Biſhops ouer the whole Church: and the Sea of Rome to haue the preeminence aboue all other Churches in the world.

Afterward in Pope Zacharie his time, the proud and inſolent iuriſdiction of Rome was eſtabliſhed by Pipinus King of France, who aſpired to the Crowne, and obtained it by the ſaid Popes meanes, firſt depoſing Childericus the rightfull King, and diſpenſing with the oath which the French men had made before to Childericus, Caluin, Inſtitut.4.cap.7.ſect.17.

Thus then it ſufficiently appeareth, that the primacie of Rome, which it now vniuſtly chalengeth ouer other Churches, is not of any ſuch antiquitie, as they would beare the world in hand, neither that it had the beginning from Chriſt: but both the time when, and the authors by whom it began, may be eaſily aſſigned.

Argum.2. We neede no better argument, to proue that the primacie of Rome hath not his originall from Chriſt, then the Ieſuites owne confeſſion. Firſt he ſaith, that it doth not depend of Chriſts inſtitution, but ex Petri facto, of Peters fact, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould be rather Peters ſucceſſor, then the Biſhop of Antioch, or any other; It is not iure diuino, ſaith he, by Gods law: neither is it, ex prima inſtitutione pontificatus, qua in Euangelio legitur, of the firſt inſtitution whereof wee reade in the Goſpell. And againe, Romanum pontificem ſuccedere Petro, non habetur expreſſe in ſcripturis: It is not expreſly ſet downe in Scripture, that the Biſhop of Rome ſhould ſucceed Peter: but it is grounded onely vpon that tradition of Peter. Nay he ſaith further, that Peter needed not to haue choſen any particular place for ſucceſſion, and he might as well haue choſen Antioch as Rome: Ergo, neither is the ſucceſſion of Rome grounded vpon Scripture, neither any commandement of Chriſt: for then Peter could not haue had free choice to appoint his ſucceſſor where he would himſelfe, as the Ieſuite ſaith, if he had had any eſpeciall direction or commandement from Chriſt. So then, marke I pray you, they cannot proue out of Scripture, that the Biſhop of Rome ought to ſucceede Peter in the chiefe Biſhopricke, but onely that Peter had the chiefe Biſhopricke committed to him and his ſucceſſors in generall, whoſoeuer they ſhould appoint: Ergo, the Biſhops of Rome by their owne confeſſion can alleage no Scripture, inſtitution, or commaundement of Chriſt, for the primacie of the Church to be annexed to the Sea of Rome: and yet againſt their knowledge they will alleage Scripture to colour the matter withall, Bellarm.lib.2 de pontif.cap.17.

That the iuriſdiction and primacie of Rome is not grounded vpon Scripture, but rather vpon cuſtome and continuance of time, it is thus proued by conſent of antiquitie, Nicen.1.can.6. Quia epiſcopo Romana vrbis parilis mos eſt: Let the Patriarch of Alexandria be chiefe in his Prouinces, &c. becauſe the Biſhop of Rome hath the like cuſtome or manner, &c. And it is not to be thought, that thoſe two generall Councels of Conſtantinople, and Chalcedon, would haue made the Sea of Conſtantinople equall in authoritie to Rome, if the primacie of Rome had beene grounded vpon Scripture.

Againe, what the cauſe is that ſome Cities haue had ſpirituall iuriſdiction ouer others, wee finde Truſlan.ſynod.can.38. Si qua ciuitas à regia poteſtate innouata eſt, quoad ciuilem & publicam formam, eccleſiaſticarum quoque rerum ordo conſequatur: If any Citie be changed or aduanced in reſpect of the ciuill eſtate, the eccleſiaſticall order or gouernment muſt follow: that is, be aduanced together with it. This reaſon was rendred Concil.Chalcedonenſ.action.16. why they aduanced the Sea of Conſtantinople, Rationabiliter iudicantes, imperio & Senatu vrbem ornatam, aquis ſenioris regia Rome priuilegijs frui, & in eccleſiaſticis, ſicut illa, maieſtatem habere negotijs: Wee thinke it reaſonable, that the Citie which is adorned with the Senate and Empire, ſhould haue the like priuiledges to the elder princely Citie Rome, and of the like maieſtie in eccleſiaſticall buſineſſe, &c. By the ſame reaſon alſo was Rome aduanced at the firſt, becauſe it was the ſeate of the Empire: the beginning then of the primacie therefore was not from any commandement of Chriſt, but by the conſtitution of men.

Epiſt.19.ad Hieronym. Auguſtine ſaith: Secundum honorum vocabula, qua iam eccleſie vſus obtinuit, epiſcopatus presbyterio maior eſt. The office of a Biſhop is aboue the office of a Prieſt, according to the names of honour, which the Church by cuſtome hath obtained, &c. If then the difference of thoſe two offices, both named in Scripture, did ariſe rather, and ſpring of the cuſtome of the Church, which thought it good to diſtinguiſh them for auoyding of ſchiſme, and is not grounded vpon the authoritie of Scripture: much leſſe can the Pope (whoſe neither name, nor office is expreſſed in Scripture) fetch from thence any ſhew of proofe for his vſurped primacie.

M. Tindal holy Martyr, condemned for this and ſuch other articles, for ſaying that the Pope had no other authoritie from Chriſt but to preach onely: articul. 22. Fox pag. 1251. col. 1. Sir Iohn Borthwicke Knight, condemned for the Goſpell, thus witneſſeth: Peter could not giue that which hee had not, as any lordly dominion, or ſuch like; but he gaue vnto his ſucceſſors that which hee had, that is, carefulneſſe ouer the congregation, Fox pag. 1263. articul. 6.

Pag. 1139. 2. 90

Pag. 1150. 2. 60

The Popes lordly ſupremacie then hath not the beginning from Chriſt, neither is warranted by Scripture.

And here will I put them in minde of their owne rule: as Innocentius the third hath ſet it downe; decret. Gregor. lib. 5. tit. 7. cap. 12. Oſtendat pro vocatione operationem miraculi, &c. Let him ſhew for his calling the operation of a miracle, or ſome ſpeciall teſtimonie of Scripture, &c. So then, if the Pope can ſhew any miracle, or ſpeciall warrant out of Scripture, for his primacie and ſuperioritie, wee will beleeue him.

And for further euidence. 1. Nilus of the Greeke Church, directly affirmeth, that the Pope receaued not of Peter to be the chiefe or firſt of all Biſhops: For whereas there are two things to be conſidered about the Pope, that he is Biſhop of Rome, and the prime or firſt of other Biſhops, the firſt he receiued from Peter; the other from the holy Fathers, and godly Kings: and for the proofe hereof, hee alleageth the 28. Canon of the Chalcedon Councell, which according to the decree of the firſt Councell of Conſtantinople, giueth the like priuiledges to new Rome, namely Conſtantinople, which olde Rome had, to the ſame purpoſe he alſo citeth Nouel. 100. of Iuſtinian, who according to the decrees of the ſacred Synodes, giueth the firſt place to the Biſhop of Rome, the ſecond to the Patriarke of Conſtantinople. By theſe allegations it is euident, that the primacie of the Pope is founded vpon the Canons and conſtitutions of Councels, and munificence of Kings, not vpon the inſtitution of Chriſt.

κ̃ τοὺς τῶν ἁγίων συνόδων ὅρους.

2 Concerning the iudgement of the South Church: Alexander Patriarke of Alexandria, was preſent in the firſt Nicene, where Canon. 6. the auncient cuſtome is preſerued to the Patriarke of Alexandria, to haue the chiefe authoritie in Ægypt and Lybia, because the Biſhop of Rome hath the like cuſtome. The like was decreed alſo in the Councell of Conſtantinople, c. 6. where Timotheus Patriarke of Alexandria was preſent: where Conſtantinople is made the next to Rome; wee ſee their opinion was, that this primacie was grounded vpon cuſtome.

3 So alſo the reformed Churches hold, That all Paſtors, whereſoeuer they be placed, are of equall authoritie giuen vnto them vnder Ieſu Chriſt, &c. And therefore one Church not to haue dominion ouer another. French confeſſ. artic. 30. the ſame is the iudgement of the reſt.

4 Gregorie the firſt, calleth the title of Vniuerſall Biſhop, Nomen nouum contra Petrum Apoſtolum, contra ſenſum Euangelij, a new name, againſt Peter the Apoſtle, againſt the meaning of the Goſpell: how is then the Popes primacie and vniuerſalitie grounded vpon Chriſts inſtitution? Platina, and Balbus write, that Boniface the third, obtained of Phocas the Emperour, magna tamen contentione, yet with much adoe, that the ſeate of the Apoſtle Peter ſhould be called and counted the head of all Churches: They had it not then from Chriſt or Peter.

THE SIXTH PART OF THIS QVESTION, concerning the proud names, and vaine-glorious titles of the Pope.

The Papiſts.

Bellarmine ſetteth downe to the number of fifteene glorious names which haue been of old giuen (as hee ſaith) to the Biſhop of Rome, whereby his primacie ouer other Biſhops is notoriouſly knowne; but the principall are theſe: He is called the Pope and chiefe Father, the Prince of Prieſts, or high Biſhop, the Vicar of Chriſt, the head of the Church, the Prelate of the Apoſtolike Sea, vniuerſall Biſhop. Theſe ſixe names or titles they doe appropriate to the Sea of Rome. Bellarm. de Roman. pontif. lib. 2. cap. 31.

The Proteſtants.

We will ſhew by Gods grace, that theſe ſixe ſeuerall titles and names aforeſaid, are either ſuch, as ought not in their ſenſe to be attributed to any Biſhop, nor any mortall man; or elſe were common in ancient times as well to other Biſhops as to him of Rome.

1 For the firſt name of Pope, it is deriued from the Greeke word πάππας, which in the Syracuſane language, is as much as Father: which name was indifferently giuen to other Biſhops, which were famous in the Church for their vertue and learning: As Cyprian, Epiphanius, Athanaſius, were called Papæ, Popes: Auguſtine ſaluteth Aurelius, Preſident of the ſixth Councell of Carthage, by the name of Pope, Epiſtol. 77.

47. Error.

Fox pag. 8.

Sophronius Biſhop of Ieruſalem writing to Sergius Patriark of Conſtantinople, calleth him, Papam beatiſſimum, & Papam deo honorabilem, Moſt bleſſed and honourable Pope, Conſtantinopl. 6. action. 11. So in the ſixth Councell of Carthage, chap. 4. the Synode calleth Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage, Sanctum Papam, holy Pope. Eutiches, who was but a Prieſt and an Abbot, is called Pappas, Pope, ſynod. Conſtantinopl. ſub Flaniano.

Bellarmine cannot denie; neither dare he for ſhame, that this name Pope hath beene giuen to other Biſhops; but he hath deuiſed three ſhifts to helpe him at a pinch: firſt, ſaith hee, the Biſhop of Rome onely hath vſed to be called the Pope abſolutely, and without any addition, but others with adding of their name.

Contra. The abſolute title of Pope hath beene giuen alſo to others, and therefore Bellarmines ſurmiſe is falſe: as Hierome writing to Theophilus Biſhop of Alexandria ſaith thus, Adnitere Papa amantiſſime & beatiſſime: Doe your endeuour, moſt bleſſed Pope, &c. he ſaith not Pope Theophilus, but abſolutely moſt bleſſed Pope, tom. 3.

Secondly, the Biſhop of Rome onely hath beene called vniuerſall Pope, and no other Biſhop, Bellarmine.

Contra. Firſt, neither hath this proud name in the better times, and purer ages of the Church, beene attributed to the Biſhops of Rome; but rather by them condemned: as Gregorie calleth it a proud title to be named vniuerſall Pope, and reproueth Eulogius Biſhop of Alexandria, for ſo writing vnto him, diſt. 99. cap. 5. Secondly, yet it may be ſhewed, that after ambition ſet foot into the Church, other Patriarches haue beene called by this name: as Concil. Conſtantin. 6. act. 13. Cyrus Patriarch of Alexandria calleth Sergius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, thrice bleſſed Paſtor of Paſtors, and father of fathers, the vniuerſall Patriarch: and yet Bellarmine ſaith, that this title of Pater Patrum, Father of Fathers was neuer giuen to any but the Pope.

Thirdly, ſaith he, the Biſhop of Rome hath beene alwaies called Pope of others; but hee himſelfe neuer called any other by that name.

Contra. Firſt, therein appeareth the pride of that Sea, that diſdained to giue vnto other Biſhops thoſe titles, which others thought them worthie of, becauſe they would appropriate them to themſelues. Secondly, yet I finde, though not the Pope, yet the Church of Rome, which is the Popes Sea, hath giuen this title to other Biſhops: as after the death of Fabianus, the Presbyterie of Rome thus write to Cypriane, calling him moſt bleſſed, and glorious Pope, as may be ſeene in their Epiſtle.

Likewiſe, thoſe two epithetes of the Pope, as to be called, Beatiſſimus & ſanctiſſimus pater: Moſt holy and bleſſed father, were vſed in the ſtile of other Biſhops: Proſper in his Epiſtle to Auguſtine, twiſe calleth him Dominum beatiſſimum Papam: Lord, moſt bleſſed Pope, Tom. 7. Hierome calleth Epiphanius, Beatum Papam, Bleſſed Pope, Ad Euſtach. Fabiol.

This alſo was the ſtile of the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Sanctiſſimo atque beatiſſimo Oecomenico Patriarchæ Iohanni Conſtantinopol. &c. To the moſt holy and bleſſed vniuerſal Patriarch, Iohn of Conſtantinople: Conſtantinop. 5. action. 1. Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, writing to one Rufus a Biſhop, Epiſt. 2. ſaith thus, Hæc & alia, quæ neceſſaria fore cognouimus, tuæ ſanctitati nolumus denegare: Theſe and other things which we knew to be neceſſarie, we would not denie to your holineſſe: at this time it is a cleare caſe, that the Biſhop of Rome did not appropriate to himſelfe this title of holineſſe.

Auguſtine writing to Petrus a Presbyter, or Prieſt, being no Biſhop, yet thus ſaluteth him: Ad ſanctitatem tuam ſcripſit: He hath written to your holineſſe. Nay, in his booke dedicated to Renatus a lay man, neither Prieſt nor Biſhop, thus he writeth, Hinc angor, quod ſanctitati tuæ minus quàm vellem cognitus ſum: This grieueth mee, that I am not ſo well knowne to your holineſſe as I deſire, &c. If then theſe titles of holineſſe and bleſſedneſſe were not onely giuen to Biſhops, but Prieſts alſo, yea vnto lay men of vertuous and holy life: what colour or ſhew of reaſon can our aduerſaries haue, to make them proper to the Biſhop of Rome?

De origine anim. 2. 1.
De origine anim. lib. 1. cap. 2.

But if the Biſhop of Rome will haue this title of holineſſe truely giuen vnto him, let him follow that wholſome ſaying, aſcribed to Clement. epiſtol. 1. Nemo velit dici ſanctus, antequam ſit, ſed prius ſit vt verius dicatur: Let no man deſire to be called holy, before he be indeede, but let him firſt be holy, that he may more truely ſo be called, &c. the ſame ſentence alſo is found, Conſtantinop. 6. cap. 6.

See alſo the iudgement of Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr: articul. 23. Papa non debet dici ſanctiſſimus ſecundum officium quia ſic & Rex diceretur ſanctiſſimus, &c. The Pope ought no more to be called moſt holy becauſe of his office, then the King in reſpect of his office.

48. Error.
1. Pet. 5. 4.

2 The ſecond name is Prince of Prieſts, or high and chiefe Biſhop: which title, if it be taken for a chiefe power, dominion, and ſoueraigntie, is proper onely to Chriſt the chiefe ſhepheard, 1. Pet. 5. 4 and cannot in that ſenſe agree to any man.

It was alſo decreed Carthaginenſ. 3. can. 26. in this maner, Primæ ſedis Epiſcopus non appelletur princeps ſacerdotum aut ſummus ſacerdos, ſed tantùm primæ ſedis Epiſcopus: Let not the Biſhop of the firſt Sea be called the prince of Prieſts, or chiefe Prieſt, but onely Biſhop of the firſt Sea.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this Canon did onely binde the Biſhops of Africa, it doth not extend to the Biſhop of Rome.

Anſwere. It appeareth Can. 47. that the Canons of this Councell were confirmed by Boniface Biſhop of Rome: For to that end the Councell determineth to write vnto him, and the reſt of the Biſhops of the Weſt Church: but it is certaine, that this Councell was receiued and authorized in the ſixth generall Trullane Synode, Can. 12. how then can the Biſhop of Rome bee exempted from the decrees of generall Councels, which binde the whole Church, and euery part thereof? And againe, this Canon is approued in their owne decrees, diſt.99.c.3. how then can they refuſe it?

But if this name be vſed onely as a title of excellencie and commendation, ſo was it in times paſt aſcribed to other excellent and famous Biſhops, as Ruffinus lib.1.cap.26. calleth Athanaſius Pontificem maximum, chiefe Biſhop: yea it was in common giuen to all Biſhops; as Anacletus Biſhop of Rome in his ſecond Epiſtle writeth thus: Summi ſacerdotes, id eſt, Epiſcopi, à Deo iudicandi ſunt: The high Prieſts, that is, Biſhops (ſaith he) are to bee iudged of God. If it be taken further for the excellencie of the miniſterie of the Goſpell, and the worthie calling of Chriſtians, in this ſenſe the title of ſummum ſacerdotium, of the high Prieſthood, is attributed to all Miniſters Eccleſiaſticall, both Biſhops and others: ſo Fabianus Biſhop of Rome, vſeth this name. Yea, the holy Apoſtle calleth all the people of God βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα, a princely, royall, or chiefe Prieſthood: Ergo, the Biſhop of Rome hath no eſpeciall or proper intereſt in this name.

3 The third name is, to be called the Vicar of Chriſt vpon earth. Where we are to vnderſtand, that in reſpect of the ſpirituall regiment and Kingdome of Chriſt, hee needeth no Vicegerent vpon earth; for, I am with you (ſaith he) to the end of the world: he himſelfe is alway preſent in power, and needeth not in that reſpect, that any man ſhould ſupply his roome. Petrus ſcriba Martyr. Fox pag.906. If we doe take it for a word of office and publike adminiſtration, ſo the Magiſtrate may bee called the Vicar of Chriſt, in gouerning the people according to the word of God: In which ſenſe Eleutherius Biſhop of Rome, writing to Lucius King of the Britaines, calleth him the Vicar of Chriſt; and therefore in his owne Kingdome had power out of the word of God to eſtabliſh lawes, for the gouernment of the people.

49.Error.

Fox.pag.107.

Thus alſo writeth Anaſtaſius Biſhop of Rome, to Anaſtaſius the Emperour, titul.7. Præſtantiam veſtram velut vicarium, Deus præſidere iuſſit in terris: God hath commanded or appointed your worthineſſe, as his Vicar, to be preſident in earth. So all Biſhops, Paſtors and Miniſters in auncient time were called the Vicars of Chriſt in preaching, praying, binding and looſing in the name and power of Chriſt. So Auguſtine ſaith, or whoſe worke elſe it is, that Omnis antiſtes eſt Chriſti vicarius: Euery Paſtor and Prelate (and not the Pope onely) is the Vicar of Chriſt.

Quæſt.ex v-troque.127.

Euſebius Biſhop of Rome teſtifieth the ſame, Epiſtol.3. Caput Eccleſiæ Chriſtus eſt; Chriſti autem vicarij ſacerdotes ſunt, qui vice Chriſti legatione funguntur in Eccleſia: The head of the Church is Chriſt, and the Prieſts or Miniſters are Chriſts Vicars, who in Chriſts ſtead doe performe his embaſſage in the Church. This is alſo confeſſed by our Rhemiſts, annot.in 2.Cor.5.18. that the Biſhops and Prieſts of the Church are for Chriſt, and as his Miniſters, that is, his Vicars. Nay, Auguſtine maketh yet a more generall vſe of this word: he ſaith that, Homo imperium Dei habens, quaſi vicarius eius eſt: That man by creation being made Lord of the creatures, doth therein repreſent God, and is as his Vicar vpon earth, &c. So then, all Miniſters are the Vicars of Chriſt; the ciuill Magiſtrate likewiſe, in ſome good ſenſe, may be ſo called: yea in reſpect of the creatures, man generally is vpon earth in Gods ſtead: Ergo, this name cannot be appropriate to the Pope of Rome.

Quæſt.106.

Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr ſaith, artic.12. Nemo gerit vicem Petri vel Chriſti niſi ſequatur eum in moribus: No man can be Peters or Chriſts Vicar vnleſſe he follow him in life and maners. The Pope therefore is not Chriſts Vicar, vnleſſe he imitate Chriſts holy life, which I would he did. One of your owne Popes alſo ſaith, Iohann.22. Extrau.lib.3.tit.2.c.5. Vicarius Chriſti ipſius actibus ſe tenetur conformare: Chriſts Vicar muſt conforme himſelfe to Chriſts acts and example. Which ſeeing the Pope doth not, he cannot be Chriſts Vicar, or Vicegerent.

5 It is alſo too huge a name for the Pope or any mortall man to beare, to be called the head of the vniuerſall Church: this is a name onely due vnto Chriſt, neither doe the Scriptures acknowledge any other head, but him, Epheſ.1.22.4.15. But (ſay they) we doe not make the Pope ſuch an head, as Chriſt is, but onely a miniſteriall head ouer the wilitant Church vpon earth, Rhemiſt.1.Eph.22.

Epheſ.1.22. cap.4.15.

We anſwere: Firſt, Ergo, the Pope by your owne confeſſion is not head of the vniuerſall Church, whereof the triumphant Church in heauen is a part; nor yet of Purgatorie, but onely of that part which is in the earth. Secondly, the Rhemiſts confeſſe that the Church in no ſenſe can bee called the body of the Pope: Ergo, the Pope cannot be any waies the head of the vniuerſall Church, Annot.in 1. 1 Epheſ.22. Thirdly, the Fathers of Baſile vſed this argument: The head of the body being dead, the whole body alſo dieth; but the whole Church doth not periſh with the Pope: Ergo, he is not proper- 2
ly the head of the Church, Fox pag.675.
Further, in the ſame Councell, Iohannes Patriarch. Antiochen. in appendic. concil. thus reaſoneth;
Nec dici poteſt caput Miniſteriale vniuerſalis eccleſiæ, nam caput eſſe denotat præeminentiam, quam miniſter non habet ſupra dominam: Neither can the Pope be ſaid to bee the miniſteriall head of the vni- 3 uerſall Church: for to bee an head argueth a preeminence, which the Miniſter hath not ouer his Miſtreſſe.
Concil. Aquiſgranenſ.lib.2.cap.9. Eccleſiam cum capite ſuo Chriſto vnam conſtat eſſe perſonam: The Church and Chriſt the head thereof make but one perſon. But ſo doe not the Pope and the Church; therefore he cannot be the head thereof. 4
Adde vnto theſe the witneſſe of the holy Martyrs, Iohn Huſſearticul.20. The Pope if he be a wicked man, cannot be the head of the Church, ſeeing he is not ſo much as a member thereof: the ſame reaſon vſeth that bleſſed Biſhop and Martyr, M. Hooper, examination 3. Fox pag.1507. 5

6 Maſter Rogers holy Martyr: Chriſt onely doth all in vs all, which is the true property of the head, which is a thing, that all the Biſhops of Rome ſhall neuer doe, pag.1486.

Vpon theſe reaſons, which I haue produced, being ſixe in number, it may bee ſtrongly concluded, that the Pope in no ſenſe can be the head of Chriſts Church: which proud title ſeemeth to haue miſliked ſome of your Popes: as Clemens the fifth, in the Councell of Vienna thus writeth, Clement in lib.2.tit.9.c.1. Sacroſanctæ Romanæ eccleſiæ caput Chriſtus redemptor, &c. Chriſt our redeemer is the head of the ſacred Romane Church, and the Romane Biſhop our Redeemers Vicar. So then hee is onely the head of the Church that redeemed it; the Pope is but the heads Vicar, not the head it ſelfe.

If it ſhall be further obiected, that the Biſhop of Rome hath beene called in times paſt, caput Epiſcoporum, the head of all other Biſhops: wee anſwere, that it was but a title of excellencie and commendation, not of dominion and power: as London is called the head or chiefe Citie of England, yet are not other Cities of the land ſubiect vnto it, or vnder the iuriſdiction thereof. But we ſhall haue occaſion more fully to diſcuſſe this matter afterward.

51. Error. 5 They would haue the Pope called the Prelate of the Apoſtolike Sea: the Rhemiſts ſay further, that the Papall dignitie is a continuall Apoſtleſhip, Annot.4.Epheſ.ſect.4.

We anſwere: Firſt, if they call thoſe Churches Apoſtolicall, whoſe firſt founders were the Apoſtles, then the Sea of Antioch, Alexandria, Conſtantinople, are as well Apoſtolicall as Rome.

Concil.Nicen.2.action.1. Retinentes locum Apoſtolicorum thronorum Orientalis dioiceſeos: They which occupie the roome of the Apoſtolike thrones of the Eaſt dioceſſe.

And this the Ieſuite denieth not, lib.2.de pontifice cap.31. But he maketh this difference: firſt, ſaith he, when we ſay the Apoſtolike Sea abſolutely, not adding either of Epheſus, or Antioch, the Sea of Rome is vnderſtood: but the other Apoſtolike Seas are ſo called with reſtraint to the place. Anſwere. That this is falſe which the Ieſuite ſaith, it is proued thus: Siricius Biſhop of Rome, Epiſtol.4.can.1. decreeth thus, Extra conſcientiam ſedis Apoſtolicæ, hoc eſt, primatis, nemo audeat ordinare: Let no man ordaine (Biſhops he meaneth) without the knowledge of the Apoſtolike Sea, that is, ſaith he, expounding himſelfe, of the Primate of the Prouince, &c. not vnderſtanding thereby the Biſhop of Rome, but the Primate or Metropolitane.

Concil. Aurelianenſ. cap.1. Clodoueus the King writeth thus to the Biſhops, which were 33. in number, there aſſembled, Dominis ſanctis & Apoſtolica ſede digniſſimis: To my holy Lords, moſt worthie of the Apoſtolike Sea. He calleth all their Seas Apoſtolicall according to the decree Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap.9. ex Iſidor: Apoſtolis decedentibus ſucceſſerunt Epiſcopi, &c. The Biſhops ſucceede the Apoſtles, and are placed through the world in ſedibus Apoſtolorum, in the Apoſtles Seas. In theſe places which I haue cited, the Apoſtolike Sea is named abſolutely, and yet the Sea of Rome not vnderſtood thereby. Bellarmines ſecond exception is this, that the Pope is not onely called Prelate of the Apoſtolike Sea, Sed munus eius Apoſtolatus, but his office an Apoſtleſhip: ſo are not other. Anſw. This is one of Bellarmines toyes, for ſeeing Apoſtolicus, and Apoſtolatus, are coniugata, and where the one is, there muſt be the other; if other Biſhops bee as well Apoſtolicall as he, they haue alſo an Apoſtleſhip as well as he.

Secondly, thoſe Churches are Apoſtolicall, which holde the Apoſtolike faith: ſo is not the Sea of Rome Apoſtolicall, being departed and gone back from the ancient Catholike faith: but thoſe Churches where the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt is truely preached, are indeede Apoſtolike.

Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr thus witneſſeth: it was neither for the priuiledge of the Sea or perſon, that the Sea and Biſhop of Rome were called Apoſtolike, but for the true trade of Chriſtes religion taught and maintained in that Sea, Fox pa.1775. Thus alſo writeth Agatho Biſhop of Rome to Conſtantine the Emperour, Væ mihi eſt, ſi veritatem Domini mei, quam Apoſtoli prædicarunt, prædicare neglexero: Woe is vnto me, if I neglect to preach the trueth of my Lord, which the Apoſtles preached.

Thirdly, how can the Pope be an Apoſtle, or haue Apoſtolike authority, ſeeing he preacheth not at all, much leſſe to the whole world, wherein conſiſted the office of an Apoſtle? Neither can he ſhew his immediate calling from Chriſt, as all the Apoſtles could: for ſeeing he chalengeth the Apoſtolike office by tradition from S.Peter, and not by commandement from Chriſt; he can in no wiſe be counted an Apoſtle, or his office an Apoſtleſhip: for the Apoſtles ordained onely Euangeliſts and Paſtors, they had not authoritie to conſecrate and conſtitute new Apoſtles. Our aduerſaries for this their Apoſtleſhip, can finde nothing in Scripture, not for a thouſand yeares after Chriſt in the ancient writers, Fulk. annot.in Epheſ.4.ſect.4.

52. Error. Diſtinct.99. 6 Concerning the title of vniuerſall Biſhop, it was thus decreed in the ſixth Councell of Carthage, as it is alleaged by Gratian: Vniuerſalis autem nec Romanus pontifex appelletur: No not the Biſhop of Rome is to be called vniuerſall. In Gregorie the firſt his time, Iohn Patriarch of Conſtantinople, obtained of the Emperour Mauritius to be called vniuerſall Patriarch: but Gregorie would not agree thereunto, calling him the fore-runner of Antichriſt, that would chalenge ſo proud a name, Gregor. lib.4.Epiſtol.32.

Lib.2. de pont. cap.31. Bellarmine and other of that ſect doe anſwere, that Gregory found fault with this title, becauſe Iohn of Conſtantinople would haue beene Biſhop alone, and none other to be beſide him, but all other onely to be his deputies and Vicars.

To this we replie: First, Iohn did onely challenge a ſuperiority ouer other Biſhops, not to be Biſhop alone; for this had been a thing impoſſible. Secondly, if Iohn had ſought any ſuch thing, it is not like that the Greeke Biſhops, which gaue their conſent vnto this title, would haue yeelded to ſo vnreaſonable a matter as they did. Thirdly, Eulogius Patriarch of Alexandria doth call the ſaid Gregorie vniuerſall Pope, which name he vtterly refuſeth: and yet Eulogius had no ſuch meaning to make him Biſhop or Patriarch alone, but onely to giue him a preeminence aboue the reſt.

Fourthly, this may appeare to be ſo by that which Leo writeth epiſtol.53. concerning Anatolius Patriarch of Conſtantinople: to whom this preeminence was granted in the Chalcedon Councel. Nimium ſuperbum eſt, vt vnius creſcat dignitas, tot metropolitanorum impugnare primatus: It is too proud an enterpriſe, to impugne the primacie of ſo many Metropolitanes, to increaſe the dignitie of one. Pelagius the ſecond thus writeth alſo againſt Iohn of Conſtantinople, who challenged to be called vniuerſall Biſhop: Si ſummus patriarcha vniuerſalis dicitur, patriarcharum nomen cæteris derogatur: epiſt.1 decretal. If the chiefe Patriarch be called vniuerſal, then the title of Patriarchſhip is taken from the reſt, &c. By theſe teſtimonies it appeareth, that theſe ambitious prelates had no meaning to ſpoyle the reſt of their Epiſcopal dignity, but only to haue the primacy and preeminence before them. For the title of vniuerſalitie doth only derogate to the dignitie of Patriarches, and primacy of Metropolitanes.

This modeſt and humble Biſhop of Rome Gregorie, of whom we ſpake before, in ſtead of the title, Vniuerſall, brought it into the Popes ſtile to be called ſeruus ſeruorum Dei, ſeruant to Gods ſeruants: Ergo, we conclude with Gregorie, that this title, Vniuerſall, is an Antichriſtian name, and that it hath miſliked the ancient Biſhops of Rome themſelues; and how other Patriarches and Biſhops haue challenged that ambitious name and title, as well as the Popes of Rome. And it hath been acknowledged and yeelded vnto them, as Conſtantinop. general.5. action.1. Iohn Biſhop of Conſtantinople is called Oecomenicus Patriarcha, Oecomenicall, or vniuerſall Patriarch. Conſtantinop. general. 6. action.13. Cyrus Biſhop of Alexandria writeth thus to Sergius Biſhop of Conſtantinople: Ter beatiſſimo, benigno paſtori paſtorum, patri patrum, vniuerſali patriarchæ Sergio: To the thrice bleſſed Paſtor of Paſtors, and Father of Fathers, the vniuerſall Patriarch Sergius. And leſt it might be ſaid that theſe Patriarches do but dallie and gloſe one with another, we find that Pope Adrian writeth thus to Tharaſius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, Dilecto fratri vniuerſali Patriarchæ: To my beloued brother the vniuerſall Patriarch, &c. Nicen.2.action.2.

We conclude therefore, that this title to bee called vniuerſall Biſhop or Patriarch, neither was in times paſt, nor is now properly or of right belonging to the Sea of Rome.

Laſtly, ſee the iudgement of ſome Papiſts themſelues of this point: Eckius a ſtout popiſh champion ſaith thus diſputing againſt Luther, that the Biſhop of Rome ought not to be called vniuerſall Biſhop, but Biſhop of the vniuerſall Church: Fox. pag.858.

Concil. Baſilienſ. epiſtol. ſynodal.8. Romanus pontifex eſt vniuerſalis Eccleſiæ miniſter non dominus: The Biſhop of Rome is a ſeruant or Miniſter of the vniuerſall Church, not a Lord or Biſhop. They grant not ſo much as Eckius doth. Biſhop Longland cutteth him yet ſhorter, ſaying, There is no vniuerſall Biſhop but Chriſt: the Biſhop of Rome and all other Biſhops, are but underlings and vnworthie ſuffraganes to this Biſhop Chriſt. Fox. pag.1100.

Concerning theſe glorious titles, which they would haue appropriated to the Biſhop of Rome, I will ſet downe at once the iudgement of other Chriſtian Churches. 1. For the Greek Church Nilus confeſſeth, that the B. of Rome had a primacie yeelded vnto him, but as a preſeruer of order, and not otherwiſe. And whereas they chalenge, that the B. of Rome was called and ſtiled ſimply, Biſhop without addition of any place: he ſheweth that others alſo were ſo called: as Theodoſius writeth, Cyrillo Epiſcopo, to Cyrillus the Biſhop, without expreſſe mention of the place. Concerning the title of chiefe Biſhop, the Church of the Muſcouites[a] denie the Church of Rome to be Principem et magiſtram, the Princes and Miſtreſſe of other Churches: and Ieremie Patriarch of Conſtantinople challengeth this title to that Sea: [b] Cum hæc quæ apud nos eſt Eccleſia, Princeps ſit aliarum Eccleſiarum: Seeing this Church of God, which is with vs, is the chiefe of other Churches, &c. As for the title of vicarſhip, the ſaid Ieremie alſo challengeth it to that Sea: [c] Mediocritas noſtra Chriſti Domini miſeratione ſucceſſione quadam hic terris in eius locum tenens: Our mediocrity is in the roome or ſtead of Chriſt our Lord, by a certain ſucceſſion here in earth. The Muſcouite Church following the Greeks, denie the Church of Rome, [d] caput eſſe Eccleſiarū, to be the head of other Churches. Nilus acknowledgeth the Pope to be the head, that is the firſt of the Churches, but with two limitations, as long as he keep order, and ſtandeth for the truth, and not otherwiſe: both which ſeeing he hath tranſgreſſed, he hath alſo loſt his headſhip. For the title Apoſtle and Apoſtolicall, the ſame Nilus denieth the Pope to be an Apoſtle, for the Apoſtles did not ordaine Apoſtles, but Paſtors and Doctors? if he be not an Apoſtle, then he hath not Apoſtolatum, an Apoſtleſhip, as Bellarmine vrgeth: he further ſheweth out of the ſubſcription of the 6. and 7. generall Councels, that the other patriarchal Seas of Alexandria, Hieruſalem, Antioch, were called Apoſtolical, as well as Rome: and he alleageth Chryſoſtome, who ſaith, that euerie Biſhop, doth ſit in the chaire of Chriſt, as the Prieſts of the law did ſit in Moſes chaire. And vniuerſall Biſhops, Barlaam denieth any to haue been, ſaue the Apoſtles: particular Paſtors they appointed ouer cities, as Dyoniſius of Athens, Timotheus of Epheſus, Titus of Creet, and Clement was conſtituted Biſhop of Rome by S. Peter.

King of Portugall, he ſtileth himſelfe columna fidei, the piller of the faith: he then dependeth not vpon the Pope, as the chiefe Paſtor for his faith. Yea, as Aluares reporteth, when being asked of the Emperour, whether they did obey all which the Pope commanded, hee anſwered, Wee doe, being thereto obliged by the article of our faith, which confeſſeth one holy Catholike Church: The Emperour replied, that if the Pope would vſe towards them any vnlawfull commandement, they would not make any reckoning of it. They doe not then yeeld obedience in all things to the Pope, as the chiefe paſtor.

53. Error.

THey deny not but that both the Pope by himſelfe, and together with a whole Councell, may bee deceiued in matters of fact, that is, in hiſtoricall points, and the truth of things that are done, becauſe it dependeth of the teſtimonie and information of men; but in matters of faith and doctrine, the Pope determining with the Councell, is not ſubiect to error: yea, the Pope by himſelfe alone decreeing any thing concerning faith cannot be deceiued, Bellarm. lib. 4. de pontific. cap. 13. No nor yet in precepts of manners preſcribed to the Church by the Pope, is there any feare or danger of error, cap. 5. Yea, it is probable (ſaith he) that the Pope, not onely as Pope, cannot erre, but not as a priuate perſon, is it like he ſhould fall into hereſie, or hold any obſtinate opinion contrary to the faith? cap. 6.

Luke 22.31.

Argum. 1. Luk. 22. 31. Simon, I haue prayed for thee, that thy faith faile not. Chriſt here praieth for Peter, and his ſucceſſors, that they might not at any time erre, or be deceiued in matters of faith, Bellarm. cap. 3. Rhem. annot. in Luk. 22. ſect. 11.

We anſwere: Firſt, this was a particular prayer for Peter, that his faith ſhould not faile in that great and dangerous tentation, into the which our Sauiour foreſaw he ſhould fal: For if it were to be vnderſtood of Peters ſucceſſors, they alſo muſt be firſt ſifted by Satan as Peter was, and denie Chriſt, and ſo being conuerted ſtrengthen their brethren: if they will vnderſtand one part of Peters ſucceſſors, I pray you, why not all? Secondly, our Sauiour prayeth likewiſe for all his Apoſtles, that they might be ſanctified in the truth; yea for all, that ſhould beleeue by their preaching: yet is not euery Chriſtian priuiledged from all error of faith. Thirdly, after this Peter himſelfe erred, and was reprehended of S. Paul.

Iohn. 11. 51.

Argum. 2. The high Prieſts that ſat in Moſes chaire were priuiledged not to erre: as Caiphas though a wicked man, and in ſome ſort an vſurper, had ſome aſſiſtance of God for vtterance of the truth, Ioh. 11. 51. Ergo, much more now are the chiefe paſtors of the Church free from error, Bellarm. cap. 3. Rhem. Luc. 22. ſect. 11.

2. King. 16. 11. Nehem. 13. 4.

We anſwere: the high prieſts had no ſuch priuiledge, for ſome of them fell into ſtrange errors: Vriah the high prieſt ſet vp an Idolatrous Altar at the Kings commandement. 2. King. 16. Eliaſhib was ioyned in affinitie with Tobiah the Ammonite, contrary to the law of God, Nehem. 13. 4. And concerning Caiphas, though at this time he ignorantly ſpake the truth, yet was he a Sadduce, and condemned Chriſt. And if Caiphas example prooue any thing, being (as you ſay) but an vſurper of the Prieſthood, it maketh as well for vſurpers of the Papall Sea, that they alſo ſhould be priuiledged from error.

Bellarmine and the reſt doe much vrge that place of Cyprian, epiſtol. 1. ad Cornelium: Non cogitant eos eſſe Romanos, quorum fides Apoſtolo prædicante laudata eſt, ad quos perfidia habere non poſſit acceſſum: They remember not that they are Romanes, whoſe faith is ſo commended euen by the Apoſtle himſelfe, vnto whom falſehood or vntruth can haue no acceſſe. Alſo Euſebius B. of Rome ſaith, In Eccleſia Catholica extra maculam ſemper eſt Catholica ſeruata religio: In the Catholike Church the Catholike Religion hath alwaies been kept without ſpot.

Lucius B. of Rome alſo thus writeth, Vt in exordio normam fidei Apoſtolicæ ab authoribus ſuis percepit, pit, illibata ſine ſordibus manet: As in the beginning it receiued the Apoſtolike faith from the authors thereof, ſo it remaineth vncorrupted to the end, Epiſtol. decretal.

Anſw. Firſt, as for the teſtimonies of the Biſhops of Rome, they doe not greatly mooue vs: for who ſeeth not that they might be partiall, in iudging of their own Church? Cyprians teſtimonie, a welwiller of the Romane Church, though not of that Church, carrieth greater waight with vs. Secondly, they all here alleaged, haue ſpeciall relation to former times, and commend the conſtancie of the Romane faith: for vntill Cyprian and Lucius time, and ſomewhat after, the Biſhops of Rome were faithfull men, impugners of hereſies, holy Martyrs: for as yet Marcellinus had not fallen: and therefore they could doe no leſſe, then commend their continuance in the Apoſtolike faith, during ſo many yeeres of perſecution. And for the time to come, they ſpeake not definitely as Prophets, but iudge charitablie as brethren, that they hope well, that the Church of Rome which had held out ſo long, would haue held out to the end. Thirdly, Euſebius ſaith, that in the Catholike Church the Catholike faith ſhall alwaies remaine: ſo then as long as the Church of Rome was Catholike, not departing from the doctrine of the Apoſtles, they were ſure to haue the Apoſtolike faith: and thus Cyprian alſo and Lucius, with the reſt that ſo ſpeake, muſt bee vnderſtood. So a popiſh champion himſelfe teacheth vs to vnderſtand them: Quod dicitur, Eccleſia Romana ſemper immaculata permanſit, & permanebit, intelligi debet vera, quamdiu ligabit & ſoluet iuſte, claue non errante: Where it is ſaid, the Church of Rome hath remained and ſhall continue vnſpotted, to make it true, wee muſt vnderſtand, ſo long as it bindeth and looſeth iuſtly, the key not erring: Iohan. Patriarch. Antiochen. opuſcul. in appendic. Concil. Baſilienſ.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Popes and Biſhops of Rome haue not onely erred in manners, but euen in faith; (and not onely priuately and perſonally as men, but publikely and iudicially as Popes;) that they haue by their publike and open preaching, defence, allowance, and conſent approoued and eſtabliſhed erroneous, and ſome hereticall opinions: thus we truſt to make it plaine and euident to all men.

1 Peter erred: Ergo, the Pope may, though he were Peters ſucceſſor. Firſt, Peter erred in denying of Chriſt. The Ieſuite anſwereth: firſt, he began not yet to be the chiefe Biſhop, which he entered not into till after the reſurrection, when Chriſt ſaid vnto him, Feede my ſheepe, Ioh. 21. therefore all this while he might erre. A goodly anſwere: I pray you tell me, was not the Church before Chriſts paſſion, and after, built vpon the ſame rocke? I trow they cannot denie it; but Peter was not the rock before, therefore not after.

John 21.

If he were therefore called a rocke becauſe of his confeſſion of Chriſt, why ſhould he not then rather, ſtraight after his confeſſion take poſſeſſion of his office, then immediately after his denial of Chriſt? ſurely this is but a ſillie ſhift. Secondly, ſaith the Ieſuite, Peter failed in charitie when he denied Chriſt, not in faith, cap.3. and if he failed in faith, he loſt the confeſſion of faith, and not faith it ſelfe.

We anſwere: Firſt, can a true faith then bee ſeparated from loue by your doctrine? The Apoſtles knew no ſuch faith: Saint Iames ſaith, it is a dead faith that is without the works of loue, and the faith of diuels, that is, no faith, Iames 2.17.19. If then Peters loue failed, his faith alſo failed. Secondly, we doe not ſay that Peters faith was loſt and vtterly extinguiſhed, for Chriſt praied for him, but whether it were an error in faith which Peter fell into: for it is not all one to erre in faith, or cleane to loſe faith. [a]Thirdly, he loſt the confeſſion of faith, he denied Chriſt in word: Ergo, he denied the faith, howſoeuer he thought in heart: for thoſe two are the principall fruits of faith, to Beleeue with the heart, and Confeſſe with the mouth, Rom. 10. and where either of theſe is wanting, there cannot be a right faith: for [b]he that putteth away a good conſcience, maketh ſhipwrack alſo of faith, 1. Tim. 1. 19. But the Ieſuite I ſee hath a queazie ſtomacke, let him cough vp luſtily, and ſay with one of his fellowes, Petrus non fidem Chriſti, ſed Chriſtum ſalua fide negauit: Peter denied not the faith of Chriſt, but his faith remaining ſound and whole, he onely denied Chriſt. Loe, here is new popiſh diuinitie, that a man may deny Chriſt, and yet not denie the faith.

Secondly, Peter erred in conſtraining the Gentiles to do as the Iewes. Bellarmine ſaith, it was an error in example and conuerſation, not in faith or doctrine, cap.7.

We anſwere: Firſt, in this example of Peter there was alſo included an error in faith: for how ſhould the Gentiles better know Peters iudgement, then by his example, by the which they fell into an error of faith, and were conſtrained to conforme themſelues like to the Iewes: thinking that the Iewiſh ceremonies were neceſſarie to be retained? Secondly, S. Paul himſelfe ſaith, they went not the right way to the truth of the Goſpell. Ergo, they erred from the truth of the Goſpell, and ſo in faith. Thirdly, the Diuines of Paris doe attribute to Peter an error in faith, Fulk. annot. 4. Galat. 9.

Thus teſtifieth alſo Gelaſius, Tom. de anathematis vinculo. S. Petrus ſic exiſtimans noui teſtamenti gratiam prædicandam, vt à legis veteris non recederet inſtitutis, quædam per ſimulationem legitur geſſiſſe: S. Peter thinking that the grace of the new Teſtament was ſo to be preached, that he ſhould not notwithſtanding leaue the inſtitution of the old law, is read to haue committed ſomewhat by diſſimulation. It was therfore an error in opinion, which afterward the ſame Gelaſius calleth, imbecillis inſcitia, his impotent vnskilfulneſſe: Saint Peter therefore failed not only in his examples, but in his knowledge and iudgement.

2 We can produce many examples of the Popes, which haue erred iudicially, namely, openly haue maintained errors. To let paſſe Marcellinus, who ſacrificed to Idols, as a ſlippe of his perſon, and he afterward

[a] At this time hee failed and loſt his confeſſion, and was weake in faith, but neither of them were vtterlie loſt. See the further anſwer to this obiection: Retec. pag.30. Alan.Cop.

[b] Though in that place the Apoſtle ſpeake onelie of certaine, yet the rule is general, that he which putteth away a good cõſciẽce, doth alſo violate the right ſauing faith, which is neuer ſeuered from a good cõſciẽce. See the exception to this place further anſwered. Retec.pag.110.

afterward repented him of his fall: yet by the way the Ieſuite is deceiued, that thinketh it probable, that the Popes particular perſon cannot fall into hereſie: here you ſee Marcellinus fell into Idolatrie;

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Marcellinus was no heretike, Niſi actu externo ob metum mortis: But onely in an externall act for feare of death.

Contra. That Marcellinus failed not onely in committing of an vnlawfull act, but erred in iudgement, it appeareth in the proceſſe againſt him in the Sinueſſane Councell: for thus Marcellinus at the firſt excuſed himſelf, Non Dijs ſacrificaui, ſed tantùm grana leuatis manibus ſuper prunas combuſſi: I did not ſacrifice (ſaith he) to the gods, but only lifting vp my hands, burnt incenſe ouer the coales. But what is this elſe, I pray you, then to offer ſacrifice to Idols?

Liberius ſubſcribed to the Arrians, conſented to the condemnation of Athanaſius: as teſtifieth Hieronimus, confeſſed by Nicholaus Cuſanus, and Alphonſus de caſtro, both Papiſts, Iuel. pag. 164. defenſ. Apolog.

Lib.6.de loc. cap.8.

Honorius 1. conſented to the hereſie of Sergius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, who was a Monothelite, and held, that there were not two wils or operations in Chriſt, and ſo deſtroyed the two natures. That Honorius was a Monothelite, Melchior Canus a Papiſt confeſſeth: he was condemned for an heretike in the 6.7. and 8. generall Synodes. Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Councels are corrupted, or they might be deceiued in iudgement, as in a matter of fact: or that Honorius only miſliked the ſpeech, to ſay there were two willes in Chriſt, and not the thing. See what poore ſhifts heere bee to make Honorius no heretike, and yet all will not bee: for one of your owne Popes Leo 2. writing to Conſtantinus the Emperour, accurſed Honorius amongſt other Monothelite heretikes: Wee accurſe (ſaith he) the inuentors of this new error, Theodorus, Cyrus, &c. and Honorius, which did not lighten the Apoſtolike Church, with the doctrine of Apoſtolike tradition, but by prophane treaſon endeuoured to ſubuert the immaculate faith, &c. Thus Honorius in a principal article of the faith erred, not in his priuate opinion onely, but in his publike defence.

Adrianus 2. Biſhop of Rome, whatſoeuer the Ieſuite ſaith to the contrarie, putteth al out of doubt: as it may appeare Conſtantinop. general. 8. action. 7. for he writeth thus: Licèt Honorio ab Orientalibus poſt mortem anathema ſit dictum, ſciendum tamen eſt, quia ſuper hæreſi fuerat accuſatus, propter quam ſolum licitum eſt iunioribus maiorum ſuorum motibus reſiſtere: Although Honorius were accurſed or condemned of the Eaſt Church after his death, you muſt vnderſtand that he was accuſed of hereſie, for the which onely it is lawfull for the inferiours to reſiſt the doings of their ſuperiours, &c. Here a Pope himſelfe plainely confeſſeth, that Honorius his predeceſſor was an heretike.

Pope Stephen the 6. tooke vp Formoſus bodie, and cut off two fingers of his right hand, and buried him againe in a lay-mans Sepulchre. Then followed Romanus the 1. Theodorus the 2. Iohannes the 9. and reſtored Formoſus with his decrees, iudging him to be lawfull Biſhop. After them commeth Sergius the 3. who tooke vp the bodie againe, cut off the head, and caſt it into Tyber. The Ieſuite anſwereth, that Stephanus and Sergius erred onely in a matter of fact. A goodly cloake to couer the filthineſſe of their ghoſtly fathers withall.

But by your leaue a little: doe you not hold it to be an article of faith to beleeue the Pope to bee the head of Chriſts Church? Then was it an article of faith to hold that Formoſus was right Pope, for at that time there was no other: Ergo, Stephanus and Sergius erred in faith, defining the contrary.

All that you can ſay, is this: that it was not yet determined and decreed for an article of faith, ſo to beleeue: ſee, I pray you, theſe mens faith is pinned vpon Popes ſleeues. Why maſters, the rule of faith is certaine, you cannot make new articles of faith now, but onely declare and explane thoſe that are: as one of your owne Popes well ſaith; Articuli fidei habent probari ex ſcripturis: The articles of faith muſt be prooued out of Scripture, and are contained in the Symbole. Ioan. 22. Extra. tit. 14. cap. 5. But doe you not thinke that theſe iollie Popes, that would rake the dead out of their graues, for their holineſſe might deſerue at Gods hand, to haue a priuiledge not to erre in faith?

Gregorius 3. epiſtol. ad Bonifacium thus determineth, Virum vxore infirmitate correpta, & non valente ei debitum reddere, aliam ducere, &c. The husband if his wife be taken with any infirmitie, ſo that ſhe cannot performe her due vnto him, may marrie another. Pope Nicholas 1. de matrimon. can. 6. decreed cleane contrarie: They that were ſound when they married, and afterward fall into any infirmitie: ob hanc infirmitatem coniugia talium diſſolui non poſſunt: becauſe of this infirmitie their mariage muſt not be diſſolued. One of theſe muſt needs be in error: for one ſaith, that becauſe of the infirmitie of the wife, marriage may be diſſolued: the other ſaith contrary. Neither doth Bellarmine helpe the matter, in ſaying, that Gregorie ſpeaketh of a continual impotency and weakneſſe of nature, and ſo the mariage was, ex errore contractum, contracted of error and ignorance: and ſuch kind of mariages may lawfully bee looſed, being indeede no mariages: Hæc ille. Contra. But it is plaine that Gregorie ſpeaketh of infirmitie or ſicknes, that the wife is taken withal, correpta, not that was continually vpon her: and howſoeuer it is, both theſe Popes vſing the ſame word, Infirmitie, and ſo meaning the ſame thing, cannot be excuſed from contrarietie.

Nicholaus 1. de baptiſmo decret. 1. alloweth baptiſme made onely in the name of Chriſt, without expreſſe mention of the Trinitie: which is a manifeſt error, and contrarie to the Scripture, Matth. 28.19. Bellarmines anſwere is, Eum non definiendo ſic dixiſſe, ſed vt particularem doctorem: That hee ſpake this not definitiuely, but as a particular Doctor. Contra. A weake defence: for where elſe is the Popes definitiue ſentence to bee found, but in his decrees publiſhed to the whole world, as this is? and it is placed amongſt your owne Canons, Decret.part.3.diſt.4.cap.24.

Alexander 3. Lateranenſ.concil.part.6.cap.8. forbiddeth mariage to be made, cum ſorore ſponſæ defuncta, with her ſiſter that was eſpouſed and betrothed, and is now dead.

Benedictus part.6.cap.27. determineth cleane contrarie: Qui vnam ſororem deſponſauerit, ſi eam non cognouerit, poteſt aliam ſororem ſibi matrimonio copulare: He that hath eſpouſed to himſelfe one ſiſter, if he haue not knowne her, may marrie the other ſiſter.

Alexand.ibid.cap.8. Matrimonium contractum per verba de præſenti cum alio initum diſſoluendum indicat: He iudgeth matrimonie contracted with one by words of the preſent tence, and yet made with another, to be void. Benedictus determineth contrarie, cap.28. for the caſe is put of one R. that was contracted with one Mary, by words of the preſent tence, and nothing wanted but ſolemnization of the mariage: afterward the ſaid R. marrieth another: If there be no other let (ſaith he) beſide this mutuall conſent and contract, ſecunda matrimonia inuiolabiliter obſeruanda iudicamus; we giue ſentence that the ſecond mariage hold. Now one of theſe Popes, the one being ſo contrarie to the other, muſt needs be in an error.

Syluester the ſecond was a Necromancer and a Coniurer, and therefore fallen from the faith. Bellarmine ſaith, he was a good man, and all are fables and lies that are told of him: and becauſe he was cunning in Geometrie, that ignorant age ſtraightwaies iudged him to be giuen to Necromancie.

Thus we may take the Ieſuits word, if we will. But the ſtorie is reported by authors of better credit then Bellarmine: as Iohannes Stella, Platina, Petrus Premonſtratenſ. Nauclerus, Antoninus. Fox pag.167.

Anaſtaſius was a Neſtorian heretike, whoſe hereſie was this, that there are, as two natures, ſo alſo two perſons in Chriſt, Alphonſ.de caſtro lib.1.de hæreſib.cap.4.

Celeſtinus is reported by Laurentius Valla a Canon of Rome, to haue been a Neſtorian heretike, de donation.Conſtantin.

Now commeth in Pope Hildebrand, or rather Heldebrand, for he was a very brand of hell fire, called Gregory the ſeuenth: of whom Benno writeth thus: that he poyſoned ſixe Popes his predeceſſors to make himſelfe a way to the Popedome: that he was a Coniurer, a raiſer of Diuels, and in his rage he caſt the Sacrament into the fire. But ſaith Harding our countrey-man, though vnworthilie, Benno was his enemie, and wrote of diſpleaſure: and Bellarmine thinketh that ſome Lutherane was the author of the booke, which goeth vnder the name of Benno, who was Cardinall in this Hildebrands time. But Benno only doth not thus report of him: he was openly twice for the ſame crimes condemned in Councell: firſt at Wormes: then after depoſed in the Councell at Brixia in Italie, and Pope Clement the third elected to ſucceed him. And the ſaid Gregorie died in exile, of whom Antoninus reporteth, that before his death, he repented him of his inſolencie ſhewed toward the Emperour Henry the fourth; whom with his wife and young child bare foote, and bare legd, he had cauſed three daies together, in extreame froſt and cold, to waite at his palace gates at Canuſium, before hee could ſpeake with him. Yet this Hildebrand for all theſe inſolent, cruell, and diſhoneſt parts, is commended by our Papiſts, Harding, Bellarmine and other, for a deuout Catholike man, who did al things of a zeale to the Church. By this you may iudge, whom our aduerſaries count a Catholike man.

Vrſpergenſ.

Fox pag.179. Iuel.168. Defenſ.Apol.

Pope Iohn the 22. affirmed, that the ſoules lie in a trance till the day of iudgement, and feele neither paine nor ioy. Harding, and likewiſe Bellarmine anſwere, that this was an error, but no hereſie. Yet in the Vniuerſitie of Paris, it was condemned for hereſie, as Gerſon writeth. Againe ſaith Harding, he held it onely as a priuate opinion. But Maſſaus ſaith, that Pope Iohn preached this hereſie and ſent out preachers to maintaine it. He was condemned (ſaith he) with his error by the Diuines of Paris in the preſence of Philip the French King, before hee was Pope, when he was yet but a priuate Doctor. But the contrarie is proued by Biſhop Iewel, that he was Pope thirteene yeeres before Philip was King, *Iewel.defenſ. Apolog.*pag.667.

Pope Iohn the 23. denied the life to come, and the reſurrection of the bodie: And this hereſie was openly obiected againſt him in the Councell of Conſtance. Bellarmine and Harding before him, anſwere, that hee was not the rightfull Pope, for there were three at that time, and therefore might erre. But Platina ſaith, that he was choſen at Bononia, by the conſent of all the Cardinals: ex Iuel. pag.671.

Laſtly, Pope Eugenius the 4. was condemned and depoſed as an heretike in the Councell of Baſil. Where the Ieſuite hath no other anſwere, then by condemning the Councell as Schiſmaticall, to acquite the Pope, lib.3.de pontif.cap.14.

By theſe examples it may appeare to the indifferent reader, that it is no rare nor impoſſible thing, for the Popes of Rome to erre, yea become plaine heretikes. And as for that ſhift of the Ieſuite, that they are no longer Popes, when they openly begin to teach hereſie, this is as Alphonſus ſaith, in re ſeria verbis velle iocari, to dallie with words in a ſerious and earneſt matter, &c. And ſo euery Biſhop ſhall be as well priuiledged as the Pope, and cannot fall into hereſie: for why may we not ſay that a Biſhop, when he is knowne to be an heretike, ceaſeth to be Biſhop any longer, as the Pope is no longer Pope; and ſo as long as he remaineth Biſhop, cannot poſſibly bee an heretike? Surely this is but weake ſtuffe.

De hæreſib. lib.1.cap.4.

Neither haue we named all the Popes, that are found to haue erred publikely, and iudicially: as Lucius doth allow mariages made without conſent of parents: de raptorib. cap. cum cauſa. Euariſtus before him defineth ſuch not to be lawfull marriages, but rather, ſtupra & adulteria, whoredomes and adulteries, epiſt. 1. One of theſe two decreeing thus contrarie each to other, muſt needes bee in an error: Oldendorpius, and Duarenus doe think that Lucius is in an error, and they thinke right: but Antonius Delphinus to iuſtifie the practiſe herein of the Popiſh Church, doe impute the error to Euariſtus.

Innocentius the firſt did definitiuely hold, that it was neceſſarie for infants to receiue the Communion, which is a manifeſt error: Auguſtine ſo writeth of him, who was in the ſame error himſelfe, Cont. Iulian. lib. 1. cap. 2.

Innocentius againe writing to Decentius, affirmeth that none of the Apoſtles did preach in Italie, France, Spaine, Africa, but Peter, and whom he ſent, decret. p. 1. diſt. 11. c. 11. which one of your owne writers ſaith is contrarie to Saint Pauls epiſtles, and the ſtorie of the Acts: Eſpencæus in 2. Timoth. p. 177.

Nicholas the fourth did define publikely, that neither Chriſt nor his Apoſtles had any thing in propertie, Sext. decret. lib. 5. tit. 12. c. 3.

Iohn the 22. defineth this aſſertion to be hereſie, for any man to ſay, that Chriſt and his Apoſtles had nothing: Extrau. tit. 14. cap. 4.

And to conclude, it is a rule in their owne law: Error cui non reſiſtitur approbari videtur: Error, that is not reſiſted, is approued, Extrau. Iohann. tit. 5. c. 3. And by theſe reaſons, few of the Popes ſhall be free from error, who haue ſuffered, through their idle and voluptuous life, many errors and hereſies to grow vp vnder their noſe without check.

Let vs ſee what a generall Councell hath determined of this matter: Concil. Baſilienſ. epiſtol. ſynod. 8. This priuiledge, ſay they, not to erre, hath not been granted, communi lege, by a common or perpetuall law to any, not to the Angels, for many of them fell; not to our firſt parents: for they were deceiued: Non ſummis pontificibus, quorum nonnulli in hereſes & errores lapſi eſſe dicuntur, & leguntur: Not vnto the chiefe Biſhops, for many of them are read to haue fallen into error and hereſie.

Pag. 913. 1. 70.

The teſtimonie of the glorious Martyrs is this: Maſter Bilney holie Martyr, accuſed and condemned for this article with others, that he ſhould ſay, That theſe fiue hundred yeeres there hath been no good Pope, nor in all the time paſt we can finde but fiftie: for they haue neither preached, nor liued well, &c. But till now haue borne the keyes of Simon, &c. Fox pag. 1001. col. 1.

Pag. 1141. 1. 60.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr: I thinke verely that ſo long as the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles were perſecuted and martyred (he meaneth the thirtie Biſhops of Rome, that were put to death for Chriſt) there were good Chriſten men, and no longer: pag. 1252. col. 2. If the Popes haue hardly been good Chriſten men this long time, much leſſe haue they been freed from error.

De Baptiſ. lib. 2. cap. 3.

Laſtly, Auguſtine is not a whit afraid to ſay, Epiſcoporum literas, &c. per ſermonem ſapientiorem cuiuſlibet in ea re peritioris, & per aliorum epiſcoporum grauiorem authoritatem, & per concilia licere reprehendi, ſi in eis à veritate deuiatum ſit: That the decrees of all Biſhops whatſoeuer (not excluding Popes) may be corrected either by the ſentence of wiſer men in that point, wherein they erred, or by the better aduiſed ſentence of other Biſhops, or by Councels may be reuerſed, where they doe erre. Ergo, it is poſſible for Popes, by his iudgement, to erre.

And for further euidence: 1. The Greekes conſent with vs that the Popes haue erred, yea became heretikes. Nilus vſeth theſe arguments: firſt, Peter ſtumbled and fell, although he earneſtly profeſſed the contrarie, that he would neuer denie his Maſter. Againe, if the Pope cannot be free from lying, couetouſnes, vaine glorie, and ſuch like, he may alſo make ſhipwrack of faith, as the Apoſtle ſaith, hauing faith and a good conſcience, which ſome haue put away, and concerning faith haue made ſhipwracke: and the ſame Apoſtle alſo ſpeaketh of ſome, which profeſſe God in words, and denie him in deeds: and ſo may the Pope denie [a] Chriſt in workes, and not in words. Thirdly, he vrgeth the ſixteenth decree of the ſixth generall Synode, where Honorius Biſhop of Rome was anathematiſed among other heretikes: whereupon Barlaam thus inferreth: What doe you tell me, that the Pope cannot erre: [b] I ſee a dead man, and yet you ſay he cannot die.

2 The Ethiopike Church holdeth that the Pope may erre: for, as is ſhewed before, the Emperour putteth the caſe, that, if the Pope ſhould vſe toward them any vnlawfull commandement, they would make no reckoning of it: Ergo, he may command vnlawfull things.

Harm. ſect. 11. pag. 166.
Sect. 19. p. 606.

3 The reformed Churches hold it a palpable error to affirme that the Pope cannot erre. Confeſſion of Auſpurg, artic. 7. alloweth that ſaying of Auguſtine: Neither muſt wee ſubſcribe to Catholike Biſhops, if they chance to erre, or hold opinions which be againſt the Scriptures. And againe, Theſe limits theſe Biſhops doe moſt malapartly remoue, who proudly challenge to themſelues a triple power, whereby they eſtabliſh moſt pernicious errors, to wit, princely and ſupreame power of interpreting Scriptures: ſecondly, the power of erecting a new worſhip of God: thirdly, a ſoueraigne power of making lawes, &c. Sueueland in the concluſion: You may ſee, that of theſe innumerable no leſſe holy, then neceſſarie decrees of former Councels, there is not ſo much as the leaſt point obſerued of our Eccleſiaſticall men, and that they haue degenerated in all things, &c. Theſe confeſſions ſpeake generally of all Biſhops, not excluding the Pope.

4 Of the Romane Church Gregorie the firſt yeeldeth this as a reaſon, why none ſhould be called vniuerſall Biſhop, becauſe, Vniuerſa eccleſia (quod abſit) à ſtatu ſuo corruit, cum is, qui appellatur vniuerſalis cadit: The vniuerſall Church ſhould fall from her ſtate, when hee that is called vniuerſall Biſhop falleth, &c. he ſuppoſeth that the vniuerſall Biſhop may fall. [a] Turrecremata confeſſeth Liberius Biſhop of Rome to haue been an Arrian heretike: [b] Alphonſus de caſtro granteth that Pope Anaſtaſius was a Neſtorian heretike: and [c] Canus ſaith as much of Honorius, that he was a Monothelite heretike.

A PART OR APPENDIX OF THIS QVESTION, whether the Church of Rome may erre or not.

54. Error.

The Papiſts.

THey doe not onely affirme that the Pope cannot erre, but that the Church of Rome alſo cannot be deceiued in matters of faith, ſo long as the Apoſtolike Sea remaineth there, which, they ſay, is like there to remaine to the end of the world: Bellarmin. lib. 3. de pontif. cap. 4. Hereupon Panormitane doubteth not to ſay, that he would preferre the iudgement of the Cardinals of Rome, before the iudgement of the whole world: this he ſaid, ſtanding vp in the Councell of Baſil, Fox pag. 669. ex Æneа Syluio.

Argum. 1. The Rhemiſts vpon thoſe words of S. Paul, Rom. 1. 5. Your faith is publiſhed through the whole world, doe thus inferre: See (ſay they) the great prouidence of God in the preſeruation of the Romane common faith. In times paſt the Romane faith and Catholike all one: Ergo, that Sea cannot erre in faith.

Rom. 1. 5.

We anſwere: they muſt proue their Romiſh faith and Popiſh religion, to bee the ſame which was praiſed and commended by the Apoſtle, or elſe they gaine nothing: but that ſhall they neuer doe.

Argum. 2. So long as the Apoſtolike Sea remaineth at Rome, it ſhall be preſerued from error, but that is like there to remaine till the worlds end: for it only remaineth, when all other Apoſtolike Seas are gone: and it is very probable, that if this Sea could haue been ouerthrowne, it ſhould haue been done by the incurſion and inuaſion of the Gothes, Vandals, Turkes, the emulation of Princes, diuiſions and ſchiſmes of Popes themſelues: yet for all this it ſtandeth ſtill, and hath ſo continued almoſt fifteene hundred yeeres, and ſhall ſo continue ſtill. Ergo, the Romane Church cannot erre. Bellarm. lib. 2. cap. 4. Rhemiſt. annot. in 2. Theſſal. 2 ſect. 7.

We anſwere: Firſt, it is a great vntruth, that all other Apoſtolike Seas are gone, for there is a ſucceſſion at Antioch, Alexandria, Conſtantinople, Epheſus, euen at this day. Secondly, it is falſe, that the Sea of Rome hath continued in that religion it now profeſſeth, which indeed is no religion, but ſuperſtition and hereſie, theſe fifteene hundred yeeres: for firſt till Gregories time, which was ſixe hundred yeeres after Chriſt, none of the Popes would be called vniuerſall Biſhops: and it was more then three hundred yeeres, from Gregorie the firſt to Syluester the ſecond, when Satan is thought fully to be let looſe, for hee by the Diuell was aduanced to the papacie: All theſe yeeres therefore you muſt ſtrike off in your account. Thirdly, that the Sea of Rome, which is the ſeate of Antichriſt, hath continued many yeeres, wee grant: for it is the iuſt iudgement of God vpon the world, becauſe they loued not the truth, that they ſhould be deluded a long time, and deceiued by Antichriſt, and beleeue lies: ſo did S. Paul prophecie, 2. Theſſ. 2. 10. 11. And we grant alſo that that Antichriſtian Sea ſhal in ſome ſort remaine till the comming of Chriſt, whom he ſhall deſtroy with the brightnes of his appearing, as Saint Paul ſaith. You haue gained therefore nothing by this, but that Rome is the ſeate of Antichriſt.

2. Theſſ. 2. 10. 11.

The Proteſtants.

IT is euident and plaine, and need not much proofe, that the Romane Church, as alſo any particular viſible Church, may not only erre in faith, but fall cleane away into hereſie and idolatrie, as wee ſee it come to paſſe in the Church of Rome.

Argum. 1. The Church of Rome hath no better aſſurance of their continuance, then the Church of the Iewes had before Chriſt, no nor yet ſo great, for they were a peculiar and choſen nation. But Iudah fell and tranſgreſſed, and committed idolatrie in the raine of Ahaz, and therefore the Prophet Eſay complaineth and ſaith, from the ſole of the foote to the head, there is nothing ſound, cap. 1. verſ. 6. Neither are they better then the Church of Epheſus was in S. Iohns time, who was able (I thinke) to keep that Church from error, as the Pope is to keep Rome: yet the Lord threatneth to remoue his candleſticke from amongſt the, vnleſſe they did amend, Reuel. 2. 5. Ergo, the Church of Rome may erre.

Reuel. 2. 5.

Argum. 2. The Pope may erre, as we haue before ſhewed: Ergo, the Church of Rome: for the Apoſtolike Sea, they ſay, is the cauſe that no error can approch or come neere them. Therefore (me thinketh) the Ieſuite committeth a foule abſurditie, in ſaying, the Church of Rome cannot ſo much as erre perſonally, and yet they grant that the Pope may erre perſonally. So by this reaſon the bodie ſhould haue a greater priuiledge then the head: the Church of Rome ſhould be freer from error then the Pope, who ſhould preſerue it from error: this ſure is a great abſurditie in popiſh diuinitie, Bellarm. cap. 4.

3 It is confeſſed by our aduerſaries themſelues, that the Church of Rome may erre: as the Councell at Rome vnder Adrian the ſecond erred, ſaith the Ieſuite, in determining Honorius to be an heretike, one of his predeceſſors, chap. 11.

Lib. 10. ſum.

The Councell of the Italian Biſhops at Brixia erred in condemning Gregory the ſeuenth, who was, if you will beleeue Harding, a vertuous and an holy man: Nay Paulus Iouius a popiſh Biſhop confeſſeth, that Adrianus the ſixth was made Pope, mira & pudenda Senatorum factioſorum ſuffragatione, through the ſtrange and ſhamefull ſuffrages of factious Cardinals, becauſe they preferred a ſtranger before their owne order.

Fox pag. 669.

But our aduerſaries haue a tricke, to ſhift off all this that hath been ſaid: They erred in a matter of fact, not in any point of faith. Yet they cannot ſo cloſely conuey the matter away: for Panormitane euen in ſuch queſtions alſo preferreth the iudgement of the Cardinals before the whole world, ſpeaking in the defence of Eugenius, who was chalenged in the Councell of Baſil, for the diſſolution of the Councell, which he did (ſaith Panormitane) with the aduice of the Cardinals: whoſe iudgement hee ſo much eſteemeth in this matter, which concerned not faith, namely, for the diſſoluing of the Councell.

Appendix, Concil. Baſil. ex epiſc. Iohan. Patriarch. Conſtantinop. We reade thus: Quod dicitur eccleſia Romana ſemper immaculata permanſit, & permanebit, intelligi debet verum, quamdiu ligabit iuſte, claue non errante: Whereas it is ſaid, the Church of Rome hath alwaies remained vnſpotted, and ſhall ſo continue ſtill, it muſt bee vnderſtood to make it true, ſo long as ſhe bindeth iuſtly, the key not erring. Their ſentence is therefore, that the Church of Rome may erre in diſpenſing of the keyes, &c.

S. Hierome writing againſt Vigilantius ſaith, Galliam ſolam hereſeum monſtra non habuiſſe: That only France of all Churches was free from hereſie. In ſaying only France, the Church of Rome is not excepted: and this ſaying of S. Hierome is approued by one of your owne writers, Eſpenc. in 1. ad Timoth. pag. 383.

The ſame father alſo miſliketh a certaine cuſtome, or abuſe rather of the Romane Church, that Deacons were preferred before Prieſts, and ſaith, they did not, recte facere, doe that which was right, they were therefore in an error. And this ſentence is inſerted into their owne decrees, diſt. 93. cap. legimus.

Againe, Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 35. queſt. 9. cap. 6. Nicholaus, ſententia Romana ſedis, &c. The ſentence of the Sea of Rome may be changed into a better: Ergo, that Sea may erre and be deceiued.

Nilus lib. 2. de primat.

And for further euidence: 1. The Greekes make no queſtion, but that the Church of Rome may erre: as Nilus alleageth how in the ſixth generall Councell, there were two errors reformed of the Romane Church, the one of reſtraining Prieſts and Deacons from the ſocietie of their wiues after their ordination, Canon 13. the other of the Saturdaies faſt, Can. 55.

2. In this ſixth Synode was preſent one Petrus a Preſbyter, [illegible] occupying the roome of the Patriarke of Alexandria, who ſubſcribed to the acts of that Councell, as it appeareth in the ſubſcription to the acts of the Synode: ſo the South Church depending of Alexandria gaue their conſent.

b Summ. de eccleſ. lib. 2. cap. 91.

3. The iudgement of the reformed Churches is ſeene before, error 28. 5. queſt. of the Church, part 3. where the Church of Rome is affirmed to be a falſe and Antichriſtian Church.

4. Some of the Romaniſts doe affirme the Romane Church to be a particular Church, and ſo conſequently to be ſubiect to error: for they hold this poſition: Errare poſſe vnamquamque particularem eccleſiam. That euery particular Church may erre. [a] Waldenſ. [b] Turrecremat.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, OF THE SPIRITuall iuriſdiction and power of the Biſhop of Rome.

THis queſtion hath two parts: the firſt, whether the Biſhop of Rome haue a coactiue and conſtraining power to make lawes to binde the conſcience, and to puniſh the tranſgreſſors. Secondly, whether other Paſtors and Biſhops haue their iuriſdiction immediatly from God, or from the Pope.

Other queſtions alſo there are, which belong to this matter, as whether the Pope be the chiefe Iudge in controuerſies of faith, which we haue alreadie handled, entreating of the perfection and authoritie of the Scriptures: as alſo whether it be in the Pope to ſummon, diſſolue, and confirme Councels, which hath been ſufficiently declared before, in the controuerſie concerning Councels. Concerning other queſtions, as the canonizing of Saints, which they ſay appertaineth to the Pope, the election and confirmation of Biſhops, pardons and indulgences, we ſhall haue fitter occaſion to deale in them, in their ſeuerall places and controuerſies. At this time wee purpoſe onely to touch theſe two points aforeſaid, of the Popes eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE POPE may make lawes to binde the conſcience, and puniſh tranſgreſſors thereof iudicially.

The Papiſts.

55. Error.

THat the Pope hath ſuch authoritie, to make lawes for the whole Church, which ſhall binde vnder paine of damnation, as well as the lawes of God, is the generall opinion of the Papiſts: Fox 981. articul. 13. & pag. 1101. articul. cont. Lambert, 29. But they put in this clauſe, ſo they be not vniuſt lawes nor contrarie to the diuine law, Bellarm. cap. 15. And yet they ſay that the Pope may make lawes, hauing not the authoritie nor warrant of Scripture, neither is it neceſſarie for theſe lawes to bee expreſſed or diduced out of Scripture. And theſe lawes are not onely of externall rites and orders of the Church, but euen of things neceſſarie to ſaluation, Bellarm. cap. 15. in reprehenſ. Caluini. Yea hee addeth further, that in matters not neceſſarie to ſaluation, hee cannot be diſobeyed without deadly ſinne, and offence of conſcience, cap. 16. loc. 1. Bulla Leonis 10. aduerſus Lutherum, Fox pag. 1283. *col.*1.

*Argum.*1. The Apoſtles preſcribed a law concerning the abſtaining from blood, things ſtrangled, and offered to Idols, concerning the which Chriſt gaue them no precept. But this law did binde the people in conſcience: for euery where the Apoſtles gaue ſtreight charge, for the keeping of the decrees, Bellarm.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtles commanded no new thing, but the ſame which they themſelues were taught of Chriſt, that they ſhould take heede of offence: the Chriſtians therefore were not bound in conſcience any further to keepe the decrees concerning ſuch things, then for auoyding of ſcandall and offence. Secondly, afterward the offence being taken away, the law alſo ceaſed: and S. Paul giueth libertie, notwithſtanding this law, to eate things offered to Idols, if it might be done without offence, asking no queſtion (ſaith he) for conſcience ſake, 1. Cor. 10. 27. which Epiſtle it is certaine was written after that decree of the Apoſtles, Act. 15, 29. Ergo, their conſciences were not hereby obliged and bound. 1.Cor.10.27. Act.15.29.

1 Bellarmine replieth to the firſt, that though the end of the Apoſtles precept was to auoid offence, yet the precept it ſelfe was as touching the not eating of things offered to Idols, ſtrangled and blood: as the end of the Morall law, as not to ſteale, not to kill, is charitie: yet the law bindeth vs not onely to that end, but to abſtaine alſo from killing and ſtealing: cap. 16. reſponſ. ad Caluin. loc. 5.

Contra. Bellarmine here ſheweth either his wilfull ignorance, or raſh ouerſight, making no difference betweene things indifferent, and euill of their owne nature: for to kill, to ſteale, are euill in themſelues and ſimply forbidden, and not onely for offence: to eate or not to eate, this or that, are indifferent in themſelues, and not vnlawfull but in reſpect of the offence, which followeth.

2 Bellarmine to the ſecond point anſwereth, that this law of the Apoſtles is now abrogated, not becauſe the offence ceaſeth, but becauſe the law vniuerſally is determined: as for example, the end of faſting is to tame the fleſh rebelling againſt the ſpirit, which reaſon ſhall ceaſe after the reſurrection, and then alſo the law of faſting ſhall no more be needfull.

Contra. Father Robert Bellarmine maketh here a long diſcourſe, and would ſeeme to ſay ſomewhat, and yet it proueth iuſt nothing: and if he ſay any thing, it maketh for vs: for as the law of faſting ſhall then ceaſe, when the reaſon and end thereof ſhall ceaſe: ſo this law of the Apoſtles is vniuerſally abrogate, becauſe there is no more feare or danger of offence, which was the reaſon of the making of this decree.

3 To the place alleaged out of S. Paul to the Corinthians, he hath theſe anſweres: firſt, that when S. Paul did ſo write to the Corinthians, that decree of the Apoſtles began then to be abrogate. But he himſelfe miſliketh this anſwere, and therefore it neede no further confutation: and his reaſon is good, that the law did yet hold, becauſe the reaſon of the law, that is to auoid offence, was not yet remoued. Secondly, it may be thought, ſaith he, that as yet the decree of the Apoſtles was not come to the Corinthians, and therefore the Apoſtle ſo writeth.

Contra. Firſt, the decree was generally preſcribed to all the Gentiles conuerted to God, and not to them of Antioch onely, as Iames determineth, Act. 15. 19. And therefore ſeeing it concerned the Corinthians as well as other Churches, he ſpeaketh without ground, to ſay, that it was not yet deliuered to the Church of the Corinthians. Secondly, admit the Corinthians knew it not, Saint Paul yet did know it, and therefore he would not haue written any thing contrarie to the decree which hee knew, though they knew it not. Act.15.19.

*Argum.*2. It is neceſſarie to haue ſome lawes, beſide the diuine law, for the gouernment of the Church: for the word of God is too vniuerſall, neither is ſufficient to direct euery particular action: therefore other eccleſiaſticall lawes muſt be added: but euery good and neceſſarie law hath a coactiue and conſtraining power, and bindeth the conſcience to obedience. Ergo, the conſtitutions of the Popes and Councels, which are the onely eccleſiaſticall lawes, doe binde the conſcience, Bellarm. cap. 16 lib. 4.

Anſwere. Firſt, the word of God containeth all neceſſarie rules to ſaluation: wherefore all lawes of the Church concerning matters of faith, are but explanations, and interpretations of the rules of faith ſet forth in Scripture, if they be godly lawes, and ſo are not the lawes of men, but of God, and doe binde the conſcience to the obſeruation thereof: as the lawes of the Church, which command Chriſtians to reſort to the congregation to heare Gods word, and reuerently to receiue the Sacraments, are the very ordinances and commandements of Chriſt, who enioyned his Apoſtles to preach, and baptize, and his faithfull people to heare and to bee baptized, and therefore in conſcience wee are bound to the obedience hereof. Secondly, there are other eccleſiaſticall lawes appointed for the publike order of the Church; concerning externall rites and circumſtances of perſons and place, as the houres of prayer, the forme of the Leiturgie and publike ſeruice, the times fitteſt for the celebration of the Sacraments, and ſuch like. Theſe and ſuch like conſtitutions doe not binde in conſcience abſolutely, in reſpect of the things themſelues, which are indifferent, but in regard of that contempt, and offence which might follow in the not keeping of them: contempt to our ſuperiours, whom we ought in all lawfull things to obey: offence, in grieuing the conſcience of our weake brethren. So that euen theſe conſtitutions alſo which are made according to the rules of the Goſpell, that is, vnto edification, to the glorie of God, and for auoyding of offence, doe neceſſarily binde vs in conſcience, not conſcience of the things themſelues, which are but externall, but conſcience of obedience to our Chriſtian Magiſtrates, and conſcience in taking heede of all iuſt offence: ſic Caluin. Inſtitut. lib. 4 *cap.*10.11.

Thirdly, we are not, God be thanked, driuen to any ſuch ſtreight, that if there be neede of any ſuch eccleſiaſticall lawes, we ſhould runne for ſuccour to the Popes beggerly decretals. (And yet ſuch Canons, as were in force amongſt them, agreeable to the rules of the Goſpell, we doe not refuſe.) But if there be want and penurie of good lawes, euery Church hath as full authoritie, to make decrees and ordinances for the peace and order, and quiet gouernment thereof, not as the Pope of Rome hath ouer the vniuerſall Church (for that by right is none, or if it be, it is but an vſurped power) but as the Biſhop of Rome hath in his owne Biſhoprick and dioceſſe.

The Proteſtants.

WHat our ſentence is of this matter, it doth partly appeare by that, which wee haue alreadie ſaid: that the Pope hath no power ouer the whole Church, and therefore can make no lawes to binde the conſcience, or otherwiſe for the ſame, for it belongeth not to his charge. Secondly, wee ſay, that neither he, nor any eccleſiaſticall gouernment beſide, can make lawes of things neceſſarie to ſaluation, other then thoſe which are in Scripture contained. Thirdly, all eccleſiaſticall lawes made concerning externall rites, and publike order, doe not otherwiſe binde the conſcience, then in regard of our obedience due to Chriſtian Magiſtrates in lawfull things, and for auoyding of ſcandall and offence: But in reſpect of the things commaunded, ſuch lawes doe not binde: Caluin. loc. predicto.

Iames 4. 12. *Argum.*1. Saint Iames ſaith, There is one law-giuer which is able to ſaue and to deſtroy, chap. 4. 12. He therefore onely maketh lawes to binde the conſcience, that is able to ſaue and to deſtroy: but that cannot the Pope doe: Ergo. Caluin. argum.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the lawes of men doe binde vnder paine of damnation, in as much as God is offended and diſpleaſed with their diſobedience, and ſo iudgeth them worthie of puniſhment, *cap.*20. All this we grant, that the lawes of men being good lawes, doe binde in conſcience in reſpect of the contempt and diſobedience to higher powers, but not in reſpect of the things commaunded, which in their nature are indifferent. The Ieſuite ſhould haue ſaid; that God is offended not onely for their diſobedience, but ſimply for not doing the things commanded, which hee durſt not ſay: As when the Magiſtrate for ſome profitable and politike end commaundeth vpon ſome daies abſtinence from fleſh, it is not the eating or not eating of fleſh, that ſimply diſpleaſeth and offendeth God; but the contempt of the law, and wilfull and obſtinate diſobedience to the Magiſtrate: for otherwiſe the vſe of the creature is free and indifferent.

Cap.15. lib. 4. de pontif. *Argum.*2. Wee will beate the Ieſuite with his owne ſtaffe: he ſaith not, that all lawes doe binde the conſcience, but onely iuſt lawes, in the which foure conditions are required. Firſt, that they bee made for ſome profitable end: ſo are not Popiſh lawes which nouriſh ſuperſtition, and haue no edifying, and ſome of them doe command plaine idolatrie, and open impietie, as the worſhipping of Images, the adoration of the Maſſe, and ſuch like. Secondly, ſaith he, they muſt not be contrarie to Gods law; but ſuch are many of their ordinances, yea the moſt of them. Thirdly, they muſt be made by him that hath authoritie: therefore none of the Popes lawes binde the vniuerſall Church, for it is not ſubiect to him. Fourthly, the forme and manner of impoſing ſuch lawes muſt be orderly: but their lawes are moſt diſordered, impoſed vpon the Church violently, without their conſent, or any good proceeding. Thus you ſee, euen by their owne confeſſion, their lawes cannot binde.

One thing more I muſt needes tell them of. If they would needes haue their lawes to binde men in conſcience, they ſhould haue made fewer of them: now they are ſo many, that if the breach of them were an offence of conſcience, doe men what they could, they ſhould daily make ſhipwracke of their conſcience. It is a true ſaying that is reported of one Thomas Arthur, a good Chriſtian, it is an homely ſpeech, becauſe the matter was ſomewhat homely, yet he did hit the marke. Like as (ſaith he) croſſes were ſet vp againſt the walles of London, that no man ſhould piſſe there; and while there were but a few, men for reuerence of the croſſes, would not piſſe againſt the wall: but when in euery corner they ſet vp croſſes, men of neceſſitie were faine to piſſe vpon the wall and croſſes too. So (ſaith he) if there Fox pag. 999. had beene fewer lawes of the Church, they would haue beene better kept: but now they are ſo many, that men cannot chuſe but breake them.

*Arg.*3. The Pope hath no power to correct the tranſgreſſors of his lawes ouer the whole Church: Ergo, he cannot make lawes to binde the whole Church. The argument followeth, for hee that hath abſolute power to make lawes, hath alſo power to command obedience to the lawes ſo made. And your owne law ſaith, Iuriſdictio nullius videretur momenti, ſi correctionem aliquam non haberet: That iuriſdiction is nothing worth, that hath no conſtraining power, Innocen. 3 decr. Greg. li. 1. tit. 29. c. 28.

The firſt is thus proued: the Pope indeede hath taken vpon him many times to thunder out his excommunications againſt other Churches: but it was an vſurped and tyrannicall power, and many times reſiſted, and controuled.

Pope Victor, anno 200. would haue excommunicate the Eaſt Churches about the keeping of Eaſter, but he was ſtaied by Ireneus. The Councell of Conſtance did ſend out excommunications againſt Pope Benedict. ſeſſ. 36. Fox pag. 41.

In the Councell of Baſill, Pope Eugenius cited Cardinall Iulian, with the reſt of the fathers there aſſembled, to come to Bononia, vnder great penaltie: they likewiſe cited Eugenius vnder the like penaltie, either to come or ſend to Baſil, Fox pag. 668. col. 2. Pag. 614. 2. 80.

Pope Leo the 10. in his fumiſh Antichriſtian Bull, excommunicated and condemned Luther. Luther with better right pronounceth ſentence of excommunication againſt him, being an aduerſarie to Chriſt, in theſe words: According to the power and might, that the ſpirit of Chriſt, and efficacie of our faith can doe in theſe our writings, if you ſhall perſiſt ſtill in your furie, wee condemne you together with this Bull and all the decretall, and giue you to Sathan, to the deſtruction of the fleſh, that your ſpirit in the day of the Lord may be deliuered: in the name, which you perſecute, of Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. Fox pag. 1286.

Thus you ſee what ſmall force there is of theſe Popiſh leaden Buls, and preſumptuous excommunications: for it falleth out iuſtly by them, as the Wiſeman ſaith, As the Sparrow and Swallow by flying eſcape, ſo the curſe cauſeleſſe ſhall not come. Now ſeeing therfore the Pope faileth of power and ſtrength to ſee his lawes executed in the vniuerſall Church, it cannot be that his lawes ſhould vniuerſally binde. Prou. 26. 2.

Let Auguſtine now ſpeake: he thus defineth ſinne, Peccatum eſt dictum, factum, vel concupitum contra legem æternam Dei: Sinne is any thing done, ſaid, or coueted againſt the law of God, &c. therefore the tranſgreſſion ſimply of the law of man is not ſinne, but as thereby alſo the law of God is tranſgreſſed: Ergo, ſimply it bindeth not the conſcience: for ſinne onely bindeth and toucheth the conſcience. Contra Fauſtum lib. 22. cap. 27.

We haue alſo a moſt cleere teſtimonie of a prouinciall Councell, ſynod. Moguntin. cap. 48. which I will ſet downe whole as it ſtandeth, as very pertinent to this place: Etſi hoc in preceptis diuinis non continetur, quod maiorum noſtrorum conſtitutiones iubent, tamen vt maioribus obediamus (ſaltem in ijs, quæ legi diuinæ non aduerſantur) diſerti iuris diuini eſt: vnde per occaſionem talium conſtitutionum tranſgreſſores grandis peccati rei ſunt, dum ex contemptu, aut cum ſcandalo charitatem violant, quorum vtrunque per ſe peccatum mortale operatur: alioqui eccleſia conſtitutiones ſuas charitati, & neceſſitati libenter ſubmittit: Although it be not expreſly contained in the word of God, which the conſtitutions of our fathers doe command: yet that wee ſhould obey our Elders, eſpecially wherein they are not contrarie to the law of God, it is the expreſſe word of God: whereupon they, which are tranſgreſſors of ſuch conſtitutions, are guiltie of a great ſinne, in ſo much as doing it of contempt and by giuing of offence, they violate charity: for the lawes of the Church muſt ſubmit themſelues to the rules of charitie and neceſſitie, &c. This decree ſheweth, that the Church, or the gouernours thereof, are not to command lawes not warranted by Gods word: and that they binde vs to obedience no otherwiſe, then in reſpect of contempt, and offence which may be giuen: which is all one with that, which we affirmed before.

We haue alſo witneſſe of both the lawes: firſt Iuſtinian the Emperour thus writeth; Leges condere ſoli imperatori conceſſum eſt, &c. It is onely lawfull for the Emperour to make lawes: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 17. leg. 11. If onely for the Emperour, then the Pope hath no authoritie to make lawes.

Their owne law alſo conſenteth with vs: Vrban 2. in his decree as it ſtandeth in Gratiano part. 2. cauſ. 19. queſt. 2. cap. 2. alleageth the ſame place of Scripture, which we produce for this matter, Where the ſpirit of God is, there is libertie; and if you be led by the ſpirit, you are no more under the law, &c. Ergo, we are not bound in conſcience to obey humane lawes, which infringe the libertie of the ſpirit, as the ſuperſtitious pontificiall lawes doe. 2. Cor. 3. 17.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that we are freed from Moſes ceremoniall lawes, but not from the obedience of Prelates, reſpons. ad argum. 5.

Contra. Firſt, If we be freed from the yoke of Iewiſh ceremonies, which were inſtituted of God, and were profitable for the time, much more are we deliuered from Popiſh ceremonies, which are meere humane inuentions, and had neuer any good vſe. Secondly, Vrbanus in the former decree inferreth the contrarie, that the libertie of the ſpirit doth exempt men from the obedience of Prelates: for hee thus concludeth, after he had alleaged a certaine diſtinction, of publike law, and priuate, calling that publike, which is ordained by the gouernours of the Church: that priuate, which is written in the heart of man by the ſpirit out of the word, which is of more force then the other: and the publike (ſaith he) ought to giue place to the priuate. Then he thus reſolueth, Whoſoeuer is led by this ſpirit, though his Biſhop doe gainſay, eſt liber noſtra authoritate, is pronounced free by our authoritie.

Againe, there is another decree of Vrban. cauſ. 25. queſt. 1. cap. 6. Inde nouas leges condere poteſt, &c. The Biſhop of Rome may make lawes, where the Euangeliſts and Prophets haue ſaid nothing: but where our Lord or the Apoſtles, &c. haue defined any thing, there the Romane Biſhop cannot make a new law, &c. But now many of the Popes lawes are found to command many things directly contrarie to the Scriptures.

Let vs adde the ſeale of the Martyrs, maſter Bilney Martyr: As touching the multitude of lawes S. Auguſtine in his time did much complaine: and Gerſon alſo who meruailed, that wee could by any meanes liue in ſafety among ſo many ſnares of conſtitutions, when as our fore-fathers being pure before their fall, could not obſerue one onely precept. Fox pag. 1000.

Pag.912.2.30.

Maſter Lambert Martyr: If it be true, which is written in the decrees, that lawes be neuer confirmed till they be approued by the common maners of them that ſhal vſe them, then cannot the Popes lawes bind all Chriſtian men; for the Greekes and Bohemians will neuer admit them: pag. 1116. resp. ad articul. 29. Whereupon we conclude, that the Pope cannot make lawes to bind the whole Church.

Adde hereunto the teſtimonie of other Churches. 1. Ieremie Patriarke of Conſtantinople giueth this aduice: Si quid ex his, quæ iubentur, tale eſt, &c. If any thing commaunded be ſuch, that it agree with the law of God, or helpe vs to the fulfilling thereof, Hoc tanquam Dei mandato, &c. Wee muſt obey it as the commaundement of God: Si quid vero præcipitur quod legi diuinæ aduerſetur, &c. but if any thing be commanded contrarie to the law of God, then we muſt ſay, it is better to obey God then man. This is then the opinion of the Greeke Church, that the lawes of men doe not ſimply binde in conſcience.

Cenſur. Orient.c.21.

2 So Zaga Zabo an Æthiopian Biſhop profeſſeth that among them, neither the Patriarke nor the Biſhops by themſelues, or in Councell doe thinke that they can make lawes, Quibus ad mortale peccatum obligari quis poſſet, whereby any ſhould be bound vpon paine of mortall ſinne.

Damianus a Goes, de lib. morib. Æthiop.

3 The Proteſtant Churches thus hold. Confeſſ. of Augsburg. artic. 4. All modeſt men will moſt willingly obey traditions, after they vnderſtand, that their conſciences are free from danger in priuate, and that they muſt ſo farre obey, as that the common peace bee not diſtracted, nor the weake ones hurt. Sweueland, c. 8. when wee ſawe the chiefe men in the Church ſo to enioyne faſts, as to binde mens conſciences, vnder paine of deadly ſinne, we did looſe theſe conſciences out of thoſe ſnares, by the Scriptures, &c. according to that ſaying of S. Paul. Let no man condemne you in meate or drinke, &c. And of the ſame iudgement are other reformed Churches, as may be ſeene in their ſeuerall confeſſions.

Harm. ſect.16. p.493.

Ibid.p.513.

4 We haue ſeene the decree of Pope Vrbane before: there be other beſide of the Romane Church, which haue complained of the vnneceſſarie rable of their ceremonies and conſtitutions burdenſome to the conſcience. As Agrippa, Plus hodie Chriſtiani, quam olim Iudæi, &c. Chriſtians are more burdened now with the lawes of ceremonies encreaſing, then the Iewes. Caietan. Onera, quæ, &c. ſunt importabilia. The burthens, which ſome Miniſters impoſe vpon mens ſhoulders, are importable, and are not the burthen of Chriſt.

De vanitat. ſcient. 1.60.

THE SECOND PART OF THIS QVESTION, whether all Biſhops doe receiue their eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction from the Pope.

The Papiſts.

56. Error.

THey denie not but that the power of order, as they call it, which conſiſteth in the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, is equally diſtributed to all Biſhops; and that they, as well as the Pope, doe receiue it immediatly by their conſecration, of God: but the power both of externall iuriſdiction, which ſtandeth vpon eccleſiaſticall cenſures, conſtitutions and decrees, and internall iuriſdiction, which is exerciſed in binding and looſing, is deriued, ſay they, from the Pope to all other Biſhops.

Numb.11.16.

Argum. 1. God tooke of the ſpirit that was in Moſes, and diſtributed it among the ſeuentie Elders, that were choſen to beare the burthen of gouernment with Moſes, and to bee his helpers: the Lord tooke of his ſpirit, not by diminiſhing it, but by deriuing of his vertue to the reſt: but the Pope is now in the roome and place of Moſes in the Church: Ergo, from him to the reſt is this authoritie deriued: Bellarm. lib. 4. de pontif. c. 24.

Deut.18.15.

Anſw. Firſt, Moſes example was extraordinarie, hee was a figure of Chriſt, not of the Pope, Deut. 18. verſ. 15. The Pope might with better right ſtand vpon Aarons example, who was high Prieſt, not lay claime to Moſes offices, who was the Prince and Captaine of the people: for the Pope, I trow, would be chiefe Biſhop, and not Emperour too. Secondly, the meaning is not that God deriued Moſes ſpirit to the reſt: but beſtowed the like gift of propheſying vpon them, as Moſes had: ſurely neuer any mortall man had the ſpirit in ſuch abundance, that it could be diuided into ſeuentie portions, and one Prophet to make many. The like phraſe is vſed, 2. King. 2. 15. where the Prophets ſaid, that the ſpirit of Eliah did reſt on Eliſha, that is, God endued him with an excellent ſpirit of propheſying, as Elias had. If they will vnderſtand this place, alſo of deriuing of ſpirits, how then ſhall that be taken in the ninth verſe where Eliſha prayeth, that his ſpirit might be doubled vpon him? If his ſpirit were deriued from Eliah, how could it bee doubled vpon him? how could it be multiplied and increaſed? how could hee haue more then was in the fountaine or originall, ſeeing hee receiued all from thence?

2.King.2.15.

2. What maketh this place, I pray you, for the power of externall iuriſdiction? Heere it is ſaid that God gaue of his ſpirit to ſeuentie Elders and rulers of the people, and enabled them for their office; endued them with wiſedome, and knowledge, and dexteritie in iudging of the people: this maketh nothing for their purpoſe, vnleſſe they will alſo ſay, that there is a ſecret influence of knowledge and wiſedome deriued from the Pope to all other Biſhops, whereby they are made able to execute their office. But (I trow) they will not ſay ſo: for Alphonſus de caſtro truly ſaith of the Popes of Rome, Conſtat plures eorum adeo eſſe illiteratos, vt grammaticam penitus ignorent: It is certaine that many of them were ſo vnlearned, that they hard and ſcant knew their grammar.

4 The argument followeth not from one particular countrey, as this was of the Iewes, to the vniuerſall Church: that becauſe the ſeuentie Elders receiued iuriſdiction from Moſes, (yet that cannot be prooued out of this place; for they were Rulers before, and Commanders of the people, they were now but inwardly furniſhed, and further enabled) yet it were no good reaſon, that therefore the Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters ouer the whole Church, ſhould receiue their power from one.

5 Neither doth it follow, that becauſe the Prince and ciuill Magiſtrate may beſtow ciuill offices, create Dukes, Earles, Lords, conſtitute Iudges, Deputies, Lieutenants, by his ſole authoritie; that by the ſame reaſon Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters ſhould receiue thair power and office from their ſuperiours: for although the Church from ancient time hath thought it good, to make ſome inequalitie and difference in eccleſiaſtical offices for the peace of the Church; yet the ſuperiours haue not ſuch a ſoueraigne and commanding power ouer the reſt, as the Prince hath ouer his ſubiects.

Argum. 2. If Biſhops and paſtors ſhould haue their iuriſdiction immediatly from God, and not from man, all Biſhops ſhould haue an equall iuriſdiction: but now we ſee it to be otherwiſe, that one Biſhop is ſet ouer one towne, another ouer twentie: therefore it is moſt like they haue their iuriſdiction from men, not immediatly from God: Bellarm.argum.4.

Anſw. 1. We do not affirme, that the Biſhops, Paſtors and Miniſters of the Church haue their iuriſdiction, office or calling immediatly from God, as the Apoſtles, Prophets and Euangeliſts had; for ſuch callings were extraordinarie, and are now ceaſed in the Church: but that by right of their conſecration and receiuing of orders, according to the godly cuſtome and practiſe of that Church where they liue, they haue it mediately by the hands of thoſe, to whō in the name of the whole, Church that care is cōmitted: yet by the commandement of God, they are appointed to their ſeuerall offices and functions.

2 It followeth not, if they all haue their authoritie and power from God, that they ſhould be all of an equall degree: for we ſee that there are diuers degrees in the ciuill ſtate, there be Emperours, Kings, Dukes, all chiefe in their owne ſeignories, and all haue their calling from God; as S. Paul teacheth, Rom. 13, 7. to ſome tribute, to ſome cuſtome, to ſome feare, to ſome honor belongeth. Here are diuers degrees, yet they are all ordained of God, verſ. 1. Yea in the ſame kingdome, immediatly by the hands of the Prince, ſome are created Earles, ſome Lords, ſome Knights, yet are their degrees vnequall. In the naturall bodie the head immediatly conueyeth a ſenſitiue power to the organes of the ſight, the hearing, the taſt, and of the other ſenſes; yet are they not all of the ſame excellencie. And yet to make it more plaine; the Apoſtles, Prophets, Euangeliſts were immediatly called of God, yet were the Apoſtles in degree before the reſt: the Ieſuites argument then is not well knit together.

Rom.13.7.

3 One Biſhop (ſaith he) hath one towne, another hath twentie, &c. But this is nothing to the purpoſe; we ſpeake of the calling of Biſhops, and he of their prouinces and circuites: the largenes of their iuriſdiction, maketh not their degree higher; a Biſhop may haue a larger dioces then an Archbiſhop, as the Biſhop of Lincolne hath, then the Archbiſhop of Canturburie: yet, I trow, an Archbiſhop is before a Biſhop. We muſt diſtinguiſh then betweene Epiſcopatum, & dioiceſin, the office of a Biſhop, and his dioceſſe, his calling, and his title or dignitie: there may be a Biſhop without a dioceſſe, as a Miniſter without a charge; though neither of them be fit or conuenient: for it is contrarie to the Canon, that any man ſhould be abſolutely ordained without a title. Chalced.concil.can.6. But I ſpeake of that which is practiſed, not which ought to be. S. Paul ſaith, he that deſireth Epiſcopatum, the office of a Biſhop, &c. there was then Epiſcopatus, the calling of a Biſhop, though as yet no dioceſſe aſſigned, no title or dignitie annexed. So then we conclude thus: as touching the titles, dignities, honours belonging to the calling of Biſhops, as to bee ſet ouer this Citie or that, this dioceſſe or another, they haue it by the donation of the Prince: as that good Emperour Frederike telleth Pope Adrian the fourth, Quicquid regalis papatus veſter habere dignoſcitur, largitione principum donatur: whatſoeuer princelie dignitie your papacie hath, it is giuen by the liberalitie of Princes.

And as for the office and iuriſdiction it ſelfe, it is not deriued from Rome, but in euery Church the ſpirituall paſtors thereof haue as full authoritie from God to ordaine and appoint Biſhops, Paſtors, Doctors, Teachers, neceſſarie for the gouernment thereof, as the Biſhop of Rome hath, if he were a good Biſhop in his owne dioceſſe: therefore though wee ſhould grant the Ieſuites concluſion, that the calling of Biſhops is from men, which in our meaning we denie not; yet he hath gained nothing: for it followeth not, if from men, then from the Pope, as we haue ſhewed: and better arguments the Ieſuite hath none, then we haue ſeene.

The Proteſtants.

That Biſhops haue not their Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction from Rome, but doe as well enioy it by right of their conſecration, election, inſtitution, in their owne precincts, circuites, prouinces, cities, townes; yea, as the Pope doth in his Biſhopricke, and by much better right, if they be good Biſhops, and louers of the truth: thus briefely it is prooued.

Argum. 1. The Apoſtles had not their iuriſdiction from Peter, but all receiued it indifferentlie from Chriſt: this the Ieſuite doth not barely acknowledge, but prooueth it by argument, againſt the judgement of other Papiſts, cap.23. Ergo, neither Biſhops are authoriſed from the Pope, though he were Peters ſucceſſor: for if he were (to grant it for diſputations ſake) he is no more to the Biſhops of the Church: then Peter was to the Apoſtles. If he gaue not the keyes to the Apoſtles; neither doth the Pope S. Peters ſucceſſor, to the Biſhops, the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: for they may with as great right challenge to be the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, as he can to be S. Peters.

Bellarmine anſwereth, there is great difference betweene the ſucceeding of Peter by the Pope, and the ſucceſſion of the other Apoſtles in Biſhops: the Pope ſucceedeth Peter, not as Apoſtle, but as the ordinarie Paſtor of the whole Church: the other Apoſtels were not ordinarie Paſtors; and therefore the Biſhops cannot properly ſuccede them, for the Apoſtles had iuriſdiction ouer the whole Church, they had power to found Churches, to write Canonicall bookes of Scripture, they had the gift of tongues, and of miracles, but Biſhops haue none of theſe. Againe, one is ſaid ſuccedere præcedenti, to ſucceed one that goeth before: the Biſhops then cannot be the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, becauſe they were in the Apoſtles times.

Matth.28.19.

Anſwere, to the firſt part concerning Peters ſucceſſion: firſt, let this be remembred, that the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that the Pope doth not ſucceede Peter, vt Apoſtolo, as an Apoſtle: then how commeth it about, that the Sea of Rome is called Apoſtolicall, and the Pope chalengeth to be called Apoſtolike, and ſaith his office is Apoſtolatus, a very Apoſtleſhip: from whence hath he this, ſeeing he hath nothing to doe with Peters Apoſtleſhip? Bellarmine, it may be ſuppoſed, did here forget himſelfe. Secondly, he cannot ſucceed Peter, as ordinarie Paſtor of the whole Church, for ſo was he neuer; and that power which he had ouer the whole Church, as other Apoſtles had, as the Ieſuite himſelfe confeſſeth, was Apoſtolike, not Paſtorall: for that commiſſion, Goe teach all nations, Matth.28.19. And ye ſhall be witneſſes vnto me, to the vttermoſt parts of the earth, Act.1.8. was giuen to all the Apoſtles, and was therefore Apoſtolicall: of any other ſuch large and generall commiſſion giuen to Peter alone, we reade not. Wherefore, if the Pope neither ſucceed Peter as Apoſtle, which Bellarmine granteth, nor as general Paſtor, as wee haue proued: it will be found, that he is not Peters right ſucceſſor at all, as in deed hee is not.

Iohn 4.38.
1.Cor.5.20.
Iſay 59.21.

To the ſecond part we anſwere: firſt, that the Apoſtles were not properly ordinarie Paſtors, wee eaſily grant; for they had charge of the whole Church, and were not tied and limited to any one certaine place: yet Bellarmine againſt himſelfe in this place elſe where confeſſeth it, that Iames was paſtor & Epiſcopus, Paſtor and Biſhop of Ieruſalem, lib.1. de pontifice, cap.26. Yet the argument followeth not, the Apoſtles calling was extraordinarie, and they had extraordinarie giftes; therefore they could haue no ſucceſſors: for it is not neceſſarie that the ſucceſſor ſhould haue all which his predeceſſor had: the Apoſtles ſucceeded the ancient Prophets. Ioh.4.38. You are entred into their labours, yet was their calling diuers: yea the Apoſtles were in Chriſts ſtead, 1.Cor.5.20. yet was there more in Chriſt, then in his Apoſtles. Secondly, wee ſay then, that as the Apoſtles had extraordinarie gifts, as to pen Scripture, to worke miracles, and ſo had an extraordinarie calling; ſo had they ordinarie gifts, as of teaching, exhorting, admoniſhing, yet after a more excellent manner: the Biſhops then and paſtors of the Church, though they ſucceed them not for their extraordinarie giftes, yet are properly their ſucceſſors in feeding, teaching, and inſtructing, which giftes were not ſo extraordinarie in the Apoſtles, but that they were to continue vnto their poſterity, as the Lord ſaith by his Prophet, My ſpirit that is vpon thee, and my words, which I haue put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeed, nor of thy ſeedes ſeed, from henceforth for euer.

Thirdly, to Bellarmines laſt argument we anſwere: firſt, that it cannot bee ſhewed, that there were any ſuch Biſhops, as he ſpeaketh of in the Apoſtles time, ſeeing the names of Epiſcopus and Preſbyter, of Biſhop and Elder are confounded in the Apoſtles writings, as the Ieſuite elſewhere confeſſeth: Againe, the ſucceſſor and predeceſſor may be both at one time, as Valerius Biſhop of Hippo yet liuing, appointed Auguſtine his ſucceſſor, and Auguſtine appointed Eradius. And it were not ſo, that the ſucceſſor might be aſſigned in the predeceſſors life, the Pope were like to haue a cold ſuit of it: for S. Peter, if there be any credit in thoſe records, Clement. epiſtol.1. ordained Clement his ſucceſſor, while he liued. Clementem hunc Epiſcopum vobis ordino, cui ſoli meæ prædicationis & doctrinæ cathedram trado: I ordaine this Clement to be your Biſhop, to whom only I leaue my chaire of doctrine; Notwithſtanding then, any thing which the Ieſuite hath yet ſaid, or is able to ſay, the Biſhops and Paſtors of Chriſts Church, doe as properly ſucceed the Apoſtles, as the Biſhop of Rome ſucceedeth Peter; yea with better right, vnleſſe he did embrace S. Peters doctrine.

Epheſ.4.11.

Argum.2. The Apoſtles gaue no power or iuriſdiction to the Elders and Paſtors, whom they ordained, Act.20.28. Take heede to the flocke, ouer the which the holy Ghoſt hath made you Biſhops or ouerſeers: and Epheſ.4.11. He hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Paſtors and teachers. So then the paſtors and teachers, though ordained by the Apoſtles, yet had their calling and office from God and not from the Apoſtles: much leſſe now can they receiue their power from any, no not from the Pope: for he is no Apoſtle, no nor Apoſtolike man, hauing left the Apoſtolike faith.

To theſe places Bellarmine anſwereth, that the ſpirit of God did appoint Biſhops and Paſtors, but yet immediatly by the hands of the Apoſtles: And ſo God now alſo conſtituteth and ordaineth Biſhops, but immediately from the Pope, or his aſſignes.

Contra. In the giuing of orders two things are to be conſidered, the externall rite and ceremonie outwardly vſed in the admittance of thoſe that are conſecrated and ſet apart for the holie functions, and the office and function it ſelfe whereto they are ordained. Concerning the externall rite and outward act, it is done and performed by men; ſuch was the impoſition of hands vſed by the Apoſtles: but if we reſpect the power and efficacie of the office it ſelfe, it is not conferred by men; but God concurreth with the Churches externall act, in enabling thoſe men to their ſpirituall office, whom the Church hath ſet apart. The Apoſtles laied on their hands in the ordaining of Biſhops or Paſtors, but their office they receiued of God: that externall rite was onely an outward teſtimonie of the Church, that ſuch men were marked and ſealed of God, for that office, as 1.Tim.4.14. Timothie his gift was giuen by propheſie, that is, by the reuelation of the ſpirit ſpeaking by the Prophets, but with laying on of the hands: this was the outward ſigne and teſtimonie of the Church, that the ſpirit had ſet ſuch men apart. A liuely example hereof we haue, Act.13.2. ſeparate me, ſaith the holy Ghoſt, Barnabas and Saul to the worke, whereunto I haue called them. Heere they haue their office and euery part thereof immediately from God: then it followeth, verſ.3. they laid on their hands. This is the outward approbation and conſent of the Church, which giueth them not their office, but onely ſealeth and confirmeth it outwardly vnto them. So ſaith S. Paul, that worthie thing, which was committed vnto thee, keepe through the holy Ghoſt, &c. Hence we reaſon thus, that whereby men are kept, maintained and vpheld in their Eccleſiaſticall office, is the beginner and author thereof: but by the ſpirit of God are Eccleſiaſticall officers preſcribed in their office and miniſterie. Ergo. The argument ſtill remaineth ſound and good, that if the Apoſtles gaue no power or iuriſdiction to Paſtors or Elders, but it was the ordinance of God, much leſſe hath the Pope right to doe it. Let vs ſee what antiquitie ſaith, Auguſtine thus writeth, Solus Chriſtus habet authoritatem, & præponendi nos in eccleſiæ ſuæ gubernatione, & de actu noſtro iudicandi. de baptiſ.2.2. Onely Chriſt hath authoritie (ſaith he) to preferre vs to the gouernment of the Church, and to iudge of our doings, &c. The Paſtors then of the Church haue the keies of the ſpirituall regiment from Chriſt himſelfe, not from the Pope, or any other.

1.Tim 4.14.

2.Tim.1.14.

Concil, Aquiſgranenſ.cap.9: ex Iſidoro: Apoſtolis decedentibus ſucceſſerunt Epiſcopi, qui ſunt conſtituti per totum mundum in ſedibus Apoſtolorum: The Apoſtles being departed, Biſhops ſucceeded them, and were placed throughout the world in the Apoſtolike Seas.

*Concil. Senonenſ.decret.morum.*38. It is affirmed, Apoſtolorum ſolos Epiſcopos ſucceſſores, & ideo illis ſolam impoſitionem manuum reſeruatam: That Biſhops are the onely ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles: and therefore to them onely is the impoſition of hands reſerued, &c. Hereupon we inferre, that whatſoeuer Biſhops haue, they doe receiue it not from the Pope, but by reaſon of their ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles.

Wee want not here the teſtimonie of their owne writers: as Franciſcus Victoria, in Relect.2. de poteſtate Eccleſiæ. quæſt. 2. Alphonſus de caſtro, lib. 2. cap. 24. Theſe Popiſh writers are of this iudgement, that both the Apoſtles, and likewiſe Biſhops haue their iuriſdiction immediatelie from God.

Their owne Canons alſo for this matter are againſt them: Anacletus ſaith, that Biſhops ſucceed the Apoſtles; diſt.22.2.Vrbanus, Apoſtolorum locum tenent: They are in the place of the Apoſtles, diſt.68.cap.6. Innocentius, They are the Apoſtles Vicars: *decret.Gregor.lib.*1.*tit.*15.*cap.*1. And Clemens the 5. ſaith, They are Chriſts Legates, *Clementin.lib.*5.*tit.*8.*c.*1. If Biſhops then bee the ſucceſſors, and vicegerents of Chriſt and his Apoſtles; then it followeth, that from them, and not from the Pope, they haue their iuriſdiction.

This doctrine hath been ſealed by the blood of holy Martyrs. Maſter Philpot ſaith, by the word of God the Pope hath no more authoritie then the Biſhop of London hath; as Peter had no more authoritie, then euery one of the Apoſtles had, Fox pag.1811.col.1.

Pag.1644.1.50.

For the teſtimonie of other Churches: 1. Ieremie Patriarch of Conſtantinople alleageth the fourth Canon of the firſt Nicen, where it is decreed, that a Biſhop ſhould be choſen by all the Biſhops in the Prouince, if that cannot be by reaſon of the length of the countrie, then by three at the leſt: ſumma autem & vltima poteſtas, & confirmatio, &c. but the laſt and chiefe power, and confirmation of all Metropolitano tribuatur, muſt be giuen to the Metropolitane: if the chiefe power bee in the Metropolitane, then there is no dependance here of the Pope. Nilus the Archbiſhop ſaith, that the Patriarch of Conſtantinople ordaineth the Biſhop of Cæſarea and the reſt, but the Romane Biſhop neither ordaineth the Biſhop of Conſtantinople, nor any of the generall Patriarches. Barlaam vſeth this reaſon, that ſeeing the Apoſtles were ordained by Chriſt himſelfe, and not by Peter, neither ſhould other Biſhops bee ordained by the Pope: though it bee admitted hee was Peters ſucceſſor, hee alſo alleageth Dionyſius epiſt. 8. who maketh Miniſters ſuperior to Monkes, Biſhops to Miniſters, and the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors to Biſhops: hee maketh ſucceſſors to the Apoſtles in generall, and not to Peter onelie, And ſo hee inferreth, that euery one of the Patriarches is deſigned of all the Biſhops in the Prouince, but conſecrated by one: as the Patriarch of Conſtantinople of the Metropolite of Heracleas, the Patriarch of Hieruſalem of the Metropolite of Cæſarea, &c. here is no expectation of the Popes conſecration.

4 The opinion of the Romaniſts, as of Vrbanus, Innocentius, Popes, of Franciſcus de Victoria, Alphonſus, we haue ſeene before.

THE EIGHT QVESTION, OF THE TEMPORALL iuriſdiction and power of the Biſhop of Rome.

THis queſtion hath two parts; firſt, whether the Pope in reſpect of any ſpirituall iuriſdiction, haue alſo the chiefe ſoueraigntie in temporall and ciuill matters; and ſo to be aboue Kings and Emperors. Secondly, whether the Pope, or any Biſhop, may be the chiefe Lord and Prince ouer any Countrie, Citie, or Prouince.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE POPE DIrectlie or indirectly haue authoritie aboue Kings and Princes.

The Papiſts.

57. Error. Innocent. 3. in decretal. THe Papiſts of former times were not aſhamed to ſay, that the Pope is the Lord of the whole Church: as Panormitane in the Councell of Baſil, Fox pag. 670. Yea, Pope Innocentius the third ſaid, writing to the Emperour of Conſtantinople, that as the Moone receiued her light from the Sun, ſo the Imperiall dignitie did ſpring from the Pope: and that the Papall dignitie was ſeuen and fortie times greater then the Imperiall: yea, Kings and Emperours are more inferior to the Pope then leade is to gold, Gelaſius diſtinct. 96. And Clemens 5. likewiſe ſaith, Nos regis ordinarius iudex: That hee was the ordinarie iudge of the King of Sicile: Et temporalia ſua à nobis & ſub nobis tenet: And hee holdeth his temporals of vs and vnder vs, not of the Emperor, Clement. lib. 2. tit. 11. Thus in times paſt the arrogant Popes did chalenge power directly and ordinarilie ouer Kings and Emperours. But our later Papiſts aſhamed of their forefathers arrogancie, in words ſeeme to abate ſomewhat of their proud ſentence, but in effect ſay the ſame thing: for they confeſſe that the Emperour hath his office and calling of God, and not from the Pope: neither that the Pope directly hath any temporall iuriſdiction: but indirectly he may depoſe Kings and Princes, abrogate the lawes of Emperours, and eſtabliſh his owne: he may take vnto himſelf the iudgement of temporall cauſes, and cite Kings to appeare before him: Yet not directly (ſaith the Ieſuite) as hee is ordinarie Iudge ouer the Biſhops and whole Clergie; yet indirectly, as he is the chiefe ſpirituall Prince, he may doe all this, if he ſee it neceſſarie for the health of mens ſoules. And ſo in effect, by their popiſh indirect meanes, they giue him as great authoritie, as euer he vſurped or challenged. Bellarmine lib. 5. cap. 6.

Arg. 1. The Eccleſiaſticall and ciuill power doe make but one bodie and ſocietie, as the ſpirit and the fleſh in man: Now the eccleſiaſticall power, which is as the ſoule and ſpirit, is the chiefe part, becauſe it is referred to a more principall end, namely, the ſafetie and good of the ſoule: the other is as the fleſh to the ſpirit, and reſpecteth but a temporall end, as the outward peace and proſperitie of the common-wealth: Ergo, the ſpirituall power is chiefe, and may command the other. Bellarmin cap. 7.

Anſw. Firſt, it is a very vnfit and vnproper ſimilitude, to compare theſe two regiments to the ſoule and the bodie: for by this meanes, as the ſpirit giueth life to the bodie, and euery part thereof, ſo the ciuill and temporall ſtate ſhould receiue their office and calling from the Eccleſiaſticall, which the Ieſuite himſelfe denieth, and ſo directly the one ſhould rule the other: for the ſoule directlie I trow, not indirectly moueth the bodie and gouerneth it. But if we will ſpeake as the Scripture doth, we make Epheſ. 4. 15. 16. all but one bodie: and it is the ſpirit of Chriſt, who is the head, that giueth effectuall power to euerie part.

2 It is falſe, that the ciuill magiſtracy concerneth the outward and temporall commoditie only: for vnto Princes alſo is committed the chiefe care of religion and the worſhip of God: They are to ſee true religion aduanced, yea to watch ouer Eccleſiaſtical miniſters, and to charge them to look to their offices: the Prince is Gods miniſter, for the wealth both of the ſoules and bodies of his ſubiects: And therefore S. Paul exhorteth to pray for Kings and gouernours, that we may liue (not onely) a peacea-1. Tim. 2. 2. ble life, but in all godlineſſe and honeſtie, Ergo, it is part of the Magiſtrates office, as to procure the peace of the people, ſo to haue a care of their godly life. Wherefore it is falſe, as the Ieſuit ſuppoſeth, that the chiefe end of the ciuill gouernment, is onely outward and temporall: Ergo, his argument is nothing worth.

Argum. 2. Azariah the high Prieſt droue Vzziah the King out of the temple, when hee would haue burned incenſe, and cauſed him to goe out of the citie and dwell apart, 2. Chron. 26. Iehoida likewiſe depoſed Athalia, 2.King.11. Ergo, the Pope may depoſe wicked and vngodly Princes, Bellarm.cap.8.

Anſ. Firſt, we denie, that there is now, or ought to be any ſuch high Prieſt in the Church of God, to haue the chiefe authoritie in ſpirituall matters, as there was in the law; for hee was the type and figure of Chriſt, who is our high Prieſt, and chiefe Biſhop. Secondly, theſe examples doe not excuſe the Popes tyrannie, who hath depoſed rightfull Kings and Emperours, and better then himſelfe: as Pope Zacharie depoſed Childericus the French King, and ſet vp Pipinus: Gregorie the ſeuenth ſet vp Rodolphus againſt Henricus the fourth, the Emperour. Pope Paſchalis the ſecond ſet vp the ſonne of the ſaid Henricus againſt his father. But we will anſwere more particularly to theſe examples.

To the firſt. Firſt, it was not the ſole act of Azariah the high Prieſt, but there were 80. Prieſts that ioyned with him beſide, and they all ſpake to the King: this example therefore maketh nothing for the ſole authoritie of the Pope, who ſaith, that hee may depoſe the Emperour himſelfe, without any Councell, Innocent.4. Secondly, they did not depoſe Vzziah: they onely withſtood him according to the law of God, becauſe he vſurped the Prieſts office: ſo ought faithfull Biſhops and Paſtors euen to reproue the greateſt Magiſtrates, for the manifeſt contempt, and open breach of Gods law: neither did they conſtraine the King to goe foorth, before they ſaw the iudgement of God vpon him: for the text ſaith, they compelled him to goe foorth, becauſe the Lord had ſmitten him, they ſaw the leproſie to riſe vp in his face, verſ.20. 2.Chron.26.20 This therefore was the extraordinarie iudgement of God, and not of the high Prieſt. Thirdly, he was not depoſed from the kingdome, though he dwelt alone: his ſonne did execute the office only for him, and raigned after him: for being a leper, by the law hee was to dwell apart, Leuit.13.46. Leuit.13.46. Here was nothing done (we ſee) by the ſole authoritie of the high Prieſt, but they had the manifeſt and direct law of God, vnto the which their Kings alſo were ſubiect.

To the ſecond example we anſwere: Firſt, Athaliah was a tyrant and an vſurper, and ought not to raigne, and therefore was iuſtly depoſed. Secondly, Iehoiada did it not by his owne power, but aſſembled the Fathers and Princes of the land, 2.Chron.22.2. He ſhewed them the young King, and they made a couenant with him. Iehoiada only gaue directions (the King being now knowne vnto them) vnto the Captaines and gouernours. Thirdly, they had the flat word of God for that action, The Kings ſonne muſt raigne, as the Lord hath ſaid, concerning the ſonnes of Dauid, verſ.3. So when the Pope hath any ſuch warrant from God, he may doe as Iehoiada did. 1.Pet.5.2.

Argum.3. I muſt not heere forget the goodly arguments vſed by Boniface 8. in his decretal, for the ſuperioritie of Popes aboue Kings and Emperours: Extrau.commun.lib.1.tit.8. Firſt, Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Paſce oues meas, Feed my ſheepe: but the Emperour is one of his ſheepe: Ergo, hee is committed to Peter.

Anſw. Firſt, here is a manifeſt begging of the thing in queſtion: for whatſoeuer was ſaid to Peter, belongeth not to the Pope. Secondly, here is a new expoſition of theſe words, Feed my flocke, that is, the Pope may depoſe Emperours, and excommunicate them, tread vpon their neckes, exempt their ſubiects from their fealtie, and all by vertue of theſe words. Thirdly, as Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe: ſo Peter ſaith to all Paſtors, Feed the flocke of Chriſt, 1.Pet.5. 1.Pet.5.2. Then by the ſame reaſon all Paſtors ſhould haue ſuperioritie to Kings: As Kings and Princes are ſheepe vnto their Biſhops and Paſtors that doe inſtruct them; ſo againe the Paſtors themſelues, are their ſheepe in reſpect of ciuill gouernment: as the one are ſuperiour for ſpirituall direction, ſo the other are chiefe for ciuill adminiſtration. But the Pope preaching not at all, is not ſo much as a ſpirituall Paſtor, and therefore hath loſt alſo his preeminence in this; and yet if hee were, hee muſt be ſubiect to his ſuperiour temporall gouernour.

2 The Apoſtles ſaid to Chriſt, behold two ſwords, it is enough ſaith Chriſt, not too much: Ergo, there are two ſwords in the Church, the temporall and ſpirituall, Boniſ.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, who ſeeth not how abſurdly that place is abuſed, whereas both Chriſt anſwered, and the Apoſtles made the queſtion of two materiall ſwords, which were found in the company. Secondly, S. Peter was reproued for handling the ſword: Ergo, we may better conclude, that the Pope (his ſuppoſed ſucceſſor) hath nothing to doe with the ſword. Thirdly, if theſe two ſwords proue any thing, they make no more for the Church of Rome, then for any other Church.

3 The Apoſtle ſaith, Rom.13.1. Rom.13.1. The powers that bee, are, ordinatæ, ordained of God: but there can bee no order, vnleſſe one ſword were vnder another: the temporall vnder the ſpirituall: Boniſac. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, he cauilleth about the word, ordained: for the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of any order, that the powers haue one vnder another, but of the ordinance which they haue from God. Secondly, but if they will enforce this expoſition, it maketh for the ſuperioritie of the Ciuill Magiſtrate, that beareth the temporall ſword, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh plainly, verſ.4.

4 The Apoſtle ſaith, The ſpirituall man iudgeth all things, 1.Cor.2.15. 1.Cor.2.15. Ergo, the Pope iudgeth the Emperour, Boniſ.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, the Papiſts themſelues are aſhamed of this groſſe expoſition; for the Rhemiſts in their Annotations dare not ſo expound the ſpirituall man: but hee is the ſpirituall man, that is led by the ſpirit of God, which the Pope is not led by: and therefore is not ſpirituall according to the Apoſtles meaning. Secondly, Kings and Emperours, that are faithfull, and beleeue in Chriſt, are as well ſpirituall ciuill men in the Apoſtles ſenſe, as beleeuing Biſhops. Theſe and ſuch like arguments not worth rehearſing, much leſſe confutation, their ſtout champion Boniface vſeth in that place.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope, or any other perſon eccleſiaſticall, hath no manner of temporall iuriſdiction either directly or indirectly ouer Kings, Princes, Emperours, but ought of right to be ſubiect to them and their lawes: it is thus proued.

Argum.1. By the ſame reaſon whereby the Ieſuite proueth, that the Pope directly hath no temporall iuriſdiction, we will conclude, that neither indirectly can he haue any, and ſo none at all. Chriſt while he liued vpon earth, tooke vpon him no temporall iuriſdiction, either directly or indirectly: he refuſed to be a King, Ioh.6. Nay he would not be a Iudge in ciuill matters, as in diuiding the inheritance, being thereto required, Luk.12.13. He paied poll money, Matth.17. he did ſubmit himſelfe to the iudgement of Pilate an heathen Iudge. Therefore ſeeing Chriſt vſed no ſuch temporall iuriſdiction, neither can any Miniſter of Chriſt: For the ſeruant is not aboue the maſter: onely Antichriſt dare preſume beyond the example of Chriſt.

Luke 12.13.

This argument drawne from our Sauiour Chriſt his example, is notably vrged by that good Emperour Fredericke, writing thus to that proud Pope Adrian the 4. Cum ille noſter & veſter inſtitutor nihil ab homine rege acciperet, tamen pro ſe & Petro cenſum Cæſari perſoluit, exemplum vobis dedit, vt vos ita faciatis: Seeing Chriſt, both our founder and yours, did take nothing of the King, but paied tribute to Cæſar for himſelfe and Peter, he gaue you an example to doe the like.

Bellarmines beſt anſwere in this place is, that Chriſt in refuſing to diuide the inheritance, ſignified, Ne pontifices minutis & vilibus officijs occupentur: That Prelates ought not to occupie themſelues in baſe and inferiour offices.

Contra. Firſt, I pray you is it ſo baſe a place to be Iudge of inheritance? I appeale to Weſtminſter Hall, what ſubiect can haue a more honourable place, then to be called to the ſeate of iudgement? Or if this were ſomewhat baſe, Chriſt alſo refuſed to be a King, I trow the Ieſuite thinketh that to be no vile or beggerly calling. Secondly, more then this, Chriſt did not only refuſe theſe ciuill honours, but paied tribute, whereby he acknowledged his obedience, as man, to the Ciuill ſtate. We may iudge the weaknes of their cauſe, by the feeblenes of their anſweres.

Argum.2. The fathers of Baſil doe vrge that place of S.Peter, 1.Epiſt.5.2. againſt Panormitane, who had vnaduiſedly ſaid, that the Pope was Lord of the Church. But the Apoſtle ſaith, Feed the flock of Chriſt; not by conſtraint, but willingly; not as Lords ouer the Lords inheritance, verſ.3. But the Pope contrariwiſe vſeth all forcible, conſtraining, and tyrannicall meanes, killing, ſlaying, impriſoning, depoſing thoſe that will not obey him: who calleth himſelfe chiefe Lord and Magiſtrate of the whole world: Surely this is Antichriſt, and not the Miniſter of Chriſt, or ſucceſſor of S.Peter, whoſe counſell he refuſeth to follow and obey.

Argum.3. Let but the ſtories of former times be ſearched: there wee ſhall finde how wickedly and inſolently the Popes behaued themſelues towards Kings and Emperours: Pope Alexander cauſed Henry the ſecond to doe penance for Beckets death, and to bee diſpled of the Monkes. Innocent the third cauſed King Iohn to kiſſe the feete of the Biſhop of Canturburie his owne ſubiect. Alexander the third did tread vpon Emperour Fredericke his necke. Pope Innocent ſpoyled Fredericke the ſecond of his Empire, cauſed him to be poyſoned, and his ſonne Conradus to be beheaded: and theſe Emperours were depoſed by the Popes in order, Henricus 4. Henricus 5. Fredericke 1. Philippus Otho the 4. Frederick 2. and Conradus his ſonne.

It is not good, they ſay, to put a ſword into a mad mans hand: and think you not, that theſe Popes vſed the temporall ſword very diſcreetly, which they thus vſurped, making fooles and ſlaues of Emperours, as Pope Adrian did, that rebuked Frederick the firſt, becauſe he held his ſtirrup on the wrong ſide, and did excommunicate him, for ſetting his name before the Popes in writing? The very inſolent, diuelliſh, and Antichriſtian practiſe of this their temporall power, ſheweth from what originall it commeth, euen from the father of pride.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith, writing vpon thoſe words, Rom.13. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the higher powers: Si quis putat, quia Chriſtianus eſt, non ſibi eſſe vectigal reddendum aut tributum, aut non eſſe exhibendum honorem debitum eis, quæ hæc curant poteſtatibus; in magno errore eſt: If any man thinke, becauſe he is a Chriſtian, that hee is not bound to pay tribute and taxe, and yeeld due honour to the temporall powers (for of ſuch Auguſtine ſpeaketh) he is in a great error, &c. If all then are ſubiect to the temporall Magiſtrate that are Chriſtians, then all Biſhops and eccleſiaſticall perſons, yea the Pope himſelfe, if he be a Chriſtian: Ergo the Emperour is not ſubiect to him.

Agatho Biſhop of Rome writeth thus to Conſtantinus the Emperour: Secundum piiſſimam iuſſionem manſuetudinis veſtræ, pro obedientia, quam debuimus, dirigimus præſentes conſamulos noſtros: As your clemencie hath moſt godly commanded vs, according to the obedience which wee owe, wee haue ſent theſe our fellow ſeruants. Chriſtiani imperij famuli: We all the poore Prelates of Churches, ſeruants of your moſt Chriſtian Empire, &c. Here the Pope himſelfe doth confeſſe himſelfe to be the Emperours ſeruant, and to owe him homage; what more euident teſtimonie can we haue?

Further, we haue teſtimonie of their owne law; diſt.8.cap.1. Per iura regum,&c. Temporall poſſeſſions are enioyed by the lawes of Princes: Ergo, the Pope holdeth his temporals of Kings, not they their kingdomes of him. Diſtinct.10.cap.9. Leo 4. thus writeth to Lotharius the Emperour, Preceptis veſtris imperialibus,&c. Wee promiſe and profeſſe for euer to keepe and obſerue your imperiall precepts, &c. And if any man tell you otherwiſe, ſciatis eum pro certo mendacem, hold him for a lier.

Likewiſe Gelaſius ibid.c.11. Quis autem leges principum,&c. Who will ſay that the lawes of Princes ought to be contemned? &c.

Diſtinct.97. Boniſac.1. thus writeth to Honorius the Emperour: Angeretur pluribus,&c. The Mother Church would be much grieued, if ſhe were not ſecure and aſſured of your helpe in all her cauſes, and had not preuailed in ſuppreſſing of Idols, correcting of Heretikes by your faithfulnes,&c. This Boniface writing with a better ſpirit, then Boniface 8. whoſe goodly arguments we ſaw before, calleth for aſſiſtance of the Emperour, euen for the redreſſe of Eccleſiaſticall matters. Thus we ſee, that of ancient times Popes did not command, but were commanded rather of Emperours; that they did not preſcribe lawes to them, but rather yeelded obedience to imperiall lawes. And a later Extrauagant decreeth, Vt non ſint reges amplius eccleſiæ Romanæ ſubiecti, quam antea,&c. That Kings ſhould be no otherwiſe ſubiect to the Church of Rome, then they haue been in times paſt: Clemens 5. Extrau. commun.lib.5.tit.7.cap.2. Wherefore the Pope doth contrarie to his owne law, in challenging ſuch ſuperioritie ouer the Emperour, which of ancient time hath not been due.

Let Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr put to his ſeale: By the Scripture the King is chiefe, and no forraine perſon in his owne realme aboue him: there is no ſubiect but to a King: I am a ſubiect, I owe my fidelitie to the Crowde; the Pope is contrarie to the Crowne: I cannot obey both,&c. Fox pag. 1874.col.1.

Concerning the teſtimonie of other Churches: 1. Ieremie ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church: Obedire ſubiectoſque eſſe oportere nos omni poteſtati & magiſtratui,&c. et ea omnia, quæ ab illis legibus ſancita ſunt, ſancte et incontaminate ſeruanda: It behoueth vs to obey and to be ſubiect to euery power and magiſtracie,&c. and all thoſe things, which are ordained by lawes, muſt be obſerued carefully, and nothing empaired. Here the great Patriarke acknowledgeth obedience to the Ciuill Magiſtrate. Agapetus a Deacon of Conſtantinople thus writeth to Iuſtinian the Emperour: [a] God ſtandeth in need of none, the King only of God, Numer.63. And againe, [b] The King is Lord of all, Numer.68. This was the Greeke faith.

2 In the Ethiopike Church at this day, the Patriarke doth not meddle with the affaires of the kingdome, or with the adminiſtration of temporall things, ſed tantum ſpiritualem curam habet, but only taketh charge of ſpirituall things. Patriarkes then containing themſelues within their limits and bounds, haue no power ouer the temporall ſtate.

Harm.ſect.11. pag.374.

4 Of the Latine Church, Cardinall Cuſanus writeth, that Pope Leo with his ſynode entreated of the Emperour Theodoſius, that a generall Councell might be held within Italie, but it was not granted him: Ecce vniuerſalem ſynodum, per ſynodum vbi Papa præſidet, ab imperatore petitam: Behold a generall ſynode was craued of the Emperour by a ſynode, where the Pope was preſident. This ſheweth the iuriſdiction of the Emperours ouer Popes, not contrariwiſe. Eſpencæus ſaith, Gregorius magnus agnoſcebat imperatoribus conceſſum eſſe ius dominandi ſacerdotib. Gregorie the great acknowledged, that the Emperours had right to rule ouer and command Prieſts.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS PART, WHETHER the Pope haue power to excommunicate Emperours and Kings, &c.

The Papiſts.

58.Error.

WE need not ſeeke farre to know their opinion for this matter, for the continuall practiſe of Popes and popiſh Biſhops, in taking vpon them moſt arrogantly to excommunicate Emperours and Kings, doth euidently ſhew what their iudgement is. Gregorie the 3. did excommunicate Leo Iſaurus Emperour of Conſtantinople, becauſe he pulled downe Images: ſo did his predeceſſor Gregorie 2. before him. Gregorie 7. did thunder out his mercileſſe curſes againſt Henricus 4. Emperour. Adrian 4. and after him Alexander 3. moſt wicked and inſolent Popes, did perſecute the good Emperour Fredericke, with their cruell excommunications. Innocent 3. did excommunicate King Iohn, and interdict the whole Realme of England. And according to the Antichriſtian practiſes of their predeceſſors, the Popes that haue been of late, haue breathed out, as a vaine blaſt and bladder crack, their vniuſt excommunications againſt our late renowmed Soueraigne, and moſt bleſſed of God, Queene Elizabeth.

Yea not only the Popes haue thus farre preſumed, but their inferiour Biſhops haue malepartly pricked foorth, by their excommunications, to buffet Princes, and pull them by the eares: As Odo Archi-biſhop of Canturburie did ſuſpend Edwine the King from the Church, and Dunſtane afterward did

*Argum.*1. Azariah is brought foorth for an example, who being chiefe Prieſt, when King Vz-

2.Chro. 26.20. 26.20. The like power why may not the Pope-Biſhops haue now to excommunicate kings?

Anſw. Firſt, it was not Azariah his act only, whatſoeuer was done at this time, but there were 80.
Prieſts ioyned with him, ſufficient to make a lawfull Synode or Councell. Secondly, their intent was not by violence to thruſt Vzziah out of the temple, but only to admoniſh him, and reproue him for his preſumption, verſ.18. they ſaid vnto him, it pertaineth not to thee Vzziah to burne incenſe, &c.
And this they might lawfully doe, as Iohn Baptiſt rebuked Herod for his inceſt. And as it is the part of all faithfull Biſhops, not to ſpare, in dutie and reuerence, to tell Kings and Princes their faults; ſo did Ambroſe deale with Valentinian the Emperour, Theodoret. lib.3. cap.11. Britannio a Scythian Biſhop with the Emperour Valens who was an Arrian, Theodoret. lib.4. cap.35. Iſaachus Monachus alſo thus ſaid to the ſame Emperour going in warfare againſt the Barbarians, Quò proficiſcere, bello ſuſcepto aduerſus Deum? Whither goeſt thou, ſeeing thou haſt waged battell with God? Theodoret.
lib.4.34. He ſaid alſo further to him, Redde Eccleſias orthodoxis: Reſtore the Churches which thou haſt taken from them of the right faith. The Emperour thereupon bid him be apprehended, dealing with him, as Ahab plaied with Micaiah the Prophet: but he anſwered, Non es reuerſurus, niſi eccleſias reddideris: Thou ſhalt not returne, vnleſſe thou doe reſtore them, &c. And ſo indeed it came to paſſe.
This zeale and boldnes in good Biſhops is not to be miſliked, but much to be commended, and wiſhed in the Biſhops of our time.

Numb.5.2. 3 Azariah conſtraineth not Vzziah to depart, before the leproſie appeared in his face, then was he thruſt out, for they had the expreſſe word of God ſo to doe, Numb.5.2. So if the Pope had the expreſſe commandement of God to excommunicate Kings, and if it might appeare that they are firſt excommunicate of God, as the Lord ſet a marke of leproſie in Vzziah; it might be as lawfull for him ſo to doe, as it was then for Azariah: but ſuch commandement we are ſure the Pope hath none, nor yet is he ſo acquainted with Gods ſecrets, as to know who are reiected before him.

*Argum.*2. S.Ambroſe example is much vrged in this caſe, who enioyned Theodoſius the Emperour penance, for a certaine murther and ſlaughter of the people made at his commandement, and would not admit him to receiue the Lords Supper, ſaying thus vnto him, Iſtaſne adhuc ſtillantes iniu- ſta cædis cruore manus extendes, & ſanctiſſimi Domini corpus prehendes? Doeſt thou ſtretch out theſe thy bloudy hands, to apprehend the moſt holy body of our Lord? Theodoret lib.3.17.

*Anſw.*1. Ambroſe, in not admitting the Emperour without repentance of that bloudie act to the Ierem.15.19. Lords Supper, and in refuſing himſelfe to miniſter to him in that caſe, did not amiſſe if hee had ſtaied
1.Tim.5.22. there, hauing ſo farre the word of God. Ierem.15.19. Separate me the precious from the vile: and 1.Ti-moth.5.22. Be not partaker of other mens ſinnes. 2. But in that hee tooke vpon him by his ſole au-thoritie to cenſure the Emperour, and to enioyne him penance, he ſomewhat exceeded his limits: and yet, though this act might proceed (in Ambroſe ſo holy a Biſhop) from an extraordinarie ſpirit, which I denie not; yet the Emperour is rather to be commended for his humilitie, in ſubmitting himſelfe to his order, (for it is written of him, that Lachrymas effudit coram Eccleſia, & tempus pœ- nitentiæ præſcriptum impleuit: He ſhed teares before the Church, and fulfilled the time ſet for his penance: Ruffin lib.2. cap.33.) Such alſo was Theodoſius modeſtie, that at another time being excommunicate, à leui homuncione, of a light cock-braine fellow, becauſe hee granted him not that thing, which he requeſted, he would not enter into the Church, before he had been of the ſame partie abſol-ued: Theodoret lib.5. cap.37. Theodoſius lowlineſſe therefore, and ſubmiſſion to Ambroſe cenſure, doth not proue the lawfulneſſe thereof, no more then his modeſtie here doth allow the inſolent fact of a ſaucie malapert prieſt. 3. Though we admit Ambroſe act to be lawfull, yet doth it not autho-riſe the Popes vniuſt proceedings: for that cenſure was laid vpon the Emperour vpon iuſt cauſe, a hainous murther committed: but the Pope doth excommunicate Kings for well doing, as Gregorie the 3. did to Leo the Emperour, for pulling downe of Images; and for the moſt part of ſtomack, for Gregorie the 7. had no other cauſe againſt Henry the 4. nor Alexander the 3. againſt Fredericke.
4. If Ambroſe example proue any thing, it doth authoriſe other Biſhops as well as him of Rome, to excommunicate Emperours of themſelues.

The Proteſtants.

Although wee doe not altogether exempt Princes from eccleſiaſticall cenſures, for they are, though chiefe and principall, yet parts and members of the Church: yet we thinke, that againſt all other perſons, beſide the ſupreame and ſoueraigne Magiſtrate, though of neuer ſo high place, the cenſures of the Church may more ſafely and with better right be extended, and applied: as Biſhop Groſthead that good Biſhop of Lincolne, hauing excommunicated a Prieſt for incontinencie, becauſe after fourtie daies the Sheriffe refuſed to apprehend him, as it was his dutie, excommunicated him likewise, Fox p.289. But as concerning excommunicating of Kings and Princes, wee thinke that neither the Pope, nor any Bishop in the world by their sole authoritie haue power to doe it.

*Argum.*1. Paulus orari iubet pro regibus malis, 1.Timoth.2. S.Paul would haue vs pray for euill Kings. This is our onely remedie that wee haue against such: Nec enim a nobis repellendus est armis contra eum sumptis, sed precibus ad Deum sumptis: Neither is such an one to be restrained by weapons taken vp against him, but prayers made vnto God for him: *Epistol. Leodiensium. contra Paschal.*2. As Ambrose said well, Arma nostra preces & lachrimæ: Our weapons are onely teares and prayers. Against the soueraigne power no violent meane is to be vsed: Ergo, not excommunication.

*Argu.*2. The wise man saith, Prou.26.2. Maledictio [illegible] non adducetur: A curse causelesse or vndeserued shall not come. Malach.2. Benedictionibus vestris maledicam: I will curse that you blesse, and so consequently blesse that which you curse. And their owne law saith, Neminem ligare debet sententia iniusta: An vniust sentence bindeth not: Et excommunicatus non potest excommunicare: An excommunicate person cannot excommunicate. Therefore we feare not the Popes curse or excommunication, because it is vniust: and he excommunicateth vs, as the Pharises did the Apostles, because we speake in the name of Christ: and hee himselfe standeth as an excommunicate person before God, being an Apostata and slidebacke from the truth.

*Argum.*3. *Concil. Toletan.*4.*can.*74. It was decreed, that the Kings of that Countrie which should exercise crueltie against the people, anathematis sententia condemnentur: Should be anathematized, or held accursed. *Concil. Toletan.*6.*can.*3. If the King should violate his faith which he gaue, not to suffer the Iewes to infringe the Catholike faith, Sit anathema in conspectu Dei: Let him be accursed in the sight of God, &c. These decrees of anathematizing Kings were not made by any one or two, but in the first were assembled all the Bishops of the Prouinces of Hispania, and Galicia, the King Sisenandus himselfe was present, with the chiefe of his Nobles, and gaue consent. In the second there were assembled 52. Bishops, the King Chintillanus and his Nobles. Hereby then may appeare what was the practise of those times, that nothing should be attempted by any singular authoritie against the highest powers, but by consent of all the states, and in the generall Session of Parliament, as it were.

Master Lambert holy Martyr, thus also giueth his opinion of this matter: The Pope ought not to denounce excommunications of his owne proper head and affection onely, but with the consent of other gathered with him in Christs name: for so vsed S.Paul when he did excommunicate the man of Corinth, &c. And the same forme declareth the Gospell, Matth.18. Dic Ecclesiæ, Tell it to the Church or congregation: so that such excommunications ought to be done, as me thinketh, by the congregation assembled together with their Pastors, whose aduice they ought principally to esteeme and follow, if it be vertuous and godly: *Fox pag.*1113. *respons. ad articul.*24. Hence we conclude, that neither Pope nor any Bishop by their sole authoritie can excommunicate Princes.

Matth.18.17.

Lastly, *Epistol. Leodiensium contra Paschal.*2. thus we reade: Si quis vetus & nouum testamentum, gestaque vtriusque, pariter reuoluerit, quod aut nunquam aut difficile possint reges excommunicari: admoneri quidem possunt, increpari, argui a discretis viris: quia quos Christus in terris rex regum vice sua constituit, damnandos vel saluandos sub iudicio reliquit: If any man will take paines to looke ouer the old and new Testament, and the acts thereof, he shall readily finde, that Kings either hardly or not at all ought to be excommunicate: they may bee admonished, rebuked, aduised discreetly, and wisely, and not else: for those whom Christ the King of Kings hath set in his stead in the earth to be saued or damned, he hath reserued it for his owne iudgement, &c. And these, which did thus write, were of the Popish Church, though herein they misliked the practise of the Popes. And one of their late writers approueth the foresaid Epistle, and alleageth out of the same, how that Gregorie 7. called Hildebrand, was the first, contrarie to all antiquitie, that did, sacerdotalem lanceam contra Imperatoris diadema leuare, lift vp the spirituall launce against the Crowne of the Emperour: *Espenc.*2.*Timoth.pag.*275.a. The same author hath these words, Magistratus collo non bello, patientia, non violentia, patiendo, non agendo resistendum est: The Magistrate must be resisted, not by stroke, but yeelding the necke; by patience, not violence; by suffering, not practising: *ibid. pag.*276.f. Whereby hee insinuateth, that nothing ought to be attempted against Princes; no not by excommunicating of them, for that were to practise, not to be patient.

I thinke also, their owne Extrauagant condemneth the cruell practise of Popish Prelates in enterdicting of Kings and their Kingdomes, as Boniface 8. thus decreed: *Extrau. commun. lib.*5.*tit.*10.*cap.*2. Prouide attendentes, &c. We considering, that many are too forward in denouncing of interdictions, whereupon it commeth to passe, that the Ecclesiasticall Sacraments are not administred, the seruice of God suspended, &c. We doe prouide by this edict, that no Prouince, Citie, Castle, Territorie, goe vnder the interdict, for any quantitie or summe of money, by the Lord thereof vnpaied, &c. Wee haue then their owne testimonie against them.

7. Rolle speaking of these words of our blessed Sauiour to Peter, Louest thou me, feed my sheepe: he appointed Peter, and after him to bee first Pastor of his Church, and consequently, omnibus pastoribus & doctoribus eandem potestatem tribuit, &c. Hee giueth the same power to all Pastors and Doctors, whereof this is a signe, that all wee doe equally binde and loose, as well as hee: so that the Pope hath no more right to excommunicate Kings, then other Pastors haue.

2 The practiſe of the Æthiopike Church at this day, is, that none are forbidden the Sacraments of the Church, though for neuer ſo great an offence, Niſi tantum propter homicidia, but onely for murther, Zaga Zabo: but the Pope hath taken vpon him for leſſe faults, yea vpon his light diſpleaſure to excommunicate Emperours and Kings.

ANOTHER APPENDEX TO THIS PART, THAT Princes de facto ſtanding Excommunicate by the ſentence of the Pope, are notwithſtanding to be obeyed of their ſubiects, neither can they be diſcharged of their oath of fealtie and alleageance.

VRbanus the ſecond thus decreed: Iuratos milites Hugoni comiti, &c. The ſouldiers ſworne to Hugo, forbid to ſerue him, as long as he ſtandeth excommunicate, &c. If they pretend their oath, let them be tolde, that the fealtie, which they ſweare vnto a Chriſtian Prince, being now an aduerſarie to God and his Saints, they are bound by no authoritie to performe, &c. Azorius their Ieſuite reporteth how Gregorie the ſecond, excommunicated Leo the Emperour of Grecia, et ſacramenti religione ſoluit, &c. and freed his ſubiects from their oath, whereby they had bound themſelues vnto him, &c. In the ſame ſteps tread other Papiſts, as one of their late Cardinals, an Engliſh fugitiue reſolueth, that by reaſon of Queene Elizabethes excommunication and hereſie, it was not onely lawfull for any of her ſubiects, but they were bound in conſcience to depriue her of any ſtrength, which lay in their power to doe. And Saunders that ſeditious writer affirmeth, that a King that is an heretike, ought to be remoued from the Kingdome.

That which theſe affirme vpon their bare words: Bellarmine laboureth in this manner to perſwade.

Lib. 5. de Roman. pontif. c. 7.

Argum. 1. As the woman is free from her husband being an Infidell, that will not ſtay with her, without iniurie to her faith: ſo the ſubiects are free from the yoke of an Infidell King: for the husband hath as great power ouer the wife, as the King hath ouer his ſubiects, and greater too.

1. Cor. 7. 14.

Contra. 1. Neither is the propoſition true: for if an Infidell will ſtill ſtay and remaine with his wife, ſhe muſt not leaue him: but if there be a wilfull deſertion of his part, then is ſhe free: ſhee cannot put him away, if he be willing to abide with her, 1. Cor. 7. 14. no more can the people put away their Prince though an Infidell or heretike. 2. Neither doth the argument follow, for greater inconuenience will follow in the Common-wealth, by the depoſing and caſting off a King, then in the family by the departing of the husband.

Iohn 21. 16.

Argum. 2. It was ſaid to Peter, Feede my ſheepe, but he could not feede them, vnleſſe hee had power to put out the vnruly Rammes, that puſh and hurt the ſheepe with their hornes.

1. Pet. 5. 2. 3.

Contra. 1. This feeding conſiſteth in ſpirituall inſtruction, as Saint Peter expoundeth it, in taking care for the flocke, and being an example vnto them: it cannot extend to the depoſing and cenſuring of Princes, or to any ſuch temporall iuriſdiction. 2. That which Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Peter himſelfe accommodateth to all Paſtors. Feede the flocke of God, which dependeth on you: therefore the Pope by this Text can challenge no more right and intereſt, then other Paſtors. 3. To make ſubiects breake their oath, and denie their obedience to the Prince which God commandeth, is to peruert the flocke, not to feede it.

Argum. 3. Whereas diuers preſidents are produced, as of Gregorie the ſecond, that depoſed Leo the Emperour, of Zacharie, that put downe Childericus the King of Fraunce, and ſuch like practiſes. We anſwere, that theſe things were done de facto, in fact and deede, but non de iure, not of right: neither are the Popes to be witneſſes, much leſſe Iudges in their owne cauſe.

The Proteſtants.

THat euen wicked and hereticall Kings are to be obeyed of their ſubiects in all lawfull things, neither are to be reſiſted, though they ſhould be iuſtly excommunicate, much leſſe, where they are vniuſtly ſentenced as Proteſtant ſtates haue beene by the Pope: neither that vnder colour of any ſuch excommunication, they can be diſcharged of their oath or conſcience of obedience: thus we make it good.

Annot. in 1. Sam. c. 8. p. 587.

Argum. 1. Saul was depoſed by the ſentence of God from the Kingdome, and reiected, and ſo denounced by Samuel: yet Dauid would not lift vp his hand againſt him, nor reſiſt him, becauſe while he liued he was the Lords anointed: this is confeſſed by the Doway Gloſſators. Saul notwithſtanding his depoſition, remained in his dignitie till his death.

Argum. 2. S. Paul willeth obedience to bee giuen vnto the Princes, which then were, being that time all Infidels and perſecutors of the faith, and that for conſcience ſake: hee then violateth his conſcience, who withdraweth his obedience from ſuch. Rom.13.5.

Argum.3. The Chriſtians did not depoſe the heathen nor hereticall Emperours, as Diocleſian, Iulian, Valens an Arrian: therefore ſuch are now to be reſiſted, or obedience to be yeelded vnto them, in things which they command, not againſt God.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the reaſon, why Chriſtians depoſed them not, was for that deerant vires temporales, they wanted temporall ſtrength: for otherwiſe, as the Apoſtle bad them to appoint new Iudges of their cauſes, that they ſhould not goe to law among the heathen, ſo they might as well haue appointed new Kings, if their ſtrength had ſerued them. Bellarm.lib.3. c.7.ſect. Quod ſum.

Contra.1. Though vnder the heathen Emperours it might be ſuppoſed, that the Chriſtians wanted ſtrength; yet the whole world hauing receiued the Chriſtian faith vnder Iulian and Valens, was not hindred by their want of ſtrength from ſuch exploites: yea, euen vnder the Pagan Emperours, the Chriſtians wanted not number and ſtrength to haue reſiſted, if Tertullian may bee credited, who thus teſtifieth, Pars pene maior ciuitatis cuiuſq; in ſilentio et modeſtia agimus: Wee being the greater part of euery Citie, doe liue modeſtly and quietly: lib. ad Scapulam. And in another place, Si tanta vis hominum, in aliquem orbis remoti ſinum abrupiſſemus a vobis, &c. If wee being ſuch, a great number of men had gone aſide from you, into ſome corner of the farre world, the loſſe of ſo many Citizens would haue made you aſhamed of your condemning of vs, &c. yee would haue beene aſtoniſhed at your ſolitude, and ſilence of all things, &c. And a little before: Cui bello non idonei, &c. For what warre had wee not beene fit, though vnequall in forces, that are ſo willingly killed, &c. So the Chriſtians then neither wanted number, nor valour: it was their conſcience then, not want of ſtrength, that kept them from rebelling. Tertullian Apolog.

2 Saint Paul doth not ſimply finde fault with them for going to law before heathen Iudges, for then hee had gone againſt his owne rule in appealing to Ceſar: but for that they did wrong one to another, and vpon ſmall occaſions called one another before heathen Iudges, to the great ſcandale of their faith. As now wee alſo finde fault with Chriſtians friuolous and vnneceſſarie ſuites and contentions, and exhort them to appoint arbitrators to compound their controuerſies at home: how abſurd and groſſe a collection were it to inferre, that they might as well appoint them a new King.

Let vs ſee the Iudgement of former times. 1. Tertullian ſaith; when as yet the Emperours were Infidels, and enemies to the Chriſtian faith: Colimus imperatorem, &c. vt hominem a Deo ſecundum, &c. ſacrificamus pro ſalute imperatoris, &c. oramus pro ſalute imperatoris, &c. Wee obſerue and worſhip the Emperour, as a man next vnto God, wee offer ſacrifice for the health of the Emperour, wee pray for his health. Lib. ad Scapul.

2 Iuſtinus Martyr ſaith, Wee onely adore the Lord, and in all other things wee cheerefully performe ſeruice vnto you, &c. The ſame author in the end of this Apologie, ſetteth downe an Epiſtle of Marcus Aurelius the Emperour, written vnto the Senate of Rome, wherein hee ſheweth, how that when his Armie was in great diſtreſſe, both for want of water, and like to bee ouerrunne with the multitude of their enemies, the Chriſtian ſouldiers falling vpon the ground, prayed not onely for the Emperour, but for the whole Armie, and ſo both obtained raine, which was comfortable to them, but a ſtorme of haile and lightening to the enemie, as alſo the victorie, &c. Thus the Chriſtians aſſiſted this heathen Emperour what they could, both by their ſpirituall and materiall weapons: they ſought not to depriue him of that ſtrength, which lay in their power, which is the ſeditious doctrine of Cardinall Allen, as is ſhewed before. Apolog. 2. οὐχ ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ μόνον ἀλλὰ, &c.

3 To this purpoſe our Royall Apologiſt concurring with the reformed Churches of England and Scotland, alleageth that place, Ierem. 27. 12. where the Prophet commanded the people to obey the King of Babell, ſaying, Put your neckes vnder the King of Babell, and ſerue him, and his people, that he may liue. Ierem.27.12. Apolog.p.22.

4 Wee haue alſo the decree of one of their owne Popes, one of the firſt that tooke vpon him to excommunicate Kings, Gregorie the ſeuenth: Anathematis vincula his ſubtrahimus, &c. We doe exempt theſe from the band of our curſe, as wiues, children, maides, ſeruants, &c. which giue their attendance vpon excommunicate perſons: if thoſe are allowed to ſerue their husbands, parents, maſters ſtanding excommunicate, much more ſubiects are to yeeld obedience to their ſoueraignes. If then by their owne law, ſubiects are not to denie obedience to their Prince, though iuſtly excommunicate, being excuſed by neceſſitie: much more then, where a Prince is ſentenced vniuſtly and iniuriouſly for an heretike, and by an incompetent Iudge, as Proteſtant Princes haue been cenſured by the Pope, who neither hath power to excommunicate Kings, being out of his iuriſdiction, and is an idolater himſelfe, and hereticall, and therefore a partiall Iudge of hereſie in others. Cauſ.11. qu.3. c.103.

THE THIRD POINT, THAT NO VIOLENCE, CONſpiracie or aſſault is to be made vpon the ſacred perſon of Kings and Gouernours howſoeuer cenſured by the Pope.

The Papiſts.

Error. 60.

THis poſition of the Iudaſites (falſly calling themſelues Ieſuites) their killing of Kings, is ſo odious, that their great Sect-maſter Bellarmine flatly denieth any ſuch thing to bee maintained by them: for thus he writeth in his letter to the Archprieſt Blackwell: It was neuer heard of from the Churches infancie vntill this day, that euer any Pope did command, that any Prince, though an heretike, though an Ethnike, though a perſecuter, ſhould be murthered, or did approue the fact, when it was done, &c. But how vntrue this is, and how boldly denied, ſhall now euidently appeare to all men.

Ex citation. Reg. Apolog. p. 75.

1 In former times: Innocentius the 4. after he had excommunicated the Emperour Frederike, corrupted one in Apulia to giue him poiſon, of the which the Emperour recouering, hee afterward hired his baſtard ſonne Manfredus to poiſon him, whereof he died. Alexander the 3. writ vnto the Soldane, that if he would liue quietly, he ſhould by ſome ſleight murther the Emperour, and to that end ſent him the Emperours picture.

Ibid. p. 67.

2 Did not Sixtus 5. make an oration in praiſe and commendation of the Friers faith, that murthered Henrie the third King of Fraunce, who was no Proteſtant, as the Pope ſaith, that a true Frier had killed a counterfet Frier: yea, and if the Cardinals had beene as forward as the Pope, that trayterous Frier had beene canonized for a Saint.

4 And to fill vp their meaſure of iniquitie: that beaſtly fellow Franciſcus de Verone, in that his diuelliſh Treatiſe, maintaineth that deteſtable fact of Iohn Chaſtell, in aſſaulting Henrie the fourth, late King of Fraunce, to bee iuſtum et heroicum, iuſt and heroicall, who notwithſtanding by the ſentence of the Parliament of Paris, was iuſtly put to death for it. He addeth further, that it was crueltie and ſacriledge to put to death the Ieſuite Guiguard, who was condemned by the ſaid Parliament of Paris, for that he had written in a certaine ſeditious booke by him made, that the late King was iuſtly ſlaine by Iaques Clement: and that if the King now raigning ſhould not die in the warres, hee ought to be killed. For the which curſed and wicked writing, hee was enioyned at his death to aske God and the King forgiueneſſe.

Præmon. reg. p. 6. 7. Apolog. reg. p. 55.

5 And that this is a reſolued concluſion of that factious ſocietie of the Iudaſites (calling themſelues falſly Ieſuites) appeareth both by the confeſſion of Iohn Chaſtell, that the argument of killing Kings was ordinarie among the Ieſuites: as alſo by the aphoriſmes of Emmanuel Sa, and a booke compoſed by the principall of the Seminarie at Rhemes, maintaining, that it was lawfull in certaine caſes for the ſubiect to kill the King. And by that diuelliſh practiſe of the horrible Gunpowder treaſon, plotted by trayterous Papiſts, who at their death refuſed to craue pardon for their deede, vnleſſe the Romiſh Church ſhould firſt condemne it, conſented vnto by the Ieſuits, Garnet, Ouldcorne, Baldwine, winked at by the Pope, who neuer called any of them to account for it, who fled for the ſame fact into Italie. Thus I thinke it is euident, whatſoeuer Bellarmine ſaith, that the Popiſh doctrine aloweth of killing of Kings: let vs ſee yet further ſomewhat more of the impietie of this diuelliſh poſition.

The Proteſtants.

THough ſuch vile and monſtrous poſitions neede no confutations: but as Tertullian ſaith of the mad opinions of the Valentinians (illa tantum demonſtrare deſtruere eſt) it is ſufficient to haue bewrayed them, and laide them open: yet that their groſſe abſurditie, or rather diabolicall iniquitie, may yet be made more manifeſt to all men, we further doe thus impugne them.

1. Sam. c. 26. 10. 11.

The practiſe and precept of Scripture is againſt them; for the practiſe, David, though twice the opportunitie ſerued, when he cut off the lap of Sauls garment, and afterward tooke away the ſpeare, and water pot from him, yet would hee not, neither lay any violent hand himſelfe vpon the Lords anointed, nor yet ſuffer any of his ſeruants, though ſome of them vrged and preſſed him verie much to doe it: but thus he reſolueth, As the Lord liueth, either the Lord ſhall ſmite him, or his day ſhall come to die, or hee ſhall deſcend into battell and periſh: the Lord keepe mee from laying mine hand vpon the Lords anointed.

Apolog. p. 22. Rom. 13. 5.

And concerning the precept of Scripture: that place is ſelected by our Royall Apologiſt, whereunto our reformed Church ſubſcribe, where the Apoſtle willeth all men, to be ſubiect to the higher powers for conſcience ſake: if conſcience of ſubiection muſt be made, much more ſhould conſcience keepe them from attempting any thing againſt the life and ſafetie of Kings.

Tertullian ſaith, Chriſtianus nullius eſt hoſtis, nedum imperatoris quem ſciens à Deo conſtitui, &c. A Chriſtian is enemie to none, much leſſe to the Emperour, whom knowing to be appointed of God, he muſt of neceſſitie, loue him, reuerence, honour him, ſaluum velit, wiſh his health and ſafetie, &c. but hee is farre from louing the King, and wiſhing his health, that practiſeth his deſtruction. Iuſtine Martyr alſo of the Greeke Church, thus profeſſeth vnto the Emperour Antoninus Pius: Wee are helpers vnto peace more than other men beſide, becauſe wee teach, that no malefactor, &c. (lier in waite, &c.) can bee hid before God: They then which lie in waite to aſſault the life of Kings, are hinderers of publike peace, and ſuch cannot eſcape Gods puniſhment. Lib. ad Scapul. Apolog. 2. Ἐπίβουλον.

Their owne ancient Synodes of Spaine haue concluded contrarie vnto the late conuenticles in Spaine. Toletan. 4. cap. 47. Siquis regem nece attentârit, &c. anathema, &c. If any attempt the death of the King, let him bee accurſed, Toletan. 6. cap. 18. No man ſhall goe about to ſeeke the deſtruction of the King. In their generall Councell of Conſtance, ſeſſ. 15. this propoſition, was condemned as hereticall: that tyrannus poteſt & debet licitè & meritoriè occidi, &c. A tyrant may and ought lawfully and meritoriouſlie be killed by his vaſſall or ſubiect, notwithſtanding his oth made, and not expecting the ſentence or mandate of any iudge whatſoeuer, &c.

Conſidering then, that this Iudas doctrine of killing Kings is ſo prodigious, that it hath miſliked the Papiſts of former times, and it being ſo dangerous to States, who can miſlike, or rather not commend the care of Chriſtian and Proteſtant Kings, in prouiding againſt ſuch monſters by wiſe and iuſt lawes: like as a law was made by the Emperour Frederike, that if a Biſhop were found to attempt any thing againſt the publike quiet, centum millibus ab ciuitate vitam agat, quam conturbauit: He ſhould liue an hundred miles off from that countrey which he had diſturbed, &c. And it were to be wiſhed, that all ſuch diſturbers of the peace and quiet of this our nation, were ſent not onely an hundred, but a thouſand miles off. Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 14.

THE FOVRTH PART WHETHER IT BE NOT LAWfull for ſubiects to take the oath of alleageance, and thereby obliege themſelues to the faithfull performance of euerie part and article thereof.

The Papiſts.

Whereas after the horrible and diuelliſh Gunpowder treaſon, whereby certaine trayterous Papiſts intended to haue blowne vp the Parliament houſe, when the King, Queene, Prince, Lords ſpirituall and temporall, and the Commons ſhould haue been there aſſembled; which ſhould haue been anno 1605. vpon the 5. of Nouember, if the Lord in his mercie had not preuented it: it pleaſed the whole State, for the further diſcouerie, of ſuch like treacherous affections, to cauſe to bee ſet downe a certaine forme of an oath, called the oath of alleageance, to bee miniſtred vnto all the Kings ſubiects, as is further extant and enacted, anno 3. Iacobi cap. 4. Pope Paulus the 5. by two Breues directed to his Catholikes here in England, did generally prohibit them to take the ſaid oath: the ſpeciall contents whereof, that the groſeneſſe of that Popiſh inhibition may further appeare, it ſhal not be amiſſe here to ſet downe. Error. 61.

1 That the Pope hath no power to depoſe his Maieſtie being the rightfull King of this realme, or to diſpoſe of his Kingdomes, or to authorize any forren prince to inuade or annoy him.

2 That the Pope cannot giue licence to any of the Kings ſubiects to beare armes againſt him, or to offer any violence to his royall Perſon, or State, &c.

3 That notwithſtanding any ſentence of excommunication made by the Pope, euerie ſubiect is to beare faith and true alleageance to his Maieſtie, &c. to defend him to the vttermoſt of their power, and to make knowne to his Maieſtie all treaſons, &c.

4 That the Pope hath no power to diſcharge any ſubiect of their alleageance and obedience, nor to abſolue them of their oath.

5 That euery one is to take this oath willingly, without any equiuocation, or mentall reſeruation.

Notwithſtanding this ſo lawfull and iuſt an oath, the Pope in two ſeuerall Brieues, hath forbidden his deuoted Catholikes to take it. In his firſt Breue after hee had ſet downe the oath at large, he inferreth: That ſuch an oath cannot bee taken without hurting of the Catholike faith, and the ſaluation of your ſoules, ſeeing it containes many things which are flat contrarie to faith and ſaluation: and in his ſecond Breue, hee ſaith, This is our meere, pure and perfect will, being alwaies carefull of your ſaluation, &c. That is, that they ſhould not take the ſaid oath: but the Pope ſheweth not wherein this oath is contrarie to faith or ſaluation, as his Maieſtie obſerueth, he ſaith many things but prooueth nothing: he muſt be beleeued of his word, and his will muſt ſtand for law: his Brieues muſt be taken for oracles.

Bellarmine to helpe out his great maſter, doth here make a ſupplie, in his letter to Blackwell the Archprieſt.

Theodoret lib. 4. cap. 19.

Argum. 1. The very leaſt ſyllable of Gods diuine truth is not to be corrupted: which hee doth illuſtrate by the example of Baſil, who being ſolicited by the Arrian Emperour Valens deputie, not to reſiſt the Emperour for a ſubtiltie of a few points of doctrine, anſwered, It was not to bee endured, that the leaſt ſyllable of Gods word ſhould be corrupted, &c. Apolog. p. 43.

Contra. To this obiection his Maieſtie hath made a full and ſufficient anſwer, which it ſhall be ſufficient to abridge: 1. In the next words of the author, it followeth; imperatoris amicitiam magni ſe pendere, ſed in pietate, that he did make much account of the Emperours friendſhip, but with pietie: Baſiles words then will rather perſwade to take this oath, being not againſt pietie. 2. Baſil was ſolicited to become an Arrian, and to hold fellowſhip with heretikes; but this oath medleth not with any article of the faith, nor is againſt the word of God. This example then is very impertinent: ſee further Apolog. Reg. p. 85. 87.

Argum. 2. This oath is againſt one of the principall heads of our faith, the primacie of the Apoſtolike Sea, which muſt not be impugned: as Gregorie ſaith, lib. 11. epiſt. 24. Let not the reuerence due to the Apoſtolike Sea be troubled by any mans preſumption, for then the ſtate of the members doth remaine entire, when the head of the faith is not bruiſed by any iniurie, Apolog. p. 42.

Præmonit. pag. 9. Apolog. pag. 46. 47.

Contra. The ſumme of his Maieſties anſwere here is this: 1. That this oath of alleageance is not againſt the Popes primacie or eccleſiaſticall power: which the oath of ſupremacie cutteth of made in King Henrie the eights raigne: this oath dealeth onely with temporall and ciuill obedience: in ſo much, as when the lower Houſe had ſo framed the oath, that the Pope had no power to excommunicate the King, his Maieſtie cauſed it in that behalfe to be reformed: ſo that Bellarmine taketh quid pro quo, one thing for another, the oath of ſupremacie for the oath of alleageance. 2. It is no article of the faith, to hold the Pope to be the head of the faith, or vniuerſall Biſhop, no not in Gregorie his opinion, who affirmeth, that whoſoeuer calleth himſelfe vniuerſall Biſhop, is the forerunner of Antichriſt. (Lib. 6. epiſt. 30.) 3. Gregorie in that place writeth to a Biſhop of Sicilie (which was vnder the Sea of Rome) concerning the vſe of the Pall, a thing indifferent: and ſo we impugne not his doctrine, that in ceremonies concerning order, and other indifferent things, the Chriſtian Magiſtrate and the Church muſt be obeyed, or elſe the members muſt needs runne to confuſion. (Apolog. p. 92.) 4. Wee deſire no other thing to bee ſuggeſted to the Pope and his Cardinals then Saint Gregorie deſired Sabinian to ſuggeſt to the Emperor: One thing there is, which I would haue you ſuggeſt ſhortly to your moſt noble Lord, &c. I dread to haue any hand in the blood of any man. (Apolog. p. 94.)

Apolog. p. 42.

Argum. 3. Bellarmine alſo alleageth that ſaying of Leo, writing to the Biſhops of Vienna, to prooue the primacie of the Apoſtolike Sea, which hee ſuppoſeth to bee impugned by this oath of alleageance: Hee is not (ſaith hee) partaker of the diuine myſterie, that dare depart from the ſoliditie of Peter.

Contra. 1. The Pope can neither proue perſonall nor doctrinall ſucceſſion from S. Peter, pag. 64. 2. The Popes are but partial witneſſes in their owne cauſe, they aduance Saint Peters, that they may be aduanced with him, pag. 94. 3. Leo is to rhetoricall in ſetting foorth the dignitie of Saint Peter: hee ſaith in the ſame place; The Lord did take Peter into the fellowſhip of the indiuiſible vnitie: which words are much derogatorie to the diuine Maieſtie, pag. 95. 4. Leo did thus beſtirre himſelfe, becauſe his primacie was impugned at this time; aboue ſixe hundred Biſhops in the Councell of Chalcedon, gaue equal authoritie to the Patriarchal Sea of Conſtantinople, pag. 96. 5. Yet Leo that gaue ſo much to Peter, tooke nothing from Cæſar, but gaue him both his titles and due, giuing the power of calling a Councell to the Emperour: as may appeare, epiſt. 9. 17. Theodoſio, epiſt. 16. flauian. (Apolog. pag. 95. 97.) 6. It is denied, that the oath of alleageance impugneth the primacie of the Pope, vnleſſe his primacie conſiſt, in depoſing of Kings, and diſſoluing of ſubiects oathes, and authoriſing them to rebell againſt their Soueraigne. 7. Yet if it impugne the vſurped primacie of Rome, it ought and might ſafely and lawfully be taken.

The Proteſtants.

We hold it not onely lawfull but conuenient and requiſit, and in a manner neceſſarie that ſubiects ſhould obliege themſelues by their oath of alleageance and fidelitie to their Prince and Soueraigne, that by this meanes the falſe hearts and affections of diſloyal ſubiects may be tried out, and the Prince may haue ſecurity of his life and State.

Argum. 1. Abraham tooke an oath of his ſeruant for his fidelitie about the buſineſſe of his ſonnes marriage, Geneſ. 24. the poore Egyptian tooke an oath of Dauid for the ſecuritie of his life: 1. Sam. 30. 15. much more may the King take an oath of his ſubiects, if the ſeruant may ſweare to his maſter, and if in ſome caſes a priuat man may require an oath for his life.

2. Sam. 5. 3.

Argum. 2. Dauid, when hee was receiued of all Iſrael for their King, made a couenant with them before the Lord: 2. Sam. 5. 3. that is, in the preſence of the Arke, calling God to witneſſe: as the King bindeth himſelfe at his Coronation by a ſolemne oath to his people, ſo the ſubiects alſo ought to bind themſelues by their oath of alleageance to the King. So Iehoiada when hee brought foorth Ioas the young King: hee tooke an oath of the people (for their obedience) and made a couenant with them: it is therefore agreeable to the word of God for (2. King. 11. 4.)

Kings and Princes to enquire an oath of their ſubiects for their obedience.

1 If the Imperiall lawes, which did bind both the Latine and Greeke Commonwealth allow an oath to bee taken in ſmaller matters: as pupillus poteſt tutori deferre iuramentum: the Ward may put his Gardian to his oath: Cod. l. 4. tit. 1. leg. 5. reus tenetur iurare vel ſoluere: hee that is endebted muſt take his oath, or pay the debt, ibid. leg. 12. an oath alſo is allowed, in actione depoſito, in the caſe, where a thing is committed to ones truſt, leg. 10. If in theſe caſes an oath may bee taken of priuate men by priuate men, much more may the Prince require it of his ſubiects.

2 Tertullian, though hee allow not that oath which was made, Per genios Imperatoris, by the ſpirits, which they imagined to attend vpon the Emperours: yet hee ſaith, Iuramus per ſalutem eorum, quæ eſt auguſtior omnibus genijs: Wee ſweare by their health, which is more worth then then their ſpirits. And againe, Id in eis ſcimus eſſe, quod Deus voluit, & pro magno iuramento habemus: Wee know that to bee in them, which God would, and this wee hold for a great oath, &c. If it bee lawfull in his opinion, to ſweare by the health and life, much more for the health and life of the Prince, and for the preſeruation thereof.

Tertullian apologet.

3 Concil. Toletan. 4. can. 47. which was anno 633. and Toletan. 10. can. 2. about anno 670. mention is made of the oath of fidelitie, which was made for the preſeruation of the King, that no man ſhould violate it. And long after this time, the Emperour vſed to require an oath of fidelitie of all, both Clergie men and others, in effect the verie ſame with this oath of alleageance, now in queſtion, as Radeuicus hath ſet it downe. The oath was this, Ego iuro, quod amodo fidelis ero Domino meo Frederico, &c. I ſweare that I will henceforth bee faithfull to my Lord Fredericke, Emperour of the Romanes againſt all men, as I ought of right to doe vnto the Lord Emperour: I will helpe him to keepe the Crowne of the Empire, and all his honour in Italie, ſpeciallie that Citie (meaning Rome) and what right ſoeuer hee hath therein, &c. I will not take his regalities from him, and if they bee taken away, I will doe my beſt, that hee may recouer and retaine them: neither will I bee of counſell or an agent, to take away life, member or honour: euerie mandate, which hee maketh by himſelfe, or by his letter, or by his Embaſſadour, I will faithfullie obſerue, &c. all theſe things I will obſerue with a good faith without any fraud, &c.

Radeuic. lib. 3. cap. 19.

4 It need not therefore ſeeme ſtrange, that the reformed Church and Kingdome of England hath preſcribed the like oath of fidelitie and alleageance to be miniſtred to all ſubiects, and confirmed the ſame by publike act of Parliament, as hath been ſhewed before.

THE FIFTH PART, THAT THE OATH OF ALLEAGEANCE CANNOT BE DIſſOLUED NOR REUERſED BY THE POPES DIſPENſATION.

The Papiſts.

WHat their opinion is, their practiſe ſheweth: for diuers Romiſh Prieſts hauing taken the ſaid oath of alleageance, and, as they pretended out of their conſcience, yet haue forſworne it againe for obedience to the Popes command.

Error 62. Præmonit. Reg. pag. 93.

Argum. Their vſuall argument to prooue that the Pope hath power to diſpenſe with all kind of vowes and oathes: is out of that place, Matth. 16. Whatſoeuer thou looſeſt in earth, ſhall bee looſed in heauen, &c.

Matth. 16. 19. Præmonit. pag. 19.

Contra. 1. This text is not vnderſtood, of euerie kind of looſing and binding, as of oathes and vowes, but of the binding of ſinnes to the impenitent, and of looſing and releaſing of ſinnes: as their owne interlineary Gloſſe expoundeth, and the Scripture it ſelfe warranteth: Whoſe ſinnes yee remit, &c. 2 Abſolute power is not giuen of binding or looſing, but according to Gods will: as Lyra expounded, Suppoſito debito vſu clauis, &c. The right vſe of the key being ſuppoſed, God approoueth it in heauen, it is not Gods will, that lawfull oathes ſhould be violated, but faithfully kept: he that ſweareth, &c. and changeth not, ſhall dwell in the Lords Tabernacle. 3. This power of binding and looſing is giuen to all Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors, the faithfull Paſtors, Matth. 18. 18. and ſo Hierom confeſſeth, as hee is cited by the ordinarie Gloſſe. 4. Whatſoeuer is ſaid to S. Peter, is not ſaid to the Pope, vnleſſe he would ſhew himſelfe to be the true ſucceſſor of S. Peter, both in doctrine and place, in the probation of both which he faileth.

John 20. 23.

Pſalm. 15. 4.

Matth. 18. 18.

The Proteſtants.

THere is no exemption, priuiledge, profeſſion, power or authoritie, which can free ſubiects from their lawfull oath of fealty and loyalty, alleageance and obedience made vnto their Prince, the Lords annointed.

Argum. 1. Ioſhua and the Congregation made an oath to the Gibeonites not to ſlay them, and they did it ignorantlie, being deceiued by them, as though they had dwelt a farre off, Iudges 9. yet the land was puniſhed many hundred yeeres after, becauſe Saul had broken this oath, and put them to the ſword: 2. Samuel 22. If an oath made to ſtrangers, and that ignorantlie, bindeth not onelie the perſons, that take their oath, but their poſteritie alſo: much more doth an oath made with good deliberation and aduiſement, not to a ſtranger, but to the naturall Prince, and their perſons that doe oblige themſelues thereunto.

Argum. 2. If Ionathan had well nie died for breaking his fathers oath, which hee tooke of the people in a matter of abſtinence, and that ignorantly, for hee heard not when his father charged the people with that oath, 1.Sam.14.27. much more are they treſpaſſers, which wittingly breake an oath, and in a more ſerious and waightier matter, not from abſtaining their mouth from meate, but from abſtaining their hands from attempting any thing againſt the ſafetie of the Prince and State.

Now for further euidence hereof: 1. wee haue the law of Anaſtaſius Emperour of Conſtantinople, that they, qui dignitatem aliquam prætendunt,&c. which pretend any dignitie or profeſſion, ſine aliqua fori præſcriptione indub,&c. obedire compelli, &c. without any preſcription or exception of the court, ſhould be compelled to obey the ordinarie Iudges, both in publike and priuate affaires, &c. if no profeſſion can exempt from the iudgement of the Magiſtrate: then it will follow, that profeſſion of obedience to the Biſhop of Rome is no colour to diſpenſe with the oath of alleageance to the Magiſtrate. Cod.lib.3.tit. 4.cap.7.

2 Auguſtine alloweth of the obedience which Chriſtian ſouldiers performed to Iulian in ciuill matters, to whom they were bound by oath, as all ſouldiers were: When he would haue them (ſaith he) to worſhip idols, and to ſacrifice, they preferred God before him: but when hee ſaid goe fourth to fight, they preſentlie obeied, &c. If their obedience might haue been diſpenſed with, there was cauſe, for that they were vnder an Emperour, which was a profeſſed aduerſarie to the Chriſtian faith. In Pſalmum 124.

3 Some of their owne Councels herein conſent with vs: *Concil.Toletan.10.cap.2. Aquiſgran.can.*12. it was decreed, that they which did violate the oath of fidelitie made for preſeruation of the Kings perſon, &c. ſhould be depriued of all dignitie and honour.

4. Then is it no new or ſtrange thing, that the reformed Church and Kingdome of England hath ſo expreſſely ſet it downe in the oath of alleageance, I doe beleeue, and in my conſcience am reſolued, that neither the Pope, nor any perſon whatſoeuer, hath power to abſolue me of this oath, or any part thereof, &c. Apolog.pag.52. And therefore his Maieſtie truly ſaith, I craue nothing more of my ſubiects in this oath, which was not expreſlie and carefullie commanded then, by the Councels to be obeyed, &c.

A SIXTH PART, THAT IT IS NOT LAWFVLL TO equiuocate either in an oath, or in ſpeech without an oath, that is to ſpeake one thing with the mouth, meaning another.

The Papiſts.

Error.63. LEſt there ſhould bee any miſtaken in this matter, Parſons, the profeſſed proctor and patron of equiuocation, ſhall tell vs the tale for the reſt: he maketh two kind of equiuocations; the one is Mitigat.cap. 12.n.3. verball, as when word or ſpeech hath either naturallie, or by peculiar cuſtome of particular language two or moe ſignifications. Mentall equiuocation he defineth thus: When any ſpeech may haue a double ſenſe, not by any double ſignification or compoſition of the words, but onely by ſome reſeruation of the mind in the ſpeaker, whereby his meaning is made different from that ſenſe, which the words vttered doe beare Mitigat.cap.8. without that reſeruation,&c. As he giueth this inſtance: Theſe words of a Prieſt, (I am no Prieſt) mixed with this reſeruation (to tell it vnto you) or ſuch like, is as true, as if the whole propoſition were vttered with the mouth, thus, I am no Prieſt to tell it vnto you.

So then this is their opinion, that it is lawfull to equiuocate with ſuch mentall reſeruation: but yet they require theſe conditions: 1. that the ſecret reſeruation agree with the mind. 2. It muſt bee vſed, when they haue to deale with an incompetent Iudge, or when any wrong is offered. And ſo conſequently they affirme, that it is lawfull in England for Prieſts to equiuocate euen in their oathes before Proteſtant Magiſtrates and officers, &c. As a Prieſt being conuicted before a Magiſtrate, and asked whether hee were a Prieſt, anſwered, no; meaning, a Prieſt of Appollo; and whether hee had been beyond the ſea, ſaid, no; meaning the Adriatique ſea: ſuch euaſions vſed Maſter Garnet in his Manuſcript. treat.cap.20. excitat. D.Morton encounter. examinations: Nay they yet goe further, that it is not onelie lawfull in their oath to equiuocate, but if they bee required to ſweare without equiuocation, then hee may ſweare he doth not equiuocate by another equiuocation and mentall reſeruation, and thus they allow equiuocation vpon equiuocation.

Now leſt they ſhould ſeeke to haue no ground for this their ſo vnreaſonable opinion: they would thus ſeeme to countenance it by ſome inſtances produced out of Scripture.

*Argum.*1. Many places are vrged, taken from the example of our bleſſed Sauiour: 1. as Ioh.8.15. Parſons Reckoning.pag.683. John 8.15. You iudge after the fleſh, I iudge no man: but ſeeing elſewhere Chriſt ſaith, that al iudgement was committed to the Sonne: here muſt be a mentall reſeruation: as, I iudge not corruptly, as you doe, or, I come not now to iudge.

2 Ioh.8.50. I ſeeke not mine owne glorie: and yet in the former verſe he ſaith, you haue diſhonoured me. Ibid.pag.684. John 8.50.

3 Verſe 51. If any man keepe my word, he ſhall neuer ſee death: here was a mentall reſeruation; for the Iewes vnderſtand Chriſt to ſpeake of temporall death, as appeareth by their anſwere.

Ioh.8.51.ibid.

4 Verſe 54. If I honour my ſelfe, mine honour is nothing worth, &c. yet was it lawfull for our Sauiour to ſeeke his owne glorie: here was then a reſerued ſenſe.

Ioh.8.54.ibid.

5 Verſe 56. Abraham reioyced to ſee my day: which the Iewes vnderſtood of the corporall ſeeing of Abraham, but Chriſt had another meaning.

Ioh.8.56.ibid. pag.685.

6 Ioh.1. verſ.21. Iohn being asked if hee were a Prophet, anſwereth no, and yet hee was a Prophet.

Ioh.1.21. Mitigat.cap.9. ſect.2.p.319. Ibid.pag.368.

7 Iſai.38. The Prophet is bid to tell Hezekiah, Thou ſhalt die, and not liue: and yet hee liued fifteene yeares after: here was then another ſecret ſenſe reſerued.

Iſai.38.1.

Contra. 1. Theſe inſtances are impertinent: for in none of theſe was there any intention to deceiue, as a popiſh prieſt intendeth to couſin the Magiſtrate by equiuocating. 2. Here is no examination vpon oth, or before a Magiſtrate, which is the thing in queſtion. 3 Here is no mentall reſeruation or equiuocating at all: but a verball ſenſe, inferred out of the words or circumſtances of the place, or included in them, though ſometime by the hearers miſtaken: as ſhall appeare in the particular view of the ſeuerall places.

1 As by the precedent part, you iudge after the fleſh, Chriſts meaning is euident, that hee iudgeth not after that manner.

2 I ſeeke not (ſaith Chriſt) mine owne glorie, that is, in ſeeking mine owne reuenge: this ſenſe is gathered out of the words following, there is one that ſeeketh it, and iudgeth.

3 He ſhall not ſee death, that is, eternally. Here the double ſenſe is in the word, which may bee vnderſtood either of temporall, or eternall death: there needeth not any ſecret reſeruation.

4 There are two kinds of ſeeking honour, a iuſt and diuine; an humane and vaine, which Chriſt ſpeaketh of, and according to the Iewes owne vnderſtanding: but their mentall reſeruation is contrarie to his vnderſtanding with whom they equiuocate.

5 Chriſt ſpeaketh of a ſpirituall and propheticall, not temporall ſight, as appeareth by his owne words following, before Abraham was, I am: here then is no doubling or equiuocating at all.

6 Iohn anſwereth according to their meaning, whether he were the Prophet, that is, that great Prophet which was to come: but theſe equiuocators ſpeake not according to the meaning of others.

7 God in ſuch propheticall ſpeeches alwaies includeth a ſecret condition of repentance, which neceſſarily followeth vpon the ſenſe of the words, without any ſuch mentall colluſion: neither muſt men be too bold to patroniſe their infirmities by ſuch diuine and propheticall acts.

Argum. 2. But they triumph in two places of Scripture aboue the reſt, which they thinke make ſtrongly for their mentall equiuocating. The firſt is, Marke 13.32. Of that day and houre knoweth no man, no not the Angels which are in heauen, neither the Sonne himſelfe, ſaue the Father. This place, they ſay, is thus generally expounded by the fathers: Neſciebat ad dicendum alijs: The Sonne is ſaid not to know it, that is, to tell it vnto others: and ſo they make this equiuocating to be very like, I am a Prieſt, but not to tell it vnto thee.

Mark.13.32. Parſons Reckon.p.440.

Contra. For the more full anſwering to this obiection, I will firſt produce the diuers expoſitions of this place: 1. Hilarius expoundeth it of Chriſt as the Sonne of God: the Sonne and the ſpirit: quia non ſunt a ſe, neſciunt a ſe; becauſe they are not of themſelues, of themſelues they know not: but the Father onely is of himſelfe, and therefore knoweth of himſelfe, &c. But in this ſenſe there ſhould be ſome difference in the diuine workes betweene the Father and the Sonne. 2. Ambroſe hath three diuers interpretations: as firſt, Maluit Dominus nimio in diſcipulos amore, &c. videri ignorare, quod nouerat, quam negare: The Lord through his great loue to his Diſciples had rather ſeeme ignorant of that which he knew, then denie them any thing, &c. but Chriſt ſhould then haue ſeemed to diſſemble, if he had affirmed that of himſelfe, which he knew to be otherwiſe. 3 Againe, ſaith he, ſibi nouit, mihi neſcit: he knew the time and houre to himſelfe, but he knoweth it not for me, &c. and moſt of the fathers runne vpon this ſenſe: yet this ſatisfieth not neither: for the Angels alſo are ſaid not to know the houre, as the Sonne is ſaid not to know it: then in this ſenſe it would follow, that the Angels know it to themſelues, but not for vs. 4. Chriſt muſt be vnderſtood to ſpeake as he is the Sonne of man, quia temporum finem, non per naturam hominis, ſed per naturam Dei nouit: becauſe he knew the end of times, not by the nature of man, but by the nature of God, &c. This ſenſe cannot be much miſliked, ſauing that it implieth a contradiction in the ſpeech of Chriſt, that hee knew it, and knew it not; diſtinguiſhing betweene the thing, and the manner: hee being man knew it, but not as hee was man: which had been ſomewhat too curious for the plaine vnderſtanding of the Apoſtles. 5. There is then another ſenſe giuen by Hierome, de die & hora, &c. of that day and houre, he anſwered, that both the Angels, and the Sonne himſelfe were ignorant: the infirmitie of the fleſh did reioyce, that God did dubit it: & tamen menſuram fragilitatis ſuæ excedere non potuit, and yet it could not goe beyond the meaſure of it fragilitie, that he might not in opinion, but in truth be beleeued to be the Sonne of man: he thinketh, that Chriſt was indeed in his humanitie ignorant of the very day and houre. And leſt it might ſeeme ſtrange, that Chriſt ſhould be ſaid to be ignorant of any thing: Caluin giueth this reaſon, it derogateth no more to his diuine nature, then that he was mortall: as his vnion with the di-time nature tooke not away the infirmities of his bodie, no more did it of his ſoule. And againe, this is like, ſaith he, vnto that other place, where Chriſt ſaith, to ſit at my right hand and left hand, is not mine to giue: that is, he was not ſent at that time to diſtribute the honours of the next world: but after the reſurrection, then he ſaid, all power is giuen to me in heauen and earth. It was no more for Chriſt in his manhood to be ignorant of the day of iudgement, then not to haue commiſſion then to diſpoſe of the places and ſeates of iudgement. Bullinger alſo affirmeth the ſame, that Chriſt tooke vpon him humanam ſcientiam & ignorantiam, humane knowledge and ignorance, (though his ignorance was not ſuch as ours) which increaſeth by degrees, as it is ſaid, he increaſed in wiſedome, that he might be like vnto vs in all things, ſinne only excepted.

Math. 20.23.

Luke 2.5.
Heb.2.17.4.15.

Now then for anſwere to their argument: 1. If this laſt ſenſe be receiued, which is the moſt agreeable, then is there no colour at all for equiuocation: for Chriſt did altogether meane as he ſpake, that he knew not the time.

2 If either of the other two ſenſes be followed, that he knew not as man; or he knew it, but not to tell it to others: it maketh not at all for their mentall reſeruation. 1. Chriſts intention and theirs is farre differing: for Chriſt thus ſpeaketh, to ſtay his Diſciples curioſitie: as Chryſoſtome ſaith, repreſſit eos, ne diſcere vellent, quod angeli neſciunt; hee ſtaieth them, that they ſhould not deſire to learne that, which the Angels knew not, &c. And in that he ſaith, nor the Sonne, non ſolum à diſcendo, ſed à querendo prohibuit: he forbiddeth them not onely to learne, but not to enquire, &c. but their intent is to deceiue and beguile. 2. Chriſt here talketh with his Diſciples, as hee thought beſt for their inſtruction: but being examined before Pilate, he plainly anſwered vnto the demaunds of the Gouernour, without any ſuch reſerued ſenſe: as is euident, Ioh. 18.33. Luk. cap. 19. to verſ. 12.

Hom.78.in 24.Matth.

3 This ſenſe which is vnderſtood, Chryſoſtome collecteth out of the words themſelues: That you may vnderſtand (ſaith he) that Chriſt refuſed not by any ignorance to tell the day, aliud ſignum proponit; he propoundeth another ſigne, &c. As in the daies before the flood, &c. ſo ſhall the comming of the Sonne of man be: So then they vnderſtood by the ſpeech of Chriſt, that he knew all things concerning his comming, &c. though he ſo ſpake for ſome reaſon beſt knowne to himſelfe. Here then need no reſeruation of any ſenſe hid from the hearers, when as by the very ſpeech which is vttered they could finde out his meaning.

Chryſoſt. ibid.

Math. 24.38.

Argum. 3. The other place, which they ſo much glorie in, is Ioh. 7.8. Chriſt ſaith, he will not goe vp to the feaſt, and yet he immediatly after went vp, verſ. 10. there muſt then bee ſome ſecret ſenſe reſerued: for otherwiſe Chriſt ſhould be contrarie to himſelfe. To this purpoſe Parſons.

Mitigat. p. 388.

Contra. 1. The true reading in the originall is ουπω, I will not goe vp yet: and ſo readeth the Syriake, I will not goe vp now. This reading followeth Chryſoſtome, Euthymius: if Cyrill and ſome others leaue out that word, and ſo buſie themſelues to ſeeke out ſome other ſecret meaning, the reaſon is, they had not theſe authenticall Greeke copies. 2. Some of their owne writers, as Maldonate, Tolet, Ianſenius, Caietane, Emmanuel Sa, approue the firſt reading as the beſt. 3. If that word were not expreſſed, yet that to be the meaning of Chriſt, that he would not goe vp yet, is gathered out of the former words, my time is not yet come: for otherwiſe it would haue been very ſcandalous vnto his kinred, if he had ſimply denied to goe to the feaſt, which would haue been thought to proceed of contempt: here then is no need of any mentall reſeruation, the ſenſe being euident out of the words.

See D. Mortons encounter, lib. 2. c. 10. pag. 152.

Argum. 4. Maſter Parſons beſide teſtimonies of Scripture, hath this politike reaſon: he putteth this caſe, that a Noble man, that maketh no conſcience to pay that hee borroweth, asketh of one to borrow fiue hundred pounds; the other is loth to ſay him nay, for feare of his diſpleaſure, and more loth to lie for feare of incurring the diuine offence: then hee inferreth thus, Hath the God of nature left no lawfull manner of euaſion by reaſon and force of wit in ſuch an incumbrance? he that hath giuen vnto the Hare and Fox ſharpnes of ſenſe, by leapes, turnings and windings, by going backe the ſame trace they came, to deceiue dogs: and ſo he reſolueth, that there is no way to eſcape but by this mentall equiuocating: as to ſay, I haue not ſo much money, meaning, to lend to you, or that I can ſpare &c.

Mitigat. cap. 9. pag. 403. numer. 80.

Contra. 1. As he hath brought his argument from the Hare and Fox, ſo I will anſwer him with Auguſtins obſeruation touching the fox: Vulpes habere ſolent tales foueas, vt ex vna parte intrent, ex alia exeant, ſed captor vulpium ad vtrumq; foramen rete poſuit, &c. Foxes vſe to haue ſuch burrowes, that they goe in one way, and out another; but the cunning taker of foxes laieth his nets at each hole, &c. So Maſter Parſons fox, that would borrow money, plungeth a man two waies, he will either put him vpon his diſpleaſure, or put him to the lie: now a Chriſtian hath one buſh to ſtop both gaps, and one net to lay at each ſtarting hole, to feare God, and ſpeake the truth from his heart.

In Pſal. 80.

2 As the God of nature hath prouided for Foxes and Hares, in giuing them ſuch naturall ſagacitie: ſo the ſame God of grace hath prouided better for his children, that they ſhould rather feare God in ſpeaking the truth, then man in diſſembling it. Indeed ſuch ſtarting holes are fit for craftie Foxes, and timorous Hares: but the Lords ſheepe embrace ſimplicitie. Of ſuch timorous and leporine natures I may ſay with Tertullian: Noui paſtores eorum in pace leones, in prælio ceruos: I haue knowne their paſtors, in peace like lions, in battell as fearefull Deere.

3 If one cannot in cleanly manner put off ſuch an importune borrower, without either his offence or Gods diſpleaſure, we know the Apoſtles reſolution, It is better to obey God, then man: and it is a greater inconuenience to lie to endanger the ſoule, then to ſpeake the truth, though to the loſſe of the life of the bodie. Auguſtine hath an excellent ſaying: Mentiris vt ne moriaris, & mentiris & moreris, & dum vitas mortem, quam differre potueris, auferre non potueris, incidis in duas, vt prius in anima, post etiam corpore moriaris, &c. Thou wilt tell a lie, leſt thou ſhouldeſt die, and ſo thou both lieſt, and dieſt: while thou eſcapeſt death, which thou maiſt deferre, not take away, thou falleſt into two deaths: thou dieſt firſt in thy ſoule, and after ſhalt die in thy bodie, &c. Theſe and ſuch other are the ſillie ſhifts, and weake arguments, whereby the Iudaſited (rather then Ieſuited) crew doe defend their falſe equiuocating, and mad mentall reſeruation.

In Pſal.5.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold this popiſh trick of equiuocation to be nothing elſe but a cunning colouring of a lie, and that it is both againſt Scripture, againſt the rule of equitie, an hindring of iuſtice, the way vnto periurie, the Diuels oratorie, who is the father of lying, and a principall prop and piller of Antichriſts kingdome.

*Argum.*1. Our firſt reaſon ſhall be taken from the nature of a lie, which is alwaies ioyned with an intention, or purpoſe to deceiue: he ſpeaketh falſely and ſweareth falſely, who by his ſpeech or oth goeth about to deceiue: in ſo much as if one ſpeake an vntruth, thinking it to be a truth, he lieth not, becauſe he had not animum fallendi, a minde to deceiue: ſo the Pſalme ſaith, he that ſweareth to his neighbour and deceiueth not, as their owne tranſlation readeth that place: ſo alſo they reade that place in Marke: ne fraudem feceris, deceiue not: their owne Canons thus define periurie: Periurium eſt nequiter decipere credentem: It is periurie to deceiue leaudly him that giueth credit: Homines falſum iurant, vel cum fallunt, vel falluntur: Men ſweare that is falſe, when they either deceiue, or are deceiued: But equiuocating popiſh prieſts by their mentall reſeruation doe deceiue in their oth, therefore they ſweare falſely: Neither can they here excuſe themſelues, becauſe the reſerued part of their ſpeech is agreeable to their minde: but he that lieth, contra id, quod ſentit, loquitur voluntate fallendi: ſpeaketh contrarie to that which he thinketh, with a minde to deceiue: for in their equiuocating ſpeeches, they both intend to deceiue, and that part of their ſpeech, which is vttered, as I am no Prieſt, is contrarie to their minde and knowledge, howſoeuer the reſerued part is: and Auguſtine ſaith, as it followeth in the ſame place, that words were appointed, not whereby men ſhould one deceiue another, ſed per quæ quiſque in alterius notitiam cogitationes ſuas proferat; but by the which one ſhould bring foorth his thoughts into another mans knowledge. Where then a ſenſe is reſerued in the minde contrarie to that which is vttered, there by our words another knoweth not our thoughts, and therfore ſuch reſeruation cannot be without groſſe lying and diſſembling.

*Argum.*2. Our ſecond argument is from the nature of an oth, which the Apoſtle thus defineth: An oth for confirmation among men is an end of all ſtrife: but if it were lawfull for men, being called vpon their othes, to equiuocate, and keepe part of their meaning to themſelues, nay to conceiue in their minde ſomewhat contrarie to that which they ſpeake, there could neither any truth be confirmed, nor any ſtrife ended: and ſo as Ambroſe ſaith, nulla cauſa ſine cauſa, there ſhould be no cauſe or queſtion without a queſtion.

Heb.6.15.

*Argum.*3. We finde thoſe in Scripture condemned, which haue diſſembled, who might notwithſtanding haue helped the matter with ſuch mentall reſeruation, if it had been lawfull: as when Ananias and Sapphira brought but part of the money, which they had ſold their poſſeſſions for, and ſhe being demanded ſaid they ſold it for ſo much: they might by a ſecret reſeruation haue made it good, meaning for ſo much as they purpoſed to giue in common: yet are they condemned for lying againſt the holy Ghoſt.

Acts 5.8.

Maſter Parſons euaſion here is, that the woman was iuſtly examined by her lawfull ſuperiour, and therefore no clauſe of reſeruation could ſaue her ſpeech from lying, &c.

Mitigat.p.454. n.29.

*Contra.*1. Yet S. Peter was examined by a maid an incompetent iudge, when he denied he knew Chriſt: then belike in this caſe he being vnlawfully demanded by an vnlawfull perſon, might haue equiuocated, ſaying, I know him not, that is, to tell it you, or ſuch like: but theſe trickes Saint Peter thought not of: it was not any ſuch ſhift that could haue excuſed him: hee found no way but by repentance to confeſſe his ſinne.

2 Their owne Aquinas thinketh it vnlawfull to tell a lie, though the Iudge proceed not ſecundum ordinem iuris, according to law: he is not bound hee ſaith in that caſe to anſwere, but by ſome other meanes, as by appeale or ſuch like to eſcape, mendacium dicere non licet, he muſt not in any wiſe tell a lie.

2.2.qu 69.art.1 argum.2.

3 Well then with a competent Iudge, by their owne confeſſion it is not lawfull to equiuocate: what ſay they then to one Iames Standiſh a Ieſuite prieſt, who being asked of the Pope, whether the reſt of the Prieſts were conſenting to the ſetting vp of the Hierarchie in England, anſwered, they were, (whereas indeed they were not) with this reſeruation, as I ſuppoſe. See here, this fellow did equiuocate with a Pope, no incompetent Iudge of theirs.

Quodlibet pag.66.

4 And if it be ſinne to equiuocate with a competent Iudge, then are they too blame ſo to dallie with the Ciuill Magiſtrate, who is their lawfull Iudge.

*Argum.*4. Adde hereunto the practiſe of former times, which haue counted this manner of deceit very odious. Origen is charged in ſome caſes to defend lying, and holdeth it to be profitable for men, ſo that they vſe it warely, tanquam medicamento et condimento, as a medicine, and as ſauce; but he

he is reproued of Hierome for it: that was condemned as an impious act in Arrius, who being compelled by Constantine to ſubſcribe to the acts of the Nicen Councell, had his owne opinion written vnder his left arme, and then laying his hand vpon that place, ſaid, he beleeued as he had written, &c. What did he elſe but equiuocate, reſeruing a ſecret meaning to himſelfe, that he beleeued as he had written in that paper, which hee kept ſecret. The Priſcillianiſts thought it lawfull for them to denie their religion, and to equiuocate, as thoſe which denie themſelues to be popiſh prieſts: againſt whom Auguſtine writeth.

Lib. contra mendac. ad Conſentium.

Argum. 5. This popiſh deuice of mentall reſeruation tendeth to the vtter ouerthrow of iuſtice, and all iudiciall proceedings, it maketh a way to periurie, and bringeth in a confuſion of all things into Church and Common-wealth: for when ſhall any malefactor be diſcouered, any periured perſon detected, any matter by witneſſe proued: if it ſhould be lawfull for one being examined, to finde out an euaſion and ſtarting hole, by a ſecret meaning reſerued to himſelfe, and not expreſſed: for thus a theefe ſhall be no theefe, a murtherer none ſuch: for he may ſay he did not ſteale or kill, with a ſecret meaning, to ſuch or ſuch a purpoſe, whereas he committed both.

Hieron. 1. epiſt. ad Pammach. & Occumen. tom. 3.

Now further, whereas their vſuall ſhift is, that it is not lawfull to equiuocate with a competent Iudge, but with others they may: herein we ſee how well theſe popiſh ſectaries do imitate their forefathers the old Priſcilliane heretikes: for thus they ſaid, it was ſufficient to ſpeake the truth in the heart, and they were bound only to vtter the truth to their neighbours; but true Catholike Chriſtians they hold to be none of their neighbours. The like trick Hierome ſheweth to haue been taken vp by heretikes: they thought they were bound onely to ſpeake the truth to their neighbours, that is, ſuch as were of their owne ſect: by the which they vnderſtand, nos, qui nondum initiati ſumus audire debere mendacium, that we, which are not yet initiate, ought to heare nothing but lies: To this purpoſe Hierome. This fraudulent deuice then and deepe fetch of hypocrites, let vs ſend backe together with the preſent patrones thereof, to the old ſchoole of the heretikes, as not beſeeming any good Chriſtian, nor ſafe for any well ordered Common-wealth.

Apolog. 1. pro Chriſtian. μὴ κατὰ πάντα ἀληθεύειν.

Now to conclude: 1. Iuſtinus Martyr of the Greeke Church ſheweth how farre Chriſtians were in time of perſecution from ſuch equiuocating, whereby they might haue eſcaped: Wee being asked, denie not, becauſe we are not guiltie to our ſelues of any euill, thinking it an impious thing, (not to ſpeake the truth in all things.)

2 Auguſtines iudgement of the Africane Church we haue ſeene before.

3 The iudgement of the reformed Churches is ſeene by the generall conſent of the Church, and kingdome of England, in their act of Parliament, againſt all equiuocating in taking the oth of Allegiance, cited before.

See D. Mortons encounter lib. 1. c. 13. ſect. 1. 3. 4. 5.

4 Many of their owne authors condemne this mentall reſeruation, as Thomas Aquinas, alleaged before, and Sotus: and of their late writers, Sepulueda, Azorius, Maldonate, Emmanuel Sa: whoſe teſtimonies are at large handled, and iuſtified againſt Parſons by a learned writer of our Church: to whoſe treatiſe I referre the Reader, thinking it not neceſſarie to fill vp this volume, with the citing at large of teſtimonies of that nature. And ſo I conclude this point with that ſaying of the woman falſely accuſed of adultery, repeated by Hierome, who being put to great torments, would not betray her innocencie by a falſe accuſation of her ſelfe, but turned her ſelfe vnto Chriſt, thus moſt conſtantly reſoluing: Thou art my witneſſe Lord Ieſus, non ideo me negare nolle ne peream, ſed ideo mentiri nolle, ne peccem: That I therefore will not denie, leſt I ſhould die, but leſt I ſhould ſinne, that therefore I will not lie, &c. This were a better reſolution for theſe equiuocators, if they were innocent: but lying better fitteth their nocent profeſſion. Thus much touching the oth of Allegiance, and the particular queſtions incident thereunto: now I will proceed.

Hieron. ad Innocent. de mulier. ſepties ictâ.

THE SECOND PART OF THE QVESTION, concerning S. Peters patrimonie, whether the Pope may be a temporall Prince.

The Papiſts.

64. Error. Bellarm. lib. 2. cap. 9.

Fox pag. 93.

THey ſay that it is not againſt the word of God, that the Pope ſhould be both a temporall and eccleſiaſticall Prince, and that both the ſwords of ſpirituall and eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction doe belong vnto him: and that he is the right heire of S. Peters patrimonie; to him belongeth as chiefe Lord the Imperiall citie of Rome, the palace of Laterane; Capua alſo and Apulia are his: diſtinct. 9. Conſtantin.

1 Moſes (ſaith the Ieſuite) was both Prieſt and Prince: ſo was Heli 1. Sam. 4. He iudged Iſrael fortie yeeres: ſo were alſo the Macchabees, Iudas, Ionathan, Simon: yea Melchiſedech long before Moſes, was Prieſt and King: Ergo, the Pope is lawfully both chiefe Biſhop, and chiefe Prince alſo, and Lord of that which he now poſſeſſeth, Bellarm. cap. 9.

Heb. 7. 2. 3.

Anſw. Concerning Melchiſedech: who knoweth not, that he being King and Prieſt, was a liuelie figure of our Sauiour Chriſts ſpirituall kingdome and prieſthood? Heb. 7. And as yet the offices of the ſpirituall and temporall gouernment were not diſtinguiſhed: for all the Patriarkes, Abraham, Iſaack, Iacob, and the reſt were ſacrificers, therefore we cannot borrow any examples from them for this matter.

Moſes alſo did offer ſacrifice to God, and was chiefe Iudge both in ſpirituall and temporall affaires vnto the people, vntill ſuch time, as when by Gods commandement, Aaron was choſen to the Prieſthood, vnto whom the charge of ſacrifices and vnto his ſonnes was committed: ſo Moſes remained ſtill Prince of the people, whom Ioſua ſucceeded, and Aaron was inueſted to the Prieſthood, and ſo the offices were diſtinct. This example therefore of Moſes is extraordinarie, and proueth not. Leuit.8.9.

Concerning the time when Ely iudged Iſrael, which was in the daies of the Iudges, we muſt vnderſtand, that the gouernment of Iſrael was very diſſolute, and men were left to themſelues to doe almoſt what themſelues liſted: as Iudg.17. wee reade that Micah ſet vp an Idoll in his houſe, and the reaſon is rendered, there was no King in Iſrael, but euery man did that which ſeemed good in his owne eyes. Likewiſe the Tribe of Dan offered violence to Micah, and robbed him, Iudg.18. For there was no King in Iſrael, verſ.1. The Leuites wife was moſt ſhamefully abuſed by the Gibeonites: Judg.19.1.21.25.
for there was no King, chap.19.1. The men of Beniamin tooke them wiues by force: for they had no King, chap.21.25. So you ſee that both religion was corrupted, and the manners of the people grew to be outragious; and all becauſe there was no perfect diſtinct gouernment, there was no King in Iſrael.

In Ely his time, the word of God was precious, 1.Sam.3.1. Great was the ignorance of the whole 1.Sam.3.1. land: the licentiouſneſſe alſo of his ſonnes was a great offence to all Iſrael, and brought a great decay of godlineſſe with it, 1.Sam.2.17.23. Yea they cauſed the people through their euill example to ſinne, 1.Sam.2.17.
verſ.24. Wherefore Ely his houſe was iudged of God for his remiſneſſe in gouernment, in not correcting his ſonnes, chap.3.13. And hee that cannot rule his owne houſe, how ſhould hee care for the Church, 1.Tim.3.5. It cannot now be proued by the example of Ely, that the ciuill gouernment was annexed to the Prieſthood by the Lords appointment: but it is rather to be aſcribed to the corruption of thoſe times: for hauing no King nor Captaine ouer them, they were driuen of neceſſitie to come to the high Prieſt, vnto whom the iudgement of many matters was committed by the law of God, Deut.17.8. Leuit. 13.2. But the Prieſthood, and the ciuill Magiſtracie were two diſtinct things al- Deut.17.8. waies from the time of the law eſtabliſhed. Leuit.13.2.

It is then no good argument, which is drawne from the practiſe & example of thoſe corrupt times: And yet we ſay not, that theſe offices were ſo diſtinct, but that the Lord might raiſe vp ſome extraordinarie Prophet, as he did Samuel, who to reſtore iuſtice and religion decayed, might for a time both iudge the people, and offer ſacrifice, as we ſee he did.

As for the examples of the Macchabees, they moue vs not, you muſt bring better Scripture for your purpoſe: the authoritie of thoſe bookes binde vs not: and againe, wee ſee they did contrarie to the law, in taking vpon them both offices: for the Prieſthood was annexed to the poſteritie of Aaron for euer, Num. 3.10. and the Scepter was not to depart from Iuda till Chriſt came, Gen. 49.10. As the Numb.3.10.
Lord alſo had promiſed to Dauid, that the Kingdome ſhould remaine in his ſeed, 2.Chro.22.3. Gen.49.10. 2.Chro.22.3.

Laſtly, Gelaſius that famous Biſhop of Rome ſhall anſwere the Ieſuites argument, whoſe authoritie I truſt hee will not denie. Thus he writeth, Tom. Anathematis. Ante aduentum Chriſti quidam figuraliter adhuc in carnalibus actibus conſtituti, &c. Before the comming of Chriſt, ſome figuratiuely in carnall and earthly acts, were both Kings and Prieſts: ſuch an one was Milchiſedech: which the diuell alſo imitated in his members, ſo that the Pagane Emperours would alſo be called chiefe Prieſts: But after that Chriſt was come, both the true King and Prieſt, neither was the Emperour any more called by the Prieſts name, neither did the Prieſt chalenge the Kingly ſtate. So Chriſt hath diſtinguiſhed both offices by their proper acts, and dignities, that both Chriſtian Emperours, as touching eternall life ſhould neede the helpe of Prieſts, and they in temporall things ſhould vſe the benefit of Imperiall decrees.

Thus then according to this fathers ſentence, it followeth not, that becauſe before Chriſts comming, both powers were vnited in ſome figuratiuely, therefore it ſhould be ſo now: nay he ſaith, that ſince Chriſts comming, this confuſion of the Prieſtly and Kingly office, is in Sathans members onely to be found: an hard ſentence againſt the Biſhop of Rome, by a former Biſhop of Rome, which maketh him, chalenging the vſe of both ſwords, no better then a limme of the diuell.

Argum.2. Conſtantine the Great gaue vnto the Pope the chiefe gouernment of the Citie of Rome, and other Lordſhips in Italy, yea the ſoueraigntie ouer the Weſt parts: why then is it not lawfull for him to enioy his gift? Bellarm.lib 5.cap.9.

Anſw. Firſt, the donation of Conſtantine ſeemeth to bee forged: for if Conſtantine reſigned to Silueſter the politicall dominion of the Weſt parts, how could hee then haue diſtributed his Empire amongſt his ſonnes, as the Weſt part to one, the Eaſt to the ſecond, the middle part to the third? Againe, the Donation ſaith, that Conſtantino was baptiſed at Rome by Silueſter before the battaile againſt Maxentius, and that then the patrimonie was giuen: but it is certaine by ſtories that he was baptiſed at Nicomedia, by Euſebius Biſhop there, in the 31. yeere of his raigne: wherefore it ſeemeth to bee a forged and deuiſed thing, plur. apud. Fox pag.105.

2 Aeneas Siluius ſaith, that Mathilda, a noble Dutches in Italie, gaue thoſe lands to the Pope, Fox.proteſta. ad Angl.

which are called S. Peters patrimonie: how then can it be true, that they were giuen by Conſtantine? Thirdly, the Popiſh Doctors and Canoniſts confeſſe, that Conſtantines grant is not ſo much to bee counted a donation, as a reſtitution of that which tyrannouſly was taken from him: but hee hath his power ſpirituall and temporall immediatly from Chriſt. You ſee then that they themſelues make no great reckoning of Conſtantines donation. Antoni. ſumma, maior. 3. part.

Agathon Biſhop of Rome, long after Conſtantines time the Great, thus writeth to Conſtantine another Emperour of that name, Hanc Romanam vrbem ſeruilem veſtri Chriſtianiſſimi Imperij: This Romane citie ſeruile or ſubiect to your moſt Chriſtian Empire, &c. Ergo, it was not exempted from ſubiection to the Empire, as Conſtantines forged donation granteth.

Fox pag. 791. 793.

Yet if Conſtantinus that good Emperour had beene ſo minded, to haue beſtowed the imperiall dignitie vpon the Biſhop of Rome; there remaineth a great queſtion, whether he ought to haue accepted of it or not; nay he ſhould haue refuſed it: for the temporall ſword belongeth not to ſpirituall gouernours: At the leaſt it had beene a charitable part, not to haue ſuffered the Emperour to diſinherite his owne ſonnes, for to enrich the Sea of Rome; as Auguſtine very well ſaith, Qui vult, exhæredato filio, eccleſiam hæredem facere, quærat alterum, qui ſuſcipiat, non Auguſtinum, immo Deo propitio nullum inueniat. Hee that would make the Church his heire, and defeat his owne children, let him ſeeke ſome body elſe, to accept of his gift: ſurely Auguſtine will not, nor I truſt any honeſt man beſide.

Ad Frat. in eremo. ſer. 52.

Our Doway men doe here alſo helpe at a dead lift: they giue this note Iudith 4. verſ. 5. that Eliakim the Prieſt did manage the temporall affaires of the Common-wealth at this time, by conſent and commiſſion of King Manaſſes, as is moſt probable, thoſe things happening ſhortly after his repentance.

Contra. 1. We except to the authoritie of this booke, being no part of the canonicall Scripture. 2. The booke being admitted, they doe make to bold, in cutting off this whole ſentence: they did as the high Prieſt Eliakim had commanded: and all the auncients of the people at Ieruſalem. This clauſe is omitted, which ſheweth, that it was not the command of Eliakim onely, but of all the whole Senate. 3. Eliakim could not be in Manaſſes time: for, chap. 5. 18. it is ſaid, the temple had beene caſt downe and deſtroyed, which was not done in Manaſſes time, nor many yeeres after, vntill the captiuitie of Babylon. 4. It is well they grant, that the high Prieſt had this commiſſion from the King: the Pope then muſt ſhew his commiſſion from temporall Princes for his princely dominion. And if it be by commiſſion and grant from them, he hath it not by inheritance, and they which gaue it him, may alſo take it away.

The Proteſtants.

2. Chron. 19. 11

FIrſt, we willingly grant, that the Church may enioy thoſe temporall poſſeſſions, which haue beene of olde granted vnto it for the better maintenance thereof, ſo they bee not abuſed to riot and exceſſe: as the Leuites beſide their tithes, had their cities and fields. Numb. 35. Secondly, the iudgement of Eccleſiaſticall matters, doth of right appertaine to the Church, as Amariah the Prieſt was the chiefe in all matters of the Lord, 2. Chron. 19. 11. Thirdly, we doe not vtterly exclude ſpirituall perſons from temporall cauſes; but as the ciuill Magiſtrate hath his intereſt in ordaining of Eccleſiaſticall lawes, ſo ſpirituall perſons ought not to be ſtrangers from the ciuill ſtate; being meete men for their knowledge and conſcience to be conſulted withall, and conferred with, and to bee ioyned in Councell with the Magiſtrate in difficult matters: as wee reade, Deut. 17. 8. How the high Prieſt, and chiefe Iudge, did ioyne in mutuall helpe and aſſiſtance. But that any ſpirituall perſon may bee a temporall Prince, and haue the chiefe gouernment of both ſtates, and handle both ſwords, wee ſay it is contrarie to the word of God: for in theſe three points ſtandeth chiefly the office of the Prince; In making and ordaining ciuill lawes, in hauing power of life and death, in proclaiming of warre, and waging of battaile: with none of theſe ought Eccleſiaſticall perſons to deale, as we will now ſhew in order.

Argum. 1. Concerning the making of ciuill lawes and ſtatutes, though the Eccleſiaſticall body, according to the ancient cuſtome of this land, haue their ſuffrage and voyce, and doe giue conſent: yet the chiefe ſtroke, in allowing, confirming, and enacting of ſuch lawes is in the Prince, and cannot agree or be matched with any ſpirituall office.

2. Cor. 2. 16.

Saint Paul ſaith, Who is ſufficient for theſe things? that is, for the worke of the Miniſterie, 2. Cor. 2. 16. If therefore ſpirituall perſons ſuffice not to execute to the full, their ſpirituall charge, though they ſhould bend all their ſtudie and care that way, much more inſufficient ſhall they be, if they bee entangled in temporall affaires, for the well guiding and ordering whereof a whole man likewiſe is ſcarce ſufficient.

2. Tim. 2, 4.

Againe (ſaith he) No man that warreth, entangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life, 2. Tim. 2. 4. By affaires ſecular here are not onely vnderſtoode (as the Ieſuite imagineth) merchandiſe, traffick, buying, ſelling, and ſuch like, but the care and charge alſo of ciuill gouernment, of making lawes and orders for the ciuill ſtate, which muſt needes be a great let to the ſpirituall buſineſſe, and require greater ſtudie and labour, then the other baſer works which are named. To this Auguſtine agreeth; Quo iure (ſaith he) defendis villas, &c? Vnde quiſque poſſidet quod habet? Iure humano, iure Imperatorum: quare? quia ipſa iura humana per imperatores & reges ſeculi Deus diſtribuit generi humano. tract. in Iohann. 6. By what law doeſt thou defend thy poſſeſſions? by the law of man, the law of the Emperours: for theſe humane lawes, by Gods ordinance are giuen vnto men by the Emperours and Kings of the world.

world, &c. See then, ciuill lawes, and humane conſtitutions are giuen and made, not by the Pope, Prieſt, or any other Prelate, but onely by Kings and Princes, and the ciuill magiſtrates.

So alſo ſaith the Ciuill law, Cod. lib 1. tit. 20. leg. 2. Imperatori ſoli leges condere conceſſum eſt: It is onely lawfull for the Emperour to make lawes: Iuſtinian. Likewiſe their owne Canons affirme the ſame, decret. Gregor. lib. 4. tit. 17. cap. 7. Alexand. 3. ad Regem pertinet non ad Eccleſiam de talibus poſſeſſionibus iudicare: It belongeth to the King not to the Church to iudge of ſuch poſſeſſions.

Argum. 2. It were a monſtrous and an vnnaturall thing, that any Eccleſiaſticall gouernour, ſhould haue power of life and death: for hee hath no better right to the ciuill ſword, then the Prince to the Eccleſiaſticall ſword: and if it bee not lawfull for the ciuill Magiſtrate to excommunicate, which is as the ſpirituall ſword, and the greateſt cenſure of the Church; no more is it to bee ſuffered, that by the authoritie or commaundement of any Eccleſiaſticall perſon, any man ſhould bee put to death.

The high Prieſt was not to deale with matters of blood, which touched the life: but the offenders were brought to the gates of the Citie, where the Magiſtrates ſate, Deut. 17. 5. Not to the Temple, Deut.17.5. where the Prieſt miniſtred. Nay, wee ſee, that in the moſt corrupt times of the Iewiſh Commonwealth, namely, when they put our bleſſed Sauiour to death, the Prieſts did not chalenge any ſuch power: It is not lawfull (ſay they) for vs, to put any to death, Ioh. 18. 31. But that power was in the tem- Iohn.18.31. porall Magiſtrate, as Pilate ſaid to Chriſt: Knoweſt thou not, that I haue power to crucifie thee, and power to looſe thee? Ioh. 19. 10. Ergo, the Pope cannot be a temporall Prince, to haue power of life and Iohn.19.10. death. And it is contrarie to your owne Canons: decret. p. 2. cauſ. 23. qu. 8. c. 20. Gregor. Quia Deum timeo, in mortem cuiuſlibet hominis me miſcere formido: becauſe I feare God, I dare not entermeddle with the death of any. Likewiſe cauſ. 33. q. 2. c. 6. Nicholaus, Eccleſia gladium non habet, niſi ſpiritualem; non occidit, ſed viuificat: The Church hath no ſword but the ſpirituall; it killeth not, but giueth life. Now, whereas the examples of Phinehes, that killed the adulterer and adultereſſe; and of Samuel, that hewed Agag in pieces with his owne hands, might be vrged; their owne gloſſe thus anſwereth: Miracula veteris Teſtamenti ſunt admiranda: The miracles of the olde Teſtament are worthie rather of admiration, then fit for our imitation: for many things were permitted then, which are prohibited now, &c. And a little before: Nathan, when he reproued the King, did execute his owne office, hee did not vſurpe the Kings office, he did admoniſh him to repent, hee did not giue ſentence of death againſt him, as an adulterer, &c. Cauſ. 2. qu. 7. cap. 41. gloſſ.

But it will here be anſwered, as Boniface 8. hath decreed, Sext. decretal. lib. 3. tit. 24. c. 3. That a Clergie man hauing temporall iuriſdiction, may without feare of irregularitie, commit the iudgement of death to his Bailiffe & Miniſter, &c. To the which we reply, that this notwithſtanding is contrary to the ancient Canons alleaged before, that a Clergie man ought not to meddle, or intermingle himſelfe with matters of blood: but now he muſt meddle, giuing authoritie to others to doe it. For the authoritie of him that commandeth, is greater, then of the Miniſter.

Argum. 3. If the Pope be a temporall Prince, then he may wage battell, which although the Ieſuite dare not plainely affirme, yet it followeth neceſſarily vpon his aſſertion: for it is lawfull for any temporall Prince to make warre: And it hath beene the common practiſe of Popes and Popiſh Prelates ſo to doe.

There were great and bitter battailes fought betweene Vrbane the ſixth, and the Antipope Clement, in the which on the one ſide there were 5000. ſlaine. Fox pag. 434. col. 2. Henry Spenſer a luſtie young Pag.400.1.30. blood, Biſhop of Norwich, was the Popes Captaine generall in France: where hee ſacked the towne of Grauenidge, and put man, woman, and child to the ſword. p. 446. col. 2. Pag.411.1.60.

So Pope Iulius caſt his keyes into the Riuer Tybris, and tooke himſelfe to his ſword: waged many battels, and at the laſt was encountred withall by Lewes the French King, vpon Eaſter day: where there was of his armie ſlaine, to the number of 16000. But theſe warlike affaires of the Pope miſliked the Papiſts themſelues: for hee was therefore condemned in the Councell of Turone in France, Anno 1510. Fox p. 798. We may ſee how well theſe furious Popes doe follow the rule of Chriſt, who Pag.734.1.40. commanded Peter to put vp his ſword into his ſheath: If it were not lawfull for Peter to ſtrike with the ſword, how is it lawfull for the Popes, that, I am ſure, dare not chalenge more to themſelues, then was lawfull for Peter? Thus wee ſee how abſurd a thing it is, that the Pope ſhould bee a temporall Prince.

Let vs examine antiquitie for this point, Concil. Conſtantin. 5. action, 1. Antimus the Biſhop of Trapezuntium was complained of to the Councell, that he ſhould affirme, Magnitudinem & dignitatem ſacerdotij non ſpiritualem eſſe animarum curam, ſed quendam ciuilem principatum: That the dignitie of the Prieſthood conſiſteth not in the ſpirituall care of ſoules, but in a ciuill kinde of Princedome, &c. Of this iudgement ſeemeth the Biſhop of Rome to bee, which then miſliked the whole generall Councell.

Concil. Toletan. 11. can. 6. His à quibus domini ſacramenta tractanda ſunt, iudicium ſanguinis agitare non licet: They by whom the Sacraments of our Lord ought to be handled, ought not to meddle with the iudgement of blood: Ergo, they can bee no temporall Princes, for to ſuch belongeth the iudgement of death and life.

This truth haue the holy Martyrs ſealed, William Swinderby condemned for Gods truth, I ſay, if the Pope hold men of armes,&c. to venge himſelfe on them that offend him, and giues remiſſion of ſinnes to them that fight, and ſlay them that contrarie him, as men ſaid he did by the Biſhop of Norwich, not putting his ſword into his ſheath, as God commanded Peter, he is Antichriſtus: for he doth contrarie to the commandement of Ieſu, that bad Peter forgiue his brother ſeuentie ſithe ſeuen ſithe,&c. Fox pag. 470.

Pag. 432. 2. 90.

I thinke it not amiſſe in the laſt place to adioyne the ſentence of a Popiſh Biſhop, Ægidius Viterbienſ. vttered in an oration which he made before Iulius the ſecond. The foreſaid warlike Pope in the Councell of Laterane, beginning thus, To the reformation of the Church as many other things, ſo eſpecially the late loſſe of our armie ought to ſtirre vs vp: which I thinke hath fallen out by the diuine prouidence, Quo armis eccleſiæ alienis freti cederemus, vt ad noſtra redeuntes victores euaderemus: noſtra arma ſunt pietas, religio, ſupplicationes, To the end that while we vſe ſtrange and forraine weapons we ſhould giue place, and taking our owne ſhould returne victorers: our proper armour is godlineſſe, religion, prayer: Remember, ſaith he, the warre that Moſes had with Amalech, Videbis populum, armis fidentem, deo charum, vinci ſemper; contrà ſemper vincere precibus ſupplicantem, You ſhall ſee the people euen beloued of God, while they truſt to their weapons, alwaies to bee ouercome: but while they are in their prayers, to be themſelues ouercommers,&c. Thus he is bold to reproue the Pope euen to his noſe (and he doth it without checke) for his warlike humour and diſpoſition.

And indeede herein they doe contrarie to their owne Canons, as diſt. 36. 3. Moſes ad bella non vadit,&c. Moſes goeth not to warre, he fighteth not againſt the enemies: but what doth he? he prayeth; and the people ouercome. Wherefore it is a Biſhops part to pray,&c.

Againe, cauſ. 23. c. 1 Ioann. 8. Terram defendere,&c. To defend the Countrie, to deale with warre, belongeth to the terrene power. Ibid. c. 3. Innocentius, Chriſt being taken of the Iewes, when Peter had ſtriken off ones eare, he forbiddeth him to ſmite; giuing an example to all Biſhops, not to vſe carnall weapons,&c.

Ibid. cap. 19. Pope Nicholas findeth fault with certaine Biſhops, which kept watch and ward vpon the Sea coaſts againſt the Pirates: Militum Chriſti eſt Chriſto ſeruire: It is the part of Chriſts ſouldiers to ſerue Chriſt,&c.

Thus we ſee how vniuſtly the Popes of Rome, and contrarie to their owne Canons, chalenge to be temporall Princes; which their ambition hath much miſliked ſome of their owne writers: as a ſober and graue author of their ſide giueth an inſtance in the Biſhop of Wirceburge, who euer ſince Charles the great, hath borne both the chiefe eccleſiaſticall, and temporall office there; and vpon feſtiuall daies hath the ſword carried before him: and the Biſhops there lie buried, with a naked ſword in the one hand, and a paſtorall ſtaffe in the other. The ſame author ſheweth the iuſt iudgement of God vpon that Sea, how as they gouerned by the ſword contrarie to their calling, ſo diuers of them periſhed by the ſword.

Eſpenc. in 1. ad Tim. p. 269. 2.

I cannot here omit to rehearſe two merrie conceits vttered vpon this occaſion, one by a Countrie fellow, of the Biſhop of Colone, bearing the perſon both of a Biſhop & a Captaine: Velim diſcere,&c. I would faine know, ſaith he, when the diuell ſhall carrie this Captaine to hell, whom you repreſent, whither then the Biſhop ſhall goe? The other by a ſouldier of the Cardinall Ballua, ſent by Lewis the 11. to take muſter of the ſouldiers at Paris: O prudent King, ſaith he, you haue ſent this Cardinall, Biſhop of Ebroike, to muſter your ſouldiers, ſend mee alſo to his dioceſſe to make Prieſts: for I can doe that as well, as he the other,&c. Thus we ſee that this Popiſh ambition was derided euen of the common and ſimple people. And thus I conclude this place with that ſaying of S. Ambroſe: Non conuenit vnum hominem duplicem profeſſionem habere: It is not fit for one man to haue a double profeſſion or calling.

Fulgoſus lib. 6. cap. 2.

Guaguinus lib. 10.

1 At this day the practiſe of the Muſcouites following the Greek Church is, omnes adminiſtrationes ſeculares illis ademptæ ſunt: All ſecular adminiſtrations are taken from their Biſhops.

2 So alſo the Patriarke of Æthiopia hath nothing to doe with the affaires of the Kingdome or temporall adminiſtration, Sed tantum ſpiritualium curam habet: But hath onely the care and charge of ſpirituall things.

4 Touching the donation of Conſtantine, whereby the Pope claimeth to bee a temporall Prince. Laurentius Valla holdeth it as forged, and writ a booke againſt it: ſo doth alſo Melchior Canus, becauſe Euſebius, Socrates, Ruffinus, and other Eccleſiaſticall Hiſtorians, which ſet forth the geſts of Conſtantine, make no mention of it, but deliuer the contrarie rather, that he deuided his whole Kingdome among his three ſonnes, Vt Italia vni eorum tota contigerit, That all Italie muſt needes fall to one of them. Æneas Syluius, who was alſo afterward Pope, called Pius 2. did hold it to be a baſtardly writing, as Balbus confeſſeth.

THE NINTH QVESTION, OF THE PREROGATIUES OF THE POPE.

BEſide theſe priuiledges and immunities of the Sea of Rome, which hitherto we haue ſpoken of both in ſpirituall and temporall matters, there are other prerogatiues, which haue been in times paſt giuen to the Biſhops of Rome, moſt blaſphemous and wicked, which the Papiſts of this age are aſhamed of, and therefore paſſe them ouer with ſilence: for Bellarmine ſaith nothing of them: Wee will therefore ſpare our labour in confuting of them, they are ſo groſſe and abſurd, but onely bring them foorth, that the godly reader may vnderſtand the abomination of the whore of Babylon.

There are three monſtrous and ſhamefull prerogatiues, which the Canoniſts aſcribed to the Pope in times paſt: and they are theſe; his power diſpenſatiue, his power exemptiue, his power tranſcendent, ſo we will call them at this time.

1 His prerogatiue in diſpenſing was wonderfull: it would offend a Chriſtian eare, to heare what his groſſe Canoniſts are nothing aſhamed to ſay, Papa poteſt diſpenſare contra ius diuinum: The Pope may diſpence againſt the law of God, contra ius natura, againſt the law of nature: contra Apoſtolum, againſt the Apoſtle, contra nouum teſtamentum, againſt the new Teſtament; Nay, Papa poteſt diſpenſare de omnibus præceptis veteris & noui teſtamenti: The Pope may diſpence with all the Commandements both of the old and new law. What intollerable blaſphemies are heere? The practiſes alſo of Popes are agreeable hereunto: for did not the Court of Rome diſpence with King Henrie the eights mariage with his brothers wife? but that vngodly diſpenſation at the laſt was ouerthrowne: and it was well concluded by act of Parliament, anno 1533. That no man had authoritie to diſpence with Gods lawes.

Iuel.pag 59. Defenſ.Apol. Fox.pag.785.

Symmachus Biſhop of Rome hereunto agreeth, concluding thus: Roman. ſynod.6. Non licet Imperatori vel cuipiam pietatem cuſtodienti aliquid contra mandata diuina præſumere, nec quicquam quod Euangelicis propheticiſque & Apoſtolicis obuiat, agere. It is not lawfull for the Emperour, or any other that holdeth the true religion, to preſume any thing againſt Gods commandements, or to doe that, which doth contrarie the writings of the Prophets or Apoſtles.

Likewiſe Fabiane: He that feareth God will not attempt any thing againſt the Goſpell, Apoſtles, or Prophets, cauſ.11. quæſt.3.cap.95.

Adde the iudgement of Biſhop Latimer holy Martyr: If it bee of God, Quis poteſt diſſoluere, niſi qui videbitur deo repugnare? Who can diſſolue it, vnleſſe he will ſeeme to reſiſt God? Fox pag. 1750.col.1.

Pag.1690.1.10.

2 Concerning his power exemptiue: the Pope (ſay they) is not bound to any law: No man is to iudge or accuſe him of any crime, either of adulterie, murther, ſimony, or ſuch like. If he fall into adulterie, or homicide, he cannot be accuſed; but rather excuſed, by the murthers of Sampſon, thefts of the Hebrewes, the adulterie of Iacob: As Oziah was ſtricken for putting his hand to the Arke inclining, no more muſt ſubiects rebuke their Prelates going awrie: by the inclination of the Arke, the fall of Prelates is vnderſtood. This generally is the opinion of the Canoniſts: but ſome other of them do hold the contrarie, that it is lawfull, euen for an inferiour Prieſt to rebuke the Pope, *Rhemiſt. Annot. in 2. Galath. ſect.*8. Wherefore, ſeeing they confute themſelues, they need not any other refutation.

54.Error. Fox pag.785. artic.188.

Fox pag.788. artic.130.

In former times you ſhall find, that the Popes doings haue been called in queſtion: When Bonifacius 1. was choſen Pope, and one Eulalius by his confederates was ſet vp againſt him, Valentinianus and Honorius the Emperours, the better to haue their right and title examined, commanded, vt ambo exirent ciuitate, that both of them ſhould voide the citie. Afterward Symmachus and Laurentius contended about the Popedome, the Senators made relation to K. Theodoricus, deſiring him Vt viſitationem daret ſedi Apoſtolicæ: tunc rex dedit Albinæ ciuitatis Epiſcopum, to ſend a viſitation to the Apoſtolike Sea: and the King ſent the Biſhop of Albin, as viſitor thither, &c. By thoſe and ſuch other examples it appeareth, that the Biſhops of Rome in times paſt haue not been without checke and controlement.

3 Concerning the third power, which we call Tranſcendent: one ſaith, that, Non minor honor Papæ debetur, quàm Angelis: That there is no leſſe honour due to the Pope, then to Angels. Another ſaith, Papatus eſt ſumma virtus creata, The Popedome is the higheſt power that was created of God, aboue Angels, or Archangels. Againe, thoſe words of the Pſalme, Thou haſt put all things vnder his feete, as ſheepe and oxen, fowles of the aire, fiſhes of the ſea: they thus blaſphemouſlie applie to the Pope; by ſheepe and oxen, vnderſtanding men liuing vpon earth; by the fowles of the aire, the Angels in heauen, whom they ſay, the Pope may command; by the fiſhes, the ſoules in purgatorie; Ouer all theſe the Pope (ſay they) hath abſolute power, who may, if it pleaſe him, releaſe all purgatorie at once. What horrible blaſphemies are here; Yet our Rhemiſts and other Ieſuites are ſomewhat more modeſt, which confeſſe that the Pope is but Chriſts Vicar in the regiment of that part which is on the earth;

Annot,1.Epheſ.ſect.5. Seeing then they confute themſelues, wee will not further trauell herein, but proceed.

Zozimus decret.Contra ſtatuta patrum condere aliquid, vel mutare, nec huius quidem ſedis poteſt authoritas: To make or change any thing againſt the decrees of the fathers, not this ſeate hath authoritie: Ergo, the Pope is not higher then Angels, being inferiour vnto men his predeceſſors.

The like iudgement the ancient Biſhops of Rome were of, that it was not lawfull to depart from the decrees of their predeceſſors: Diſt.11.cap.3. Iulius calleth it, Satis indignum, a very vnworthie thing ſo to doe. Nicholaus: Ridiculum & abominabile dedecus: A ridiculous and abominable ſhame, diſtinct,12.5. Damaſus ſaith, That the violaters of the Canons, blaſphemi ſunt in ſpiritum, do commit blaſphemy againſt the ſpirit: cauſ.25.quaſt.1.cap.5.Gregor.Euerſor, non conſtructor, He is a deſtroyer, not a builder, cauſ.25.quaſt.2.cap.4. Iulius calleth it preſumption, ibid.cap.11. And leſt that other might ſeeme to be tied by theſe Canons to the obſeruation of the ancient decrees, and the Pope to be exempted: Pelagius ſaith peremptorily, Ne pontifex ab his diſcedendi licentiam, &c. That not the Pope, though he would, ſhould be ſuffered to depart from the ſtatutes of his predeceſſors, ibid,c.21. Now then from hence we conclude: firſt, that ſeeing the Pope hath no power to change the former decrees, much leſſe can he diſpenſe againſt the word of God. Secondly, ſeeing he muſt obſerue the rules of his predeceſſors, he is not exempted from all iudgement. Thirdly, ſeeing that he is inferiour to the ancient Biſhops, in that he muſt be ruled by their orders, he is much more inferiour to the Angels.

Ex Ioan.Fabro. de religi.Muſcouitar. Damianus a Goes.

The barbarous Muſcouites which follow the Greeke Church are herein more equall: for they allow their Biſhops to vſe no indulgences at all vt nulla fraus fiat omnino conſtitutionibus, that there be no fraud offered to the conſtitutions. The ſame is the practiſe of the Aethiopike Church, though in many other things, very defectiue: their Patriarch nullas indulgentias dat, giueth no indulgences: as Zaga Zabo witneſſeth, a Biſhop of that countrey: In theſe poore ignorant Churches, there is no place for indulgences, or diſpenſations againſt their receiued lawes and conſtitutions, much leſſe againſt the word of God: but proud Rome that boaſteth of knowledge, dare preſumptuouſly arrogate a diſpenſatiue power, and that without limits or bounds. But we approue the confeſſion of Baſil, artic. 10. That no man can licenſe thoſe things which God forbiddeth. So alſo the confeſſion of Auſpurg, artic.5. Neither mens lawes, nor any vowes, are of force, which are againſt the commandement of God, and the euent it ſelfe doth teſtifie, that nature cannot be changed by mans law, &c.

THE TENTH QVESTION, CONCERNING Antichriſt, and whether the Pope be that great aduerſarie vnto Chriſt.

THis queſtion is diuided into many parts. Firſt, whether Antichriſt ſhall be ſome one ſingular man. Secondly, of the time of his comming and continuing. Thirdly, of his name. Fourthly, of what nation or kinred he ſhall come. Fifthly, where his place and ſeate ſhall be. Sixthly, of his doctrine and manners. Seuenthly, of his miracles. Eighthly, of his kingdome and warres. Ninthly, whether the Pope be the very Antichriſt. This then is a moſt famous queſtion, and worthie throughly to bee diſcuſſed, euery point therefore muſt be handled in order.

John 5.43.

THey hold that Antichriſt, whoſe comming is foretold in the Scripture, ſhal be one particular man, not a whole bodie, tyrannie, or kingdome, as the truth is, Bellarm.cap.2.lib.3.

Argum.1. They vrge the words of our Sauiour, Ioh.5.43. I come in my Fathers name, and ye receiue me not, if another come in his owne name, him will ye receiue. Here Chriſt, ſay they, ſpeaketh of another that ſhal come, namely Antichriſt: for here one is oppoſed to one, namely, Antichriſt to Chriſt, not a Kingdome to a Kingdome, or ſect vnto ſect, but one perſon to another, Bellarmine cap.2.lib.3.

1,Cor.3.10.

Anſw.1. The ſaying of our Sauiour is indefinit and conditional, if another come, but propheſies are vttered definitely, as Deut.18.18. The Lord thy God will raiſe vp vnto thee a Prophet like vnto me, &c. Chriſt then here doth not propheſie of any particular man. 2. The word ἄλλος, another, doth not neceſſarily ſignifie a particular man, as 1.Cor.3.10. I haue laid the foundation, another hath builded thereon, but let euery one take heed. Here ἄλλος, another is expounded ἕκαστος, euery one. 3. Our Sauiour ſpeaketh directly to that generation of the Iewes, when as Antichriſt was not to be reuealed. 4. Whereas Bellarmine obiecteth, that this place cannot be vnderſtood of other falſe Prophets, which come not in their owne name, but in the name of God: our anſwer is, that although the falſe prophets pretend the name of God, yet they come in their owne name, as Ierem.28.21. I haue not ſent theſe prophets, yet they come: and if falſe prophets come not in their owne name, and Antichriſt doth, then it would follow, that Antichriſt ſhould be no falſe Prophet. See a further anſwere, error 60. argum.2.

Argum.2. Another proofe is out of 1.Ioh.2.18. the Antichriſt ſhall come, ὁ ἀντίχριστος, the Greeke article, ὁ expreſſeth ſome ſingular notable perſon, Bellarmine ibid.

Anſw. It is falſe. Apocal.13.18.

Anſw. The name here myſtically deſcribed, which ſhall containe 666. in number, for ſo the Greeke letters χ.ξ.ς. do ſignifie being numbred, doth not expreſſe any particular name of one man, but rather of the whole ſocietie and bodie of Antichriſt: for it is ſaid to be the number of the beaſt. Now by the beaſt is vnderſtood the Romane Empire, the name whereof is λατεῖνος, Latinus, which letters doe ariſe in computation to the whole number of 666. And this name Irenæus thinketh to agree beſt to this place. Further, ſeeing the Rhemiſts themſelues by the beaſt doe vnderſtand the vniuerſall companie of the wicked, Reuelation 13. verſe 1. And this is the name or number of the beaſt: it muſt be vnderſtood, by their owne confeſſion, of a companie and congregation, and not of one ſingular perſon.

The Proteſtants.

THat Antichriſt, which is interpreted an aduerſarie, or againſt Chriſt, ſhall not be one man, (as the Papiſts imagine, that the Popes might be diſburdened and diſcharged of this name, who are many) but that it is a whole body, company and ſynagogue, and a ſucceſſion of heretikes, we doe thus prooue it.

1 The myſterie of iniquitie wrought in Pauls time, then was there a way in preparing for Antichriſt, 2.Theſ.2. But it is vnpoſſible for one man to continue from Paules time to the end of the world: Ergo, Antichriſt is not one man, but a ſucceſſion of heretikes.

Argument. Bezæ.
2.Theſ.2.

Firſt Bellarmine anſwereth, that as Chriſt is ſaid to haue come ſince the beginning of the world in his forerunners the Prophets and Patriarches, but yet came not in perſon, till he tooke fleſh: ſo Antichriſt ſtraight after Chriſts aſcenſion began to worke in his forerunners alſo, but ſhal not come in perſon till toward the end of the world, cap.2.reſp.ad,1.argument.Bezæ.

Cont. 1 The compariſon betweene Chriſt, and Antichriſt in this behalfe, is not good: for Chriſt is ſaid to haue come in the Prophets, becauſe vnto them Chriſt did communicate his ſpirit: and therefore Chriſt is ſaid in his ſpirit to haue preached by Noah. 1.Pet.3.19. But Antichriſt being but a mortall man, can not giue of his malignant ſpirit to his forerunners: for this is not farre from the phrenſie of the Manichees, to make Antichriſt the beginning of euill, as Chriſt is the author of good; that as Chriſt the head doth giue influence to his bodie, ſo Antichriſt another head ſhould alſo inſpire his members. Secondly, but if they will make a good compariſon, as Chriſt is the head of his Church, and the Prophets and Apoſtles his Miniſters; ſo the Diuell is the ring-leader of the wicked, and the Antichriſts and falſe Prophets his chiefe worke-men: and in this ſenſe Apocal.13.7. Michael, that is Chriſt, and his Angels are ſaid to fight againſt the Dragon, that is, the diuell and his angels: and as Chriſt ſince the beginning of the world did ſpeake in his ſeruants the Prophets, ſo the diuell alſo from the beginning ceaſed not to worke in his miniſters; and ſo he began to worke the myſterie of iniquitie againſt the Goſpell in the Apoſtles time. But to ſay, that as he which ruled the true Prophets by his ſpirit was incarnate afterward, and came in his owne perſon; ſo he that miſled the falſe prophets, ſhall alſo come in his perſon, were to make Antichriſt a diuell incarnate: for it was the diuell that wrought in heretickes and falſe teachers.

1.Pet.3.19.
Apoc.13.7.

Bellarmine anſwereth againe: if the myſterie of iniquitie began in Pauls time, that is, the kingdome of Antichriſt; and you will needs make Rome the ſeate of Antichriſt: belike S.Paul and S.Peter were the Antichriſts, for there were no Biſhops of Rome beſide at that time.

Anſw. Firſt, that Antichriſt began then to worke euen in Rome, it cannot be denied, ſeeing the Papiſts confeſſe, that Simon Magus firſt broched his hereſie there, and that Peter calleth Rome Babylon. It is not neceſſarie, that the myſterie of iniquitie ſhould ſo ſoone creepe into the very chaire of the Paſtors, and Biſhops: that ſhould come to paſſe in the full reuelation of Antichriſt: It is ſufficient that it wrought cloſely amongſt the falſe Apoſtles: wherefore the Ieſuites obiection concerning Peter and Paul, is ridiculous.

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, that there muſt come a departing or Apoſtaſie and generall falling from the faith: for ſo an apoſtaſie ſignifieth, a reliriquiſhing of the faith, not a departure from the Romane Empire, or Antichriſt himſelfe, as Bellarmine would haue it: ſo the word is vſed by S.Paul elſewhere, 1.Tim.4.1. ſome, ſaith he, ἀποστήσονται ſhall fall away, or play the apoſtataes from the faith: and ſo one of your owne writers expoundeth it, à veritate in errorem deſciſcent; they ſhall fall from the truth into error: Eſpenc. in hunc locum. Common vſe alſo of ſpeech ſo taketh it: Iulian the Emperour is knowne by the name of Apoſtata, for forſaking of the Chriſtian faith: Antiquitie alſo hath ſo vſed the word. Alexander patriarch of Alexandria, thus writeth in his Epiſtle as touching the Arrians: Egreſſi ſunt viri è noſtra parochia, docentes apoſtaſiam, quam rectè quilibet præcurrere ſuſpicetur Antichriſtum: There bee certaine fellowes gone forth out of our precincts, teaching apoſtaſie (that is, corrupting the right faith) which any man would thinke did forerun Antichriſt. Whereas then the Rhemiſts affirme, that moſt of the ancient fathers do ſo vnderſtand Apoſtaſie for a defection from the Empire: it is certaine, that Tertullian, Chryſoſtome, Auguſtine, Primaſius with others doe expound it for a defection from the faith. Fulke annot.5.in 2.Theſ.2. Yea and the Rhemiſts ſo take it, ibid.annot.6.

Now this generall falling away from the faith cannot be accompliſhed in one man, but it ſheweth a whole bodie or companie, whereof Antichriſt is the head, one man of ſinne ſucceeding another by ſucceſſion: and this apoſtaſie cannot bee wrought at one time, but it ſhall come to paſſe in ſeuerall ages: for how is it poſſible, that at once ſuch a generall Apoſtaſie ſhould be? Ergo, Antichriſt ſhall not be one particular man, Argum.Caluini. Neither can the Ieſuite thus ſhift off the argument, to ſay, that this generall Apoſtaſie is but a preparation to the kingdome of Antichriſt, not that he ſhall then bee preſently come: for S. Paul ioyneth both theſe together: There muſt come a departing firſt, that the man of ſinne be diſcloſed, verſ.3. So that this very apoſtaſie and departing ſhall be a diſcloſing and manifeſt declaration of Antichriſt.

Iohn.3.7. Argum.3. Iohn 3.7. The Apoſtles ſaith: Many deceiuers are come into the world, which confeſſe not that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh: the ſame is the deceiuer and the Antichriſt. Marke then, 1.Iohn 2.18. one deceiuer is many deceiuers: one Antichriſt many Antichriſts, 1.Ioh.2.18. Ergo, Antichriſt ſhall not be one man, but many, Argument, Ful. Annot.2.Theſ.2.ſect.8.

De ciuitat. Dei.20.19. Auguſtine ſheweth, how that in his time this place of S. Paul was not expounded of any one man, but of a whole bodie: Nonnulli, non ipſum principem, ſed vniuerſum quodammodo corpus eius, id eſt, ad eum pertinentem hominum multitudinem ſimul cum ipſo ſuo principe hoc loco intelligi Antichriſtum volunt: Some (ſaith he) doe take Antichriſt not for the head alone, but for the whole bodie and multitude together with their prince, &c. And their coniecture is this: becauſe theſe words verſ.7. He which withholdeth, are vnderſtood of the Empire and Emperors of Rome, which were many: ſo the man of ſinne, which is deſcribed as in the perſon of one, may fitly be vnderſtood of a ſucceſſion of many.

Bernard ſaith, 2.*In conuerſion. Paul.ſerm.*1. Iniquè agunt & cæteri contra Chriſtum, multique ſunt noſtris temporibus Antichriſti: There be diuers other that doe wickedly againſt Chriſt, and in our times there be many Antichriſts. Againe, *Cantic.ſerm.*33. Miniſtri ſunt Chriſti, & ſeruiunt Antichriſto, They are the Miniſters of Chriſt, and ſerue Antichriſt, &c. how could Antichriſt be in Bernards daies, diuers hundred yeeres ſince, yea many Antichriſts, if Antichriſt ſhould be one man? So alſo one of your later writers: Bruno thus witneſſeth vpon the 4. of the 1. to Tim. verſ.1. Apoſtolum de Antichriſto inſtruentem, &c. That the Apoſtle giuing inſtruction concerning Antichriſt, doth inſinuate that the members a long time go before the head, &c. but if Antichriſt were one ſingular man, his head and members muſt goe together.

Fox pag.414. l.53. Likewiſe out of your owne Canons: diſtinct.23.cap.1. Nicholaus defineth him to be Antichriſt, that is elected to the Papacie by Symonie. He noteth not any particular Pope, but any whoſoeuer, that ſhould be ſo elected.

Cauſ.16.qu.7.c.3.Greg.7. He that granteth tithes to lay perſons, inter maximos hæreticos, et Antichriſtos non minimus habebitur: ſhal be coũted among the greateſt Heretikes, and not the leaſt among the Antichriſts: Ergo by your owne Canons there is not one onely Antichriſt, but many Antichriſts. Yea, here I will oppoſe the iudgement of the Rhemiſts, who therein are contrarie to themſelues: yet thus they write, annot.7.in 17.Apocal. that the ſeuen heads are ſeuen Kings, or Kingdomes, fiue were then paſt, the ſixth was the ſtate of the Empire then preſent, the ſeuenth ſhould be Antichriſts ſtate, &c. As then they take the ſixth head not for any particular perſon, but for the State of the Emperours, who were many; ſo by their expoſition the ſeuenth head muſt be taken not for a particular perſon, but for a State and Gouernement.

Let vs adde the ſeale of the holy Confeſſors and Martyrs, Iohn Wicliff.articul.36.Eccleſia Romana, ſaith he, eſt ſynagoga Sathanæ: The Church of Rome is the ſynagogue of Sathan. Iohn Huſſe Concil. Conſt. ſeſſ.11. Papa eſt patronus Antichriſti, non ſolum illa ſimplex perſona ſed multitudo Paparum, &c. eſt Antichriſti perſona compoſita monſtroſa: The Pope is the patron of Antichriſt, not any one ſingle perſon, but the multitude of wicked Popes, &c. is the monſtrous compound bodie of Antichriſt. If it ſhould be obiected, that there haue been ſome good Popes ſince the time there aſſigned, namely, from the donation or endowment of the Church: he anſwereth, Non repugnat quod Gregorius & alij Papæ finaliter pœnitebant: Notwithſtanding that Gregorie, and other tolerable Popes might finally repent them.

Concerning the teſtimony of other Churches: we do here willingly confeſſe, that moſt of the ancient fathers, which were ſo farre off from the time of Antichriſts reuealing, doe reconcurre herein, that he ſhould be one ſpeciall man, and that he ſhould raigne 3. yeeres and an halfe: and we further anſwer Apolog.pag.69. with our princely Eccleſiaſtes, that it is no wonder if they miſtake many myſteries in the Apocalypſe, for the booke thereof was ſtill ſealed in their daies, &c. and it is a certaine rule in all darke propheſies, that they are neuer clearely vnderſtood till they be accompliſhed. So the fathers themſelues profeſſe, as Irenæus ſaith, Lib.4.aduerſ. hæreſ.c.43. omnis prophetia priuſquam impleatur, ænigma eſt, &c. euerie propheſie before it is fulfilled is as a riddle, but being fulfilled, it is eaſily expounded, &c. Bellar.lib.3. de Roman. pontif.cap.10. Yea our aduerſaries themſelues here haue put an anſweare into our mouthes: that the fathers would their ſentence to bee no otherwiſe accounted of, then ſuſpicionum & coniecturarum loco, then of ſuſpicions and coniectures.

Yet notwithſtanding the Fathers both of the Eaſt and South Church do tell vs here of many Antichriſts: 1. as Cyril ſaith, at this time (many Antichriſts) ſhall come out of the earth.

πολλοὶ ἀντίχριστοι. Catechiſ.4.

2 Tertullian: Qui Antichriſti interim & ſemper niſi Christo rebelles, who are the Antichriſts in the meane time, and alwaies, but the rebels to Chriſt?

De præſcrip. aduerſ.hæreſ.

3 The Church of England by the pen of our princely Eccleſiaſtes thus confeſſeth: By the whore of Babylon, that rideth vpon the beaſt is meant, a ſeate of an Empire, and a ſucceſſiue number of men ſitting thereupon, and not any one man: for cap.17.18. This woman is expounded to be the great citie, that ruleth ouer the kingdomes of the earth; which cannot ſignifie the onely perſon of one man, but a ſucceſſiue number of men, &c. As alſo by the ſeuen heads, are meant ſeuen Kings, that is, ſeuen formes of gouernment.

Apolog.Regis pag.82.

So the Magdeburge writers of the Centuries affirme, that the Apoſtles teach, that Antichriſt ſhall not be one perſon, Sed integrum regnum per falſos doctores, &c. but a whole raigne or gouernment by falſe teachers.

Centur.1.lib.2. cap.4.fol.435.

4 That place, Iohn 5.43. vrged before by Bellarmine, to prooue Antichriſt to be a particular perſon, if another come in his name, is expounded by Maldonate ſometime his fellow Ieſuite, not of Antichriſt onely, ſed de omnibus falſis prophetis, but of all falſe teachers.

Comment.in Ioan.5.43.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER ANTICHRIST be yet come, and how long he ſhall continue.

The Papiſts.

THe Romiſh Ieſuites doe hold that Antichriſt is not yet come, neither can they tell when hee ſhall come: But this they ſay boldly, that Henoch and Elias, who liue all this while in Paradiſe, ſhall come immediatly before Antichriſt; and that Antichriſt, when he is come, ſhall raigne but three yeeres and an halfe, and then ſhall the world end, *Bellarm.cap.4.lib.3.de pontif. Rhemiſt.*11. *Apocal. ſect.*2.4.

57.Error.

*Argum.*1. The Romane Empire muſt vtterly be deſtroyed and laid waſte before Antichriſt come: as S.Paul ſaith, That which withholdeth muſt firſt bee taken away, 2.Theſ.2.7. that is, the Romane Empire. But the Empire yet remaineth: for the Emperor is knowne by name, and there are alſo princes electors of the Empire: Ergo, Antichriſt is not yet come, *Bellarm.cap.*5.

2.Theſſ.2.7.

Anſw. It is true that the Romane Empire, while it retained and kept the ancient dignitie, maieſtie and power thereof, was an hindrance and let to the tyrannie of Antichriſt; but when it began to decay, then Antichriſt ſet in his foote. Firſt, it was not neceſſarie therefore that the Empire ſhould vtterly be extinguiſhed, but ſo much only taken away, namely, the ancient honour and imperiall maieſtie thereof, as hindred Antichriſt: and ſo we finde, that the Romane Empire was more then halfe decaied, when Antichriſt crept into Rome.

As firſt when Conſtantine the great, *an.*312. left the citie of Rome, and fixed his imperiall ſeate at Conſtantinople, in the Eaſt, the maieſtie of the Empire was much impaired, the Biſhop of Rome taking occaſion by the abſence of the Emperour to rule ouer the Weſt Churches. The next pull from the Empire was betweene the yeere 700. and 800. Conſtantinus 1. Biſhop of Rome firſt offered his feete to be kiſſed of the Emperour Iuſtinian, and moſt inſolently tooke vpon him to excommunicate Philippicus Bardanes Emperour after Iuſtinian, becauſe he could not away with Idolds, anno 715. Gregorie the third likewiſe for the ſame cauſe did excommunicate Leo the Emperour, and tranſlated the cuſtodie of the Church from the Grecians to the French nation, anno 740. Zacharias the firſt tooke vpon him to depoſe and ſet vp Kings: as hee depriued Childericus King of France of his kingdome, and ſet Carolus Martellus in his ſtead, anno 750. Stephanus the ſecond firſt preſumed to bee carried vpon mens ſhoulders: vnto him Pipinus King of France yeelded the exarchate or ſoueraigntie of Rauenna, held his ſtirrop, and led his horſe by the bridle, *an.*752. Afterward Carolus King Charlemaines ſonne, confirmed vnto Adrian 1. the former grant of Pipinus, and beſides gaue vnto him, the Dutchie of Foroiulium, Beneuentum, and Spoletum, anno 796. Leo 3. proclaimed Charles the great Emperour, and ſo ſpoyled the Emperour of the Weſt of the better halfe of his kingdome, anno 800.

From this time foorth the maieſtie and ancient dignitie of the Empire began daily to decreaſe: Iohn 13. made a decree that the Emperour ſhould be crowned of the Pope, anno 964. Otho the Emperour confirmed to Leo the 8. whatſoeuer before granted by Pipinus or Carolus, anno 966. Iohn 14. brought vnder his Papall regiment the kingdome of Poole, anno 973. Steuen the ninth obtained Millaine: Vrbanus the ſecond ſet foote into Spaine, anno 1090. Vnder Innocentius the ſecond the kingdome of Sicilie was made part of S.Peters patrimonie, anno 1140. Eugenius the third ſubdued Norway to the Papall profeſſion, anno 1152. Alexander the third decreed that none ſhould be King of England, vnleſſe he were firſt nominated and called of the Pope, anno 1180. Sub Lucio the third the Armenians ſubmitted themſelues to the Papall iuriſdiction, anno 1185. Vnder Vrbane the third, Liuonia came vnder their yoke, anno 1187. Vnder Innocentius the third, the kingdome of Arragon was made tributarie to the Pope, ann 1216. Vnder Nicolas the thirn, the countrey of Romandiola and Bononia, was brought vnder the Popes ſubiection, anno 1280.

And to put the matter out of all doubt: Bonifacius the 8. did one day ſhew himſelfe in his pontificals, as a Pope; another, in his imperiall robes, as an Emperour by vſurpation, anno 1300. Clemens the 5.made a decree that the Emperour ſhould receiue the name and right of the Empire from the Pope,and the Emperour being dead,till a new elect, the imperiall power to remaine in the Popes hand,anno 1314. Clemens the ſixth crowned Charles the fourth vpon this condition,that he ſhould neither ſtay in Rome,nor in any part of Italie: the ſame Charles to procure the ſucceſſion of the Empire to his Sonne,did morgage to the Prince-Electors the chiefe reuenewes of the Empire, and ſurrendred the free cities, which were neuer ſince redeemed, anno 1350. And thus by degrees was the Empire weakned: and as Antichriſt daily gathered ſtrength, ſo the imperiall dignitie failed,and was empaired.

Apoc.17.8.

Apoc.13.12.

Apoc.13.15.

Secondly,the imperiall power muſt in ſome ſort be reſtored by Antichriſt: for the Pope vſurped the ſame authoritie which the Emperours had,yea greater: for the whore is deſcribed ſitting vpon the beaſt,Apocal.17. which is the Empire: and therefore it is ſaid, verſ.8. The beaſt that was, and is not,and yet is: for the ancient Empire both is, and is not: It is, becauſe the power thereof is tranſlated to the Pope: it is not,that is,not in that kingly manner,as it was in times paſt. Apocal.13.12.The beaſt that roſe out of the earth with two hornes like a lambe,did all that the firſt beaſt could doe before him: that is,the power of the Empire was in the Pope. Thirdly, Apocal.13.15. It is ſaid, that the image of the beaſt remained,and that the other beaſt gaue a ſpirit vnto the image of the beaſt: So is it at this day,the name and image of the Empire remaineth,but the maieſtie and power is gone: And who giueth life to the image but the Pope? he confirmeth and ratifieth the election of the Emperour. Wherfore,this rather is an argument that Antichriſt is alreadie come,becauſe nothing but the image of the beaſt remaineth.

*Argum.*2. Antichriſt ſhall raigne three yeeres and an halfe: but if he were alreadie come,hee muſt needs haue raigned diuers hundred yeeres alreadie: *Bellarm.cap.*8.

Dan.7.27.
Apoc.12.14.

They proue this raigne of Antichriſt for this ſhort ſeaſon, out of thoſe places of Daniel, 7.27. A time,times,and halfe a time: and Apocal.12.14. alſo it is deſcribed by daies 1260.daies: and by moneths, Apoc. 11.2. two and fortie moneths: which all come to one reckoning,and make three yeeres and an halfe.

Anſw. Firſt, the time is alſo ſet downe by the name of three daies and an halfe, Apocal.11.11. How then is it likely, that 1260. daies and three daies and an halfe, ſhould ſignifie the ſame time? And ſeeing the Rhemiſts themſelues, by the thouſand yeeres, Apocal.20.1. doe vnderſtand all the time of the new Teſtament till Antichriſts raigne,and ſo take it for an vncertaine and indefinite number, they cannot in any reaſon ſo ſtrictly expound this account of daies. And as they take the other number indefinitely,ſo diuers of the fathers expound this number of daies; as Beda vnderſtandeth all the time of Chriſtianitie: Rupertus, ſo long as the Church endureth perſecution: Haymo, for all the time from the aſcenſion of Chriſt,till the end of the world.*Fulke annot.*12.*Apoc.*2. Secondly,with much better ſenſe are theſe times applied by our learned and painfull countriman Maſter Fox, to the great perſecution vnder the Emperours,which continued 294.yeeres, which time is myſtically ſignified by 42.moneths,taking euery moneth for a ſabbath of yeeres. And the reſt of the numbers agree hereunto: for 1260. daies make three yeeres and an halfe, that is, moneths 42. and three daies and an halfe make houres 42. So taking euery houre in the daies,and euery moneth in the yeeres for a ſabbath of yeeres,there ariſe 294.yeeres,which was the iuſt time of the perſecution from the death of Iohn Baptiſt, vnto the end of Licinius the tyrant and perſecutor. This account,I ſay,better agreeeth with the truth of the hiſtorie,then their imagined computation. Thirdly,if it ſhould bee taken,as they expound it,for ſo ſhort a time,then very little of the prophecie in the Apocalypſe is yet fulfilled: for the reuelation,for the moſt part, conſiſteth in ſetting downe the reigne and kingdome of Antichriſt with the circumſtances thereof: as of the time of his tyrannizing ouer the Church, chap.11.12. of his marke and miracles,chap.13. of the plagues,which ſhould be powred out vpon the world vnder his kingdome,chap.16. the deſcription of the whore,which is Antichriſt,chap.17. the ouerthrow of Babylon,prophecied of in chap.14.fulfilled and accompliſhed,chap.18.So that if we take our aduerſaries ſtrict expoſition,the whole prophecie of the Reuelation almoſt ſhall be brought within the compaſſe of three yeeres and an halfe, which is not to bee admitted: for ſo, little of the Apocalypſe ſhould be yet fulfilled, ſeeing their preciſe three yeeres and an halfe are not yet come. And againe,it is certaine that the Apocalypſe is a generall prophecie of the ſtate of the Church from Chriſts leauing the earth to his comming againe: and it tooke beginning euen from Iohns time: for things are ſhewed to him ſhortly to be done,chap.1.verſ.1. and the time is at hand,verſ.3. So that we doubt not but the moſt part of that propheticall reuelation is alreadie accompliſhed,as it may appeare in comparing the viſions reuealed in that booke together, and in applying the hiſtories done, to the prophecies there contained.

edit.1610.

See the opiniō of Walter Brute, how he taketh the 42.moneths and 1260 daies for the ſame, containing ſo many yeeres. Fox p.444.2.10

Apoc.1.1.3.

And againe, there is no prophecie beſide this of 42. moneths, which can be applied to the great perſecution in the primitiue Church: wherefore it is not like that the Lord would leaue his Church without ſome comfort,in forewarning them of thoſe great troubles which immediatly enſued. But if theſe prophecies, which are wreſted by the Papiſts, did not foretell of thoſe perſecutions, then are they vtterly forgotten in that booke: which is not like,it being the greateſt triall that euer the Church had.

4 The 1260. daies mentioned, Apocal.12.16. cannot bee taken preciſely for ſo many naturall daies, but wee are to vnderſtand ſo many propheticall daies, that is, a day for a yeere: for this both agreeth to the phraſe of Scripture, and the propheticall cuſtome and practiſe: as Numb.14.34. After the number of fortie daies wherein you ſearched out the land, euen fortie daies, euery day for a yeere ſhall you beare your iniquitie. Likewiſe, Ezec.4.5,6. Thou ſhalt beare the iniquitie of the houſe of Iuda fortie daies, a day for a yeere I haue giuen thee. Alſo the current of time and courſe of hiſtorie approueth the ſame; that 1260. yeeres are determined for Antichriſts raigne vntill his ouerthrow: for whether we begin the account from the yeere 261. when Paulus Samoſatenus reuiued that foule hereſie, in denying Chriſt to be God, and ſo was a forerunner of Antichriſt; adding hereunto 1260. yeeres, wee come to the yeere 1521. when Luther began to impugne the Antichriſtian doctrine: *Sic Balaus in vita Leon.*10. Or whether we count from the yeere 300. when Conſtantine the great left the imperiall citie of Rome to the Popes diſcretion, which made an open way to Antichriſt, adding heere alſo 1260. yeeres, we fall into the yeere 1560. when according to the prophecie, Reuel.11.13. the tenth part of the Antichriſtian citie, as of Abbeyes, Nunries, Monaſteries was deſtroyed, as in England, Scotland, Germanie, and other countries. The Ieſuites literall wreſting then of this number of daies, is not any way to be admitted.

Numb.14.34.

Ezech.4.5.6.

5. We ſay laſtly, that we are not curiouſly to ſearch into times and ſeaſons, which the Lord hath not reuealed: Only this we learne, that the time of affliction being ſet downe by daies and moneths, the faithfull ſhould hereby be comforted, knowing that the time of their trouble is limited of God, and is but ſhort in reſpect of the kingdome of Chriſt.

*Argum.*3. The Lord ſaith, Matth.24. that thoſe daies ſhall be ſhortned, leſt no fleſh ſhould be ſaued. But how can the time be ſhort, if it ſhould laſt ſome hundreds, or a thouſand of yeeres? Bellar. cap.8. Rhemiſt. annot Mat.24. ſect.6.

Math.24.22.

Anſw. Firſt, that place verſ.22. is properly vnderſtood of the calamitie of the Iewes, which if it had continued any longer, the nation of the Iewes had been vtterly deſtroyed. Secondly, yet notwithſtanding the raigne of Antichriſt is ſhort, in reſpect of the eternall kingdome of Chriſt: yea the whole time from his aſcenſion vntill his comming againe, is counted but ſhort. Apocal.22.20. I come quickly: And S. Peter ſaith, That a thouſand yeeres before God is as one day, and one day as a thouſand yeeres. 2.Pet.3.

Apoc.22.20.

2.Pet.3.8.

*Argum.*4. Chriſt preached but three yeeres and an halfe: therefore Antichriſt ſhall be ſuffered to preach no longer.

Anſ. Firſt, yet Chriſt was thirtie yeeres old when he began to preach, and ſhewed himſelfe before, though not ſo openly; as when he was twelue yeere old he diſputed with the Doctors in the Temple: he was alſo acknowledged for the Meſſiah in his natiuitie. If Antichriſt then muſt in this reſpect bee correſpondent to Chriſt, he muſt alſo be knowne to bee thirtie yeeres vpon earth, before hee bee fully manifeſted. Secondly, though Chriſt himſelfe preached no longer, yet hee ſent his Apoſtles, who preached many yeeres after: we doe not therefore oppoſe the perſon of Antichriſt, whom wee denie to be a ſingular man, to Chriſt; but the kingdome of the one to the other. Now by their owne reaſon, it followeth, that becauſe the kingdome of Chriſt endured many yeeres, and yet doth, that therefore Antichriſts kingdome muſt likewiſe.

Other demonſtrations the Ieſuite hath to proue that Antichriſt is not yet come: as, becauſe the Goſpell is not yet preached to all the world, cap.4. Bellarm. Helias and Henoch are not yet come, who are certainly looked for; cap.6. There ſhall bee a moſt grieuous and terrible perſecution vnder Antichriſt, which is not yet paſt, cap.7. But theſe arguments ſhall be anſwered in another place towards the end of this worke, when we come to ſpeake of the appearing of Chriſt to iudgement.

The Proteſtants.

That Antichriſt ſhall raigne but three yeeres and a halfe, wee take it for a meere fable, and a very popiſh dreame: whereas on the contrarie ſide, wee are able to ſhew both that Antichriſt is alreadie come, and hath tyrannized in the world theſe many yeeres.

*Argum.*1. Wee will make it plaine by demonſtration, that Antichriſt hath been in the world many yeeres agoe, by the propheticall places of Scripture. Firſt, it is ſaid, the number of Antichriſt is 666. Apocal.13.18. So, anno 606. or thereabout, Boniface the 3. obtained of Phocas the Emperour to be called vniuerſall Biſhop. Thus Illyricus, Chytraeus.

Apoc.13.18.

And if wee take our account from that time when Pompeius the great tooke the Scepter from the Iewes, according to Iacobs prophecie, that before the Scepter went from Iuda, the Sonne of God ſhould not come, Geneſ.49.10. which fell out in Cicero his Conſulſhip, ſixtie yeeres before Chriſts natiuitie: Then ioyning to this number, 606. we finde Bonifacius in the yeere 666. at which time many ſtrange and prodigious ſights appeared, diuers Sea-monſters were ſeene, and a terrible blazing ſtarre was deſcried. Alſo Gregorie 1. the immediate predeceſſor of this Boniface, doubted not to call him Antichriſt, that tooke vpon him to bee called vniuerſall Biſhop, as this Boniface did. All theſe ſignes did foreſhew, that Antichriſt was euen now borne into the world.

Further, if wee begin at the yeere of the Lord 97. at which time Iohn wrote the Apocalypſe, and counting 666. yeeres, we ſhall come to the time of Pipinus, whom the Pope made King of France, and hee againe much inlarged the iuriſdiction and authoritie of the Pope. And yet more euidently, about the yeere of the Lord 666. the Latine ſeruice was commanded to be vſed in all countries ſubiect to the Sea of Rome, by Pope Vitalianus: and about the ſame time, Conſtantius the Emperour remoued the ancient monuments of the Empire to Conſtantinople, and left the citie to the Popes pleaſure, Fulk.annot.in 13.*Reuel.ſect.*10, Reuel.20.3.

Another propheſie we haue, Reuel.20.3. that after one thouſand yeeres Satan muſt bee let looſe. Euen ſo, a thouſand yeeres after Chriſt, Pope Silueſter a great Coniurer, hauing made a compact with the diuell, obtained the Papacie: and not long after him came in Gregorie the 7. a great Sorcerer alſo and Necromancer: Sic Lutherus.

But becauſe it is not to be thought, that Satan was bound during that great and long perſecution vnder the Romane Emperours, we muſt begin the account of the thouſand yeeres, from the end of the perſecution, which continued 294. yeeres: vnto that adde a thouſand, ſo haue we the yeere of our Lord 1294. about which yeere Boniface the 8. made the ſixth booke of the Decretals, confirmed the orders of Friers, and gaue them great freedomes: with this number agreeth Daniel his 1290. daies, Dan.12.11. Alſo ſomewhat before this time, anno 1260. the orders of Dominicke and Franciſcane Friers began firſt to be ſet vp by Honorius the 3. and Gregorie the 9. And ſo haue we the 1260. daies, which are ſet downe, Apocal. 12.*plura apud Fox.pag.*398.

Argum 2. If Antichriſt ſhould raigne but three yeeres and an halfe, as our aduerſaries teach, and then immediatly that time being expired, the world ſhould end: then it is poſſible to aſſigne the time of our Lord Chriſt his comming to iudgement, ſo ſoone as Antichriſt is reuealed. But the Goſpell ſaith, that of that day and houre knoweth no man, no not the Angels in heauen, Matth.24.36. Yet theſe good fellowes take vpon them to be wiſer then the Angels: for they dare ſet downe the very day of Chriſts comming; which ſhall be, as Bellarmine preſumptuouſly imagineth, iuſt 45. daies after the deſtruction of Antichriſt. And to this purpoſe hee abuſeth that place of Dan.12.11. where mention is made of 1290. daies, that is, as he fondly interpreteth, three yeeres and an halfe, the iuſt time of Antichriſts raigne: But bleſſed is he that commeth (ſaith the Prophet) to 1335.daies: that is, ſaith Bellarmine, to 45. daies after the deſtruction of Antichriſt; and then Chriſt commeth, *cap.*9. What intollerable boldnes and preſumption is this, contrarie to the ſaying of Chriſt, to attempt to declare the very houre of his comming?

Againe, the propheſie of Daniel had no ſuch meaning: for he onely ſpeaketh of the afflictions of the Church, before the comming of Chriſt, as Iohn propheſieth of the troubles that came after. Daniel therefore in that place receiueth inſtructions concerning the cruell perſecution of the Iewes vnder Antiochus Epiphanes, the beginning, and the end thereof: There are three times reuealed vnto him.

Dan.7.25.

The firſt is of a time, two times, and halfe a time, or rather the diuiding of time; or as Tremellius more agreeable to the Hebrew, a part or parcell of times: ſo long ſhould the Temple bee defiled, and the abomination ſet vp in the Temple, that is, three yeeres and certaine daies: And ſo it came to paſſe, for this deſolation began in the Temple the 145 yeere of the raigne of the Greekes, the fifteenth day of the moneth Caſleu, 1.Macchab.1.57. when Antiochus cauſed the daily ſacrifice to ceaſe, and incenſe to be burnt to Idols: and iuſt three yeeres and tenne daies after, which is to be reckoned for the od parcell of times, anno 148. the 25. day of Caſleu, they began to offer ſacrifice in the Temple according to the law, 1.Macchab.4.52.

The ſecond time reuealed, is of 1290. daies, Dan.12.11. which maketh three yeeres, ſeuen moneths and odde daies: which is the time counting from the deſolation, when as the ſacrifices ſhould be reſtored, and confirmed by the Kings grant, and letters Patents: which accordingly came to paſſe, anno 148. the fifteenth of the moneth Xanthicus, which was the laſt moneth but one, as it is recorded, 2.Macchab.11.33.

The third time is deſcribed by daies, 1335. Dan.12.12. Bleſſed is he that ſhould liue to ſee that time: namely, when the Church of the Iewes ſhould fully be deliuered by the death of Antiochus, which was in the beginning of the next yeere, which was 149. 1.Macchab.6.16. Thus we ſee theſe times were fully accompliſhed vnder the tyrannie of Antiochus: wherefore theſe propheſies being once fulfilled, they cannot be drawne to ſignifie any other time, but by way of ſimilitude and compariſon.

2.Theſſ.2.8.

1.Ioh.2.18.

Neither is that any thing worth, which the Ieſuite obiecteth out of Saint Paul, 2.Theſſ.2.8. Then ſhall the wicked man be reuealed, whom Chriſt ſhall conſume with the ſpirit of his mouth: As though preſently after the reuelation of Antichriſt Chriſt ſhould come. And therefore Antichriſt muſt not be expected or looked for before the end of the world: for the whole time from the firſt comming of Chriſt to his ſecond, is in the Scripture called nouiſſima hora, the laſt times, 1.Ioh.2.18. And therefore Antichriſt, at what time ſoeuer he is reuealed after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, hee commeth in the laſt times: whoſe vtter ruine and deſtruction ſhall be reſerued for the glorious appearing of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle there ſpeaketh.

Apoc.20.2.

*Argum.*3. Whereas the Scripture ſaith, that Satan muſt be bound for a thouſand yeeres, and after let looſe againe, Apocal.20.2. And it is plaine, that the thouſand yeeres ſince Chriſt are expired more then fiue hundred yeeres agoe: It followeth hereupon that Antichriſt is alreadie come: for he muſt be reuealed with the looſing of Satan. Our aduerſaries haue nothing to anſwere but this, that by this 1000. yeeres, a certaine time is not meant, but the whole ſpace during the time of the new Teſtament, Teſtament till the comming of Antichriſt, Rhemiſt. Reuel. 20. ſect. 8. To whom wee anſwere, that by the ſame reaſon, neither ſhall their 42. moneths ſhew any certaine time, but the whole ſpace ſo long as Antichriſt ſhall raigne: and this number of moneths, as of daies, weekes, houres, the Scripture in any where taketh myſtically in prophecies: but where thouſands or hundred yeeres are mentioned, they are alwaies taken literally: as Iſay 7.8. it is prophecied that Ephraim, that is, Iſrael, ſhould vtterly ceaſe to be a people within 65. yeeres, which euen ſo came to paſſe, counting from the fourth yeere of the raigne of Ahaz King of Iuda, to the 25. yeere of Manaſſes, when the remnant of Iſrael was carried away. Iſay 7.8.

Iſai. 16.14. In three yeeres as the yeeres of an hireling, that is, preciſely ſo many, the glorie of Moab ſhall be deſtroyed. Iſai. 21.16. Yet a yeere according to the yeeres of an hireling, and all the glorie of Kedar ſhall faile. In all theſe places hirelings yeeres are vnderſtood, that is, ſo many common yeeres as ſeruants doe vſe to be hired for. Iſay 16.14. Iſay 21.16.

Let vs adioyne the teſtimonie of antiquitie: Cyprian epiſtol. 3. ad Cornelium: Antichriſti iam propinquantis aduentum imitantur: They, ſpeaking of the Nouatian heretikes, doe imitate Antichriſt, who is now approaching and drawing neare. Paſchalis, anno 1100. held a Councell at Rome againſt the Biſhop of Florence, who affirmed Antichriſt then to bee borne: Epiſtol. Leodienſ. contra Paſchal. 2. Ecce ſolutus eſt Sathanas habens iram magnam, Behold Satan is broke looſe, hauing great wrath. Anno 1390. Pope Vrbane the 6. and Clement 7. being both Popes at once, did thunder out one againſt another, calling each other ſchiſmaticke, heretické, Antichriſt.

Whom now may we beleeue rather for this matter then the Popes: for Antichriſt may beſt iudge of himſelfe.

We haue alſo the iudgement of one Henteniis a Papiſt, againſt their dreame of three yeeres and an halfe, who thus writeth in his preface to his tranſlation of Arethas: It is not poſſible that Antichriſt, in ſo ſhort a time of three common yeeres and an halfe, ſhould obtaine ſo many kingdomes and prouinces.

Adde the ſeale of holy Martyrs: Maſter Bilney; Satan, as the Scripture witneſſeth, hath been now let looſe theſe 500. yeeres, as it is written in the Apocalypſe, After a thouſand yeeres Satan ſhall bee let looſe, Fox pag. 1003. col: 1. Maſter Tindall holy Martyr, ſaith, That ſince the firſt 30. Biſhops of Rome that died Martyrs, there haue been 204. Popes, and hardly foure to bee found among them good Chriſtian men. pag. 1252. col. 2. P.924.2.5. P.1141.1.70.

All theſe agree together, that Antichriſt hath been many yeeres alreadie reuealed to the world: and therefore this new deuice of three yeeres and an halfe, is but a meere forgerie.

1. Iuſtinus Martyr ſaid in his time, aboue 1400. yeers ſince, that he which ſhould vtter blaſphemies againſt the moſt high, was euen at the doore. ἐπὶ θύραις ὄντος: Dialog. cum Tryphon.

2. Tertullian alſo of the like antiquitie, ſaid, Antichriſto iam inſtante: Antichriſt being now at hand. But ſince thoſe Fathers thus ſpake, many hundred yeeres are expired: the time then of Antichriſts raigne is not to be limited to the ſpace of three yeeres and an halfe. Tertull. lib. de fug. in perſecut.

3. The confeſſion of the Engliſh Church, and the head gouernour thereof is, that the three yeeres and halfe doe rather ſignifie halfe the ſpirituall weeke, that is, of all the time betweene Chriſts firſt and ſecond comming: for if Antichriſt ſhall raigne but three yeeres and an halfe, and there ſhall be but 45. daies after his deſtruction before the comming of Chriſt, then the very time of his comming ſhould be knowne, which is contrarie to the Scriptures. Apolog. Reg. p. 61. 62.

4. Gregorie the firſt, in his time, gaue this as a marke and note of Antichriſt, That whoſoeuer calleth himſelfe vniuerſall Biſhop, In elatione ſua praecurrit Antichriſtum, doth in his pride forerunne Antichriſt: but the Popes euer ſince Boniface the third, for a thouſand yeeres haue vſurped this title, therefore ſo long Antichriſt with his forerunners haue been in the world: ſome of the moderne Papiſts doe confeſſe, that no mortall man can certainely tell how long preciſely Antichriſt ſhall raigne, and that the three yeeres and halfe doe but ſignifie the extremity, toppe or height of his raigne: So Pererius, Acoſta. Gregor. lib. 7. indiction 15. epiſt. 30. Perer. lib. 15. in Dan. 12. Acoſta de tempor. nouiſſim. lib. 2. c. 8.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE name, character, and ſigne of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

They ſtoutly affirme, that Antichriſt ſhall bee one particular man; conſequently they alſo holde, that he ſhall haue a certaine name, as Chriſt is called Ieſus, ſo Antichriſt muſt alſo haue a proper name: but what that name ſhall bee, no man can tell, vntill hee come; but it ſhall conſiſt of certaine letters, that in number make ſixe hundred ſixtie ſixe, Bellarm. cap. 10. Rhemiſt. annot. Apocal. 13. ſect. 10. 58. Error.

1. Apoc. 13.18. Count the number of the beaſt, for it is the number of a man, and his number is 666. Hereupon they conclude, that Antichriſt ſhall haue a certaine name, which containeth that number, Bellarm. ibid. Apoc. 13.18.

Anſw. Firſt, it is the number of the beaſt, and yet of a man: Ergo, it cannot be the name of any one

one man: for by the beaſt, the Ieſuites themſelues vnderſtand a companie or multitude, Rhemenſ. Apocal. 13. ſect. 1. Wherefore it muſt be ſuch a name as agreeth to a companie or ſucceſſion of men, and ſuch is the name Lateinus, as afterward we will ſhew. Secondly, it muſt be a name by number, ſhewing the time, not an idle number ſignifying nothing; the time of his comming is ſet downe to be 666. But the maintainers of their Antichriſt cannot ſhew any ſuch time, ſeeing there are yeeres more then twice 666. gone alreadie, and yet they ſay, their Antichriſt is not yet come.

Argum. 2. Antichriſt ſhall haue a name, as Chriſt had: but it is not neceſſarie to bee knowne, otherwiſe then Chriſt his name was: which was deſcribed by Sibil by the number of 888, as Antichriſts is by 666. yet was not his name, Ieſus, perfectly knowne before his comming, neither is it neceſſary that Antichriſts ſhould before that time. Ieſus, in Greeke letters thus, ιησους, maketh as you ſee 888. Bellarm. cap. 10.

ι. 10.
η. 8.
σ. 200.
ο. 70.
υ. 400.
ς. 200.
888.

Anſw. Firſt, you muſt proue Antichriſt to bee one ſingular man as Chriſt was, and then ſtriue for his name. Secondly, you doe euill to match Sibils Prophecie, and Iohns Reuelation together, as though her coniecture of the name of Chriſt, by the number of 888. were of like authoritie with Iohns Prophecie, of 666. Thirdly, that the name of Ieſus is deſcribed by one of the Sibils by the number 888. it is euident. And a Auguſtine alſo maketh mention of other verſes, which goe vnder the name of Sibill, the firſt letters whereof doe make this title or name both in the Greeke and Latine, ιησους χριστος θεου υιος σωτηρ: Ieſus Chriſtus filius Dei ſaluator: Ieſus Chriſt the ſonne of God our Sauiour, a Auguſt. cont. Iudaeos & Pagan. cap. 16. But theſe Prophecies of Chriſt, which goe vnder the name of Sibill, may bee doubted of: for it is not like that out of the Church among the Gentiles there could bee found more euident predictions of the Meſſiah, then in the Church of the Iewes in the true Prophets writings: and if the Prophets of God, ſpeaking by the ſpirit of God, did not foreſee or foretell the name of Ieſus, how could the Sibils, ſpeaking by a ſpirit of diuination, be able to declare it? But becauſe the teſtimonie of the Sibils is alleaged by graue authors againſt the Iewes and Pagans, I ſpare to ſpeake of the vncertaintie of them. Fourthly, if Antichriſts name were as well knowne, as Chriſts name was before his comming, no man could be ignorant of him: for the names of Chriſt were particularly expreſſed by the Prophets, as euen now ſhall be ſhewed.

The Proteſtants.

WE affirme by the warrant of Scripture, that as it is a meere fable, that Antichriſt ſhall bee one ſingular man: ſo of the like truth is it, that he ſhall be knowne by ſome notorious name: neither can any ſuch thing be gathered, Apocal. 13. 18.

Argum. 1. If there ſhould come ſuch a notorious wicked perſon into the world, who onely ſhould deſerue to be called Antichriſt, it is not vnlike, but that the ſpirit of God ſpeaking of his name, both could and would alſo haue expreſſed it: As Ioſias was deſcribed by name, 1. King. 13. 2. and Cyrus, Eſai 44. 28. 45. 1. long before either of them came into the world. And why, I pray you, might not this propheticall Euangeliſt, haue named Antichriſt, as well as Sibilla foretold the name of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt?

Againe, Chriſts names were prophecied of and knowne before: One name of his is to be called a Matth.21.11. Nazarite, ſo the people call him, Matth. 21. 11. a Prophet of Nazareth. This name the Prophet hath, Iſay 11.1. Iſai 11. 1. hee calleth him, Netſer, in Hebrew it ſignifieth a branch. Another name of his, is King of Iohn 12.13. Iſrael, Ioh. 12. 13. prophecied of by Zach. 9. 9. Chriſt alſo was ſaluted by the name of the ſonne of Da-
Zach.9.9. uid, Matth. 21. 9. Mark. 10. 48. for the Iewes did generally hold, that the Meſſiah ſhould bee called by Ezech.34.24. the name of Dauid, according to the ſaying of the Prophets: as Ezech. 34. 24. My ſeruant Dauid ſhall
Ierem.30.9. be their Prince: And 37. 25. My ſeruant Dauid ſhall be their Prince for euer. And againe, Ierem. 30. 9. They ſhall ſerue the Lord their God, and Dauid their King: which place Rabbi Ionathas doth thus tranſlate, Obedient Dauidi Meſſiæ regi ſuo: They ſhall obey Dauid the Meſſiah their King.

Further, hee was knowne by the name Meſſiah, or Chriſt, before he came, Ioh. 4. The woman of Samaria ſaid, I know well that Meſſiah ſhall come, which is called Chriſt, verſ. 25. This name was reuealed to Daniel 9. 25. he is called Meſſiah the Prince.

But will our aduerſaries ſay, his name Ieſus was not knowne before his comming? Yes, euen that name alſo hath ſome euidence out of the Prophets: for Ieſus, or Ieſua, is all one, and ſignifieth a Sa-Zachar.3.5. uiour: of the which name we reade Zachar. 3. where mention is made of Ieſhua the high Prieſt, who was a type of our Sauiour Chriſt, and bare his name, for verſ. 5. a Diademe is ſet vpon his head: which Iohn 12.13. muſt needes be vnderſtood of Ieſus Chriſt, our high Prieſt. Againe, he is called Hoſanna, Ioh. 12. 13. which ſignifieth the ſame that Ieſus, and both are deriued from the ſame roote: tranſlated, Saue vs.
Pſal.118.25. Which name we finde in Pſalme, 118. verſ. 25. And Auguſtine ſeemeth to gather the ſame name out of the Prophecie of Habacuck, 3. 3. Sanctus veniet de monte Pharan: The holy one ſhall come from the mount Pharan: that is, ſaith he, of the ſame name whereof he was, which was ſent from Pharan, Numb.
Hebr.4.8. 13. 1. that is, Ioſua, who alſo is called Ieſus, Heb. 4. 8. and at that time alſo was his name changed, when he was ſent from Pharan, as Auguſtine in the ſame place noteth, lib. 16. cont. Fauſtum Manich. c. 19. 20.
Numb.13.8. He is there alſo called Hoſhea, Numb. 13. 8. which is the very name conſiſting of the ſame letters and points in the Hebrew, which is giuen to Chriſt, Matth. 21. 9. according to the Prophecie, Pſalm. 118. verſ. 25. for there they ſalute him thus, Hoſheangna, Saue vs.

Laſtly, if the name Ieſus Chriſt were reuealed to Sybilla an heathen propheteſſe, how can it be that the Prophets of God were ignorant of it? Therefore by their owne argument, ſeeing Chriſts name were knowne before his comming, why ſhould not Antichriſts in like manner, if he ſhould be ſome one ſingular notorious man?

Argum. 2. We can bring forth a name, which in all reſpects agreeth with that deſcription, Apocal. 13.18. which is a name both of a man and of the beaſt, that is, of a companie, or ſucceſſion of men, which ſheweth the time of Antichriſts birth, namely, the yeere 666. which doth fitly agree with the manners and properties of Antichriſt, which was alſo the name ſometimes of a man, and that is, the name Latinus, by which name one of their firſt Kings were called, which in Greeke letters Λατεινος, ſheweth in account, the number 666. and ſo doth the name of Rome in Hebrue רומיית romiyth, which alſo was the name of one of their Popes called Romanus, who was Pope about the yeere 900. about which time they began to bee in their ruffe. And one of their owne writers Barthol. Caranza the Epitomizer of the Councels thus teſtifieth of thoſe times: Iam tunc cœperat pontificum virtus & integritas deficere: And euen then began the vertue and integritie of the Biſhops of Rome to faile and decay. And, ecclesia Italica, in Greeke letters doe make the ſame number.

λ.	30.	ר.	200.

ι.	10.	י.	10.
ν.	50.	ת.	400.
ο.	70.		666.
ς.	200.
	666.

We ſee then, that all things doe well agree to this name: firſt, that it ſignifieth the whole Latine Church or Empire, and ſo is the name of the beaſt. Secondly, it ſheweth the time 666. about which yeere Pope Vitalianus compoſed the Latine Seruice, and enioyned all nations to vſe no other. Thirdly, it properly agreeth with the Antichriſtian practiſe of Rome; which is called the Latine Church. And contrary to S. Pauls rule they haue brought an vnknowne tongue, which edifieth not, into the ſeruice of God: yea they preferre it before the Greeke and Hebrue, making the Latine tranſlation of the Scriptures onely authenticall, as it was concluded, in their Tridentine chapter. And they doe ſo much extoll their Latine text, as the ſetter forth of the Complutenſe edition is not aſhamed in his preface to write, that hee hath placed the Latine text betweene the Hebrue and the Greeke, as Chriſt betweene the two theeues. What Church then in the whole world but theirs, can bee called the Latine Church? Fourthly, it alſo maketh much for vs, that we haue a conſent of names: for Λατεινος, ἐκκλησία ἰταλικὴ, and in Hebrue romiyth, doe all make the ſame number, and doe note the Latine, Romane, or Italian Church.

But they obiect: Firſt, that Latinus maketh not that number with ι. but Lateinus with ει. A great matter: wherein they ſhew their ignorance, as though the Greeke diphthong, ει. bee not vſually expreſſed by a ſingle i. in Latine, as we ſay, Αντιοχεια, Antiocheia, in Greeke, and Αλεξανδρεια, Alexandreia, with ει. diphthong: in Latine, Antiochia, Alexandria, with ſingle i. for the cities of Antioch, and Alexandria: this therefore is a ſmall quarrell. But marke, I pray, what a poore ſhift this is: If this ſmall letter ε. be but admitted, the Pope is made Antichriſt: ſo wee haue found out Antichriſt, ſauing one ſmall letter.

2. There are many names beſide, that make that number, as Τειταν, αρνουμε, and others: nay the Rhemiſts ſay, that Luthers name, in the Hebrew: and Bellarmine that Dauid Chytræus his name, doe expreſſe that number of 666. But what of all this? there is none of theſe names, vnto the which the three properties aforeſaid doe agree, as they do vnto Latinus, as to betoken the whole bodie of Antichriſt, to ſhew the time of his birth, and deſcribe the qualities of his kingdome, as the word Latinus doth: yet this we doe not ſay, that this is the very name which is meant in that place, and that the propheſie can haue no other meaning, but to ſhew how ridiculous their interpretation is, and how much neerer ours commeth to the truth. And concerning Luthers name, it cannot make that number, vnleſſe they change the letters, and make it Luderus: and ſo it is an eaſie matter by chopping and changing of letters to bring any name to that number. And againe, the Rhemiſts doe cleere Luther in this behalfe that he is not Antichriſt, Apocal. 13. ſect. 10.

Railing Genebrard in his Chronologie lib. 4. hath the like conceit of Luthers name, but lib. 3. he findeth out the number 666. in the name Μαομετις, Mahomet, whom he ſuppoſeth to be the Antichriſt: which opinion Iodocus Clictoueus, one of his owne ſide renounceth: with theſe men, that [illegible] and ſuperſtitious Muſcouite Duke, ioyneth hands: hee will haue Luthers name to ſignifie cruell, for ſo Lut ſignifieth in the Muſcouite language, as he ſaith: and he maketh him an aduerſarie to Chriſt.

In lib. 4. Damaſcen. c. 23.

But Luther was no Muſcouite, from thence then the deriuation of his name is not to be taken, but frō the Germane tongue, of which countrey he was: in which language, Luther in the Saxon tongue, or Lauther in the high Germane, ſignifieth pure: & ſo in deed Luther anſwered to his name, by whom the doctrine of the Church was purified: and before him Wickliffe here in England was the Paſtor of a towne called Luterworth, which ſignifieth in the Saxon tongue (of the which the Engliſh is compoſed) the pure word: but to cleare Luther from theſe malicious imputations, let Eraſmus ſpeake, who being promiſed great reuenewes by the Popes Legates to write againſt Luther, made this anſwere: Maior eſt Lutherus, &c. Lutherus is too great for me too write againſt, and to high for me to vnderſtand: and Luther is ſuch a man, that I profit more by reading one of his pages, then all Thomas Aquine.

Reſponſ. Ioan. Baſil. c. 1.

Ex Laſcicij reſponſ.

Ex Laſcicij. Apolog. aduer. Ioan. Baſil.

Antiquitie alſo approueth this name, as Irenæus lib. 5. de hereſib. Teſtimonium perhibentibus his, qui facie ad faciem viderunt Dominum, &c. And theſe bearing teſtimonie, that face to face haue ſeene S. Iohn, and by reaſon teaching, how that the number of the beaſts name doth containe 666. after the Grecian reckoning, by the letters that are therein, &c. And though this father in that place preferreth the name Teitan, before others, as very like to be the name of Antichriſt: yet firſt hee approueth the name Latinus, ſaying, Valde veri ſimile eſt: It is very like to be this name, becauſe the Latines now doe raigne. And Irenæus might bee deceiued in the other name Teitan, becauſe Antichriſt was not yet reuealed: but ſince the reuelation of Antichriſt, it is now eaſie to diſcerne which of theſe two names doth beſt agree to the prophecie.

Auguſtines iudgement is ſeene before, Error 56. who taketh Antichriſt to bee vniuerſum corpus, the whole bodie: then if Antichriſt be a whole body and ſocietie, not a particular man, hee ſhall not be knowne by a particular name.

And as for Irenæus coniecture touching the name Latinus, the Princely Apologiſt of the Church of England, holdeth that this word, well ſutes with the Romiſh Church, Romiſh faith, and Latine ſeruice: yea their owne Ieſuite Acoſta acknowledgeth, that Irenæus ſaid he receiued thoſe names ab ijs, qui Ioannis faciem viderunt, from them which had ſeene the face of Iohn himſelfe. Apol. Regis. p. 94. Lib. de temp. nouiſſ. c. 30.

Adde hereunto that at the coronation of Paulus the fifth, this title was aſcribed vnto him, PAVLO. V. VICE DEO: the numerall letters whereof make the ſaide number 666. V. 5. L. 50. V. 5. V. 5. I. 1. C. 100. D. 500.

Now further for theſe two points, that the name prophecied of in the Apocalypſe, is ſo a name, as that it deciphereth alſo a certaine number of yeeres: and that it is not a ſpeciall or proper name of any one man, we haue the teſtimonie of ſome of their owne writers.

For the firſt, Lyranus vpon this place is a witneſſe, that although hee take not Mahomet to be Antichriſt, yet thinketh his death falling out in the yeere 666. to bee ſignified in this number. For the other, Primaſius, and many other of their ſide, thinke that ἀρνοῦμε, that ſignifieth, contrarie ſhall be the name of Antichriſt, which is no proper, but a generall name of oppoſition to Chriſt, as Antichriſt is. Likewiſe Rupertus thinketh, that the name of Antichriſt (that is, of that one ſingular man) is not contained in this number: who hath another myſticall interpretation of the name, which is nothing to the purpoſe: and therefore I omit it.

The holy Martyrs thought that Antichriſt ſhould not bee ſet forth by any ſuch notorious name: Tindall. All they that doe purſue are Antichriſts, the Pope, Biſhops, Cardinals, and their adherents doe purſue, therefore the Pope, Biſhops, and Cardinals, and their adherents are Antichriſts: artic. 12. Fox p. 1141. 2. 35. All thoſe make but one Antichriſt, hauing ſeuerall names and places, &c. Walter Brute, The number of his name according to ſome men is DVX CLERI, the Captaine of the Clergie, becauſe by that name he is named, and maketh his name knowne, and that name is 666. Fox p. 460. 2. 45. edit. 1610. So alſo Iohn Wicklif. p. 414. 2. 20. D. 500. V. 5. X. 10. C. 100. L. 50. E. R. I. 1.

OF THE CHARACTER OR SIGNE and badge of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

59. Error. THey doe hold that Antichriſt ſhall haue a certaine outward marke or character, which hee ſhall cauſe to be printed in the right hands, and foreheads of all both ſmall and great, that doe belong to his kingdome, Apocal. 13. 16. But this marke is not yet knowne, no more then his name is: onely this they are ſure of, that the Pope hath not Antichriſts character; but rather the character of Chriſt, the ſigne of the Croſſe which he cauſeth to be ſigned in the foreheads, Bellarm. cap. 11. Apocal. 13. 16.

Argum. 1 Antichriſt muſt in all reſpects be contrarie to Chriſt: for as he ſeeth his Image and Crucifix adored, ſo ſhall he ſet vp his owne image to be worſhipped: and therefore as Chriſtians now doe beare in their foreheads the ſigne of the Croſſe which is Chriſts marke, ſo he ſhall inuent another mark contrarie to Chriſts: and he will make his name and the letters thereof ſacred, as now the name of Ieſus is worſhipped among Chriſtians, Rhemiſt. Apocal. 13. ſect. 2.

Anſwer. Firſt, where haue you learned, that roodes and images are to be adored and worſhipped? or doth not the word of God teach the plaine contrarie? Pſal. 115. 8. 9. O Iſrael truſt in the Lord: but they that worſhip images are like vnto them: hee therefore that truſteth in an image cannot truſt in God. Againe, where learne you to make an Idoll of the letters or ſillables of Chriſts name, to cauſe men to carrie it in their caps, and bowe their knee vnto it? thinke you that S. Paul, when he ſaith, that all things doe bowe the knee to the name of Ieſus, yea of things in heauen, Philip. 2. that he meant, that euen the Angels do ſtoup and make obeiſance, when they ſee the name of Ieſus written in a glaſſe window? Or who taught you that the ſigne of the Croſſe is to be borne vpon mens foreheads; and that with croſſing of the forehead, we are preſerued from danger? S. Paul, you know, hath no ſuch meaning, when he ſaith, He bare in his bodie the markes of the Lord Ieſus, which were nothing elſe, but the ſignes and tokens of his perſecutions, as whippings, ſtoning, and ſuch like in his fleſh: Galath. 6. 17. Neither, when he ſaith, He reioyced in nothing but the Croſſe of Chriſt, whereby hee was crucified to the world, verſ. 14. Hath he any relation to the Croſſe in the forehead? for it were a miracle, that a man by Pſal. 115. 8. 9. Philip. 2. 8. Galath. 6. 17.

croſſing his forehead, ſhould ſtraightwaies crucifie and mortifie his affections. Nor yet did our Sauiour ſpeake of this marke, where he ſaith, that they which will follow him muſt take vp his croſſe, Mark. 8.34. for in that place by taking vp the croſſe, he meaneth, nothing elſe but the forſaking and denying of our ſelues. So it is plaine, that in the Scripture you find not this ſuperſtitious ſigne of the croſſe in your foreheads. Marke 8.34.

2 Where you ſay, that you doe honour the Character of Chriſt, as his name, and the ſigne of the Croſſe: You doe euen ſo honour Chriſt, as the ſouldiers did that gaue him a reede for a Scepter, and thornes for a Crowne, and bowed themſelues in mockage: So you doe leaue Chriſt certaine badges, and ſignes of his kingdome; but indeed you ſpoile him of it, and of his Prieſthood too, making other mediators beſide him, and other ſacrifices propitiatorie beſide his. What doe you elſe now, in bowing the knee to the name and ſillables of Ieſus, and ſpoiling him of his honour, but with the ſouldiers in mockage to bow vnto Chriſt? And I pray you, how doe you honour the name of Chriſt, when you make a ieſt of the name of Chriſtian? for in Italie it is a word of reproch, taken for an idiote or foole.

3 We are ſo farre from thinking, that the characters of Chriſts name, and the ſignes of the Croſſe ſo ſuperſtitiouſlie vſed among Papiſts are the markes of Chriſt, that we take them rather to be the viſible markes of Antichriſt: for beſides the inuiſible characters of Antichriſt, whereof we are to ſpeake afterward, that he ſhall vſe alſo ſome viſible markes, and what thoſe markes are we doe learne where the text ſaith, The marke of the beaſts name, Apocal. 14.11. and the marke of the number of his name, Apocal. 15.2. as it is in the originall; Now the number of the beaſts name, is expreſſed by theſe three Greeke letters χξϛ. Apocal. 13.18. Hence are deriued the abuſed characters of Chriſts name, χρϛ. for χριστὸς: the firſt letter and the laſt in the beaſts name χξϛ. and in theſe abuſed characters χρϛ. are all one; and the middle character ρ. with his crowne thus, ϼ. cannot more fitly be expreſſed by any letter, then the middle in the beaſts name, ξ. Thus we ſee that theſe characters χρϛ. ſo ſuperſtitiouſlie abuſed by the Papiſts, which they vſed in their rings, amulets, tablets, in their caps and garments, doe iſſue out of the beaſts name, and ſo are markes of Antichriſt. Apoc. 14.11. Apoc. 15.2.

In like manner did they abuſe the ſigne of the croſſe, attributing vnto it the power, efficacy, and merite of Chriſts death, as though the very ſigne of the croſſe were able to ſanctifie thoſe that were croſſed, and to preſerue them from ſpirituall danger.

And theſe ſuperſtitious markes of the croſſe, had their beginning from the beaſts name: for the firſt letter χ. is a croſſe, the middle letter ξ. in Latine X. is alſo a ſideling croſſe, the laſt letter ϛ. and containeth both σ. and τ. two Greeke letters, whereof the latter is called an headleſſe croſſe: and thus it appeareth plainly, that the markes whereby they ſay, they honour Chriſt, are rather a diſhonour to him, and are in very deed the cogniſance of Antichriſt.

4 We anſwere, that the ſigne whereby Chriſtians are marked, are not externall, but internall: Wee are ſealed by the ſpirit of God, Epheſ. 4.30. The outward ſignes are none other, but the two Sacraments of baptiſme and the Lords ſupper: by the right adminiſtration whereof the congregations of the faithfull are knowne. But of this, more ſhall be ſpoken in the Antitheſis, or Antidotum, in the declaration of our opinion. Epheſ. 4.30.

The Proteſtants.

By the character or marke of Antichriſt, we doe not ſo much vnderſtand any viſible ſigne or badge to bee printed in the right hand or the forehead, as the Ieſuite imagineth: as though hee ſhould brand all his ſubiects in the hand or forehead: as that hereby is meant and ſignified chiefly the ſociety and communion, whereby they ſhall be ioyned to Antichriſt, by giuing vnto him their fidelitie, oath and obedience, agreeing together in the ſame corruption of faith and doctrine. This is Antichriſts badge or cogniſance, Fulk. Apocal. 13. ſect. 7. There are alſo outward marks of their coniunction with Antichriſt: as the ſhauing of prieſts, and greazing them with oyle: ſuch are the receiuing of holy bread, the wearing of beades, the annointing with Chriſome, the croſſing of themſelues, as wee haue before ſhewed. But the proper note and character, is the oath and profeſſion of fealty and obedience.

Argum. 1. Antichriſt, ſay they, ſhall bring in another contrarie character, to diſgrace the ſigne and character of Chriſt, namely the croſſe in the foreheads: But Chriſt hath appointed no ſuch viſible character, neither are true Chriſtians knowne by any ſuch: therefore alſo the character of Antichriſt is no ſuch thing: the antecedent is prooued thus.

1 The people of the Iewes had no ſuch outward badge, who were more charged with outward obſeruations, then Chriſtians are: Circumciſion was the onely ſigne of the couenant to them, Geneſ. 17. 11. which was one of their chiefe Sacraments, in place whereof Baptiſme is enioyned vs: Ergo, much leſſe are we to be knowne by any other outward badge. Geneſ. 17.11.

2 This place Apocal. 13. is taken out of Ezech. 9. where the Angell is commanded to ſet a marke vpon the foreheads of them that mourne: but that was no viſible externall marke, for it was ſhewed the Prophet in viſion: Ergo, neither is it to be taken ſo in this place.

3 We grant the Sacraments are badges and markes of our profeſſion: which markes the Pope, the onely Antichriſt hath defaced, by bringing in fiue other Sacraments, and cleane changing, polluting and altering, the right Sacraments which Chriſt inſtituted: for they haue brought into Baptiſme, chriſme, ſalt, oyle, ſpittle, and ſuch traſh: into the Euchariſt, adoration, tranſubſtantiation, ſacrifice, with ſuch like: ſo that herein he ſheweth himſelfe Antichriſt, and hath altered the true markes of Religion.

Argum. 2. It appeareth by the effect what is the Character of Antichriſt: The text ſaith, It was not lawfull for any to buy or ſell, but hee that had the marke or the name of the beaſt: No more was it lawfull for any to haue trafficke amongſt the Papiſts, but hee that acknowledged the Popes croſſe keyes, or made himſelfe a member of the Romiſh Italian Church: Nay they ſay, hee is not of the Church, that acknowledgeth not the Pope to bee head of Chriſts Church, Fulk. Apocal. 13. ſect. 7.

The Ieſuite obiecteth: Firſt, this oath of fidelitie and coniunction cannot be that character: for it muſt be in the right hand or forehead. Anſw. We haue alreadie declared, that it is too childiſh to take theſe words literally, as though all Antichriſts ſubiects ſhould carrie brands in their foreheads or hands. Secondly, ſaith he, many doe both buy and ſell amongſt them, that haue not made profeſſion of their fealtie to Rome, as the Iewes, Bellarm. cap. 11. Anſw. Yea no maruell, for Antichriſt is an enemie onely to Chriſt: all other people he can brooke well enough beſide good Chriſtians: tell mee I pray you, whether our Merchants be admitted to traffick ſafely in Spaine, if their religion be knowne? The ſeruants of God amongſt you, can neither enioy, houſes, lands, libertie, or life: which yoke alſo was laid a long time vpon this land, till it pleaſed God to haue mercie on vs; for the which his name be bleſſed.

Thirdly, Againe, many yeeres agoe, euen in Auguſtines and Ambroſe his time, all Churches were ioyned to Rome, before Antichriſt was yet reuealed. Ergo, This is not the Character of Antichriſt, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, they were ioyned then in common conſent of religion, not as ſubiects by compulſion, but voluntarie; becauſe at that time, Rome in the chiefeſt pointes of Religion was in the right faith. Secondly, but of late daies in the Councell of Conſtance, not yet two hundred yeeres agoe, it was made an article of faith, to beleeue, that the Pope was the head of the Vniuerſall Church: yea about the yeere 600. the title of vniuerſall Biſhop firſt began to bee appropriate to Rome: whereby was inſinuated, that all Churches in the world ſhould bee vnder the obedience thereof.

Touching the ſlauiſh obedience, and faithleſſe fidelitie, which now further ſhal be yeelded to Antichriſt, which we hold to be that marke or character.

ἁρπάζοντα ἑαυτῷ τὴν ἐξουσίαν. catech. 15.

1 Cyrill ſaith, he ſhall vſurpe or take vnto himſelfe the power of the Romane Empire, &c. and ſo conſequently hee ſhall enforce and impoſe vpon the world the ſame yoke of obedience.

2 And Tertullian of the Africane Church would haue them pray for the Emperours, Quod vim maximam vniuerſo orbi imminentem, &c. Romani imperij commeatu ſcimus retardari: Becauſe wee know, that the great ruine which hangeth ouer the world, is foreſlowed by the entercourſe of the Romane Empire.

Apolog. Reg. pag. 93.

3 Our princelie Apologiſt heerein concurreth with his Church: By the marke in the forehead, ſignifying the outward profeſſion and acknowledgement of their profeſſion vnto her: and by the marke in the right hand, ſignifying their actuall implicite obedience vnto her, &c.

4 Laſtly, we haue the the teſtimonie of one of their Popes themſelues, who ſaith plainely, that he is the forerunner of Antichriſt, which would be called Vniuerſall Biſhop, Gregorie 1. lib. 4. epiſtol. 32. and writing to Eulogius of Conſtantinople he calleth this title of Vniuerſalitie, ſuperbæ appellationis verbum, a proud name. And Pelagius 2. 1. decretal. contra Iohannem Conſtantinop. ſaith thus, Nullus Patriarcharum tam profano vtatur vocabulo, he termeth it a prophane name, &c. See then by his teſtimony, the title of Vniuerſality, and exacting of obedience of other Churches, is a prophane and proud title, and in very deed the character and marke of Antichriſt.

THE FOVRTH PART, CONCERNING the generation and originall of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

60. Error.

THey doe reiect thoſe old fancies concerning Antichriſt, as that hee ſhould bee borne of a Virgin by helpe of the diuell, that hee ſhould haue the diuell to his father, that hee ſhould bee a diuell incarnate: or that hee ſhould be Nero raiſed from the dead. Refuſing theſe fables, they haue found out one as fooliſh: Our Rhemiſts hold, that Antichriſt ſhall bee borne of the Tribe of Dan. Vnto this opinion alſo our Doway men incline, in their annotations vpon the Bible, p. 150.

Bellarmine dare not ſay ſo, but he thinketh that he ſhall come of the Iewes ſtocke, and be circumciſed, and be taken of the Iewes for their Meſſiah, cap. 12.

Argum. 1. That he ſhall come of the tribe of Dan: thus they would prooue it, Gen. 49. 17. Dan ſhall be a ſerpent by the way, biting the horſe heeles: Ierem. 8. 16. The neighing of his horſes is heard from Dan. And Apocal. 7. where 12. thouſand of euery tribe are reckoned, onely Dan is left out, becauſe (belike) Antichriſt ſhould come of that tribe, Rhem. 2. Theſ. 2. ſect. 8. Geneſ. 49. 17. Ierem. 8. 16.

Anſw. Bellarmine confuteth all theſe reaſons: the firſt he ſaith with Hierome to be vnderſtood of Sampſon; who came of the Tribe of Dan: the ſecond place is of Nabuchadnezzars comming to deſtroy Ieruſalem, as Hierome alſo expoundeth it: to the third he ſaith, that Ephraim is left out as well as Dan: yea and ſo is Manaſſeh too: becauſe the Tribe of Ioſeph is named for his two ſonnes: but Dan is left out becauſe Leui is reckoned in his place. We may ſee now, how well they agree, when one Ieſuite confuteth another, Bellarmine cap. 12.

Argum. 2. Bellarmine ſtandeth much vpon that place, Iohn 5. 43. If another come in his name, him will ye receiue: but ſaith he, the Iewes will receiue none but of their owne kinred, and whom they looke for to be their Meſſiah. Ergo, Antichriſt muſt come of the Iewes. ibid. Ioh. 5. 43.

He alſo vrgeth that place of the Apoſtle, 2. Theſſ. 2. 11. God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, to beleeue lies: which he vnderſtandeth of the Iewes, that ſhall bee readie to receiue Antichriſt for their Meſſiah: and indeede ſaith, Antichriſt ſhall come eſpeciallie for the Iewes, to delude and deceiue them. 2. Theſ. 2. 11.

Anſw. 1. This place wee haue ſhewed before, part. 1. of this queſtion, to bee vnderſtood of falſe prophets amongſt the Iewes, ſuch as mention is made of, Acts 5. as Theudas and Iudas, and not of any one falſe prophet: ſo Iohn 10. where Chriſt compareth himſelfe, which is the true ſhepheard, with the hireling, he vnderſtandeth all hirelings, though he ſpake in the ſingular number. Secondly, if it ſhould be vnderſtood only or ſpecially of their imagined Antichriſt, then it would follow, that the Iewes as yet haue receiued none comming in their owne name, but haue as it were, kept themſelues in ſuſpence, refuſing Chriſt, and yet hearing none other. Which were very abſurd, that this ſaying of Chriſt hath not been verified vpon the Iewes theſe 16. hundred yeeres. Thirdly, and Chriſts ſpeech is eſpecially directed to that generation, that ſeeing they refuſed Chriſt, yet they followed other ringleaders, or ſectmaſters, that deceiued them.

And concerning the other place, we anſwere. Firſt, that it is not ſpoken onely or ſpecially of the Iewes, but of all vnbeleeuers, who through the hardnes of their heart ſhould be ready to receiue Antichriſt: and ſo the Rhemiſts expound it, in their annotations vpon this place: and the Apoſtle doth giue inſtructions as touching Antichriſt, not to the Iewes, but to the beleeuing Gentiles, to whom hee writeth, ſaying in the 2. verſe. Let no man deceiue you, &c. Secondly, that Antichriſt ſhall come chiefly to ſeduce the Iewes in the end of the world, is contrarie to the Apoſtle Rom. 11. which prophecieth of the generall calling of the Iewes, not of their generall ſeducing: and this aſſertion of the Papiſts; that the Iewes Meſſiah is yet to come, doth harden their hearts, and nouriſh them in their blind hope and fooliſh conceit.

The Proteſtants.

That it is a very fable and meere deuice, to make men beleeue that Antichriſt ſhall come of the tribe of Dan, or of the ſtocke of the Iewes, thus we ſhew it.

Argum. 1. It is out of doubt, that the nation of the Iewes ſhall be conuerted vnto God, and mercy ſhall be ſhewed againe to the remnant of Iſrael, Rom. 11. 25. confeſſed alſo by the Papiſts. And hereof Origen ſo many yeeres ſince, hath written very confidently, though doubtfull and vncertaine in many things beſide. Firſt, Homil. 6. in Numer. ſpeaking of the marriage of Moſes with a woman of Ethiopia, how Miriam his ſiſter for murmuring againſt it became leprous, and was ſhut 7. daies out of the Campe: he thus applieth the Storie by the mariage with the Ethiopian, vnderſtanding the calling of the Gentiles: and by the excluding of Miriam, the reiection of the Iewes: Veruntamen hæc lepra, &c. But this their ſpirituall leproſie ſhall not remaine euer, but when as the weeke of the world is accompliſhed, ſhee ſhall bee brought againe to the tents: that is, the Iewes ſhall returne to the Church. Rom. 11. 25.

Againe homil. 18. vpon thoſe words of Baalam, c. 24. 17. I ſhall ſee him, but not now: i. nouiſſimis temporibus cum plenitudo gentium introierit: That is, in the laſt times, when the fulneſſe of the Gentiles is come in, and all Iſrael beginneth to bee ſaued, &c. Thus he writeth of the generall calling of the Iewes toward the end of the world. But if one come, which ſhall reedifie the Temple, and reſtore the ſacrifices and circumciſion, ſuch an one, as the Iewes ſhall take for their Meſſiah: who ſeeth not, that by this meanes the Iewes will be more hardened, hauing now their owne hearts deſire, their Temple, Meſſiah, circumciſion: and their conuerſion would bee greatlie hindred, nay quite and cleane ouerthrowne? Numb. 24. 17.

Argum. 2. If Antichriſt ſhould come of the Iewes, it is like that his ſeate ſhould bee at Ieruſalem, and that the Temple ſhould be built againe by him: but that cannot be, for the Temple, as Daniel prophecieth, ſhall lie deſolate euen vnto the end, Dan. 9. 27. Ergo, he ſhall not come of the Iewes. More of this in the next part. Dan. 9. 27.

Beſide the Prophecie of Daniel, wee haue the warrant of our Sauiour Chriſt; that the Temple of

Ieruſalem ſhall not be reedified, Matth.24.2. a ſtone ſhall not be left vpon a ſtone: Which Prophecy was not onely accompliſhed in the deſtruction of the old temple, but then alſo, when in Iulian the Apoſtata his time, the Iewes being by him encouraged to build the temple, what was built in the day, was caſt downe in the night; and beſide a fire fell from heauen, that conſumed the worke and workemens inſtruments: which Cyrillus Biſhop of Ieruſalem then ſeeing, applied vnto that euent, this prediction of our Sauior. *ſic Socrates lib.3.c.*17. The like ſucceſſe let them look for, that ſhal attempt the like again. Further there is an imperiall law made by Theodoſ. that the Iewes ſhould not attempt to build any Synagogue vnder the paine of confiſcation of all their goods and loſſe of their life: and the law beginneth thus: Hac valitura in omne æuum lege ſancimus: They make it an eternall law, to hold as long as the world ſtandeth. *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*12.*l.*17. How then is it like that the temple ſhould be built, there being ſuch reſtraint againſt Synagogues? And in the ſame law it is forbidden, that the Iewes ſhould haue any honour, or beare any office, or execute any place of Iudgement. Wherefore ſeeing the Nation of the Iewes is deſpiſed and contemptible, and by a perpetuall law kept from riſing to any honour; it is vnlike, that from them ſhould ſpring ſuch a mightie Monarch, as they imagine Antichriſt to bee.

Bernard witneſſeth with vs: Beſtia illa in Apocalypſi, cui datum eſt os loquens blaſphemias, & bellum gerere cum ſanctis, Petri cathedram occupat, tanquam Leo paratus ad prædam, The beaſt in the Apocalypſe, to whom a mouth was giuen to ſpeake blaſphemies, and to make warre with the Saints, doth occupie Peters chaire, readie as a Lyon to his pray: *Epiſtol.*126. But wee reade not, that euer any Iew was Pope of Rome to ſit in Peters chaire. *Concil.Toletan.4.can.*65. The Iewes are there called, Miniſtri Antichriſti, The Miniſters and ſeruants of Antichriſt: and ſo indeede the Popes haue vſed them in diuers ſeruices: And therefore Gregorie the ninth, in deſpight of all Chriſtian Princes did giue the Iewes great immunities, anno 1240. And who knoweth not that the Papiſts haue begged many of the Iewiſh ceremonies: as the yeere of Iubile was inſtituted by Bonifacius the 8. anno 1300. and many other beſide.

Fox pag.1775. col.1. Et p.1611. 2.16. Edit.1610.

Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr ſaith, that the Sea of Rome for the contrariety of Religion and diuerſitie of doctrine from the Apoſtles, is the ſeate of Antichriſt, and the Biſhop of the ſame, that maintaineth the abominations thereof, is Antichriſt himſelfe indeed. But none of the Iewes were euer Biſhops of Rome.

Now whereas diuers of the Fathers are obiected, as Irenæus, Cyrillus, Hierome, Damaſcene, with others, who held, that Antichriſt ſhould come of the Tribe of Dan, I anſwere: 1. that notwithſtanding theſe allegations, Bellarmine refuſeth this conceit, and diſſenteth herein from the Fathers. 2. Againe, if they allow their opinion in this point, why alſo doe they not receiue their other fanſies, as that of Cyrillus, that Satan in his owne perſon ſhall vſe Antichriſt as his Organe, catecheſ.15. That of Hierome, that Antichriſt ſhall come out of old Babylon, in 11.chap.Daniel. That of Damaſcene, that he ſhall be borne of fornication, *lib.4.de fid,cap.*27.

See before: 1. Cyril alleaged for the not reedifying of the Temple of the Iewes: which is like ſhould bee built againe, if Antichriſt ſhould come of the Iewes.

2. See alſo Origenes opinion for the calling of the Iewes, which ſhould bee much hindred, if Antichriſt ſhould come as their expected Meſſiah, Apolog.Reg. pag.56. Comment.in 11.Apocal. Epiſt. ad Marcellum tom.3. Comment.in 2.Theſ.2. lect.1.

3 And Ieruſalem ſhould in all likelyhood bee Antichriſts ſeate, if hee were of the Iewes: but that cannot be, as our royall Apologiſt ſheweth, becauſe that Citie muſt be Antichriſts ſeate, which raigneth ouer the kingdomes of the earth, Apoc.17.18.

4 Ribera their owne writer ſaith, the Temple, Apoc.11. cannot be vnderſtood of the temple at Ieruſalem, which at that time was deſtroyed, when Iohn wrote: but by the Temple is ſignified the Church of God, &c. Antichriſt then ſhall not ſit in the Temple of Ieruſalem: for Hierome calleth it a Iewiſh fable, that the Temple ſhould be built againe; yea Aquinas ſaith, that ſome Iewes beleeue it ſhall neuer be reedified.

THE FIFTH PART, CONCERNING THE ſeate and place of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

61.Error.

BEllarmine holdeth opinion, that Antichriſt ſhall haue his imperiall ſeate at Ieruſalem, and reedifie and build againe the temple, yea for a while command circumciſion to bee vſed and obſerued, *Bel. cap.*13. *lib.3.de pontif. Rhemiſt.*2.*Theſ.*2.*ſect.*11.

Apoc.11.8.

*Argum.*1. Apocal.11.8. The Citie of Antichriſt is called the great Citie where our Lord was crucified. But Chriſt was crucified at Ieruſalem, Ergo.

Anſw. Firſt, it cannot be ſo vnderſtood, for verſ.2. Ieruſalem is called the holy Citie, verſ.8. This great Citie is called Sodome and Egypt: how can the ſame Citie be capable of ſuch contrary names? How can that be called an holy Citie, where the abomination of deſolation ſhall be, and the ſeate of Antichriſt?

Secondly, *Auguſtine in Apoc.homil.*8. vnderſtandeth by the great Citie and the ſtreetes thereof, the middeſt of the Church: And by the great citie very fitly is vnderſtood the large iuriſdiction of the Pope, who ſaith, hee is head of the great citie and Catholike Church: Whoſe ſeate we ſee is at Rome, by authoritie of which citie Chriſt was put to death: and by Antichriſt the Pope, Chriſt alſo is perſecuted in his members, Fulk. & Annot. Apocal. 11. ſect. 2. S. Hierome alſo doubteth not to call Rome, Maledictam ciuitatem: The curſed citie [illegible]: and Sodome, in his Epiſtle to Lucinius.

*Argum.*2. Apocal. 17. 16. The ten hornes, that is, ten Kings, amongſt whom the Romane Empire ſhall be diuided, ſhall hate the ſcarlet whore, that is, Rome, and burne it with fire: how then ſhall it be the ſeate of Antichriſt? Bellarm. Apoc.17.16.

Anſw. The text is plaine, that the ſame kingdomes, that before had giuen their power to the beaſt, and were ſubiect to the whore of Babylon, ſhall after make her deſolate, and eate her fleſh: which thing we ſee in part to be accompliſhed alreadie, that many Princes haue redeemed their necks from Antichriſt his yoke, Fulk. Apocal. 17. ſect. 3. It is not neceſſarie therefore to bee done all at one time, but one after another.

*Argum.*3. 2. Theſſ. 2. He ſhall ſit in the Temple of God: but at that time the Iewes onely had a Temple, the Chriſtians yet had none, and the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Church of God, did of purpoſe refraine this name, leſt the Church of the Chriſtians ſhould be thought like the Iewes Synagogue: Bellarm. 2.Theſſ.2.

Anſw. Firſt, the Iewiſh temple ſhall not be built againe, as Daniel prophecieth, 9.27. And how can it be built in ſo ſhort a ſpace, ſeeing Antichriſt, as they ſay, muſt raigne but three yeeres and an halfe? and to what purpoſe, ſeeing he will aboliſh all ſacrifices? Secondly, though it ſhould be built againe, nay if it were ſtanding now, for the exerciſe of Iewiſh ſacrifices, it could not be called the temple of God. Thirdly, by the temple therefore is meant the viſible Church, that which ſometimes was a true viſible one, as the Church of Rome, and after ſhould be ſo taken, reputed and challenged, as it is at this day by the Papiſts. So ſaith Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, That wicked man ſitteth in the temple of God, that is, the Church, for it cannot be vnderſtood of Mahomet, or any out of the Church, but of ſuch as beare rule in the Church, pag. 1616. col. 2. Diſputat. cum Ciceſtrenſ. Neither haue the Papiſts hereby any aduantage, as though the Pope ſate in the very true Church: for it is not the true Church indeed, but ſo reputed and taken by them. But he is ſaid to ſit in the temple, that is, the Church of God, both becauſe there ſometime hath bin a viſible Church, and as yet they doe retaine the name and ſhadow of the Church, and becauſe he challengeth to be the head of the Church, and his office to be chiefly eccleſiaſticall and of the Church. Fourthly, though there were no materiall temples of the Chriſtians in Pauls time, what of that? Fifthly, he ſpeaketh not here of any ſuch materiall temple, but of the Church of God: neither doth Saint Paul in this ſenſe refuſe to vſe the name of temple, as 1. Corinth. 3. verſ. 16. and 6. verſ. 19. and in other places. Sixthly, the Rhemiſts doe allow the interpretation of S. Auguſtine and S. Hierome, who expound the temple ſpoken of by the Apoſtle, not for the temple of the Iewes, but for the Church of God: from the which Antichriſt (ſay they) ſhall reuolt and become an Apoſtata: ſect. 12. in 2. Theſſ. 1. But whereas in the ſame place they would hereupon conclude that the Pope is not Antichriſt, becauſe he is in the Church, and ſo ſhall not Antichriſt. To this we anſwere, that the Pope though he remaine in ſome outward ſhew of the Church, yet is departed from the true doctrine of the Church, and ſo become an Apoſtata. Dan.9.27. Pag.1468.1.86

The Proteſtants.

THat Rome is the ſeate and place of Antichriſt, beſide that the Rhemiſts confeſſe ſo much that Antichriſt ſhall raigne there, Annot. Apocal. 17. ſect. 4. we proue it thus.

*Argum.*1. Babylon is the ſeate of Antichriſt, who is called the great whore of Babylon, Apocal. 17.5. Rome is Babylon: Ergo, the ſeate of Antichriſt. Apoc.17.5.

Obiect. It was Babylon, while it was gouerned and ruled by heathen Emperours; but the Church was not then called Babylon, Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, Ergo, by your owne confeſſion, Rome ſhall be the ſeate of Antichriſt, ſeeing by Saint Iohn it was called Babylon: for that citie, which then did beare rule ouer the earth, Apoc. 17. 18. was Rome, and the ſame is Babylon, verſ. 5. and Babylon is the citie of the great whore: Ergo, Rome is the city or ſeat of Antichriſt who is that great whore. Secondly, it was not only called Babylon in the time of the Heathen, but euen of Chriſtian Emperours. Auguſtine ſaith, it is Occidentalis Babylon, the Babylon in the Weſt parts, & prioris filia Babylonis, and daughter to the firſt Babylon. And S. Hierome ſaith, Dum in Babylone verſarer: While I liued in Babylon, and was a tenant to the ſcarlet whore: Præfat. ad Paulinian. He thus ſpeaketh in the time of Chriſtian Emperours, not doubting euen then alſo to call Rome Babylon. Thirdly, S. Iohn doth not only prophecie of the crueltie of the terrene ſtate, but of the falſe prophet Antichriſt, he ſhould alſo vſurpe an eccleſiaſticall gouernment there. For as the terrene ſtate of the Emperours for their crueltie is compared to a Leopard and a Lion, Apocal. 13. 2. ſo the eccleſiaſticall ſtate of the Popes is reſembled to a Lambe with two hornes ſpeaking in hypocriſie, pretending holineſſe, yet practiſing tyrannie, verſ. 11. Apoc.17.18. Apoc.13.2.11

Obiect. Secondly, they obiect that by the damnation of the great whore, is vnderſtood the finall deſtruction of all the companie of the reprobate, Rhemiſt. Apocal. 17. 1.

Anſw. The damnation vniuerſally of the wicked is deſcribed chap. 20. and therefore this place muſt be vnderſtood of Antichriſt, and his adherents: and very fitly doth the name of whore agree to that Sea, for once a whore indeed was Pope there, called Ioane the eighth. Which ſo wringeth the Papiſts, that they haue no other ſhift but impudently to denie it.

Argum. 2. That citie which hath names of blaſphemie, and is full of abominations, is the ſeate of Antichriſt the great whore, Apocal. 17.3. but this is the citie of Rome: Ergo. Apoc. 17.3.

Firſt, that Rome is the citie full of names of blaſphemie, being called eternall, and yet but temporall, Hierome teſtifieth, lib. 2. cont. Iouinian. Scriptum in fronte blaſphemiam: Thou haſt raſed out, by the confeſſion of faith, the blaſphemie written in thy forehead, &c. Here it is anſwered, that Rome was the place of blaſphemie, while it was heatheniſh: but ſince the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith it is not, as Hierome here ſaith, Bellarmine.

Contra. Firſt, it is ſufficient for this matter, that Hierome affirmeth Rome to bee that citie which is full of blaſphemie. Secondly, as he here affirmeth that for that preſent Rome was cleered from blaſphemie, becauſe of the faith of Chriſt: ſo elſewhere hee ſheweth, that the damnation of the great whore, that is the citie of Rome, is yet behinde, according to the prophecie, Reuel. 17.1. as it followeth in the ſame place, That curſe, which our Sauiour hath threatned thee in the Apocalypſe, thou maiſt eſcape by repentance. So then in his iudgement, ſeeing the damnation of the whore was not then fulfilled, at that time the whore had not ſhewed her ſelfe.

Secondly, that Rome alſo is the citie of abominations, the ſame author beareth witneſſe: He calleth it the citie, in qua palma vitiorum, that may beare the bell for all kinde of vice; ad Principiam. And againe, The citie of pompe, lecherie, delicacie, vbi humilem eſſe miſeria eſt: where humilitie is counted miſerie; ad Marcellam. Thus he ſpake of Rome being at that time Chriſtian: but who ſeeth not how much more it is degenerate now?

Argum. 3. We haue another argument out of the ſame chapter, verſ. 9. The ſeuen heads are ſeuen mountaines, on which the woman ſitteth. But there is no citie in the world notoriouſly knowne to ſtand vpon ſeuen hils, but Rome; Ergo, it is the ſeate of Antichriſt.

Obiect. The text is, They are alſo ſeuen Kings: ſo the ſeuen heads, or ſeuen hils, ſignifie ſeuen Kings: for there ſhall be ſo many chiefe Empires which ſhall perſecute the Church, there are fiue paſt: Egypt, Canaan, Babylon, the Perſians, Grecians, the ſixth, the Romanes, which in part ſtandeth yet, the ſeuenth ſhall be Antichriſt, Rhemiſt. Apocal. 17. ſect. 7.

Anſw. Firſt, the ſeuen heads are expounded to be both ſeuen hils and ſeuen Kings: the Scripture vſeth not to expound one hard and obſcure thing by an harder and more obſcure, as to ſay, ſeuen heads are ſeuen mountaines, that is, ſeuen Kings: for wee were neerer the ſenſe before: and the terme of heads doth more fitly reſemble Kings, then mountaines. Secondly, the ſeuen Kings are more fitlie taken for ſeuen principall gouernours of the Romanes, as Kings, Tribunes, Conſuls, Decemviri, Dictators, Emperours, Popes: for by theſe ſeuen orders hath the Common-wealth been gouerned firſt and laſt, Fulk. ibid.

Obiect. Rome is not now built vpon ſeuen hils, it ſtandeth in the plaine in Campo Martio: Sander. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, you haue then no right to Peters Chaire, for when hee ſate at Rome, the Citie ſtood vpon ſeuen hils. Secondly, though the Pope now hath remoued his palace to the Vaticane, on the other ſide of the riuer; yet he did ſit for many yeeres in Laterane, vntill the time of Pope Nicholas the ſecond, who was almoſt eleuen hundred yeeres after Chriſt. Thirdly, though the Pope hath remoued his palace vpon pleaſure beyond the riuer, yet his Sea is not remooued: for vpon euery one of thoſe hils there are Monaſteries, and Chappels, and ſuch like monuments to be ſeene to this day. In mount Cælius there is the Monaſterie of Gregorie the firſt, the Cathedrall Church of Laterane. In mount Auentine, the Monaſteries of Sabine and Boniface. In the mount Exquilinus the Minſter of S. Maria maior, the ruines of Saint Cyriacus Church, which is yet a title of a Cardinall. The mount Viminalis hath the Church of Saint Laurence. The mount Capitoline hath an houſe of Friers, called Araceli. The mount Palatine the Church of Saint Nicholas. The mount Quirinalis hath S. Maria de populo. Wherefore though the Popes perſon be remoued a little aſide, yet the popiſh religion is exerciſed, and relickes of ſuperſtition are to be found in euery one of thoſe hils. Wherefore we nothing doubt to conclude, but that Rome is that citie vpon ſeuen hils, and ſo the principall ſeate of Antichriſt.

Let vs ſee the iudgement of ſome of their owne: Epiſtol. Leodienſ. contra Paſchal. 2. Anno 1107. Ait Petrus in Epiſtola, ſalutat vos eccleſia, quæ eſt Babylone collecta, &c. Peter ſaith in his epiſtle, the Church, which is at Babylon, ſaluteth you: Hitherto I vnderſtood Babylon to ſignifie Rome, becauſe of the idolatrie thereof in thoſe times: but now my wofull experience teacheth me ſo to expound it, that Peter ſaying, the Church at Babylon, &c. did foreſee the horrible confuſion and diſſention, which is there at this day, &c. So then Rome was not only Babylon then, but it is alſo Babylon now.

We haue alſo here the euident teſtimonie of our aduerſaries themſelues: It may well bee, ſay they, that as the perſecuting Emperours did principally ſit in Rome; ſo Antichriſt ſhall haue his principall ſeate there, though others thinke, that Ieruſalem rather ſhall be his principall citie: Rhemiſt. annot. in 17. Apocal. ſect. 4. And againe, whereas they confeſſe that the great citie, which is the whore, is old Rome, ibid. ſect. 9. and that the ſeuenth head of the beaſt, whereupon the whore rideth, is Antichriſts ſtate, ibid. ſect. 7. it muſt of neceſſitie follow, that Antichriſt is one of the heads of the Romane

ſee. Their only euaſion here is, that euen then, when Antichriſt ſhall ſit in Rome, the Church there ſhall not be Antichriſt; Rhemiſt. ſect. 2.

Contra. Antichriſts ſtate ſhall either be the Imperiall Romane ſtate, or Eccleſiaſticall: but not the Imperiall for theſe reaſons: Firſt, they themſelues confeſſe that Antichriſt ſhall not come ſo long as the Romane Empire ſtandeth, ſect. 7. Secondly, the Romane Empire is now weakened, and nothing remaineth but the name and image thereof: ſo that it is not like to be that, which ſhall trouble and vexe the world. Thirdly, euen when Nero and Domitian and other perſecuting Emperours gouerned, when as the Emperours had neuer greater power, nor yet malice or crueltie; yet euen then the Empire was an hindrance to the comming of Antichriſt: and therefore Tertullian giueth this as a reaſon, why the Chriſtians did pray for the Romane perſecuting ſtate, Quod vim maximam vniuerſo orbi imminentem, &c. Becauſe that we know, that the great trouble and vexation of the whole world, threatning the end thereof, and horrible miſeries, is hindred by the flouriſhing of the Romane Empire, Apolog. cap. 32. If that then the Imperiall ſtate cannot be Antichriſt, it muſt needs follow, that the Papall and Eccleſiaſticall ſtate in Rome, which hath the exerciſe of both ſwords there, and the chiefe gouernment thereof, is the very ſtrength and head of Antichriſts kingdome.

Heare the teſtimonie of an holy Martyr: The whore is that citie, ſaith Iohn, which hath the empire of the Kings of the earth, Apocal. 17. Now what citie is there in all the world, that, when Iohn wrote, had the rule of the kingdomes of the earth, but only the citie of Rome, &c. Biſhop Ridley, pag. 1779. col. 1. Pag. 1614. 2. 80

Beſide theſe former euidences; 1. Cyrillus ſaith, that Antichriſt ſhall vſurpe the power of the Romane. 2. Tertullian ſaith, that Babylon Romanæ vrbis figuram portat, doth beare the figure of the citie of Rome. [illegible] Catech. 15. lib. aduerſ. Iudæos.

3 And whereas they obiect that place, Apocal. 11. 8. the citie where our Lord was crucified: as though Ieruſalem ſhould be the ſeate and place of Antichriſt: we anſwere with our Great protector of the faith, that it is a common phraſe in Scripture to call Chriſt perſecuted and ſlaine, when his Saints are ſo vſed, &c. and beſide it may be ſaid that hee was ſlaine in the great citie Babylon, ſince by the Romane authoritie he was put to death, vnder a Romane Iudge, and for a Romane quarrell, &c. Apolog. Reg. pag. 58.

4 Their two great Ieſuites Ribera and Viega doe concurre, that Babylon doth ſignifie Romam in fine mundi futuram: Rome in the end of the world. Riber. com. in Apoc. 14. Viega c. 18. in fine.

THE SIXTH PART, CONCERNING THE doctrine of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

THeir opinion is, that Antichriſt ſhall be an open and manifeſt aduerſarie to Chriſt, and that hee ſhall aboliſh all worſhip of God, and all religion, Rhemiſt. annot. 2. Theſſ. 2. ſect. 10. So alſo our Doway gloſſemen ſay, that Antichriſt, that ſingular man of ſinne, will confeſſe no God, but himſelfe: pag. 1014. Bellarmine draweth all the doctrine of Antichriſt to theſe foure heads. Firſt, he ſhall denie Ieſus to be Chriſt, and aboliſh the Sacraments inſtituted by Chriſt. Secondly, hee ſhall make himſelfe Chriſt. Thirdly, he ſhall make himſelfe God, and be adored as God. Fourthly, he ſhall aboliſh all other worſhip, both true and falſe, yea the worſhip of Idols. Wherefore (ſaith hee) the Pope cannot be Antichriſt, that doth none of theſe things, cap. 14. Of theſe now in their order. 62. Error.

Argum. 1. Antichriſt ſhall vtterly denie Chriſt: 1 Ioh. 2. 22. and 4. 3. Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth not, that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God: this is the ſpirit of Antichriſt: Ergo, Antichriſt ſhall altogether denie Chriſt. 1. Ioh. 2. 22. 4. 3.

Anſw. Firſt, the Rhemiſts ſay, that this is not a marke for all times, to know an heretike by, but it was only for thoſe times, to confeſſe Chriſt to be come in the fleſh. This is a ſurer note now (ſay they) that who ſo confeſſeth not Chriſt to be really preſent, and to be ſacrificed in the Maſſe, is not of God, Rhemiſt. annot. 1. Ioh. 4. ſect. 2. Where I will not ſtand to note the preſumption of theſe Papiſts, that will correct and amend the Apoſtles rule, to know Heretikes by, which ſerueth for all times: and ſo Auguſtine taketh it. But here firſt I oppoſe our Rhemiſts iudgement againſt Bellarmine: for they denie that this place ſerueth to deſcribe Antichriſt, belonging only to the Apoſtles times: Bellarmine ſaith, it doth moſt properly decipher Antichriſt. Serm. de verbis Apoſtoli 33.

2 The great Antichriſt ſhall denie Chriſt no otherwiſe, then other Antichriſts and heretikes did in the Apoſtles time: for they are all Antichriſts, 1. Ioh. 2. 18. and he giueth one rule to know them all by, verſ. 22. But the Antichriſts then denied not Chriſt apertly, but couertly: Ergo, ſo ſhall the great Antichriſt. 1. Ioh. 2. 18.

The firſt is true, that the old heretikes did not plainly denie Chriſt to be come in the fleſh: but ſome denied his humanitie, ſome his diuinitie, ſome his perſon. Auguſtine ſaith, Antichriſti negant, [illegible] verbis fatentur: The Arrians denie that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, though they confeſſe it in word: for he that doth not confeſſe that Chriſt is equall vnto God, denieth Chriſt in the fleſh: and ſo of other heretikes. The ſecond alſo is as true: that Antichriſt, who is no other but the Pope, ſhall alſo cunningly and couertly denie Chriſt: for hee that denieth the offices of Chriſt, denieth Chriſt: as Auguſtine ſaith of Peters deniall, Quicquid eius negauit, ipſum negauit: Tract. in Iohann. 66.

Whatſoeuer he denied of or belonging to Chriſt, he denied Chriſt: So the Pope denieth Chriſt to be our Prophet, King, and Prieſt: His propheticall office he defaceth, and in effect denieth, in diſgracing the Scriptures, ſaying, they are imperfect, and containe not all matters neceſſarie to ſaluation, that their authoritie bindeth vs not without his allowance: His Kingly office, in making himſelfe Chriſts Vicar and Vicegerent vpon earth, in making new lawes, Sacraments, ordinances, beſide Chriſts, as neceſſarie to ſaluation as the rules of the Goſpell: His Prieſthood, in ſetting vp a new propitiatorie ſacrifice in the abhominable Maſſe, beſide the onely ſacrifice of atonement vpon the Croſſe, in making other mediatours and interceſſors, beſide Chriſt: and ſuch like, whereof we ſhall haue occaſion to intreate afterward more at large: Ergo, the Pope in denying the offices of Chriſt, denieth Chriſt, and ſo is Antichriſt.

Argum. 2. Hee ſhall make himſelfe Chriſt and Meſſiah, which the Ieſuite would prooue out of Iohn 5. verſ. 43. If another come in his owne name, him will ye receiue: But the Pope commeth not in his owne name, but in the name of Chriſt, he calleth himſelfe Chriſts Vicar: Ergo, he cannot bee Antichriſt: Bellarm. lib. 3. de Antichriſto. Ioh. 5. 43.

Anſw. Firſt, it is not neceſſarie that Antichriſt ſhould openly profeſſe himſelfe to be Chriſt, in name, but he ſhall doe it, ὑποκριτικῶς, indeed, and that cloſely and couertly: for thoſe whom Chriſt calleth ψευδοχρίστους, falſe Chriſts, Math. 24. 24. Iohn calleth Antichriſtos, Antichriſts, 1. Ioh. 2. 18. Falſe prophets therefore are falſe Chriſts, and Antichriſts: yet all thoſe falſe prophets and heretikes did not in name and outward profeſſion make themſelues Chriſts.

2. The Pope of Rome in effect maketh himſelfe Chriſt: for who but Chriſt is the head of the Church? who but Chriſt is ſuperiour to the Angels, and to commaund them? who but Chriſt can make Sacraments and articles of faith? But all this the Pope taketh vpon himſelfe to doe: yea the Ieſuite is not aſhamed to ſay, that he hath the ſame office which Chriſt had being vpon earth, lib. 5. de pontif. cap. 4. And whereas they ſay, the Pope commeth in the name of Chriſt: it ſhall as much profit him (it being not in truth, but in colour onely and ſhew) as it ſhall profit the falſe prophets to ſay in the day of the Lord, Haue not we in thy name prophecied, and caſt out diuels? Mat. 7. 22. 23. to whom Chriſt ſhall make anſwere, Verily I know you not. Math. 7. 22. 23.

Argum. 3. Antichriſt ſhall openly name himſelfe God, and commaund men to worſhip him as God, 2. Theſſal. 2. 4. But this doth not the Pope: Ergo, he is not Antichriſt, Bellarm. 2. Theſſ. 2. 4.

Anſw. Firſt, if Antichriſt ſhould be ſuch an one, you might haue found amongſt the Emperours of Rome diuers Antichriſts: for ſuch an one Caligula was, that commanded temples to bee erected in his name, and his images to bee ſet vp to be worſhipped, yea in the temple at Ieruſalem. Secondly, S. Pauls words will not beare any ſuch ſenſe: he ſhall ſit, ὡς θεὸν, as God: and your vulgar Latine hath oſtendens ſe tanquam ſit Deus, ſhewing himſelfe as though he were God, that is, in deed and effect, not in open profeſſion: for if he ſhould ſit and be worſhipped in the temple as God; how can it be called the temple of God, being thus a temple of moſt groſſe idolatrie? Bellarmine here anſwereth, that the text is not, ὡς θεὸν, as God, but, ὅτι θεὸς, that he is God: but the text in the originall hath both, firſt it ſaith, he ſhall ſit as God, and then he ſhall ſhew himſelfe, that he is God: that is, as their owne vulgar Latine readeth, as if he were God. Thirdly, the Pope in effect maketh himſelfe a God vpon earth: for he can diſpenſe againſt the law of nature, the law of God, againſt both new and old Teſtament: as we haue ſhewed before, Queſt. 9. of this Controuerſie: yea Bellarmine ſaith, he may by his Apoſtolike authoritie diſpenſe with the precepts of the Apoſtles, cap. 14. Hee is able to change the nature of things, and of nothing to make things to be, of wrong to make iuſtice, &c. Pope Nicholaus diſtinct. 96. Yea it is ſaid of the Pope, that he is neither God nor man, but a middle thing betweene both: Pope Boniface. I pray you then what is he? he is no Angell, for he is aboue them, and commandeth them: Papa Angelis præcipit, the Pope commandeth Angels. He muſt then either be a God or a Diuell, by your owne confeſſion, chuſe which you will: Nay they doe make him a plaine God: Es alter Deus in terris, another God vpon earth: and they ſalute him by theſe names, Dominus Deus noſter Papa, our Lord God the Pope. Thus it is proued, that the Pope, both by his deedes as alſo by his titles, doth make himſelfe God vpon earth. Extrauag.

Argum. 4. Antichriſt (ſay they) ſhall take away all worſhip, yea of Idols, and ſhall commaund nothing to be worſhipped but himſelfe, 2. Theſſ. 2. 4. the word is σεβάσματα, numina, all things that are worſhipped. But ſo doth not the Pope, for he praieth to Saints, adoreth the bodie of Chriſt on the altar. Ergo. Bellarm. cap. 14. Rhemiſt. 2. Theſſ. 2. ſect. 10.

Anſw. Firſt, the text proueth not, that he ſhall take away all Idols, or things worſhipped, but ſhall exalt himſelfe againſt them, and make ſmall account of them. The place alſo of Daniel is plaine, 11. 37. He ſhall not regard the God of his fathers, nor care for any God, but ſhall magnifie himſelfe aboue all: and in his place ſhall he honour the God Mauzzim, and the God which his fathers knew not, ſhall he honour with gold and ſiluer. Out of this place wee gather two things: firſt, that Antichriſt ſhall bring in a ſtrange God, which his fathers neuer knew: ſo hath the Pope inuented a breaden god, which he honoureth with gold and precious ſtones, making more account of it, then of any Image or relicke whatſoeuer. Secondly, yet he ſhall magnifie himſelfe aboue all ſuch Gods, Images, Roods, Shrines, and the like, yea aboue his owne breaden god; ſo doth the Pope: for he rideth vpon mens ſhoulders, when his breaden god is carried vpon an hackney: he exalteth his throne aboue the altar, the Croſſe is carried on the right hand of the Emperours ſwords and ſcepters, but is laid vnder his feete: In the yeere of Iubile, he beateth vpon the gates of Paradiſe with a golden hammer, Fulk. annot. 2. Theſ. 2. 10. So then howſoeuer like an hypocrite he ſeeme to adore his breaden god, yet indeede doth he magnifie himſelfe aboue it.

Bellarmine hath no other ſhift to foyſt off our arguments, but theſe: he ſaith, this Maozzim is like enough to be the diuell himſelfe, whom Antichriſt ſhall worſhip: but hee careth neither for ſiluer nor gold: or elſe it is himſelfe. And how I pray you can a man worſhip himſelfe? or elſe, ſaith he, it is ſome ſtrong Caſtle where he ſhall lay his ſiluer and gold: or elſe you know not what, Bellarm. c. 14.

2 That Antichriſt ſhall not aboliſh Idols of ſiluer and gold, but rather command the people to worſhip them, as the Pope now doth, it is plaine, Apocal. 9.20. Apoc. 9.20.

The Rhemiſts obiect, that he ſpeaketh here againſt the heathen Idols, which is here called the worſhip of diuels.

Anſw. Firſt, in this place Iohn ſpeaketh of the end of the world, in the opening of the ſeuenth ſeale: and the Idols of the Heathen were aboliſhed long agoe: Neither is there any knowne nation in theſe parts of the world that hath worſhipped Idols of gold, ſiluer, braſſe, ſtone, or wood, but the Papiſts, for theſe many yeeres. Secondly, all worſhippers of Images, doe worſhip diuels: for Idolatrie is a ſeruice inuented by the diuell, and that which is ſacrificed to Idols is offered to diuels, 1. Corinth. 10.20. 1. Cor. 10.20.

The Proteſtants.

THe Antichriſt ſhall not in outward ſhew be an open enemie to Chriſt, but ſecretly and cloſely, and vnder pretence of religion take away all religion: thus we make it plaine.

1 Theſe places alleaged before doe prooue it, Ioh. 1. 2. 18. the Antichriſt, and the Antichriſts, ſhall be enemies all alike: but the Antichriſts in S. Iohns time were couert enemies. Ergo, ſo ſhall the great Antichriſt. And as Antichriſts forerunners were, ſo himſelfe ſhall bee: but they ſhall ſpeake lyes through hypocriſie, and giue eare to the doctrine of diuels, 1. Timoth. 4. 1. 2. that is, as one of your owne writers expoundeth it, Qui Chriſtianorum ſibi appellatione impoſita, contraria docent: Which taking vpon them the name of Chriſtians, doe teach things contrarie, Eſpenc. in hunc locum. And this place is vnderſtood of the forerunners of Antichriſt, and ſo interpreted by Lyra one of your owne authors: Ergo, alſo Antichriſt himſelfe ſhall pretend one thing, and teach another, and vtter his lyes through hypocriſie. 1. Ioh. 2.18. 1. Tim. 4.1.2.

Argum. 2. Saint Paul calleth it the myſterie of iniquitie, 2. Theſſ. 2. 7. and hee ſhall come in all deceiueableneſſe of vnrighteouſnes, verſ. 10. and God ſhal ſend them ſtrong deluſion, to beleeue lyes, verſ. 11. All this prooueth that Antichriſt ſhall worke cloſely, cunningly, myſtically, by deceiuing, by deluſion, not by open enimitie, and prophaneneſſe, or by violence and tyrannie onely, as the Papiſts imagine. 2. Theſſ. 2.7.11

Argum. 3. Antichriſt ſhall be the greateſt enemie to Chriſt and his Kingdome, that euer was in the world. But he is a greater enemie that pretendeth friendſhip, and yet is a foe, that vnder the name of Chriſt perſecuteth the Chriſtian faith, then he that openly deſtroyeth it, making no ſhew of religion: as Dauid complaineth, Pſalm. 41. 9. Yea my familiar friend whom I truſted, which did eate of my bread, hath lift vp his heele againſt me. This was accompliſhed in Iudas, who betrayed Chriſt with a kiſſe, who was the greateſt enemie of Chriſt, ſinning againſt his owne knowledge and conſcience: Euen ſo they now a daies, are the greateſt enemies that Chriſt and the Church hath, that betray Chriſt with a kiſſe, which name themſelues the Church of God, and yet make hauock of the Church. Pſal. 41.9.

Argum. 4. S. Paul alſo ſheweth, that Antichriſt, vnder colour of religion, ſhall be an enemie to religion and the Church: for hee ſhall ſit in the temple of God, that is, take vpon him the name and title of the Church, and yet an aduerſarie vnto it. For he that publikely taketh away the exerciſe of religion, cannot be ſaid to ſit in the Church of God; as the heathen perſecuting Emperours did, and Iulian the Apoſtata: but this agreeth better to one, that by bearing Chriſts name, ſhall wound the Chriſtian faith, and this is the Pope. Origen writeth to the ſame purpoſe: Qui ſimulat veritatem, &c. Hee that diſſembleth the truth, wreſting the Scripture to prooue falſe doctrine, he it is that is an enemie, & ſuper Cathedram ſcripturarum ſedet, and ſitteth aboue the chaire of the Scriptures, Tract. 27. in Matth. And thus the Pope of Rome taketh vpon him to diſpence, contrarie to the Goſpels & Apoſtles: which firſt Bellarmine flatly denieth, that euer the Pope in word or deede tooke vpon him ſo to diſpence: the contrarie I haue proued before, Queſt. 9. Secondly, ſaith he, if hee doe diſpence with the poſitiue precepts of the Apoſtle, he doth it, iuxta Apoſtolum, according to the Apoſtle, that is, according to his Apoſtolike authoritie.

Contra. Firſt he muſt ſhew his authoritie out of Scripture, that hee hath power to diſpence againſt Scripture, but that ſhall he neuer doe: but the Apoſtle ſheweth the contrarie, that he is accurſed, that taketh vpon him to teach any other doctrine then the Apoſtle taught, Galath. 1. 9. Here all power and authoritie to diſpence againſt the Apoſtle, is cut off for euer. Galath. 1.9.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith as much, that Antichriſt ſhall come with deceiueable doctrine, and ſhew of righteouſneſſe: Quid expaueſcimus in Antichriſto, niſi quia nomen ſuum honoraturus eſt, & Domini contempturus? Quid aliud facit, qui dicit, ego iuſtifico? Quid aliud eſt dei ignorare iuſtitiam, & ſuam velle conſtituere, quam dicere, ego iuſtifico, ego ſanctifico? What other thing doe we feare in Antichriſt, De verb. domin. ſecund. Iohan. ſer. 45.

but that he ſhall honour his owne name, and contemne Chriſt? And a little before: What elſe doth he, which ſaith, I doe iuſtifie, I make holy? What is this but to deſtroy the righteouſneſſe of God, and to bring in his owne?

Marke now I pray you, if all this be not true of the Pope of Rome: for he taketh vpon him to iuſtifie, to ſanctifie, to diſpence with mens ſinnes for an hundred yea a thouſand yeeres: to rid ſoules out of Purgatorie: nay, to command Angels to carrie their ſoules to heauen, that dye in their pilgrimage to Rome, as Pope Clement the 6. did: what is this elſe but to ſay, Ego iuſtifico, ſanctifico, I iuſtifie, I ſanctifie? And who I pray you, doth ſo, if Auguſtine may be iudge, but Antichriſt? But thus the Pope doth: Ergo, he is Antichriſt.

Iuel.p.595.

And to conclude, ſuch an enemie is the Pope, as Leo the firſt ſpeaketh of, Epiſt.83. Pro fide vos agere creditis, & fidei contraitis: Eccleſiæ nomine armamini, & contra Eccleſiam dimicatis: Ye thinke ye worke for the faith, and ye goe againſt the faith: you are armed with the name of the Church, and yet fight againſt the Church.

I will adde the teſtimonie of an holy confeſſor of Gods truth Walter Brute: That the Popes come in the name of Chriſt it is manifeſt, ſaying, that they are his principall Vicars vpon earth: wherefore ſeeing they make themſelues the chiefe friends of Chriſt, and yet doe iuſtifie many lawes contrarie to the Goſpell of Chriſt, it is plaine that they are in earth the moſt principall Antichriſts, becauſe there is no worſe plague or peſtilence, then a familiar enemie. Fox pag.482.col.2.

Pag.444.2.30.

Chryſoſtome ſpeaking of Antichriſt, thus ſaith: Nomen tuum Chriſtianum ſonat, ſed facta Antichriſtum monſtrant, ſub nomine nomen impugnas, &c. perſequeris fidem, quam te profiteri ſimulas, &c. Thy name ſoundeth of Chriſtianitie, but thy deedes ſhew Antichriſt: vnder one name thou impugneſt another, thou perſecuteſt the faith, which thou faineſt thy ſelfe to profeſſe, &c. ſo alſo Theodoret, Chriſti Domini appellatione vſurpata, omnes decipiet: He ſhall deceiue all by vſurping the name of Chriſt our Lord, &c.

Serm.11.in Matth.

Epitom. diuin. decret.

2 So alſo Auguſtine expoundeth that place, Hee ſhall ſit in the Temple of God, non in templo Dei, ſed in templum Dei ſedeat, tanquam ipſe ſit templum Dei, quod eſt Eccleſia: He ſhall not ſit in the temple of God, but for the temple of God, as though hee were the temple of God, that is the Church, &c. And doth not now the Pope ſtand for the Church of God, when they apply, dic Eccleſiæ, tell the Church, to him, vnto whoſe finall reſolution all things muſt be referred.

Lib.2. de ciuit. Dei, c.19.

3 Our Royall defender of the faith herein concurreth with the faith of the Engliſh Church: hee ſhall ſit in the temple of God, that is the boſome of the Church, yea in the very heart thereof: now where this Apoſtolique Sea is, I leaue it to be gueſſed, as likewiſe who it is, that ſitting there, ſheweth himſelfe to be God, pardoning ſinnes, redeeming ſoules, and defining faith, controling and iudging all men, and to be iudged of none.

Apolog.Reg. p.53.

4 Thomas Aquine their owne Seraphicall Doctor, thus alſo expoundeth theſe words: He ſhall ſit in the temple of God: that is, either in the Church becauſe many of the Church ſhall receiue him, or as Auguſtine interpreteth, hee ſhall rule, tanquam ipſe cum ſuis ſit templum Dei, as though hee with his were the temple of God, &c. ſo Ribera their Ieſuite by the temple vnderſtandeth the Church, whereof that was a figure, &c.

Comment. in 2.Theſſ.2. lection.2. Comment.in Apocal.11.

THE SEVENTH PART, CONCERNING the miracles of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

63.Error.

ANtichriſt, they ſay, ſhall be a Magitian, and worke ſtrange ſignes and wonders by the power of the diuell: and theſe three miracles by name ſhall bee wrought by him: Hee ſhall cauſe fire to come from heauen, and make the image of the beaſt to ſpeake: and thirdly, hee ſhall faine himſelfe dead and riſe againe, Bellarm.cap.15. Theſe three miracles alſo are obſerued by the Doway Gloſſiſts, p.176.

1 Hee ſhall by the helpe of the diuell cauſe fire to come downe from heauen, as it is Apocalyps. 13.13.

Apoc.13.13.

Anſw. Firſt, it is a great queſtion whether the diuell haue any ſuch power to bring downe fire from heauen: for the Ieſuite himſelfe remembreth the ſtorie, 1.King.18. How Baal his Prieſts would haue fetched downe fire from heauen, but they could not: onely Elias did it: and he that will doe the like, muſt haue Elias his ſpirit, as Chriſt ſaith, Luk.9.55.

Luk.9.55.

Concil.Bracarenſ.1.can.8. It was decreed thus: Si quis credit, quod diabolus tonitrua, fulgura, tempeſtates, ſiccitates ſua authoritate faciat, ſicut Priſcillianus docet, anathema ſit: If any man beleeue that the diuell of himſelfe can raiſe tempeſts, thunder, lightning, drought, as Priſcillianus teacheth, him be accurſed, &c. How therefore can Antichriſt, who worketh by Sathan, doe that which Sathan himſelfe cannot doe?

Secondly, It is very groſſe to vnderſtand this literally: for the whole chapter is myſticall, of the beaſt with ſeuen heads, of another beaſt with two hornes, and all the reſt. But three wayes Antichriſt may fitly bee ſaid to bring fire from heauen. Firſt, by fire the holy Ghoſt may bee vnderſtoode, Matth. 3. and Act. 2. The ſpirit appeared in fierie tongues: ſo Antichriſt and his Miniſters make men beleeue that they doe conferre the holy Ghoſt, as in conſecration, in abſolution of ſinners, and ſuch like. Secondly, the Popes thunderbolts of excommunication, are reſembled to fire, whereby he hath made the whole world afraid in times paſt, as though hee could cauſe the heauens to fall vpon men; yea, to make the matter more likely, the Pope vſeth burning Tapers in excommunicating men, which with violence are throwne downe, as though God himſelfe did raine fire from heauen vpon them. And this is the terrible manner of their excommunication; there are three candles burning ſet vp; and then they begin to accurſe them, whom they excommunicate, body and ſoule to the diuell: and let vs, ſay they, quench their ſoules in hell fire, if they be dead, as this candle is put out (and with that they put out one of the candles;) If they bee aliue, let vs pray, that their eyes may be put out, as this candle is; and ſo the ſecond candle goeth out; and that all their ſenſes may faile them, as this candle looſeth his light, and ſo the third candle goeth out. Behold, here is the fire which the Pope and his Popelings doe bring from heauen. Sic Bullinger. ſerm. 60. in Apocalypſ. Adde vnto theſe their fierie ceremonies, their fierie iugling trickes alſo, as Cardinall Benno reporteth of Gregorie the ſeuenth, that great Sorcerer: Cum vellet, manicas ſuas diſcutiebat, &c. When he liſt, hee would ſhake his ſleeues, and out flew ſparkles of fire, &c. Thirdly, the Dragon is ſaid, Apocal. 12. 4. with his tayle to draw many ſtarres from heauen: that is, many excellent men, as ſtarres in gifts and knowledge, ſhall bee deceiued by the Pope, and be wonne vnto him; yea the Pope himſelfe is a Starre fallen from heauen to the earth, from heauenly doctrine to earthly tradition, Apocal. 9. 1. Thus Antichriſt alſo may bee ſaid to fetch fire from heauen.

Matth. 3.11. Act. 2.2.

Fox. pag. 1038.

2. The ſecond miracle, hee ſhall cauſe the Image of the beaſt to ſpeake, which the Ieſuite vnderſtandeth literally, that is, groſly.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Bellarmine and our Ieſuites doe not here agree; for Bellarmine ſaith, that theſe two miracles ſhall be wrought by Antichriſt himſelfe, or his Miniſters, to fetch fire from heauen; and to cauſe the Image to ſpeake. But the Rhemiſts ſay, this other beaſt, is another falſe Prophet, inferiour to Antichriſt, which ſhall alſo worke wonders, ſuch an one as Caluin, ſay they: wherein they ſhew their malice, more then learning; for Caluin, they know, tooke not vpon him to worke miracles. Annot. Apocal. 13. ſect. 3.

2. This cauſing the Image to ſpeake hath a better meaning: The Image of the beaſt is the ſhadow of the olde ſtately Empire of Rome, which was erected by the Pope: for the Weſt parts wanted an Emperour the ſpace of three hundred yeeres from Auguſtulus time till Pope Leo the third, who made Charles the great, King of France, Emperour: And at this day is there nothing in the Empire, but onely a name, title and Image: for neither hath the Emperour the Imperiall authoritie, which is in the Pope, nor the Imperiall kingdomes, vnleſſe he haue them of his owne. And the Pope onely maketh this Image to ſpeake, for vnleſſe he doe confirme the election of the King of the Romanes, hee is not thought worthie the name of Emperour. Bullinger. ibid.

Auentin. lib. 4.

3 And yet we denie not, but that they both haue and may make Images ſpeake either by the helpe of the diuell, as Dunſtane cauſed a Roode to ſpeake; or by iugling, as the Roode of Grace by gimmals was made to roule the eyes, moue the lips, and ſuch like, in King Henries dayes.

3 The third miracle that Antichriſt ſhall worke, is to faine himſelfe dead, and to riſe againe, Apocal. 13. 3.

Apoc. 13.3.

Anſw. There can be no ſuch thing gathered out of the text. Firſt, the words will not beare it: the text is, that one of the heads was wounded to death, and the wound was healed: which cannot be ſo meant, as though he fained himſelfe dead: but he receiued a wound indeede.

2 The ſenſe is myſticall, as through the whole chapter: Firſt, it is ſaid, that the ſeuenth head was wounded to death: but reuiued againe; that is, the ſeuenth gouernment of the Romanes in the Popedome: for the Papacie had many times deadly blowes, and yet was healed againe, eſpecially when there were three Popes together, at Rome, in France, and the third in Spaine: But this wound was cunningly healed vp in Pope Martin the fifth, in the Councell of Conſtance, the other three being depoſed. Sic Bullinger. Serm. 59. Secondly, it is ſaid verſ. 14. that the beaſt whoſe Image remained, had the wound of a ſword, and yet liued: which is vnderſtood of the Romane Empire, reuiued and quickened by the Pope.

The Proteſtants.

It is true that Antichriſt ſhall worke ſignes and wonders by the power of Sathan, 2. Theſſ. 2. but lying ſignes, both becauſe they ſhall be done to confirme lyes, neither ſhall they be ſuch as the Prophets wrought, but many of them but cunning and couſoning ſleights of Iuglers. And for ſuch wonders we neede not to ſearch farre, the Popiſh Church is full of them: where elſe then ſhould we looke for Antichriſt?

2. Theſſ. 2.9.

1 There haue beene of the Popes themſelues Sorcerers and Coniurers, ſuch an one Antichriſt ſhall be, ſaith Bellarmine. Silueſter the ſecond came vp to the Papacie by the helpe of the diuell, as wee haue before ſhewed. Gregory the ſeuenth was condemned in the Councell of Brixia for a Coniurer: and Benno a Cardinall in thoſe dayes thus writeth of him: that on a time hee ſending two of his ſeruants for a certaine Sathanicall booke, charging them not to looke into it; they notwithſtanding looked into it, and presently a great multitude of diuellish spirits were round about them, who were instant vpon them to knowe why they were called for: the seruants being at the first astonished, yet comming to themselues, enioyned them to plucke downe certaine high walles neere to Rome: and so they came to their master, Fox pag. 176. What other Antichrist now neede we looke for? If hee must bee a Coniurer, we may here make our choyce. Beside these two, Platina and other writers make mention of 20. Popes that bound themselues as slaues to the diuell.

2. We are not ignorant, what lyes and fables are reported by the Papists of the myraculous acts of their Popish Saints, of the which we haue spoken before: As how Dunstane appeared to a cripple, that came to his Tombe to bee helped of his lamenesse. How Plegilsus a Priest saw and handled the shape of a childe vpon the Altar, which after he had kissed, returned againe to the likenesse of bread. How a certaine Iewes boy told his father that he saw a childe broken in peeces vpon the Altar, and distributed among the Christians: and the boy for this, was cast into a furnace of fire, and was preserued from the fire by the Virgine Mary, which appeared to him, and spread her garment ouer him. Many such either lyes and fables, or works of diuels the Popish Church hath: what neede wee therefore doubt, but that it is the Antichristian Church?

Fox pag. 1148.

3. Augustine saith, S. Paul calleth them lying wonders, either because Antichrist shall deceiue men per phantasmata, which is iugling sleights, or because, ad mendacia per ea trahet credituros, By his wonders he shall make them beleeue lyes. But in which sense they are so called, it shall appeare when Antichrist is come saith he: and indeede it is now apparant; for our aduersaries haue plenty of both kinds, both miracles wrought indeed by the diuell, and many pretie iugling feates beside.

De ciuitat. Dei lib. 20. cap. 19.

4. These lying fables and forged miracles, which the Popes worke by, are euident signes of their Antichristian profession: For Antichrist shall come with the power of Sathan with signes and lying wonders, 2. Thess. 2. 9. Stories shew this to be true: Leo the third confirmed by his decree, that the bloud which issued out of a wodden Crucifix at Mantua, was the very [a] bloud of Christ, anno 800. Anno 1470. one Alanus a drowsie dreaming Monke forged this blasphemous tale, how the Virgin Marie came into his Cell, kissed him, drew out her breasts, and espoused her selfe to him: and these and such like Monkish tales went for currant in those dayes. Not much vnlike to the wicked practise of Polychronius a Monothelite heretike, who affirmed before the whole Councell Constantinop. 6. action. 15. that a certaine beautifull young man appeared vnto him, and taught him to say that there was but one will in Christ: and gaue him this for a signe, that hee should lay the schedule of his confession vpon a dead body, and so raise it to life. The Councell hearing him, immediatly caused a dead bodie to bee brought, but Polychronius muttering ouer the same a great while, could doe nothing, and so was condemned of the Councell for a lyar and an heretike.

2. Thess. 2. 9.

[a] This is reported by Platina in the life of Leo the 3. yet is it denied by the shamelesse detector: see Retect. p. 29.

Many such fabulous miracles Popish bookes are full of: such are, in the iudgement of a graue writer of their side, Petrus Pratus his catalogue of the Saints, and the Martyrologue of Hussuardus the Monke: Multis scatent quisquilijs: These bookes (saith he) are stuffed with much paltrie stuffe. Yea, the liues of the fathers, vnworthie of Ieromes name, are full of such fabulous narrations: sic Espence, in 1. Timoth. p. 151. C. Seeing then that the Popish Church is full of lying signes and miracles, where is Antichrist more like to be found, then there?

5. Tharasius well said therefore Nicen. 2. Miracula non credentibus data sunt, sed ijs, qui in incredulitate versantur: Miracles are not for those that beleeue, but for incredulous persons, &c. The incredulitie then of Papists better appeareth not, then by their insatiable desire, and superstitious vse of miracles.

Adde vnto these the beliefe of Iohn Tewkesbury confessor of the truth: Antichrist is not an outward thing, that is a man, that should suddenly appeare with wonders, as your forefathers talked of him, but Antichrist is a spirituall thing, &c.

Fox pag. 1025. col. 1.
Et p. 935. l. 30. edit. 1610.

In Psalm. 9.

And for further euidence herein. 1. Augustine saith, Per nefarias artes ad illud vanum et inane culmen venturus est, vnde habebit in imperio dolum in miraculis, &c. Hee shall come by wicked arts vnto that vaine height, hauing power in his Kingdome, and craft in his miracles, &c. This most fitly agreeth vnto the Popes, of whom diuers by confederacie with the diuell, haue obtained the Papacie: true miracles he shall worke none, but lying, and deceitfull. 2. As Damascene saith, he shall come with lying signes: true signes he shall shew none. 3. And what is meant by her fetching downe fire from heauen, thus our kingly interpreter consenting with the Church of England and Scotland herein sheweth: for this purpose she shall worke great miracles, wherein she greatly prides her selfe, deceiuing men with lying wonders and efficacie of lyes, as S. Paul saith: And among the rest of her wonders, she must bring fire out of heauen, fulmen excommunicationis, which can dethrone Princes, so that all, which will not worship the image of the beast, that is her vnlimited supremacie, must be killed and burnt as heretikes, &c.

4. Iudocus Clictoueus their owne man saith, Nulla secundum veritatem faciet miracula, &c. he shall doe no miracles in truth, but in shew and appearance.

THE

THE EIGHTH PART OF THE QVESTION, concerning the warres and kingdome of Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

BEllarmine ſaith, that Antichriſt ſhall make great battels againſt the Saints, and ſhall conquer the whole world: firſt, by craft he ſhall aſpire to the Kingdome of the Iewes: Secondly, he ſhall fight with three Kings, of Lybia, Egypt, Aethiopia. Thirdly, with a great armie hee ſhall perſecute the Chriſtians throughout the world; and this ſhall bee the battell of Gog and Magog, Bellarm. cap. 16. 64. Error.

Argum. 1. That he ſhall craftily aſpire to the kingdome, he prooueth it out of Dan. 11. 21. where it is propheſied of one that he ſhall obtaine the kingdome by flatteries. Dan. 11. 21.

Anſw. This propheſie of Daniel, as likewiſe the whole chapter, was hiſtorically accompliſhed in Antiocus Epiphanes, who defrauded Demetrius his brothers ſonne of the kingdome, and circumuented his elder brother Seleucus: ſo that it being once fulfilled, it cannot be wreſted to any other ſenſe: of Antichriſt it cannot be meant: for here is a ſucceſſion of Kings deſcribed, verſ. 19. One is ſaid to be ouerthrowne, that is, Seleucus, but not in battell, for he was poiſoned, v. 18. There another is ſaid to be ouerthrowne and to be no more found, that is, Antiochus magnus. But Antichriſt cannot ſucceed any in the kingdome of the Iewes: for he ſhall be their firſt King, as the Papiſts imagine.

Argum. 2. He ſhal (ſaith Bellarmine) ouercome three Kings, of Lybia, Egypt, Aethiopia, Dan. 11. 43. and this horne ſhall remoue three other hornes, Dan. 7. 8.

Anſw. This alſo muſt needs be vnderſtood of Antiochus Epiphanes: and they are two propheſies. Firſt, he is called a little horne, becauſe he was not heire to the kingdome: he remoueth three other hornes: for by his meanes Ptolemæus Philopater was caſt out of the kingdome in his fathers time Antiochus the great: his brother Seleucus poyſoned, his ſonne Demetrius diſinherited, Iun. Dan. 7. 20. The ſecond propheſie was alſo accompliſhed by Antiochus, who ouercame Egypt, and the countries adioyning.

Of Antichriſt it cannot be vnderſtood: for the firſt propheſie ſpeaketh of a beaſt with ten hornes, which muſt be vnderſtood of one kingdome and monarch, and by the ten hornes ten Kings are ſignified: for ſo was Antiochus Epiphanes the tenth from Seleucus: here then is a ſucceſſion of Kings: but Antichriſt ſhall not ſucceed any.

Argum. 3. The Ieſuite ſaith, that Antichriſt with a great armie ſhall vexe the whole world, and that ſhall be the battell of Gog and Magog propheſied of, Ezech. 38. 39. and Apocal. 20.

Anſw. The propheſie of Ezechiel was fulfilled in the time of the Macchabees, when as Gog and Magog, that is Antiochus, with the helpe of the Syrians and Scythians and other countries, moleſted the people of God: for verſe 23. chap. 39. the Prophet ſpeaketh of the captiuitie of Iſrael, from the which they ſhould at that time be deliuered. And againe, the Lord would not leaue his Church, which at that time endured great afflictions at the hands of the heathen, comfortleſſe: but if theſe propheſies of Ezechiel and Daniel concerned them not, then ſmall had been their comfort. Laſtly, the Iewes may with as good reaſon vnderſtand the propheſies concerning Chriſt, of their Meſſiah, whom they yet looke for, as you may theſe propheſies concerning the enemies of the Church, of your Antichriſt.

The other propheſie alſo is fulfilled, Apocal. 20. 8. how Gog and Magog from the foure corners of the earth, ſhall compaſſe the tents of the Saints: for by God and Magog, is vnderſtood the whole multitude of the enemies of the Church both within and without, as Turkes, Papiſts, Infidels, which all haue agreed together at times and in their turnes, though enemies amongſt themſelues, to afflict the people of God.

And yet more particularly Anno 1300. the Church of God began to be moleſted with the armies of Gog and Magog, when Boniface the eighth ſhewed himſelfe in his Emperiall robes, and ſo was the Gog in the Weſt; and Ottomannus was crowned Emperour of the Turkes, Magog in the Eaſt.

And if you will needs alſo haue the other two propheſies fulfilled againe, being once before accompliſhed: they agree fitly to the Turkiſh Empire: for Mahomet by craft and ſubtiltie aſpired to a kingdome, and in ſhort time he ouerran Egypt and Lybia, with other parts of Africa.

The Proteſtants.

WEe denie that there ſhall come any ſuch Antichriſt: or that it is poſſible for him to wage battell with the whole earth. Wee grant that the Antichriſt of Rome hath warred with the Church, poyſoning it with corrupt doctrine, and perſecuting the ſame by fire and ſword: which his rage is well ſlaked now, God be praiſed, in many places, and his tyrannie ouerpaſt: miſerable were the ſtate of the Church, if it ſhould endure ſuch a brunt againe.

Argum. 1. It is impoſſible, that Antichriſt in ſo ſhort a time as three yeeres and an halfe, ſhould conquer all nations, and be Monarch of the whole world, burne and ſacke Rome, and driue out the Pope, as the Papiſts grant themſelues, Bellarm. lib. 4. cap. 3. de pontifice. A man cannot in that ſpace trauell through the whole world, much leſſe conquer it. See the iudgement of one Hentenius a Papiſt of this matter before par. 2. qu. 10.

And ſeeing Antichriſt ſhall begin at Ieruſalem, make his habitation there, and haue an end there: (for, ſay they, he ſhall be ſlaine in Mount Oliuet, Gloſſ. ſup. Apocal.) It is not like that in his owne perſon he ſhould conquer the world: neither can it be thought that he ſhall doe it by his deputies, for then they ſhould be the Antichriſts, and not he.

Argum. 2. Antichriſt is not deſcribed in Scripture as a warriour, or warlike man ſitting harneſſed in his tent; but like an hypocrite aduancing himſelfe in the Temple; not comming with engins of warre, but deluding and deceiuing with falſe miracles, and lying ſignes, 2. Theſ. 2. Not with Haralds of armes openly proclaiming warre: but he ſhall worke in a myſterie, Apocal. 17. 5. Wherefore it is but a popiſh dreame and fancie, that Antichriſt ſhall be ſuch a mightie warriour: yet we denie not but that diuers of the Popes haue been warriours; but that was beyond the commiſſion of Peters keies.

Thirdly, they haue no ground of this their opinion out of Scripture: for neither Ezechiel nor Daniel maketh for them, prophecying of the ſtate of the Church before Chriſt: nor yet the Apocalypſe, the prophecie of Gog and Magog being accompliſhed in the greateſt part alreadie. Wherefore away with theſe miſtie cloudes of your braine-ſicke inuentions: they ſhall not bee able to abide the lightſome ſun-beames of the truth.

Laſtly, if Antichriſt by his warlike and bloodie diſpoſition may bee diſcerned, we ſhall find him no where ſooner then in Rome: Boniface 8. ſhewed himſelfe openly in his Emperiall robes with the ſword carried before him: Iulius the 2. threw Peters keyes into Tyberis, and drew out his ſword, and vnder this Pope, as Chronicles make mention, in the ſpace of ſeuen yeeres were two hundred thouſand men ſlaine by continuall warre. Alexander Farneſius Cardinall, Pope Paulus the 3. his Captaine generall againſt the Lutherans, gaue out theſe threatning words, that he would ſhed ſo much blood of the Lutheranes, that their horſe might ſwimme therein.

Such furious and Antichriſtian outrages of the Pope, are contrarie to the decrees of former times: Synod. Francica. Seruis Dei armaturam portare, pugnare aut in exercitum pergere prohibemus: We forbid the ſeruants of God (he meaneth Clergie men) to beare armour, to fight, or goe to battell.

Concil. Agathenſ. decret. ex Gratian. Non licet Epiſcopo, &c. It is not lawfull for a Biſhop to ſmite any with his hands, much leſſe with his ſword.

P. 1352. 2. 86. Maſter Rogers holy Martyr iudgeth the Church of Rome Antichriſtian, becauſe of their tyrannicall lawes, and maintenance thereof by cruell perſecution, Fox pag. 1488. col. 1.

Aduerſ. Prax. Tertullian thinketh, that Antichriſt ſhall not be onely a perſecuter of the Church by tyrannie, but a ſeducer thereof by falſe doctrine, as he ſaith, Viderint Antichriſti, qui negant patrem & filium: Let the Antichriſts ſee to it, that denie the Father and the Sonne.

Lib 24. de fid. orthod. cap. 27. Damaſcene alſo ſaith, that hee ſhall perſecute the Church of God: but he ſhall come alſo in lying ſignes and wonders.

Pag 85. And ſo our Royall Apologiſt doth aptly expound the pale horſe, Apoc. 6. to bee Antichriſt, which ſhall kill both with the ſword, that is, vſe great perſecution, and with ſpirituall hunger, or famine of the true word of God, &c. Antichriſt ſhall not only be a perſecutour, but a deſtroyer, and ſeducer by falſe doctrine.

Lib. 30. in Iob. cap. 3. Gregorie the firſt ſaith, In fallacia ſua Antichriſtus graditur, Antichriſt goeth on in his craft, &c. he ſhall not ſo much be an open warriour, as a cunning deceiuer.

THE NINTH AND LAST PART OF THIS queſtion, whether the Pope be Antichriſt.

The Papiſts.

65. Error. THis queſtion pincheth our aduerſaries very ſore, that we ſhould touch their head ſo neere, as to make him Antichriſt: this being once knowne, we need not labour much about other matters: for Antichriſt with all his doctrine muſt not be heard, but abhorred of the Church.

They therefore, craftily foreſeeing this, doe take great paines to deliuer the Pope out of this danger, and haue found out many ſtarting holes, but all to ſmall purpoſe: yea their forefathers ſeeing the matter ſo plaine, and almoſt put out of doubt, gaue ſtraight charge in the late Councell of Laterane to all Preachers, that none ſhould dare once to ſpeake of the comming of Antichriſt. This argueth a guilty conſcience. But yet they face out the matter, and ſay, the Pope cannot be Antichriſt: their arguments are none other then thoſe we haue heard, being eight in number.

1 Antichriſt ſhall bee one ſingular man: the Popes haue been many, part. 1. of this queſtion. Secondly, he ſhall raigne but three yeeres and an halfe: but the Pope hath continued many hundred yeeres, part. 2. Thirdly, he ſhall be knowne by his name: the Popes haue ſundrie names, part. 3. Fourthlie, he muſt come of the ſtocke of the Iewes: but there was neuer yet any Iew Pope, part. 4. Fifthlie, his ſeate muſt be at Ieruſalem: the Popes is at Rome, part. 5. Sixthly, he ſhall manifeſtly deny Chriſt: ſo doth not the Pope, ſay they, part. 6. Seuenthly, hee ſhall doe ſtrange miracles, as bring downe fire from heauen, cauſe Images to ſpeake, part. 7. Eighthly, he ſhall wage great battels, and conquer all the world, part. 8. which cannot agree to the Pope: Ergo, he is not Antichriſt.

Anſw.

Anſwer. To theſe eight arguments, we haue before anſwered ſeuerally; ſhewing how fabulous, ridiculous and impoſſible our aduerſaries aſſertions are, without ground of Scripture, ſhew of reaſon, or colour of argument. Wherefore we will not trouble the Reader with needleſſe repetitions, deſiring him to haue recourſe to that which hath been alreadie ſaid.

Argum. 9. Further the Rhemiſts doe thus reaſon: Antichriſt ſhall exalt himſelfe aboue all, that is called God, 2.Theſ.2.4. So doth not the Pope, who is ſo farre from exalting himſelfe aboue God, that hee prayeth to Saints, kneeleth before the Altar, adoreth the Euchariſt. annot. 2.Theſ.2.4. & ibid. [illegible] — 2.Theſ.2.4.

Anſ. Firſt the Pope in hypocriſie maketh ſhew of a ſuperſtitious kind of deuotion, yet is in truth the Prince of Pride; for as he calleth himſelfe Seruum ſeruorum, Seruant of ſeruants; yet hath made Kings his footſtoole: ſo alſo, though he ſeeme to be a worſhipper of Saints, yet he taketh vpon him more then either Angell or Saint, as to forgiue ſinnes, to deliuer ſoules from Purgatorie, to diſpenſe with the Scriptures. Secondly, as touching the adoration of the Euchariſt, therein he ſheweth his pride, in adoring his owne inuention; and beſide he honoureth his breaden god with Maſſe ſeruice for his owne aduantage, becauſe it is ſo gainefull vnto him: and yet what account hee maketh of it may appeare, when his throne is ſet higher then the altar; and in proceſſion, hee rideth on mens ſhoulders, when the hoſt is carried vpon a palfreyes backe.

Argum. 10. Satan muſt be bound a thouſand yeares, and afterward let looſe; and then Antichriſt ſhall come, whoſe kingdome ſhall increaſe, and faith decreaſed toward the end of the world. But if the Pope be Antichriſt, who hath been theſe thouſand yeeres in the Church, then Antichriſt ſhould raigne while Satan is bound, which cannot be; and his kingdome waxe weaker toward the end of the world contrarie to the Scripture, which ſaith that at Chriſts comming, faith ſhall ſcarce bee found in the earth, &c. Rhemiſt. ſec. 7. 20. Apocal.

Anſw. Firſt we ſay not that Antichriſt hath been 1000. yeeres in the Church, but began to be reuealed 1000. yeeres after Chriſt in Siluester 2. who by Necromancie obtained the Papacie, and in Boniface the 3. who did iuſtifie the error of Purgatorie and Inuocation of Saints. So that Satans looſing and Antichriſts reigning ſhall fall out together, that is at the expiration of the thouſand yeeres. Secondly, it is more agreeable to the Scriptures, that the kingdome of Antichriſt ſhall bee weakened toward the end of the world: God ſhall firſt conſume him with the breath of his mouth, that is his word, as alreadie, thankes be to God, the preaching of the Goſpell hath ſhaken the walles of Babylon: but he ſhall perfectly be deſtroyed by the brightneſſe of his Comming, 2.Theſ.2.8. And though faith generally ſhall decay in the end of the world, becauſe iniquitie ſhall abound: yet faith ſhall remaine in the true members of Chriſt, that are in continuall expectation of his comming. — 2.Theſ.2.8.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Pope of Rome is very Antichriſt, and that all the qualities and properties which the Scripture deſcribeth Antichriſt by, do fitly agree vnto his perſon: and that we are not therefore to expect and looke for any other Antichriſt: Thus by teſtimonie of Scripture, and ſufficient reaſons deduced out of the ſame, we truſt it ſhall appeare to all men.

Argum. 1. The firſt place of Scripture is Dan. 11. Where many notes and markes are declared proper to Antichriſt, yet eſpecially ſet foorth to deſcribe Antiochus Epiphanes, who might bee very well a type and figure of Antichriſt, who was then to come. — Dan.11.

1. Verſe 36. It is ſaid, He ſhall doe what him liſteth. This is moſt true of the Pope: his will muſt ſtand for reaſon, Diſtinct. 96. cap. ſatis. If the Pope ſhould draw infinite ſoules to hell, no man is to ſay vnto him, Sir, why doe you ſo? Diſtinct. 40. Here Bellarmine hath but this poore ſhift to ſay, that it is meant onely of publike iudgement, that no man is by authoritie to call the Pope to account: but yet a brotherly admonition may be vſed. But who ſeeth not that the words are generall: Nemo debet ei dicere: No man ought to ſay vnto him: neither Iudge, nor other. — Dan.11.36.

2 He ſhall magnifie himſelfe againſt God, and ſpeake blaſphemous things againſt God: hath not the Pope done ſo? Of him it is ſaid, that God and the Pope haue but one Conſiſtorie; I am able to doe almoſt all that God can doe, Fox pag. 782. columne 1. artic. [illegible] I am aboue all and in all: Hoſtienſ. Nay, that Dominion and Lordſhip which Chriſt had in earth, but habitu, in habite, the Pope hath actu, in act and in deed. Againe, as we reade, the earth is the Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof, and as Chriſt ſaith, all power is giuen mee in heauen, and in earth: ſo is it to be affirmed, that the Vicar of Chriſt hath power on things celeſtiall, terreſtriall, infernall, apud Fox. pag. 781. col. 1. Now let the diſcreet Reader iudge, whether this fellow doth not magnifie himſelfe, and ſpeak blaſphemouſlie againſt God. — Pag. 726. 1. 46. — Pag. 725. 2. 13.

3 He ſhall proſper till the wrath be accompliſhed: So hath the Pope had but too good ſucceſſe: he hath ſubdued Emperours, and made them his ſeruants, trode vpon their necks, made them ſerue at his table, crowned them with his feete, made them hold his ſtirrop, and leade his horſe by the bridle. But we doe hope that his date is out, and that he ſhall proſper no longer.

4 Verſe 37. Hee ſhall not care for the God of his fathers: No more doth the Pope; for hee hath inuented and erected a new breaden god, which hee worſhippeth, hangeth vp in Churches, carrieth about in proceſſion, being but a peece of bread. This breaden God almighty, his forefathers neuer knew. — Dan.11.37.

5 He ſhall not care for the deſires of women: So he prohibiteth lawfull marriage, permitteth adulteries, and the vnnaturall luſt of Sodomites. Bellarmine firſt denieth the text, which is faithfully tranſlated according to the Hebrew. Secondly, he ſaith, the place is meant litterally and properly of Antiochus, who was giuen to the pleaſures of women.

Anſw. Firſt, if it be meant literally of Antiochus, then can it not be meant literally of your Antichriſt: If Antiochus be but a type of Antichriſt, then can you not neceſſarily conclude out of this place: for types prooue not, vnleſſe they be diuine, that is, appointed of God to bee types, which you cannot ſhew for this place: See then, the beſt arguments that you haue for your Antichriſt, out of the propheſies of Daniel and Ezechiel, are found but weake. Secondly, as Antiochus was giuen to vnlawfull deſires of women, ſo is the Pope: yet might hee bee an enemie to chaſt and holy marriage, and ſo is the Pope. And by the way let it be noted, that the Ieſuite picketh quarrels with Scripture, and maketh it falſe: for the text ſaith, He, that is, Antiochus, ſhall not care for the deſires of women. Yes (ſaith the Ieſuite) hee ſhall bee giuen to the pleaſures of women, cleane contrarie to the text, Bellarm. cap.21.

6 Verſ.38. He ſhall honour his god Mauzzim, that is, a god of power and riches, with gold, ſiluer, precious ſtones: Both of theſe are moſt true of the popiſh religion: for their god hath brought them great riches, lands, treaſure, poſſeſſion: by their idolatrous Maſſes, they haue greatly enriched themſelues, wherein thir breaden god plaieth the chiefe part, and therfore they doe worſhip him againe with gold, ſiluer, precious ſtones: what rich Corporals, and Altarclothes, Copes, Veſtiments of veluet, ſilke, wrought with gold, are ſeene in their Churches? what gilding of Roodes, and Roodlofts, garniſhing of Idols, what rich Crucifixes of ſiluer, of gold, beſet with pearle and precious ſtones?

This deſcription therefore of Daniel, as you ſee, doth in euery reſpect agree with the conditions and properties of Antichriſt of Rome, Argument Illyrici.

2.Theſ.2.4. Argum.2. Secondly, S. Pauls deſcription in euery point alſo is verified in the Pope. Firſt: Hee ſhall exalt himſelfe aboue God, and all that is called God, 2.Theſ.2.4. So the Pope challengeth the ful authoritie of Chriſt, as we haue ſhewed before, and exalteth himſelfe aboue Emperours, which are called gods vpon earth: yea they haue taken the iuſt proportion of inequalitie betweene the Pope and Emperour: for the Pope is 47. degrees aboue the Emperour, as the Sunne is 47. degrees bigger then the Moone, Innocent.3. in decretalib.

2 He ſhal ſit in the Temple, that is, in the Church: ſo the Pope nameth himſelfe head of the Church, and hath the keyes, as he braggeth, both of heauen and hell. Therefore the Turke cannot be that Antichriſt, becauſe he is out of the Church: and ſo in truth is the Pope, but yet he callengeth to him and his the name of the Church.

3 The myſterie wrought in Pauls time, and afterward encreaſed: ſo not long after the Apoſtles time, the Biſhops of Rome began to lift vp their heads aboue other Churches, as Zozimus falſified the Councell of Nice, and ſent to the 6. Councell of Carthage, to haue it there confirmed, that it might be lawfull to ſend vp appeales to Rome.

4 Antichriſt ſhall come with lying ſignes: So hath the Pope done, as experience prooueth, and we haue ſhewed before.

5 Verſ.11. God ſhall ſend ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhall beleeue lies: And in time of Poperie, men indeed were ſo ſtrongly deluded, that the father perſecuted the ſonne, the ſonnes ſet fire to their father, yea the husband was made a witneſſe againſt the wife, the wife againſt her husband, and ſeruants accuſed their maſters. Theſe things are ſo well knowne in ſtories, that I neede not come to particulars.

Ioannes Stella, Platina. Ioan.Baleus. 6 Antichriſt is called a wicked man, and a man of ſinne, verſ.3.8. And where ſhall you find more wicked men, then among the Popes? Silueſter the ſecond gaue his ſoule to the diuell to obtaine the Papacie. Benno reporteth of Hildebrand, that hee poyſoned fiue Popes to come to the Popedome. P.131.2.80. & p.132.1.10. Pope Stephen and Sergius, tooke vp the bodie of Formoſus, and mangled it, cutting off his head and fingers, and ſo caſt it into Tibris, Fox pag.146.col.1. Much vnlike to one of their predeceſſors Sixtus the third, who tooke the bodie of Baſſus his enemie being dead, who had accuſed him before, embawmed it, and buried the ſame with his owne hands. We haue heard before, what a holy Father Pope Iohn the 13. was, he lay with his owne ſiſter, and with his fathers Concubines, playing at dice called for the diuell, was ſlaine in adulterie. And was it not, I pray you, a common prouerb in England? He that goeth to Rome once, ſeeth a wicked man; hee that goeth twice, learneth to know him; hee that goeth the third time, bringeth him home with him. Fox pag.841.

1.Iohn 3.4. That Antichriſt that man of ſinne ſitteth in Rome, it might eaſily be prooued by a particular induction: for ſinne being the tranſgreſſion of the law, as S. Iohn defineth it. If we ſhall ſhew how the Pope of Rome hath notoriouſlie tranſgreſſed the law and euery part thereof, who will doubt but that he is that man of ſinne, and ſo conſequently Antichriſt?

Ex Balei chronico de actis pontif. The firſt Commandement: Thou ſhalt haue no other gods, &c. Among other corruptions, forbiddeth all propháneneſ and infidelitie, all confederacie or ſocietie with the diuell: for the firſt wee haue diuers examples of Popes: Boniface the eighth, when Porchetus Archbiſhop of Genua came to him to receiue aſhes in a publike ſolemnity, he caſt aſhes into his eies and ſaid, Memento homo, quia Gibellinus es, &c. Remember man that thou art of the faction of the Gibellines, and ſhalt returne to duſt. Was not bee great deuotion? Gregorie the twelfth pulled a certaine preaching Carmelite Frier out of the pulpit and cast him into priſon, becauſe he perſwaded the Popes, who were then diuided, to vnitie. Innocentius the eighth was ſeene for the moſt part to ſleepe in the time of diuine ſeruice. Iulius the ſecond caſt S. Peters keyes into Tyber in great diſdaine, ſaying, Seeing Peters keyes did not ſerue his turne, he will ſee what Pauls ſword can doe. Leo the 10. is reported to haue ſaid to Cardinall Bembus: Quantum nobis profuit fabula iſta de Chriſto: How much hath this fable or tale of Chriſt aduantaged vs? And ſuch hath been the pietie and deuotion of our holy fathers of Rome.

Concerning the ſecond point, their familiaritie with the diuell, the two forenamed examples of Silueſter and Gregorie are able to certifie vs. Benedictus the 9. about the ſame time, was accuſtomed to call vp euill ſpirits, and would by his diueliſh enchantments, cauſe any woman whom he liked, to come vnto him. Paulus the 3. was a ſorcerer and enchaunter: he gaue vnto a certaine noble Matrone a little hallowed [illegible] to hang about her neck, which ſhould ſhield her from certaine moleſtations: he made Dyoniſius Seruita a notable Necromancer, Cardinall, thereby ſhewing his affection to that profeſſion. And many other of the Popes were giuen to theſe diueliſh ſtudies, to the number of 22. ex Balæo, Platina, & alijs.

The 2. Commandement: Thou ſhalt make to thy ſelfe no grauen image, &c. How the Popes haue tranſgreſſed this law, their practiſe to this day ſheweth, who are more giuen to idolatrie and worſhip of images, then any knowne Nation vnder the Sunne. Conſtantinus the 1. decreed that images ſhould be worſhipped in Churches. Bonifacius the 4. begged of wicked Phocas Emperour, the Church in Rome called Pantheon, and in ſtead of Cybele an Ethnick Goddeſſe, there placed the image of the Virgin Mary to be adored. Leo the 3. iudged certaine forged blood which iſſued out of a wooden Crucifix, to be the true blood of Chriſt, and ſo to be adored.

The 3. Commandement: Thou ſhalt not take the Name, &c. Here blaſphemie is forbidden. Diuers of the Popes haue been moſt horrible blaſphemers: Iulius the 3. is a notable example heereof: who being forbidden of his Phyſition to eate ſwines fleſh, on a time called for it, more ſwiniſh himſelf, with great indignation and blaſphemie, ſaying, Giue me my porke, Al diſpetto de Dio, in deſpight of God. At another time, at ſupper miſſing the cold peacock, which he commanded to be kept for him, hee began to curſe and ſweare, and being admoniſhed by ſome of his Cardinals, not to bee moued ſo for a trifle: he added further, If God were angrie with Adam for an apple, may not I much more for a peacocke, being his chiefe Vicar vpon earth: ex Balæo. Alexander the fifth being at the point of death, ſaid thus to the Cardinals, My peace I giue vnto you, my peace I leaue with you. Thus moſt blaſphemouſly abuſing the holy ſpeech of Chriſt, and appropriating it to himſelfe. Paulus the fourth ſaid thus to his fellow Ieſuites, whoſe ſect he is ſaid to haue founded, going to Rome, to bee in the eye and ſight of the world, Whither I goe, you cannot come: blaſphemouſly abuſing Chriſts ſpeech to his owne purpoſe. Thus they are found grieuous tranſgreſſors of this law.

The 4. Commandement: Remember thou keepe holy, &c. Yet Alexander the ſixth vpon feſtiuall daies gaue himſelfe to heare Plautus Comedies, and to bee preſent at other playes: his feſtiuall exerciſe was, from Hadrianes Mount to behold the gay harlots, and braue bawdes and ſtrumpets that paſſed by: ex Balæo de actis pontific.

The 5. Honour thy father and mother, &c. Yet Paulus the third poyſoned his mother and his nephew, that the whole inheritance of the Farneſians might come vnto him. And concerning the publike and common parents, Emperours and Kings and ciuill Magiſtrates; they were neuer more diſhonoured then by Popes. Alexander the third did tread on Henry the Emperours neck. Adrian made him hold his ſtirrup. Diuers of them cauſed Emperours to kiſſe their feete. Paſchalis the ſecond raiſed vp Henry the fifth moſt vnnaturally againſt his owne father, to depoſe him from the Empire. Innocentius the third ſet vp Otho againſt the Emperour Philip, by whom hee was ſlaine. Innocentius the fourth hired one Manfredus to poyſon the Emperor Frederick. Such honour haue the Popes ſhewed to their earthly parents.

The 6. Thou ſhalt not kill. Iohn the 13. did thus vſe his Cardinals, ſome had their eyes pulled out, ſome their tongues, ſome their fingers cut off. Gregory the 7. poyſoned, by wicked Brazutus meanes, fiue Popes in order, to come himſelfe to the Papacie. Vrbane the 6. put fiue of his Cardinals into ſacks, and drowned them. Alexander the 6. commanded Antonius Mancinellus his tongue, and both his hands to be cut off, becauſe he made an oration inuectiue againſt his impure life. Paulus the third poyſoned his owne ſiſter, whom hee had knowne carnally, becauſe ſhe loued other better then him: the ſame Pope alſo poyſoned Fulgoſius and Conturenus two Cardinals, that began ſomewhat to fauour the Goſpell.

The 7. Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie. As for ſimple fornication, it was no rare thing in the Popes chaire. Iohn the 13. committed vncleannes with Rainera and Anna, two widowes. Iohn the 23. was accuſed, Concil. Conſtantienſ. ſeſſ. 11. for defiling of virgins. Paulus the 3. enticed a noble virgin to follie promiſing her mariage.

The Popes many of them haue been adulterers. Gregorie the 7. retained Mathilda the Counteſſe, hauing forſaken her husband Earle Azon. Paulus the 3. was found with Nicholas Quercaeus his wife, who gaue him a wound, which was ſeene till his dying day.

But what will ye ſay, if theſe holy fathers haue fallen into horrible inceſt? Iohn the 23. was accuſed in the foreſaid Councell, to haue knowne carnally his brothers wife. Alexander the 6. (oh moſt horrible impietie!) did lie with his owne daughter Lucretia. Paulus the 3. that filthie wretch, vſed carnally his ſiſter, daughter Conſtantia, and Neece. Neither ſtaied they here in theſe outragious luſts, which were not yet againſt the naturall vſe, but fell alſo into helliſh vnnaturall filthineſſe, into that abominable ſin of Sodometrie. Iulius the ſecond did abuſe two noble youths that were ſent to Rome by the French Queene to bee inſtructed. Iulius the third had his Ganymedes, to whom, beſide the reſt of his Cardinals leaue, hee gaue a red Hat. Neither did they onely in their owne filthie perſons practiſe this wickedneſſe, but permitted it alſo to others. Sixtus the fourth erected a Stewes in Rome for both ſexes: he gaue licenſe to his two nephewes Cardinals, and their houſehold, in the three hot moneths of the yeere, Iune, Iuly, Auguſt, to vſe maſculine venerie. Alexander the ſixth gaue leaue to Pet. Mendoza Cardinall, to vſe his owne baſtard ſonne as his ſpouſe: ex Baleo. Who hearing now of theſe filthie abominations of that ſtrumpet of Babylon, will not eaſily grant Antichriſts ſeate to be there?

The 8. Thou ſhalt not ſteale. Notwithſtanding this, Boniface the 7. carried away all S. Peters treaſure at Rome, and fled to Conſtantinople. Iohn the 18. as Platina ſaith, in pontificatu fuit fur & latro, behaued himſelfe in his Papacie as a theefe and a robber. As for iniuſtice and oppreſſion, which is alſo a kind of theft, nothing with the Popes was more common. Zacharias Pope put Childericus King of France from his kingdome, and gaue it to Pipinus. Adrian the firſt, Charlemaine King of France being dead, diſinherited Bertha his wife with her two ſonnes, and gaue the kingdome to Charles their vncle: and many ſuch other examples might be alleaged.

The 9. Thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe, &c. Yet this notwithſtanding, Vigilius accuſed Silverius Biſhop of Rome falſely, that he would haue deliuered Rome to the Gothes: Silverius was therefore depoſed, and Vigilius ſet in his place, who was iuſtly called to account by Theodora the Empreſſe, for that he had promiſed to reſtore Anthemius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, excommunicated by his predeceſſors, and afterward refuſed to doe it: ex pontifical. For this is alſo a breach of this law, not to performe the oth, or promiſe made, which with the Popes was not daintie. Paſchal the 2. confirmed by an oth to Henry the 5. the imperiall right of inueſting Biſhops; but afterward reuoked it againe. And as they were thus perfidious themſelues, ſo they gaue counſell to others. Eugenius the 4. perſwaded Vladiſlaus King of Hungarie to breake his league made with Amurathes the great Turke, which was to his owne ruine, and of all Chriſtendome. Alexander the 6. betraied Gemes Baiazetes the great Turkes brother, that did flie to Rome for ſuccour, and being thereto largely hired by the great Turke, procured him to be poyſoned.

The like trecherous part plaied Alexander the 3. long before this with Fredericke the Emperour, who ſent his counterfeit to the Sultane, againſt whom he warred, whereby the Emperour was taken: but the Sultane his enemie dealt honorably in deliuering him, whereas the Pope, his pretended friend, plaied a right Iudas part. The Popes their predeceſſors, though bad enough, yet were aſhamed of ſuch Iudaicall practiſes: Nicholas 1. when Michael the Emperour ſent to him, to deliuer one Theognoſtus, which was fled to the Pope for reliefe, made this anſwer: Nolumus, deo volente, Iudæ proditori ſimiles eſſe, &c. We will not be like the traytor Iudas, nor be more wicked then the Pagans: for you may remember how one of your predeceſſors ſent to the King of the Agarens, to haue one deliuered, but it was not granted: Epiſtol. ad Michael. Thus wee ſee by the Popes owne teſtimonie, that they which betray ſuch as of truſt commit themſelues vnto them, doe excedere paganorum nequitiam, are more wicked then the heathen: but ſuch were ſome of the Popes.

The 10. Thou ſhalt not couet, &c. The couetouſnes of Popes hath been inſatiable, as it may appeare by the infinite treaſure which they heaped together. Iohn the 23. is ſaid to haue gathered 205000. crownes. Calixtus the 3. left to his ſucceſſor an hundred and fifteene thouſand duckets, which he had ſcraped together by his Indulgences. Leo the 10. ſent his Indulgences abroad with this commiſſion, that whoſoeuer would giue tenne ſhillings, ſhould deliuer a ſoule from the paines of Purgatorie: the Popes chiefe factor for this merchandiſe, was one Simon a Frier Franciſcane of Millaine, who by this meanes gathered ſuch infinite ſummes of money, that hee offered in one day aboue 1200000. duckets for the Popedome. And no marueile if the Popes did grow ſo infinitely rich, for all things were put to ſale: as ſpirituall liuings, Biſhoprickes, Benefices, &c. The Archbiſhop of Canturburie was wont to pay to the Pope tenne thouſand florences for his firſt fruites, and fiue thouſand for the vſe of his pall: ſo did the Archbiſhop of Yorke. Iohn the 23. exacted the tenths of Eccleſiaſticall liuings. Vrbanus the ſixth, the firſt fruites. Innocentius the ſeuenth, more vnreaſonable then they, would haue had halfe the fruites of Benefices, ex Baleo. Cardinalſhips alſo were ſold. Leo the 10. made 31. Cardinals in one day, getting thereby vnreaſonable ſummes of money. The Pope offered the Empire to ſale: as Alexander the 3. tooke money of Alphonſus King of Spaine for the Empire, and afterward ſold it to another. Yea the Popedome it ſelfe hath bin ſet to ſale: Benedictus the 9. ſold the Papacie to Gregorie the 6. for 1500. pound. Yea honeſtie and all is ſaleable at Rome: the reuenewes of the harlots in Rome amounteth yeerely to 40. thouſand pound, Conſul. Chronic. de actis Paul. 3. To conclude this place, conſidering this vnſatiable thirſt of the Popes, the Greekes, anno 1330. or thereabout, made a fit anſwere to the Pope, who had ſent to them before, telling them that Chriſt had but one Church, and he was the head thereof: their anſwere is this: Potentiam tuam ſummam erga tuos ſubditos ſentire credimus, ſuperbiam tuam ſummam tolerare non poſſumus, auaritiam ſatiare non valemus: Your tyrannie toward your ſubiects we eaſily beleeue, your infinite pride wee cannot beare, nor ſatiſfie your couetous deſire. ex actis Iohan.23. Thus haue I ſhewed by the way the generall corruption that raigneth in the Papall chaire of peſtilence, and the wicked vſage of that ſinfull ſeate, ſo that in no place in the world, neither amongſt the Turkes or Infidels can the man of ſinne be ſooner found then there. Let vs now proceed.

Argum.3. The third place we doe take out of the Apocalypſe, chap.9. where is a plaine ſtorie ſet downe of the Pope. Apoc.9.1.3.

1 Verſ.1. Hee is a ſtarre fallen from heauen; he is departed from the ancient faith of Rome to ſuperſtition and idolatrie.

2 He hath the key of the bottomleſſe pit: who giueth the croſſe keyes in his armes but the Pope? Who ſaith he may euacuate all Purgatorie at once if he will but he? Who ſaith, he may, plena iure innumerabiles animas ſecum ad tartara detrudere, by full right, carrie downe to hell with him chariots laden with ſoules? cap. Si Papa. diſtinct.40. Is not this the Pope? Who then more fitly may bee ſaid to haue the key of the bottomleſſe pit?

3 There ariſe out of the bottomleſſe pit a great flocke of Locuſts, that is, the innumerable ſort of begging Friers: for they are in euery reſpect deſcribed. Firſt, compared to Locuſts for their number, verſ.3. There were an hundred diuers ſorts of Friers, Fox pag.260. Secondly, they had power giuen them for fiue moneths: that is, as Walter Brute expoundeth it, taking a moneth for thirtie daies, and a day for a yeere, as it is prophetically taken, an hundred and fiftie yeeres: for ſo long it was from the beginning of the Friers vnder Innocent the third, anno 1212. to the time of Armachanus, who preached, diſputed and wrote againſt the Friers about anno 1360. Thirdly, they ſhall ſting like Scorpions, not ſlay all at once, but venome and poyſon the conſcience with the ſting of their peſtilent doctrine. Fourthly, other parts alſo of the deſcription agree, as verſ.7. They are as horſes prepared to battell, that is, ſtout and ambitious: their haire as the haire of women, that is, they ſhall be effeminate, and giuen to the luſts of the fleſh: their teeth as the teeth of Lions, that is, they by valiant begging ſhall deuoure the portions of the poore: as it was well proued in King Henry the 8. daies, in the Supplication of beggers, that the ſumme of the Friers almes came to a great ſumme in the yeere: for the fiue orders of Friers had a penie a quarter for euery one of euery houſeholder throughout England, that is, for them all twentie pence by the yeere: Suppoſe that there be twentie houſeholds in euery towne, and let there bee tenne thouſand pariſhes and townes in England; it will not want much of twentie thouſand pound. Thus had they Lions teeth, that is, conſuming and deuouring. Laſtly, they haue a King, verſ.11. whoſe name is Abaddon, a deſtroyer: for the Pope, their chiefe prince and patrone, hath by his Antichriſtian doctrine laid waſte the Church of God, Argument. Chytræi.

Fox p.444. 2,5.

Argum.4. The fourth place of Scripture we will take out of the 17. of the Apocalypſe, there the ſeate of Antichriſt is deſcribed. Firſt, verſ.5. It is called Babylon, the citie which raigneth ouer the Kings of the earth, verſ.18. This can be no other but Rome, which then had the Empire of the whole world: as Walter Brute, holy confeſſor of Gods truth, witneſſeth: In the daies of S. Iohn the whole world was ſubiect to the temporall Empire of the citie of Rome, and afterward it was ſubiect to the ſpirituall Empire, or dominion of the ſame, Fox pag.499. col.1. Secondly, It is the citie built vpon ſeuen hils or mountaines, verſ.9. that is no other but Rome. Thirdly, the whore, which is Antichriſt, ſhall ſit vpon the beaſt with ſeuen heads and ten hornes, that is, ſhall ſucceed in the Empire, and haue the authoritie thereof: ſo hath the Pope. Fourthly, the ten hornes, that is, the Kings of the earth ſhall giue their authoritie to the beaſt, but afterward ſhall deuoure her fleſh: Euen ſo the Kings of the earth, by their ſword, maintained the authoritie of the Pope: but now being taught by the Goſpell, they are made the Lords free men, and begin to ſubdue their necks from his yoke.

Apoc.17.5.

Pag.459.2.80.

Argum.5. The fifth place is, 1.Ioh.2.22. Who is a lier, but he that denieth that Ieſus is Chriſt? the ſame is Antichriſt that denieth the Father and the Sonne. 1.Ioh.2.22.

But ſo the Pope of Rome, though not openly and apertly, yet cloſely and ſubtilly is an enemie vnto the whole Trinitie: He exalteth himſelfe aboue God the Father; becauſe he taketh vpon him to diſpenſe not only againſt the law of nature, but againſt the law of God, the morall law, and againſt the precepts both of the old and new Teſtament: but a law cannot be diſpenſed withall but by the ſame authoritie or greater.

Againſt Ieſus Chriſt he exalteth himſelfe, and all his offices: hee denieth him to bee the onely Prophet, ſaying the Scriptures are vnperfect, and that their traditions are alſo neceſſarie to ſaluation. Againe he maketh other bookes Scripture, then thoſe which are Canonicall. His kingly office he doth arrogate to himſelfe, in making lawes to binde the conſcience, in ordaining other Sacraments, in granting Indulgences and Pardons, and ſaying that he is the head of the Church. His Prieſthood he is an enemie vnto, conſtituting another prieſthood after the order of Melchiſedech then that of our Sauiour Chriſt, which begun vpon the Croſſe, and remaineth ſtill in his perſon, being incommunicable to any other creature: yet they make euery ſacrificing prieſt to bee of the order of Melchiſedech. He impugneth the office of the holy Spirit, counting that prophane which the holy Ghoſt hath ſanctified, as mariage and meates: arrogateth in all things the ſpirit of truth not to erre: applieth the merits of Chriſts paſſion after his owne pleaſure, by Pardons, Indulgences, by ceremonies and Sacraments ments of his owne inuention, Esek. 2.Thes. 2. vers. 10. Ergo, we conclude out of S.Iohn, that seeing he denieth Iesus to be Christ, he is Antichrist.

Argum. 6. Sixthly, Saint Paul saith, that Antichrist shall be an aduersarie, [illegible] 2.Thess. 2. vers. 4. An aduersarie in doctrine, teaching cleane contrarie to the Gospell of Christ: so doth the Pope.

* Though this word only, be not expressed, yet must this be the sense of these Scriptures. See Reinol. pag. 213.

1 The Scripture saith, we ought to put our trust* (only) in God and not in man, Ierem. 17.7. and to call vpon God (onely) in the day of trouble, Psal. 50.15. and to worship him in spirit and truth, Ioh. 4.24. The Papists say cleane contrarie, that we must call vpon Saints, and beleeue they can helpe vs, and they teach vs to fall downe before Images, which are stocks and stones.

2 The Gospell teacheth, that we are freely saued by Iesus Christ, without workes, which neither merit remission of sinnes, nor eternall life: for eternall life is the free gift of God, Rom. 6.23. And our sinnes are forgiuen vs freely, because they are not imputed, Rom. 4.6. They affirme cleane contrarie, that by our merits wee may deserue heauen: and that vita aeterna, is merces bonorum operum, that eternall life is the reward of good workes. But S. Paul saith, it is a free gift, Bellarm. cap. 23.

2.Pet.1.10.
Heb.4.10.

3 The Gospell teacheth vs, that we should grow vp to an assurance of our election, 2.Pet. 1.10. and with boldnes to call vpon the name of God, Heb. 4.16. The Papists say, we should be kept alwaies in doubt, and it is presumption to be assured of the fauour of God.

Genes.6.5.
Rom 7.7.

4 The Gospell saith, that not only externall acts, but euen secret thoughts are sinne, yea the very concupiscence of the flesh to be sinne, Genes. 6.5. Rom. 7.7. They denie that concupiscence and euill thoughts are sinne, vnlesse they be voluntarie, and haue the consent of the will, ibid.

Rom.8.7.
Luke 17.10.

5 The Gospell teacheth, that it is impossible for any man to keepe and performe the law of God, Rom. 8.7. Luk. 17.10. They doubt not to say, that a man by grace may fulfill the law, and by fulfilling of it deserue heauen.

1.Cor.11.

6 Christ instituted the Sacrament in both kindes; and Paul, 1.Cor. 11. giuing a direction concerning the Sacrament, not onely to the Pastors and Ministers, but to the whole Church of Corinth, doth rehearse the institution in both kinds: but the Papists doe minister but in one kinde to the people.

1.Cor.3.11.

7 The Gospell saith, that the Church is builded vpon Christ, and he is the only foundation thereof, 1.Cor. 3.11. The Papists hold that Peter first, and now the Pope, whom they make his successor, is the foundation of the Church, Argument. Chytraei. And thus wee see, the Pope in his doctrine is a plaine aduersarie to Christ, and therefore Antichrist.

Apoc.17.1.

Argum. 7. The seuenth argument, Apocalypse 17.1. Antichrist is called the great whore. And here we are to note the singular prouidence of God, who suffereth not one iot of his word to fall to the ground: for euen so verily, anno 853. next after Leo the 4. there was a right whore elected Pope called Iohn, or if you will, Ioane the 8. who sate in the Papacie two yeeres, fiue moneths; and on a time being with childe, fell in labour in the middest of a solemne procession. Whereupon there was a certaine Image of a woman with a childe set vp in the same place where the Pope was deliuered: And euer since the Popes, when they goe to Laterane, doe shunne that streete, being yet the neerer way, abhorring that fact and the memorie thereof. There was also long after a chaire of Porphyrie stone kept in Laterane, with an hole in the middest, wherein the new elected Pope was wont to sit to haue his humanitie tried. Iewel. pag. 428. Defens. Apol.

Obiect. 1. Harding, and since him Bellarmine obiect, that there was neuer any such Pope, because she is not registred in the Popes Calendar.

Answ. No, they left her out for shame, as Marianus Scotus writeth. Againe, Bishops names haue vpon smaller occasions been left out: as Chrysostomes name was striken out, vpon displeasure, out of the table of the Bishops of Constantinople: So Pope Cyriacus is not reckoned in the Calendar of the Popes, and yet he was one of them.

Obiect. 2. Whereas it is said, that this Pope Ioane was first student at Athens, and afterward professed at Rome: Harding denieth, that at Athens then there was any place for students, but all was barbarous, and so saith Bellarmine; neither that at Rome there was any open profession of letters at that time.

Answ. First, anno 680. the Bishop of Athens was at a Councell at Constantinople, called Synodus sexta, anno 742. at the second Councell of Nice, there were many Bishops of Greece present: and Pope Ioane followed, anno 853. and how should Athens afterward become barbarous, being inhabited all this while by Christians? for it was not taken of the Turkes before anno 1440. Secondly, me thinkes it is a discredit for Rome, that there should be there vnder the Popes nose no profession of learning, and that there should be there no Vniuersitie of Students, where the vniuersall Bishop sate. But Theodericus Niemus, sometime the Popes Secretarie, saith, she read a Lecture two yeeres at Rome.

Obiect. 3. It is not like that God would suffer Saint Peters chaire to bee polluted by a woman, Harding.

Answ. You presume too much of Gods prouidence, hauing no such promise. Why might not a woman as well creepe into S. Peters chaire at Rome, as one did into S. Andrewes of Constantinople? as Bellarmine confesseth: what priuiledge hath one more then the other? And why might not a wo-

Y

[illegible] well be Pope, as Popes made by women? as Iohn the 11. got the Popedome by Theodora that harlots meanes? Iohn the 12. was made Pope through the helpe of Marozia, that notorious strumpet. For the whore of Babylons seate was then, as reason would, gouerned by strumpets, the like by the like: So was Victor the third, elected Pope, at Mathildes that noble harlots suite. But to put the matter out of doubt, Mantuan that elegant Poet, writeth thus of Pope Ioane:

Hic pendebat adhuc sexum mentita virilem
Fœmina, cui triplici phrygiam diademate mitram
Extollebat apex, &c. lib. 3.
Here did as yet, in shew a man, a woman sit,
Whose head a tripled costly Crowne did fit.

Caranza also the Epitomizer of the Councels, doth assigne vnto this whore of Babylon, 2. yeeres, one moneth, foure daies; so long did she occupie that chayre of pestilence. Platina also reporteth the same storie, an author of their owne.

Obiect. 4. As for the chayre (saith Harding) it is a fable: but Bellarmine more modestly granteth there is a chayre of Porphyrie, but to another purpose, to shew the Popes humilitie, not to trie his humanitie. Againe, Harding saith it is a lye, that the Popes refraine to goe that way. But Bellarmine, that knoweth Rome better then he, denieth not that the Pope so doth, but not for any such hainous fact there committed, but because it is a strait way, and is not fit for his traine. And as for the Image, Harding saith, it representeth no such thing, but is rather like one of the great ragged stones at Stonage: Bellarmine denieth not, but there is such an Image, but it seemeth not to be the picture of a woman, but rather of some heathen Priest going to sacrifice. We see how handsomly they agree in their answers: And no meruaile, for if one lyer is many times contrarie to himselfe, how should two lyers agree? But these men goe onely by coniectures: we haue their owne writers against them: for Theodoricus Niem saith, there is such an Image that resembleth such a thing, and that the Popes will not goe that way in Procession to this day vpon that occasion. And as for the chayre of Marble to that vse to search the Pope, Sabellicus reporteth it, Ænead. 9. lib. 1.

In this one example we may see the boldnesse of our aduersaries, which are not ashamed to denie so famous a storie, being reported by Sabellicus, Leonicus Chalcondyla, Marianus Scotus, that liued about the yeere 1028. Sigebertus Gimblacensis anno 1100. beside thirteene Historiographers, as they are quoted by Bishop Iuel, and of them all not one a Lutherane. It is almost as foule a shame for them to denie so manifest and plaine a thing, as it is a great blot to their succession, that a whore sate sometimes in the Papall chayre. Thus then by euident demonstration it appeareth, that the Pope is the whore of Babylon, and so consequently very Antichrist.

Defens. Apolog. pag. 457.

Argum. 8. He that was letted and hindered from comming while the Empire stood, and shall bee reuealed after the dissolution of the same, is Antichrist: so the Apostle saith, 2. Thess. 2. 6. You know what withholdeth, &c. So much also is confessed by the Rhemists, Apocal. 17. annot. 9. But this is the Pope, who was hindered from his princely supremacie or tyrannie rather in the Church, by the flourishing state of the Empire: and since the decay thereof, the Papacie hath encreased. First by the absence of the Emperour in the East parts, the Pope incroched in the West. Secondly, the Empire was weakened by translating of it from the Greekes to the French, from the French to the Germanes. Thirdly, whereas Rome was subiect to the Emperour, now hee is excluded and beareth onely a vaine title to be called, Rex Romanorum. Fourthly, whereas the Emperour bare stroke in the election of the Pope, now he hath nothing to doe with it. Fifthly, whereas the Imperiall state went by succession, now it is conferred by election, by the Popes deuice, that passing from one kingdome to another, by shifting of places it might be weakened: So that now it is plaine that there remaineth nothing but an image and shadow of the Empire; so that the Empire being thus defaced, Antichrist must needes bee reuealed: And who should he be, but he, that hath incroched vpon the Imperiall right and possessions, which is the Bishop of Rome?

2. Thess. 2. 6.

Argum. 9. He is Antichrist, and so called, which impugneth Christs kingdome in earth, that is, the externall regiment which he appointed in his Church, and the forme of gouernment ordained therein, applying all to himselfe by singular tyrannie. (For which cause Athanasius calleth Constantius the Emperour, an Arrian, Antichrist, for making himselfe Principem Episcoporum, Prince of Priests, &c.) which also impugneth Christs Priesthood in earth, &c. hee is Antichrist, Rhemist. totidem verbis sect. [illegible] 2. Thess. 2. But the Pope impugneth both the Kingdome and Priesthood of Christ: Ergo, hee is Antichrist.

First, he impugneth the kingdome of Christ, which is either externall, or internall, that is, spirituall: for the externall gouernment of the Church, which Christ hath appointed by making some Apostles, some Euangelists, some Pastors and Doctors, &c. Ephes. 4. the Pope hath arrogated all to himselfe: who chalengeth to be called vniuersall Bishop, Prince of Priests, which Athanasius condemned in Constantius as an Antichristian title. And concerning the title of vniuersalitie, Gregorie 1. thus writeth: Farre from all Christians hearts be this name of blasphemie, in which the honour of all Priests is taken away, while it is chalenged of one man to himselfe, lib. 4. Epist. 32. So then the Pope hath taken away the externall gouernment of the Church, by applying all to himselfe. And concerning the spirituall regiment of the Church, which is more properly the Kingdome of Christ, hee hath incroched vpon that alſo; both by preſuming to diſpence againſt the law of God, by aboliſhing the inſtitution and right vſe of the Lords Supper, in taking vpon him to forgiue ſinnes, and to abſolue from the paine and the fault; with ſuch like intolerable preſumptions.

Secondly, he impugneth the Prieſthood of Chriſt, both concerning his ſacrifice, in offering vp Chriſt daily in the Maſſe, as though his ſacrifice vpon the Croſſe were not ſufficient; as alſo as touching his mediation, in making other mediatours and interceſſors beſide Chriſt, as though hee were not the alone able and ſufficient Mediatour. So then, ſeeing the Pope moſt notoriouſly doth impugne both the Kingdome and Prieſthood of Chriſt, he is certainly Antichriſt.

Sermon in Cantic.33.
Epiſt.56.

Lib.6.epiſt.30.

Laſtly, in the tenth place, their owne witneſſes ſhall ſpeake: Bernard ſaith, Beſtia de Apocalypſ, cui datum eſt os, loquens blaſphemias, Petri Cathedram occupat: The beaſt in the Apocalypſe, to the which a mouth was giuen ſpeaking blaſphemies, doth occupie Peters chayre. Here it is anſwered by a Popiſh obiector, that Bernard ſpeaketh not of the right Pope, that then was Innocentius, but of the vſurper. Anſwere. It is enough that S. Peters chayre is here affirmed to be the ſeate of Antichriſt. Bernard alſo ſaith of the ambitious Prelates of thoſe times, Miniſtri ſunt Chriſti, et ſeruiunt Antichriſto: They are the Miniſters of Chriſt, and yet ſerue Antichriſt: but whom elſe did they ſerue, or were ſubiect vnto, then to the Pope. Likewiſe he maketh mention of one Norbertus, whom he commendeth, who affirmed, that Antichriſt ſhould be reuealed in that preſent generation. Ioachim Abbas ſaith, Antichriſtus iampridem natus eſt Romæ: Antichriſt a good while ſince was borne at Rome. The Biſhops in the Councell at Reynſpurge ſay thus: Hildebrandus Papa, ſub ſpecie religionis, iecit fundamenta Antichriſti: Hildebrand vnder colour of holineſſe, hath laid a foundation for Antichriſt. Nay, long before any of theſe, Gregorie the firſt, firſt of all the Gregories, and the beſt of all the Popes that haue followed him, thus propheſied of his ſucceſſours; Ego fidenter dico, quod quiſquis ſe vniuerſalem ſacerdotem vocat, vel vocari deſiderat, in elatione ſua Antichriſtum præcurrit: I ſpeake it confidently, that whoſoeuer calleth himſelfe vniuerſall Prieſt, or deſireth ſo to bee called in the pride of his heart, is the fore-runner of Antichriſt, &c. But the Popes of Rome are now called vniuerſall Biſhops or Prieſts: Ergo, they are either Antichriſts, or the fore-runners of Antichriſt. But it is not like that Antichriſt ſhould haue ſo many fore-runners, and ſo many yeeres, almoſt a thouſand ſince Boniface the third, was firſt called vniuerſall Biſhop: Ergo, Antichriſt is alreadie come, and hath beene a good while; and where elſe ſhould he be, but there where his fore-runners were, namely, at Rome?

We want not here the witneſſe of their owne law in this caſe for the triall of this point, who ſhould be Antichriſt.

Firſt, Nicholaus 2. decreeth him to be Antichriſt, that was elected or made Pope by ſymonie, Decret.23.cap.1. but ſo was Gregorie the 6. made Pope, giuing to his predeceſſor Benedict the 9. 1500. pounds: and as things goe now a daies it was good cheape.

Secondly, Diſtinct.79.cap.1.Nichol.2. Qui ſine concordi electione, &c. He that is inthronized Pope without the Canonicall and concording election of the Cardinals, is not Apoſtolicall, but Apoſtaticall. But when Iohn 23. was made Pope, and two more beſide, a Gregorie and a Benedict, the Cardinals concorded not in their election: Ergo, the Pope then was an Apoſtata.

Thirdly, Cauſ.6. quæſt.7. cap.3. Gregor.7. thus decreed, that if any Biſhop granted tithes or oblations, laicalibus perſonis, ſeu conſanguineis, to lay perſons, or his kinſemen, inter maximos hæreticos, & Antichriſtus non minimus haberetur, he ſhould be counted amongſt the greateſt heretikes, and not the leaſt Antichriſt, &c. But the Biſhop of Rome hath done this, by whoſe deuice many portions of tithes haue beene appropriate to lay perſons: Ergo, he is an heretike and Antichriſt.

Fourthly, Decret. par.2. cauſ.24. quæſt.1. cap.25. that ſaying of S. Hierome is approued: Qui Chriſti non eſt, Antichriſti eſt: Hee that is not of Chriſt, is of Antichriſt. And againe hee ſaith, Aduerſarius Chriſti & Antichriſtus eſt, &c. He is an aduerſarie to Chriſt, and an Antichriſt, whom Chriſts precepts offend, or diſpleaſe: Hieron. de ægrotat. Bleſill. But ſuch an one is the Pope, that altereth and changeth the precepts of Chriſt: for Chriſt ſaid, Feede my ſheepe, but hee preacheth not: Chriſt appointed the Sacrament in both kindes, hee commandeth it to be vſed in one: Chriſt ſaid, beleeue in me: but hee would haue vs beleeue in the Virgin Mary: And many ſuch like precepts he hath contrarie to Chriſt: Ergo, he is Antichriſt.

Fifthly, Cauſ.25. quæſt.1. cap.5. Damaſus: In ſpiritum ſanctum blaſphemat, &c. Hee that violateth the Canons of the fathers is a blaſphemer againſt the ſpirit. But ſo doth the Pope, in calling himſelfe vniuerſall Biſhop, contrarie to the Canons: diſtinct.99. cap.5. and in many other things he doth tranſgreſſe the Canons: Ergo, hee is a blaſphemer; and conſequently Antichriſt, who hath names full of blaſphemie, Apocal.17.3.

Sixthly, Ibid. cap.11. Hadrian. Anathema, quicunque regum: Hee is an anathema, or accurſed, that doth violate the decrees of Kings. But ſo doth the Pope, whoſe Canons doe euery where impugne the Ciuill conſtitutions. Ergo.

Seuenthly, Cauſ.35. quæſt.5. cap.3. Gregor. Vxorem propinqui mei, &c. The wife of my kinſeman I muſt hold as neere vnto mee, as if ſhee were my kinſewoman in the ſame degree, &c. whoſoeuer thinketh otherwiſe, is Antichriſt, &c. But the Pope ſo thinketh, that permitteth a brother to marrie his brothers wife, which is as neere as his owne ſiſter by this Canon: Ergo, he is Antichriſt.

[illegible] part.3. dist.3. cap.1. Qui die sabbati, &c. They that forbid to worke vpon the Saturday [illegible] Antichristi, are the Preachers of Antichrist. But so doth the Pope, that enioyneth [illegible] to be as strictly kept holy daies, as the Lords day. Ergo.

Axor. instit. Moral.p.1.lib. 4.c.10.

Let vs see in the last place the glorious testimonie of the holy Martyrs & confessors of Gods truth; Walter Brute proueth the Pope to be Antichrist by this argument: He which establisheth his lawes, allowing warres and the slaughter of men in the warres, as well of Christians, as of Infidels; doth he not [illegible] contrarie to the Gospell and law of Christ? therefore he is Antichrist: but this doth the Pope, &c. Fox pag.487.col.1.

Iohn Husse holy Martyr: The way of Antichrist is wickednesse and sinne, of the which the Apostle speaketh to the Thessal. &c. pag.617.col.2. But in Rome, euen in the Popes chayre, all abomination, as pride, couetousnesse, symonie, are to be found, pag.628.col.1. Ergo, the Pope is Antichrist.

Pag.568.1.1.
Pag.578.1.10.

Thomas Bilney holy Martyr: the Pope sitteth in the temple of God: for the conscience of man is the temple of the holy Ghost: as S. Paul saith, 1.Cor.3. The temple of the Lord is holy, which is you: but the Pope sitteth in the conscience, counting them guiltie of death, that breake his constitutions: therefore sitting in the temple as God, he is Antichrist, pag.1002.col.2.

For this truth also many besides gaue their liues: Thomas Benet burned at Excester, for saying the Pope is Antichrist, pag.1037.col.2. Iohn Stilman burned in Smithfield for the same, p.815.col.2. Adde hereunto. 1. That note of Antichrist, which Tertullian giueth, who now with-holdeth? Nisi Romanus status, cuius abscessio in decem reges dispersa Antichristum superducet: But the Romane state, which being dispersed vnto tenne Kings, shall bring in Antichrist: He then which hath succeeded vpon the ruines of the Romane state, is Antichrist: but that is the Pope, who hath risen by the fall of the Empire: he then is Antichrist.

Lib. de resurrect. carnis.

2 Barlaam a Greeke Monke doth giue this note: that if the Pope of Rome doe not obserue the ancient Canons, He is to be shunned, as a wolfe and as an enemie of the Church: That is a verie Antichrist: and that the Pope doth transgresse the Canons, he sheweth, in that he taketh vpon him to bee president of Councels, to prescribe lawes to the Church, to ordaine all other Patriarkes, all which things are contrarie to the ancient Canons.

Lib.de princi- patu. 16.

3 Let vs see some demonstrations vsed by the reformed Churches: As that seemeth to be a liuely description of Antichrist and his companie, Apocal.9.21. as is excellently obserued by the Royall Apologie of the English Church: they are described, by their worshipping of Idols of golde, siluer, brasse, &c. which is the maine doctrine of the Romane Church: by their murther, that is, their persecution and bloudie massacres: by their sorceries, as they say their agnus Dei will slake fire, they haue their hallowed shirts and other reliques, and certaine prayers that wil preserue men from the violence of shot, of fire, sword, thunder, &c. they are noted for their fornication, both spirituall in their idolatrie, and corporall, as appeareth by restraint of mariage in their Clergie, & the many orders of Monks: their theft is seene in heaping vp their treasure, with their iugling ware and merchandise of the soules of men, by Iubilies, Pardons, Reliques, and such like.

Apolog.Reg. p.88.

So also in the 13. chapter euery part of the description sheweth the Pope to be Antichrist. 1. Hee sitteth vpon a beast with 7. heads, that is, the great Citie scituate vpon 7. hilles. 2. Hee is likened to a Leopard, because of the bastard forme of gouernement, in shew spirituall, but in deede temporall. 3. One of his heads of gouernement, wounded (by the Gothes and Vandales) was healed againe. 4. All that dwell in the earth, shall worship him, vers.8. which worship Ethnike Rome, neuer craued of any. 5. Hee hath two hornes like the Lambe, vers.11. in outward shew pretendeth to be the spouse of Christ, but speaketh like the Dragon, teaching damnable doctrine. 6. His power is as great as of the former Ethnike Empire. vers.12. 7. All both great and small must receiue his marke. vers. 16. that is, be subiect vnto him. 8. The number of his name is 666. So the title of vniuersall Bishop was first giuen to Boniface the 3 anno 606. and confirmed and fully setled vpon his successors 60. yeeres after.

Apolog.92.93. 94.

So also our English confession holdeth the Pope to be Antichrist: Art.5. he doth giue himselfe, as is written by his owne companion Gregory, A presumptuous, profane, sacrilegious, Antichristian name, that he is also the King of pride, that he is Lucifer, that he hath forsaken the faith, and is the fore-runner of Antichrist.

Hann.sect.11. p.361.

With the English Church, other reformed Churches concurre. Confess. of Bohemia, c.8. In Antichrist we acknowledge a double ouerthwartnesse, to wit, dishonestie and deceiuing, &c. false doctrine, and corrupt life, &c. which in the Antichristian Church are openly practised. Belgia. artic.36. That all idolatrie and counterfeit worship of God may be cleane abolished, that the Kingdome of Antichrist may bee ouerthrowne, and that the Kingdome of Christ may be enlarged.

Harm.p.318.
Sect.19.p.388.

4 The Romanists themselues are here plentifull witnesses, to shew where Antichrist is to be found, and by what markes to be discerned.

1 Bellarmine telleth vs, that Antichrist shall be the last King, that shall hold the Romane Empire, yet sine nomine Romani Imperij, without the name of the Romane Empire, &c. But it is euident, that the Pope holdeth the Romane Empire, but vnder another name of ſpirituall iuriſdiction: yea, hee ſucceedeth in ſome of the temporalties of the Romane Empire, as in the Citie of Rome, and other territories of Italie: as Azorius their Ieſuite teſtifieth, that after Gregorie the ſecond had excommunicated Leo the Emperour for pulling downe of images, and abſolued his ſubiects of their oath, the Romanes did ſweare fealtie, and to become obedient to the Biſhop of Rome.

Lib.3. de Roman.pontif. c.15.

Azor. inſtit. Moral. p. 2. lib. 4. c. 20.

2 Gregorie ſaith, that Antichriſt, when he commeth, ſummam huius ſeculi poteſtatem obtinebit, ſhall haue the chiefeſt power in earth, &c. and he ſhall ſeeke to draw men to his obedience, both miſſis prædicatorib, & commotis poteſtatib. both by ſending of Preachers, and ſtirring vp of the powers, &c. See here this verified in the Pope, who chalengeth both ſwords: as Boniface the 8. ſaith, Vterq; gladius eſt in poteſtate Eccleſiæ, ſpiritualis & materialis: both ſwords are in the power of the Church, the ſpirituall, and materiall: and Gregorie the ſeuenth ſaith, Imperia et regna, &c. auferre et dare poſſe, that he would giue and take away Empires and Kingdomes, &c.

Lib. 33. in Iob c. 20. Extrauag. c. vitam ſanctam. Platina de vit. Gregor. 7. Moral. in Iob c. 16.

3 Gregorie giueth another note of Antichriſt: as Chriſt choſe for his Preachers ſimple men, ſo Antichriſt ſhall elect aſtutos et duplices miniſtros, craftie and doubling miniſters, which ſhall profeſſe the knowledge of the world: ſuch are the Popiſh Ieſuites, with their equiuocating trickes: who profeſſe themſelues to be cunning ſtatiſts; and hold it lawfull to ſay one thing with their mouth, and to meane another in their heart, which they call their mentall reſeruation: who elſe are thoſe doubling deceiuers, then theſe Popiſh claw-backes.

In Daniel. c. 11 lib. 14. ſec. Nec prima. Platina de vit. Innocen. 8. Guicciard. de Alexand. 6. In Apocal. c. 13 com. 1.

4 Pererius ſaith, that Antichriſt outwardly ſhall faine chaſtitie, but inwardly ſhall be ſuper omnes libidinoſus, excede all men in luſt, &c. This agreeth and ſuteth to the Popes, who forbid mariage to their Clergie, as pretending chaſtitie, yet diuers of them haue liued vncleane liues, and haue beene detected of adulteries.

5 Viega ſaith that Antichriſt Reuel. 13. 11. is deſcribed, to haue hornes like a Lambe, that is, ſhall faine gentleneſſe, and innocencie, but hee ſhall ſpeake like a Dragon, hee ſhall practiſe crueltie, &c. And are not their Popes ſuch, who pretend mercie, and loue to the Church of Chriſt, but doe moſt cruelly make ſpoile and hauock thereof by all kinde of crueltie: they profeſſe themſelues to bee ſeruants of ſeruants in their ſtile, yet in their practiſe chalenge to be Lords of the earth.

Lib. 3. de Roman. pontif. c. 12. ſect. de doctrina. Gratian Diſtinc. 96. Continuator. Friſingenſ. lib. 4. c. 55.

6 Bellarmine ſaith, that Antichriſt affirmabit ſe Deum eſſe, ſhall affirme himſelfe to be God, &c. So Pope Nicolas vſeth this argument, why the Pope ſhould not be iudged of any, becauſe God cannot be iudged of men: and it is euident, Pontificem a pio principe Conſtantino Deum appellatum, that the Biſhop (of Rome) was called God of the godly Prince Conſtantine.

And to make vp all, Alexander the third thus denounceth againſt Octauian the Antipope, That he prefigured the times of Antichriſt, and did ſo lift up himſelfe, that he ſate in the temple of God, ſhewing himſelfe as God, and many haue ſeene not without abundance of teares, the abomination of deſolation ſtanding in the holy place, &c.

Now therefore ſeeing wee haue ſo many witneſſes, the Scripture, reaſon, experience, authorities, their owne witneſſes to proue the Pope Antichriſt: who will either bee ſo ſimple, as ſeeing ſo good grounds, not to beleeue it; or ſo ſcrupulous, hauing ſuch certaine euidence, to doubt thereof? And thus at the length, by Gods gracious aſſiſtance, wee haue finiſhed and brought this great queſtion concerning Antichriſt, to an end; as alſo the whole controuerſie as touching the Biſhop or Pope of Rome.

THE

THE FIFTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING SPIRITVALL PERSONS, COMMONLY CALLED THE CLERGIE.

HAuing now ſufficiently handled the controuerſie of the chiefe member of the Militant Church, which our aduerſaries ſay is the Pope, we muſt come in the next place to ſpeake of the middle parts, which are thoſe whom they call Clericos, Clerks, and they are of two ſorts; Secular, which haue any publike function in the Church; or Regular, which liue according to ſome rule, and they are called Monachi, Monkes. Firſt then of their ſecular Clerkes. 72.Error.

This Controuerſie containeth ſixe queſtions.

1 Of the name and title of Clerkes or Clergie men.

2 Concerning the election of Biſhops and Miniſters: firſt, of all in generall: ſecondly, of the election of the Biſhop of Rome.

3 Concerning Eccleſiaſticall orders: firſt, in generall: ſecondly, of the difference of Biſhops and other Miniſters: thirdly, of Cardinals.

4 Concerning the keyes of the Church, and the power of binding and looſing: the queſtion diuided into foure parts.

5 Concerning the mariage of Miniſters: three parts of the queſtion.

6 Of the Maintenance of the Church by tithes: in two parts.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING the name of Clerkes or Clergie men.

The Papiſts.

THis name Clergie, in Latine, Clerus, is a name made proper to the Spiritualtie, by vſe of antiquity, and agreeably to Scriptures: they are ſo called, becauſe they are the Lords lot, and conſecrate to the diuine ſeruice: the reſt are called popular, or lay men, which meddle not with any function of the Church.

Argum. 1. This word (ſay they) hath been vſed by all antiquitie, and thereby Church Miniſters onelie ſignified: Ergo, it is a fit and decent name, Bellarmine lib. 1. de Clericis, cap. 1. Rhemenſ. 1. Pet. 5. 3.

Anſ. Firſt, the Fathers vſed this name Clergie, but not as it is now vſed of the Papiſts, which doe hereby as it were exclude the people of God from the Lords inheritance, counting them as Aſſes and Dogs, in reſpect of the Clergie: as one of their owne writers thus complaineth; Quomodo excuſandi vel ferendi hodierni in eccleſia præſules, &c. How can the Prelates of theſe daies be excuſed, or ſuffered, which doe rule ouer men as beaſts in the Northerne parts, (he meaneth the Lapiani, and Pilapij people of thoſe countries) which doe lay ſuch grieuous yokes vpon thoſe ſimple people, as ſtray ſheepe, hauing no paſtor, that they cannot ſubmit themſelues to the Lords ſweete yoke, &c. Eſpenc. in. 1. Tim. p. 312. f. Such diſtinction betweene the Clergie and Laitie the Fathers neuer allowed: they vſed it as a ciuill indifferent name, for an outward diſtinction of their callings, not as a name of more holines, and ſo we refuſe it not.

2 What though by cuſtome and continuance this name hath been ſomewhat abuſed, wee will learne herein to ſpeake of the Scriptures, and not of men.

Argum. 2. Secondly, we miſlike this name (ſay our aduerſaries) becauſe wee would haue no difference betweene the people and Clergie, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſ. It is a great ſlander: becauſe we make no ſuch difference, as they doe, as to make the Clergie onely Gods lot and portion, and to count the people as vnholie, and to preferre euery ignorant doltiſh Maſſe-prieſt, before the beſt and deuouteſt of the people: therefore they imagine we make no difference at all. We doe diſtinguiſh the calling of the one, and the other: none of the Lay ſort to be ſo hardie as to meddle with the Word or Sacramentes, which are committed to the Miniſters, which you notwithſtanding permit them to do: and the people euery where to reuerence their Paſtors, and to yeeld due obedience vnto them. But that the calling of the one before God in it ſelfe, is more meritorious then the other; that we doe not, neither dare affirme.

Deut.18.2. Argum. 3. The Leuites in the time of the law, were ſeuered out from the reſt of the Lords people, and he was their lot and inheritance, and they the Lords lot, Deut. 18.2. And as the Leuites were then, ſo are the Miniſters of the Goſpell now, Bellarm. ibid.

Exod.19.6. Reuel 1.6. 1.Pet.2.9. Anſ. Firſt, the Lord is rather ſaid to be their lot, becauſe they had the Lords portion, and liued of the Altar, then they are ſaid to be the Lords lot: for the whole Nation was holy vnto God, and a kingdome of Prieſts, Exod. 19.6. Secondly, it followeth not, that becauſe there was a legall and ceremoniall difference then betweene the Prieſts and the people, that therefore it ought to bee ſo now: Nay rather the contrarie followeth, becauſe there was ſuch a difference then, that therefore the Prieſthood of the law being ceaſed, there ought to be none ſuch now: for Chriſt hath made vs all Kings and Prieſts to God his Father, Apocal. 1.6. And we are all a royall Prieſthood and holy Nation, 1.Pet.2.9. Now, though there be a difference of callings amongſt men, yet before God we are all Prieſts alike; and there is but one Prieſt for vs all to Godward, euen Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

The Proteſtants.

THe name of Clerks, or Clergie-men, if it bee not vſed as a name in it ſelfe of greater holineſſe and merite, and ſo be in effect a proud excluding of the reſt of Chriſtians from the Lords inheritance; we refuſe it not, though there are better names and titles, to call the Miniſters of the Goſpell by: yet being taken as it is in Poperie, we doe vtterly refuſe and reiect it.

1.Pet.5.3. Firſt, 1.Pet.5.3. The Apoſtle exhorteth the paſtors and teachers to feede the flocke of Chriſt, non vt dominantes Cleris: Not as Lords ouer Gods Cleargie and inheritanue. Here S. Peter calleth the whole flocke, the Clergie: wherefore it appeareth, that this difference was not knowne in the Apoſtles time of lay and Clergie men. And it is againſt all ſenſe, that Saint Peter ſhould vnderſtand here the inferiour Miniſters, and ſo exhorteth the ſuperiour Paſtors and Biſhops to looke to their Clergie, as the Rhemiſts would haue it. For S. Peter writeth not onely to Biſhops, but to all Presbyters, Paſtors or Elders, verſe 1. Secondly, verſ. 3. That which he calleth the Clergie, or heritage, he expoundeth in the ſame verſe to be the Lords flocke: but the Clergie in their ſenſe is not the whole congregation or flocke. Thirdly, the Apoſtle would haue them to feed the flocke, that is, to teach and inſtruct them, but he was farre from allowing an ignorant Clergie, that need to be inſtructed and catechiſed, ſuch as for the moſt part the popiſh Clergie is.

Bellarmine anſwereth againe: that it may be granted alſo that the name of Clergie in ſome ſort, agreeth to the people, as being the Lords heritage; but in a more excellent manner is it giuen to thoſe which ſerue at the altar: as all the Iſraelites were the Lords heritage, yet the Leuites are more ſpeciallie ſo called, Bellarmine lib. 1. de Clericis. cap. 1.

Contra. Firſt, if the people may be called the Clergie, then is not this name peculiar to eccleſiaſticall perſons, which is the thing now in queſtion. Secondly, there is no ſuch legall difference now betweene the Prieſt and people, as was vnder the law, betweene the Leuites and other tribes: for Chriſt hath now made vs all Kings and Prieſts to God his Father. Apocal. 1.6. Thirdly, we denie not, but that the Miniſters of the Goſpell haue a more excellent office, then lay men, in reſpect of the policie and order of the Church, but not more meritorious in it ſelfe before God.

Galath.6.6. 1.Cor.14.16. Gal.3.28. Argum. 2. Neither ſhall we find this word Clerus, the Clergie, properlie applied to the Miniſters, throughout the new Teſtament, let our aduerſaries brag neuer ſo much of ſcripture as they do. S. Paul vſeth theſe names of difference, κατηχῶν, κατηχούμενος, the teacher, and hee that is taught: and λαλῶν, the ſpeaker, and ἰδιώτης, the priuate or vnlettered man. So that all their names are giuen in reſpect of their outward miniſtery and calling, not in regard of any difference before God. For before the Lord, as there is neither Grecian nor Iew, bond nor free, male nor female; ſo neither is there Clerke or Lay man,

1.Cor.12.20. Verſ.13. Argum. 3. S. Paul ſaith, There are many members, yet one bodie, &c. verſ. 13. By one ſpirit are we all baptized into one bodie, &c. Like as then the parts of the ſame bodie, though they haue diſtinct offices, and one more excellent then another, yet no part is deſpiſed or vnneceſſarie, but are all knit to the ſame head, and are partakers of the ſame life and ſpirit: ſo is it in the members of the Church, their offices are diuers in the bodie of the Church, but all vnited by one and the ſame ſpirit to the head Chriſt: if they be all one bodie, then conſequently one entire inheritance of Chriſt. Auguſtine thus writeth concerning this name, Cleros, qui ſunt in eccleſiaſtici miniſterij gradibus ordinati, ſic dictos puto, quia Matthias ſorte electus eſt, in Pſal. 67. Clerkes, which ſerue in the Miniſterie, I thinke, were ſo called, becauſe Matthias was choſen by lot, &c. See then, they are not called Clerkes, ſo much becauſe they are the Lords lot, but becauſe they are allotted and choſen out of the people for that ſeruice: as Num.18.6. the Leuites are called the peoples gift, and the Prieſts office an office of ſeruice; not of more merit or holineſſe, or an office of Lordly preeminence, but of miniſterie and ſeruice. Auguſtine therefore hath a notable ſaying: Non nos digni, qui pro vobis oremus; vos indigni, qui pro nobis oretis, Pſal. 68. Wee are not onely worthie to pray for you, and you vnworthie to pray for vs: Auditoribus ſuis, quibus verbum prædicauit, ſe commendauit Apoſtolus, ibid. The Apoſtle commendeth himſelfe to their deuout prayers, to whom he preached, &c. By this their error is confuted, that thinke the prayer of a Prieſt to be the rather heard for the merit and dignitie of his calling, howſoeuer elſe he be affected in his prayer. So the Rhemiſts ſay, that a prayer not vnderſtood profiteth by the vertue of the worke wrought, and the office of the Prieſthood, Annot. 1. Corinth. 14. ſect. 10.

Let vs ſee the conſent of former times, Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. ex Iſidor. Clericos hinc appellatos doctores noſtri dicunt, quia Matthias ſorte electus eſt: Our Doctors hold that Clerkes are ſo called, becauſe Matthias was choſen by lot: not that they were by any ſuch lot of difference ſeuered from the reſt of the people. So is the name Clergie expounded in the Ciuill law. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 32. authentic. 21. Clericos dicimus, &c. They are ſo called, becauſe they muſt be choſen by lot, as Matthias, that is, by diuine election, not humane knowledge: So decret. 21. c. 1. the like notation is giuen out of Iſidor.

Colonienſ. part. 2. cap. 9. Clerici dicuntur, quia de ſorte domini ſunt, &c. Non quidem quòd à ſorte domini laicos ſecludamus, omnes enim qui Chriſto per Baptiſmum & fidem concorporati ſumus populus acquiſitionis eius ſumus, ſed quod Clerici peculiari quadam ratione miniſterio Dei & Eccleſiæ dedicati ſunt: Clerkes are ſo called becauſe they are of the Lords lot, not that wee doe exclude the Lay ſort from Gods lot, for all that by Baptiſme and faith are incorporate into Chriſt, are the people of God, but becauſe Clerkes after a more peculiar manner are conſecrate to the Miniſterie of God and his Church, &c. This Councell preferreth Clerkes before others, onely in reſpect of their outward function in the Church, not for any greater merite or holineſſe.

The ſeale of the holy Martyrs and confeſſors of Gods truth followeth: Walter Brute holie confeſſor: of the Chriſtian Prieſthood Chriſt in expreſſe words ſpeaketh but little, To make any difference betweene the Prieſts and the reſt of the people; neither yet doth hee vſe this name of ſacerdos, or presbyter in the Goſpell, but ſome he calleth diſciples, ſome Apoſtles, &c. And Saint Paul ſpeaking of Prieſts to Timothie and Titus, ſeemeth not to mee to make any difference betweene the Prieſts and the people, but that hee would haue them to ſurmount other in knowledge and perfection of life, Fox pag. 496. col. 2. P. 457. 2. 26.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: All Chriſtian people in Scripture are called Prieſts, as Apocal. 1. Hee hath made vs Kings and Prieſts to God his Father: yet ought not all to preach in generall conuentions, yet priuatelie are they bound for inſtruction of their ſeruants, children, kinsfolke, &c. Fox pag. 1113. col. 1. reſponſ. ad articul. 22. P. 1016. 2. 20.

That the name and externall function of Clerkes and Clergie men is not in it ſelfe of more holineſſe and merite, wee want not teſtimonie from other Churches. 1. Ieremie Patriarch of Conſtantinople alleageth to this purpoſe out of Gregorie Nazianzene: who thus ſpeaketh of the calling and function of Miniſters: Primum ipſum purgari oportet, tum alios purgare, & primo ſanctificari, tum demum alios ſanctificare, He muſt firſt purge himſelfe, then purge others, firſt be ſanctified then ſanctifie. And then he reprooueth the great abuſe of the ſudden calling of ſome to the miniſterie: Qui nihil dignum ſacerdotio ſecum afferunt, &c. which bring nothing worthie of the Prieſthood, they purge others before they bee purged themſelues; yeſterday out of ſacred orders, to day miniſters of ſacred things, veteres vitio, pietate recentes, old in vice, and freſhmen in pietie: whoſe dignitie and vocation ſeemeth rather to be the markes of humane inuention, then of the inſpiration of the ſpirit, &c. The name then and outward vocation of the Clergie, doth not adde more holineſſe to them. Cenſur. Oriental. Eccleſ. cap. 14. ex Nazianz. Apologet.

2 The Aethiopike Church aſcribeth no ſuch holineſſe to the name onelie and externall function of the Clergie: for with them a Clergie man, if he haue a concubine, res diuinas amplius tractare non poteſt, can no more meddle with holy things: and if he be knowne to haue a baſtard, ſacris ordinibus abdicatur, he is depriued of his orders: if he be found guiltie of adulterie, murther, robberie, periurie, hee is ſpoiled of his orders, & vt cæteri malefici punitur, and is puniſhed as other malefactors. Thus Zaga Zabo an Aethiopian Biſhop confeſſeth of their Church. There is not then any ſuch diſtinction of more holineſſe, in reſpect of the orders themſelues of the Clergie. Damianus a Goes. de Aethiop. morib.

3 The writers of other reformed Churches conſenting with vs further miſlike, that there ſhould be any ſuch difference of perſons among the Chriſtian people, as ſome to be called the Clergie, ſome the Laitie, ſome anointed, ſome ſhauen, &c. Likewiſe Caluin, hæc appellatio aut ex errore, aut praua affectione nata, &c. This name ſprung either of error, or corrupt affection, ſeeing Peter calleth the whole Church (the Clergie) that is, the lot and inheritance of God. Lib. 1. de Miſſ. priuat abrogand. pag. 1. Inſtitut. lib. 4. cap. 4. ſect. 9.

Some of their owne ſide haue thus deſcribed the popiſh Clergie. Auentinus: The Pope ſetteth ouer the flocke of Chriſt, goates, wolues, luſtfull perſons, adulterers, rauiſhers of virgins, cookes, muleters, theeues, bankers, vſurers, letcherous, perfidious, ignorant perſons, &c. Albertus Magnus, They which rule in the Church, bee for the moſt part theeues and murtherers, oppreſſors rather then Paſtors, peruerters rather then teachers, &c. Such is the popiſh Clergie, to the which they challenge ſuch diſtinction of holineſſe, and greater merite. Annal. lib. 6. pag. 481. In Euangel. Ioann. cap. 10.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING the election and inſtitution of Biſhops and Paſtors.

THis queſtion hath two parts: Firſt, of the election generally of Paſtors and Miniſters: Secondlie, of the election of the Biſhop of Rome.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE election generallie of all Biſhops and Paſtors.

The Papiſts.

73.Error. THey ſay, that the election of Biſhops neither belongeth to the Clergie, nor the people, but whollie appertaineth to the Biſhop of Rome: as for the people, they haue (they ſay) nothing at all to doe in the election of their Paſtors, or ordaining of them, that neither their ſuffragium, conſilium, or conſenſus, ſuffrage, counſell, or conſent is to be required, *Bellarm. de clericis lib.*1. *cap.*7.& 8.

*Argum.*1. That the people are to be vtterly excluded, thus they would prooue it: Aaron was onely elected of Moſes, without conſent of the people: ſo were the Apoſtles by our Sauiour: Ergo, the peoples conſent is not required, Bellarm.

Anſw. Who ſeeth not, that there is great difference betweene ordinarie and extraordinary callings? ſuch as the calling of the Apoſtles was, and Aarons at the firſt, though the office of the high Prieſt afterward became ordinarie. Alſo it followeth not, the Apoſtles were choſen without conſent of the people, when there were yet no faithfull and Chriſtian congregations, and becauſe they were paſtors of the whole world: Ergo, as well the peoples conſent may be wanting in the election of ordinarie Biſhops and Paſtors, which haue their peculiar and proper charges, and there being now many faithfull and well inſtructed congregations. It is one thing to appoint Paſtors for the Church not yet planted, and another thing to conſtitute them in a Church alreadie reformed and inſtructed: for wee reade of nations that haue been conuerted to the faith, by thoſe that had no calling of the Church, as a great nation of the Indians was by Ædeſius and *Frumentinus, Ruffin.lib.*1.9. and the Iberians by a captiue woman, *Ruffin.*1.10.

*Argum.*2. The people cannot iudge, who are fit to be paſtors, and their elections are tumultuous, as wee may reade, how in the election of Damaſus there were 137. perſons ſlaine; and therefore it is not meet, nor conuenient, that the matter ſhould bee committed to the people, either to elect, or ordaine: but whatſoeuer they did in times paſt, it was either by ſufferance or negligence of the Biſhops, *Bellarm.cap.*7.

Anſw. Firſt, meere popular elections were neuer allowed in any wel ordered Church, neither was the allowance of their paſtors wholly referred to the people, neither did they beare the chiefe ſtroke, but the election was moderated by the wiſedome and grauitie of the Clergie, *Fulk.Tit.*1.*ſect.*2. Secondly, the queſtion is not betweene vs, concerning the ordaining of paſtors, for that belonged onely 1.Tim 4.14. to the Eldership, and was done by laying on of their hands, but concerning the electing and chuſing of them. Thirdly, neither doe wee diſpute, whether it bee conuenient and neceſſarie at all times, but whether it be lawfull: for neither doe we affirme, that it is of the eſſence and ſubſtance of the calling of Fulk.Act.14.22. miniſters to bee choſen by the voyces of the people: as though they were no miniſters, but vſurpers and intruders that are not ſo called: but whether it hath been at any time, and may yet bee lawfull, to require the conſent of the people. Fourthly, it is falſe, that the people had this right by vſurpation, or elſe ſufferance of the paſtors: for Cyprian ſaith, it did, *De diuina authoritate deſcendere, lib.*1. *Epiſtol.*4. That this cuſtome was grounded vpon diuine authoritie, &c. yea it was eſtabliſhed by the lawes of Kings: as there was a law made by Lodouicus Pius King of France, that Biſhops ſhould be ordained by the free election of the Clergie and the people.

*Argum.*3. Therefore (ſay they) elections of Biſhops ought to be at the Popes aſſignement: for vnto Peter was committed the care of the vniuerſall Church, when hee badde Peter feede his ſheepe. Hereupon they are bold to affirme, that we haue neither true Biſhops nor Miniſters, becauſe they are not lawfully ſent, that is, as they interpret it, from the Sea Apoſtolike, *Bellarm.lib.*1.*cap.*3.8.*Rhemiſt. Rom.*10.*ſect.*5.

Anſ. Firſt, the charge giuen to Peter beareth no ſuch ſenſe: that becauſe Chriſt bad him feede his ſheepe, therefore he and his ſucceſſors ſhould onely haue authoritie to conſecrate Miniſters: for if Peter had it by this grant, other Elders and Paſtors had it in like ſort, to whom it as well appertained to 1.Pet.5.2. feed the flocke of Chriſt, 1.Pet.5.2. And againe not Peter onely, but the reſt alſo of the Apoſtles did ordaine and conſecrate Paſtors and Elders, as it ſhall be ſhewed afterward.

Secondly, neither is it a good reaſon to condemne our Miniſterie, becauſe it hath not the Popes allowance: for euery Church hath a lawfull calling within it ſelfe, without ſending to forraine Prelates for their approbation. And if you aske vs by whom our Miniſters were firſt called, ſeeing there were none but popiſh Biſhops in euery Church: wee anſwere; that ſome had their calling in the popiſh Church, which afterward being more effectually called of God, became profitable teachers of the Goſpell. Neither is it neceſſarie, that the Church ſhould alwaies be bound to an ordinarie calling; when as the ſtate of the Church is ſo corrupted, and the gouernment thereof, that no good calling can be obtained: for then the Lord raiſeth vp ſome extraordinarily for the reformation of the Church, ſuch as wee doubt not but Luther was. In which and the like caſes, the ordinarie impoſition of hands by the Paſtors of the Church, being heretikes and idolaters, as it was in time of poperie, is not to bee expected or ſtaied for: Plura apud Fulk. annot. Rom. 10. ſect. 5.

The Proteſtants.

Concerning election or choice to be made by the people, we are to put three caſes. Firſt, meere popular elections, wherein the people by multitude of voyces ſhould carrie all away, are in no caſe, nor at any time to bee allowed. Secondly, for the people to giue their voyces in elections, which are moderated and gouerned by the graue and wiſe Paſtors and Elders, it hath been vſed in times paſt, and may be againe, and is in ſome places, where the ſtate of the Church, the condition and qualitie of the people will beare it. Thirdly, though the people neither beare ſway in the election, nor giue their ſuffrages and voyces, yet it is conuenient and requiſite, that their conſent ſhould be had, and publike teſtimonie: for the Miniſters ſhould be ſuch as haue a good report of all, 1. Tim. 3.7. Fulk. Act. 14. ſect. 3. But as for the Pope, let him keepe himſelfe, as a Biſhop in his owne Dioceſſe, he hath nothing to doe with ordaining or electing of Miniſters in other Churches.

Argum. 1. Eleazar was made Prieſt in Aarons place, in the ſight of all the congregation: Ergo Miniſters ought to be ordained publikely in the ſight of the congregation: not in corners or priuate places, as they vſed to doe in time of Poperie: yea it is recorded of Pope Iohn the thirteenth, that hee ordained Deacons in a ſtable. And herein they offended manifeſtly againſt their owne rules. For their decree is: Nullus inuitis detur Epiſcopus, ſed Clerici & plebis conſenſus & deſiderium requiratur: Let no Biſhop be thruſt vpon any againſt their wils, but let the conſent and deſire of the people and Clergie be knowne. Numb.20.27. Ex Celeſtin. Pap. diſtin. 63. cap. cleri.

Argum. 2. We haue the example of the Apoſtles: When Matthias was elected, the whole multitude was called together: the Deacons were choſen by the whole multitude: Ergo, the people had an intereſt in times paſt in the election of Church officers: and this example of the Apoſtles may ſafely and lawfully be followed of the Church, when time and place ſerueth. Acts 1.14.23. Acts 6.5.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, the election of Deacons and Paſtors is not all one, neither is there the like reaſon. Anſw. They are both publike officers for the good of the Church; and therefore if the people haue any intereſt in the one, why not in the other? Secondly, this was done by the grant and ſufferance of the Apoſtles. Anſw. Yea the Apoſtles called them together, but by the direction of the holy Ghoſt: as Acts 15. when the Church was aſſembled together vpon another occaſion, it is ſaid, it ſeemed good to vs and the holy Ghoſt. Againe, in the election, beſide impoſition of hands, prayer was vſed, which was a chiefe part of that action: but the people had their intereſt in publike prayers as being part of the congregation, and were not admitted thereunto at the pleaſure and will of men: wherefore it is not true, that it was a meere grant of men, that the people might be preſent at elections, but it ſo ſeemed good to the Apoſtles thereto directed by the ſpirit of God.

Now, whereas Bellarmine gaue vs this anſwere before, concerning the election of Deacons, that the reaſon is not alike betweene them and Paſtors; we doe oppoſe the election of Matthias into the place of Iudas, no Deacon, but an Apoſtle, that it was done by the conſent and ſuffrage of the whole Church. Ergo, the conſent of the people is requiſite in the election of Miniſters.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Firſt, this was done not of neceſſitie, but by toleration from Peter.

Contra. Three things are ſet downe, which were done in this action by the whole aſſemblie. Verſ. 23. They preſented two: verſ. 24. They prayed: verſ. 26. They gaue foorth their lots: if any one of theſe was by permiſſion or ſufferance, then the reſt alſo: if they preſented by leaue, then they prayed alſo by licence, which were very abſurd. Againe, it is too great boldneſſe for them to imagine a licence granted from Peter, where the Scripture maketh no mention of any ſuch thing; and to the Apoſtles here aſſembled, which in commiſſion were equall vnto Peter.

Secondly, ſaith he, this was not ſo much an election, as a poſtulation or requeſt vnto God, that one might be choſen in Iudas place.

Contra. There is both an election and a poſtulation: the election is of two, which were preſented out of the whole number; the poſtulation is, that God would declare his will concerning thoſe two, which of them ſhould haue Iudas Apoſtleſhip.

Thirdly, ſaith he: one example doth not proue a thing to be de iure diuino, by diuine right: Bellarmine ibid.

Contra. Firſt, as one precept of Scripture as well proueth, as many precepts of the ſame thing: ſo alſo one act and example of the Apoſtles is of diuine authoritie, as well as many in the ſame caſe: for their acts proceeding of the ſame ſpirit, are euery one of the ſame power: vnleſſe they will ſay, the Apoſtles erred in ſome of their acts, wherein they were directed by the ſpirit of God, as they were in this, and by the warrant of Scripture. Secondly, if one example out of Scripture proue not the lawfulnes of the act; then both Chriſts fact in whipping out of the Temple, and Pauls reprehenſion of Peter may be doubted of, being both but once done; and many other things beſide, whereof wee finde but ſingle examples in Scripture: which were a great blaſphemie to ſay. Thirdly, yet to ſatiſfie them to the full, we haue more then one example for the election of the people: as Acts 6. The Deacons were ſo elected: Acts 14.23. Elders ordained by election in euery citie.

Acts 14.23.

Argum. 3. But as for the right of elections in the Pope, it hath no ſhew of reaſon: for be it that Peter had onely the right of conſecration amongſt the Apoſtles, you doe but flatter your ſelues in thinking, that whatſoeuer right was in Peter, it muſt needs be in the Pope: for he is not Peters ſucceſſor, as we haue ſhewed before at large. But wee will hold you rather to this point: that all the Apoſtles had as full right to ordaine and conſecrate by laying on of hands, as Peter had. Looke Act. 6.6. and Act. 13.3. and Act. 14.23. And if the Pope cannot haue all that which Peter had, much leſſe can he be capable of that which Peter neuer had.

Act. 6 6.
Acts 13.3.
Acts 14.23.

Argum. 4. We haue had good experience in England, of the Popes great diſcretion and wiſedome, in collation of ſpirituall preferments, and ordaining of Biſhops. About anno 1253. the Pope wrote a very imperious and commanding letter to the good Biſhop of Lincolne, Robert Groſthead, to beſtow a Canonſhip in Lincolne vpon his nephew, a boy; for ſo the Popes call their baſtards: but hee ſuffered the repulſe for that time. In the time of Edward the third, and Richard the ſecond, a certificate was ſent vp into the Chauncerie, of ſuch Eccleſiaſticall dignities, as were poſſeſſed by ſtrangers not inhabiting the land: and there were found aboue fourtie Deanries, Archdeaconries and Prebends, and thoſe not the worſt, ſome worth one hundred, ſome two hundred, nay ſome foure hundred pound by the yeere: the Archdeaconrie of Canturburie was valued at ſeuen hundred florences by the yeere, which a Cardinall of Rome had: And there were aboue a dozen Cardinals reſiant at Rome, that had at once the beſt and richeſt dignities in the land: beſide a great ſort of Italian prieſts, and others, that were beneficed in England. By this it may appeare, what good choice the Pope-holy father of Rome was wont to make in beſtowing Church dignities: and it were pitie but he ſhould haue the ordering of them ſtill, he did ſo well diſpoſe of them when he had them.

Fox pag. 323.
Fox pag. 429.

5 Let Auguſtine ſpeake, who growing now old, was deſirous to know his ſucceſſor while he liued: he went not to Rome for the matter; but aſſembling the Church together at Hippo where hee was Biſhop; in the preſence of two Biſhops beſide, and ſeuen Presbyters or Elders, Aſtante clero & frequenti populo, The whole Clergie, and a great ſort of people ſtanding by: Auguſtine himſelfe began firſt and ſaid, Preſbyterum Eradium mihi ſucceſſorem volo: I would haue Eradius Presbyter to be my ſucceſſor. Afterward, hearing how the people did approue and like of his motion, hee deſired them to ſubſcribe to that which was done: Rogo, vt dignemini geſtis ſubſcribere, qui poteſtis. And when they held their peace, he vrged them further, ſaying, Hic mihi reſponſione veſtra opus eſt, de hac aſſenſione aliquid acclamate: I muſt needes haue you make ſome anſwere, and teſtifie your conſent by your acclamation: A populo acolamatum eſt, fiat, fiat, dictum vicies quinquies: The people cried out, let it be as thou haſt ſaid, let it be, and this was repeated fiue and twentie times: Auguſtin. Epiſt. 110. By this example it appeareth, though the people made not the choice, yet their conſent was demaunded. And thus a Biſhop was elected, and no word ſent vp to Rome at all.

Neither was it the cuſtome of the Church ſo to doe in thoſe daies: for whereas the Donatiſts obiected againſt Cecilianus Biſhop of Carthage, becauſe he ſtaied not to bee ordained of the chiefe Biſhop of Numidia, Vt princeps Epiſcopus a principe ordinaretur: That one chiefe Biſhop might be ordained of another: Auguſtine anſwered, that there was another cuſtome of the Catholike Church, Vt non Numidia, ſed propinquiores Epiſcopi, Epiſcopum eccleſia Carthaginis ordinarent: That not the Biſhop of Numidia, but thoſe Biſhops that were neereſt at hand, ſhould ordaine the Biſhop of Carthage, &c. So we ſee, they were not only bold to chuſe an inferiour Biſhop, as was Eradius of Hippo, without the Popes conſent: but they would aduenture to ordaine a chiefe Metropolitane Biſhop euen of Carthage, without the Popes leaue.

Breuicul. collation. 3. cap. 5.

The teſtimonie of antiquitie herein is plentifull: Anacletus epiſtol. 2. Electionem ſummorum ſacerdotum ſibi Dominus reſeruauit, licet electionem illorum bonis ſacerdotib. & ſpiritualib. populis conceſſiſſet: God hath reſerued to himſelfe the election or depoſition of the chiefe Prieſts, though hee hath granted the election of them to good Miniſters, and faithfull people.

Concil. Carthaginenſ. 3. can. 22. Nullus ordinetur Clericus non probatus vel Epiſcoporum examine, vel populi teſtimonio: Let none be ordained a Clergie man, vnleſſe he be firſt examined of the Biſhop, or approoued by the teſtimonie of the people.

Leo epiſtol. 90. cap. 1. Nulla ratio ſinit, vt inter epiſcopos habeantur, qui nec à Clericis ſunt electi, nec à plebib. ſunt expetiti. There is no reaſon, that they ſhould bee counted Biſhops, which are neither choſen of the Clergie, nor deſired of the people.

Concil. Parrhiſienſ. can. 8. Nullus ciuib. inuitis ordinetur epiſcopus, niſi quem populi & Clericorum electio pleniſſima quæſierit voluntate: Let no Biſhop be ordained againſt the will of the people or Citizens, but ſuch an one, as the Clergie ſhall chooſe, and the people deſire. By theſe teſtimonies of Councels, and of the Biſhops of Rome themſelues, and many more, which might bee alleaged, it doth and may further appeare; that the intereſt of election is not in the Pope, but that in former times both the voyce of the Clergie and aſſent of the peoples was required.

Wee haue here alſo teſtimonie of both the lawes: for although tumultuous, turbulent and meere popular elections are condemned, as Cod.lib.9.tit.30.l.2. Leo the Emperour made a law, that hee which did tumultuouſly gather voyces of the multitude to obtaine any dignitie, ſhould both loſe the place he ſought, and be ſeuerely puniſhed likewiſe: diſtinct.63.c.6. Non eſt permittendum turbis,&c. The election of Clerks muſt not be left to the multitude. 1.decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.6.c.2. Electus ad clamorem populi,&c. He that is choſen by the confuſed noyſe of the people muſt not be confirmed: for the rude multitude may eaſily be corrupted.

Although then meere popular elections are not to be approued: yet that both the whole Clergie and the people ought to giue conſent in the election of their Paſtors, it is conſonant to both the laws: Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.11. Arcadius, ad eccleſiam ſunt promouendi,&c. They muſt bee preferred to the gouernment of the Church, that are of the ſame citie, as (they no doubt) which are beſt knowne to the people.

Now the Canon law is moſt pregnant, not only requiring the preſence of the people, as reſpecting their deſire, but their conſent alſo and election. Diſtinct.61.c.13. Nullus inuitis detur Epiſcopus: No Biſhop ought to bee thruſt vpon a people againſt their will; the conſent of the Clergie and people muſt be required: Celeſtin.diſt.63.11. Gelaſius, Vniuerſi in vnum conſentiant: All muſt conſent to elect one. cap.12. Stephan. Conuocato Clero & populo: The Clergie and people being called together, let ſuch an one be choſen, &c, and many ſuch Canons there are beſide.

The holy Martyrs alſo conſent with vs. Thomas Benet: If the Biſhop of Rome would do all things after Gods ordinance, then would I beleeue him to bee a good Biſhop ouer his owne Dioces, and to haue no further power. Fox pag.1039.col.2.

Pag.948.2.7.

Maſter Philpot holy Martyr: By the word of God the Biſhop of Rome hath no more authoritie, then the Biſhop of London hath, pag.1811.col.1. He hath therefore no right to meddle in the election of other Biſhops, that belong not to his charge.

Pag.1644.1.55

Concerning the teſtimonie of other Churches, that the election of Biſhops and Paſtors hath no dependance of the Pope, ſee before Contr.4.queſt.7.err.56.in fine.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the election of the Pope.

The Papiſts.

They ſay, that the ſureſt and ſafeſt way and ſimply the beſt, is that which is now vſed, to chuſe the Pope by, namely, by the Colledge of Cardinals: That whoſoeuer is by two parts of the ſaid Cardinals elected, is rightly the ſucceſſor of S.Peter, and the vndoubted Pope of Rome.

74.Error.

Argum.1. None can better iudge who is fitteſt for the Papacie, then they which are the Popes Counſellors, and know the affaires of the Church. Ergo, the Cardinals the meeteſt men. Bellarm.lib.1. de Clericis, cap.9.

Anſw. Firſt, you take that for granted, which wee inſtantly denie, that the Cardinals of Rome are alwaies the wiſeſt and moſt learned: as though a Cardinals hat doth bring with it ſuch abundance of vertue and learning: nay a title of a Cardinalſhip is ſooner obtained by fauour then deſert, by maſſes of money, then weight of learning. And good reaſon, ſeeing that the Cardinals make a gaine of the Papacie: For an Aſſe loaden with gold ſhall ſooner enter into the Caſtle of Saint Angell, then any other comming with a cart loade of bookes: they that reade Cardinall Wolſeyes inſtructions ſent to Steuen Gardiner at Rome, what great promiſes of money and preferment, may eaſily vnderſtand the diſpoſition of the Pope-holy Electors of Rome: Seeing they make a gaine of the Pope, why ſhould he not ſet Cardinalſhips to ſale? For if Iacobus Archbiſhop of Mentz paied 27000. florences for his pall, what thinke you a Cardinals hat is to be valued at, which is a higher degree, then either Biſhop or Archbiſhop?

Fox pag.992. col.1.
Pag.904.2.50. edit.vlt.

We ſay then, that there may be wiſer and more learned men of the Clergie in Rome then the Cardinals: and that the whole Clergie may better iudge, then a few ambitious Cardinals, and are freer from corruption: And as concerning the affaires of the Church, Biſhops are like to know better, what appertaineth to the office of a Biſhop, then Prieſts and Deacons, as moſt of the Cardinals are.

Fox.pag.794. col 1.
Pag.728.2.60. edit.vlt.

Secondly, how fit the Cardinals for the moſt part are, to manage the gouernment of the vniuerſall Church, it may appeare by the notable choice, that the Popes haue made of their aſſiſtants. Sixtus the fourth made Petrus Ruerius his nephew a Cardinall, a young man of 26.yeeres; who in riot and wantonnes in two yeeres ſpent vpon harlots two hundred thouſand crownes, and died miſerablie, being waſted and conſumed by his inordinate luſt.

Ex Balæo, Functio & aiis.

Leo the tenth was made Cardinall, being but thirteene yeeres old, by Innocentius the eighth: Paulus the third made Alexander Farneſius his ſonne or baſtard Cardinall being a very youth, to whom he appointed a Tutor and gouernour. Iulius the third brought Innocentius a ſtripling his minion, that kept his Ape, into the order of the Cardinals, who when they ſaid vnto him, What doe you ſee in this

Apoſtles erred in ſome of their acts, wherein they were directed by the ſpirit of God, as they were in this, and by the warrant of Scripture. Secondly, if one example out of Scripture proue not the lawfulnes of the act; then both Chriſts fact in whipping out of the Temple, and Pauls reprehenſion of Peter may be doubted of, being both but once done; and many other things beſide, whereof wee finde but ſingle examples in Scripture: which were a great blaſphemie to ſay. Thirdly, yet to ſatisfie them to the full, we haue more then one example for the election of the people: as Acts 6. The Deacons were ſo elected: Acts 14.23. Elders ordained by election in euery citie.

*Argum.*3. But as for the right of elections in the Pope, it hath no ſhew of reaſon: for be it that Peter had onely the right of conſecration amongſt the Apoſtles, you doe but flatter your ſelues in thinking, that whatſoeuer right was in Peter, it muſt needs be in the Pope: for he is not Peters ſucceſſor, as we haue ſhewed before at large. But wee will hold you rather to this point: that all the Apoſtles had as full right to ordaine and conſecrate by laying on of hands, as Peter had. Looke Act. 6.6. and Act. 13.3. and Act. 14.23. And if the Pope cannot haue all that which Peter had, much leſſe can he be capable of that which Peter neuer had.

*Argum.*4. We haue had good experience in England, of the Popes great diſcretion and wiſedome, in collation of ſpirituall preferments, and ordaining of Biſhops. 5 Let Auguſtine ſpeake, who growing now old, was deſirous to know his ſucceſſor while he liued: he went not to Rome for the matter; but aſſembling the Church together at Hippo where hee was Biſhop; in the preſence of two Biſhops beſide, and ſeuen Presbyters or Elders, Aſtante clero & frequenti populo, The whole Clergie, and a great ſort of people ſtanding by: Auguſtine himſelfe began firſt and ſaid, Presbyterum Eradium mihi ſucceſſorem volo: I would haue Eradius Presbyter to be my ſucceſſor. Afterward, hearing how the people did approue and like of his motion, hee deſired them to ſubſcribe to that which was done: Rogo, vt dignemini geſtis ſubſcribere, qui poteſtis. And when they held their peace, he vrged them further, ſaying, Hic mihi reſponſione veſtra opus eſt, de hac aſſenſione aliquid acclamate: I muſt needes haue you make ſome anſwere, and teſtifie your conſent by your acclamation: A populo acclamatum eſt, fiat, fiat, dictum vicies quinquies: The people cried out, let it be as thou haſt ſaid, let it be, and this was repeated fiue and twentie times: Auguſtin. Epiſt. 110. By this example it appeareth, though the people made not the choice, yet their conſent was demaunded. And thus a Biſhop was elected, and no word ſent vp to Rome at all.

Neither was it the cuſtome of the Church ſo to doe in thoſe daies: for whereas the Donatiſts obiected againſt Cecilianus Biſhop of Carthage, becauſe he ſtaied not to bee ordained of the chiefe Biſhop of Numidia, Vt princeps Epiſcopus a principe ordinaretur: That one chiefe Biſhop might be ordained of another: Auguſtine anſwered, that there was another cuſtome of the Catholike Church, Vt non Numidiæ, ſed propinquiores Epiſcopi, Epiſcopum eccleſiæ Carthaginis ordinarent: That not the Biſhop of Numidia, but thoſe Biſhops that were neereſt at hand, ſhould ordaine the Biſhop of Carthage, &c. So we ſee, they were not only bold to chuſe an inferiour Biſhop, as was Eradius of Hippo, without the Popes conſent: but they would aduenture to ordaine a chiefe Metropolitane Biſhop euen of Carthage, without the Popes leaue.

Breuicul. collation. 3. cap. 5.

The teſtimonie of antiquitie herein is plentifull: Anacletus epiſtol. 2. Electionem ſummorum ſacerdotum ſibi Dominus reſeruauit, licet electionem illorum bonis ſacerdotib. & ſpiritualib. populis conceſſiſſet: God hath reſerued to himſelfe the election or depoſition of the chiefe Prieſts, though hee hath granted the election of them to good Miniſters, and faithfull people.

Concil. Carthaginenſ. 3. can. 22. Nullus ordinetur Clericus non probatus vel Epiſcoporum examine, vel populi teſtimonio: Let none be ordained a Clergie man, vnleſſe he be firſt examined of the Biſhop, or approued by the teſtimonie of the people.

Leo epiſtol. 90. cap. 1. Nulla ratio ſinit, vt inter epiſcopos habeantur, qui nec à Clericis ſunt electi, nec à plebib. ſunt expetiti. There is no reaſon, that they ſhould bee counted Biſhops, which are neither choſen of the Clergie, nor deſired of the people.

Concil. Parrhiſienſ. can. 8. Nullus ciuib. inuitis ordinetur epiſcopus, niſi quem populi & Clericorum electio pleniſſima quæſierit voluntate: Let no Biſhop be ordained againſt the will of the people or Citizens, but ſuch an one, as the Clergie ſhall chooſe, and the people deſire. By theſe teſtimonies of Councels, and of the Biſhops of Rome themſelues, and many more, which might bee alleaged, it doth and may further appeare; that the intereſt of election is not in the Pope, but that in former times both the voyce of the Clergie and aſſent of the peoples was required.

Wee haue here alſo teſtimonie of both the lawes: for although tumultuous, turbulent and meere popular elections are condemned, as Cod.lib.9.tit.30.l.2. Leo the Emperour made a law, that hee which did tumultuouſly gather voyces of the multitude to obtaine any dignitie, ſhould both loſe the place he ſought, and be ſeuerely puniſhed likewiſe: diſtinct.63.c.6. Non eſt permittendum turbis,&c. The election of Clerks muſt not be left to the multitude. 1.decret.Greger.lib.1.tit.6.c.2. Electus ad clamorem populi,&c. He that is choſen by the confuſed noyſe of the people muſt not be confirmed: for the rude multitude may eaſily be corrupted.

Although then meere popular elections are not to be approued: yet that both the whole Clergie and the people ought to giue conſent in the election of their Paſtors, it is conſonant to both the laws: Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.11. Arcadius, ad eccleſiam ſunt promouendi,&c. They muſt bee preferred to the gouernment of the Church, that are of the ſame citie, as (they no doubt) which are beſt knowne to the people.

Now the Canon law is moſt pregnant, not only requiring the preſence of the people, as reſpecting their deſire, but their conſent alſo and election. Diſtinct.61.c.13. Nullus inuitis detur Epiſcopus: No Biſhop ought to bee thruſt vpon a people againſt their will; the conſent of the Clergie and people muſt be required: Celeſtin.diſt.63.11. Gelaſius, Vniuerſi in vnum conſentiant: All muſt conſent to elect one. cap.12. Stephan. Conuocato Clero & populo: The Clergie and people being called together, let ſuch an one be choſen, &c, and many ſuch Canons there are beſide.

The holy Martyrs alſo conſent with vs. Thomas Benet: If the Biſhop of Rome would do all things after Gods ordinance, then would I beleeue him to bee a good Biſhop ouer his owne Dioces, and to haue no further power. Fox pag.1039.col.2. Pag.948.2.7.

Maſter Philpot holy Martyr: By the word of God the Biſhop of Rome hath no more authoritie, then the Biſhop of London hath, pag.1811.col.1. He hath therefore no right to meddle in the election of other Biſhops, that belong not to his charge. Pag.1644.1.55

Concerning the teſtimonie of other Churches, that the election of Biſhops and Paſtors hath no dependance of the Pope, ſee before Contr.4.queſt.7.err.56.in fine.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the election of the Pope.

The Papiſts.

They ſay, that the ſureſt and ſafeſt way and ſimply the beſt, is that which is now vſed, to chuſe the Pope by, namely, by the Colledge of Cardinals: That whoſoeuer is by two parts of the ſaid Cardinals elected, is rightly the ſucceſſor of S.Peter, and the vndoubted Pope of Rome. 74.Error.

Argum.1. None can better iudge who is fitteſt for the Papacie, then they which are the Popes Counſellors, and know the affaires of the Church. Ergo, the Cardinals the meeteſt men. Bellarm.lib.1. de Clericis, cap.9.

Anſw. Firſt, you take that for granted, which wee inſtantly denie, that the Cardinals of Rome are alwaies the wiſeſt and moſt learned: as though a Cardinals hat doth bring with it ſuch abundance of vertue and learning: nay a title of a Cardinalſhip is ſooner obtained by fauour then deſert, by maſſes of money, then weight of learning. And good reaſon, ſeeing that the Cardinals make a game of the Papacie: For an Aſſe loaden with gold ſhall ſooner enter into the Caſtle of Saint Angell, then any other comming with a cart loade of bookes: they that reade Cardinall Wolſeyes inſtructions ſent to Steuen Gardiner at Rome, what great promiſes of money and preferment, may eaſily vnderſtand the diſpoſition of the Pope-holy Electors of Rome: Seeing they make a game of the Pope, why ſhould he not ſet Cardinalſhips to ſale? For if Iacobus Archbiſhop of Mentz paied 27000. florences for his pall, what thinke you a Cardinals hat is to be valued at, which is a higher degree, then either Biſhop or Archbiſhop? Fox pag.992. col.1. Pag.904.2.50. edit.vlt.

We ſay then, that there may be wiſer and more learned men of the Clergie in Rome then the Cardinals: and that the whole Clergie may better iudge, then a few ambitious Cardinals, and are freer from corruption: And as concerning the affaires of the Church, Biſhops are like to know better, what appertaineth to the office of a Biſhop, then Prieſts and Deacons, as moſt of the Cardinals are. Fox.pag.794. col 1. Pag.728.2.60. edit.vlt.

Secondly, how fit the Cardinals for the moſt part are, to manage the gouernment of the vniuerſall Church, it may appeare by the notable choice, that the Popes haue made of their aſſiſtants. Sixtus the fourth made Petrus Ruerius his nephew a Cardinall, a young man of 26.yeeres; who in riot and wantonnes in two yeeres ſpent vpon harlots two hundred thouſand crownes, and died miſerablie, being waſted and conſumed by his inordinate luſt. Ex Balæo, Functio & aijs.

Leo the tenth was made Cardinall, being but thirteene yeeres old, by Innocentius the eighth: Paulus the third made Alexander Farneſius his ſonne or baſtard Cardinall being a very youth, to whom he appointed a Tutor and gouernour. Iulius the third brought Innocentius a ſtripling his minion, that kept his Ape, into the order of the Cardinals, who when they ſaid vnto him, What doe you ſee in this young

Thuanus lib.5. ann.1550. pag.443. young man, worthie of this honour? he anſwered, What did you ſee in me, when you choſe me to be Pope? Think you not now that theſe Cardinals, both for their youth, being void of experience, and for their lewd diſpoſition, being without any good inclination, were very meete and fit perſons to be employed in the waightie regiment of the Church?

Argum.2. It appeareth by the continuance to be the beſt; for it hath now endured foure hundred yeeres: and by the effect, for the Sea of Rome hath neuer been freer from Schiſmes, then ſince this order was taken for the Popes election, Bellarm.cap.9.

* That is, till a thouſand yeers after Chriſt, either all thoſe formes of election, or ſome of them. See this place excepted againſt and anſwered, *Retect.*pag.15. Fox pag.434.

Anſw. Firſt, how can it be of ſuch long continuance, ſeeing by your owne confeſſion, it exceedeth not foure hundred yeeres? Nay who will not grant, that the ancient order of electing the Biſhop of Rome by the whole Clergie, and conſent of the people of Rome, with the confirmation of the Emperour, which laſted * a thouſand yeeres, till this new deuice came in place, was farre more ancient and durable? Secondly, how well the Cardinals election hath kept the Sea of Rome from Schiſme, experience of former times teacheth vs: In Pope Vrbanus time the ſixth, there were two Popes many yeeres together; and one did ſo deadly purſue the other, that Pope Vrbane at once cut off fiue of the Cardinals heads: might they not haue great ioy, thinke you, in chuſing ſuch a Pope? In the time of Pope Iohn the 23. there were three Popes at once. In the Councell of Baſile Pope Eugenius was depoſed, and counted an heretike. And yet for all this, the Cardinals are the only preſeruers and maintainers of the peace of the Apoſtolike Sea.

The Proteſtants.

Though it doe not greatly concerne vs, what manner of election is vſed at Rome: (for vnto vs the election of the meaneſt Biſhop in the land is as much, yea and more, then the glorious enthronizing of the Pope:) yet it ſhall not be amiſſe briefly to ſhew, how theſe great antiquaries are become enemies of antiquitie, refuſing the ancient manner of election, which was vſed in Rome for one thouſand yeeres together, namely, that the Biſhop there ſhould be elected by the whole Clergie, with the conſent of the people and confirmation of the Emperour.

Argum.1. It is a plaine caſe, that till the yeere 695. or thereabout, in all their elections they waited for the authoritie of the chiefe Magiſtrate, the Emperour, or the Deputie of Italie. But then came in the conſtitution of Conſtantine the 4. that their elections ſhould be firme without the conſent of the Emperour. Yet for all this conſtitution, anno 810. Pope Adriane gaue vnto Carolus magnus full authoritie to elect the Biſhop of Rome: and anno 961. Leo the ninth, made the ſame grant to Otho firſt Germane Emperour. This continued in force till Alexander the ſecond his time, who was elected firſt without the Emperours conſent, but afterward repenting of it, he proteſted openly, that he would be no longer Pope, vnleſſe he had the Emperors conſent; and thereupon he was depoſed by Hildebrand, and throwne into priſon. This was more then 1000. yeeres after Chriſt: ſince that time the Emperor hath been excluded, and ſhut out from their elections: But all this while notwithſtanding, though the Emperours conſent ſometime was not neceſſarie, yet the Clergie of Rome, and the people retained their ancient priuiledge ſtill. So we ſee by this new erection of the Colledge of Cardinals, there is Fox pag.4.5. great iniurie offered to three eſtates, the Emperour, the Clergie of Rome, the people.

Argum.2. This new forme of election hath not ſtood continually in force, ſince it was firſt founded. For in the Councel of Conſtance, ſeſſ.40. they proceeded to the election of a new Pope, not ſtaying for the reſt of the Cardinals, but appointing other electors in their roome. In the Councell of Baſile, the Duke of Sauoy was elected Pope, by other electors, then Cardinals: Nay there was but one Cardinall, namely Arelatenſis; the reſt were Biſhops, Doctors, and others. And though they will ſay perchance that this Pope was choſen in a ſchiſme, for they hold the Councell of Baſile to be ſchiſmaticall: yet they cannot, neither doe denie, but that Pope Martin the 5. who was choſen at Conſtance, was rightfully Pope.

Gregorie the 7. was eſtabliſhed in the Papacie, and yet not one of the Cardinals conſented to his election. Iohn the 24. became a Pope after this manner: When the Cardinals were aſſembled together to chuſe them a Pope, they deſired him to nominate whom he would to be Pope, for they feared him: then he made this anſwere, Date mihi chlamydem Petri, & ego dabo Pontifici futuro, Giue me S. Peters robe or cloak, & I will giue it to him that ſhall be our Biſhop: and ſo he put it vpon his owne ſhoulders, and ſaid, Behold your Pope: ex Baleo, Functio, & alijs. Thus we ſee that the Popes and Papiſts themſelues haue been the chiefe ouerthrowers and peruerters of this new forme of election by the Cardinals.

3. In Auguſtines time the reſt of the Biſhops of Italie neere vnto Rome, ſhould ſeeme to haue had ſome intereſt in the election of the Biſhop: Romanæ eccleſiæ Epiſcopum non ordinat Epiſcopus aliquis Metropolitanus, ſed de proximo Oſtienſis Epiſcopus: The Biſhop of Rome is not ordained by any Metropolitane, but by the Biſhop of Oſtia that is neere at hand: Breuicul. collation. 3. cap. 5.

Other monuments alſo of antiquitie wee haue for this matter: When as Syluerius was made Pope without the Emperours conſent, Sacerdotes ſecundum morem antiquum non ſubſcripſerunt: The Clergie men, according to the old cuſtome, refuſed to ſubſcribe to his election: anno 537. ex pontifical.

Hadrianus 1. anno 796. gaue vnto Charles the Emperour, poteſtatem eligendi Papam, power to chuſe the Pope. Gregorie the 4. confirmed the ſame grant, anno 830. and refuſed to bee Pope, till the Emperour had confirmed his election.

Alexander the 2. who a little before in a Councell held at Mantua, had decreed that the Pope ſhould be choſen onely by the Cardinals; yet afterward repented him, and publikely in a Sermon profeſſed, that he would not continue in the Papacie without the Emperours licence. Gregorie the 7. the greateſt enemie to the Imperiall crowne and dignitie, who vtterly excluded the Emperour from the election of the Pope, yet lying on his death-bed repented him, and deſired a Cardinall to goe to the Emperour, and craue pardon of him for all the wrongs he had done him: Sic Antoninus, Vincentius, de actis huius Papæ.

We haue alſo euident teſtimonie herein of their owne law, that the Biſhop of Rome ought not to be elected without the conſent of the Emperour, the Clergie, and people.

Firſt, for the right and authoritie of the Emperour in the election of the Pope: Hadriane, with the conſent of a great Synode, conſiſting of an 153. Biſhops and Abbots, aſſembled in the Palace of Laterane, did giue vnto Charles the Emperour, poteſtatem eligendi pontificem, power to chuſe the Biſhop of Rome, diſt.63.ca.22. So likewiſe Leo Biſhop of Rome in a Synod at Rome, with the conſent of the Clergie and people of Rome, did giue the ſame authoritie to Otho the Emperour, diſt.63.cap.23.

And for the conſent of the whole Clergie, and not of the Cardinals onely, wee reade, diſt.79.c.1. Nicholaus 2. in this manner, Si quis Apoſtolicæ ſedi, &c. If any man be inthronized into the Sea Apoſtolicall, without the generall conſent of the Cardinals, and of other religious Clerks, he is not Apoſtolicall, but an Apoſtata.

And thirdly, the intereſt of the people together with the Clergie in the election of the Pope, is warranted by their owne Canons: Cauſ.7. quaeſt.1. ca.5. Cornelius was choſen, de Clericorum pene omnium teſtimonio, de plebis, quæ tunc affuit ſuffragio, &c. by the teſtimonie of the Clergie, and the ſuffrage of the people, that was preſent. And diſtinct.26.ca.1. there is a latter decree of Pope Nicholas, that beſide the choice of the Cardinals, reliquus Clerus & populus ad cõſenſum nouæ electionis accedat: the reſt of the Clergie & people ſhould giue conſent to the new election. Thus we ſee that this new deuice of electing the pope by cardinals, is againſt the ancient practiſe of the church & their own canons.

Iohn Wicklif holy confeſſor, holdeth Cardinals to be one of the 12. diſciples of Antichriſt, Fox p.414 2.20. and cõſequently it will follow the election made by them to be of the ſame ſort. Seeing then we haue both the teſtimonie & practiſe of Popes to the contrary, againſt this maner of election by Cardinals, and the truth alſo ſealed by holy men; we haue no reaſon but to reiect the ſame as an innouation.

And for further euidence. 1. The Greekes haue no ſuch inſtance of electing their Patriarke, by any ſuch Colledge of ſelected perſons, as the Pope is choſen by Cardinals: but as Barlaam ſaith, euerie one of the Patriarkes is appointed by his owne Biſhops.

ψηφίζετο ὑπὸ τῶν οἰκείων ἐπισκόπων.

2 So alſo the South Church had this cuſtome of olde: Epiſcopum ab omnibus qui ſunt in Prouincia Epiſcopis ordinari, That the Biſhop ſhould bee ordained of all the Biſhops in the Prouince: So was it decreed in the 4. Canon of the firſt Nicene: Whereunto with the reſt of the acts of that Synode, Alexander Patriarke of Alexandria ſubſcribed. And at this day, the Patriarke of Æthiopia is elected by the Æthiopian Monkes at Ieruſalem, and is confirmed by the Patriarke of Alexandria. Zaga Zabo, in his confeſſion of the Ethiopike faith.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

3 The reformed Churches ſet downe one manner of election of all Miniſters and Paſtors: That they ought to be called to that function by the lawfull election of the Church, &c. And after the order and manner ſet downe in the word of God. Confeſſ. of Belgia, artic. 30. The Miniſters muſt be choſen religiouſly by the Church, or of thoſe which are appointed thereunto by the Church. Confeſſion of Heluetia c. 18. But the election of the Pope, is by vſurpation of the Cardinals, not any lawfull deputation by the Church, or ordinance of God.

Harmon. ſect. 11. p. 365.

Ibid. p. 340.

4 As their Victoria confeſſeth, that the election of the Pope as it is now vſed, is not iure diuino, by diuine right, becauſe ordo Cardinalium non eſt de iure diuino, The order of the Cardinals, that doe elect the Pope, is not by diuine right or inſtitution. Polydore Virgil ſheweth the originall of the Cardinals: how Marcellus firſt appointed 25. Cardinals or principall Prieſts, which ſhould haue the chiefe care of baptizing Infants, & burying the dead: afterward when Phocas obtained of the Emperour to haue prerogatiue ouer other Biſhops, then he began to aduance his Colledge and Senate of Cardinals, this was about anno 605. of ancient time then, this election of the Pope by his Cardinals was not in vſe. Eſpenceus a Popiſh Biſhop, ſheweth what reckoning is to be made of this new office of Cardinals, thus confeſſing of himſelfe, that when Paulus the 4. did purpoſe to make him one of the Colledge of Cardinals: I gaue immortall thanks (ſaith he) vnto God, Quod mihi tantum, non dicam boni, ſed mali non permiſit: becauſe hee permitted not (I ſay not ſo great good) but ſo great euill to fall vpon me, for what ſhould I doe at Rome, mentiri neſcio, I cannot lie, &c.

Eſpencæus ad Cardinal. Canil. et comment. in 1. Tit. p. 91.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING degreees and orders of Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters.

This queſtion hath three parts: firſt, of the ſeuen degrees of Popiſh Prieſthood. Secondly, of the difference and diſtinction of Biſhops and other Miniſters. Thirdly, of the inſtitution of Cardinals, a new degree of the Popiſh Clergie.

THE FIRST PART OF THE SEVEN degrees or orders Eccleſiaſticall.

The Papiſts.

5. Error. THough they haue diuers degrees of dignitie in the Church, as Popes, Cardinals, Patriarchs, Primates, and ſuch like: yet they make but ſeuen Eccleſiaſticall orders, which are conferred ſolemnly by certaine rites and ceremonies by their Biſhops: And they are theſe, Oſtiary, doore-keepers, Exorciſta, Exorciſts, Lectores, Readers, Acolythi, Attenders, Subdiaconi, Subdeacons, Diaconi, Deacons, and the higheſt degree, Sacerdotes, Prieſts; vnto the which all the other are but riſes and ſteps. All theſe they maintaine to be Eccleſiaſticall orders, and to be retained in the Church, Bellarm.cap.11. Rhemiſt.1.Tim.3.ſect.7.

They haue no proofe nor warrant out of Scripture, for theſe friuolous orders, but onely a ſhew of antiquitie, as they alleage certaine Canons out of the fourth Councell of Carthage, where ſuch offices are reckoned vp, Rhemiſt.ibid.

Anſwere. Firſt, to let paſſe this, that the Councell may be ſuſpected for the credit thereof, ſeeming wholy to be patched out of the Popes decrees. And whereas Auguſtine with other is ſaid to haue ſubſcribed to this Councell, therein appeareth ſome forgerie: for Can. 104. it was thus decreed, Crimine adultery notabuntur, &c. They are touched with the crime of adulterie, that hauing deuoted themſelues vnto God, doe afterward runne to ſecular mariage. Yet Auguſtine is of another iudgement, Non ipſa nuptia talium damnanda iudicantur: The mariages of ſuch we condemne not or diſanull, but their fraudulent purpoſe, de Bon.viduitat.cap.9. But he that ſaith, ſuch are adulterers, diſanulleth their mariage: therefore Auguſtine would not againſt his owne iudgement haue agreed to this Canon. Secondly, wee denie not but they had ſuch offices, as Readers, to reade the text of the Scriptures; Exorciſts to caſt out diuels, which was an extraordinarie gift for the time; Acoluthiſts, yong men appointed to attend vpon the Biſhop for their better inſtruction; Doore-keepers, that kept the entrie of the Church, that no heathen perſon or excommunicate ſhould enter. But theſe were both diuers offices, then are now appointed for them in the Popiſh Church: for they make them now, all or the moſt, miniſters and ſeruitors for the idolatrous ſeruice of the Maſſe, which in thoſe daies was not heard of; neither though there were ſuch offices and ſeruices in the Church, were they made orders and degrees of the Miniſterie. Thirdly, they had other offices beſide, which now are not in vſe, no not amongſt the Papiſts: for they had alſo ſingers, labourers, confeſſors, diggers or Sextons. Concil.Carthag.4.can.12. there is an eighth degree of Pſalmiſts added. Concil.1.ſub Syluestro 1. there is another order found out, which are there called cuſtodes Martyrum, keepers of the Martyrs. There were alſo foſſary, diggers and labourers, as appeareth in the Epiſtle of Ignatius. So that if you will make all thoſe offices vſed in time paſt in the Church, ſo many orders of the miniſterie, you muſt make ten or eleuen; more, then you doe acknowledge, or vſe in your Church.

The Proteſtants.

THe queſtion is not betweene vs and our aduerſaries in this place, concerning the titles and dignities annexed to the Miniſterie, as of Biſhops, Archdeacons, Deacons, Prouoſts, but of the ſeuerall orders of the Miniſterie: for Biſhops and other Miniſters doe not differ in order, but in office of gouernment. They hold that there are ſeuen ſeuerall ſuch orders, which haue their ſeuerall rites of conſecration, and peculiar offices in the Church allotted them. But we content our ſelues with thoſe orders onely and degrees as neceſſarie, which the holy Scripture hath commended.

*Argum.*1. As for the names & offices of Subdeacons, Readers, Exorciſts, Acolythi, Doore-keepers, we haue no ſuch warrant out of the Scripture, to make them orders of the Church: and therefore we condemne them. All neceſſarie orders for the edifying and building of the Church, the Scripture hath prescribed vs, Epheſ.4.11. there are all offices ſet downe needfull for the doctrine, inſtruction, and edifying of the Church, *Fulk.Epheſ.4.ſect.*4. Wherefore away with theſe Popiſh orders, inuented by men. But as for other offices and ſeruices, which ſhall be thought meete for the affaires and buſineſſe of the Church, they may be retained and kept, but not as new orders of the Miniſterie.

Epheſ.4.11.

*Agum.*2. Theſe offices are firſt Idolatrous, as they are now vſed among the Papiſts: for the Deacons, Subdeacons, Acolythi, were to attend vpon the Prieſt at Maſſe. Secondly, ſome of their offices were ridiculous; as to ſweepe the Church, to driue out dogs, and to hold a flye-flap of Peacocks feathers, to keepe the flyes from falling into the Communion cup. Thirdly, they were diſtinguiſhed, by ridiculous ornaments and attire, which were proper to euery one of them: as it ſhall appeare now in their deſcription.

Clemens conſtitut. lib.8. cap.15.

From the Prieſt when hee was degraded, they tooke the Chalice, patine, and hoſt, that hee ſhould haue no power any more to offer ſacrifice: they ſcraped his nailes with a peece of glaſſe, and ſo tooke away his anointing: and laſtly, they tooke away his prieſtly ornaments, the Cheſile, which ſignified charitie; the Stole, that repreſented the ſigne of our Lord. From the Deacons in their degradation, they tooke firſt the booke of the Goſpels, and ſo all power to reade the Goſpels: Then they tooke away his Dalmatike, a ſigne of his Leuiticall office, and the white Stole behinde his backe that ſignified innocencie.

From the Subdeacon they tooke the booke of the Epiſtles, that he ſhould haue no more power to reade them; alſo the emptie Chalice, and Subdeacons veſture: his office was to ſerue and miniſter to the Deacons at the Altar.

The Acolythi did light the candles in the Church, and brought wine and water to the Altar in Pitchers and Bottels; and in his degradation there was taken from him, an emptie flaggon or bottle, and a candleſticke, with a waxe candle put out.

The order of exorciſme was taken away, by depriuing him from power to reade in the booke of Exorciſmes.

From the Reader they tooke the booke of Church-lectures or leſſons. Laſt of all, from the Doore-keeper was taken the keyes of the Church: And ſo was hee depriued of all power to open or ſhut the Church doores, and to ring the bels, Ex Fox pag.2134. Pag.1932.

Thus we ſee, how much theſe offices are degenerate from the ancient vſe: Firſt, they are all but Miniſters and attendants for the abominable ſacrifice of the Maſſe, which in thoſe daies was not knowne: for the Acolythus or waiter waiteth vpon the Subdeacon, the Subdeacon vpon the Deacon, and all of them vpon the Prieſt at Maſſe. Secondly, whereas then the Exorciſts had a peculiar grace of God to caſt out diuels; their Exorciſts doe but reade certaine exorciſmes in bookes: their Readers onely reade the text of Scripture; now they reade the Legends of Popiſh Saints. Then in time of perſecution, when Chriſtians aſſembled in the night, the waiters had the charge to light the candles: but now they doe light them at noone day.

Argum.3. Theſe offices haue not beene in vſe theſe many yeeres among the Papiſts themſelues; for many times the Sexton or his boy, doe execute the charge both of Acolythiſts, Oſtiaries, and Readers, yea of Deacons and Subdeacons alſo, when the Prieſt with his boy can diſpatch a Maſſe. Neither are theſe orders retained amongſt them, for any ſpeciall ſeruice or office, but onely as preparatories, and ſteps and degrees to the Prieſthood, Fulk annot.1.Timoth.2.ſect.7.

Let vs now conſult with antiquitie: Damaſus ſometime Biſhop of Rome, thus ſaith: Non amplius, quàm duos ordines, &c. Wee know but two orders to haue beene among the Diſciples of our Lord, that is, 12. Apoſtles, and 70. Diſciples, Epiſtol.4. And it followeth, Vnde iſte tertius proceſſerit, ignoramus: From whence this third order hath proceeded, we know not. And that which is brought in without reaſon, muſt be rooted out, diſtinct.68.cap.5. If Damaſus miſliked of a third order, much more of ſixe or ſeuen new orders: and theſe being inuented without any cauſe or reaſon, by his rule muſt be extirped and rooted out.

And what is to bee thought of theſe Popiſh degrees, the Councell of Colen aduiſeth vs; Part.3. cap.31. Iam eo ventum eſt, vt 4. illi minores ordines Oſtiarij, Exorciſtæ, Pſalmiſtæ, Lectores, præter nomen nihil in eccleſia retinerent, illorumque loco tenues aliquot homines laici per eccleſiæ prælatos minoris compendij gratia ſubrogantur: It is now come to paſſe, that the foure leſſe orders of Doore-keepers, Exorciſts, Pſalmiſts, Readers, beſide their name, haue no other office in the Church, and in their ſtead ſome ſilly poore fellowes of the lay ſort are appointed by the Prelates, by a more compendious way, &c. How then call you thoſe orders, which haue a name without office, and whereof the lay ſort are capable, as it is now practiſed in Poperie?

Let vs further ſee how theſe ſeuen Popiſh orders may ſtand by their law: Cod.lib.1.tit.5.l.3. Honorius. In eccleſia non debet eſſe maior numerus, &c. There muſt not be a greater number in the Church, then the goods thereof or reuenewes will ſuffice to maintaine, &c: but few Churches are able to maintaine ſo many orders, nay ſome Churches haue not left ſo much, as to keepe one poore Vicar; how then ſhould ſo many vnneceſſarie orders be maintained?

And concerning their owne Canons, beſide the decree of Damaſus alleaged before, diſt.68.c.5. the like decree hath Innocent.3.decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.14.ca.9. Sacros ordines dicimus diaconatum & presbyteratum, &c. Sacred orders we call Deacons and Presbyters, for theſe two the Primitiue Church is found onely to haue had: and in the ſame place he denieth Subdeacons to be numbred amongſt the ſacred orders. The very like words hath the Maſter of Sentences, lib.4. diſt.24. l. That the Primitiue Church had but two orders: & de his ſolis praeceptum Apoſtoli habemus: and the Apoſtle giueth charge concerning no more, &c.

Of Doore-keepers.

Now concerning theſe orders in particular: Firſt, that the office of Doore-keepers is not now neceſſarie, but had then ſome vſe, when as Iewes and Gentiles dwelt amongſt Chriſtians: ſee the iudgement of your owne writer, Eſpenc.1.Tim.p.226.g. And in the ſame place he ſheweth out of Chryſoſtome, how it belonged to the office of the Deacon, to admit into the Church, and ſhut out. Alſo your owne Maſter of Sentences ſaith, that Chriſt tooke this office vpon him, when hee whipped the buyers and ſellers out of the temple: and that Chriſt, when he ſaid, I am the doore, ſhewed himſelfe to be the Doore-keeper, lib.4.diſt.24.f. But if Chriſt were a Doore-keeper, what reaſon haue they to make it the leaſt office in the Church?

Readers.

The ſecond degree is of Readers; which is not a diſtinct office in the Church: for in ſome places it was the office of the Deacon, in ſome of the Miniſter, in ſome it belonged to the Biſhop to reade the Scriptures, eſpecially on Feſtiuall daies, Hiſtor.tripart.lib.9.cap.39. And Chriſt, whom your Maſter ſaith did fulfill the office of a Reader in his owne perſon, after hee had read in the booke, did interpret and expound it: ſo that to reade Scripture and expound it, doth belong to the ſame office. And though we denie not, but that it is lawfull, and many times conuenient, for one to reade, and another Act. 13. 15. to preach, as S. Paul did, Act. 13. 15. yet for this cauſe they neede not bring in a new office into the Church of onely Readers.

Exorciſts. The third degree is of Exorciſts: whoſe office was to exorcize infants in baptiſme, that were vexed of euill ſpirits, by adiuring them. Firſt, we ſay that this miraculous gift is now ceaſed in the Church, and the bare name and title thereof onely remaineth. Secondly, this office of exorcizing, S. Chryſoſtome ſaith belonged vnto Deacons: ſic Eſpenc. 1. Timoth. p. 227. a. ſo that a ſpeciall office needed not for that ſeruice. Thirdly, and Origen ſaith, Iudaicum eſt adiurare dæmonia: It was a cuſtome among the Iewes to adiure ſpirits, Tract. 35. in Matth. And your owne gloſſe ſaith, that Salomon found out a certaine kinde of exorcizing, diſtinct. 21. c. 1. then can it not be an office of the Goſpell. Fourthly, Iſidore ſaith, it belonged to Exorciſts to looke to the fabrick and ruines of the Church, de Eccleſiaſt. offic. cap. 13. So that they themſelues are vncertaine what the office of Exorciſts ſhould be.

Acolythites. The fourth degree is of Acolythites, which are interpreted followers: for ſo the Greeke word ἀκόλουθος, ſignifieth, whoſe office (they ſay) is to attend vpon the lampes or lights of the Church. Firſt, whereas your Maſter ſaith, that they in the olde Teſtament did ſhew a forme of this office, that dreſſed the lampes in the Temple, lib. 4. diſt. 24. f. then can it not be a calling in the new Teſtament, being inſtituted in the olde. Secondly, he ſaith in the ſame that Chriſt did beare this office, where he ſaith, I am the light of the world; by the ſame reaſon the Apoſtles alſo were Acolythi, to whom Chriſt ſaid, you are the light of the world. Who ſeeth not what ſimple grounds they haue of their ſuperſtitious and ſuperfluous offices? Thirdly, theſe Acolythi, or Miniſters, or attendants, were ſuch as waited vpon the Biſhop in his domeſticall offices, both for greater honour, and to auoide further ſuſpition, they being alwaies witneſſes of the Biſhops acts: which function of the Acolythi, Bellarmine ſaith, that Caluin found out of his owne braine: yet is the ſame alleaged by Eſpenc. out of the Canons, 1. Timoth. p. 215. b.

Subdeacons. Fifthly, concerning the office of Subdeacons: firſt it is certaine, that they were imployed as carriers of letters vnder the Biſhops, by whom they ſent their epiſtles and meſſages, as Eſpenc. ſheweth out of S. Cyprian, Comment. in 1. Timoth. p. 214. a. But this was no Eccleſiaſticall function, and therefore they were no Eccleſiaſticall officers. Secondly, I haue ſhewed before out of the decree of Innocentius, that Subdeacons in times paſt were not counted amongſt the ſacred orders.

Thus we ſee what ſmall warrant the Church of Rome hath for theſe fiue ſuperfluous orders: as for the other degrees of Deacons and Miniſters, we refuſe them not, though we denie them to haue any ſuch office to ſerue at the Maſſe Altar: whereof I ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake afterward in the Controuerſie as touching the Sacrament of Order: and therefore of Purpoſe I doe forbeare in this place.

What the holy Martyrs, their opinion was of theſe Popiſh orders, and their ridiculous apparell, it appeareth by Doctor Taylor holy Martyr, who when the Biſhop came to degrade him, vtterly refuſed to put on the Popiſh prieſtly garments, calling them apiſh toyes, and toying trumperie, fit for boyes to Pag. 1385. 1. 4. laugh at, Fox pag. 1324. col. 1.

Biſhop Ridley Martyr, in the like caſe alſo refuſed, calling the aforeſaid veſtures, whereby the Po- Pag. 1604. 1. 76. piſh orders are diſtinguiſhed, fooliſh and abominable, and too fond for a vice in a play. pag. 1767. col. 2.

Biſhop Cranmer alſo, as Boner was buſie in degrading him from the higheſt degree to the loweſt, Pag. 1709. 2. 56. he mildly ſaid, All this needed not, I had my ſelfe done with this geare long agoe, pag. 1883. col. 2. Wherefore together with theſe holy Martyrs, wee condemne theſe deuiſed degrees of Popiſh orders, with their fooliſh appurtenances, as ſuperſtitious, ſuperfluous, and vnneceſſarie.

εἰς λειτουργὰς καὶ ἱερέας καὶ ἐπισκόπους. Lib. 2. de primat. Now for further euidence. 1. Nilus a Greeke Archbiſhop citeth Dyoniſius, who diuideth all the Eccleſiaſticall Hierarchie, into theſe three, Deacons, Prieſts, and Biſhops.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop. 2 Dauid Emperour of Æthiopia in the end of his Epiſtle written to Iohn the 3. King of Portugale, anno 1524. ſaluteth the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, and nameth no other Eccleſiaſticall orders. Zaga Zabo an Æthiopike Biſhop, nameth Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons among them, and addeth no more: in the confeſſion of the Aethiopike faith.

Harm. ſect. 11. p. 339. 340. 3 Confeſſion of Heluetia the latter c. 18. The Church Miniſters, that now are, may bee called Biſhops, Elders, Paſtors, Doctors: but in proceſſe of time, there were many moe names of Miniſters brought into the Church, for ſome were created Patriarkes, &c. Archprieſts, Deacons, Subdeacons, Acoluthes, Exorciſts, Quiriſters, Porters, and I know not what a rabble beſide, Cardinals, Prouoſts, Priors, Abbots, &c. but touching all theſe, we paſſe not a ruſh, what they haue beene in time paſt, or what they are now: it is ſufficient for vs, that foraſmuch as concerneth Miniſters, wee haue the doctrine of the Apoſtle, &c.

4 The iudgement of ſome of the Romane Church, we haue ſeene before as of Damaſus, the Councell of Colen. Eſpenceus. See alſo further afterward, Error 77. in the end.

THE

THE SECOND PART, OF THE DIFFErence of Biſhops and other Miniſters.

The Papiſts.

WE differ from them in two points: Firſt, they ſay, that Biſhops are not onely in a higher degree of ſuperioritie to other Miniſters, but they are as Princes of the Clergie, and other Miniſters as ſubiects, and in all things to be commanded by them. 70.Error. Secondly, they affirme that Biſhops are onely properly Paſtors, and that to them onely it doth appertaine to preach, and that other Miniſters haue no authoritie without their licence or conſent, to preach at al, and that not principallie or chiefly, but ſoly and wholy to them appertaineth the right of conſecrating and giuing orders. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Clericis c. 13. 14.

For the firſt, for the princelie authoritie of Biſhops, whom they would haue obeyed in all things, they wreſt theſe and ſuch like places of Scripture, as 2.Cor.1.9. I write vnto you, to know whether you will be obedient in all things: Ergo, they muſt be abſolutely obeyed. 2.Cor.1.9.

Anſ. The Apoſtle challengeth only obedience in ſuch things, as he ſhould command agreeable to Gods word: For if I my ſelfe (ſaith he) preach another Goſpell, hold me accurſed, *Gal.*1. Fulk. annot. 1.*Cor.*2.*ſect.*3.

*Argum.*2. Againſt an Elder receiue no accuſation vnder two or three witneſſes, 1.Timoth.5.19. 1.Tim.5.19. Ergo, the authoritie of Biſhops is abſolute and princelike: Videmus Epiſcopum iudicem eſſe preſbyterorum, proinde verum principem: We ſee the Biſhop is the iudge of the Elders: Ergo, a prince ouer them, *Bellarm. cap.*14.

Anſw. Firſt, it followeth not, Biſhops haue iuriſdiction and authoritie ouer other Miniſters: Ergo, they are princes ouer them. Can there be no preeminence and ſuperioritie in the Church, but it muſt needes be princelike? Is euery iudge a prince ouer thoſe, which are brought before him to be iudged? 2.Timothie had no ſuch princelike authoritie, for here it is reſtrained and limited, a rule is ſet downe by the Apoſtle which he muſt obſerue: Ergo, his authoritie was not abſolute. Thirdly, S. Paul was ſo farre off from making Timothie a prince in the Church at Epheſus, that he would rather haue him not to rebuke, but to exhort the Elders as fathers, the younger men as brethren, chap.5.1. 1.Tim.5.1. Where now is his princely authoritie become, whereas he maketh his ſubiects (as our aduerſaries call inferior Miniſters) his fathers and brethren?

For the ſecond, they reaſon thus: the Apoſtles properly had the preaching of the word committed vnto them, Acts 6. 71.Error. Act.6.2. For other were choſen to attend vpon tables: the Apoſtles alſo only had the right of laying on of hands, Acts 14.23. Ergo, It is proper onely to Biſhops to preach, and to ordaine, who are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: *Bellarm. cap.*13. & 14.

Anſw. Firſt, Bellarmine denieth that Biſhops doe properly ſucceede the Apoſtles, de pontifice lib. 4.25. becauſe he would magnifie the Pope his ghoſtly father aboue all Biſhops: but now forgetting himſelfe, he ſaith, Epiſcopi propriè ſuccedunt Apoſtolis, Biſhops do properly ſucceed the Apoſtles, chap. 14. and ſo by this reaſon euery Biſhop hath as full authoritie as the Pope. Secondly, euery godly and faithfull Biſhop is a ſucceſſor to the Apoſtles, we denie it not, and ſo are all faithfull and godly Paſtors Fulk. Annot. and Miniſters: for in reſpect of their extraordinarie calling, miraculous gifts and Apoſtleſhip, the Apoſtles haue properly no ſucceſſors, Ioh.20.ſect.3. as Maſter Benbridge Martyr ſaith, that he beleeued not Biſhops to be the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles, for that they bee not called as they were, nor haue that grace: Fox pag. 2046. artic. 6. That therefore, which the Apoſtles were eſpeciallie appointed vnto, is the thing, wherein the Apoſtles were properlie ſucceeded; but that was the preaching of the Goſpell: As Saint Paul ſaith, hee was ſent to preach, not to baptize, 1. Corinthians 1.17. 1.Cor.1.17. This alſo the Prophet Eſay ſheweth, where hee ſaith in the name of the Lord: My words, which I haue Eſay 59.21. put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeede, nor of thy ſeedes ſeede: Eſay 59. verſe 21. The promiſe of ſucceſſion, wee ſee, is in the preaching of the word, which appertaineth as well to other Paſtors and Miniſters, as vnto Biſhops, as afterward ſhall bee declared. Againe, ſeeing in the Apoſtles time Epiſcopus, and Preſbyter, a Biſhop, and a Prieſt, were neither in name nor office diſtinguiſhed, as Maſter Lambert Martyr proueth by that place of Saint Fox pag. 1111. *Paul, Tit.*1. Tit.1.5.7. where the Apoſtle calleth them Biſhops, verſ. 7. whom before verſ. 5. he had named Preſbyters, Prieſts, or Elders. To this agreeth the Councell, *Aquiſgranenſ. cap.*8. collecting thus out of this place: Paulus Apoſtolus Preſbyteros, vt verè ſacerdotes, ſub nomine Epiſcoporum adſeuerat: Paul the Apoſtle doth affirme the Elders or Preſbyters to be true Prieſts or Paſtors vnder the name of Biſhops. It followeth then that either the Apoſtles aſſigned no ſucceſſion, while they liued, neither appointed their ſucceſſors, or that indifferently all faithfull Paſtors and Preachers of the Apoſtolike faith, are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors.

Thirdly, at that time when the Deacons were elected, the congregation was at Ieruſalem, neither were there as yet any other Paſtors ordained; and therefore the Apoſtles onely attended vpon preaching of the word: but afterward when they had ordained Paſtors in other Churches, to them alſo fully was committed the word of reconciliation, Epheſ.4.11. Epheſ.4.11. Chriſt hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome ſome Prophets, ſome Paſtors and Teachers: So that Paſtors and Teachers, though ordained firſt by the Apoſtles, yet had their calling of God; and together in their calling authoritie and commiſſion to preach; neither being once ordained, needed they to expect any further licence from the Apoſtles.

Act.13.4. And as for the right of ordaining and impoſition of hands, though it were chieflie in the Apoſtles, yet the Paſtors and Elders together with them laid on their hands, Act.13.4. Yea the Rhemiſts confeſſe as much, that when a Prieſt is to be ordered, the reſt of the Prieſts together with the Biſhop doe lay on their hands, Annotat.1.Tim.4.18. What doth this elſe ſignifie, but that they haue ſome intereſt in ordaining together with the Biſhop?

The Proteſtants.

First though we doe admit, that for auoyding of Schiſme, the Church hath thought it meete, there ſhould be difference in degree and a ſuperioritie among Miniſters, yet your princely dominion which you doe vrge, in no wiſe muſt be admitted.

Luk.22.25. Argum.1. It is contrarie to the rule of Chriſt, Luk.22.25. The Kings of the nations are Lords ouer them, and they that haue authoritie ouer them, are called benefactors. Here our Sauiour forbiddeth, that there ſhould be any ſuch princelike and pompous preeminence among eccleſiaſticall perſons, as there is among ſecular and ciuill gouernours. A ſuperioritie may be granted, but not as the Prince is ouer his ſubiects: it was ſo in time of poperie, that the people were halfe ſubiects to the Prince and halfe ſubiects to their ſpirituall gouernours: But though we acknowledge other eccleſiaſticall fathers and paſtors, yet we are ſubiects onely to our Prince.

Argum.2. S. Peter alſo is flat againſt this princely rule and dominion, Feed the flocke, (ſaith hee) not as Lords ouer Gods heritage, but that you may be enſamples. But are not they, I pray you, Lords
1.Pet.5.3. ouer the flocke, that challenge to be Princes?

Let vs ſee what antiquitie ſaith: Concil.Carthag.4.can.34. Epiſcopus in quolibet loco ſedens, ſtare presbyterum non patiatur: Whereſoeuer the Biſhop ſitteth, he muſt not ſuffer a ſimple prieſt to ſtand before him: and this canon is confirmed in the decrees: diſtinct.95.c.9. Againe, can.35. Epiſcopus in conſeſſu presbyterorum ſublimior ſedeat, intra domum verò collegam presbyterorum ſe eſſe cognoſcat: The Biſhop in the aſſemblie of Prieſts, ought to ſit in the higheſt place; but within the houſe, let him know that he is but their fellow, &c. This canon alſo is ratified in the decrees, diſt.95.c.10. Theſe ancient Canons, as they gaue vnto Biſhops ouer their brethren ſome preeminence to auoid confuſion, ſo they allow them not a princely or lordly authoritie, to ſtay their ambition. See alſo for this point, your owne decrees: diſtinct.95.c.7. Epiſcopi ſe ſacerdotes eſſe nouerint, &c. Let Biſhops know, that they are Miniſters, not Lords; let them honour their Clergie, as the Clergie, that they againe may bee honoured of them, as Biſhops. And againe, Cauſ.8. qu.1.cap.20. Illud inſerendum eſt, &c. This may bee alleaged againſt thoſe, Qui de Epiſcopatu intumeſcunt: which doe ſwell with pride becauſe they are Biſhops, thinking that they haue gotten not a miniſteriall, but an imperiall office, &c.

Secondly, concerning the power of preaching, we affirme, that euery Paſtor once ordained, hath ſuf-
Fox.pag.454. ficient authoritie to preach in his owne flocke and charge, as Iohn Huſſe notably prooued to their face out of a certaine gloſſe in the fifth booke of the decretals, that when as the Biſhop ordaineth any prieſt, he giueth him alſo therewithall authoritie to preach. We denie not, but when there is iuſt occaſion, this authoritie may be reſtrained by the Church gouernours, and ſo alſo may an euill Miniſter be ſuſpended from his whole miniſterie. But the power before ſpoken of, he hath at his firſt receiuing of orders: We thus ſhew it.

Whatſoeuer belongeth to the office of a Miniſter ſet ouer a flocke or charge, hee receiueth the power thereof when he is ordained: But to preach the word, belongeth to the office of ſuch: for preaching is properly the feeding of the people.

But ſee the abſurditie of the Papiſts: they ſay it is not proper to the Prieſthood to preach, but onelie to haue power to ſacrifice the body of Chriſt: yet it is proper to the Biſhop, ſay they, to preach. We anſwere: Firſt, then the Biſhop is properly the paſtor of euery flocke and congregation in his dioceſſe, for he that properly feedeth, is properly the Paſtor: And he that is properly the Paſtor, hath the charge of ſoules properlie; yea more, then hath the particular Paſtor: for he is improperly their Paſtor, but as it were the Biſhops ſubſtitute and Vicar. But what Biſhop in the world is able to beare ſo great a burthen, to haue the eſpeciall and proper charge of all the ſoules in his dioceſſe? It is not to be denied, but hee hath a charge of their ſoules, as a Chriſtian Prince alſo hath in ſome reſpect of his ſubiects: but to ſay, he is the proper Paſtor, and hath the proper and principal charge of ſoules in teaching and feeding of them (for the queſtiõ is now of preaching, not of gouerning) it is too heauy a charge. Secondly our Rhemiſts tell vs another tale, that many that are not able to preach, are meet enough to be Biſhops. 1.Tim.5.*ſect.*13. Ergo, it is not proper to Biſhops neither to preach. I pray you then, for whom is it proper? if neither for Biſhops nor inferiour paſtors, then for none. Thirdly, they make but ſeuen orders of Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters, and the prieſthood is the chiefe: for a Biſhop and a Prieſt make but one order, as Bellarmine confeſſeth chapter 11. But to none of all theſe orders it is proper to preach: for ſeeing it is not proper to the prieſt, none of the inferiour orders can challenge it. See then what goodly orders theſe are, which leaue the very chiefe part of the miniſterie vndone, which is the preaching of the word. I thinke their meaning is, that this preaching is not ſo neceſſarie a dutie, but may bee well ſpared in the Church.

Argum.2. That which a man is bound to doe vnder paine of the curſe of God, that hee may lawfullie performe in due order without the leaue of men: but a woe is laid vpon them that preach not the Goſpell, where they are bound, 1. Corinthians 9.16. Ergo. Argument. Wicliffi.

1.Cor.9.16.
Fox pag.433.

Argum.3. A man is bound to giue corporall almes to the poore, the needie, the hungrie, the thirſtie, neither is he to craue leaue of any: Ergo, much more to teach the ignorant, to comfort the weake, and doe other duties appertaining to his charge. Argum.wicliffi.

To theſe agree the decrees of former times: Concil. Aquiſgranenſ.cap.8.ex Iſidor. Presbyteris, ſicut epiſcopis, diſpenſatio myſteriorum Dei commiſſa eſt; præſunt enim Eccleſiæ Chriſti & in confectione dominici ſanguinis,&c. conſortes cum epiſcopis ſunt, ſimiliter & in doctrina populorum, & officio prædicandi,&c. Vnto Prieſts, as well as to Biſhops, is committed the diſpenſation of Gods myſteries, for they are ſet ouer the Church of God, and are partakers with Biſhops, both in the confection of the ſacrament of Chriſts blood,&c. and in the teaching of the people, and office of preaching.

Conſtantinop.8.can.8.9. It was decreed thus, that whereas Photius the ſchiſmaticall Biſhop of Conſtantinople, who did vſurpe that Sea, did extort writings from the Clergie, vnder their owne hands, wherein they promiſed to cleaue to him, and he againe gaue them writings, authorizing them thereby to preach: the Councell thereupon thus determined, Vt liceat omnibus idoneis docere liberè ſine facultate per chirographas, That it ſhould bee lawfull for all that were fit, to preach without licence vnder hand-writing.

Likewiſe in their owne decrees, diſtinct.95.c.6. we thus reade: Nemo hinc Epiſcoporum iraſcatur, &c. Let not the Biſhops from henceforth be offended, if the Presbyters or Miniſters exhort the people, if they preach in the Church,&c. He that will not haue them to doe that, which is commanded of God, let him ſay, is any man greater then Chriſt? if the Miniſter doe conſecrate the bodie of Chriſt, and bleſſe the Sacrament, ought he not to pronounce the bleſſing vpon the people? &c. And it followeth in the ſame place. Thus by your commandement (ô vnequall prelates) the Miniſter of God doth looſe his office, is depriued of the vſe of his tongue, he is maimed, he hath onely the name of a Miniſter, but the fulneſſe and perfection thereof, which appertaineth to his conſecration, he holdeth not: much more followeth in the ſame place, which may bee applied againſt popiſh Biſhops, that cut the inferiour Miniſters ſhort of the better part of their office, which is to preach the word of God.

Againe: ibid.diſtinct.95.c.7. Peſſimæ conſuetudinis eſt: It is a very bad cuſtome in certaine Churches, for Prieſts to hold their peace in the preſence of the Biſhops, as though they did either enuie, or ſcorne to heare them, contrarie to the Apoſtle which ſaith, If any thing bee reuealed to another ſitting by, let the firſt keepe ſilence. Thus farre that decree out of S. Hierome.

Maſter Lambert Martyr. It is lawfull for all Prieſts freely to preach the word, and that at all times, in all places, and to all perſons, although they be not ſent: for all ſuch are choſen to be preachers, and therefore ſent: for of this ſpeaketh Gregorie in his paſtorals, ſaying, Prædicationis officium ſuſcipit, quiſquis ad ſacerdotium accedit: Whoſoeuer taketh prieſthood vpon him, taketh vpon him alſo the office of preaching: Fox pag.1111. reſponſ. ad articul. 22.col.2.

P.1016.1.34.

Maſter Tindall Martyr, there is but one eſpeciall office that pertaineth to thine orders, and that is to preach the word of God. pag.1253.artic.22.col.1.

P.1141.2.80.

Concerning the power of giuing orders: As S. Paul ſpeaketh of the laying on of his hands, 2.Tim. 1.6. ſo he maketh mention of impoſition of hands by the Eldership, 1.Tim.4.14. And the Rhemiſts vpon that place miſlike not the practiſe of the Church, that their Prieſts doe lay on their hands together with the Biſhop vpon his head that is to be ordained.

2.Tim.1.6.
1.Tim.4.14.

Concil.Carthaginenſ.4.can.3. Omnes presbyteri, qui præſentes ſunt, manus ſuas iuxta manum epiſcopi, ſuper caput presbyteri ordinandi teneant. Let all the Prieſts that are preſent, hold their hands next to the Biſhops hand vpon his head that is to be ordained. Againe can.24. of the ſame Councell. Epiſcopus ſine concilio Clericorum Clericos non ordinet: The Biſhop muſt not giue orders, but in the preſence and aſſemblie of the Clergie. By this then it is manifeſt, that impoſition of hands doth not wholly and ſolie belong vnto the Biſhop, ſeeing the reſt of the Elders were wont to lay on their hands likewiſe, or the Biſhops in the name of the reſt, Fulk.annot.Tit.1.ſect.2. So that the Elders were not excluded.

Now further concerning the office of preaching: the Greekes make it an eſſentiall part of the office and calling of presbyters; as Ieremie Patriarch of Conſtantinople thus writeth to the Miniſters of Germanie: Sicut mihi prædicandi neceſſitas incumbit, &c. As a neceſſitie of preaching lieth vpon me, and woe is me, if I preach not the Goſpell: ita vobis idem ſtudium & periculum: ſo the ſame care and danger hangeth ouer you, if you be ſlouthfull, &c. And in another place he citeth Gregorie Nazianzen, who ſaith that Paul preſcribed a rule both to Biſhops and Presbyters, vt ſint docendi periti, that they ſhould be skilfull to preach.

4 Eſpencæus much complaineth of their vnpreaching Biſhops: that whereas it was defined in the Councell of Trent, ſeſſ.4. to be the chiefe office of a Biſhop to preach: yet none of the Biſhops at that Councell, were knowne to preach: yea he ſaith he knew many Biſhops himſelfe, who did denie they were bound vti ſe ad iſtam docendi ſeruitutem demittant, ad iſtas ſordes deſcendant: that they ſhould abuſe themſelues to this ſlauiſh and ſordid kind of teaching, &c. If then popiſh Biſhops thinke ſcorne to preach themſelues, neither will they haue it belong vnto Presbyters, they will ſhortly bring their popiſh Church to the Muſcouia faſhion, who haue no Preachers, nay, concionari in ſuis eccleſiis obſtinate prohibent, &c. They obſtinately forbid any to preach in their Churches, for by this meanes they are free, they ſay, from hereſies and diuers opinions, which ariſe by preaching and diſcourſing.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS PART, WHETHER THE DIFference betweene Biſhops and other Miniſters be grounded vpon the Law of God, and inſtitution of the Apoſtles.

The Papiſts.

77.Error. BEllarmine affirmeth, that the iuriſdiction of Biſhops, as now it ſtandeth in their Church, and the difference betweene them, and other Presbyters, is, iure diuino, grounded vpon the Law of God, and of ſuch neceſſitie, that hee holdeth the contrary to bee hereſie, and thoſe to bee heretikes, that hold this difference to ariſe rather of a politike conſtitution of the Church to auoid Schiſme, then of the inſtitution of the Apoſtles: lib.1.de Clericis c.14. Yea they hold them to be no Churches at all, which are not vnder the gouernement of Biſhops, but of other ouerſeers, and ſuperintendents: Sane ego, nec eccleſiam ibi intelligere poſſum, &c. Surely I ſee not (ſaith one) how there can be any Church, where there is no Biſhop: Eſpenc.in 1.Tim.194.b. And ſo is it in a late decree of theirs out of the Councell of Paris: diſtinct.93.c.8. Nulla ratione Clerici, &c. They in no wiſe are ſaid to be Clerkes, or prieſts, that are not gouerned vnder the diſcipline of any Biſhop? for ſuch the Church in former time called Acephali; men without an head, &c. Which decree if it be ſo vnderſtood, that no Church ought to be without an head, that is, ſome commendable forme of diſcipline and gouernement, then may it wel be receiued: but if it be taken ſtrictly, that no Church can be without ſuch Biſhops, as they haue; this were both to condemne the Churches of Geneua, and diuers in Germanie, which haue Superintendents, and no Biſhops all; as alſo the Church of England, that hath Biſhops, but not ſuch, as theirs are. Let vs ſee ſome of their arguments, for the neceſſarie difference and preeminence of Biſhops by the law of God.

Argum.1. In the old Teſtament, there was the high Prieſt as chiefe, vpon whoſe ſentence euerie matter depended, and other inferiour prieſts vnder his obedience: in the new Teſtament, Biſhops are as the high Prieſts then; and presbyters now, as the inferior prieſts then. Ergo, by the Law of God there is a difference. Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt, the high Prieſt in the Law was a figure of Chriſt, who is the high Prieſt of the new Teſtament, and chiefe Shepheard, 1.Pet.5.4. and therefore this type being fulfilled in Chriſt, cannot properly be applied to the externall Hierarchie of the Church. Secondly, if euery Biſhop bee this high Prieſt, then haue you loſt one of your beſt arguments for the Pope, whom you would haue to bee the high Prieſt in the Church. Thirdly, a difference notwithſtanding we grant of prioritie and order, but not of princely dominion, both in the Prieſts of the old law, and the Miniſters of the Goſpell. Fourthlie, it is vntrue, that all things were gouerned onely at the will of the high Prieſt, for the other Prieſts alſo were his aſſiſtants, and did debate matters in Councell with them. And this was that συνέδριον, the Sanedrim or Councel, Act.5.34. wherein together with the high Prieſts were aſſembled other Elders alſo, called Presbyteri, Presbyters, Act.4.8.23. And this one of your owne writers confeſſeth: Et Synagoga, & poſtea Eccleſia ſeniores habuit, &c. Both the Synagogue and afterward the Church had certaine Elders, without whoſe counſell, nothing was done: which Seigniorie, by what negligence it was growne out of vſe, S. Ambroſe modeſtly confeſſeth he knew not; Eſpenc.in 1.Tim.c.5.verſ.1. Fifthly, S. Hierome reaſoneth thus, that if Moſes, qui potuit ſolus præeſſe: that if Moſes, who might himſelfe onelie haue been Ruler of the people, yet choſe vnto him 70. Elders, together with whom hee judged the people: ſo ſhould Biſhops and Presbyters in commune regere; gouerne the Church in common, imitating Moſes; Hierom Euag. If Moſes had partners in the gouernement of the ciuill ſtate, there is no queſtion, but the high Prieſt had likewiſe in the eccleſiaſticall.

1.Pet.5.4.

Acts 5.34.

Argum.2. Chriſt ordained 12. Apoſtles, and 70. Diſciples beſide, betweene whom there was great difference; the Biſhops ſucceed the Apoſtles, the Prieſts come in the place of the Diſciples, Ergo.

Anſw. Firſt, Bellarmine here diſputeth not to the point, for he is not onely to prooue a ſimple difference and diſtinction, which we grant: but a Princely preeminence, which hee ſhall neuer ſhew. Secondly, not onely Biſhops, but all faithfull Paſtors and Miniſters are the Apoſtles ſucceſſors: as Ignatius witneſſeth epiſtol. ad Trallianos. Subditi eſtote, &c. Bee yee ſubiect to the Colledge of the Presbyters, as to the Apoſtles of the Lord; though in the ſame place he compare the Biſhops to Chriſt, the Prieſts to his Apoſtles, as noting a difference; yet it is ſufficient, for that purpoſe we alleage it, that they alſo are reſembled to the Apoſtles. Thirdly, that Prieſts ſucceed in the place of the Apoſtles, and that Deacons are in ſtead of the ſeuentie Diſciples: and not, as he ſaith: thus it is euident out of their owne decrees, diſtinct. 68. c. 5. Damaſus, non amplius, quam duos ordines, &c. We reade but of two orders among the Diſciples of Chriſt, that is, of the twelue Apoſtles and the ſeuentie Diſciples: And who are now in the place of thoſe, Innocentius ſheweth, decret. Greg. lib. 1. tit. 14. c. 9. Hos ſolos Primitiua Eccleſia, &c. The primitiue Church only had theſe two ſacred orders, of Prieſts and Deacons. Fourthly, his argument concludeth not, Apoſtles were aboue Diſciples: Ergo, Biſhops, &c. vnleſſe he doe aſſume this, but Biſhops are Apoſtles: which is denied by Ignatius, who though he were neere to the Apoſtles time, being the third Biſhop of Antioch after Peter, and had ſeene Chriſt after his reſurrection; yet writing to the Antiochians, ſaith, Hæc non vti Apoſtolus præcipio: I do not command theſe things as an Apoſtle.

Argum. 4. S. Paul ſaith to Timothie: Receiue no accuſation againſt an Elder but vnder two or three witneſſes, 1.Tim.5. Here Timothie Biſhop of Epheſus, is made iudge of the Prieſts and Miniſters: Ergo, 1.Tim.5.19. in the Apoſtles time a difference, &c. Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. First, it may be doubted whether Timothie were ſo ordained by the Apoſtle Biſhop of Epheſus, as now a Biſhop is ſet ouer his dioceſſe: for, then the Apoſtle would neuer haue called him ſo often from his charge as he doth, and employed him in the ſeruice of other Churches; as he ſendeth him to Corinthus, to the Theſſalonians to confirme their faith, and to other Churches beſide. It is 1.Cor.16.10. moſt like, that Timothie had the place and calling of an Euangeliſt, whoſe office was to ſecond the Apoſtles 1.Theſſ.3.2. in their miniſterie, and to water that, which the Apoſtles had planted. And that the calling of Euangeliſts and Biſhops, which were Paſtors, was diuers, it appeareth by S. Paul, Epheſ. 4. 11. He hath giuen ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors, &c. Epheſ.4.11. And that Timothie was ſuch an Euangeliſt, it may be gathered, for that the Apoſtle biddeth him doe the worke of an Euangeliſt, 2.Timoth.4.5. Secondly, ſeeing that Timothie was ordained by the authoritie of the Elderſhip, 2.Tim.4.5. 1.Tim.4.14. which they themſelues tranſlate the Prieſthood; and the Rhemiſts expound it of 1.Tim.4.14. the ancient practiſe of the Church, when the Prieſts together with the Biſhop lay their hands vpon him that is ordained: ex Concil. Carthag. 4. c. 3. and ſo alſo Iohan. Gropperus their owne bird doth vnderſtand it; to whom alſo conſenteth Eſpencæus in his Commentarie vpon that place: how then could Timothie be a Biſhop ſtrictly and preciſely taken, being ordained by Presbyters? Thirdly, but to admit that Timothie was a Biſhop, or at the leaſt, which is all one to the matter in hand, greater then a Biſhop: yet cannot hee conclude from hence the princely preeminence ouer prieſts as their ſubiects, and an abſolute and plenarie power in them, the other excluded: for hee biddeth Timothie not to rebuke, but to exhort the Elders as Fathers; which Epiphanius vnderſtandeth of elder Miniſters: whereby he giueth no princely dominion to Timothie, but a brotherly ſuperioritie in gentle admonition. Againe, where he ſaith, Receiue no accuſation, &c. though he ſpeake by name to Timothie, directing his ſpeech to him as the chiefe, yet he excludeth not the reſt: as the holy Ghoſt writing to the Angels and chiefe Paſtors of the ſeuen Churches, Apoc. 2. 3. implieth the reſt of the Miniſters and Church there, as may appeare by the matter of the Epiſtles, wherein the faults of the whole Church are reproued, and their vertues commended. Neither can it be gathered by thoſe words of the Apoſtle, Lay hands ſuddenly vpon no man, &c. that Timothie had this ſole power in himſelfe: for the Apoſtle would not giue that to him, which he did not take to himſelfe, who aſſociated vnto him the reſt of the Presbyterie in the ordaining of Timothie, 1.Tim.4.14. but hee ſpeaketh to him as the chiefe. Wherefore whatſoeuer yet hath been alleaged, this champion hath failed in the proofe of the princely Monarch of his mitred Biſhops by the word of God: I will come now to deliuer our owne opinion.

The Proteſtants.

Of the difference betweene Biſhops and Prieſts there are three opinions: the firſt of Aerius, who did hold that all Miniſters ſhould be equall, and that a Biſhop was not, neither ought to be ſuperiour to a Prieſt, neither that there was any difference at all betweene them: which opinion of his, was counted among other hereſies: Auguſtin. de hæreſib. cap. 53. Epiphan. hæreſ. 75. The ſecond opinion in the other extreame is of the Papiſts, as we haue ſeene, that would haue not onely a difference, but a princely preeminence of their Biſhops ouer the Clergie, and that by the word of God: and they vrge it to be ſo neceſſarie, that they are no Churches, which receiue not their pontificall hierarchie. The third opinion is betweene both, that although this diſtinction of Biſhops and Prieſts, as it is now receiued, cannot be directly proued out of Scripture: yet it is very neceſſarie for the policie of the Church, to auoid ſchiſmes, and to preſerue it in vnitie. Of this iudgement Biſhop Iewel againſt Harding ſheweth both Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, and Hierome to haue been: Defenſ. Apolog. pag. 248. And amongſt the reſt S. Hierome thus writeth: Apoſtolum perſpicuè docere, &c. That the Apoſtle teacheth euidently, that Biſhops and Prieſts were the ſame: Yet he holdeth this diſtinction to be neceſſarie for the gouernment of the Church: Quòd vnus poſt electus eſt, qui cæteris præponeretur, in ſchiſmatis factum eſt remedium: That one afterward was choſen, to be ſet ouer the reſt, it was done to bee a remedie againſt ſchiſme: ad Euag. To this opinion of S. Hierome ſubſcribeth Biſhop Iewel in the place before quoted, and another moſt reuerend Prelate of our Church, in theſe words: I know

B. whitgift. know theſe names be confounded in the Scriptures, but I ſpeak according to the manner and cuſtome of the Church euer ſince the Apoſtles time: *Defenſ. anſw. admonit. pag.*383. Which ſaying is agreeable to that of S. Auguſtine: Secundum honorum vocabula quæ eccleſiæ vſus obtinuit, &c. According (Epiſt.19.ad Hieron.) to the names of honour, which the vſe or cuſtome of the Church hath obtained, a Biſhop is greater then a Prieſt. So that Auguſtine himſelfe, who was no Aerian, doth ground this diſtinction rather vpon ancient cuſtome, then the Scripture. Now then of theſe three opinions, the two firſt wee reiect, the one of the Papiſts we haue alreadie confuted; the other of Aerius commeth now to be examined: the third followeth by our arguments to be confirmed.

That Aerius was iuſtly condemned of the Church for bringing in a popular equalitie of Miniſters into the Church (though he deſerued not for this opinion onely, to be counted amongſt heretikes) thus we make it plaine.

*Argum.*1. There was an order and prioritie amongſt the Apoſtles themſelues, though in reſpect of their Apoſtleſhip they were all of one authoritie: much more therefore ſhould there be an order and degree amongſt the Miniſters of the Church, who are inferiour to the Apoſtles.

The firſt part is thus proued: Act.1. The prioritie of ſpeaking is giuen to Peter, in the election of Galath.2.7.8. Matthias. Act.15. The definitiue ſentence is pronounced by S. Iames. Galath.2.7.8. Saint Paul is ordained the chiefe Apoſtle of the vncircumciſion, and S. Peter of the circumciſion. And amongſt the Apoſtles themſelues, ſome were counted the chiefe and eſteemed as pillars, as Iames, Cephas, Iohn, Galath.2.2.9. We alſo grant, that Peter, when he confeſſed Chriſt for and in the name of the reſt, had a primacie of order, and a prioritie at that time, who alſo for and in the name of the reſt firſt receiued the keyes of the Church. And thus much Cyprian acknowledgeth: Hoc erant cæteri Apoſtoli, quod fuit Petrus, &c. The reſt of the Apoſtles were the ſame that Peter was, hauing like fellowſhip of power and honour: but the beginning is from one, that the Church may appeare to be one, de ſimplicit. prælator. Wherefore if that among the Apoſtles an order and prioritie may be granted, how much more amongſt other Miniſters is a difference to be admitted?

1.Cor.12.28. *Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, God hath ordained in the Church, firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets, thirdly teachers, then them that doe worke miracles, after that the gifts of healing, &c. The Apoſtle here aſſigning to ſome the firſt place, to others the ſecond, to ſome the third, and ſo to the fifth, euidently ſheweth, that there was a difference, and a preeminence in the gifts and callings of the Church. And ſeeing it cannot bee denied, but that the Apoſtles were chiefe and ſuperiour to all other Miniſters: it followeth, that the Apoſtles themſelues allowed a ſuperioritie in the Miniſters of the Church. And although their calling was extraordinarie, and therefore they were the chiefe; yet after their calling ceaſed, and they were tranſlated, an order ſtill for gouernment was to remaine in the Church.

*Argum.*3. 1.Cor.14.33. the Apoſtle ſaith, God is not the author of confuſion, or diſorder: but to haue a popular equalitie amongſt the Miniſters, were the next way to bring in confuſion, if none ſhould be ruled or directed by other. As S. Hierome well ſaith, Si tollis ordinem tabernaculi: If you take away the order of the tabernacle, if all ſhould be as one mixt bodie, and as the ſaying is, [illegible] one heape of duſt, or as we ſay, an hodgepoch: then to ſmall purpoſe are Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, &c. *lib.*2. aduerſ. Iouinian. His meaning is, that like as where a building is not diſtinguiſhed into the parts, but lieth altogether in a rude heape, it falleth quickly to ruine and duſt: ſo the Church being without order, ſoone commeth to confuſion. Wherefore as the Apoſtle concludeth, Let all things 1.Cor.14.40. be done comely and in order: So, whoſoeuer goeth about to breake the order of the Church, as Aerius, or whoſoeuer elſe, is a diſturber. And this may ſuffice by the way for the confutation of Aerius ſchiſmaticall opinion. Now for the confirmation of Hieromes iudgement.

*Argum.*1. Saint Hierome alleageth diuers places of Scripture, to ſhew that a Prieſt and a Biſhop Acts 20.17.28. in the Apoſtles times were all one: as Acts 20. verſ.17. thoſe whom the Apoſtle calleth Elders or Tit.1.5. Preſbyters, verſ.28. he nameth Biſhops, or ouerſeers. Tit.1.5. I left thee in Crete for this cauſe, to ordaine Elders or Prieſts: and then he ſheweth what manner of perſons the Elders ſhould be, verſ.7. 1.Pet.5.1. for a Biſhop muſt be blameleſſe, &c. Likewiſe Saint Peter, 1.epiſt.5.1. exhorteth the Preſbyters or Prieſts to feede the flocke, ἐπισκοποῦντες, that is, ouerſeeing, from whence the name of Epiſcopus, a Biſhop, is deriued. Hence he concludeth thus, Idem ergo preſbyter & Epiſcopus, &c. Therefore a Biſhop and Prieſt are all one. Hieron. ad Euag.

To theſe teſtimonies of Scripture diuers anſweres are framed: Firſt, Epiphanius anſwereth, that the Apoſtle calleth Biſhops Prieſts, becauſe in many Churches, for the want and penurie of ſufficient Miniſters, there were no Prieſts but Biſhops, who alſo did the office of Prieſts.

Philip.1.1. But Bellarmine miſliketh this anſwere: for the Apoſtle in his epiſtle to the Philippians, writeth to the Biſhops and Deacons there, 1.chap. verſ.1. but in one citie there could be but one Biſhop: and it is more like that there might be many Prieſts, then Biſhops, in one citie.

Secondly, Theodoret anſwereth, that in the Apoſtles time the Biſhops were called Apoſtles, and the Philip.2.25. Prieſts Biſhops, as Epaphroditus is called the Apoſtle of the Philippians, and therefore the office of Prieſts is deſcribed vnder the name of Biſhops.

Anſ. Firſt, it is more probable, that Biſhops ſhould be called Apoſtles after the Apoſtles time, then while they liued, becauſe that while the Apoſtles remained, the calling of Biſhops is not thought then to haue been ſo neceſſarie as afterward: but yet after the Apoſtles were departed, the ancient Biſhops refuſed to be called Apoſtles, as before I ſhewed in Ignatius. And S. Cyprian thus writeth, Me nullius ſuadela poteſt inclinare, &c. No man can perſwade me, that there are now other Apoſtles, &c. de ſingularitat. clericor. Secondly, concerning the inſtance of Epaphroditus, he is called their Apoſtle, that is, meſſenger, becauſe he brought the beneuolence of that Church vnto Saint Paul, Philip.4.18. Philip.4.18. and ſo this word, Apoſtle, is taken both in the Ciuill and Canon law, in ſo much, that letters dimiſſorie granted in the cauſe of appeale, by him, from whom the appeale is made, are called (Apoſtoli) letters of diſmiſſing, or ſending the cauſe to him, to whom the appeale is made, Decret.p.2.cauſe.2. queſt.6.ca.24.ſext.decret.lib.2.tit.15.c.1. Thirdly, we denie not, but that the Miniſters and Paſtors of the Church were alſo called Apoſtles, in reſpect of their paſtorall office, 1.Cor.8.23. but not in that 1.Cor.8.23. ſenſe, as the twelue Apoſtles were ſo called, but in a larger ſenſe and more generall vſe of the word: As the word Deacon or Deaconſhip is likewiſe taken ſometime ſtrictly for a ſpeciall office of the Church, as Act.6. there were ſeuen Deacons elected; ſometime more largely for any office, or miniſterie, as the Apoſtleſhip is called διακονία, Act.1.25. a Deaconſhip; and Timothie an Euangeliſt is cal- Acts 1.25. led a Deacon, that is, a Miniſter, 1.Theſſ.3.2. As the Apoſtles then in a generall acception of the word 1.Theſſ.3.2. were called Deacons, ſo we denie not but that Biſhops and Paſtors might be called Apoſtles. Fourthly, that none in the Apoſtles time were vſually and properly knowne by that name, but the twelue only, to whom were afterward adioyned Paul and Barnabas, it is manifeſt out of the Scripture, Luk.6.13. Chriſt choſe twelue, whom he named Apoſtles: the name therefore of Apoſtle, muſt be of Chriſts Luke 6.13. giuing. And S. Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.12.verſ.28. Epheſ.4.11. that God hath giuen ſome to be Apoſtles, 1.Cor.12.28.29 ſome Paſtors and Doctors: and all are not Apoſtles, verſ.29. If then ſome were Apoſtles, not all, ſome Ephe.4.11. other Paſtors, the Paſtors were not Apoſtles. This anſwere therefore is inſufficient.

Thirdly, Michael Medina a Papiſt thinketh, that both Hierome, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, Chryſoſtome, were in the ſame hereſie with Aerius.

This erronious iudgement of his is confuted by Bellarmine: and it may eaſily be diſproued. Firſt, ſeeing Auguſtine with the reſt held Aerius to be an heretike, how could they condemne that for an hereſie in him, which they themſelues maintained? Secondly, it is not like that the Church, which hath condemned that for hereſie in Aerius, would tolerate it in the reſt. Thirdly, there is great difference betweene Aerius opinion, and theirs: for he would haue no difference at all betweene a Biſhop and a Prieſt: the fathers allowed a difference, holding it to bee profitable for the peace of the Church: they only affirmed, that this diſtinction was rather authorized by the ancient practiſe of the Church, then by any direct place of Scripture.

Fourthly, Bellarmine alleageth the opinion of one Delphinus a popiſh writer, lib.2.de Eccleſ. that by the ſentence of Hierome, in the beginning the ſame men were both Biſhops and Prieſts, not that the office of both was the ſame, but that then both were ioyned together in one man: and afterward, ſome were made Biſhops only, ſome Prieſts only.

Bellarmine alſo confuteth this opinion, and ſheweth, that Hierome his meaning was, that the office of a Biſhop and a Prieſt in the Scripture are taken to bee all one, and not for that they might bee, or were ſometime in one man: for thus Hierome ſaith, epiſt. ad Euag. Quid facit excepta ordinatione, &c. What doth a Biſhop, beſide giuing of orders, that a Prieſt doth not? And againe, Communi presbyterorum conſilio, &c. The Church was gouerned in time paſt by the common counſell or aduice of the Presbyters. Whereby it is cleere that Hierome ſpeaketh not of the perſons, but of the office. And yet more plainly, Epiſcopum & presbyterum vnum eſſe, aliud nomen officij, &c. That a Biſhop and a Prieſt are all one, the one being a name of office, the other of age. So he thinketh the office to be the ſame, the names diuers.

The fifth and laſt anſwere to the places of Scripture propoſed is Bellarmines: who thinketh that in the Apoſtles time the names of Biſhops and Prieſts were confounded, being common to all Miniſters; but that the offices and functions themſelues were diſtinguiſhed.

Anſw. Firſt, Saint Hierome ſheweth out of Saint Paul, 1.Timoth.3. where hee deſcribeth the office of a Biſhop, that not only the name of a Biſhop and a Prieſt was taken for the ſame, but the office alſo: becauſe the Apoſtle requireth the ſame properties and qualities in them both: De presbytero reticetur, quia & in Epiſcopo presbyter continetur: There is no mention made of a Prieſt, becauſe he is contained vnder a Biſhop, Hieron. Euag. And in the ſame Epiſtle he vrgeth that place, Titus 1.5.7. Tit.1.5.7. where the Apoſtle doth not onely giue the name of Biſhops to Prieſts, but requireth the ſame gifts and qualities in them both. Secondly, S. Chryſoſtome vſeth the ſame reaſon, Hom.11.in 1.ad Timot. Inter Epiſcopum & presbyterum intereſt fere nihil, &c. There is almoſt no difference betweene a Biſhop and a Prieſt, becauſe that vnto Prieſts the care of the Church is committed, and that, which the Apoſtle ſaid of Biſhops, doth agree vnto Prieſts. Thirdly, Saint Ambroſe alſo vpon the ſame ground thus writeth: Comment. in 1.Timoth.3. Poſt Epiſcopum diaconatus ordinationem ſubiecit, &c. He doth place the ordination of a Deacon after a Biſhop: why? becauſe there is but one ordination of a Biſhop and a Prieſt: for both of them is a Miniſter (Sacerdos) yet the Biſhop is the firſt among the Prieſts. Fourthly, likewiſe Concil. Aquiſgran. cap.8. in theſe words out of Iſidore they conclude thus: Vnde ad Timotheum de ordinatione, &c. Hereupon the Apoſtle writing to Timothie of the ordination of a Biſhop and a Deacon, ſpeaketh nothing of Prieſts, becauſe he comprehendeth them vnder the name of Biſhops: ſecundus etenim gradus penè coniunctus eſt primo: for the ſecond degree is almoſt all one with the firſt. Thus by the iudgement of theſe learned fathers, there was ſmall difference, as betweene the names: ſo betweene the offices of Prieſts and Biſhops in the Apoſtles time. And thus much concerning the teſtimonies of Scripture.

Argum. 2. Archbiſhops and Primates haue the ſame right of iuriſdiction ouer other Biſhops, which Biſhops haue ouer ſimple Prieſts: but their authoritie and iuriſdiction is rather grounded vpon the ancient cuſtome of the Church, then any Apoſtolicall iniunction or inſtitution in Scripture. Ergo.

The ſecond part of the reaſon is proued by the authoritie of S. Hierome, or who elſe was the author of the booke de 7. Ordinib. Propter hoc eſt nuper Epiſcopalis electio, &c. For this cauſe alſo, that is the preſeruing of vnitie, the election of the Biſhop is referred to the Metropolitane, &c. and now the chiefe Prieſts begin to endure another Prieſt aboue them, non ex iure, ſed neceſſitate, rather of neceſſitie, then equitie. Alſo the decree of Nicholaus the Pope, Can. 3. de Patriarch. Primates vel Patriarchas nihil habere priuilegij, &c. We do determine, that Primates and Patriarches haue no priuiledge before other Biſhops, niſi quantum, but as farre as the ſacred Canons doe grant, and ancient cuſtome of old time hath giuen vnto them. This alſo is affirmed by that reuerend and learned Prelate B. Iewel out of Hierome, Defenſ. Apolog. p. 123. that Biſhops are ſubiect to Primates rather by continuance of cuſtome, then by precept of Scripture.

Argum. 3. Biſhops are ſaid to ſucceed the Apoſtles, as S. Cyprian witneſſeth, lib. 2. epiſt. 10. ad Cornel. Hoc vel maxime frater, &c. Brother, we muſt chiefly labour for this, that wee may retaine vnitie, deliuered by our Lord and his Apoſtles to vs their ſucceſſors. But a ſucceſſor commeth not in place, till the predeceſſor be gone: Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 7. quaſt. 1. c. 5. Viuente Epiſcopo, &c. As long as the Biſhop liueth, no mā can ſucceed him. And can. 41. In vna Eccleſia, &c. There cannot be two Biſhops in one place: Ergo, the Apoſtles could properly haue no ſucceſſors while they liued: and they being the chiefe Paſtors and Biſhops of euery Church, there could be no other chiefe beſide them. And although they might commit the chiefe ouerſight of ſome Churches to ſome ſpeciall men in their abſence, as to Timothie at Epheſus, to Titus in Creta: yet could they not then be ſaid properly to be the Apoſtles ſucceſſors; and the Apoſtles yet being aliue, the office of Biſhops was leſſe needfull, as a reuerend Prelate hath written. So then I conclude out of the Councell Aquiſgran. cap. 9. ex Iſidor. Apoſtolis decedentibus, ſucceſſerunt Epiſcopi: The Apoſtles deceding or departing, the Biſhops ſucceeded. Wherefore it is probable, that while the Apoſtles liued, Biſhops were not in their full office, but after their departure. The diſtinction then of Biſhops and other Miniſters, ſeemeth not to haue been in the Apoſtles time.

Argum. 4. If the diſtinction of Biſhops and Prieſts were by the commandement and inſtitution of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, it ſhould neceſſarily be enioyned vnto all Churches: for all the precepts and ordinances of Chriſt and his Apoſtles are of neceſſitie to be kept, 2. Theſſ. 2. 15. Hold the ordinances which you haue been taught, &c. But this cannot without preiudice of many reformed Churches, be affirmed, which haue no Biſhops, though they haue other Ouerſeers in their ſtead. And although it cannot be denied, but that the gouernmēt of Biſhops according to the vſe of the primitiue Church, is very profitable for the preſeruing of vnitie; yet dare wee not condemne the Churches of Geneua, Heluetia, Germanie, Scotland, that haue receiued another forme of Eccleſiaſticall gouernment: as the Papiſts proudly affirme all Churches, which haue not ſuch Biſhops as theirs are, to be no Churches. Wherefore I cannot conclude that this ſpeciall forme of Eccleſiaſticall gouernement; is abſolutely preſcribed in the word: for then all thoſe Churches, which haue not that preſcript forme, whether of Biſhops, or other, ſhould be condemned as erroneous Churches. So then here is the difference betweene our aduerſaries the Papiſts and vs: they ſay it is of neceſſitie to ſaluation, to be ſubiect to the Pope, and to Biſhops and Archbiſhops vnder him, as neceſſarily preſcribed in the word: but ſo doe not our Biſhops and Archbiſhops, which is a notable difference betweene the Biſhops of the popiſh Church, and of the reformed Churches: Defenſ. anſw. admonit. p. 382. Wherefore, as wee condemne not thoſe reformed Churches, which haue retained another forme of Eccleſiaſticall gouernment; ſo neither are they to cenſure our Church, for holding ſtill the ancient regiment of Biſhops, purged from the ambitious and ſuperſtitious inuentions of the popiſh prelacie. Let euerie Church vſe that forme, which beſt fitteth their ſtate: in externall matters euery Church is free, not one bound to the preſcription of another, ſo they meaſure themſelues by the rule of the word: for if any Church ſhall ſeeme to preſcribe vnto another in thoſe things, wherein they are left free, that ſaying of the Apoſtle may be fitly applied againſt them, 1. Cor. 14. 36. Did the word of God ſpring from you, or came it vnto you onely? God may giue vnto one Church wiſedome out of the word, to know what is beſt for their ſtate, as well as to another. And ſo I conclude this point, with that ſaying of Saint Auguſtine to the Donatiſt Biſhops: Tenete, quod tenetis, &c. Hold, that which you hold; you haue your ſheepe, I haue my ſheepe, be not troubleſome to my ſheepe, I am not troubleſome to yours, expoſit. 2. in Pſal. 21. So may wee ſay to our ſiſters the reformed Churches, and they likewiſe to vs: let them hold that gouernment they haue, we doe not moleſt them in their courſe, neither let them moleſt vs in ours.

2. Theſſ. 2. 15.

1. Cor. 14. 36.

Thus hitherto haue I ſhewed the grounds of Hieromes opinion concerning the diſtinction of Biſhops ſhops and other Miniſters, which is alſo ratified by their owne decrees, diſtinct. 95. c. 5. Olim idem erat, &c. In times paſt a Prieſt was the ſame, that a Biſhop: and before that by the inſtinct of the diuel ſects entred into Religion, communi presbyterorum concilio, The Church was gouerned by the common councell of the Presbyters: and diſtinct. 93. c. 24. quod poſtea vnus electus eſt, &c. that afterward one was choſen to be preferred before the reſt, it was done to be a remedie againſt ſchiſme: likewiſe that ſaying of Auguſtine, ſecundum honorum vocabula, That according to the titles of honour, which the vſe of the Church hath obtained, a Biſhop is greater then a Prieſt, is confirmed, par. 2. cauſ. 2. q. 7. c. 34. And ſo their owne decrees conclude this matter againſt themſelues, diſtinct. 95. c. 5. Sicut ergo presbyteri, &c. As Prieſts therefore doe know, that they by the cuſtome of the Church are ſubiect to him, who is ſet ouer them; ſo let Biſhops vnderſtand, that they alſo by the ſame cuſtome, rather then by vertue of the Lords diſpenſation, are greater then Prieſts, &c. But Hierome thus writing, giueth no encouragement to inferiour Miniſters, to caſt off the yoke of their ſuperiours: but exhorteth them willingly to ſubmit themſelues; Sta ſubiectus pontifici, &c. Be ſubiect to thy Biſhop, and receiue him as thy ſpirituall father. Likewiſe he exhorteth Biſhops, Honorent clericos, &c. Let them honour their Clergie, as the Clergie, that their Clergie may honour them, as their Biſhops, diſtinct. 95. c. 7. And thus the ſame learned father concludeth with his exhortation to them both: that they not reſpecting their titles, ſhould labour together for peace, and to profit the Church: Quomodo in legionibus & exercitu, &c. Like as in the Armie, ſome are Generals, ſome Centurions, ſome Tribunes, but the battell being once ioyned, titles of honour ceaſe, onely valour is required: ſo in this field and battell, wherein we fight againſt the diuell, not names and titles are to be ſought for, but godly endeuour, &c. lib. 1. aduerſ. Iouinian. that whether Biſhops as ſuperiours, or Miniſters as inferiours, they muſt ioyne together in the Lords worke, like as the Captaine and ſouldier fight together, the Maſter builder and the labourer build together.

Now to conclude this whole queſtion, and to ſpeake diſtinctly of euery point, that it may appeare how farre this difference in Eccleſiaſticall functions is diuine, and wherein humane: this I iudge may ſafely without any contradiction be affirmed, that in this diſtinction of the Miniſters of the Church, there is ſomewhat apoſtolicall, ſomewhat alſo politicall: and in the Popiſh Prelacie, ſomething alſo Antichriſtian and diabolicall: as I will now briefely ſhew in euery point, by particular induction.

Firſt, in the calling of Biſhops, as they are now ordained in ſome reformed Church, there is ſomewhat diuine and Apoſtolicall: for it cannot bee denied, but that to haue order in the Church, and to haue diuerſitie of degrees and miniſtrations, to auoide confuſion, proceedeth from the inſtitution of Chriſt: And thus farre the preface to the 21. diſtinction may bee receiued and allowed; which thus determineth, Maiorum & minorum ſacerdotum, &c. The diſtinction of the greater and leſſe Miniſters tooke beginning from Chriſt in the new Teſtament, who did inſtitute 12. Apoſtles as the greater and higher ſort of Miniſters, and 72. Diſciples as the leſſe. This then we ſay, is agreeable to the inſtitution of Chriſt, that there ſhould bee not a popular equalitie, but a conuenient ſuperioritie and prioritie in the Miniſters of the Goſpell, as S. Paul alſo ſheweth, firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets, &c. as I haue proued at large before. 1. Cor. 12. 28.

Secondly, there is ſomewhat politicall: and that of two ſorts, as touching the policie Eccleſiaſticall, and Ciuill.

To the Eccleſiaſticall policie in the aduancing of the dignitie of Biſhops theſe things doe appertaine: Firſt of all S. Hierome ſaith of confirmation committed only to Biſhops, Diſce hanc obſeruationem ad honorem potius eſſe ſacerdotij, &c. Know that this obſeruation is rather for the honour of their Prieſthood, then by neceſſitie of any law, Hieron. aduerſ. Luciferian.

Secondly, the Councell of Aquiſgrane, ca. 8. ſaith, that the ordination and conſecration of Miniſters is now reſerued to the chiefe Miniſter, ſolum propter authoritatem, onely for authoritie ſake, leaſt that the diſcipline of the Church being chalenged by many, ſhould breake the peace of the Church.

Thirdly, the author of the booke vnder Hieromes name de 7. ordinib. ſaith, that the conſecration of Virgins, which is not now in vſe in the reformed Churches, was reſerued to the Biſhop, for concord ſake.

Fourthly, the iuriſdiction of the Church, which in time paſt Hierome ſaith was committed to the Senate or Colledge of the Presbyters, was afterward, to auoide ſchiſme, deuolued to the Biſhop: Diſtinct. 95. 5. Antequam, &c. Before ſects entered into religion, the Church was gouerned by the common councell of Presbyters. And of this Senate mention is made in the decrees: Cauſ. 16. queſt. 1. c. 7. Senatum Romani, &c. As the Romanes had their Senate, by whoſe counſell euery matter was diſpatched; ſo we haue our Senate the companie of Elders.

Fifthly, S. Ambroſe ſaith, 1. Tim. 3. Epiſcopi & presbyteri, &c. A Biſhop & a Presbyter haue but one ordination: for they are both in the Prieſthood. Whereby it may appeare, that the ſpeciall conſecration of Biſhops was ſince ordained for the dignitie of that calling. And S. Hierome ſaith, That in the Church of Alexandria, the Presbyters did make choiſe of one, whom they placed in a higher degree, and called him their Biſhop; like as if an Armie ſhould chuſe a Generall, or the Deacons ſhould chuſe an induſtrious man, whom they make their Archdeacon, Hieron. ad Euagr. So it ſhould ſeeme that the very election of a Biſhop in thoſe daies without any other circumſtance, was his ordination.

Sixthly, in Hieromes time it was lawfull for Prieſts and Miniſters to preach without further licence obtained from the Biſhop: as it may appeare diſtinct. 95. c. 6. Qui non vult presbyteros, &c. Hee that will not haue a Miniſter to doe that, which is commanded him of God (that is to preach) would bee greater then Chriſt, &c. And a little after: Wherefore let it bee lawfull for them to doe that in the Churches, which they are ſuffered to doe at Rome, in Greece, Cyprus, Italie: nay, which is more, in heauen, &c. But ſince, to ſtay the humour of contentious and ſchiſmaticall preachers, it hath ſeemed good to the Church to referre the allowance of preachers to the Ordinarie: according to the decree of the Laterane Councell, ſub Innocent. 3. cap. 3. Praeter authoritatem, &c. Hee that preacheth priuately or publikely without the authoritie of the Biſhop, let him be excommunicate.

Seuenthly, for the better diſtinction of the offices, and diſcerning of their perſons, it hath been thought meete by the Church, that Biſhops ſhould haue their ſeuerall habite and attire: Concil. Aquiſgranens. c. 13. out of Auguſtine: Offertur mihi birrhum pretioſum, &c. If a coſtly garment be offered me, perhaps it becommeth a Biſhop, though it become not Auguſtine, a poore man borne of poore parents, ſuch a garment as a Presbyter or Deacon may weare, ſuch an one will I haue, &c. Though Auguſtine in modeſtie refuſe to weare a Biſhops habite, yet it may be gathered, that ſome veſture was ſeemely in them, that became ſuperiour Miniſters.

Eightly, diuers other conſtitutions haue been made in Eccleſiaſticall policie, for the maintaining of the dignitie of Biſhops: as Cauſ. 2. quaeſt. 5. c. 1. that an oth ſhould not bee miniſtred to a Biſhop, but in a matter of faith: and whereas one common witneſſe was not taken to be ſufficient in any cauſe: Cauſ. 4. quaeſt. 3. cap. 3. yet the teſtimonie of a Biſhop was ſufficient, Cauſ. 11. qu. 1. c. 36. Likewiſe two or three witneſſes were receiued againſt a Presbyter, Cauſ. 2. quaeſt. 4. c. 1. but a Biſhop could not be condemned by fewer then twelue Biſhops, ibid. cap. 2. Theſe and ſuch like immunities haue been in Eccleſiaſticall policie annexed to the dignitie of Biſhops.

So alſo the Ciuill ſtate hath augmented and inlarged the priuiledges and immunities of Biſhops, which they haue rather by the munificence of Princes, then by diuine authoritie: and this was the aſſertion of Marſilius Patauinus, that, wherein Biſhops are greater then ſimple Prieſts, and Primates then Biſhops, illud ex gratuito, &c. that it proceeded from the franke gift of the Prince, Praefat. in concil. Senonenſ.

As firſt, the diuiſion of Prouinces and Cities, vnto Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and the limitation of their iuriſdiction was brought in by the conſent of Princes: as diſtinct. 99. Prouinciae &c. Prouinces were for the moſt part diuided before the comming of Chriſt, &c. And where of late the ſecular Primates were placed, to whom appeales were made, when they could not trauell to the Emperours Court, there now Eccleſiaſticall Primates are ſeated, &c.

Secondly, the reuenewes and lands of Biſhopricks haue been giuen by deuout and religious Princes vnto Biſhops and their ſucceſſors, and diuers imperiall lawes haue bin made in fauour of the maintenance of the Church: as Cod. lib. 8. tit. 54. l. 34. Iuſtinian. That a gift exceeding three hundred ſhillings, being made without inſinuation, that is, inrolling and recording of it, ſhould not be good, but to the Church. And leg. 35. A ſimple gift without ſtipulation, or tradition, that is, vnleſſe it were either deliuered, or warranted, was not good, but to the Church. Likewiſe, Cod. 1. tit. 5. l. 19. Whereas the preſcription of twentie or thirtie yeeres might be vrged againſt a priuate man, the Church might lay claime to the poſſeſſions thereof after an hundred yeeres. And thus by the fauourable lawes and bountifull gifts of Princes, the reuenewes of Biſhops haue been inlarged.

Thirdly, the titles of honour annexed to Biſhopricks, as that they are created Barons, and made Lords of the Parliament houſe here in England, haue beene beſtowed by the liberalitie of the Kings of this Realme, not yet aboue 400. yeeres ſince. And whereas by the Imperiall law Aduocates were made equall to Knights, as may appeare by the law of Leo: Cod. lib. 2. tit. 7. leg. 14. Non minus prouident, &c. They which take vpon them the defence of cauſes, doe no leſſe profit mankinde, then if they did defend their Countrey by warre and weapons, &c. By the ſame reaſon alſo ſpirituall Paſtors ſhall be preferred before both, which doe not defend mens bodies as Captaines, nor their goods as Aduocates, but watch ouer their ſoules. And as it followeth in the ſame law: Nec enim ſolos noſtro Imperio militare credimus, &c. Neither doe we thinke that they onely fight for our Empire, that vſe ſwords and ſhields, but aduocates alſo, &c. yea and much more ſpirituall Paſtors doe fight and ſtriue by their ſpirituall weapons of teares and prayers, &c. So that by the equitie of this law, the Paſtors of mens ſoules are not to be held inferiour to Lords and Knights.

Fourthly, the iudgement of matrimoniall and teſtamentarie cauſes, and of other ſuch like matters, hath beene reſerued vnto Biſhops by the Ciuill and Imperiall authoritie, as may appeare by theſe particular grants.

1 Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 28. Anthemius made this law, that if a ſtranger died, giuing towards the redeeming of captiues, if hee appointed no executor, the Biſhop of the place ſhould take vpon him to execute the Teſtators will to the foreſaid vſe, &c.

2 Cod. lib. 6. tit. 54. leg. 10. authentic. If a ſtranger dye inteſtate, his goods ſhall be deliuered to the Biſhop to be kept for the next heire.

3 Cod. lib. 1. tit. 7. leg. 1. Valentinian. It is referred to the care of Biſhops, that victuals bee not ſold at exceſſiue prices in the time of dearth.

Cod.lib.1.tit.7.leg.10.Honor. It is committed to the Biſhops to call vpon the Iudges, that the priſoners be prouided for. 4

Ibid.leg.12. It belongeth to Biſhops, to take order for captiues redeemed, that they be not wronged, or moleſted after their returne. 5

Ibid.leg.11. Biſhops haue charge to ſee the bookes of Sorcerie burned, and what other bookes ſo euer tending to impietie. 6

Ibid.leg.18. If a man confeſſe he haue receiued a piece of money, being promiſed it onely, and afterward receiue it not, he may make his complaint before the Biſhop of that place. 7

Lib.3.tit.1.leg.14.authentic. If the Ordinarie Iudge be ſuſpected, the Biſhop of the place ſhall heare the cauſe together with the Iudge, and ſo determine it. 8

Lib.3.tit.43.leg.15.Iuſtinian. A law is made againſt dice-play, and the charge thereof is committed to Biſhops. 9

Cod.Theodoſian.lib.tit.de Epiſcopal.indic.leg.1. It was lawfull to any man in the wager of law, yea vpon the point of ſentence, to referre his cauſe to the iudgement of the Biſhop, and they were to ſtand vnto it, though his aduerſarie gaine-ſaied. 10

Thus wee ſee alſo how in Ciuill policie the dignitie of Biſhops, by the fauour of Chriſtian Emperours, hath beene enlarged: And hitherto I haue ſhewed, what is to bee iudged politicall in the diſtinction of Biſhops from the reſt of the Clergie, both as touching the Ciuill and Eccleſiaſtical policie.

Now in the laſt place I will briefly declare, what hath beene brought in beſide the firſt inſtitution of Biſhops, by ambition and pride into the Popiſh prelacie.

Firſt, the Biſhops of ancient time were diligent Preachers, Diſtinct.43.c.5. Nichbolaus. Diſpenſatio,&c. The diſpenſation of the heauenly ſeede is committed to vs; woe vnto vs, if we ſow it not, if we holde our peace, &c. But they allow vnpreaching Prelates, and ſay, that want may bee recompenced with other gifts of gouernment, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Tim.5.verſ.17.

Secondly, Biſhops in times paſt did ſhew themſelues humble and lowly in their apparell, diet, family: For apparell, Auguſtine ſaith, Fateor vobis de precioſa veſte erubeſco,&c. I confeſſe vnto you, I am aſhamed of a coſtly garment, it becommeth not this profeſſion, ex concil.Aquiſg.ca.113. For diet, order was taken: Lateran.ſub Alexand.c.10. that Prelates, tria tantùm fercula haberent, ſhould haue but three diſhes of meate. And concerning their traine, it was decreed, Concil.Baſilienſ.append.ca.4. That Cardinals ſhould haue but tenne; Patriarchs eight; Archbiſhops ſixe, to goe before them in the ſtreete, whether they went a foote, or on horſebacke. But now who ſeeth not, how farre the ambition of Popiſh Prelates hath exceeded theſe ancient rules: for coſtlineſſe of apparell, their Clergie hath beene ſo wanton; that they were conſtrained to decree, that none of the Clergie ſhould weare any guilt ſpurres, or buttons, or ſhooe bands of gold; Concil.Lateran.ſub Innocent.3.cap.16.Ruerius the Cardinall vnder Sixtus 4. did weare cloath of gold, and vſed bed couerings of gold, and had ſiluer baſons for his priuie vſe: And their ſtatelineſſe was ſuch, that vpon feſtiuall daies, the Biſhop, comming forth in proceſſion, would be carried vpon mens ſhoulders; againſt the which vſe there is a decree extant, Concil.Bracarenſ.3.can.5. And thus hath the Popiſh prelacie degenerated from the ancient ſimplicitie.

Thirdly, in former times Biſhops depended not as ſeruants and ſubiects one vpon another, but were as the chiefe Paſtors in their ſeuerall Churches and charges. Diſtinct.93.ca.24.Vbicunque fuerit Epiſcopus,&c. Whereſoeuer a Biſhop is, whether at Rome, Eugubium, Conſtantinople, they are all of the ſame merite or worthineſſe, and of the ſame prieſtly authoritie, &c. But now Popiſh Prelates are all ſubiects and ſlaues to the Pope, being bound vnto him by oath of obedience and fealtie.

Fourthly, Biſhops of former times had their ſingular circuites and dioceſes allotted them in ſuch ſort, that they might themſelues haue the ouerſight of them: for they were bound by the Canons to viſit euery pariſh Church euery yeere in their dioceſſe, Cauſ.10.quaſt.10.c.11.ex concil.Toletan.4. And againe, Extrauag.commun.lib.1.tit.6.c.1.Ioann.22. ſheweth a reaſon why hee diuided certaine dioceſes ſome into two, ſome into more, Quod in earum ſingulis ſingulorum vultus nequibat, vt deceret, unicus paſtor inſpicere,&c. Becauſe one Paſtor or Biſhop, was not able to know the face of euery one: that is, to haue a particular knowledge of the pariſhes in his dioceſſe. But ſince thoſe times, Popiſh Prelates haue ambitiouſly ſought to enlarge their dioceſſe, and to incroach vpon the limits of others, reſpecting more the largeneſſe of their iuriſdiction, then the diſcharge of their Epiſcopall duty. This enormitie miſliked ſome of their owne Popes and chiefe patrones: and therefore Iohn 22. diuided the Biſhopricke of Tholouſe into fiue dioceſes, Extrau.commun.lib.3.tit.2.c.5. giuing this reaſon thereof, Quia durum erat & difficile,&c. Becauſe it was an hard and difficult matter, that in ſo large a dioceſſe recourſe ſhould be had to one man, &c.

Fifthly, the Biſhops of the Primitiue Church were readie to forgiue, and were full of mercie, and did make interceſſion to the Magiſtrate for offenders, yea for ſchiſmatikes; as Cauſ.23.quaſt.5.c.1.Auguſtine is a mediatour to Marcellinus for the Donatiſts: Sic ſuccenſe iniquitati,&c. So puniſh iniquitie, as you forget not humanitie. And Cyprian excellently ſaith, lib.1.epiſtol.3. Remitto omnia,&c. I remit euery thing, I diſſemble many things; yea ſinnes committed againſt God, I do not ſtrictly examine; yea in remitting of offences I my ſelfe doe almoſt offend, &c. But Popiſh Prelates are of a contrarie ſpirit, who were moſt cruel ſuckers of the blood of the Saints, condemning them to death, & deliuering them ouer to the ſecular power to bee executed, as the high Prieſt did Chriſt to Pilate to be crucified: contrarie to their owne Canons, Cauſ.33. qu.3. diſt.1. c.23. Qui hominem tradidit,&c. Hee that deliuereth or betraieth a man, killeth him, as our Lord ſaith, Hee hath the greater ſinne that hath delivered me vnto thee.

Sixthly, in the former ages of the Church, Chriſtian Biſhops did not hold themſelues exempt from the ſecular power; Cod.lib.1 tit.6.leg.34.Omnes,&c. All, of what condition ſoeuer, whether Biſhops or Clerkes, or Monks, are ſubiect, iuriſdictioni preſidali, to the iuriſdiction of the preſident. But now Popiſh Prelates challenge a priuiledge to be freed from the Ciuill iuriſdiction, according to the proud decree of Boniface, cauſ.11 qu.1.ca.8. Nullus Epiſcopus, That no Biſhop ſhould be conuented before a ſecular Iudge neither in ciuill nor criminall cauſes.

Seuenthly, in elder times a Biſhop could not, ſine concilij examine deijcere presbyterum, without the examination of a Councell depriue a Prieſt, Concil.Hiſpalenſ.2.can.7. Solus honorem dare poteſt,&c. The Biſhop may conferre Prieſthood alone, but hee cannot take it away alone, diſtinct.67.c.2. and the ſame is ratified by Innocentius 3.decret.Gregor.lib.1.tit.7.ca.2. But of late daies Popiſh Ordinaries tooke vpon them, ex officio, in their Conſiſtories, by their ſole authoritie, to depriue the Miniſters of the Goſpell both of their liuing and life to, contrarie to their owne Canons.

Eightly, the ancient Biſhops did account of Prieſts as of their colleagues, diſtinct. 95. c. 10. And, Concil.Carthag.4.c.34. it was decreed, that a Biſhop ſitting ſhould not ſuffer a Presbyter to ſtand before him,&c. But the Popiſh Prelates challenge to be Princes and Lords ouer their Clergie, as we haue ſeene before, and call the Clerkes vnder their iuriſdiction, their ſubiects.

Ninthly, the Biſhops of former times did admit Prieſts to ſit in councell, and giue voices with them, Decret.p.1.diſtinct.95.c.6. Presbyteri intereſſe ſacerdotum concilio,&c. It was lawfull in times paſt for Prieſts to be preſent in the councell of Biſhops,&c. But now the contrarie is practiſed by Popiſh Prelates, who doe proudly exclude their Clergie from giuing voice in their Synodes, and doe iuſtifie their doing therein.

Tenthly, the Biſhops of the Primitiue Church did not take vpon them the iudgement of ſecular matters: Cauſ.11.qu.1.c.29. Neque iudicem,&c. Chriſt hath not appointed thee either a Iudge, or inquiſitor of ſecular buſineſſe. Likewiſe, Decret.Gregor. lib.3.tit.50.c.4. Alexander 3. decreed, Ne Clericus iuſticiarius fiat principis,&c. That a Clergie man ſhould not be adminiſtrator of iuſtice to the Prince. And againe, ibid.c.5. he thus writeth: Cantuarienſ. Archiepiſcop. Ne quis ſacerdos officium habeat vicecomitis, aut prepoſiti ſecularis,&c. That no Biſhop ſhould beare the office of a Vicount, or of a ſecular gouernour,&c. But it was an vſuall thing for Popiſh Prelates to be Lord Treaſurers and Chancellors vnto Kings, and beare other more ſecular offices.

Hitherto as I haue ſhewed, how Popiſh Prelates haue ſwarued from the ancient Canons; ſo will I briefly declare, how they haue degenerated from that perfect paterne and forme of a Biſhop, according to S.Pauls deſcription, 1.Timoth.3.

1. Tim.3.1.2.3.

11 First, S.Pauls Biſhop might be but the husband of one wife: which is not ſo to be vnderſtood, as though he could be no Biſhop that had beene twice married, but not ſuch an one as had two or three wiues at once, according to the corrupt vſe of the Iewes, and ſo S.Hierome expoundeth it, as ſhall be ſhewed afterward: it was lawfull then in the Primitiue Church for Biſhops to bee maried. And in the Councell of Gangra, rehearſed alſo in the decrees, diſt.28.c.15. it was decreed vnder paine of anathematiſme, that no man ſhould make any difference between a maried and vnmaried Prieſt. But the practiſe of Popiſh Prelates is otherwiſe, who cannot abide honeſt matrimonie, yet haue beene knowne to reſort vnhoneſtly to concubines: as two of their Biſhops, that were at the Councell of Trent, were ſlaine being deprehended in adulterous acts, ex Proteſtat.Concionat.German.aduerſ.concil.Tridentin.

12 Secondly, S.Paul requireth, that his Biſhop ſhould bee vigilant and diligent in his charge: and accordingly the Canons of the Church haue prouided, Sardicenſ.can.14. Epiſcopus,&c. That a Biſhop ſhould not be abſent from his Church aboue three Lords daies. And Concil.Carthag.5.can.5.Placuit vt nemini,&c. No Biſhop ſhall haue licence, leauing his Cathedrall Church, to make his abode in any other Church, no not within his dioceſſe. And it is memorable, which is recorded of Pope Gregorie 11. that as he admoniſhed a Biſhop to goe home to his Church, and he againe replying, ſaid: Why he, that was to giue example to others, did not returne to Rome; for at that time the Pope had his ſeate in France: the Pope thereupon remoued his Court to Rome out of France, where the Popes had ſoiourned by the ſpace of 74.yeeres. But now it is vſuall for Popiſh Prelates, both Cardinals and others, to follow the Popes Court, and very ſeldome to viſite their Churches.

13 Thirdly, S.Pauls Biſhop muſt be giuen to hoſpitalitie: ſo likewiſe the ancient Canons require, diſtinct.83.c.1. Epiſcopus pauperibus, The Biſhop muſt miniſter meate and rayment to the poore that are not able to labour with their owne hands,&c. But it hath beene the vſe of ſome Popiſh Prelates, in ſtead of the poore and impotent, to keepe Horſes, Hawkes, and Hounds: as William Longchampe, Chancellor and chiefe Iuſtice to King Richard the firſt, is reported to haue brought with him where he lodged, in any Religious houſe or other, ſuch ſuperfluitie of Horſes, Dogges, and Hawkes, that the place was worſe three yeeres after, Fox pag.246.fol.2.ex Matth.Pariſienſ. Likewiſe Lodouicus Cardinall Aquileg vnder Eugenius 4. is ſaid of the goods of the Church to haue kept in the ſtead of the poore, Horſe and Hounds, ex Balæo & alijs.

Fourthly, S. Pauls Biſhop muſt be διδακτικὸς, a man of ſufficiency, apt to teach, both able and willing: but of willingnes and diligence in preaching ſee before artic. 1. So alſo their decrees, diſtinct. 36 c. 2. Zozimus: Qui eccleſiaſticis diſciplinis, &c. He that is not endued with eccleſiaſtical learning, ought not to be preferred to be a Biſhop, &c. Decret. 49. c. 2. Cæcum offert, &c. He offereth a blind ſacrifice, that admitteth one that is vnlearned. But ſuch ignorant popiſh prelates did and doe yet abound amongſt them; ſuch as the Biſhop of Cauaillon was, who thus ſaid to the Merindolians, That it was not neceſſarie to ſaluation to vnderſtand the articles of the Creede: for there were many Biſhops, and Doctors of Diuinitie, whom it would trouble to expound the pater noſter and the Creed. Fox p. 949. Such an one alſo was the Biſhop of Dunkelden in Scotland, who finding great fault with Thomas Forret Martyr, becauſe hee preached euery Lords day to his Pariſhioners, ſaid vnto him; I thanke God, I neuer knew what the old and new Teſtament was, I will know nothing but my portous and pontificall. Of theſe words aroſe a common by-word in Scotland, yee are like the Biſhop of Dunkelden, that knew neither old nor new Law, p. 1266. ex Regiſtris Scotiæ. And leſt that this ſingular ignorance might ſeeme onely a perſonall fault in this Biſhop, he ſaith in the ſame place; We are not ordained to preach, ſpeaking of the popiſh prelacie it ſelfe: and no maruell, that their Biſhops were ſo ignorant; for Alphonſus ſaith, that diuers of the Popes were ſo ignorant, that they knew not their Grammar. Yet it is contrarie to their owne Canons, decret. Gregor. lib. 1. tit. 14. c. 15. Honorius the 3. depoſeth a Biſhop, ob defectum Grammaticæ. Becauſe he knew not his Grammar, neither had read ſo much as Donatus. 14

Fifthly, S. Pauls Biſhop muſt not be αἰσχροκερδὴς, giuen to filthie lucre, according alſo to their owne canons, Cauſ. 10. qu. 3. c. 7. In lucris animarum, &c. Let the Biſhops ſeeke rather the lucre of mens ſoules, then to pray vpon their goods. But who liſt to reade the grieuances exhibited by the States of Germanie, at the aſſemblie of Norenberge. anno 1523. ſhall ſee how the practiſes of popiſh Prelates tended all to this end, to rake commoditie to themſelues: they made gaine of marriages, of pardons, excommunications, hallowing of Churches, chriſtening of belles, burials, licenſing of concubines, Fox p. 862. they made gaine of dedicating of Churches, giuing of orders, for the which a proviſo was made, they ſhould take nothing, concil. Cabilonenſ. ſub Carol. cap. 16. Biſhops exacted yeerelie penſions of their Clergie, which is prohibited in the ſame councell, cap. 17. they let out their iuriſdictions to farme, which enormitie is redreſſed, concil. Lateranenſ. p. 1. c. 15. And in the councel held at Oxford vnder Stephen the Archbiſhop, it was decreed, that no Arch-deaconrie or other ſpirituall office ſhould be let out to farme: they alſo made gaine of licences to teach, which is forbidden, concil. Lateranenſ. p. 1. c. 18. Pro licentia docendi, &c. That no man ſhould take any thing for a licence to teach, &c. In theſe, and many ſuch like things, their greedy couetouſneſſe appeareth, contrary to the Apoſtles rule. 15

Sixthly, S. Paules Biſhop muſt be, ἐπιεικὴς, gentle, courteous, not cruell, and vncharitable in purſuing euery offence, and that vnto death. But the practiſe of theſe bloody popiſh Biſhops hath been too well knowne in England: their owne law ſaith, that when a Clerke is degraded, effectuall interceſſion muſt be made for him, vt citra mortis periculum, &c. that he might bee puniſhed without danger of death, decret. Greg. lib. 5. tit. 40. c. 27. Innocent. 3. And concerning Lay-men, they ſhould proteſt, quòd pœnam ſanguinis, &c. That they deſire not or intend their blood, ſext. decret. lib. 5. tit. 4. c. 2. Bonif. 8. But it is certaine, in the late perſecutions here in England, they intended nothing elſe but blood. 16

Seuenthly, S. Paules Biſhop muſt be, ἄμαχος, a man not giuen to fight, or contend, not warlike: and their canons agree. Cauſ. 23. qu. 8. c. 19. Nicholaus, Epiſcopi non debent militaribus. Biſhops muſt not be occupied in militarie affaires, &c. but popiſh biſhops haue often, and yet do take vpon them to be Captaines, and Generals of the field; as I haue giuen an inſtance before in Hugh Spencer Biſhop of Norwich, who was Pope Vrbane the 6. his Champion, to warre againſt the Antipope; and in Cardinall Ballua, who was chiefe Muſter maſter vnder Lodouic. 11. And a Cardinall at this time, or very lately, was the King of Spaine his Lieutenant generall in the Low-countries. 17

Eightly, S. Paules Biſhop muſt bee, φιλάγαθος, a louer and patrone of good men, Tit. 1, 8. as your owne Canons alſo, diſt. 86. c. 14. Primum opereris, &c. Firſt of all doe good to the houſhold of faith; it is a great ſinne, if a faithfull man doe want, and thou knoweſt of it: but popiſh Prelates were perſecutours of good men, as Sanpaulinus for reproouing one for ſwearing, was ſuſpected for a Lutherane, and ſuffered at Paris, anno 1551. Fox p. 904. col. 1. Tomkins was a godly man, who, when any man came to him about any buſineſſe, would alwaies begin with praier, yet was he moſt cruelly handled of Boner, firſt his hand burned, afterward all his bodie, p. 1533. col. 2. And their owne conſcience will tell them that Maſter Bradford was an holy and innocent man, yet by them cruelly ſlaughtered: by theſe, and infinite examples more, we may ſee how well they loued good men. Tit. 1. 8. Pag. 825. 1. 86. Pag. 1393. 2. 56.

Ninthly, S. Pauls Biſhop muſt be, δίκαιος, iuſt, Tit. 1. 8. But their proceedings were moſt vniuſt and indirect: firſt their owne law ſaith, Ne iudicium fiat in tenebris, &c. That no Iudgement ſhould be giuen ſecretly, in the darke, &c. decret. Greg. lib. 1. tit. 29. c. 24. Yet their Spaniſh inquiſition is al in ſecret and ſilence, nothing done openly, til the Innocents are brought foorth to execution. Againe, Cauſ. 2 q. 8. c. 3. Eutychian. Qui crimen intendit, &c. He that will accuſe muſt come openly into iudgement, &c. Their owne law in capitall matters enforceth an accuſer to be produced, but they haue proceeded vnto ſentence of death without either accuſer or witneſſe. Againe, their owne law ſaith, Innocentes ad 18 paria cum nocentibus: Innocentes ſhould not haue like puniſhment to offenders, extrau.commun.lib.3.tit.9.c.1.Ioan.23. But they haue condemned Innocents, as children, madde men, and ſuch as recanted, and ſubmitted themſelues, as afterward Error 111. of this firſt Centurie, it followeth to be declared more at large.

20 Tenthly, and laſtly, S. Pauls Biſhop muſt not be ἀνυπότακτος, diſobedient, or rebellious, Tit.1.7. which qualitie, as the Apoſtle requireth in the ſame place in the children of Biſhops, that they ſhould be obedient and dutifull; ſo much more is it requiſite in Biſhops themſelues to bee ſubiect to their higher powers alſo, as the Apoſtle teacheth, Rom.13.1. And hereunto agree their owne Canons, cauſ.11.qu.1.c.20.Iſtud eſt,&c. This is that, which we require of you, that you ſend vnder ſafe cuſtodie Paulus Biſhop Aquileienſ. and the Biſhop of Millaine to the moſt gentle Emperour, &c. Gregor. This Canon ſubiecteth Biſhops to the ciuill Maieſtie: yet popiſh Prelates haue continually ſhewed themſelues ſtubburne againſt their Soueraignes; as Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterburie did worthily procure the Kings diſpleaſure, which was Henry the 2. and thereupon was exiled, becauſe he would not yeeld obedience to the Kings lawes, but conditionally, Saluo ordine ſuo, Sauing the priuiledges of his order: ſee the ſtorie, Fox p.207.c.2. Such another ſtout Champion, was William Longchampe, Chauncellour and chiefe Iuſtice, and Viceroy to King Richard the 1. while he was at the ſiege of Ieruſalem: who being in his ruffe, regarded not the Kings letters ſent vnto him, but impriſoned, and otherwiſe ſhamefully vſed the Kings brother, cauſing him to bee haled and drawne through the myre in the ſtreets. plur. apud Fox.p.247.c.1. Like vnto theſe was Hugo Biſhop of Lincolne, who traiterouſly ioyned with Lewes the French Kings ſonne againſt King Iohn, and afterward Henry the 3. his ſonne; and therefore was put to a fine of 1000. markes for his Biſhopricke: ſee more p.258.c.1. And other ſuch like treacherous prankes this popelike Biſhop plaied againſt his Soueraigne, and for his manlie acts was canonized a Saint in the Popes kalendar, as traiterous Becket was before; and this is that goodlie S. Hugh; that ſhould haue his day the 17. of Nouember, whereat the Papiſts ſtorme, that the coronation of Q. Elizabeth was placed in his ſtead: for which ioyfull day of her happy initiation, the Church of England ſhal haue iuſt cauſe to praiſe God, while the world endureth. And thus haue I ſhewed how far popiſh Prelates haue departed from the firſt inſtitution of a Biſhop: And thus much concerning the diſtinction and degree of Biſhops, both what therein is diuine and Apoſtolicall, what humane and politicall.

And that the diſtinction of Biſhops and Presbyters, as it is now in vſe in the Church of Rome, which giueth not onely a prioritie or ſuperioritie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall, but the ſole iuriſdiction to the Biſhop, is granted rather vpon humane and poſitiue conſtitutions, then Diuine and Apoſtolical inſtitution, it is further proued by the conſent of other Churches. 1. For the Greeke Church ſhal be produced Ignatius, the third Biſhop of Antioch after S. Peter, who thus writeth in his Epiſtle ad Trallian. Epiſcopo vt Domino,&c. preſbyterorum collegio, vt Domini Apoſtolis,&c. Epiſcopus patris vniuerſorum typus eſt, preſbyteri Dei conſeſſus & cœtus Apoſtolorum Chriſti, ſine his Eccleſia electa non eſt, non congregatio ſancta,&c. Obey ye the Biſhop as the Lord; the colledge of Presbyters as the Apoſtles of the Lord: the Biſhop is as the type of the father of all, the Presbyters the aſſemblie of God, and company of the Apoſtles of Chriſt, without theſe, the Church is not elect, nor the congregation holy, &c. Origene, who liued an 100. yeeres after Ignatius: hom.3.in Cantic. thinketh the Biſhop to be trabes cypreſſinas, the beames of Cyprus, as in whom is more ſtrength: Secundo loco preſbyteri tigna cedrina dei domum tegunt, & ſuſtentant Eccleſiam: In the ſecond place the Presbyters, as the rafters of Cedar do couer the houſe, and vphold the Church. Thus we ſee what was the practiſe of the Greeke Church, though they yeelded the ſupremacie to the Biſhop as the chiefe, yet the Presbyters were ioyned with them in the regiment of the Church: the ſole adminiſtration of the keyes was not in the Biſhop.

2. The ſame alſo was the cuſtome of the South Church: as Hierome writeth; how in Alexandria from Marke the Euangeliſt vnto Heracleas and Dionyſius, Preſbyteri ſemper vnum ex ſe electum in excelſiori gradu collocatum epiſcopum nominabant: The Presbyters did call one choſen from amongſt them, and placed in an higher degree, their Biſhop: Hieron. Euagr. by the which it appeareth, that the colledge of the Presbyters did elect and chooſe their Biſhop, and hee was as a prime man among them: but the other were not excluded. Ambroſe teſtifieth as much of the cuſtome of the Aegiptian Church: Primi preſbyteri epiſcopi appellabantur,&c. The firſt Presbyters were called Biſhops, and the firſt remoouing, the next ſucceeded: in Ægipto preſbyteri Epiſcopo non præſente, conſignant,&c. In Egypt the Presbyters, the Biſhop being not preſent, did confirme, but becauſe the next Presbyters were found vnworthie ad primatus tenendos, to hold the primacie or firſt place, immutata eſt ratio proſpiciente Concilio, the manner was changed by the prouiſion of a Councell, that not order, but merit and worthineſſe ſhould make a Biſhop: in 4.ad Epheſ. It ſeemeth then that the cuſtome of the Egyptian Church at the firſt was to make the Biſhop onely the prime or firſt man of their presbyterie: the change that followed, was by ſynodicall conſtitutions. And ſome euidence yet remaineth of that ancient Eccleſiaſticall gouernment to this day in the Aethiopike Church, where the Patriarch hath alwaies twelue Eccleſiaſtical perſons his aſſiſtants, cum quibus de eccleſiaſticis negotiis communicat, with whom he communicateth touching Eccleſiaſticall affaires.

his ſcepter and ſpirit, hath the Lord granted and deliuered to the holy Apoſtles, and in them to all Miniſters of Churches lawfully ordained,&c. A manifeſt example of the power of the keyes is laid out in that ſinner of Corinth, whom S. Paul together with the Church of that place,&c. threw out from thence and deliuered to Satan,&c. Engliſh confeſſion, artic.5. Seeing the key whereby the way to the kingdome is opened to vs, is the word of the Goſpell,&c. And ſeeing one manner of word is giuen to all, and one only key belongeth to all, we ſay, there is but one only power of all Miniſters, as concerning opening and ſhutting.

Ibid.pag.362.

4 We want not euidence from the Romane Church. Gratian. diſt.21. c.60. thus writeth, Ordines ſacros dicimus diaconatum, & preſbyteratum, hos ſiquidem ſolos primitiua legitur habuiſſe eccleſia: The ſacred orders, we call the Deaconſhip and Presbyterſhip; for the primitiue Church is read to haue had only theſe two. To the ſame purpoſe alſo, in the ſame words, the M^{r}. of ſentences, for theſe two borrow one of another, as he is cited by Eſpenceus. Cardinal Arelatenſis in the Councel of Baſil, proueth the ioynt gouernment of Biſhops and Presbyters, and their ioynt authority in hauing deciding voices in Councels, by the preſident of the Apoſtolical Councel Act.15. where it is ſaid, it ſeemed good to vs, that is, the Apoſtles and Presbyters ſpoken of before, quid prohibet concilium Apoſtolorum imitari: What letteth vs to follow an Apoſtolike Councell? And he further ſheweth, how in the Nicene Councell, Athanaſius being but a Presbyter, ſolus Arrianorum argumenta diſturbabat, did alone ouerthrow the arguments of the Arrians. And in the Councell of Conſtance, the Piſane and Laterane, preſbyteros iudicaſſe cum Epiſcopis non eſt ambiguum: it is euident, that the presbyters iudged together with the Biſhops.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE office and title of Cardinals.

The Papiſts.

78.Error.

BEllarmine would faine haue the office of Cardinals, as ancient as the Apoſtles times: and the name to be worthily appropriated to the Sea of Rome, that as the Pope himſelfe by his prudence and holineſſe, is, tanquam cardo Eccleſie, to the Church as the hingell to the doore, vpon the which it is turned and borne vp: ſo his Counſellers and aſſiſtants ſhould bee called Cardinals, hauing the care of the Vniuerſall Church: but the Ieſuite, beſide ſome vaine ſhew of moth-worne antiquitie, hath not one good argument to prooue the name, and office of Cardinals, to be either ancient or commendable. Their eſpeciall office, as they are Cardinals, is to elect and chuſe the Pope, and to be aſſiſtant vnto him in Counſell, for the gouernment of the vniuerſall Church, and in this reſpect the Cardinals are preferred before Biſhops, Bellarm. cap.16.

For the firſt, hee ſheweth the office of the Cardinals in being aſſiſtant to the Pope in the affaires of the Church to be moſt profitable and commodious in three reſpects.

Firſt, that by this meanes the Pope hath his ſenate or Councell alwaies readie, with whom hee may conſult euery day if he will for the affaires of the Church: Secondly, for that Biſhops could not be aſſembled without detriment of their Churches, from the which they cannot bee conueniently abſent. Thirdly, the Cardinals are more exerciſed and experienced in matters of State.

Contra. Firſt, for the ſpace of 800. yeeres by his owne confeſſion, the Church of Rome was gouerned by the counſell and aduiſe of the Clergie there without theſe Cardinals; and it was as well gouerned or better, then ſince: why might not the Pope content himſelfe as well with that courſe, as his predeceſſors? Secondly, the Pope buſieth himſelfe with more then he need, to entermeddle with other Churches, of which vnneceſſarie buſineſſe if hee would exonerate himſelfe, he ſhould as little need a Colledge of Cardinals as other Biſhops, if he would hold himſelfe contented with his owne dioceſſe. Thirdly, ſome of your Cardinals are Biſhops, and haue dioces; al of them haue titles belonging to their charge, therefore they can no better bee abſent, then Biſhops without detriment of their Churches. Fourthly, whereas he ſaith Cardinals are exerciſed in State matters: in deed they know too much of Princes ſecrets: neither is it their calling to ſtudie ſuch matters, but ought rather to giue themſelues to preach the Word according to their office: and as for the managing of Ciuill and State buſines, it belongeth to the Senate of Rome: they ſhould onely deale with Eccleſiaſticall affaires.

For the ſecond; though Biſhops in reſpect of their Epiſcopall iuriſdiction are before Cardinals, yet they for the regiment of the vniuerſall Church, and for that they only elect the vniuerſall Biſhop, are preferred before Biſhops, Bellarm. cap.14.

Contra. Firſt, in that Cardinals meddle with the buſineſſe of the vniuerſall Church, therein they are but intruders: for euery dioceſſe ſhould be left to the proper Biſhops thereof. Secondly, in that they take vpon them to elect the Pope, they are but therein vſurpers, and do apparent wrong to three ſtates, the Emperour, Clergie, People, as I haue ſhewed before. Thirdly, it is contrary to the ſeuenth Canon of the Trullane Councell; that a Deacon in any office of the Church, ſhould be preferred before a Presbyter, and ſo conſequentlie, not a Cardinall Deacon ſhould in that behalfe be excepted.

The Proteſtants.

THat neither the name of Cardinals, as proper to Rome, is ancient, nor their office, or either of them lawfull or commendable, but vſurped and Antichriſtian: thus briefly it is ſhewed.

1 In Auguſtines time it was a common name, vſually applied, both in the good and euill part, to chiefe and principall men of any place, or ſect: as he calleth the ringleaders of the Donatiſts, Cardinales Donatiſtas, Cardinall or captaine Donatiſts, de baptiſm. lib.1.c.6. Surely, if it then had been onely due to the aſſiſtants of the Romane Biſhop, Auguſtine had been much to blame to applie the name to Heretikes. Alſo there were not only Cardinals in the Church of Rome, but in other Churches alſo, as diſt.71.c.5. Gregorie giueth licence to the Biſhop of Naples, ad Gratianum cardinandum, to make one Gratian a Cardinall of that Church. And diſt.74.c.6. the ſame Gregorie licenceth the Biſhop of Syracuſe, conſtituere preſbyterum Cardinalem, to make one Coſmas a Presbyter Cardinall there. Onuphrius alſo a witneſſe of their owne, doth teſtifie for vs in this point, that Cardinall prieſts, and Cardinall deacons were ſo called, becauſe they were ſet ouer other Prieſts and Deacons of the ſame Church: de Cardinal.titulis. So then this name or title of Cardinalſhip is not proper or peculiar to the Church of Rome.

Epiſtol.19.

2 Auguſtine thus writeth to Hierom, Quamuis ſecundum honorum vocabula, ſaith he, Epiſcopatus preſbyterio maior ſit, tamen in multis rebus Auguſtinus Hieronymo, minor eſt. Though according to the cuſtome of the Church, a Biſhop bee greater then a Prieſt, yet Auguſtine a Biſhop in many things is inferiour to Hierome a Prieſt. Now Hierome was a Prieſt of Rome, and a Cardinall, as ſome of our aduerſaries thinke, and therefore they picture him commonly in a red gowne and habit of a Cardinall: yet you ſee Auguſtine as a Biſhop was before him, though for his great learning he putteth himſelfe behind him.

Bellarmine here telleth vs very boldly, that Hierome was a Prieſt of Antioch, not of Rome, though he helped Damaſus to write letters there: and therefore Auguſtine doubted not to preferre a Biſhop in degree before him, c.14.

Contra. Firſt, whereas he alleageth the 61. epiſtle of Hierome, to prooue him a Prieſt of Antioch, there is no ſuch thing: but hee onelie ſaith, Ego Antiochiam deſerui, &c. I left Antioch. Secondly, herein Bellarmine is contrarie to the common opinion and tradition of their Church: for they vſe commonly to picture Hierome with a read hat and gowne, like a Cardinall of Rome. Thirdly, this bold aſſertion of his without ground is contrarie to Hierome himſelfe, who thus writeth, Præfat. ad Paulinian. Dum in Babylone verſarer, & purpuratæ meretricis, &c. While I was conuerſant in Babylon, and a tenant to the purple whore, I began to mutter ſomewhat of the holy Ghoſt: but the whole Senate of the Phariſees gainſaid me, &c. and I ſtraightway returned to Ieruſalem, &c. By this it appeareth, that Hierome was not onely a young ſcholler at Rome, but then began to be a profeſſor, and diſputer, and moſt like to haue entered into orders: for without a calling hee would not haue offered himſelfe to publike conference and diſputation; and when he left Rome, immediatly he went to Ieruſalem, and there continued: It is not like then he could be a Presbyter at Antioch. Fourthly, Hierome himſelfe condemneth that diſorder at Rome for Deacons to be preferred before Prieſts: Quid mihi profers vnius vrbis, &c. What doe you tell me of the cuſtome of one citie? Hieron. Euagrio. Fifthly, Auguſtine alſo in another place complaineth of one Fulcidius a Deacon of Rome, qui duce ſtultitia, ſaith he, diaconos preſbyteris coæquare contendit: Who being led or caried away with folly, did goe about to make Deacons equall vnto Prieſts. Is not the ſame folly now generally practiſed in Rome, or a greater? for they doe not onely preferre Cardinall deacons before Prieſts, but euen before Biſhops and Archbiſhops: in Auguſtines time this was counted a great follie.

Quæſt.vet.& nou.Teſta.101.

Laſtly, if we looke backe into former times, we ſhal find, that neither the office, nor dignitie of the Cardinals, nor any part thereof, is of any great antiquitie.

As concerning their office, it is to be aſſiſtant to the Pope in the regiment of the vniuerſall Church, and to make choice of a new when the Sea is void: As for the firſt it was impugned, anno 402. by the ſixth Councell of Carthage, who write thus to Celeſtinus Biſhop of Rome concerning the ſending abroad of his legates: Executores veſtros Clericos quibuſque potentibus nolite mittere, nolite concedere, ne fumoſum typhum ſeculi in eccleſiam Chriſti videamur inducere. They of the Clergy your agents, we pray you ſend not, neither grant at euery great mans requeſt, leſt the ſecular vaineglorious pompe ſhould be brought into the Church, &c. Their meaning is, that it was not ſeemely for a Biſhop to ſend foorth his legates and meſſengers, as temporall princes haue their ambaſſadours.

An. 1159. Fredericke that famous Emperour ſent this meſſage to Adriane the fourth: Cardinalibus veſtris ciuitates noſtræ non patent; quia non videmus eos prædicatores, ſed prædatores; non pacis corroboratores, ſed pecuniæ raptores, &c. Wee ſhut vp our cities againſt your Cardinals, becauſe wee ſee that they preach not, but pray vpō the people; they do not ratifie peace, but rake together pence. Non orbis reparatores, ſed auri inſatiabiles corroſores, They do not repaire the world, but empaire their wealth.

Now concerning the other part of their office in electing the Pope, it is but an vſurpation, and that of no great antiquitie: for in times paſt the Clergie and people of Rome were wont to chooſe their Biſhop and the Emperour confirmed him. But afterward as the ambition of the Popes increaſed, ſo alſo by degrees the ancient forme of election was altered: Firſt, anno 817. the Emperour was excluded by Stephanus the fourth, from the election of the Pope, but not from his conſecration: then came Phaſchalis the firſt, who depriued the Emperour of all right either in electing, or conſecrating the Biſhop of Rome. For by his ſubtil allurement the Emperour Lodouicus reſigned his intereſt in ſuch elections to the Romanes. After him Adrianus the third, Leo the ninth, Alexander the 2. Gregory the ſeuenth, Calixtus the ſecond, did one after another as by violence thruſt the Emperour from hauing any authoritie in electing the Pope: thus was the Emperour excluded. As for the conſent of the people it was cleane cut off, anno 1000. by Pope Iohn 19. The Clergie yet had their voyce, which was empaired at the firſt, when Nicholas the ſecond made a decree, that the Pope ſhould not be choſen without the conſent of the Cardinals, anno 1060. but afterward it was altogether taken away by Alexander the ſecond, who decreed, that the Pope ſhould be choſen only by the Cardinals: And about this time the Cardinals began to grow in credit.

Concerning the dignitie of the Cardinals, and their priuiledges, they are but very young: Anno 1245. it was firſt deuiſed by Innocentius the fourth, that Cardinals ſhould weare red hats and robes, and ride vpon their footclothed and ſtrapped horſe. Anno 1538. And whereas others kiſſe the Popes foote, the Cardinals are admitted to kiſſe his hand and mouth: *Lorinus Ieſuit in Act.*6. When Paulus the third held the Papacie, a complaint was made to the Pope about ſome abuſes of the Cardinals, and one chiefe was this, that the Cardinals did hold certaine biſhopricks, whereas Cardinalatus officium, & Epiſcopi officium incompatibilia ſunt, the office of a Cardinall, and of a Biſhop are vnmatchable: *ſic Contaren. Sadolet. Polus, Cardinales. ſuggeſtion ad Paulum.*3.

Now whereas the Cardinals though they bee but Deacons, doe ſit aboue Prieſts, Biſhops, and Archbiſhops; this alſo doth ouerthrow the ſeuenth Canon of the ſixth generall Councell Trullane, which determineth thus, Statuimus vt diaconus, in quouis ſit eccleſia officio ante preſbyterum non ſedeat: We enact, that a Deacon, in what place or office of the Church ſoeuer, doe not ſit before a Prieſt.

Laſtly, that the office and calling of Cardinals, as it is now currant in Rome is altogether vnlawfull, and againſt all antiquitie, I will produce their owne witneſſes, that haue found out theſe ſeuerall faults in the Cardinals.

Firſt, that they buſie themſelues altogether with ſtate matters, neglecting the office of preaching, to the which they are called. Eſpencaus thus writing to the Cardinall of Lorraine, ſaith: Væ ac male tibi futurum: Woe and euill ſhall be vnto you, if you doe not proceed to preach the Goſpell. But ſome man will ſay, auaunt with this thy neceſſitie of preaching? and not much better one ſaid vnto me of a mitred Biſhop, now an hatted Cardinall: Wouldeſt thou haue a Biſhop, or Cardinall preach? I pray, who elſe, &c. and yet this prelate was of their number, that would be called reuerend Fathers, Vicars of Chriſt, ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles: ſic Eſpenc. præfat. ad Carol. Lotharing.

Secondly, they are reproued for haunting the Courts of Princes, and leauing their owne charges: and they take vpon them, ad inſtar proconſulum, like to the old Romane Proconſuls: for ſo is the decree of Clemens 4. ſext. decret. lib. 1. tit. 15. c. 2. to haue their circuites and prouinces. Of this matter thus freely the ſame author vttereth his minde: Sicut me miſit pater, &c. As my Father ſent me, ſaith Chriſt, ſo ſend I you, not gouernours of politicall, but reformers of eccleſiaſticall matters; Paſtors, not theeues; not Potentates, but Euangeliſts; not law-makers, but law-keepers; not Captaines of ſouldiers, but fiſhers of men, Eſpenc. ibid.

Thirdly, hee findeth fault, becauſe many beardleſſe youths were made Cardinals: as alleaging an ancient Canon of Syluester, he thus inferreth: Eccleſia Romana, &c. In times paſt the Church of Rome had no Cardinals vnder 60. yeeres old: which Canon would now be reuiued, there being in theſe daies ſo many beardleſſe, or but young bearded Cardinals, Eſpenc. commentar. in 1. Timoth. p. 238. b.

Fourthly, the Cardinals of Rome are ſometime more, no fewer alwaies then ſixe Cardinall Biſhops: by which meanes the Churches, whereof they are Biſhops, are neglected: which alſo is contrarie to their owne Canons, Decret. Gregor. lib. 5. c. 3. Innocentius 3. would not ſuffer a Cardinall of Rome to be Biſhop of Rauenna, though hee were deſired of the Clergie there, quia præſentia eius vtilior, &c. becauſe his preſence is more profitable to the Church of Rome, then Rauenna.

Fifthly, another notable abuſe in Cardinals is this, that whereas ſome of them are but Deacons, yet they ſit and take their place before Prieſts and Biſhops. Hereof complained Bernard in his time to Eugenius the Pope, de conſiderat. lib. 4. Ridiculè miniſtri veſtri, &c. It is very ridiculous, that your Miniſters or Deacons take vpon them to be preferred before your Prieſts. To this effect alſo their owne decrees, diſt. 93. c. 15. Non oportet, &c. It becommeth not a Deacon to ſit in the preſence of a Prieſt. Ibid. c. 17. Diaconi, Let Deacons know that they are the Prieſts miniſters, as well as the Biſhops. But leſt it might be here anſwered, that all Deacons of other Churches are tied to this rule, but the Cardinall deacons of the Church of Rome are exempted: it followeth, diſt. 93. c. 26. Præcipimus, &c. We commaund, that no Deacon, in what dignitie or office ſoeuer he is, ſhall ſit before a Prieſt. So likewiſe, part. 2. cauſ. 2. qu. 4. c. 2. Præſul non damnabitur, &c. A Prelate ſhall not be condemned but with 72. witneſſes; a Cardinall prieſt with 44. a Cardinall Deacon of the citie of Rome with 27. witneſſes. By this Canon a ſimple Prelate or Biſhop is preferred before a Cardinall prieſt or Deacon. Thus we ſee how enormous, vnlawfull, and repugnant to the Canons the office of Cardinals is: but I haue ſtaied too long in this argument, I will therefore proceed. Further euidence herein from forraine teſtimonies, ſee before error 74.

THE

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, CONCERNING THE keyes of the Church, committed for the execution to the Paſtors and gouernours thereof.

THis queſtion hath foure parts. Firſt, wherein the authoritie of the keyes conſiſteth: ſecondly, to whom they are committed: thirdly, whether there is abſolute power of binding and looſing in the Church, or miniſterially only: fourthly, whether they that haue the diſpenſation of the keyes, doe alwaies neceſſarily binde and looſe before God: of theſe in order.

THE FIRST PART, WHEREIN THE AVTHORITIE and power of the Keyes conſiſteth.

The Papiſts.

79 Error.

BY the Keyes and power of binding and looſing, they chiefly and principally vnderſtand the cenſures of the Church, as Excommunications, Anathematiſmes, Suſpenſions, Degradations, and the whole Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction, Rhem. Annot. Matth.16.ſect.14. Bellarm.lib.1. de pontif. cap.13. Secondly, they tie remiſſion and retaining of ſinnes to their imagined and deuiſed ſacrament of penance, ſaying, that where Chriſt gaue authoritie to remit ſinnes to his Apoſtles, Ioh.20.23. he inſtituted the ſacrament of penance, Rhemiſt. Ioh.20.ſect.3. The ſacrifice alſo and ſacraments of the Church, ſay they, are miniſtred for remiſſion of ſinnes, Rhemiſt.2.Corinth.5.ſect.3. Thirdly, they ſeeme to grant in words, that by preaching alſo of the Goſpell, ſinnes are retained, and remitted, ibid. but they make ſmall account thereof: for as we haue heard, they make it not of the eſſence of their prieſthood to preach, neither doth it properly appertaine vnto that office: yea, ſay they, abſolution cannot be rightly ſought for at the Prieſts hands, but by confeſſion of our ſinnes, which is done in penance: Rhemiſt.Ioh.20.ſect.5. This then is their opinion, that by their deuiſed ceremonie and Sacrament of penance, ſinnes are properly forgiuen, and that the preaching of the word is not thereto neceſſarie.

Iohn 20.23. Iohn 20.23.

Their chiefe argument is, by wreſting that place, Ioh.20.23. where they ſay Chriſt inſtituted the Sacrament of penance, when he gaue power to his Apoſtles to remit, and retaine ſinnes.

Anſw. Firſt, your Sacrament of penance, is neither grounded vpon this, nor any other place of Scripture: here in the words of Chriſt there is no inſtitution of a Sacrament, becauſe there is no viſible element giuen, whereunto the word being added, may make a Sacrament. Secondly, heere the commiſſion is but renewed, which was granted before to his Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſors, Matth.18.18. Fulk. Annot. Ioh.20.ſect.3.

The Proteſtants.

THe keyes of the Church, that is, the power to binde and looſe ſinners, to open or ſhut vnto them the kingdome of God, conſiſteth both in the externall diſcipline and gouernment of the Church lawfully executed according to the word of God, as alſo in preaching of the Goſpell, by aſſuring in Chriſts name all faithfull and penitent perſons remiſſion and forgiuenes of their ſinnes, and in denouncing and threatning the wrath of God againſt the diſobedient and impenitent: Alſo as the Sacraments are ioyned to the word, as ſeales and pledges of the promiſes thereof, ſo by the right adminiſtration of the Sacraments together with the preaching of the word, ſins are retained or remitted.

The Rhemiſts therefore doe vs great iniurie, in falſely charging of vs, that we ſhould hold that the ſpirituall power of the Church ſtandeth only vpon the preaching of the word: whereas wee graunt, that it is exerciſed alſo in the Eccleſiaſticall gouernment of the Church, both in puniſhing, excommunicating and cenſuring of offenders, which is the binding of them, and in releaſing and abſoluing them againe, which is the other power of looſing: Rhemiſt.2.Corinth.cap.10.ſect.1. Leauing now this part of ſpirituall power in Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, which is not in this place in queſtion betweene vs, we muſt touch that other part, which is exerciſed in the word and Sacraments.

1.Cor.11.29.

1 That the Sacraments doe binde and looſe, it is proued out of the word of God: they do binde, Whoſoeuer eateth and drinketh vnworthily, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation. They doe alſo looſe; As oft as ye ſhall eate this bread, and drink this cup, you ſhew the Lords death till he come: verſ.26.

1.Cor.11.23.

But here is a double caution and condition to bee annexed. Firſt, that all Sacraments worke not this effect, but onely thoſe of Chriſts inſtitution, which are but two, Baptiſme and the Supper of the Lord: for Paul ſaith, I haue receiued of the Lord, that which I deliuered vnto you. If the Apoſtles would not, neither might deliuer any Sacraments, but thoſe which were inſtituted of Chriſt; what great preſumption is it in any other to doe it? Secondly, wee muſt not thinke, that remiſſion of ſinnes is neceſſarilie tied to the Sacraments, as though there could bee no remiſſion without them, for the grace of remiſſion may be effectuall in the name of Chriſt, by the preaching of the word without a Sacrament, Ioh.20.ſect.4.Fulk. For the word may be preached without a Sacrament, but the Sacrament cannot bee miniſtred without the word: for that were as though a man ſhould deliuer a ſeale without a writing. Neither is it our meaning, that as the Rhemiſts cauill with vs, the Sacrament cannot be adminiſtred without a ſermon of the death of Chriſt: for though that were alwaies to bee wiſhed, yet where it cannot be had, there muſt and ought to be a briefe ſhewing and declaration of the death of Chriſt out of the word, ſo oft as the Sacrament is adminiſtred, as it is obſerued in our Church, Fulk. annot. 1. Corinth. 11. ſect. 7.

And as touching this our doctrine, and in ſome ſort neceſſitie of hauing ſermons and admonitions before the Sacraments, our aduerſaries haue no cauſe to miſlike our opinion, ſeeing it hath been of late yeeres by themſelues in ſome of their Councels ſo decreed: As in the Councell of Colen, anno 1549. Parochus [illegible] ſic ſe contineat [illegible] breuiter populum admoneat, quid ea in re agatur: Let the pariſh Paſtor in the adminiſtration of euery Sacrament briefly admoniſh the people, what is done therein. Likewiſe, Synod. Auguſtenſ. anno 1548. Volumus populum, quid in huiuſque ſacramenti collatione agatur in concionibus & ſacramentorum adminiſtratione frequenter doceri: We would haue the people taught often in ſermons, and in the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, the meaning thereof: now to returne to the matter.

Secondly, we muſt take heed, wee conclude not thus, as though the Sacrament gaue grace by the worke wrought, and that by the very vſe, forme, and externall act of the Sacrament we obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes, as the Rhemiſts would beare vs in hand, 1. Corinth. 11. ſect. 13. But the Sacraments are onely effectuall to the worthie receiuers, and to the worthie receiuing, faith is requiſite, as S. Paul willeth all men to examine themſelues, which is, as he himſelfe interpreteth it, to proue whether they bee in the faith. Theſe conditions then being obſerued, wee denie not, but that there is an exerciſe of the keyes euen in the Sacraments. 1.Cor.11.28. 2.Cor.13.5.

But chiefly and principally, is this power diſpenſed by the preaching of the word, as S. Paul ſaith, We are the ſauour of death vnto death, vnto ſome: there is the binding: And to other the ſauour of life vnto life: there is the looſing. So our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Hee that refuſeth me, the word that I haue ſpoken, ſhall iudge him in the laſt day. Heere is the power of binding. Againe, the truth ſhall make you free: Here is the power of looſing. Who therefore can doubt of this, that the preaching of the word is the moſt proper and principall way and meane, for the exerciſing of this Eccleſiaſticall power? for ſeeing faith is the key of heauen, whereby wee haue free acceſſe vnto the throne of grace, Rom. 5. 2. and faith commeth by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. and hearing by the word: It remaineth, that by the word the keyes are diſpenſed. 2.Cor.2.16. Iohn 12.48. Iohn 8.32. Rom.5.2. Rom.10.17.

Auguſtine alſo ſubſcribeth vnto this: for ſpeaking of reformation of life and repentance with remiſſion of former ſinnes, thus he ſaith: Quid empturus es vt facias, quae emplaſtra quaeſiturus? &c. ecce cum loquor, muta cor, & factum eſt, quod tam ſæpe & tam diu clamatur, vt fiat. In Pſal. 63. What medicine or plaiſter wilt thou buy to heale thy ſinne? Behold euen now, while I preach vnto thee, change thy heart, and it is already done, which we ſo often call vpon you to be done, &c. See then by the preaching of the word our heart is changed, our life amended, and our ſinne remitted.

Thus alſo it was decreed Concil. Colonienſ. part. 10. *cap.*6. Nihil gladio illo ſpiritus, qui eſt verbum Dei, potentius ad deijciendos, ac viciſſim conſolandos animos noſtros, &c. Nothing is more mightie or powerfull either to caſt downe, or againe to comfort our ſoules, then the ſword of the ſpirit, which is the word of God: to caſt downe is to binde, to comfort, that is to looſe.

Their owne Canons alſo here helpe vs: *Cauſ.*33. *diſtinct.*1.*c.*50. Verbum Dei dimittit peccata, &c. The word of God doth forgiue ſinnes, &c. And *diſtinct.*20.*c.*1. There were two keyes giuen to Peter, clauis ſcientiæ, the key of knowledge to diſcerne, clauis poteſtatis, and the key of power to binde or looſe. And this is confirmed, *Extrau. Ioann. tit.*14.*c.*5. Reſtat quod ad aliquid definiendum, &c. It remaineth, that to determine the buſineſſe of the Church, both keyes are neceſſarie, the key of diſcerning, and the key of determining, &c. that like as the materiall eye doth direct the materiall key, ſo the ſpirituall eye of knowledge, &c. Whereupon I conclude, that if ſpirituall knowledge be one of the keyes, and true knowledge cannot be had without the word; For the not knowing of the Scriptures is the cauſe of error, Mark. 12.24. then it doth neceſſarie follow, that the keyes conſiſt in the knowledge of the word.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this doctrine; Walter Brute. The keyes of the kingdome of heauen are not knowledge to diſcerne, and power to iudge, becauſe theſe nothing auaile in baptiſme, by the which the kingdome of heauen is opened: therefore in my iudgement it ſeemeth, that the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, are faith and hope; for by faith in Ieſus Chriſt, and hope in him for remiſſion of ſinnes we enter the kingdome of heauen, Fox pag. 490. col. 1. But faith commeth by the word: Ergo, in the power of the word doe the keyes conſiſt. Pag.453.2.20.

George Wiſehart holy Martyr: I ſay, that an vnlearned man not exerciſed in the word of God, &c. whatſoeuer ſtate or order he is of, hath no power to binde or looſe, ſeeing he wanteth the inſtrument, by which he bindeth or looſeth, that is to ſay, the word of God, pag. 1270. col. 1. art. 9. Pag.1156.2.80

And that the power of the keyes chiefly conſiſteth in the preaching of the word, ſee the iudgement of other Churches: 1. Nilus ſpeaking of the power which the Pope challengeth to haue receiued from the Apoſtles, wiſheth him to vſe it for the edifying of the Church, and to that purpoſe alleageth that ſaying of S.Paul, Though I ſhould boaſt, &c. of our power, which God hath giuen vs for edification, Lib.2.de Primat. 2.Cor.10.v.8.

tion, not for your destruction, &c. which power the Apoſtle ſheweth to conſiſt in the preaching of the Goſpell, verſe 14.

2 In the 6. generall Synode, c. 19. it was ordered, that Biſhops ſhould preach vnto the people euery day, but ſpecially vpon the Lords daies: and the reaſon is giuen in the ſame Canon, becauſe by this meanes the people comming vnto knowledge, vitam in melius [illegible], doe amend their life the better, & ob imminentium ſuppliciorum metum, &c. and by the feare of imminent puniſhments doe procure their ſaluation. Here is an apparent effect of the keyes in looſing, the ſinnes of the people by the preaching of the word, in the reformation of their liues vnto euerlaſting ſaluation. To the decrees and acts of this Councell ſubſcribed Petrus a Presbyter of the Church of Alexandria in the name of the Patriarke there.

THE SECOND PART, TO WHOM THE authoritie of the keyes is committed.

The Papiſts.

80. Error.

THe authoritie and power of excommunication, ſay they, is not in the whole Church, but only in the Prelates; neither was the power of binding and looſing giuen vnto the whole Church: but in their owne name, not in the name or right of the Church, doe the Paſtors and Prelates exerciſe this power, Rhemiſt. 1. Corinth. 5. ſect. 3. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Clericis cap. 7. The Church is ſaid to binde and looſe, becauſe the Prelates doe binde and looſe, as a man is ſaid to ſpeake, and ſee, though hee only ſpeake with the tongue, and ſee with the eyes: Bellarm. ibid. reſp. ad argum. Illyrici.

Argum. 1. They ſeeme to proue it by S. Pauls example, 1. Cor. 5. I abſent in body, but preſent in ſpirit, haue decreed. Saint Paul vſeth here his Apoſtolike power, in ſending his letters and Mandatum, to haue the inceſtuous perſon excommunicate: Ergo, the right was in him and not in the Church, and ſo conſequently in the Biſhops his ſucceſſors.

Anſw. Firſt, Saint Paul ſendeth no Mandatum, but ſheweth his Apoſtolike power, in decreeing the inceſtuous perſon worthie of excommunication, and requiring the ſame to be executed by the Church, Fulk. 1. Cor. 5. ſect. 2. Secondly, though Paul gaue the ſentence, yet was it done both in the power of Chriſt and the name of the whole Church: for he had decreed only that he ſhould bee excommunicate: it was not actually done: but to the due performing thereof there is required the congregating of the Church in Chriſts name, the preſence of Paul in ſpirit by his Apoſtolike power, and that it ſhould be done in the name of Chriſt. All this ſheweth, that Paul gaue ſentence in the name of the whole Church. Thirdly, the words of the text are plaine, that the power was giuen to the whole Church: for that power, whereby he was deliuered to Satan, was the power of Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Cor. 5. 4. but the power of the Lord Ieſus was committed to the whole congregation: When ye are gathered together and my ſpirit, in the name of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt: that is, in the power of the Lord Ieſus. So that this place which they vrge for themſelues, affordeth a better argument for vs.

1. Cor. 5. 4.

Argum. 2. Paul (they ſay) by the preeminent power of his miniſterie, pardoneth the inceſtuous perſon whom he had excommunicate, Rhemiſt. argument in 2. ad Corinth.

2. Cor. 2. 10.

Anſw. The text is plaine, that he conſenteth the Church ſhould pardon him, 2. Corinth. 2. 10. To whom you forgiue any thing I forgiue alſo. Here not Paul only, but the whole Church pardoneth.

Againe, the Ieſuites ſimile may be returned vpon his owne head: for as the eye and tongue in the bodie are but inſtruments of the life and power of the ſoule, which quickeneth the whole bodie: ſo the gouernours of the Church doe execute the diſcipline of the Church by the ſpirit of Chriſt, which is giuen to the whole bodie.

The Proteſtants.

THe authoritie of excommunication pertaineth to the whole Church, although the execution and iudgement thereof, to auoid confuſion, bee committed to the gouernours of the Church, which exerciſe that authoritie, as in the name of Chriſt, ſo in the name of the whole Church, Fulk. totidem verbis, annot. 1. Cor. 5. ſect. 3.

Math. 18. 17.

Argum. 1. Matth. 18. 17. If hee will not heare thee, tell the Church: This place prooueth, that although the exerciſing of the keyes be referred to the gouernours of the Church; yet the authoritie and right is in the whole Church: for the keyes were giuen to the whole Church. The Paſtors and gouernours, though they be excellent and principall members of the Church, yet are they improperly called the Church: Argument. Illyrici.

Their anſwere here commonly is, that dic eccleſiæ, tell it to the Church, may bee vnderſtood of the Prelates of the Church: yea, Bellarmine will giue it but this ſenſe; that to tell the Church, is to referre it to the ſentence of the Pope: So that in effect he maketh the Pope the Church.

Anſwere. Firſt, that the Prelates and Paſtors of the Church, haue the adminiſtration of the keyes committed vnto them for order ſake, wee denie not: yet the right and power thereof reſteth in the whole Church: and to them offences are to bee brought, as the miniſters and officers of the Church. Secondly, how ridiculous a gloſſe that is, that, dic eccleſiæ, ſhould be all one as to ſay, dic Papæ, tell it to the Pope, as though one man ſhould be the Church. Saint Hierome ſheweth in the like caſe concerning a great man in his time, Iohn Patriarch of Ieruſalem: An tu ſolus eccleſia es, &c. Are you onely the Church, that whoſoeuer offendeth you, is ſtraightway excluded from Chriſt? ad Pammachium aduerſ. Iohannem.

Argum. 2. We conclude the ſame alſo out of S. Pauls words, 1. Cor. 3. 21. All things are yours, whether Paul, Apollos, or Cephas, whether things preſent, or things to come, and ye are Chriſts, and Chriſt Gods: Ergo, whatſoeuer power is in the Church, it is the Churches, not onely the common vſe and the benefit thereof, (becauſe it may be anſwered, that although the keyes be only granted to the Prelates, yet they vſe them to the good of the Church) but the right alſo and poſſeſſion thereof, euen as the Church is the inheritance and proper poſſeſſion of Chriſt. 1.Cor.3.21.

3. Auguſtine confeſſeth: Eccleſia, quæ fundatur in Chriſto, claues ab eo regni cælorum accepit in Petro. Tract. in Iohann. 124. The Church, which is founded vpon Chriſt, receiued in Peter the keyes of the kingdome of heauen: But the whole Church, and not onely the Paſtors, is founded and builded vpon Chriſt: Ergo.

Interreligi. Cæſarea. cap. 9. Ad Eccleſiam pertinet verbum dei, pertinent ſacramenta, pertinent claues ligandi & ſoluendi: Vnto the Church appertaineth the word of God, the Sacraments, the keyes alſo of binding and looſing. From hence we reaſon thus, to whom the word and the Sacraments belong, to the ſame alſo appertaine the keyes: but they belong to the whole Church: Ergo.

And yet more euidently out of their owne decrees: Cauſ. 24. qu. 1. c. 6. Petrus quando, &c. Peter, when he receiued the keyes, ſignified the whole Church: Si hoc Petro, &c. For if it were ſaid onely to Peter, then the Church doth it not: but if the Church binde and looſe, &c. And cap. 20. Domus eccleſiæ, &c. The houſe of the Church receiued the keyes. And your Maſter of Sentences, lib. 4. diſt. 19. c. out of Hierome: Habet omnis eccleſia in Epiſcopis & presbyteris: The whole Church hath this power in Biſhops and Prieſts; that is exerciſed by them, yet the power is in the whole Church.

Walter Brute holy confeſſor of Gods truth, who liued in the raigne of Richard the ſecond, thus teſtifieth with vs: In the 20. of Iohn our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Receiue you the holy Ghoſt, whoſe ſinnes you remit, they are remitted, &c. Seeing therefore that all Chriſtians that are baptized in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, receiue the holy Ghoſt; it appeareth that they haue power giuen them of Chriſt, to remit ſinnes, Fox pag. 492. His argument is this: to whom the holy Ghoſt is giuen, to them alſo is giuen the power and right of binding and looſing: but to the whole Church and all faithfull Chriſtians is the holy Ghoſt giuen: Ergo, &c. And therefore the Paſtors and Miniſters doe execute this power in the name of the whole Church. Pag.453.1.85.

And further, yet this is more euident. 1. Nilus ſheweth the opinion of the Greeke Church: for whereas the keyes are giuen to Peter, when Chriſt ſaid, vpon this rocke will I build my Church, hee ſaith, that Chriſt built his Church, vpon Peters confeſſion, and vpon all, which ſhall keepe the ſame confeſſion: The right then of the keyes is granted to all thoſe vpon whom the Church is built, that is to all beleeuers. Math.16.18. ἐς τοὺς τοιαύτης ὁμολογίας φύλακας ἐσομένους. Nil. lib. 2. de primat.

2 Zaga Zabo an Æthiopike Biſhop ſaith: Confeſſores omnium peccatorum dant nobis ex Eccleſiæ poteſtate abſolutionem, The confeſſours doe giue vs abſolution of all our ſinnes by the power of the Church, &c.

3 Confeſſ. of Sweueland. artic. 15. They which doe earneſtly labour in the word and doctrine, doe repreſent the Church, and may doe all things in the name thereof. Confeſſ. of Bohemia. c. 14. which power is committed to the Church of Chriſt, and to the Miniſters thereof to the end of the world. Harm. ſect. 10. P. 335.

4 For the Latine Church, ſee the decrees of Gratian and of the Interreligion, cited before.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER THE PASTORS of the Church haue any abſolute power to remit ſinnes, otherwiſe, then as Miniſters onely.

The Papiſts.

THey ſpare not to ſay, that Prieſts haue full right to remit ſinnes, and are not miniſters only thereof, and diſpenſers, but haue full power as Chriſt had, and he that doubteth of their right herein, may as well doubt whether Chriſt had authoritie as man to remit ſinnes, Rhemiſt. annot. Ioh. 20. ſect. 3. And againe, they call it an expreſſe power and commiſſion, yea a wonderfull power which is giuen vnto Prieſts to remit ſinnes, and therefore it followeth neceſſarily, that men ſhould ſubmit themſelues to their iudgement, for releaſe of their ſinnes, Annot. Ioh. 20. ſect. 5. 81. Error.

John 20. 21. Argum. 1. They reaſon thus out of our Sauiours owne words, Ioh. 20. 21. As my father hath ſent me, ſo I ſend you. Hee ſheweth his fathers commiſſion giuen to himſelfe, and then in plaine termes moſt amply imparteth the ſame to his Apoſtles: But Chriſt had full right to remit ſinnes: Ergo, alſo the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors, for they haue the ſame power that Chriſt had, Rhemiſt. annot. Ioh. 20. ſect. 3.

Anſwer. Firſt, it is great preſumption, and ſpoken without any ground, to ſay, that Chriſt, by ſending his Apoſtles into the world gaue them as full, large, and ample commiſſion, as hee himſelfe had; for neither the Pope, in whom remaineth, as they ſay, the Apoſtolike authoritie, by their owne confeſſion, can doe all that Chriſt did, as to ordaine and inſtitute Sacraments: and Chriſt (ſay they) might forgiue ſinnes without the Sacraments, which the Pope cannot doe, and ſo conſequently neither the Apoſtles, whoſe full iuriſdiction they ſay hee hath, in this behalfe, Bellarm. de pontif. lib. 5. cap. 4. Secondly, the power here granted to the Apoſtles, is in the name of Chriſt, to declare and pronounce remiſſion of ſinnes, according to the will of God, not properly in their owne power to releaſe or abſolue ſinners.

Argum. 2. He breathed vpon them, and gaue them the holy Ghoſt, verſ. 22. Therefore he that denieth the Prieſts authoritie to forgiue ſinnes, he muſt denie the holy Ghoſt to be God, and not to haue power to remit ſinnes, Rhemiſt. ibid. ſect. 4.

Anſwere. What a blaſphemous conſequent is this? The holy Ghoſt hath abſolute power to forgiue ſinnes: Ergo, the Apoſtles alſo, and all other Prieſts haue the ſame power. Firſt, by this meanes they make no difference betweene the fulneſſe of power in our Sauiour Chriſt, and the communication of that power to other Miniſters: of Chriſt it is ſaid, that the Spirit was not giuen him by meaſure, Ioh. 3. 34. and that the holy Ghoſt dwelleth in him bodily: but it were great blaſphemie ſo to ſay of any man, Apoſtle, or Miniſter beſide, which haue receiued of the ſame grace, but not in the like meaſure that Chriſt hath; but the ſpirit is giuen to euery one in meaſure, as they haue neede in their ſeuerall places and callings. Secondly, though we ſhould grant that the Apoſtles had the full authority of Chriſt actually to remit ſinnes, which they ſhall neuer proue; yet it may be doubted, whether all Miniſters, whom they call Prieſts (which name we refuſe not, if it bee taken according to the ſenſe of the originall word Presbyter, and not for a ſacrificing Prieſthood) haue as full power, in this caſe, as the Apoſtles had, nay it is plaine they haue not: for the Apoſtles and other in the Primitiue Church, had power to diſcerne ſpirits, 1. Cor. 12. 10. and after a ſtrange manner to exerciſe power ouer their bodily life, as Peter did vpon Ananias and Sapphira, Act. 5. Yet we rather ſtand vpon this point, that neither the Apoſtles nor any other Miniſters haue power actually to remit ſinnes, then onely as diſpenſers and ſtewards in the name of Chriſt.

John 3. 34.
Coloſſ. 2. 9.
1. Cor. 12. 10.

The Proteſtants.

ALL the power of binding and looſing committed to the Apoſtles and to the Miniſters of the Word and Sacraments, is, by declaring the will & pleaſure of God out of his word, both to pronounce forgiueneſſe of ſinnes to all, that are truly penitent, and the retaining of them to the obſtinate and impenitent, Fulk. annot. Ioh. 20. ſect. 3. So that Miniſters are not made Iudges in this caſe, but onely as the Lords ambaſſadours, to declare the will of God out of his word.

2. Cor. 5. 18. Argum. 1. There is a notable place for this purpoſe, 2. Cor. 5. 18. God hath reconciled vs vnto himſelfe through Ieſus Chriſt, and hath giuen vs the miniſterie of reconciliation. So then Chriſt is the onely author of reconciliation, the Apoſtles are but miniſters: how then ſay the Rhemiſts that Chriſt himſelfe is but a miniſter alſo of our reconciliation, yet a chiefe miniſter, whereas the Apoſtle maketh him the author? God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelfe, verſ. 19. Wee are but ambaſſadours for Chriſt, and pray you in Chriſts ſtead, to be reconciled vnto God. This then is the office of Miniſters, not to reconcile men vnto God, but to pray them to be reconciled through Chriſt: Chriſt onely is the reconciler, they but miniſters of reconciliation: they are but meſſengers and ambaſſadours, onely to declare their Princes pleaſure, their commiſſion is certaine, beyond that they cannot goe. Wherefore that is a blaſphemous decretall, and cleane contrarie to the Scripture, which is aſcribed, but falſly, to Pontianus Biſhop of Rome, which ſaith, that God hath Prieſts ſo familiar, that by them hee forgiueth the ſinnes of others, and reconcileth them vnto him. But S. Paul ſaith, that God onely by Chriſt reconcileth vs vnto himſelfe.

Sermon. de remiſſion. peccator. Argum. 2. Auguſtine doth very freely vtter his minde concerning this matter, who putteth this obiection: If men doe not forgiue ſinnes, then it ſhould ſeeme to be falſe which Chriſt ſaith, What ſoeuer you binde in earth is bound in heauen. He anſwereth: Daturus erat Dominus hominibus ſpiritum ſanctum, &c. God was to giue vnto men the holy Ghoſt, by whom their ſinnes ſhould bee forgiuen them. Spiritus dimittit, non vos; ſpiritus autem Deus eſt: Deus ergo dimittit, non vos: The ſpirit therefore remitteth ſinne, and not you: And this is recited in the decrees, Cauſ. 1. qu. 1. cap. 82. the ſpirit is God; God forgiueth ſinnes, and not you. Here is one argument, God onely forgiueth ſinnes: Ergo, not man. Againe, Quid es homo niſi æger ſanandus? vis mihi eſſe medicus? mecum quære medicum: O man what art thou that takeſt away my ſinnes, but a ſicke man thy ſelfe? wouldeſt thou be my Phiſitian? nay, let vs both together goe ſeeke a Phiſitian that may heale vs. Loe, another argument: Hee cannot be a Phiſitian to others, that needeth a Phiſitian himſelfe: he cannot reconcile others to God, who hath himſelfe neede of a reconciler. Further he ſaith: Qui dimittit per hominem, poteſt dimittere præter hominem: non enim minus eſt idoneus per ſe dare, qui poteſt per alium dare: Hee that can forgiue ſinnes by man, can forgiue alſo without man: for he may as well forgiue by himſelfe, as he can do it by another, &c. Here is then the third argument: If man doe actually forgiue ſinnes, then Chriſt ſhould not forgiue ſinnes without man: for the whole power is committed to man. Yea, the Rhemiſts affirme the ſame, that it is neceſſarie we ſhould ſubmit our ſelues to the iudgement of the Prieſt for releaſe of our ſinnes: if it be neceſſarie, then ſinnes cannot be remitted without the Prieſt: then is Chriſts power limited, he cannot forgiue without man, which is contrarie to that Auguſtine affirmeth here.

To this agreeth the Councell Cabilonenſ. ſub Carolo. can. 33. in theſe words: Confeſſio quæ Deo fit, purgat peccata; quæ ſacerdoti fit, docet, qualiter ipſa purgentur peccata: Deus enim ſalutis & ſanitatis largitor & author, plerunque hanc præbet ſua potentia inuiſibili adminiſtratione, plerunque medicorum operatione: The confeſſion which is made to God, purgeth our ſinnes; that which is made to the Prieſt, ſheweth how our ſinne ſhould be purged: for God the author and giuer of health and ſaluation, doth many times ſaue by his inuiſible power, and many times by the worke or labour of the Phiſitian, &c. Hence we learne, that the Miniſter doth heale the ſinnes of the ſoule no otherwiſe then the Phiſitian doth cure the diſeaſes of the body, that is, miniſterially onely: and that he actually forgiueth not ſinnes; but onely ſheweth and declareth how they are forgiuen.

We haue plentifull teſtimonie from their owne Canons: Decret. p.2. cauſ. 11. qu. 3. c. 87. Petra tenet, &c. It is the rocke (that is Chriſt) which retaineth ſinnes, the rocke remitteth ſinnes. Part. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 141. Nemo tollit, &c. No man taketh away ſinne but onely Chriſt, which is the Lambe that taketh away the ſinne of the world.

Their Maſter of Sentences alloweth that ſaying of S. Ambroſe: Ille ſolus peccata, &c. He onely forgiueth ſinnes, that died for our ſinnes, lib. 4. diſtinct. 18. d. And againe, ibid. f. Sacerdotibus tribuit poteſtatem, &c. Chriſt giueth power to Prieſts to binde & looſe, that is, oſtendendi, &c. to ſhew or declare that they are bound, or looſed: like as the Prieſts in the law had power to diſcerne betweene leper and leper. And diſtinct. 19. c. Sacerdotes non propria virtute, &c. Miniſters doe not bleſſe by their owne power, but as they beare the figure of Chriſt, that is, repreſent Chriſt: Ergo, the Miniſters of the Church not iudicially, but miniſterially onely forgiue, or retaine ſinnes, that is, onely declare them ſo to be.

This truth hath beene ſealed by the blood of holy Martyrs: George Carpenter burned in Bauaria, anno 1527. for this article with others, that he did not beleeue that a Prieſt could forgiue a mans ſinnes, that is, by any actuall or inherent power in himſelfe. Fox p. 884. col. 1. Pag.807.2.&c.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: I ſay, that onely Chriſt looſeth a ſinner, which is contrite, by his word and promiſe, and the Prieſt doth nothing but ſhew and declare that word. And this teſtifieth S. Paul in the 2. to the Corinthians, ſaying, God hath reconciled vs vnto him through Chriſt Ieſus: See, it is God that through Chriſt, looſeth our ſinne. And he hath (quoth S. Paul) ordained vs miniſters of the ſame attonement. See how Chriſts Apoſtles called not themſelues the authors of binding and looſing, but Miniſters, Fox pag. 1105. col. 2. Pag.1010.1.8.

And for further euidence. 1. Ieremie Patriarke of Conſtantinople, alleageth thus out of Chryſoſtome, who citeth that ſaying of the Prophet Iſay 43. 25. I am he that putteth away thine iniquitie for mine owne ſake: Whereupon hee inferreth, Hoc eſt meum proprium, hoc meæ bonitatis peculiare opus: This is proper vnto me, and a peculiar worke of my goodnes. The power then of looſing and binding is onely in Chriſt, the reſt are but miniſters thereof. Cenſur. Oriental. Eccleſ. c. 6.

2 Zaga Zabo ſaith, that their Patriarke granteth no indulgences, Id ad Deum ſolum ſpectare credimus, we beleeue it belongeth onely vnto God. Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop. Hann. lect. 1. &c. p. 343.

3 Latter confeſſ. of Heluetia, c. 18. Chriſt doth not lay the gouernment on other mens ſhoulders, but doth ſtill keepe and vſe his owne power, &c. There is another power of dutie, or miniſteriall power, limited by him, who hath full and abſolute power, and this is more like a miniſterie then a dominion.

4 For the Romane Church, ſee before the decrees of Gratian, and the Maſter of ſentences.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER STRAIGHTwaies whatſoeuer be looſed or bound by the miniſterie of men vpon earth, be ſo in heauen.

The Papiſts.

AN expreſſe power (ſay they) is giuen vnto Prieſts to remit and retaine ſinnes: And Chriſt promiſeth, that whoſe ſinnes ſoeuer they forgiue, they are forgiuen of God, and whoſe ſinnes ſoeuer they retaine, they are retained of God, Rhemiſt. Annot. Ioh. 20. ſect. 5. Whereby this appeareth to bee their opinion, which is manifeſt alſo by the practiſe of their Church, that at the will and pleaſure of euery Prieſt exerciſing the keyes vpon earth, men are bound and looſed in heauen. 82. Error.

They ground this their opinion vpon the generalitie of the words: Whoſoeuers ſinnes you remit, they are remitted, Ioh. 20. 23. And Matth. 18. 18. Whatſoeuer you binde in earth, ſhall bee bound in heauen. John 20.23. Matth. 18.18.

Anſ. Theſe places are not ſo to be vnderſtood, as though God were bound to ratifie euery decree of men vpon earth: for firſt this power is giuen to all lawfull Paſtors which doe hold the Apoſtolike faith, not to Idolatrous, ignorant, and blaſphemous Prieſts, ſuch as moſt, if not all, of the Popiſh ſort are. Secondly, they muſt decree in the earth according to Gods will: Wherefore Iohn 20. 22. firſt Chriſt breatheth his ſpirit vpon his Apoſtles, and then giueth them their commiſſion: ſignifying hereby, that they muſt execute this power as they ſhall bee directed by Gods ſpirit: and Matth. 18. 20. it followeth, that they muſt bee aſſembled in the name of Chriſt, that is, according to Chriſts rule and the direction of his word, they muſt binde and looſe, and not at their owne diſcretion.

The Proteſtants.

THat no ſentence or decree of men bindeth or looſeth before God in heauen, but that which is pronounced according to the will & pleaſure of God, and by the warrant of his word, the Scripture euery where teacheth vs.

Pro. 26. 2. Iſay 5. 20. Pro, 17. 15. Argum. 1. Prouerbs 26. 2. As the ſparrow by flying eſcapeth, ſo the curſe that is cauſeleſſe ſhall not come. Iſai. 5. 20. Woe vnto them that ſpeake good of euill, and euill of good. Hee that iuſtifieth the wicked and condemneth the iuſt, they are both an abomination to God, Prou. 17. 15. Wherefore a Prieſt binding a penitent man, and looſing a wicked man, doth flatly tranſgreſſe the law and rule of Gods word: neither ſhall his ſentence be ratified in heauen.

Arg. 2. In ſaying that whoſoeuers ſinnes the Prieſt bindeth or looſeth, his ſentence ſtandeth in effect before God, they muſt needs admit one or both of theſe abſurdities: either to grant, that a Prieſt cannot erre in diſpenſing of the keyes, which were too ſhamefull a ſaying, to giue ſo great a priuiledge to euery ignorant and ſimple Prieſt, (ſuch as their Church hath great ſtore of) which no mortall man can haue; S. Paul giueth warning to Timothie, who was more then a common or ordinarie Miniſter, that 1. Tim. 5. 22. he lay not his hands ſuddenly vpon any. But if Timothie, ſo excellent a man, had beene free from erring in executing his function, this exhortation of S. Paul had beene needeleſſe and ſuperfluous. Or elſe they muſt ſay that the iudgement of mens ſoules is committed vnto them: for if, as they pronounce vpon men on earth, euen ſo it fareth with them before God, then the ſaluation and damnation of men Rom. 14. 10. dependeth of their ſentence. But the Scripture ſaith, Doe not iudge thy brother, for we ſhall all appeare before the iudgement ſeate of Chriſt, Rom. 14. 10. Men therefore are not Iudges to pronounce who are ſaued or damned, but the iudgement muſt be committed to Chriſt.

But who knoweth not that the Popiſh Church doth arrogate vnto themſelues this power, to define who are Saints in heauen, and whoſe ſoules are tormented in hell? Thus they dealt with Iohn Huſſe; hauing condemned him, they ſet a crowne of paper vpon his head pictured with diuels, ſaying vnto him: Now wee commit thy ſoule to the diuell. At the burning of that worthie ſeruant of God and bleſſed Martyr Iohn Frith, one Doctor Cooke, a foule mouthed Papiſt, bid the people to pray no more Fox pag. 1036. col. 2. for him, then they would for a dogge. And thus they take the Lords office out of his hand, in taking vpon them to be iudges of men.

Pag. 946. 1. 4. Edit. vltim. Argum. 3. I will conclude with Auguſtines words, Gratia tua & miſericordiæ deputo, quod peccata mea tanquam glaciem ſoluiſti: I do impute it to thy grace and mercie, that thou haſt reſolued my ſinnes as yce: Confeſſ. lib. 2. c. 7. it is then Gods grace and mercie, not mans miniſterie that remitteth ſinnes.

With Auguſtine accordeth antiquitie, Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap. 37. Tunc vera eſt abſolutio præſidentis, cum æterni arbitrium ſequitur iudicis, vt Lazarum prius Chriſtus mortuum viuificauit, qui viuus egreſſus poſtea à diſcipulis ſolutus eſt: Then the Rector abſolueth aright when he followeth the will of the eternall Iudge, as Chriſt firſt did reuiue Lazarus being dead: and then bad his Apoſtles looſe him.

Nicholaus 1. epiſt. ad Michaelem: Qui ligati ſunt ligare, & qui ipſi mortui ſunt alios mortificare non poſſunt: They cannot binde others that are bound themſelues, nor mortifie others being dead themſelues. But many Prieſts themſelues are dead and bound in their ſinnes, how then can they binde others?

Leodienſ. epiſtol. cont. Paſchal. 2. Dicimus cum Gregorio ligandi & ſoluendi poteſtate ſe priuat, qui ſubiectos pro ſuo velle, non eorum merito ligat, aut ſoluit: We ſay with Gregorie, he doth depriue himſelfe of the power of binding and looſing, which doth binde or looſe his inferiours after his owne fancie, not according to their deſert.

This alſo is the ſentence of their decrees, Cauſ. 11. qu. 3. c. 46. Gelaſius: Neminem poteſt iniqua grauare ſententia: An vniuſt ſentence can hurt no man: therefore he neede not deſire to be abſolued from that ſentence, wherewith he is not bound. Cap. 62. Gregor. Tum vera eſt abſolutio, &c. Then the abſolution of the Preſident or Prelate is good, when he followeth the will of the eternall Iudge.

Likewiſe the Maſter of Sentences, diſtinct. 18. lib. 4. h. Interdum, qui foras mittitur, &c. Sometime he that is thruſt out of the Church is within, and he that is within, is out of the Church.

Walter Brute holy confeſſor, ſheweth how that Prieſts taking vpon them to be Iudges of men, doe more then Chriſt did in the daies of his fleſh, who would not take vpon him to be a Iudge, or to puniſh ſinners according to the quantitie of their ſinnes, but hath reſerued that for his ſecond comming: 1. Cor. 4. 5. And againſt ſuch he applieth that ſaying of S. Paul, 1. Cor. 4. Iudge not before the time, vntill the comming of the Lord, who ſhall diſcloſe the ſecrets of hearts, &c. Fox pag. 492.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: The declaration or miniſterie of the Prieſt doth not any thing auaile to looſe any perſon, vnleſſe hee that ſhould be looſed giue credence vnto the word miniſtred or ſhewed Pag. 1020. 1. 2. by the Prieſt, Fox pag 1105. col. 2. Ergo, the ſentence of the Prieſt doth not abſolutely binde.

Other Chriſtian Churches herein conſent: 1. Ieremie Patriarch of Conſtantinople, thus confeſſeth: Ipſa peccata dimittendi poteſtas non ſimpliciter, neque abſolute conceſſa eſt, ſed in reſipiſcentis obedientia, &c. This power to remit ſinnes is not ſimplie or abſolutely granted, but it conſiſteth in the obedience of the penitent, conſenting with him, to whom the charge of his ſoule is committed: as it is thus written, I ſay unto you, that whatſoeuer two of you ſhall agree vpon on earth, &c. whatſoeuer they aske, it ſhall be giuen them of my father.

Cenſur. Oriental. Eccleſ. c. 3.

2. Zaga Zabo confeſſeth, that it belongeth to the Patriarch to proceed in excommunication, but it is aduerſus contumaces, againſt the ſtubburne and obſtinate: where wicked obſtinacie is not found, there the ſentence of excommunication bindeth not.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

3. Confeſ. of Bohemia, artic. 5. they bring in that ſaying of Ambroſe, that if a man at the point of death be abſolued, that ſought it not before, I dare not ſay (ſaith he) that he departeth hence in good caſe, &c. remiſſion then of ſinnes doth not alwaies follow before God, vpon mans abſolution here: and againe, in the ſame confeſſion cap. 9. Prieſts ought not to vſe the keies of the Lord otherwiſe, then according to the meaning and will of Chriſt, &c. leſt that bee fulfilled, which the Lord ſaith by his Prophet, I will curſe your bleſſings.

4 For the Romane Church, ſee the decrees of Gratian alleaged before.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, CONCERNING the lawfulneſſe of mariage in Miniſters.

THis queſtion hath three parts: firſt, whether it be expedient or requiſite that all Miniſters ſhould be tied vnto ſingle life. Secondly, whether men twice married are to be admitted into the Miniſterie. Thirdly, whether Miniſters hauing entred into holy orders, ought to renounce the ſocietie of their wiues before married.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER IT BE lawfull for Miniſters to marrie.

The Papiſts.

B*Ellarmine* confeſſeth, that ſingle life is not impoſed vpon Miniſters by the law of God, for there is no precept either in the old or new Teſtament, that forbiddeth Miniſters to marrie: but it is a poſitiue law of the Church, moſt ancient and moſt iuſt, kept and obſerued euen ſince the Apoſtles time. And therefore it is not now lawfull for Miniſters to marrie, cap. 18. lib. 1 de Clericis.

83. Error.

Argum. 1. 1. Tim. 2. 3. The Apoſtle ſaith, that no man that warreth, entangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life: But to be married and to haue care of houſehold, are counted amongſt the affaires and buſineſſe of this life: Ergo, a Miniſter who is the Lords ſouldier, ought not to entangle himſelfe therewith, Bellarmine.

1. Tim. 2. 3.

Anſ. Firſt, the Ieſuite before confeſſed, that they had no Scripture againſt Miniſters mariage, how is it then, that now he pleadeth Scripture? Secondly, we muſt put the Ieſuite in mind of his owne expoſition of this place, lib. 5. de pontif. c. 10. where, this place being alleaged againſt the temporall dominion of Eccleſiaſticall perſons, he anſwereth, that this place only forbiddeth negotiationes, and mercimonia, merchandiſe and trafficke in the world, not regimen politicum, politicall regiment. If then the politicall care of a City, Prouince, or Common-wealth be no impediment, in his iudgement, to the ſpirituall warfarre: much leſſe without all queſtion is the domeſticall care of one familie, the charge of wife and children. Thirdly, we vtterly denie, that mariage is an hinderance or let to the calling of Miniſters: nay, we ſay, that it is an helpe and comfort to thoſe that haue not the proper gift of continencie.

Argum. 2. Saint Paul would not haue women admitted to be widowes of the Church, that had a purpoſe to marry, 1. Tim. 5. 11. much leſſe they that are married ſhould be admitted to miniſter the Sacrament, Rhemiſt annotat. ibid.

1. Tim. 5. 11.

Anſ. Firſt, the reaſon is not alike: for ſuch women as had no husbands were fitteſt for the ſeruice of the Church, becauſe they were free from other domeſtical attendance, as wiues are not, which muſt waite of their husbands: but mariage in this behalfe is no impediment to Miniſters, but rather an helpe, while they haue one at home that careth for their domeſticall affaires. Secondly, if the married eſtate be not fit to miniſter or receiue the Sacrament, then in thoſe Churches where they receiued the Sacrament euery day, there ſhould haue bin no mariage at al. Thirdly, S. Paul would haue no widow choſen vnder 60. yeeres, in which age, the heate of luſt being abated, there is no need of mariage: but the caſe is otherwiſe in Miniſters, who in the ſtrength of their age are admitted, and had need of that remedie, if they be not endued with the gift of continencie. But if it were ſo, that a Miniſter ſhould not bee admitted before 70. or 80. yeeres, which in a man is no more, in reſpect of procreation, then 50. or 60. in a woman, the iniunction then of ſingle life would not ſeeme ſtreight. Thus then is this argument anſwered.

Argum. 3. The Ieſuite giueth diuers inſtances, wherein mariage is a let and impediment to Miniſters: As, it hindereth their prayer, their preaching, their almes and liberality to the poore, for they haue wife and children to care for, Bellarmine.

Heb.13.3.

1.Cor.7.29.

1.Tim.3.2.

Anſw. Firſt, belike you eſteeme of marriage, as of an vnholy and vnpure thing, that a man can neither pray, nor do the office of a Chriſtian, performing the dutie to his wiſe: and indeed one of your companions calleth mariage a prophanation of ſacred orders. *Greg. Martin. diſcouer.cap.*15.*ſect.*11. Whereas the Apoſtle calleth it an honourable ſtate. And it was inſtituted in Paradiſe, whereas before the fall of man there was no vncleane thing. Secondly, we denie not, but that abuſe of mariage both in Miniſters and other lay-men, is an impediment to all holy actions: and therefore S. Paul giueth generall counſell to all, both Miniſters and others, that they which haue wiues ſhould be as though they had none, that is, ſhould liue ſoberly in mariage, and not giue themſelues to the wantonneſſe of the fleſh. Thirdly, neither doth mariage hinder hoſpitalitie: for S. Paul requiring that a Miniſter ſhould be harborous, 1.Tim.3.2. giueth alſo rules concerning the gouernement of his familie, his wife and children. verſ.4.11. For to whom may he better commit the care of houſhold affaires then to his wife? And that familie which is guided by a carefull and godly huſwife, we ſee by experience, to yeeld more reliefe to the poore, and giue entertainement to ſtrangers, then thoſe houſes which haue none. And where it is obiected, that Miniſters will care altogether for their children: It hath bin ſeene that ſingle prieſts in time of Poperie, haue been more couetous and greedie to enrich their kindred, then maried Miniſters haue cared for the prouiſion of their children. And hereupon diuers Canons were made to reſtraine their couetous deſires to aduance their kinred; as *Cauſ.*12.*qu.*1.*c.*27.*Pelag.*2.Nulli Epiſcopor, &c. It ſhall not be lawfull for any Biſhop, to conuert the moueable or immoueable things of the Church to his owne vſe. *Cauſ.*16.*qu.*7.*c.*3. *Gregor.*7. decreeth againſt ſuch Biſhops, as did conferre oblations vpon their ſeruitors, and kinſmen. And as for a moderate care to be taken to make prouiſion for wife and children, your owne Canons allow it, *Cauſ.*12.*qu.*1.*c.*19.Epiſcopi de rebus proprijs, &c. Biſhops may leaue to their heires, their owne gotten goods: and *c.*21.Poteſtatem habeat moriens, &c. A Biſhop dying hath power to diſpoſe of his proper goods to whom he will; Fortaſſis vxorem habet, &c. It may be he hath a wife, children, kinſemen, or ſeruants, &c.

1.Cor.7.33.

Argum. 4. Single life by the Apoſtle is preferred before the married eſtate, and therefore fitteſt for Miniſters: for hee that is married careth for the things of the world, 1.Corinth.7.33. Rhemiſt.

Anſ. Firſt, ſingle life is preferred before mariage, in all men, and not only in Miniſters: And therefore as lay-men are not bound to ſingle life, though it be in it ſelfe more conuenient; ſo neither ought miniſters to be. Secondly, though a thing in it ſelfe be beſt, yet is it not vniuerſally beſt for euery man: as riches are better then pouertie, becauſe they are Gods bleſſing; yet is it not beſt for euery man to be rich; God ſeeth it good, that ſome men ſhould bee poore: So ſingle life is the beſt for thoſe that haue the gift of chaſtitie, that can with a quiet conſcience liue ſingle: otherwiſe matrimony were much better: for Saint Paul, that wiſheth that euery one would liue ſingle as hee did, yet afterward ſaith, It is better to marry then to burne. So that by the Apoſtles iudgement, to marrie is beſt for him that hath not the gift of continencie, Iewel, pag.432.defenſ. Apolog.

*Argum.*5. Winchester reaſoneth thus, As a father may forbid certaine of his children to marrie, ſo may a King in his kingdome forbid certaine of his ſubiects to marrie, that is, all the Prieſts of the Realme Fox pag.1793.

1.Cor.7.37.

Anſw. Firſt, the father hath no ſuch power to keepe his child from mariage, if neede require: for the fathers will herein dependeth vpon the neceſſitie which his child hath to marrie, as S. Paul teacheth, 1.Cor.7.37. Secondly, that which the word of God hath left free for all men, by the law of the prince cannot be reſtrained: and if the King may forbid mariage to any, he may as well enioyne lay-men ſingle life, as prieſts: but ſuch a law to reſtraine the lay ſort from mariage, were manifeſt tyranny, and therefore the other reſtraint would ſeeme hard and vniuſt. Thirdly, by this argument it appeareth, that theſe cruell prohibitions of mariage, are built vpon the lawes only and ordinances of men, neither warranted by Gods word, nor allowed by the ancient practiſes of the Church, as our aduerſaries would beare vs in hand.

Bellarmine here countenanceth out this matter with great ſhew of antiquitie; and firſt he produceth diuers Canons of Councels, which I will briefly take a view of. Firſt, *Ancyran.concil.c.*10. it was decreed, that Deacons in their ordination not proteſting that they would marrie, ſhould not be ſuffered afterward; but if they did proteſt to marrie, they might, for they are therein diſpenſed with by the Biſhop.

Anſw. Firſt, this Canon maketh more againſt them for Miniſters mariage, which is heere vpon proteſtation permitted, which is not ſuffered now in the popiſh Church. Secondly, if the Biſhop may diſpenſe with mariage of Miniſters, then is it not a diuine or apoſtolicall, but an humane and politicall deuiſe. Thirdlie, it is not the diſpenſation of the Biſhop, that maketh marriage free, but the libertie granted by the Apoſtle, which is not to bee abridged; as *diſtinct.*27.*cap.*5. it is alleaged out of the Toletan Councell, that ſubdeacons being asked in their ordination, of their deſire or purpoſe of mariage, ſhould not be denied, conceſſam ab Apoſtolo licentiam; the licence granted vnto them by the Apoſtle. Fourthly, Marriage was then free by proteſtation, but now, velit nolit, will they, nill they, the decree of Pope Martin is in force, a man is not left to his choiſe, *decret. Martin. Cauſ.*27.*qu.*1.*c.*8. Why do they then alleage antiquitie, and yet take away the priuiledge of antiquitie?

Secondly, he obiecteth the Councell of Neocæſarea,*can.*1.Preſbyter ſi uxorem,&c. If a Presbyter marrie a wiſe,he ſhall be depoſed from his order.

Anſw. Firſt,this Canon may be ſuſpected,for how is it like that the Greeke Church would decree againſt the mariage of prieſts,ſeeing that Stephanus before this affirmeth in his decrees; Aliter ſe habet Orientalis,&c. The East Churches haue another tradition then the Romane Church? for their prieſts,deacons and ſubdeacons are coupled in mariage:either Stephanus muſt be accuſed of vntruth, or this Canon is forged. Secondly,though this Synode permit not prieſts to take new wiues,yet they forbid them not to retaine their old, *can.*8. Hee that keepeth an adulterous wiſe, muſt not miniſter: they might then keepe a wiſe,not an adultereſſe. Thirdly, this Synode *can.*7. ſeemeth to condemne ſecond mariage: they forbid the Miniſter conſentire,to conſent to ſecond mariage,or to be preſent at the marriage feaſt. Fourthly,this Synode was prouinciall, conſiſting of 17. Biſhops,and ſeemeth to be of no great authoritie.

Thirdly,he vrgeth the Nicene Councell 1. which was generall, *can.*3. Interdixit ſancta Synodus: The ſacred Synode forbiddeth a Biſhop, Prieſt or Deacon, to haue any woman in their houſe, beſide their mother,ſiſter,Aunt: a wife is not here mentioned.

Anſw. Firſt,this Synode forbiddeth them to haue, mulierem extraneam,vel ſubintroductam, any ſtrange woman,ſecretly or by ſtealth brought in,beſide thoſe,which are named: now,the wife is no ſtrange woman,and therefore not forbidden. Secondly, if the Councell had concluded againſt mariage,they had done contrarie to the ancient tradition, which was, and is yet in force in the Greeke Church,as Stephanus ſaith in his decree,which is not like. Thirdly,*Socrates lib.*1.*c.*8.reporteth how that the Synode would haue decreed againſt the mariage of Miniſters, but was ſtaied by Paphnutius, who ſhewed the inconuenience thereof, whoſe ſentence the whole Synode commended: and therefore it cannot be,that any ſuch thing was decreed. Fourthly,the Canons of the Nicene Councell may be ſuſpected,that they are not the right Canons; for Athanaſius ſaith, there were 70.Canons of this Synode, *diſtin.*16.*c.*12. but now there are but 20. And *cap.*13. Stephanus ſaith, that many of them are loſt: and beſide it appeareth to be ſo, becauſe there is not one Canon extant againſt the Arrian hereſie,for the which the ſynode was chieflie aſſembled: as alſo another notable thing concluded in the Nicene,was as touching the vniforme obſeruation of Eaſter, whereof there is not any mention in theſe 20. Canons: ſo that it is very like that theſe ancient Canons are changed and altered, and as ſome haue been left out,ſo other are put in their ſtead.

Fourthly,the Trullane Synode being the 6. generall,*can.*6. decreeth, that neither Biſhops, prieſts, deacons or ſubdeacons,ſhould after their Ordination take them wiues.

Anſw. Firſt, this Synode *can.*13. permitteth Prieſts and Deacons to haue the companie of their wiues,whom they married before,and thoſe that would ſeparate them,they decree to be depoſed:and this the Synode agreed vpon, though they knew the cuſtome of the Romane Church to bee contrary; ſo that this Synode maketh more for the mariage of Miniſters, then againſt it. Secondly, Bellarmine,though he now be contented to vrge this Councell againſt vs, yet at other times, taketh to himſelfe great libertie to confute and reiect it: And indeed it ſeemeth to be of no great authoritie: for *can.*2. they allow the Canon of Cyprian for rebaptizing of heretikes: And this Synode hath beſide ſome ridiculous Canons,as *can.*56. they forbid the eating of cheeſe and egges in Lent; *can.*67.Damnamus eos,&c. We do condemne them,that do by any kind of act dreſſe the blood of beaſts, and ſo eate it: they forbid the eating of blood. Thirdly,*can.*55. this Synode preſcribeth a law to the Romane Church, that whoſoeuer ſhould faſt Saturdeies,ſhould be depoſed: if this Synode ſerue their turne againſt mariage,it ſerueth our turne as well againſt their Saturday faſt. Fourthly,*can.*12.this Councell forbiddeth Biſhops the companie of their wiues,contrary to the 5.Canon of the Apoſtles,and they take vpon them in direct words,to correct the Apoſtles Canons: Non diuinis Apoſtolis,&c. We doe not contrarie the Apoſtles,thus decreeing,but willing to bring the Church to a better order,&c.They do take vpon them to make better orders for the Church,then the Apoſtles,which is great preſumption.We ſee then,what is to be thought of this Councell,yet it maketh as much for vs,as againſt vs.

Fifthly, he obiecteth *Carthag.*2.*can.*2.*Carthag.*5.*can.3.& concil. African.can.*37. in all which Canons,Biſhops,prieſts,deacons,are enioyned to abſtaine from their wiues.

Anſw. Whether ſhall we take to be of greater authoritie, the Canons of the Apoſtles, or the Canons of Councels,generall Synodes or prouinciall? The 6. Canon of the Apoſtles decreeth Biſhops and Prieſts to be excommunicate if they refuſed their wiues:*Trullan.6.ganeral.can.*13.decreeth them to be depoſed,that forbid Prieſts or Deacons the company of their wiues:they only reſtraine Biſhops. But theſe Africane Councels make a generall reſtraint for Biſhops,prieſts and deacons.Secondly,they notwithſtanding giue libertie to all other degrees,ſubdeacons,and other; as *African.can.*37.Cæteros autem Clericos,&c. But other of the Clergie we will not haue compelled to forbeare their wiues,but let the cuſtome of euery Church be obſerued: but afterward ſubdeacons alſo were reſtrained. Thus we ſee how theſe Councels are contrary one to another.

Sixthly,he produceth *concil.*1.*ſub Siueſt.can.*1. *Arelatenſ.*2.*can.*2. *Turonenſ.*2.*can.*20.Agathenſ. *c.*9.*Aurelianenſ.*3.*can.*2.in al which Canons it is not permitted, that any of the Clergie from ſubdeacons vpward,ſhould either marrie wiues,or companie with their wiues, if they had any.

Anſ. Firſt,ſome of theſe Synodes are thought to be depraued and corrupted: as firſt, the Councell held at Rome vnder Silueſter, firſt, it ſaith, *can.*1. that Conſtantine was baptized by Silueſter, whereas other ſtories ſay, that he was baptized by Euſebius Biſhop of Nicomedia. *Theod. lib.*1.*c.*32. Secondly, this Councell is ſaid to haue been celebrate the very ſame time, that the Nicene councell was held; and that Conſtantine was preſent, and ſubſcribed to this Councell, and 133. Biſhops of the Greeke Church beſide: but how could they be there, and here too at the ſame time? Thirdly, *c.*1. it is decreed, that none of the lay ſort ſhould bee preſent, and yet *cap.*10. Calphurnius Preſident of the Citie, was preſent and ſubſcribed. Fourthlie, this Synode beareth date *cap.*20. 3. Calend of Iune, when Conſtantinus and Priſcus or rather Criſpus were Conſuls: the Nicene beareth date when Paulinus and Iulianus were Conſuls, which was the yeere after: ſo that this ſynode by this account, ſhould go before the Nicene, which is vntrue, for that was the firſt generall, and the Epitomizer of the Councels confeſſeth in theſe words, In exemplaribus, &c. In the copies of this Romane ſynode there is intolerabilis deprauatio, an intolerable deprauation: Barthol. Caranza. Fifthly, if there were ſo many Biſhops of the Greeke Church preſent, it is not like that they would agree to any ſuch Canon contrary to the cuſtome of their owne Church. Sixthly, *can.*2. Silueſter approoueth all the acts of the Nicene Councell, whereof this was one, that they would not preſcribe ſingle life to the Clergie at the motion of Paphnutius, how then is it like that he would decree the contrary in this Romane Synod? Seuenthly, the inhibition for the mariage of ſubdeacons was not generall, no, not in the Latine Church, till Gregorie his time: for in Sicilie till then they had a cuſtome for their ſubdeacons to marrie: as it may appeare *diſtinct.*32.c. But ſuch a cuſtome contrary to a decree of a generall Councell at Rome could not haue ſo long continued.

Concerning the ſecond Councell of Arles: firſt, I anſwer, that many things therein may be thought to be forged; for it is ſaid to haue been celebrate in the time of Sylueſter: yet *Can.*28. mention is made of the Vaſenſian Councell, which was held vnder Leo 1. aboue an hundred yeere after. Secondly, *Can.*3. this Councell onely inhibiteth the company of women, à gradu Diaconatus, from the degree of Deaconſhip and vpward: ſo that Subdeacons are exempted. Thirdly, it giueth leaue, that they may haue, in ſolatio ſuo, for their ſolace in their houſe, their mother, ſiſter, daughter, neece, & vxorem conuerſam, and their wife conuerted: But what ſolace ſhould they haue in their wiues, if it were not lawfull to enioy them as their wiues.

Now to the Councell of Turone we anſwere: Firſt, it doth mitigate certaine Canons made before againſt the mariage of the Clergie. *Can.*2. Vt ſacerdos, vel Leuita, &c. That a Prieſt or Deacon, that begetteth children, ſhould not be barred from the Communion, as our predeceſſors haue decreed: but we willing to moderate the ſtrictnes of this conſtitution, doe decree, that ſuch bee not promoted to a higher degree, &c. Thus it doth appeare to be but an humane conſtitution, which they did ſometimes mitigate, ſometimes aggrauate as they thought good. Secondly, in the decree againſt Miniſters mariage, they doe abuſe that place of Scripture, qui in carne ſunt, They that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God: which hath no ſuch meaning: and in their ſenſe then, none that are maried, that is, in the fleſh, can pleaſe God. They alſo call maried Miniſters, coinquinatos, & contaminatos, defiled and contaminate: but contrary the Apoſtle calleth, the mariage bed vndefiled, Heb.13.4. I thinke the Papiſts themſelues are aſhamed of ſuch ſtuffe. Thirdly, it was but a prouinciall Councell of eight Biſhops, and of no great authoritie.

Heb.13.4.

Concerning the Councell of Agatha, we anſwere: Firſt, it hath diuers Canons againſt ſome ſuperſtitions of Poperie: as *Can.*19. they admit no women to profeſſe ſingle life before 40. yeeres. *Can.*56. they condemne the idle life of Monkes. *Can.*61. they account it inceſt for a man to marry his coſine germane, or brothers wife, contrary to the practiſe of the Church of Rome. If this Councell ſerue their turne againſt vs in this point of marriage, we will oppoſe it againſt them in the reſt. Secondly, they only enioyne Prieſts and Deacons to abſtaine from their wiues, no mention is made of Subdeacons. Thirdly, *Can.*10. they allow Miniſters to haue their neece with them in the houſe, and by the Popes law a man may marrie his neece, though the woman cannot marrie her nephew. Now, who ſeeth it not how vnreaſonable a thing it is, that a ſtrange woman ſhould be receiued into a Miniſters houſe, and his owne wife excluded? it is euident that ſuperſtition was working euen in thoſe daies.

In the ſeuenth place, he alleageth, *Concil. Elibertin. c.*33. Toletan. 2. *cap.*1. Toletan. 4. *cap.*26. Toletan. 8. *cap.*6. in all which Canons both Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons are forbidden the vſe of their wiues.

Anſ. Firſt, concerning the Elibertine Councell, we anſwere: firſt, it is not like, that this Councell being kept not long after the Nicene, which at the motion of Paphnutius, would decree nothing concerning the abſtaining of Clergie men from their wiues, ſed hoc in vniuſcuiuſque voluntate dimiſit, but left euery man to his owne will: as Gratian witneſſeth, diſtinct. 31. *cap.*12. that this prouinciall would decree againſt a generall. Secondly, whereas the 6. Canon of the Apoſtles doth excommunicate them of the Clergie, that ſeparate their wiues from their companie, as the 6. generall Trullan expoundeth that Canon: how dare any prouinciall conclude againſt the Apoſtles, whoſe Canons, they ſay, they are? And this anſwere may ſerue in generall to the reſt of the Spaniſh Councels vrged by Bellarmine. Thirdlie, this Synode ſeemeth to be contrary to it ſelfe: for *can.*65. Hee of the Clergie, that doth not proijcere, caſt off his wife, committing adulterie, ſhall bee put from the Communion: for whereas, *can.*33. they would haue them reſtraine their wiues company, what is that elſe, but to giue them occaſion to commit adulterie? and what neede they now caſt off their wiues for diſhoneſtie, whereas they are commanded before to caſt off their honeſt wiues? theſe things agree not. Fourthly this ſeemeth to be an erroneous Councel, and may be thought to condemne Magiſtracie as a prophane thing: for can. 56. the Magiſtrate, during the yeere of his office, is forbidden to come to the Church: as though the Church were by his preſence prophaned.

Secondly, the ſecond Toletan Councell maketh nothing againſt the mariage of Miniſters, but only forbiddeth the familiaritie of women, cap. 2. And cap. 1. it decreeth rather the contrarie, that both Clergie men which were ordained to that profeſſion by their parents in their infancie, and Monkes alſo at eighteene may marrie, if they will.

Thirdly, the fourth Toletan, cap. 43. decreeth againſt thoſe Clerkes that doe marrie, ſine Epiſcopi conſultu, without the leaue or aduice of the Biſhop: ſo that with his leaue it might be lawfull for them to marrie. And cap. 26. which is alleaged by Bellarmine, Prieſts and Deacons are required, when they are ordained to make profeſſion to the Biſhop, vt caſte & pure viuant, to liue chaſtly and purely; which may be done in mariage. And then it followeth, vt dum eos talis profeſſio obligauerit, that their profeſſion may binde them: ſo then their promiſe only and profeſſion bindeth them, not the law of God. Therefore by this Canon, where no ſuch promiſe or profeſſion is made by Miniſters at their ordination, they may lawfully marrie.

Fourthly, to the eighth Councell Toletan our anſwere is this: Firſt, wee doe not greatly force of this Councell, being after the yeere of our Lord 640. when as ſuperſtition began to gather ſtrength. Secondly, as it may appeare by this, that this Synod ſeemeth to make the mariage of Miniſters worſe then fornication: can. 6. Relatum eſt nobis, It is tolde vs, that certaine Subdeacons are not only defiled with the vncleannes of the fleſh, but alſo (which is a ſhame to ſpeake) are coupled to new wiues. This parentheſis, dictu nefas, (it is a ſhame to ſpeake) and the other clauſe, but alſo, being referred to their mariage, and not to their fornication, doe ſerue to aggrauate the firſt, and extenuate the other. So Toletan 9. can. 10. they call the mariage of Miniſters deteſtandum, deteſtabile, and their children, proles pollutione nata, borne in pollution, or vncleannes: which is a foule aſſertion, and not farre from blaſphemie. I maruelle Bellarmine would conceale this ſtuffe, that maketh for him. Thirdly, this Synode, can. 7. impoſeth ſingle life vpon Clerkes againſt their will, contrarie to all ancient Canons: as cap. 7. it decreeth againſt thoſe, Qui quoniam, &c. Who, becauſe when orders were impoſed vpon them, they pretended it was againſt their will, therefore they will not forſake their former mariage: the Synode decreeth thus; That as baptiſme is imparted to many both vnwilling, and not knowing what is done vnto them, and yet it holdeth; ſo orders alſo, will they, nill they, ſhould hold. It is againſt all reaſon, that either orders or ſingle life ſhould bee impoſed vpon any againſt their will: as for the compariſon of baptiſme, the caſe is not like. Firſt, baptiſme is Gods ordinance for all both men and children; ſo is not ſingle life for Miniſters. Secondly, children are baptized, not knowing any thing becauſe they are infants, and yet vnderſtand not, but orders are not fit for children. Thirdly, that any againſt their wils are baptized, it can no way be iuſtified: if they meane children, it is an improper ſpeech, to ſay they are vnwilling, hauing as yet no vſe of their will: if they ſpeake of men, none are to bee baptized, but vpon confeſſion of their ſinnes, and profeſſion of their faith, Matth. 3. which ſheweth they are willing. And herein this Councell is directly contrarie to the ſecond Toletane, cap. 1. which giueth libertie to Subdeacons, if they proteſt, at the time of their ordination, that they will marrie, they gaue them leaue ſo to doe: and this is ratified in your owne decrees, diſtinct. 28. c. 17. And Gregorie alſo is more equall, who thus writeth of certaine Subdeacons in Sicilie, that were maried; Durum & incompetens, &c. It ſeemeth to me an hard and inconuenient thing, that hee, which neuer promiſed chaſtitie, ſhould be compelled to be ſeparated from his wife, diſtinct. 31. c. 1. Wherefore this decree is hard and intollerable, that impoſeth ſingle life, where they proteſted the contrarie. Fourthly, I doe oppoſe againſt this 8. Councell Toletane, the firſt Toletane, which as it was more ancient by more then two hundred yeeres, ſo is it of greater authoritie: there in the preface of the Synode, Patronus the Preſident thus proteſteth: Mihi placet, &c. I thinke it meete that we keepe the ſtatutes of the Nicene Synode, and depart not from the ſame. But the Nicene decreed nothing as touching the ſingle life of the Clergie, but left it free. Againe, in the 21. Canon, Qui dixerit coniugia hominum, &c. He that ſaith the mariages of men, which are lawfull by the diuine law to be execrable, accurſed be he. But the mariages of Miniſters are lawfull by Gods law; this our aduerſaries doe confeſſe, making it but a conſtitution of the Church: Ergo, they which condemne their mariages, are vnder this curſe. And thus I think we haue ſufficiently anſwered the Ieſuites oppoſitions out of the Councels: which I haue ſhewed either to be forged, or elſe erroneous, or contrarie one to another, or concluding directly againſt Scripture. Now it followeth for further anſwere, that the Canons alſo which doe eſtabliſh and ratifie the mariage of Miniſters, be likewiſe produced, which I haue inſerted in the end of our arguments that here follow.

The Proteſtants.

THat it is not onely lawfull but conuenient, that all men both Miniſters and others, that haue not receiued a proper gift of continencie, ſhould marrie; and that it is agreeable and conſonant to the word of God: thus we ſhew it.

1 The Scriptures are moſt plaine for the mariage of Miniſters, 1. Tim. 3. 2. S. Paul ſaith, a Biſhop 1.Tim.3.2.

and generally euery Miniſter, may be the husband of one wife: and verſ. 11. their wiues are deſcribed how they ought to behaue themſelues: Let their wiues be honeſt: Ergo, it is lawfull for them to be married. Bellarmine anſwereth, that S. Paul ſpeaketh of the wiues which they had before their calling and ordaining, not thoſe, which they ſhould marrie after. But there appeareth no ſuch thing out of the text, but rather the contrarie. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, verſ. 2. Oportet Epiſcopum eſſe, &c. A Biſhop muſt be the husband of one wife; he ſheweth not what he hath been, but what he is, not of Verſ. 11. the wife which hee had, but now hath. Secondly, verſ. 11. He deſcribeth what manner of women their wiues ought to be, indued with like qualities to their husbands: but if they were not ſtill as their wiues, what are they more to them, then other women? neither ſhould they need to be otherwiſe qualified, then all other Chriſtian women. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of hoſpitalitie, of bringing vp of Children, of well gouerning his houſe, and of Biſhops wiues; how then can he be otherwiſe vnderſtood, but that their wiues ſhould be with them, as helping toward all thoſe domeſticall duties? Fourthly, S. Paul alſo ſheweth in another place, that he had libertie as well as others, To 1. Cor. 9. 5. leade about a ſiſter a wife, euen after he was an Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 9. Wherefore it is as lawfull afterward as afore. Bellarmine anſwereth: We muſt thus reade, a Siſter a woman: and it is like they were women, that did miniſter vnto the Apoſtles and followed them. We replie: Firſt, the word Siſter, doth implie a woman, and therefore it had been an improper and needleſſe ſpeech, to ſay, a Siſter a woman; therefore we muſt rather reade, a Siſter a wife. Bellarmine replieth: Firſt, if the Apoſtle vnderſtood a wife, he would haue ſet downe the Greeke word with an article, τὴν γυναῖκα. Anſw. This is a 1. Tim. 3. 2. & 11. 12. falſe obſeruation, for the Apoſtle, 1. Timoth. 3. 2. 11. 12. making mention of Biſhops wiues, leaueth out the article. Secondly, S. Paul ſaith, a Siſter a woman, inuerting the order, for a woman a Siſter, as Acts 1. 16. Peter Act. 1. ſaith, Viri fratres, Men and brethren. Anſw. Indeed your Latine tranſlation hath preſumed to correct the text, reading thus, a woman a Siſter: but what boldnes is this, when you haue no other ſhift, to take vpon you to amend the text? and ſeeing the Apoſtle ſaith, a Siſter a wife, or as you would haue, a woman, in the ſingular; it muſt needs implie a wife: for they had other women, more then one, that miniſtred to them. Secondly, if they were other women which miniſtred of their ſubſtance, what need the Apoſtles to be maintained of the Churches? If they miniſtred but in their ſeruice and attendance, who were more fit to doe it and to follow them from place to place then their wiues? And beſide, if the Apoſtle did meane other women beſide wiues, how could hee alleage this inſtance to ſhew that he departed from his right? for he himſelfe refuſed not the miniſterie and bene- Rom. 16. 1, 2. uolence of other women; as of Phebe, Rom. 16. 1, 2. Wherefore this libertie, which the Apoſtle vſed not, was as concerning wiues. Thirdly, the phraſe of leading about a Siſter, importeth a ſuperioritie and authoritie, ſuch as the husband hath ouer his wife. Bellarmine replieth, the Apoſtles had this power ouer theſe women, not as husbands ouer their wiues, but as teachers ouer their Diſciples. 1. Cor. 7. 4. Anſw. Firſt, the Apoſtle vſeth the ſame word, 1. Cor. 7. 4. The woman hath not power ouer her owne bodie, &c. The vſe of the word ſheweth, what power he meaneth. Secondly, the Apoſtle onely had not power, but indeed did vſe that power ouer both men and women, as his Diſciples, as it may ap- Acts 16. 13. peare, Acts 16. 13. but here he ſpeaketh of a power, which he vſed not. Laſtly, S. Hierome, though in other places he varieth from himſelfe, yet giueth this rule for the vnderſtanding of this word: Tom. 3. ad Ocean. Mulierem autem, &c. A woman (which word is ambiguous in the Greeke tongue) in all theſe places vnderſtand a wife. Saint Ambroſe alſo, Comment. in 1. Tim. 3. vpon theſe words, hauing children, expoundeth it of Biſhops ioyned in mariage: Ideo inferiorem poſuit, &c. The Apoſtle put the caſe of the inferiour order, that is, ſuch as were married; that no man might doubt of the ſupe- Heb. 13. 3. riour, that is, ſuch as were not coupled in mariage. Another place we haue, Heb. 13. 3. Mariage is honourable among all men; Ergo, amongſt Miniſters. Bellarm. If it were meant of all mariages, then to marrie within the degrees of Conſanguinitie, were alſo honourable. Anſw. This is a meere cauill: Firſt, he might haue read further, and the bed vndefiled: S. Paul therefore ſpeaketh of lawfull mariage. And indeed the other ioyning and coupling of men and women together contrarie to Gods law, is not to be counted Matrimonie or Wedlocke, but Inceſt rather and Fornication, as the brother to marrie his brothers wife, and ſuch like. Secondly, S. Paul ſaith, not all mariages are honourable, but mariage is honourable for all men; the generalitie is not of the thing, but of the perſons: wherefore we doe fitly conclude out of this place, that mariage is lawfull and commendable euen among Miniſters: argum. Caluini.

1. Cor. 7. 2. Further, S. Paul ſaith, For auoiding of fornication, let euery man haue his owne wife, 1. Cor. 7. 2. Here is no reſtraint for Miniſters. Bellarmine: This is to be vnderſtood of thoſe that haue not made a vow of continencie. Anſw. Firſt, our Sauiour Chriſt commandeth no ſuch vowes: it is a cruell Antichriſtian yoke laid vpon Miniſters to binde them, when they receiue orders, to vow ſingle life: and therefore your Antichriſtian decree ought not to abridge the generall libertie granted by the Apoſtle. Secondly, the end of mariage is generall, to auoid fornication, and therefore the remedie alſo is generall: for euery man hauing not a proper gift of continencie, may be in danger of that inconuenience, if he be denied the ordinary helpe: Melanct. Secondly Bellarm. This is not a precept of the Apoſtle, but a permiſſion & libertie, that they which feared to fall into fornication, ſhould be ioyned to their wiues. Anſ. If then the Apoſtle gaue libertie to marrie, where fornication is feared, how dare you abridge that libertie, which God hath made common and free for all? as it is recited in your owne decree, diſtinct.28.c.5. out of the ſecond Toletan Councell, Conceſſum ab Apoſtolo licentiam, &c. The licence to marrie granted by the Apoſtle, we cannot take away, &c. And the Councell there ſpeaketh of the mariage of Miniſters, confeſſing that this libertie to marrie is generall to all, both Miniſters and others.

decrees,

1.Tim.4.3.

Cont.Fauſt: lib.30.cap.6.

Againe, 1.Tim.4. to forbid mariage is called a doctrine of diuels: but the Popiſh Church forbiddeth mariage. Bellarm. We doe not forbid mariage to any, but wee require ſingle life of all that are entred into orders, which, it is at their owne choice to receiue or to refuſe. Anſw. Firſt, it is neceſſarie that ſome ſhould receiue orders, and be conſecrate to the Church miniſterie: wherefore requiring this condition of all ſuch to liue ſingle, though particularly you prohibite not this man or that to marrie, yet generally you prohibite the whole calling, which is worſe. Secondly, if you ſay you doe not forbid mariage ſimply to all: no more did the Manichees, for they ſuffered their ſchollers and auditors to marrie. And Saint Auguſtines words are generall: Ille prohibet matrimonium, qui illud malum eſſe dicit: Hee forbiddeth mariage, that thinketh it is euill: you therefore forbidding mariage, muſt needs hold opinion that it is wicked and euill. The Councell of Turone, Can.2. calleth married Miniſters, contaminatos, contaminate, or defiled. Toletan.8.9.10. Deteſtandum connubium, ſaith their mariage is deteſtable. The Papiſts allow theſe Councels, and ſo conſequently condemne mariage in this caſe as euill, counting that vnholy and vncleane, which the Lord hath made holy and honourable. There is a ſeuere decree againſt ſuch, Toletan.1.can.21. Qui dixerit coniugia hominum, &c. He that ſhall ſay, that the mariages of men, which are lawfull by the diuine law, are execrable, is accurſed, &c. But ſo doe the Papiſts count the mariages of Miniſters prophane and vncleane, which are lawfull by the word of God: Ergo, they are accurſed.

Argum.6. This reſtraint of the mariage of Miniſters hath not been of ancient time in the Church, but impoſed vpon the Church of late, 1000. yeeres after Chriſt: Polycrates Biſhop of Epheſus anno 180. had ſeuen of his progenitors before him Biſhops of the ſame Sea. In the Nicene Councell Paphnutius ſtood vp, and ſtaied the decree that ſhould haue paſt, for reſtraining of the mariage of Miniſters, and it is ſaid, Synodus laudauit ſententiam Paphnutij: The Synode commended Paphnutius ſentence. Sozomen.lib.1.cap.11. Bellarmine here ſetteth a good face vpon it, and ſtoutly denieth the ſtorie, and maketh the author a liar that reporteth it. Thus, when they haue no other ſhift, they will refuſe authors, bookes, antiquitie. But Gratian doth report it for a true ſtorie, diſtinct.31.c.12. who is of better credit, I thinke with Papiſts, then any of this vpſtart popiſh ſect.

Pag.37.1.30.

Ex pontific. Damas.

Gregorie the father of Gregorie, was Biſhop of Nazianzum. Symphoroſa, which was put to death with her ſeuen ſonnes vnder the perſecution of Adrian the Emperour, was the wife of one Getulius Miniſter in the citie of Tyber, Fox pag.45. Cheremon Biſhop of Nilus, vnder the tyrannie of Maximinus fled with his wife into the mountaines of Arabia, and was neuer ſeene againe, Euſeb.lib.6. cap.42. Fabianus Biſhop of Rome and Martyr was a married man. Saint Cyprian maketh mention of one Numidicus a Presbyter, that was married; lib.4.epiſtol.10. Likewiſe epiſtol.6. ad Cornelium, he reporteth thus of Nouatus a Prieſt, vterus vxoris, &c. He ſtrooke his wife with his heele being with childe, and killed the childe, that ſhe went with: yet he findeth no fault with him, for being married, but for abuſing his wife. Diuers of the Biſhops of Rome beſide were Biſhops and Prieſts ſonnes: Bonifacius the firſt, the ſonne of Iucundus a Prieſt: Felix Presbyter, the father of Felix the third: Agapetus the firſt, Gordianus his ſonne a Prieſt: Syluerius the ſonne of Hormiſda Biſhop of Rome: Theodorus Pope, ſonne to Theodorus Biſhop of Ieruſalem: Hadrianus ſecond ſonne to Talarus, Biſhop Benedictus the 8. and Iohn 21. his ſucceſſor, both ſonnes to Georg.Epiſcop.Portuenſ. And diuers other of them beſide. The Ieſuite can anſwere heere nothing elſe, but that theſe ſonnes of Prieſts were borne before their fathers prieſthood: But this is their vaine ſurmiſe and coniecture, ſeeing no ſuch thing is mentioned in the ſtorie. And this ſurmiſe is taken away by the direct words of Gratian.diſtinct.56.c.2. where after he had rehearſed the names of the foreſaid Biſhops of Rome, concludeth thus: Quampluros etiam alij inueniuntur, de ſacerdotibus nati, &c. And many beſide are found to haue gouerned the Apoſtolike Sea, being borne of Prieſts or Miniſters: which is more then to haue ſaid, ſonnes of Prieſts; for they might bee Prieſts ſonnes, though borne before their prieſthood: but to be borne of Prieſts, implieth, that they were at the time of their birth, Prieſts.

The Greeke Church neuer yet receiued this popiſh decree of ſingle life, and their Biſhops are maried at this day. Bellarmine ſaith, that the Church of Rome hath diſpenſed with them, cap.18. Ergo: if the Pope would diſpenſe with the Latine Church, it might be lawfull enough then for Miniſters to marrie; wherefore it is but a humane conſtitution. Againe, it is falſe that they haue diſpenſed with the Greeke Church: they care not for their diſpenſations, but vſe their owne Chriſtian libertie: neither was the Greeke Church euer ſubiect to the Biſhop of Rome. This alſo may appeare by the 13. Canon of the Trullane Synode the 6. generall, where it was decreed, that notwithſtanding the contrarie cuſtome of the Church of Rome, Prieſts and Deacons might enioy the companie of their wiues. And Innocent.3. ſaith, Orientalis eccleſia votum continentia non admiſit: The Eaſt Church hath not admitted or receiued the vow of continencie, decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.3.c.6. Wherefore it is vntrue that the Greeke Church alloweth the marriage of their Miniſters by vertue of the Popes diſpenſation, they doe it without and beſide his leaue. And wee ſhall finde fewe ages, wherein ſome Prieſts, notwithſtanding ſo many prohibitions, were not married. In Gregorie the 7. his time, who by excommunication forced Miniſters from their wiues, there were 24. Biſhops with their Clergie that ſtood in defence of their mariage. Anno 1191. the nation of the Danes gaue licence to their Miniſters to marrie, and were for that cauſe excommunicate by Clemens the 3. ex Baleo. Anno 1372. the Archbiſhop of Colen was married: ſic Premonſtratenſ. Paulus 2. is ſaid to haue taken aduice about the reſtoring of the mariage of Miniſters, ex Baleo.

Fox pag.1063. col.1.30.

Fox pag.1065. col.2.10.

Thus we ſee, that in times paſt mariage was lawfull for all men, vntill Pope Nicholas the ſecond, Alexander the ſecond, and Gregorie the ſeuenth, that notable ſorcerer and adulterer: for theſe three comming together, one not long after another, began by publike decree to reſtraine Prieſts mariage: not long after them, Anſelme began to play the Rex here in England, anno 1104. who ſtoutly proceeded in his vngodly purpoſe, and enacted that married Prieſts ſhould either leaue their wiues, or their benefices. At which time two hundred Prieſts at once came barefoote to the Kings palace, to make complaint: and for all Anſelmes Pope-like and outragious proceedings againſt maried Prieſts, yet they continued married well nie two hundred yeeres after Anſelmes time, doe what hee could: and thus it is manifeſt, that the reſtraint of Miniſters mariage is no ancient thing, but then began moſt to be vrged, when Antichriſt fully was reuealed to the world, when as the orders of Friers came in and were confirmed and priuiledged vnder Boniface the 8. about anno 1300.

Argum. 3. What better argument can we haue againſt this Popiſh decree, then the great vncleannes, and foule enormities that haue bin brought, by the meanes thereof, into the Church? In the time of Gregorie the firſt, who enioyned his Clergie to liue ſingle, commanding on a time his ſeruants to catch him ſome fiſh, out of his Motes and Ponds, in ſtead of fiſh they brought vnto him 6000 heads of young children: whereupon, he fetching a great ſigh with himſelfe, commended then the ſaying of the Apoſtle, It is better to marrie then to burne. Bellarmine hath no better anſwere then to denie the ſtorie, which notwithſtanding is found in the epiſtle of Hulderiçus Biſhop of Auguſta, which he ſent to Pope Nicholas: Fox pag.1155. col.1.

Pag.1063.1.70 edit.1610.

In Anſelmes time, after the reſtraint of Miniſters mariage, great rumours, and complaint was brought to him, of the execrable vice of Sodomitrie, which began to raigne in the Clergie. Pope Pius the ſecond ſaid, he ſaw many waightie cauſes, why wiues ſhould be taken away from Prieſts, but he ſaw more why they ſhould be reſtored to them againe. The ſame Pope Pius alſo diſſolued certaine houſes of the Brigidines, bidding them to goe forth of their cels, ne amplius vrerentur, that they ſhould no longer burne in luſt, ex Baleo. Bernard ſaith, Tolle de Eccleſia honorabile coniugium, &c. Take from the Church honorable Matrimonie, ſhall you not repleniſh it with inceſtuous perſons, concubinaries, Sodomiticall vices? Heereupon the popiſh Catholikes ſeeing their owne infirmitie, began thus to ſalue vp the matter, Si non caſtè, tamen cautè: If thou deale not chaſtly, yet deale chaſtly. Yea they are not aſhamed thus to write, If any of the Prieſts ſhould be * found imbracing of a woman, it muſt be expounded and preſuppoſed, that he doth it to bleſſe her.

Sup. Cant. Serm.66.

* Fox pag.792. col.1. & p.726. col.1.30. edit. vltim.

Reade Maſter Bales preface to his booke intituled, De actis Romanor. pontificum: there you ſhall finde how that the Kings viſiters appointed to viſite the Abbeyes, anno 1538. found in ſome irreligious houſes fiue, in ſome tenne, in ſome twentie Sodomites and adulterers: whereof ſome kept fiue, ſome ſeuen, ſome twentie harlots. O filthie vncleannes vnſpeakeable! Who would not now thinke, that it had been much better for theſe profeſſed votaries to haue married? This was well foreſeene of that good man D. Collet, founder of Pauls Schoole, who wiſhed that the Maſter and Vſher of the Schoole ſhould be rather of married men, then ſingle prieſts: Fox pag.839. col.1.

Pag.766.2.60.

Among the Heluetians it was an ancient vſe and cuſtome, that when they receiued any new prieſt into their Churches, they would premoniſh him to take his concubine, leſt he ſhould attempt any miſuſe with their wiues and daughters: Fox pag.866. col.2. Theſe things conſidered, who cannot but approoue and highly commend the ſaying of Pope Pius, before alleaged, if hee had done as he ſaid?

Pag.791.2.60.

I but (ſaith Bellarmine) theſe are the abuſes of ſingle life, will you condemne a good thing, becauſe of the abuſe? by the ſame reaſon (ſaith he) cælum & terra tollenda ſunt, Heauen and earth muſt be taken away, becauſe they were abuſed of the heathen and taken for Gods, *cap.*21.

Anſw. Firſt, wee ſay not, that theſe be the fruites of ſingle life, which S. Paul commendeth in all thoſe that haue the gift, but of this coacted and conſtrained popiſh virginitie, which is impoſed indifferently vpon all, and cannot haue any good vſe. Secondly, when you can proue that reſtraining of Miniſters mariage is of Gods ordinance, as it is certaine heauen and earth are of his making, then we will grant vnto you, that it may haue a right vſe, and for the abuſe ought not vtterly to be aboliſhed.

De ſanct. Virgin. cap.34.

Saint Auguſtine alſo ſaith, Quæ nubere volunt, & ideo non nubunt quia impunè non poſſunt, melius nuberent, quàm vrerentur, id eſt, quàm occulta flamma concupiſcentiæ in ipſa conſcientia vaſtarentur: Thoſe Virgins, which would marry, but cannot, becauſe of reſtraint, and reproch, might better marrie then burne, that is to ſay, then with the ſecret flame of concupiſcence to be waſted and conſumed in their conſcience, &c. Wherefore it followeth, that all they, both Miniſters, votaries and Virgins, that haue not power to abſtaine, ſhould doe better, for all their profeſſion and vow, to marrie, then to burne.

Argum. 4. The teſtimonie of antiquitie is very full and plentifull for the lawfulnes of Miniſters mariage:

marriage: Stephanus Biſhop of Rome, Decretal. Aliter ſe habet orientalis Eccleſiæ traditio, aliter Romanæ Eccleſiæ: Nam illorum ſacerdotes, diaconi & ſubdiaconi Matrimonio copulantur: The tradition or cuſtome of the Eaſt Church is diuers from the vſe of the Romane Church: for their Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons are married, &c. See then, how is this like to be an Apoſtolike tradition, that Miniſters ſhould liue ſingle, ſeeing it was neuer vniuerſally receiued? And Cardinall Campeius is here found to be a liar, who was not aſhamed openly to ſay in the aſſembly at Noremberg, anno 1524. that the Greekes did not permit their Prieſts to marrie, Fox pag. 865. col. 1. Pag.790. 1.18.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt, that this Canon of Stephanus is of no authoritie, being not found in any of his Epiſtles, &c.

Contra. Thus he taketh to himſelfe great libertie in denying of authorities alleaged, refuſing his owne authors; as he denieth the ſtorie of Pope Ioane, witneſſed by 13. authors of account, as I haue ſhewed before: he giueth no credit to Sozomene his report of Paphnutius: the Epiſtle alſo of Huldericus Biſhop of Auguſta written to Pope Nicholas, is of him refuſed: and now he giueth Gratian the lie, the compiler of their owne decrees; theſe are but beggerly ſhifts.

Secondly, ſaith hee, the Canon is to bee vnderſtoode according to the practiſe of the Greeke Church, that it is not lawfull for their Prieſts to marrie new wiues, but onely being married before, to vſe and exerciſe that marriage, which cuſtome notwithſtanding the Church of Rome condemneth.

Contra. Firſt, the words of this Decree are plaine, Matrimonio copulantur: The Prieſts, Deacons and Subdeacons in the Eaſt Church, are coupled or ioyned in marriage: which ſheweth a libertie as well to take wiues as to vſe wiues. Secondly, the ſame alſo is affirmed by Clement 3. decret. Greg. lib. 5. tit. 38. c. 7. Sacerdotibus Græcis legitimo matrimonio uti licet: The Greeke Prieſts may vſe lawfull marriage: If marriage be lawfull, then both before their Prieſthood and after. Thirdly, Innocentius 3. thus teſtifieth; decret. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 3. cap. 6. Orientalis in minoribus, &c. The Eaſterne Churches do contract matrimonie in the lower degrees, and in the higher degrees they vſe matrimonie alreadie contracted. Wherefore it is vntrue that Bellarmine ſaith, it is not lawfull in the Greeke Church for any, in ſacris exiſtentes, that are in orders, to marrie wiues. Fourthly, neither doe they contract marriage in the lower degrees onely, but in the higher alſo: as Deacons are counted amongſt the greater orders, for whom, by the Ancyrane Councell, it was lawfull to marrie, can. 10. as it is alleaged in the decrees, diſtinct. 28. c. 8. If the 6. Canon of the Trullane be obiected, that maketh it vnlawfull for Deacons to marrie; wee anſwere, firſt, that the Ancyrane Councell is more ancient by more then 300. yeere, being celebrate anno 308. the other about 670. and therefore to be preferred. Secondly, the Ancyrane is confirmed can. 1. of this Trullane Synode, and therefore therein the Synode is contrarie to it ſelfe. Thirdly, as this Synode prohibiteth Deacons to contract marriage, ſo can. 12. it forbiddeth Biſhops to vſe marriage contracted, contrarie to the generall vſe of the Greeke Church.

Concil. Ancyran. ann. 308. can. 10. Diaconi, ſi in ordinatione proteſtati ſunt, ſe non poſſe continere, & velle Vxores ducere, hi poſtea, ſi ad nuptias venerint, maneant in miniſterio, &c. Deacons, which when they are ordained, doe proteſt, that they cannot containe, but doe purpoſe to marrie, if afterward they marrie, let them continue ſtill in their miniſterie.

This Canon is alſo alleaged by Bellarmine, to proue that marriage is not lawfull for Miniſters, vnleſſe they be diſpenſed with by the Biſhop; becauſe it followeth in the Canon, Quia Epiſcopus, &c. Becauſe the Biſhop gaue them leaue, that is, Deacons, to marrie, they may be ſuffered ſo to doe.

Anſw. Firſt, if the Biſhop may diſpenſe with the marriage of Miniſters, then is it no Apoſtolicall conſtitution; for then it were not in the Biſhops power to diſpenſe. Secondly, the marriages then of the Miniſters of the Goſpell by your owne Canon are lawfull, becauſe both they and their Biſhops are enabled to marrie by the law of the Prince; which is more then the diſpenſation of a Biſhop. Thirdly, it is not the diſpenſation of the Biſhop, but the libertie of the Apoſtle, that maketh the marriage of Miniſters lawfull, as diſtinct. 27. c. 5. ex Toletan. 2. cap. 1. Conceſſam ab Apoſtolo licentiam, &c. We cannot take away the licence, or libertie of marriage granted by the Apoſtle.

Concil. Gangrenſ. cap. 1. qui mulierem fidelem cum viro ſuo dormientem, abominandam crediderit, anathema eſto: He that abhorreth a faithfull woman becauſe ſhe ſleepeth with her husband, accurſed be he. And more apertly chap. 4. the Councell approueth the marriage of Miniſters, decreeing thus: Si quis diſcernit Presbyterum coniugatum, tanquam occaſione nuptiarum, quod offerre non debeat, & ab eius oblatione ideo ſe abſtineat, anathema: If any man make queſtion of a married Prieſt, that by reaſon of his marriage, he ought not to miniſter, and therefore refraineth from his oblation and ſeruice, let him be accurſed, &c. This Canon alloweth as well of the ſeruice of a married Miniſter, as of a ſingle: And although this were a prouinciall Councell, yet is it confirmed concil. Roman. 6. ſub Symmacho, and in the ſixth generall Trullane Councell. Can. 1.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that they are condemned, which condemne marriage in Miniſters as ſimply euill, as can. 1. and this Canon ſpeaketh of him Qui habuit vxorem, that had, not hath a wife.

Anſw. Firſt, the firſt Canon of this Synode condemneth thoſe that diſpraiſe marriage as euill, but in this 4. Canon, it alſo decreeth againſt them, that miſlike marriage in Miniſters: ſo that theſe being two diuers Canons, they cannot bee thought to decree one and the ſame thing. Secondly, the words are plaine, Tanquam occaſione nuptiarum, If by occaſion of marriage, they ſay not as euill, a man diſcerne betweene a Priest married and vnmarried; they say not, condemne, but preferre one before another, for that onely that he is married: but thus doe the Papists, occasione nuptiarum, by reason of marriage put Ministers by from ministring: Ergo, they are anathema. Thirdly, the right translation is, Presbyterum coniugatum, as Peter Crab readeth, a married Presbyter, which implieth the present time, not one, which had a wife, which is your owne glosse, and contrarie to the custome of the Greeke Church, who suffered their Ministers to hold their wiues. Also your owne decrees doe thus reade, distinct. 28. cap. 15. Si quis discernit presbyterum coniugatum: If any man discerne a Priest married, the Greeke word is γαμετὴν, married or ioyned to a wife, not which had a wife: so that the reading in their owne Canons, doth ouerthrow this new translation of theirs.

Concil. Lateranens. sub Alexandro 3. part. 18. cap. 4. Si subdiaconi contraxerint matrimonium, eos, dummodo ante tales fuerint, quod timendum sit, ne pro vna pluribus abutantur, dissimulare poteris cum suis vxoribus remanere, quia tolerandum est malum, vt peiora vitentur: If Subdeacons marrie, if they were such before, that it is to be feared, least in stead of one, they would abuse many, you may winke at them, and suffer them to enioy their marriage: for an inconuenience must bee suffered to preuent a mischiefe.

Ibid. cap. 4. Nullus vestrum eum à contracto matrimonio praedicti ordinis obtentu prohibere praesumat, nec sibi propter hoc molestiam aut grauamen inferat: Let none of you hinder him (meaning a certaine Subdeacon) from his marriage contracted, vnder colour and pretense of his orders, nor for that respect molest or grieue him any way, &c. Farre off were those times, though euill enough, from such crueltie and outrage as of late many haue seene and felt, when the marriage of Ministers was made felonie, by that bloodie act of the six articles. Fox pag. 1135. col. 2. Pag.1036.2.80

Argum. 5. In the fift place, that the imposition of single life vpon the Clergie is no Apostolike institution it may appeare, both because the authors and first deuisers of this hard constitution may bee assigned, as also, for that the obseruation thereof is diuers, and not vniformely kept.

For the first, Siricius is held to haue beene the first imposer of this yoke, who was Bishop of Rome almost foure hundred yeares after Christ: which although it be stoutly by Bellarmine denied, cap. 19. lib. 1. de Cleric. yet is it by Clictoueus, a Popish writer of great credit amongst them, affirmed, and by Innocentius the 3. who, although the other bee by Bellarmine reiected and confuted, ought to beare more sway with him: he thus writeth, distinct. 82. c. 2. Si ad aliquos forma illa Ecclesiasticae vitae, &c. If that forme of Ecclesiasticall conuersation and discipline, which was sent from Bishop Siricius to the Prouinces, doe appeare not to haue come to the knowledge of some, to those that are ignorant, pardon shall not be denied, &c. By this it is euident, that this iniunction of single life first proceeded from Siricius, both because he is said to haue prescribed a certaine forme of life; and for that, many were ignorant thereof: whereby it is manifest, that it is not Apostolicall, for then no Church could haue pretended ignorance.

Clictou. de continent. Sacerd. c. 4.

This Siricius onely inhibited Bishops, Priests, and Deacons to marrie; for Subdeacons it was yet free, till Pelagius the 2. his time, who was Bishop of Rome about the yeere 580. as Gregorie the first thus testifieth, distinct. 32. c. 2. Wee haue heard by the relation of many, that your Subdeacons doe companie with their wiues: which thing that no man should afterward presume to doe, it was prohibited by the authoritie of our predecessour; which was this Pelagius. And the same decree against the marriage of Subdeacons is againe reuiued by Gregorie, distinct. 31. cap. 1.

Againe, it should seeme that the marriage of Presbyters was not generally inhibited till the first Toletan Councell, which was celebrate about anno 407. in the which Synode, Can. 1. it is thus decreed, Si quis Presbyter ante interdictum: That if any Presbyter, yea before the interdiction, had begotten children, he should not be preferred, &c. So that it seemeth, that marriage began then first to be interdict, or forbidden.

Secondly, the diuersitie hath beene very great, and much alteration in the vrging of this inhibition.

1 The Greeke Church alloweth their Clergie to enioy their wiues before married, but some of them are not permitted to marrie againe: the Latine Church inhibiteth both the one and the other: So witnesseth Innocent. decret. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 3. c. 6.

2 The Greekes also differ much in their opinion and practise: first, Deacons were suffered to marrie after their ordination, if they made such protestation, when they receiued orders: Concil. Ancyran. can. 10. anno 308.

3 Bishops were first inhibited in the Greeke Church the companie of their wiues before married, in the Trullane Synode, Can. 12. whereas it was lawfull before: which Synode was celebrate about the yeere 673.

4 In the Latine Church Subdeacons were not a long time prohibited to marrie, as it may appeare, concil. Carthag. 3. c. 3. which was about the yeere 438.

5 At the first they were not enforced to make profession of single life at the receiuing of their orders, but it was left free, as it is apparent, concilii Toletan. 2. c. 1. about the yeere 530. but afterward it was decreed, that Priests and Deacons should make such promise and profession, Toletani 4. c. 28. anno 680.

6 Marriage was free in the Latine Church for all the inferiour orders and degrees of the Clergie, vnder vnder Subdeacons, more then a thouſand yeeres, as it is extant in the decree of Leo the ninth, anno 1049. diſtinct.32.c.14. But about an hundred yeere after, Alexander the third decreed, that if any of the lower degrees did take a wife, hee ſhould be depriued of his benefice, decret.Gregor.lib.3.tit.3. cap.3.

Thus, as we ſee, there hath beene great difference in the Church, concerning the degrees of the Clergie, which of them ſhould be reſtrained marriage: firſt, Biſhops were inhibited, after that Prieſts and Deacons, then next Subdeacons, and laſt of all the inferiour orders alſo, as of Readers, Exorciſts, and the reſt: Whereby it appeareth, that this inhibition of marriage was not Apoſtolicall, for then it ſhould haue beene knowne at the firſt, to whom the inhibition did appertaine. And as the diuerſitie hath beene great concerning the degrees, ſo the cenſures alſo of the Church as touching the marriage of Miniſters haue been as diuers.

7 Firſt, they that were married, and had children after their ordination, were but forbidden to aſcend to a higher degree, as *concil.Taurinat.c.*7 anno 400. or thereabout.

8 Afterward, anno 438, in the 5. Councell of Carthage, Can.3. Clergie men, not abſtaining from their wiues, were decreed to be remoued from their office: but yet they were not ſuſpended from the Communion, Aurelianenſ.5.cap 4.

9 Then the cenſure was aggrauated, and Miniſters, that were married, were depriued of the Communion: which heauie decree is reuerſed: Concil.Turanenſ.1.c.2.anno 480. or thereabout, they decree, that they ſhould not be kept from the Communion, but onely depriued of their office.

10 As yet Miniſters, though they were enioyned abſtinence, yet were not forbidden cohabitation with their wiues: as concil.Arelatenſ.2.can.3. it was lawfull for a Miniſter to haue his wife with him in the houſe, as well as any other kinſewoman: but afterward they were commanded to be ſeparated from their wiues, anno 680. in the 4. Toletan. Can.43.

11 Yet was it put to the Miniſters choiſe, whether they would leaue their wiues, or be ſuſpended from their office: as Gregor. 1. maketh mention of one Specioſus a Subdeacon, that was content to leaue his calling, rather then to forſake his wife, and ſo maintained himſelfe being a Notarie, diſtinct. 32.c.2. and this was an.600. or thereabout: But afterward Gregor.7.an.1070. did enforce Miniſters by excommunication to leaue their wiues, not leauing them to their choiſe at all.

12 All this while they onely proceeded againſt the marriage of Miniſters by Eccleſiaſticall cenſures, as yet no ciuill or corporall puniſhments were deuiſed, till Vrbanus 2: anno 1086. who decreed, that it might be lawfull for the Prince, mancipare ſeruituti,&c. to make Miniſters wiues bondwomen, diſtinct.32.c.10.

13 But hitherto the life of married Miniſters was not touched, till of late it was made felonie, by the bloodie act of the ſixe articles, Fox pag.1135. ſuch was the crueltie of Papiſts. Thus we ſee how variable and diuers the conſtitutions of former times haue beene concerning the marriage of Miniſters: whereby it is euident, that the Apoſtles haue not impoſed this yoke of ſingle life; for their conſtitutions are generall, and ought vniformely to be kept of all Churches.

Now becauſe Bellarmine taketh vpon him to iuſtifie this laſt heauie cenſure of the marriage of Miniſters, which doth ſuſpend them not from their liuings onely, but from their life, I cannot paſſe ouer with ſilence ſo great impietie, that it may appeare how this blood-ſucking generation of vipers intendeth nothing but crueltie.

His reaſons, for the iuſtifying of this cruell law, are two: the firſt, that married Miniſters are worthie to die, becauſe they doe breake their vow: the ſecond is taken out of the ſaying of Hierome, that a Biſhop begetting children, quaſi adulter damnabitur, ſhall be condemned as an adulterer, and not reputed as an husband: but adulterie (ſaith hee) in Hieromes time was death: Ergo, married Biſhops and Miniſters are worthie of death, cap.21 reſp.ad vltim.argument.Philippi.

Anſwere. To the firſt reaſon our anſwere is this; firſt, if not the marriage of Miniſters, but the breaking of the vow bee worthie of death, then haue you dealt moſt cruelly with many Miniſters of the Goſpell, which were neuer votaries, and yet haue bin condemned, and put to death for their marriage. Secondly, marriage after a vow made is permitted both by the Ciuill and Canon law, and therefore the ſentence of death is vniuſt, and againſt law in this caſe. Firſt, the Ciuill law permitteth, that if a widow haue taken a ſolemne oath that ſhe will not marrie againe, may notwithſtanding that oath, goe vnto ſecond marriage: Cod.lib.5.tit.35.Valentin.Theodoſ.In optione huiuſmodi nulla cogatur: Let no woman be compelled, but left to her choiſe, &c. If this be lawfull after an oath, there is the ſame reaſon of a vow: for a vow doth not more binde before God, then an oath.

2 Your owne Canons alſo doe warrant marriage after a vow, as decr.Gregor.lib.4.tit.6.c.5. Alexander the 3. thus reſolueth concerning a woman, that had made a vow not to marrie, Nos attendentes,&c. We conſidering, that it is more ſafe for the woman after a vow ſimply made to contract marriage, then incurre the guilt of fornication, &c. It will here be anſwered, that after a ſimple vow marriage may bee tolerated, but not after a ſolemne: they call that a ſimple vow, when the partie neither changeth habit, nor place, profeſſing to liue ſingle.

Contra. Firſt, Celeſtinus the third of this matter thus decreeth: Simplex votum non minus,&c. A ſimple vow doth no leſſe binde before God, then a ſolemne, decr.Greg.lib.4.tit.6.cap.6. Wherefore if marriage be lawfull after the one, then after the other likewiſe: for they both binde alike before God.

Thus it appeareth, that to marrie after a vow made, is agreeable to your owne Canons; and authorized alſo by the Ciuill law: and therefore cannot be iudged worthie of death.

To the ſecond reaſon collected out of S. Hierome, our anſwere is: firſt, he doth not directly affirme, that a maried Biſhop is an adulterer: ſed quaſi adulter, but as an adulterer. Secondly, there is no great heede to be taken what Hierome ſaith, for he many times in his heate is ſo caried away with the commendation of virginitie, that hee miſliketh not onely the mariage of Miniſters, but condemneth generally both firſt and ſecond mariage; as of the maried eſtate he thus ſpeaketh: Feminæ maritatæ tumentibus vteris præferunt fœditatem: epiſtol. ad Lætam. Married women with their great bellies bewray their filthineſſe. And writing to Furia: An vereris ne ex te parens tuus non habeat puſionem, &c. Art thou afraid leaſt thou ſhouldeſt not bring to thy father a little Dwarfe, to creepe vpon his breaſt, & ceruicem eius ſtercore linat, and to beray his ſhoulder? Thus vnreuerently he ſpeaketh of children which are the fruite of mariage: and yet I doe not tranſlate his words as they are ſet downe. And againe, ad Gaudentium: Seruos carnis, &c. Paul calleth them that are married, ſeruants of the fleſh. Thus hee wreſteth Scripture to ſerue his turne; thus hee counteth marriage, filthineſſe, vncleanneſſe, fleſhlineſſe. And hee is no more equall toward ſecond mariage, as thus he noteth vpon theſe words of the Apoſtle, 1. Timoth. 5. I will younger widowes to marrie, for certaine are turned backe after Sathan: Maritum potius accipiat, quam diabolum: Let younger widowes rather chooſe an husband, then the diuell: a goodly matter, and much to bee deſired, that is receiued in compariſon of the diuell, ad Saluinam. If Hierome had this conceite of ſecond marriage, making it in the next degree to the diuell, I doe not maruell, that hee calleth the marriage of Miniſters adulterie. But Hierome himſelfe hath giuen vs a rule, what we ſhould doe in this caſe: Non conſueui eorum inſultare erroribus, quorum miror ingenia: I doe not vſe to reioyce in their errors, whoſe wits I commend, Pammach. & Ocean. That libertie then, which Hierome had in iudging of others, is not denied to vs in diſcerning of him.

Thirdly, Hierome ſaith thus of himſelfe in another caſe, Imitati eſtis errantem, imitamini & correctum: As ye followed me when I erred, ſo imitate me now being corrected. So I would wiſh Bellarmine, as he is readie to take hold of this vnequall ſentence of Hierome pronounced of the marriage of Miniſters: ſo to giue him the hearing, where hee ſpeaketh in fauour, as he thus writeth; Qui dixit, vnius vxoris virum, ipſe mandauit, &c. He that ſaid, a Biſhop muſt be the husband of one wife, he alſo ſaid, he muſt be without reproofe, ſober, wiſe, apt to teach, &c. Ad hæc omnia, &c. We winke at all this, onely we can ſee their wiues: they paſſe by that, which they ought not, & obijciunt, quod conceſſum eſt, and they obiect that which is granted, Hieron. Ocean. Here he directly affirmeth that it is granted vnto Miniſters to haue wiues.

Fourthly, he vrgeth the cuſtome of Hieromes daies, when adulterie was puniſhed with death, which cannot be denied: but hee is not able to proue that the marriage of Miniſters was then puniſhed by death: Ergo, it was not reputed for adulterie. And I would aske him this queſtion, whether hee approue that law or not that iudgeth adulterers worthie of death: if hee doe, why is it not practiſed in Poperie? if he doe not, how can it ſerue his turne againſt the marriage of Miniſters? Againe, and doth this Popiſh champion ſpeake as he thinketh? would hee haue married Miniſters put to death? what then are adulterous and fornicating Prieſts worthie of? doth hee thinke marriage a greater ſtaine to orders, then fornication? But your fornicators, inceſtuous, or adulterous Prieſts, were not adiudged to death: the heauieſt cenſure againſt them, was to be depoſed from their office, diſtinct. 81. c. 12. and afterward this cenſure was thought to be ſomewhat too hard, and therefore was mitigated, and changed into certaine yeeres penance, diſtinct. 82. c. 5. If then by your owne law adulterous and fornicatorious Prieſts are not to die; how much leſſe married Miniſters? for they doe tranſgreſſe Gods law, the other breake but a conſtitution of your Church. Thus wee ſee, how by the practiſe of the Popiſh Church, in puniſhing more cruelly the honeſt marriage, then the vncleane conuerſation of Miniſters, they doe preferre the one before the other: and thus, as S. Hierome ſaith, Lupanaria thalamis præferentur, Brothel-houſes ſhall bee preferred before the marriage bed. And thus much by the way for the anſwere to Bellarmines vniuſt defence of their cruell proceedings againſt the marriage of Miniſters euen vnto death.

Fifthly, and laſtly, I will ſhew the conſent both of the Ciuill and Canon law, for the lawfulneſſe of Miniſters marriage.

First, Cod. lib. 5. tit. 27. leg. 1. Conſtantin. That they, quos ſacerdotij ornamenta condecorant, which are honoured by the Prieſthood, ſhould not marrie any abiect or vile perſons: they are not forbidden ſimply to marrie, but preſcribed of what condition. But if it be anſwered, that this word, Sacerdotium, Prieſthood, is here taken for an office or place of gouernment, as ſome thinke; though that vſe of the word cannot be proued in the Ciuill courſe, there are other lawes beſide to ſtrengthen this: as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6 leg. 2. Conſtantius: Clerici, coniugia, & liberi immunes, &c. Clergie men, their wiues, and children, are freed from baſe ſeruices. And leg. 20. Clericorum bona poſt liberos & vxorem ad eccleſiam deferuntur: Clergie mens goods, after their children, and wife, muſt bee giuen to the Church, Theodoſ. Ergo, by the Imperiall law it was lawfull for Miniſters to be married. It will be here anſwered, that they are called their wiues, whom they had married before their ordination, but had now loſt their companie. Contra. Firſt, the law ſaith, coniugia, not coniuges, the marriages or the wedlocke of Miniſters,not their wiues,muſt be free; ſhewing a preſent vſe of mariage. Secondly,if they had now left their wiues,being maried to the Church,then the Church ſhould haue been preferred before their wiues,to inherit their goods: but now their wiues were preferred before the Church,and ſo they are in the neereſt degree to them that might be: and therefore they are their wiues ſtill,as before. Thirdly,the law being generall of all Miniſters wiues, not excluding them that are maried after,no more then the firſt,it muſt be ſo vnderſtood,vnleſſe by the law it ſelfe, they could ſhew a reſtraint: for the law muſt be taken according to the letter.

I come now to their owne Canons: firſt,Innocentius 3. diſtinct.26.c.3. thus teſtifieth,Vxorem ducere,non eſt crimen,&c. It is no fault to marrie a wife: if it be a ſinne, the author of mariage ſhould be in fault. And againe, Nuptiarum copula Dei mandato perficitur: The mariage bond is perfected by Gods commandement. If then it be no ſinne to marrie a wife,it is not ſinfull in a Miniſter to take a wife. Decret.p.2.cauſ.12.qu 1.c.21. Poteſtatem habet Epiſcopus,&c. A Biſhop when he dieth hath power to leaue his goods to whom he will, &c. fortaſſis enim vxorem habet, &c. it may bee he hath wife,and children: the Canon ſaith not,habuit, he had a wife,but he hath. Sext.decret.lib.3.tit.2. Bonif.8. Clericus coniugatus,&c. A Clergie man, that is married, doth enioy the priuiledge of the Clergie,&c. Their mariage then is lawfull,for otherwiſe,they could not enioy their Clergie.

We haue alſo direct places of the Canons,that doe affirme the mariage of the Clergie, Legitimum, to be legitimate,or lawfull: as concil.Lateranenſ.ſub Alexand.3.c.2. In ſacerdotio geniti,&c. They which are borne in the Prieſthood, may bee admitted to be Prieſts: but none which were not borne in lawfull mariage,could bee preferred to bee Biſhops or Prieſts,part.3.cap.3. Ergo,mariage in the Prieſthood is lawfull. Likewiſe Lateran.ſub Innocent.3.cap.14.Clerici,&c. Clergie men falling into fornication,ought to be more grieuouſlie puniſhed, Cum legitimo matrimonio poſſint vti, ſeeing they may vſe lawfull matrimonie,decret.Gregor.lib.5.tit.38.c.5.Clemens 3.Græcis legitimo matrimonio vti licet: The Greekes may ſafely vſe lawfull Matrimonie. In all theſe places, the mariage of the Clergie is called lawfull.

Now I will ſhew in particular, that it hath been lawfull for the ſeuerall degrees of the Clergie to marrie: for Biſhops,Prieſts,Deacons,Subdeacons,Readers,Exorciſts,Singers and the reſt:firſt,for the foure inferior orders,of Doorekeepers,Lecturers,Exorciſts, Acolythi, that they may take a wife, the decree of Leo the 9. is extant,diſtinct.32.c.14 Secondly,Subdeacons are permitted to marrie,*diſtinct.*84.4.out of the Councell of Carthage 5.c.3. Thirdly, it was lawfull for Deacons alſo to marrie,diſtinct.27.c.7. Gregorie maketh mention of one Ioannes a Deacon, Qui paruulam habuit filiam, that had a little daughter,whom the Citizens of Naples elected to be their Biſhop: the young infant was begotten in his Deaconſhip: for it is not like they would chooſe one to be their Biſhop, that had bin Deacon but a while. Fourthly,Prieſts alſo were married, diſtinct.28.c.17. Nicholas thus writeth to the Balarians,Deycere non debetis,&c. I would not haue you to depriue him of his place, ſpeaking of an Elder or a Prieſt that was married. Fifthly,for the lawfulneſſe alſo of Biſhops mariage, we haue a direct Canon,diſtinct.28.c.13. Where Pelagius conſenteth to the election of a maried Biſhop elected to Syracuſa,though he deferred it a whole yeere,yet at the length gaue conſent. Thus haue wee the teſtimonie of their owne Canons for the approbation of Miniſters mariage.

Let vs adde the ſeale of Martyrs,M. Lambert Martyr out of S. Paul thus ſaying, They that cannot abſtaine let them marrie,&c. 1.Cor.7.9. inferreth thus,this prooueth well,that all Prieſts wanting continencie of heart,had need to marrie to auoide burning luſt,Fox pag.1104.col.1.

Concerning the conſent of other Chriſtian Churches, it is heere very pregnant: 1. For the Eaſt Churches,Ieremie telleth vs what the vſe of the Greeke Church is: We giue vnto thoſe Prieſts, which cannot continue virgins,vxores accipiendi poteſtatem power to take wiues,but before they are made Prieſts,and are conſecrated, for God hath appointed matrimonie: and we are not ignorant,that much vncleanneſſe is practiſed among them, qui ſacerdotes vxores accipere prohibent: which denie Prieſts to take wiues: Nilus alſo ſheweth how in the 13.Canon of the ſixth generall Councell, that cuſtome of the Romane Church is condemned,who required of ſuch as were to bee made Prieſts and Deacons, that they ſhould profeſſe, quod non vltra ſuis copulentur vxorib. that they ſhould no longer keepe company with their wiues: and they decree ſuch mariages to remaine in force, not [a] diſſoluing their ſocietie with their wiues. 2. The Muſcouites doe herein follow the Greeke Church: [b] they condemne the Romane Prieſts,becauſe they bend themſelues by oath to a ſingle life:ſeeing the Councell of Gangea,can.4.denounceth,anathama againſt him,qui ſpernit ſacerdotem vxorem habentem, which deſpiſeth a Prieſt hauing a wife. Nay yet more, [c] neminem vxore carentem, &c. they admit none vnto the Prieſthood,that hath not a wife: [d] though they allow not their Prieſts to marrie againe, their firſt wiues being dead. 3. [e] The Prieſts in Iudea are married,and neuertheleſſe ceaſe not to execute their duties. 4. [f] The Prieſts of the Armenians are married. 5. [g] In Syria the Prieſts are married as in Greece. 6. [h] In Cyprus the Biſhops in all ages haue been married,as well as the Prieſts.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER ANY OVGHT to be admitted to the Miniſterie after ſecond marriage.

The Papiſts.

84. Error. THey denie not, but that Biſhops and Miniſters hauing been once married, are rightly ordained, ſo that afterward they doe not companie with their wiues: but they which haue been either themſelues twice married, or haue married a widow, which had a husband before, are vtterly vncapeable of holy orders, Bellarm. cap. 23. Rhemiſt. Timoth. 3. ſect. 4. And this they call Bigamie.

1. Tim. 4. 2. Argum. 1. They reaſon thus out of S. Pauls words, 1. Tim. 4. 2. A Biſhop muſt be the husband of one wife: that is, ſay they, that no kind of way was Bigamus, or had two wiues either at once, or one after another. And they prooue their interpretation thus. First, as S. Paul deſcribeth a widow of the 1. Tim. 5. 9. Church, 1. Tim. 5. 9. that hath been the wife of one husband, ſo here he ſaith of a Biſhop, that he ſhould be the husband of one wife: but that is meant, ſucceſſiuè, of one husband after another: for it was neuer ſeene that one woman ſhould haue more husbands then one at once, nor neuer ſuffered either amongſt the Iewes or Gentiles: therefore it muſt be ſo taken here, a husband of one wife, that is, who hath been but once married, as it is taken there, a wife of one husband, that neuer had more, not onely ſimul, at once, but not ſucceſſiuè, not ſucceſſiuely one after another, Bellarm cap. 23.

Anſw. Firſt, there were many women both among the Iewes and Gentiles, that had forſaken their firſt husbands, and were vnlawfully coupled to others, and ſo had moe husbands at once; and likewiſe many men that had done the like to their wiues; but afterward repented, and were conuerted to the Chriſtian faith; but yet were not admitted to any publike office in the Church, becauſe of their former infamous life. Of ſuch the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in both theſe places, and not of thoſe that maried one wife, or one husband after another. It is therefore great boldneſſe, and a greater vntruth to ſay, that there were none ſuch heard of in thoſe daies: for although it were neither lawfull then nor now, yet both many ſuch were heard of in thoſe daies, and it were no hard matter to finde out ſome now among the Papiſts, that haue had more then one wife at once.

Secondlie, the Ieſuite might haue remembred himſelfe, how elſewhere, helping to excuſe the Councell of Neocæſarea, which decreed thus, Can. 7. Preſbyterum conuiuio ſecundarum nuptiarum intereſſe non debere, That a Prieſt ſhould not bee preſent at a ſecond marriage feaſt; hath deuiſed this ſhift, Concilium loqui de eo, qui duas ſimul Vxores habet, That the Councell calleth that ſecond marriage, when as a man hath two wiues together, Bellarm. de concilijs lib. 2. cap. 8. Why then ſhould he thinke it ſtrange, that we ſo vnderſtand Saint Paul, as giuing a caueat againſt ſuch, as had two wiues together?

Thirdly, Saint Hierome thus expoundeth the Apoſtle, writing in this manner, Hoc, quod dicit vnius vxoris virum, &c. This, which the Apoſtle ſaith, the husband of one wife, may be otherwiſe expounded: the firſt Church of Chriſt did conſiſt of the remnant of Iſrael: the Apoſtle did know that it was tolerated in the law to haue children by diuers wiues, yea, the Prieſts themſelues vſed that libertie: wherefore he commandeth, that the Miniſters of Chriſts Church ſhould not chalenge the ſame licence, that they ſhould haue two or three marriages together, but at one time euery man his ſingle wife; *Hierom.Ocean.tom.*3.

Fourthly, he is not to be counted Bigamus or Digamus, that is coupled and ioyned to one wife after another lawfully, but he that vnlawfully at once enioyeth more then one. *Fulk.annot.*1.*Tim.*5.*ſect.6.& cap.*3.*ſect.*4.

To this agreeth that decree of Nicholaus the firſt: Vt Laicus Uxorem ſimul & concubinam habens non communicet Eccleſia, That a lay man, keeping a wife and a concubine together, ſhould not communicate with the Church. And againe, Decret.ſeptim.de regibus. An non diſtricta vltione feriendus es, qui in duabus vxoribus adulterium & flagitium Lamech imitatus es? Are you not ſeuerely to bee cenſured, which haue plaied the adulterer with two wiues? &c. Thus he writeth to King Lotharius, who had two Wiues together, Teberga, and Gualdreda: And ſuch as theſe, are truly called Bigami, And thus is this word taken both in the Ciuill and Canon law: as *Cod.*5.*leg.*2. Dioclet. Binas habens vxores eſt infamis: He that hath two wiues (that is, at once) is infamous. And to this agree the Canons, *decret, Greg.lib.*1.*tit.*21.*c.*4. *Innocent.*3, Qui duas ſimul vxores habet, &c. He is counted infamous, that hath two wiues at once. And in the ſame place, Licet in veritate non ſit Digamus, &c. A Clergie man twice married, though in truth he be not Bigamus; yet incurreth the penaltie of Bigamie, &c. Here in direct termes ſecond marriage is denied to be Bigamie. So alſo in the Decrees, *cauſ.*31. *qu.*2.*cap.*10. Primus Lamech, &c. Firſt the homicide Lamech brought in two wiues; Fratricidium & Digamium: But the ſame puniſhment of the Deluge, did meete both with his Fratricide and Digamie, &c. Here Lamech is called Digamus, hauing two wiues at once. Againe Innocent 3. decreeth, that he is not to bee counted Digamus, that hath many concubines, one after another, *decret.Gregor. lib.*1.*tit.*21.*c.*6. How much leſſe is he Digamus, that hath had many wiues, one after another? vnleſſe they will preferre whoredome before marriage.

*Argum.*2. Againe ſay they, the high Prieſt in the law was not permitted to marrie a widow, Leuit.21.13.
Leuit.21.13. Which law being obſerued in the high Prieſt, ought much more to bee kept now, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. That law concerning the high Prieſt, did only appertaine to himſelfe, who was a figure of Chriſt, neither can it be extended to the Miniſters of the Goſpell, no more then any other parts of his office, that were peculiar to that ſtate and calling. Secondly, in the ſame place the Prieſt is enioyned to marrie a Virgine: if then the prieſthood of the law is for them againſt the marrying of a widow, it maketh alſo with vs for the marrying of a Virgine.

The Proteſtants.

That it is not by the word of God forbidden, that any man ſhould marrie the ſecond, yea the third time, after the deceaſe of his wife, neither that he is to be counted vnchaſt or giuen to wantonnes in ſo doing (much leſſe hee that in his firſt mariage taketh a widow,) neither that, to haue been twice married ought to be a barre or a ſtop from entring into the ſtate and calling of the Miniſterie, if otherwiſe the man be qualified and furniſhed with ſufficient graces for that calling; thus it is prooued.

*Argum.*1. They that cut off ſuch, as haue been twice married, from hauing any calling in the Church, do ſauour of the hereſie of Montanus, into the which alſo Tertullian fell, who condemned ſecond marriage: for if once marriage be no impediment nor preiudice to him that is to bee ordained, but ſecond marriage be; then doe they diſallow ſecond marriage, (becauſe a man is thereby diſabled to be a Miniſter) if not ſimply, yet they make it leſſe lawfull, nay more offenſiue, and ſubiect to obloquie and reproch. But the Scripture maketh no difference betweene firſt and ſecond marriage: S. Paul ſaith, For auoyding of fornication, let euery man haue his wife: he ſaith not, his firſt wife; but 1.Cor.7.2.
generally: ſo that it is lawfull for auoiding of fornication to marrie the ſecond or the third wife, as wel as the firſt.

*Argum.*2. If it be as lawfull to marrie the ſecond wife, as the firſt, if it be for auoiding of fornication; then ſecond marriage doth no more hinder the receiuing of orders then the firſt: but the antecedent is true: for what ſhould make the ſecond marriage leſſe lawfull? not any dutie that the wife or the husband oweth to the partie deceaſed: for they are free in that reſpect, and ſet at libertie, Rom. 7.3. Neither is the end of marriage made fruſtrate more now then before: for hee that marrieth the Rom.7.3.
ſecond time, may haue as good cauſe to doe it, for auoiding of fornication, as he had at the firſt.

*Arg.*3. Second marriage, make the worſt of it you can, is not ſo great a blot as fornication, or adulterie, or to haue a Concubine: but theſe were no lets of Prieſthood in poperie: Nay, wee reade that Auguſtine in the purer age of the Church, that confeſſeth he had two Concubines, yet afterward was made presbyter, and at the laſt a Biſhop for all that. Wherefore, there is no reaſon that exception Confeſſ.lib.6.
ſhould be taken againſt a twice married man, ſeeing a fornicator is free. And by this reaſon, if after a ſe- cap.15.
cond concubine a man may be admitted to orders, but not after a ſecond wife: then as S. Hierom ſaith, Coniugales ergò tabulæ, non coitus, &c. Not vnlawful company, but the mariage bond ſhould be by the Apoſtle condemned: Imputatur infælicitas vxori mortuæ & libido meretrica coronatur: Then a wife ſhould be counted vnhappie, and whoriſh luſt crowned. *Hieron.Ocean.Tom.*3. Wherefore if Pelagius the Pope admitted one to be made a Deacon, who had a concubine after his firſt wife, *diſtinct.*33.*c.*7. with how much greater reaſon, may he be admitted, that had one lawfull wife after another?

De Bon. viduitat. c 12.

Laſtly, of this opinion Auguſtine ſeemeth to be: That it is as lawfull to marrie the ſecond time and the third, as the firſt. Ait Apoſtolus, mulier alligata eſt viro, quamdiu vir eius viuit; non dixit primus, ſecundus, tertius, aut quartus: The woman is bound (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſo long as her husband liueth; he ſaith not, the firſt husband, ſecond, third, or fourth, &c. So the woman is as free after the firſt or ſecond husbands death, as when ſhe was a Virgine. Yet if ſhee can content her ſelfe with her widowes eſtate, and haue the gift of continencie, ſhe ſhall doe better not to marrie: but if ſhe haue not, it is better to marrie (S. Paul ſaith not, the firſt, ſecond, or third time, but ſo often as ſhe hath need) rather then to burne.

Concerning twiſe maried Miniſters, though ſome in times paſt thought it inconuenient, yet were they not ſo fierce againſt them, as our aduerſaries now are, to thinke ſuch vnworthie their calling, and to depriue them both of office and maintenance. Concil. Arelatenſ. 2. can. 26. Clerici quibus duplicata inciderint Matrimonia non vltra ſubdiaconatum Eccleſiaſticas capiunt dignitates, Clerkes, that chance to be maried twice, let them not be capable of any Eccleſiaſticall dignitie more then the ſubdeaconſhip.

Concil. Agathenſ. can. 1. Placuit, vt digami, &c. Preſbyteri vel diaconi nomen obtineant, officium non exequantur: it ſeemeth good to vs, that they which are twice maried in the Miniſterie, ſhould retaine the name of Prieſt, or Deacon, though they execute not the office, &c. yet this is not ſo hard; as to be depriued both of name, office, and dignitie.

But we haue yet clearer teſtimonies: Innocentius 1. Epiſtol. 25. can. 2. reaſoning againſt thoſe, which counted it not bigamie, if a man had one wife before Baptiſme, and another after, Quia in Baptiſmo, inter cætera crimina dimiſſum eſt, Becauſe it is forgiuen them amongſt other crimes in Baptiſme, ſay they: he thus writeth, Vxorem ducere crimen eſt, an non eſt crimen? ſi crimen, author eſt in culpa qui conſtituit, vt crimen in paradiſo conſtitueretur: quod Deus ergo coniunxit nefas eſt appellare, &c. Is it a ſinne to marrie a wife, or is it none? if it bee a ſinne, the authour is to be blamed, who ordained ſin in Paradiſe: therefore that which God hath ioyned together, it is not lawfull to call ſinne, &c. Hence we gather thus: ſecond mariage is it a ſinne or no? if it be a ſinne, then the blame reſteth vpon God, which were blaſphemie to thinke; if it be no ſinne, why ſhould it be an hinderance to the calling of a Miniſter? How can he be polluted, and made vnapt for that calling, by an act not ſinfull?

Leo Epiſtol. 90. hath this ſaying: Ancillam à toro abijcere, & vxorem certæ ingenuitatis accipere, non duplicatio eſt coniugij, ſed profectus honeſtatis: For a man to barre a bondwoman or concubine from his bed, and to take a freewoman to his wife, is no doubling of marriage, but a profiting in honeſtie, &c. Say then, is it an honeſt part after a man hath knowne a concubine, to get a wife? And is it not a like honeſt part, after a man hath had one wife, to marrie, if need require, another? If it be then profectus honeſtatis, a profiting in honeſtie, to marrie a ſecond wife for neceſſitie, as it is to take a wife after a concubine: for otherwiſe we make marriage worſe then fornication: Why ſhould not a man profiting in honeſtie, that is twice married, be admitted to the miniſterie?

Now for the iudgement of the Ciuill law concerning ſecond mariage, thus we find, Cod. lib. 6. tit. 40. leg. 2. Iuſtinian doth reuerſe the law Iulia, which did not permit ſecond mariage, vnleſſe the widow did take an oth, that ſhe did it for procreation ſake: wherefore he giueth libertie for ſecond mariage without any ſuch oth, alleaging this reaſon of that law; Augeri magis noſtram rempublicam, &c. For we deſire rather our common wealth to be encreaſed, and by many men lawfully borne to be frequented, &c. The reaſon of this law ſerueth as well for the approbation of the ſecond mariage of Miniſters.

And as for your Canons, they allow the ſentence of S. Hierome, that he is not counted Bigamus, that had one wife before Baptiſme, and another after, diſtinct. 26. c. 1. and ſo it was no let vnto orders. And Hierome himſelfe maketh mention of one Carterius a Spaniſh Biſhop, that had had two wiues, one before Baptiſme, another after: yea, ſaith he, Omnis mundus his ordinationibus plenus, &c. All the world is full of ſuch Ordinations, I ſpeake not onely of Prieſts, but of Biſhops, whom if a man would number, he ſhal find ſuch a companie, as may well compare with the Synode of Arimine for multitude: Hieron. Ocean. Tom. 3. Thus we ſee it was an vſuall thing in S. Hieroms time, for men twice married, once before Baptiſme, and once after, to be receiued to orders: yet afterward Innocent 3. decreed the contrary, that ſuch mariage ſhould be counted Bigamie, diſt. 26. c. 3. But we preferre Hieromes time as more ancient, and neerer the practiſe of the Primitiue Church.

Concerning the iudgement of holy Martyrs: it is cleare by their practiſe, for diuers of them being in orders, were twice married, as Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr, ſee his ſtorie, Fox pag. 1860. col. 1. & deinceps.

Guagninus de religion. Muſcouit.

Further, 1. of the Greeke Church we haue Theodoret, who in his Commentary vpon the 1. Tim. c. 3. expoundeth theſe words, the husband of one wife, of him that hath not one wife or more at one time. The Muſcouite Chriſtians require not of their prieſts, that they be but once married before orders, nay they admit them not vnleſſe they be married: but they forbid them to take a ſecond wife after their Prieſthood, if they will hold their Prieſthood: but if they will refuſe their orders, then liberum eſt eis, it is lawfull for them to take a ſecond wife.

Damianus a Goes de mor. Aethiop.

2 Likewiſe in the Aethiopike Church, it is lawfull by the Patriarkes diſpenſation, for Clergie-men to marrie againe. Zaga Zabo in the confeſſion of the Aethiopike faith.

3 See the iudgement of the reformed Churches in the former queſtion, who ſimply allow mariage vnto Miniſters, without any reſtraint vnto the firſt time only.

4 See before Gratians collection out of Hierome, that it is not bigamie to haue one wife before baptiſme, and another after.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER MINISTERS ought to reſtraine the companie of their wiues, being entred into orders.

The Papiſts.

85.Error.

THey confeſſe, that Peter and other of the Apoſtles were maried; but after their calling they had no companie with their wiues, *Rhemiſt. Matth.*8.*ſect.*3. And ſo ought the Miniſters of the Goſpell (ſaith Bellarmine) be kept from the vſe of their wiues, to whom they were married before their calling: *Bellarm.lib.*1.*de Cleric.cap.*19.*pag.*1438.

*Argum.*1. The Prieſts of the law were bound to withdraw themſelues during the time of their ſeruice, while they attended vpon the ſacrifice, and to forbeare the companie of their wiues: much more the Prieſts of the law, that muſt alwaies offer ſacrifices, muſt be alwaies free from matrimonie: Rhemiſt.Luke 1.*ſect.*10.

*Anſw.*1. The Leuiticall prieſthood did repreſent and ſhadow foorth the prieſthood of Chriſt, and their legall cleanſings, waſhings, abſtinence, purifyings, did ſhew foorth the holineſſe and perfection of the prieſthood of Chriſt: wherefore the law of their abſtinence doth no more binde vs, then other of their legall purifications: they haue their end in the prieſthood of Chriſt. Thus alſo ſaith S.Hierome: Noſter Pontifex ſecundum ordinem,&c. But our Biſhop according to the order of Melchiſedech, is without father or mother, without kinred, without mariage, *Lib.*1.cont. Iouinian. 2. We acknowledge no ſacrificing prieſthood in the new Teſtament, nor any ſacrifice in the Church for ſin, but only that ſacrifice of attonement vpon the Croſſe: but our ſacrifices are ſpirituall, of praiſe and thankſgiuing: therefore the argument followeth not from the Prieſts of the law, to thoſe that are no prieſts, Fox pag.1166. 3. Purenes of life, we grant, is as much required now in Miniſters of the Goſpell, as it was then in the Prieſts of the law: therefore they ought as well to haue libertie to marie, ſeeing Matrimonie is the beſt remedie againſt fornication and vncleannes of life. 4. The Prieſts of the law did only abſtaine during the time of their ſeruice, not while they liued: and ſo was it decreed in the ſixth generall Synode, *cap.*13. as it is alleaged, *diſtinct.*31.*c.*13. Non in perpetuum, ſed tempore oblationis,&c. That Miniſters ſhould abſtaine from the companie of their wiues, not for euer, but during the time of the offering only.

1.Cor.7.5.

*Argum.*2. Another argument they picke out of S.Pauls words, 1.Cor.7.5. Defraud you not one another, vnleſſe it be by conſent for a time, that you may giue your ſelues to prayer. If the lay man cannot pray, vnleſſe he abſtaine from his wife; the Prieſt, that muſt alwaies pray, muſt alwaies abſtaine, Rhemiſt.

*Anſw.*1. The lay man is bound to offer prayers alwaies as well as the Prieſt, and ſo by this reaſon, neither ought any lay man to performe his dutie to his wife, if it were an hindrance to prayer. 2. S.Paul ſpeaketh not here of all prayer, but of a ſpeciall kinde, which, to bee made more feruent, requireth faſting and abſtinence, which kinde is not alway neceſſarie, but vpon ſome certaine occaſion. 3. It is ſo farre off that a lay man cannot pray, vnleſſe he abſtaine from his wife, that many times he prayeth more quietly then hee that is vnmaried, or abſtaineth, if he haue not dominion ouer his luſt, *Fulk.annot.*1.*Cor.*7.5.

The Proteſtants.

NEither the Apoſtles forſooke the companie of their wiues, after they were called and choſen of Chriſt, neither ought the Miniſters of the Goſpell to renounce, abandon, and forſweare the ſocietie and fellowſhip of their wiues: but rather to liue with them in all temperance and ſobrietie, for the good example of others.

1.Cor.9.5.

1.Tim.3.5.

Pag.1065.1.22.

*Argum.*1. It is proued out of the 1.Cor.9.5. that Peter and the other Apoſtles did leade about their wiues in their companie, and S.Paul there ſaith, that he alſo might vſe the ſame libertie. Likewiſe, 1.Tim.3.5. S.Paul giueth rules concerning the houſe and familie of the Miniſter, his children, the behauiour of their wiues, verſ.11. But where, I pray you, is it fitter for the Miniſters wife and children to be, then with her husband? By theſe places it is apparent, that Miniſters wiues were not excluded from their husbands companie? as a thouſand yeere after and more it was decreed by Anſelme, that they ſhould not dwell in houſe with their husbands, nor talke with them without two or three witneſſes, Fox pag.1167.col.1.

Matth.5.32.

1.Cor.7.5.

*Argum.*2. It is cleane contrary to the Scripture. Firſt, our Sauiour ſaith, Whoſoeuer putteth away his wife, except it be for fornication, cauſeth her to commit adulterie, Matth.5.32. By this rule, therefore a Miniſter ought not for any other cauſe to put away and diſmiſſe his wife, but for fornication: Ergo, it is not lawfull becauſe of his calling, or vpon any other colour to ſend her away. Secondly, S.Paul ſaith, They ought not to defraud one another but for a time, and that with conſent, 1.Cor.7.5. Therefore if the wife will not conſent, her husband cannot goe from her: nay, though there be conſent, yet they muſt be aſunder but for a time: they cannot by conſent altogether breake off, and diſſolue their mariage, which was made before God, though they would neuer ſo faine themſelues, vnleſſe it be for fornication, then without conſent the mariage knot is broken.

*Argum.*3. Peter left not the companie of his wife after he was made an Apoſtle: for he had a daughter called Petronilla, of whom the popiſh legends write much holineſſe, which muſt needs be borne after he was called Peter. And againe, it is proued by her age, for ſhe was ſo young in the perſecution vnder Domitian, that Flaccus the Countie deſired her in mariage: but if ſhe had been borne before Peters Apoſtleſhip, ſhe muſt haue been threeſcore yeere old at that time, or hard vpon, *Fulk. Matth.*8.*ſect.*3.

*Argum.*4. Auguſtine thus writeth of this matter: *Vna ſola eſſe cauſa poſſet, qua te id quod vouiſti, non ſolum non hortaremur, verumetiam prohiberemus implere: ſi forte tua coniux hoc tecum ſuſcipere animi, ſeu carnis infirmitate recuſaret, Epiſtol.*45. There may be one cauſe, and no more, which would make me, not only to moue you to performe that which you haue vowed, but to diſſwade and forbid you, namely, if your wife by reaſon of her weakenes, ſhould refuſe to beare the yoke with you, &c. Therefore by Auguſtines ſentence, neither ought a Miniſter that is married, performe the vow of continencie which he made, without conſent of his wife; for he ſpeaketh generally of vowes made by thoſe that are ioyned in Wedlock. Let vs ſee alſo the decrees of generall Councels.

*Trullan. ſynod general.*6.*Can.*13. it was decreed, Deponendos eos, qui audeant poſt ordinationem diaconos & ſacerdotes cum ſuis prioribus legitimis vxoribus conſuetudine priuare, & ipſos, qui ordinantur vxores ſuas pietatis prætextu expellentes, excommunicandos: That they ſhould bee depoſed, which preſumed to depriue Deacons and Prieſts, after the receiuing of orders, of their lawfull wiues companie, and that they, which after the taking of orders, vnder pretenſe of greater holineſſe, ſhould put away their wiues, ſhould be excommunicate.

Lateranenſ. ſub Alexandro 3. *part.*19.*cap.*2. & 3. Qui in ſacerdotio geniti ſunt, admitti poſſunt ad ſacerdotium, ſed paternas eccleſias habere non debent, alijs tamen eccleſiis præfici poſſunt: They which are borne in the Prieſthood, may be admitted to the Prieſthood, but their fathers Churches or benefices they cannot haue, yet other Churches they may be ſet ouer. And *part.*3.*cap.*3. thus: Ne quis non de legitimo Matrimonio natus, Epiſcopus fieret: That none not borne in lawfull Matrimonie, ſhould be a Biſhop, &c. Then wee conclude thus, A Prieſts ſonne borne in the Prieſthood may be made a Biſhop, and ſet ouer Churches, but he that is not borne in lawfull wedlocke cannot: therefore the mariage of Prieſts, and the ſober vſe thereof, euen in the Prieſthood, is lawfull.

Lateranenſ. ſub Innocentio 3. *cap.*14. Clerici, qui ſecundum religionis ſuæ morem, non abdicarunt copulam coniugalem, ſi lapſi fuerint in fornicationem grauius puniantur, cum legitimo matrimonio vti poſſunt: Clergie men, which after the cuſtome of their profeſſion, doe not abrogate the mariage knot, if they fall into fornication, let them be more ſeuerely puniſhed, ſeeing they may vſe lawfull Matrimonie, &c. The matrimonie of Clergie men is called lawfull, and made free vnto them in reſpect of the vſe: what cleerer teſtimonies can any man require?

We haue alſo the warrant of both lawes, that Miniſters ſhould not leaue or forſake the companie of their wiues: as firſt, *Cod. lib.*1.*tit.*6 *leg.*19. Honor. Theodoſ. Illas non relinqui, &c. The affection of chaſtitie doth exhort not to leaue or forſake thoſe women, which before their husbands prieſthood deſerued lawfull mariage: neque enim Clericis incompetenter adiunctæ ſunt, &c. neither are they incompetently ioyned to Clergie men, which by their conuerſation made them worthie the prieſthood, &c. By this law it appeareth, that Miniſters wiues muſt not be caſt off, but ioyned ſtill to their husbands.

The Canon law alſo alloweth that decree of the Synod, *Gangrenſ. diſtinct.*30.3. Si qua mulier, &c. If any woman forſaking her husband, will depart, and diſſolue the mariage bond, and ſo condemning mariage, let her be accurſed, &c. This Canon forbiddeth all forſaking or departing of them that are maried one from another: and ſo conſequently neither is any ſuch departure lawfull for Orders ſake. It will be anſwered, that this Canon forbiddeth ſuch departure, as condemneth mariage. Contra. Mariage is condemned two waies, either abſolutely, as by counting it vncleane in it ſelfe, as the Manichees wickedly taught; or elſe by way of implication, as to thinke any calling diſgraced or polluted by it, as the Papiſts ſay Orders are. This Synode in generall decreeth againſt all condemnation of mariage, both the one and the other: as it may appeare by the 10. Canon of the ſame Synode: Si quis propter Deum virginitatem profeſſus, &c. If any profeſſing virginitie for Gods cauſe doth arrogantly diſpraiſe thoſe that are maried, let him be accurſed, &c. So the popiſh votaries doe deſpiſe the maried Miniſters of the Goſpell, and therefore are vnder the cenſure of this Canon. Likewiſe the ſame Synode in the laſt Canon decreeth thus againſt the condemners and deſpiſers of mariage: Hos condemnamus qui ſe extollunt, &c. We doe condemne thoſe, that extoll themſelues againſt the Scriptures, and eccleſiaſticall Canons, and bring in new precepts, &c. But the popiſh Church in impoſing ſingle life, bringeth in new precepts contrarie to the Scripture and the Canons. Ergo.

I will ſet to the ſeale of the holy Martyrs: Doctor Taylor preacher, holy Martyr, when his ſeruant Iohn Hull had brought his ſonne Thomas vnto him, hee put off his hat, and thus ſaid to the people: Good people, this is mine owne ſonne begotten of my bodie in lawfull Matrimonie, and God be bleſſed for lawfull Matrimonie, *Fox pag.*1525.*col.*1. Pag.1386.1.30

Laurence Saunders preacher, holy Martyr, when his childe was brought vnto him into the priſon, he ſaid thus to the ſtanders by, which praiſed the goodlineſſe of the childe: What man fearing God would not rather loſe this life preſent, then to adiudge this boy to be a baſtard, his wife a whore, and himſelfe a whoremonger? Yea if there were no other cauſe, for which a man of my eſtate ſhould loſe his life, yet who would not giue it to auouch this childe to be legitimate, and his mariage to be lawfull and holy? Fox pag.1497.col.2.

Here firſt the Greeke Church conſenteth, as may appeare by the 13.c. of the 6. generall Synode before alleaged, which cenſureth thoſe that preſume to ſeparate Prieſts from the ſocietie of their wiues. The Muſcouites following the Greek Church, only enioyne their Prieſts abſtinence from their wiues the night before they celebrate Maſſe, and the night after.

Which is directly oppoſite to Bellarmine, who prooueth, that ſingle life is annexed to orders, ex iure Apoſtolico, by Apoſtolicall right.

Cauſ.26.q.2. Can.ſors.

THE SIXTH QVESTION, CONCERNING THE maintenance of the Church by tithes.

CONcerning the maintenance of the Church, there are diuers points, wherein we and our aduerſaries agree: The maintenance of the Miniſters of the Church is either by temporall poſſeſſions, which haue been beſtowed vpon the Church, by the gift of deuout and religious men; or elſe they haue inheritance from their friends and a patrimonie of their owne; or elſe they liue of the tithes and oblations of the people.

1. We graunt, and agree vnto them, that the Church Miniſters, beſide the portion of tithes, may lawfully enioy temporall lands, which the Church of ancient time hath been endowed withall. But wee yeeld vnto them vpon certaine conditions: Firſt, there muſt bee a moderation vſed in all ſuch gifts, which are bequeathed to the Church: for eccleſiaſticall perſons ought not to bee too greedie and haſtie in receiuing whatſoeuer in ſimplicitie and blinde deuotion any man ſhall giue vnto them: as if they ſee that others are impoueriſhed by the gift whereby they are inriched. Thus the Prieſts offended in our Sauiour Chriſts time, who allured the people to bring their offerings to the Altar, though their parents wanted in the meane time, whom they were bound to relieue by the law of God. This alſo was a common practiſe in time of poperie: So the prieſts might be inriched, they cared not greatly, though all the ſtocke of their patrones and founders were vndone: who becauſe they were vnſatiable, and had no meaſure in entiſing ſimple men, to giue ouer their lands and Lordſhips into their hands, the ſtatute of Mortmaine was made, not without iuſt cauſe, to be a rule vnto them, that otherwiſe could not rule themſelues. At the firſt it was lawfull by the Imperiall conſtitutions for any man to giue to the Church, as much as hee thought good, as it may appeare by the law of Conſtantine, Cod.lib.1.tit.5.leg.10. when as yet the Church was poore, and newly deliuered from perſecution: but afterward, when as ambitiouſly Clergie men ſought to inrich themſelues, and without meaſure heaped poſſeſſions together, it ſeemed good that a reſtraint ſhould be made; as Cod.lib.1.tit.5.leg.16. Iuſtinian made a law, that no gift made to the Church aboue fiue hundred crownes ſhould be good, without inſinuation, that is, ſome act done before the Magiſtrate. And there is a law more ancient made by the Heathen Emperours, Diocleſian & Maximinian, that a Colledge, not priuiledged, that is, licenced, ſhould not bee capable of any inheritance, Cod.lib.6.tit.34.leg.8. Yea their owne Canons alſo haue made prouiſion againſt the inſatiable deſire of the Church, Decret.par.2.cauſ.12.qu.2.can.49. Gregor. Eccleſia rapacitatis ardore, &c. The Church muſt not greedily inuade the things pertaining to another. And, Can.74. Non vltra quinquageſimam partem, &c. That a Biſhop ſhould not giue aboue the 50. part of the Church goods to a Monaſterie. Auguſtine doth highly commend Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage, and worthely, for this one act: A certaine rich man of Carthage hauing no children, gaue all his ſubſtance to the Church, reſeruing onely the vſe thereof for his life time: afterward the man had children: Reddidit Epiſcopus nec opinanti ea, quæ donauerat: The Biſhop reſtoreth vnto him that which he gaue, not looking for it, nor making any account of it: In poteſtate habuit Epiſcopus non reddere; ſed iure fori, non iure poli: It was in the Biſhops power not to reſtore the gift, but by the law of the court, not by the law of heauen, &c. I pray you how many ſuch examples can ye ſhew me in the time of popiſh ſuperſtition? This then is the firſt thing required, that although it be lawfull for the Church to enioy the bequeſts of their benefactors, yet it ſhould be done with ſome limitation; as the Leuites, beſide their tithes, had Cities appointed them: but the number was ſet downe, downe, they ſhould not exceede 48. in all; and to euery citie was a quantitie and circuite of ground allotted, which ſhould in length, and bredth containe euery way three thouſand cubites, Numb.35. verſ.5.8. Numb.35.5.8.

2. It muſt alſo be prouided, that the gifts and legacies beſtowed vpon the Church, be for the maintenance of pietie and true religion, and to good vſes, not to nouriſh idolatrie and ſuperſtition: or if they be giuen through ignorance of the time, to ſuch vnlawfull purpoſes, they ought by the Prince to be conuerted to better and more godly vſes: As now in England, the lands of Colledges, which were firſt giuen to maintaine that abominable Idoll of the Maſſe, are turned to the maintenance of learning and true religion. So was the law of Moſes, that the gold and ſiluer, braſſe, iron, tinne, lead, which the Iſraelites ſhould receiue of the Heathen, firſt ſhould paſſe through the fire, and ſo bee made cleane, and fit for holy vſes: Euen thus according to this law, the lands conſecrate to ſuperſtition, hauing now paſſed through the fire of Gods word, and triall of the truth, may ſafely be vſed to the glory of God, in aduancing and ſetting forward true religion and vertue: As Cod.lib.1.tit.8.leg.8.Valentin.& Martian. It is made a law that the houſes, wherein heretikes did meete, ſhould be adiudged to the orthodoxall Church: tit.12.leg.11. Honor. That the habitations of certaine heretikes called Cælicolæ, ſhould be annexed to the true or right beleeuing Church. Likewiſe, *leg.*17. The Synagogues of the Iewes are confiſcate to the vſe of the Church. Theodoſ.Valentin. Numb 31.23.

3. Another thing muſt bee required, that Church-men ought not to abuſe the poſſeſſions of the Church, to maintaine pride, idlenes, and riotous liuing: for in caſe they doe notoriouſly ſpend and waſte the Church goods, the Prince (by whoſe authoritie they were giuen to the Church) may iuſtlie take from them their ſuperfluities, not leauing the Church deſtitute of ſufficient maintenance. This is notably proued by Iohn Huſſe, in the defence of Wickliffes articles: And we haue ſeene the practiſe thereof in England, in the late ſuppreſſion of Abbeyes; wherein (though ſome of thoſe lands might otherwiſe haue been diſpoſed of) yet the prouidence of God notably appeared in bringing deſolation vpon thoſe Cels of ſinne, and vncleane cages of birds. Neither hath this been an vnuſuall and vnaccuſtomed practiſe in the Church, for Princes to correct the miſdemeanour of Prieſts, by cutting them ſhort of their temporalties: for in Auguſtines time the Chriſtian Emperours diſpoſſeſſed the Donatiſts of their Churches and poſſeſſions, and gaue them to the Catholike Biſhops. And at that time the Donatiſts cried out, as the Papiſts now doe, Quid mihi eſt imperatori? What hath the Emperour, the King to doe with our lands? Auguſtine anſwereth, Secundum ius ipſius poſſides terram: by the law of Princes the Church enioyeth her poſſeſſions: Recitemus leges imperatorum, videamus ſi voluerint aliquid ab hæreticis poſſideri: Let vs then rehearſe the lawes of Emperours, and ſee whether they ſuffer heretikes to enioy the Church poſſeſſions. Fox pag.457. Tractat. in Iohann.6.

That it is lawfull for the ciuill Magiſtrate to diſpoſſeſſe eccleſiaſticall perſons of their liuings and maintenance abuſing them to wantonnes and impietie: ſee Concil.Colonienſ.part.9.cap.21.Fraternitates, quæ vocantur, &c. The brotherhoods, as they are called, which are made in the honour of ſome Saints, haue a ſhew indeed of godlineſſe, but as they are now vſed, both Clerkes and lay men doe follow nothing elſe in ſuch places but riot and drunkennes, and ſometimes they intend conſpiracies againſt potentates, we thinke it better that they ſhould be cleane taken out of the way, and their reuenewes giuen to the poore.

Now, whereas there is a great complaint amongſt malecontents and ſuperſtitious fauourites of the popiſh profeſſion, that the Abbey lands were taken away from their Cels, confiſcate to the Prince, and conuerted to lay vſes: for the better anſwere thereof, I will briefly ſet downe theſe concluſions. Firſt, that it hath been alwaies lawfull for the Prince, to ſeaze vpon ſuch goods and lands as were abuſed to idolatrous and ſuperſtitious purpoſes, which afterward being in the Princes right, were at his deuotion and diſpoſition to be employed. See the law of Conſtantine, Cod.lib.1.tit.14.leg.1. That the goods of ſacrificing Prieſts were confiſcate to the Prince. And leg.5. Honor.Theodoſ. Omnia loca, quæ ſacris veterum error deputauit, noſtræ rei iubemus ſociari: All thoſe places, which haue been in the error of former time appointed to ſacred vſes, wee bid to be ioyned to our treaſurie: excepting ſuch things as were beſtowed by the liberalitie of Princes vpon priuate perſons. So S. Ambroſe anſwereth Symmachus, making the like obiection, for that the Emperours had ſpoiled the Idoll prieſts of their reuenewes, Sublata ſunt prædia, quia non religioſè vtebantur iis, quæ religionis iure defenderent: Their lands were taken away, becauſe they did not religiouſly vſe thoſe things which they held vnder colour of religion. The ſame anſwere may we make our aduerſaries in the like caſe.

Secondly, we ſay it had been very meete, that a greater part of the Abbey lands had been conuerted to godly vſes, as it was religiouſly by the Prince intended, if his godly purpoſe had not been by the couetouſnes of ſome other hindred; according to the law of Anaſtaſius, Cod.lib.1.tit.8.leg.9. who decreed, that the poſſeſſions of heretikes ſhould be confiſcate to the Prince, yet ſo, that the oratories and places of prayer be ſtill maintained.

Thirdly, if any were rather led with the expectation of their priuate gaine, then the hatred of ſuperſtition in the diſſolution and ſpoile of Abbeyes, we defend them not, neither hold them excuſed: as Auguſtine ſaith to the Donatiſts, and it is alleaged in the decrees, Cauſ.23.qu.7.c.1. Quiſquis occaſione huius legis, &c. If any man by occaſion of this law, which Kings ſeruing Chriſt haue promulgated to correct your impietie, doth greedily couet your goods, he pleaſeth not vs.

Secondly,

Bellarm.c.27.

Secondly, concerning the ſecond kinde of maintenance, which ariſeth by the proper and peculiar inheritance, which Church Miniſters haue: we alſo yeeld our conſent, that a Miniſter, to whom ſome inheritance is befallen, is not bound to diſclaime therefore the maintenance which hee hath of the Church: for the Leuites, beſide the allotment of the tithes, had their proper houſes, which they might ſell, and redeeme againe, Leuit.25.32. As alſo that place, 1.Timoth.3.2. will beare it, where the Apoſtle would haue a Biſhop to be harborous, and giuen to hoſpitalitie: which hee ſhall be much better able to performe, hauing ſome helpe, beſide the Church liuing, of his owne inheritance. So then it is not to be doubted, but that Eccleſiaſticall perſons may, together with ſpirituall liuings, retaine their owne proper inheritance: referring them both to one and the ſelfe ſame end, that is, to countenance their Miniſterie, and to bee the better able to performe the externall duties thereof, in relieuing the poore, helping the needie, and ſuch like. Yet notwithſtanding there was an imperiall law, that hee which liued of the Church, ſhould renounce his owne patrimonie: of the which law S. Ambroſe maketh mention, writing againſt Symmachus: Nobis etiam priuatæ ſucceſſionis emolumenta recentibus legibus denegantur: Wee alſo by a late law are forbidden to reape any aduantage by priuate inheritance. And the ſame is ratified in the decrees, cauſ.1.q.3.c.6. Clericos illos, &c. Such of the Clergie ſhould be maintained by the Church ſtipends, as haue no goods nor patrimonie from their parents, &c. As then this law, that, whereas a man hath ſufficient maintenance beſide of the Church, his patrimonie ſhould paſſe to the next heire, is not of it ſelfe vniuſt, nor vnreaſonable, where the ſtate of the Common-wealth doth require it: ſo where there is no ſuch poſitiue law, it is both lawfull and conuenient, that Miniſters together with their eccleſiaſticall calling, ſhould enjoy their patrimonies, for the gracing and dignifying of their Miniſterie.

Leuit.25.32.
1.Tim.3.2.

Thirdly, as touching the proper maintenance, and reuenue of the Church, which is by tithes: diuers points are agreed of and accorded betweene vs. 1. That tithes are due onely to the Church, and cannot be alienated to any other vſe, nor be turned to the maintenance of lay-men: for there muſt bee, where tithes are payed, a matter of giuing and receiuing, Philipp.4.15. We giue ſpirituall, and receiue temporall: which becauſe lay-men doe not performe, they haue nothing to doe with the tithe: for not keeping the condition, they cannot claime the couenant.

Philip.4.15.

*Damaſus, decret.*3. thus writeth of this matter: Qua fronte, qua conſcientia oblationes vultis accipere, qui vix valetis pro vobis, nedum pro alijs deo preces offerre? With what face or conſcience can you receiue tithes and oblations (ſpeaking of lay-men) ſeeing ye are neither able to pray for your ſelues, nor others?

Lateranenſ. ſub Alexand.3.part.26.cap.8. Qui decimas laico in ſeculo manenti conceſſerit, eſt deponendus: He that granteth tithes to a ſecular lay-man, ſhould be depoſed. And many ſuch decrees they haue beſide againſt the appropriating of tithes to lay-men, as decret. Greg.lib.3.tit.30.c.15. Decimæ laicis, &c. Tithes can in no caſe be granted to lay-men for their inheritance. Cauſ.16.qu.1.c.68. Vſus decimarum, &c. The vſe of tithes muſt in no wiſe redound to ſecular men, &c. It may therefore iuſtly be meruailed at, how contrarie to their owne Canons, they made ſo many impropriate benefices: for it is certaine, that impropriations (which may more fitly ſo be called, then appropriations) haue been founded of ancient time in Poperie, and by the Popes themſelues maintained: for in King Henrie the third his raigne, ſuite was made vp to Rome to Pope Alexander the fourth by the Biſhops of this land, that benefices appropriate to religious houſes might be reſtored: but they could not bee heard, ex Flor. Hiſtor.

Firſt, it may be ſaid, that by the Canons it was not lawfull for the Ciuill Magiſtrate to make a benefice, appropriate, but the Biſhop might.

Contra. Cauſ.16.qu.7.c.1. Periculum animæ, &c. They of the lay ſort incurre the danger of their ſoule, that receiue tithes either of Biſhops or Kings. Secondly, though it bee not permitted to euery Biſhop, yet the Pope hath authoritie to doe it.

Contra. Cauſ.16.qu.7.c.3. Gregor.7. Si quis amodo Epiſcopus, &c. If any Biſhop hereafter do grant the tithes to lay-men, let him bee counted amongſt the greateſt heretikes, &c. This Pope maketh no exception, but includeth all Biſhops, and ſo the Pope to, if he will be a Biſhop.

Thirdly, it will be anſwered, that they made no grant of tithes to lay-men, but onely to religious houſes and Cathedrall Churches, and ſuch like.

Contra. Firſt, the multitude of Canons made againſt the holding of tithes by the lay ſort, doth euidently ſhew, that it was a continuall practiſe in Poperie, to alienate the tithes of the Church to lay-men. Secondly, it is alſo againſt their owne Canons, that benefices ſhould be annexed or appropriate to houſes or Churches of religion. Decret. Gregor. lib.3.tit.5.c.30. Innocent.3. decreeth, that no penſions ſhould be granted out of benefices: which is a leſſe matter, then to alienate all the tithes, and reſerue onely a penſion. Againe, ibid.c.33. mention is made of a generall Councell, that would not ſuffer Chappels or Churches to be annexed to Prebends. Likewiſe, Clement. lib.1.tit.5.c.1. Vt prælati beneficia non applicent menſis: That Prelates ſhould not employ benefices for the maintenance of their table, &c. Thus if they had obſerued their owne Canons, this pernicious deuiſe of appropriating benefices ſhould not haue found entertainment.

2 The people are bound in conſcience, to giue of their goods vnto their lawfull Paſtors, according to the determination of the Church, and the poſitiue lawes of Princes made in that behalfe, the which they are bound to obey: and the tenth being the hire of the labourer, and the wages of the Lords workman, Matth.10.10. (Matth.10.10.) it ſhall be as great a ſinne to defraud the Miniſter of his portion, as to keepe backe the meate or wages from the hireling and labourer, Iam.5.4. (Iam.5.4.)

Cabilonenſ. cap. 18. Qui decimas dare neglexerint, excommunicentur: They that neglect to pay their tithes, let them be excommunicate. It is no ſmall ſinne therefore which deſerueth excommunication.

3 We vtterly denie alſo, and herein conſent with our aduerſaries, that tithes are not pure almes, as ſome haue beene of opinion in times paſt, but are a plaine debt of the people to their Miniſters. Firſt, the wages or reward of the labourer is no almes, but his due, and of right belonging to him: but (Bellar.cap 15.) tithes are ſo vnto Miniſters who labour in the Lords harueſt, 1.Timoth. 5.16. Ergo, no almes. Se- (1.Tim.5.16.) condly, almes doe alway exceede the deſert of the almeſman, they ſhew the beneuolence and free heart of the giuer, not any merite or worthineſſe in the receiuer; but tithes and all other temporall (1.Cor.9.11.) gifts, are farre inferiour to the labours of Miniſters: for what are temporall things to ſpirituall, 1.Cor. 9.11? Ergo, no almes. Thirdly, the tenth is the Lords part, and by him it is aſſigned to his faithfull Mi- (2.Cor.5.20.) niſters, which in Gods ſtead doe teach vs, 2.Cor.5.20. But almes cannot be giuen vnto God. Againe, the tenth is as an inheritance to the Church, and to be counted as the corne of the barne, or the abun- (Num.18.26.27.) dance of the winepreſſe, Numb.18.verſ.26.27. it is vnto them as the fruite of the earth, and increaſe of the ground to the husbandman: Therefore to be counted no almes from men, but the bleſſing of God both vpon the Paſtor and the people.

Concil. Moguntienſ. ſub Arnulpho. cap. 17. Admonemus, vt decima omnino dari non negligatur, timendum eſt enim, vt quiſquis Deo debitum abſtrahit, Deus propter peccatum ei auferat neceſſaria: Wee ſtraightly charge, that no man neglect to pay his tithes: for it is to be feared, that as a man doth withhold from God his due, ſo God ſhould for his ſinne depriue him of things neceſſarie, &c. Tithes therfore are debitum, a due debt, therefore no almes.

*Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. lib.*1.*cap.*34. Attende diligenter lector, quod omnes primitiæ, & quicquid ad ſanctuarium oblatum eſt ſacerdotis ſint, & ad ius eius pertineant: Vnderſtand diligent reader, that all firſt fruites, and whatſoeuer was offered in the ſanctuarie, was the Prieſts, and belonged to him of right. Therefore tithes are more then almes.

Likewiſe, *decret. Greg. lib.*3.tit 30.*c.*14. Cum decimæ, &c. Seeing tithes were not inſtituted of men, but of God, quaſi debitum exigi poſſunt, they may be exacted as a due debt.

4 Wee alſo agree, that it is not meete that the maintenance of Miniſters ſhould be voluntarie, or left to the peoples choice: but that it is conuenient, iuſt, equall, requiſite, that both by lawes of Princes, and conſtitutions of the Church, prouiſion ſhould be made, as there is, for the neceſſarie, certaine, and competent maintenance of the Church. Firſt, the tenths in the law were eſtabliſhed by a perpetuall ordinance: Ergo, the maintenance of Miniſters ought now alſo to bee confirmed by poſitiue lawes, as then tithes were: the argument followeth: for if their Miniſterie deſerued ſuch aſſurance of their maintenance, which did but ſerue at the Altar, much more now doth the Miniſterie of the Goſ- (1.Cor.9.14.) pell deſerue it. And the Apoſtle alſo ſeemeth ſo to reaſon, 1.Cor.9.14.15. that as they which waited on the Altar were partakers of the Altar: ſo God hath ordained (ſaith he) that they which preach the Goſpell, ſhould liue of the Goſpell. That is, as then the people did not onely giue tithes voluntarily, but were bound by law to doe it: euen ſo God hath ordained, that Miniſters ſhould liue of the people: and by this ordinance of God, the people may as well be bound vnto it now, as they were then. Secondly, if Miniſters, bound in conſcience to feede and inſtruct the people, may alſo be enforced and vrged by the conſtitutions of the Church and lawes of Princes to doe that, which in conſcience they are bound; why may not the people likewiſe be conſtrained by publike law, to performe that dutie to their Paſtors, which their owne conſcience doth vrge them vnto? Thirdly, experience teacheth, that men are hardly (euen liuing vnder a law) brought to pay their rights to the Church, no not in thoſe places where they can take no exception againſt their Paſtors: how much more vnwilling would they be (I ſpeake of thoſe which are not yet wonne to a through liking of the Goſpell) if they were left to their owne libertie?

Neither is it ſafe to giue the people this libertie to detaine their tithes from vnſufficient Clerkes, leſt vnder this colour afterwards they might denie them to thoſe which were worthie. Sometimes indeede it was put to the peoples choyce to pay their tithes to whom they would, and to withhold them, if they ſaw cauſe, for as yet there was no poſitiue lawe made, but ſince it hath beene otherwiſe determined by ciuill conſtitutions of Princes, as Concil. Ticinenſ. ſub Lodouico Pio: Vt non pro ſuo libitu Clericis laici decimas tribuerent, &c. That the lay ſort ſhould not pay tithes at their pleaſure to the Clergie: Synod. Auguſt. cap. 19. Qui iuſtas non ſoluunt decimas, ter moniti, eis neganda communio: They that being thrice admoniſhed doe not pay their full tithe, let them be denied the Communion. Anno 1538. King Henrie the eighth of excellent memorie, made this poſitiue lawe concerning tithes: For as much as by a lawe eſtabliſhed, euery man is bound to pay his tithes, no man ſhall by colour of dutie omitted by their Curates, detaine his tithes, or be his owne iudge, but ſhall truely pay the ſame, as hath beene accuſtomed without any reſtraint, or diminution; and ſuch lacke and default as they finde in their Parſons or Curates, to call for reformation there- (Pag.1001.2.45) of at their Ordinaries, and other ſuperiours hands; Fox pag. 1096. col. 2. Such ciuill conſtitutions of Princes not contrarie to the word of God, doe binde ſubiects to obedience.

5 We alſo acknowledge (as Bellarmine ſeemeth to grant, chap.25.) that to pay preciſely the tenth, is not now commanded by the law of God: as though that order could not be changed by any humane law, as the Canoniſts hold, but men neceſſarily were bound to pay tithes. But thus farre forth we hold, that it is grounded vpon Gods law: firſt, in reſpect of the equitie of the law, in paying of tithes, which is this, that the Miniſters ought to liue of the people, and to haue ſufficient and competent maintenance by them: which equitie and ſubſtance of the law is morall, and ought alwaies to continue, being grounded vpon the law of nature: Thou ſhalt not mouſle the mouth of the Oxe that treadeth out the corne. Secondly, in as much as the lawes of the land and of the Church doth confirme this ancient conſtitution of tithes, (which is left indifferent of it ſelfe) wee are bound to obey ſuch lawes, being agreeable to the word of God: And in this ſenſe alſo, tithes may be ſaid to be due by the law of God, becauſe Gods word commandeth obedience to our Magiſtrates, in all lawfull ordinances.

1.Cor.9.8.

Synod. Moguntin. cap. 7. 5. Statuimus, vt decimæ, quæ iure debentur diuino, ſoluantur ſine fraude: We appoint, that tithes, which are due by the diuine law, be payd without any fraud. This Councell doubteth not to affirme, tithes to be due by the word of God.

6 Though the law of tenthes be not now neceſſarie, as it was a ceremonious dutie: but it is lawfull either to keepe that or any other conſtitution, for the ſufficient maintenance of the Church, whether it be more or leſſe then the tenth part: yet we doubt not to ſay, that this prouiſion for the Church maintenance by paying of tithes, is the moſt ſafe, indifferent and ſureſt way, and no better can come in the place thereof. Firſt, it is the moſt equall way, to haue euery thing in the kinde, according to the Apoſtles rule: Let him that is taught make his teacher partaker of all his goods, Gal.6.6. But this cannot be ſo conueniently done any other way, as by erecting of a ſet ſtipend, or ſuch like, as by paying the tenth in the kinde.

Gal.6.6.

2 Whereas S. Paul requireth, that the Paſtor ſhould be giuen to hoſpitalitie, 1.Tim.3.2. who ſeeth not, that for the better and more conuenient maintenance of his houſe, it is the fitteſt courſe to receiue the tenth in his owne nature and kinde: being ſo more able to relieue the poore, hauing ſufficient prouiſion and ſtore of his owne?

1.Tim.3.2.

3 The tenth is as the corne of the barne, and the abundance of the winepreſſe, Numb.18.27 that is, it is more or leſſe, as God giueth encreaſe to the fruites of the earth: which is the moſt equall and indifferent way: for then the Miniſter, as God bleſſeth them, ſhall be partaker of the bleſſing; and if they ſuffer loſſe, he likewiſe ſhall beare the burthen with them.

Num.18.27.

4 This manner of tithe-paying is farre more ſafe and ſure, then any way can be deuiſed, becauſe of the long cuſtome and continuance, which without great hazard of the Church cannot bee broken. Neither is it poſſible by any act of Parliament, to make ſtipends ſo certaine, as this conſtitution of tithes is: for the people will hardly yeeld to breake their cuſtome: and when an olde cuſtome is broken, a new is not ſo ſoone receiued: nay, many yeeres muſt runne to make a cuſtome. Againe, whatſoeuer may be obiected againſt tithes, that they breed much trouble, wrangling and contention, may be more iuſtly feared, in the collection, leuying, impoſing, and demanding of ſtipends.

5 Hitherto we haue ſhewed, that it is moſt naturall, that the Miniſters portion ſhould be payed in the kinde. Now, concerning the tenth, though it be not neceſſarie, yet that proportion being firſt appointed by the wiſedome of God, is verily thought to bee moſt equall and indifferent betweene the Paſtor and the people, as both affording competent ſuſtenance for the one, when hee liueth of the tenth, rather then the fifteenth, or twentieth part, which were too ſcant allowance; nor yet grieuing or oppreſſing the other, when the owner hath nine parts reſerued to himſelfe. And ſo if it bee moſt meete, that things ſhould be anſwered in their kinde, no proportion can ſerue better, then that which was firſt deuiſed by the Lord himſelfe: yet we hold neither the one nor the other to be neceſſarie.

It hath beene an olde obiection, that the owner ought firſt to deduct his ſeede, and of the reſidue to pay his tithe: thus was it articulated againſt one Thomas Clarke, Fox pag.830. col.1. But this notwithſtanding, people ought to pay the full tenth, and not to bee ſo ſtraight handed, ſeeing God hath giuen them nine parts for that one tenth: See to this purpoſe, Concil. Triburienſ. cap.13. ex Auguſtino: Da mihi decimam, &c. Giue mee thy tithe (ſaith the Lord,) if thou wilt not giue me the tenth, I will take away thy nine parts: if thou giueſt me the tenth, I will multiply thy nine: If any man aske why tithes are giuen, let him know, that they are giuen, both that God being wel pleaſed therewith, ſhould giue vs things neceſſary, and that the Miniſters being thereby relieued, ſhould more freely attend their ſpirituall ſeruice, and haue to giue to the poore, &c. Thus wee ſee why both the tenth is to be giuen, and why in the kinde.

Hitherto for the moſt part we and our aduerſaries are agreed, both concerning tithes, as alſo other maintenance of the Church: but wee differ about tithes in two points. Firſt, there is a queſtion betweene vs and the Rhemiſts about the neceſſitie of paying of tithes: Secondly, concerning the right whereby the Miniſters of the Goſpell may demand their duties, which they ſay, is by reaſon of their Prieſthood: of both theſe now briefly in their order.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE PAIMENT OF TITHES BE NECESSARIE.

The Papiſts.

86. Error. THe payment of tithes is a naturall dutie, that men owe to God in all Lawes, and to be giuen to his Prieſts in his behalfe for their honour and liuelyhood, Rhemiſt annot. 7. Hebr. ſect. 4.

Gen. 28. 22. Argum. 1. Iacob vowed to pay tithes to God, before the law, Gen. 28. Ergo, it is a perpetuall law. Rhemiſt.

Anſwere. One Papiſt ſhall anſwere another at this time. Bellarmine proueth by this example the cleane contrarie, that the payment of tithes is not morall, becauſe it did not binde before the law of Moſes: for Iacob made a voluntarie vow to pay his tithes, vpon a condition: but if hee had beene bound abſolutely to pay tithes, they ſhould haue beene payed without any ſuch condition: It was therefore a voluntarie and a franke offering in Iacob.

Matth. 23. 23. Argum. 2. Chriſt confirmeth the law of tithes, Matth. 23. 23. though he preferre the works of mercie and iudgement, yet he ſaith that the other ought not to be left vndone, ſpeaking of the paying of tithes, Rhemiſt ibid.

Anſw. Wee muſt conſider in what time our Sauiour Chriſt ſo ſpake vnto the Phariſies: for as yet neither the law nor the ceremonies thereof were fully abrogated: Chriſt was circumciſed, and Mary his mother purified according to the law, Luk. 2. 21. 22. Our Sauiour alſo biddeth the Leper to ſhew himſelfe to the Prieſt, and offer a gift as Moſes commanded, Matth. 8. 4. Yet none of all theſe ceremonies doe now ſtand in force, though Chriſt did them at that time, and bad them to be done. The ſame anſwere may ſerue alſo concerning his iniunction to the Phariſies as touching their tithes. Luk. 2. 21. 22.

The Proteſtants.
